Geneva, June 27.—The United States delegation to the naval armament limitation conference here was left standing alone today on its refusal to discuss the capital ship question as demanded by Great Britain.

U. S. ENVOYS STAND ALONE AT GENEVA

Washington, June 27.—The British have won a hollow victory in persuading the Japanese to agree to their proposal of discussing the capital ship question at the Geneva Naval Conference, according to the five-power naval treaty, which still has until 1931 to run before it can be revised. Five countries are signatory to that treaty, the United States, Great Britain, Japan, Italy and France.

U. S. ENVOYS STAND ALONE AT GENEVA

Here, the question can be "discussed." However, all discussion will be merely a facade for any concrete developments are concerned. Washington officials here today said: "The Washington Treaty, there it stands until 1931."

U. S. ENVOYS STAND ALONE AT GENEVA

Experts suspicious
American naval experts regard Britain's cruiser proposals more and more unfavorably as the Geneva conference progresses. The proposal to limit cruisers to 7,500 tons, and restrict the armament to six-inch guns, is considered particularly clever from the British viewpoint.

U. S. ENVOYS STAND ALONE AT GENEVA

Some figures
In the last five years, the figures showed, the six principal maritime nations of the world have constructed 973 vessels of more than 2,000 tons each. Of this number, the United States has built ten. For every ship built down in America between 1921-27, Great Britain has built 42, Germany 12, France 5, and Italy and Japan four each.

No deadlock
Geneva, June 27.—"There is no deadlock," this declaration was made today by Hugh Gibson, head of the American delegation attending the naval limitation conference. He added:

"It would be better, in that event if President Coolidge had never opened his lips, a failure to reach an agreement now will injure perhaps disastrously, the larger disarmament plans of the League of Nations, and will certainly be followed by a new era of generalized naval armament. OTHER TIRES

The Connecticut Motor Vehicle department is at odds with a Bridgeport inventor of a motor vehicle wheel which, apparently, depends on some quality aside from the elasticity of rubber for the resiliency essential to an automobile wheel.

It has always appeared to us that definition of a registrable motor vehicle provided by the Connecticut law was drawn either carelessly or with too much care—that if the definition was not the result of slovenliness then it was inspired by a too tender concern for the rubber and rubber tire trade.

Every motor vehicle shall be equipped with tires of rubber or other elastic substance approved by the highway commissioner and the wheels shall be so constructed that no metal part of the wheel or tire may be in contact with the surface of the road at any time when such motor vehicle is in motion upon the highway." So reads the law.

It is perfectly obvious that if skid-chains were a permanent fixture of an automobile wheel, instead of being removable, the machine would be barred from the road under any literal interpretation of the act. Yet there is nothing to prevent the use of chains on the wheels of a car from the day it is put in commission until it is worn out, if anybody cared to so employ them.

That, however, is merely a side issue. The important thing is that because of the great expense of rubber tires, and especially because there is no important American supply of rubber, the minds of thousands of inventors are constantly seeking some solution of the tire problem which will obviate the necessity of using rubber at all.

We know nothing in detail about Mr. Beach's invention. And in any event we don't see how Commissioner Stoeckel could take any other course than the one he has. But it is perfectly obvious that the Connecticut motor vehicle law is so drawn, in this aspect, as to help establish rubber as king in the motor vehicle world—rubber which we have to buy abroad and for which we have to pay exorbitantly and which, in time of war, might conceivably prove our undoing.

WHEELER'S PLAN

We have extremely little use for Wayne B. Wheeler but must admit that the plan he proposes, to organize a dry Democratic party in the South and put a third Presidential ticket in the field in case that Al Smith wins the regular Democratic nomination, is logical and in keeping with the eternal fitness of things. Of course it is rather startling to see the Anti-Saloon League openly undertaking to take over the management of a large section of one of the major political parties, inasmuch as it has claimed exemption from the law requiring political organizations to make reports of their political expenditures, but then everybody knows that it is a political body—so what's the difference? The idea is that the scheme proposed by Wheeler would bring about a much desired condition—an opportunity for consistent dries to support a national dry ticket.

The eighteenth amendment to the United States constitution was made possible by the Democratic South. The white man in the South who was a teetotaler, who did not on occasion take one or several drinks

CIVIC ACHIEVEMENTS

HOW A CIVIC CONCERT CLUB CAN BOOST YOUR COMMUNITY

By DON E. MOWRY Secretary, the American Community Advertising Association

Musical organizations can often do more than furnish enjoyment to small groups of people within one community. They can make a community famous throughout large districts, and can make their home city a center for activities in no way related to music or the arts.

To prove this, take the experience of Hutchinson, Kas. Hutchinson is the logical center for every activity in a large part of Western Kansas and bordering parts of Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico and Colorado. How could Hutchinson make its influence felt over this extensive territory? The problem of hard liquor, was an exception. He is still an exception. But the South was determined to keep liquor away from the Negro so that he would be more regular on the job. Prohibition, down there, was a matter of business. It is still a matter of business, because very little federal enforcement work is done and the local authorities regard the law as applying solely to the colored people.

The Southerners are Democrats because the Republican party, in theory at least, stands for equal rights for the Negro. They are dry because they desire, for economic reasons, to keep liquor away from the blacks. They hate the very thought of voting a Republican ticket. They do not want to vote for a wet Democrat, even though they go to the polls drunk. They like the workings of the present prohibition law which does not interfere with their own habits but makes the Negro toe the mark.

In all probability they would be well pleased to support a Democrat of their own kidney. Also, the nomination of a dry Democrat would give extreme dries all over the country a chance to demonstrate according to their principles. There would be nothing to fear, from this, as to its effect on the Republican ticket next year, because there are very few Republicans in the North who would turn from President Coolidge to a dry of the Southern school—not enough to change the result in the closest of the states.

LET HIM ALONE

That Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh is a young man of much seriousness of purpose and entirely capable of brusque impatience with mere silliness may presently be realized by some persons to whom the realization will be something of a shock. Among them will probably be those newspaper editors who order reporters to dog the steps of the aviator, not for the purpose of obtaining any information but with instructions to tell whether he got out of his plane with his right or his left foot first.

We glory in the way in which Lindbergh deliberately turned his back on a flapper who pushed through the group of officials and friends who met him on Friday at Mitchel Field, demanding that he shake hands. We believe him to be fully justified in refusing to be interviewed within a minute after his landing by reporters who asked questions he could not at all be expected to answer.

With rare grace Lindbergh submitted to a series of lionizing which must have bored him stiff. Now the receptions are over and the young man is entitled to live his life and do his work without being made a monkey of. He could keep on indefinitely, going about the country letting flappers shake his hand and answering newspaper reporters' questions, but he would not be the Lindbergh who made that solo flight to France if he were to be content with that sort of thing.

Perhaps foolish girls, of no account in themselves but who imagine that they should have everything they asked for, will vote the colonial crab because he has decided not to let them paw him. Perhaps some of the editors will turn sore. But the boy takes his aviation game seriously and knows that there is enough to be done in his line to fill a lifetime very full, even when it stretches a long way ahead. We are for him in his idea that he has a right to be let alone.

WHY BE A CONNELLY?

There is to be a fireworks display at the north end and it will be a good one in any event. It will be better if more money comes in. The north end's annual Independence day celebration has been practically financed—or will be with the collection of subscriptions already in sight. But every dollar added to solved itself in the organization of a Civic Concert Club. The club sold 500 memberships at $5 each, each member having the privilege of inviting one guest to one concert during the season. In this way four concerts were financed before the concert season began, and no one was called upon to make up a deficit.

The plan worked and membership privileges were extended so that any member could secure a guest ticket free for any person living outside Hutchinson. Chamber of Commerce officials were privileged to invite organizations from out of town. Later a concert was arranged for every school youngster in southwestern Kansas.

What is the result? People in all the Hutchinson territory look to that city as their commercial center, as well as their musical center.

Those who have overlooked the item of making a contribution to the fireworks fund have still opportunity to do so. And every cent of it will go into the display. Why pike?

Nobody wants to be a One-Eyed Connelly on such an occasion. Nobody wants to crash the rate, in effect, even though there is no gate to crash and no admission fee to dodge. And that is what it amounts to, taking your girl or your family to see a municipal fireworks show toward the expense of which you have contributed nothing but your company.

Those who have overlooked the item of making a contribution to the fireworks fund have still opportunity to do so. And every cent of it will go into the display. Why pike?

A terrible mistake was made in the press stories of a Hartford hold-up by a girl bandit who halted a motorist and took his $55 roll from him. Not a word was said about her being "bobbed."

This is a lapse for which an editor might, conceivably, lose his job. Hamlet without Hamlet is logical and interesting compared to the story of a holdup by a girl without the use of the essential phrase—"bobbed bandit."

Meantime, we have wondered, sometimes, whether there was not a fair chance that once in a while these bobbed bandits were not susceptible of suspicion as being fox youths who had swiped some of their sisters' or their lady friends' clothes.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

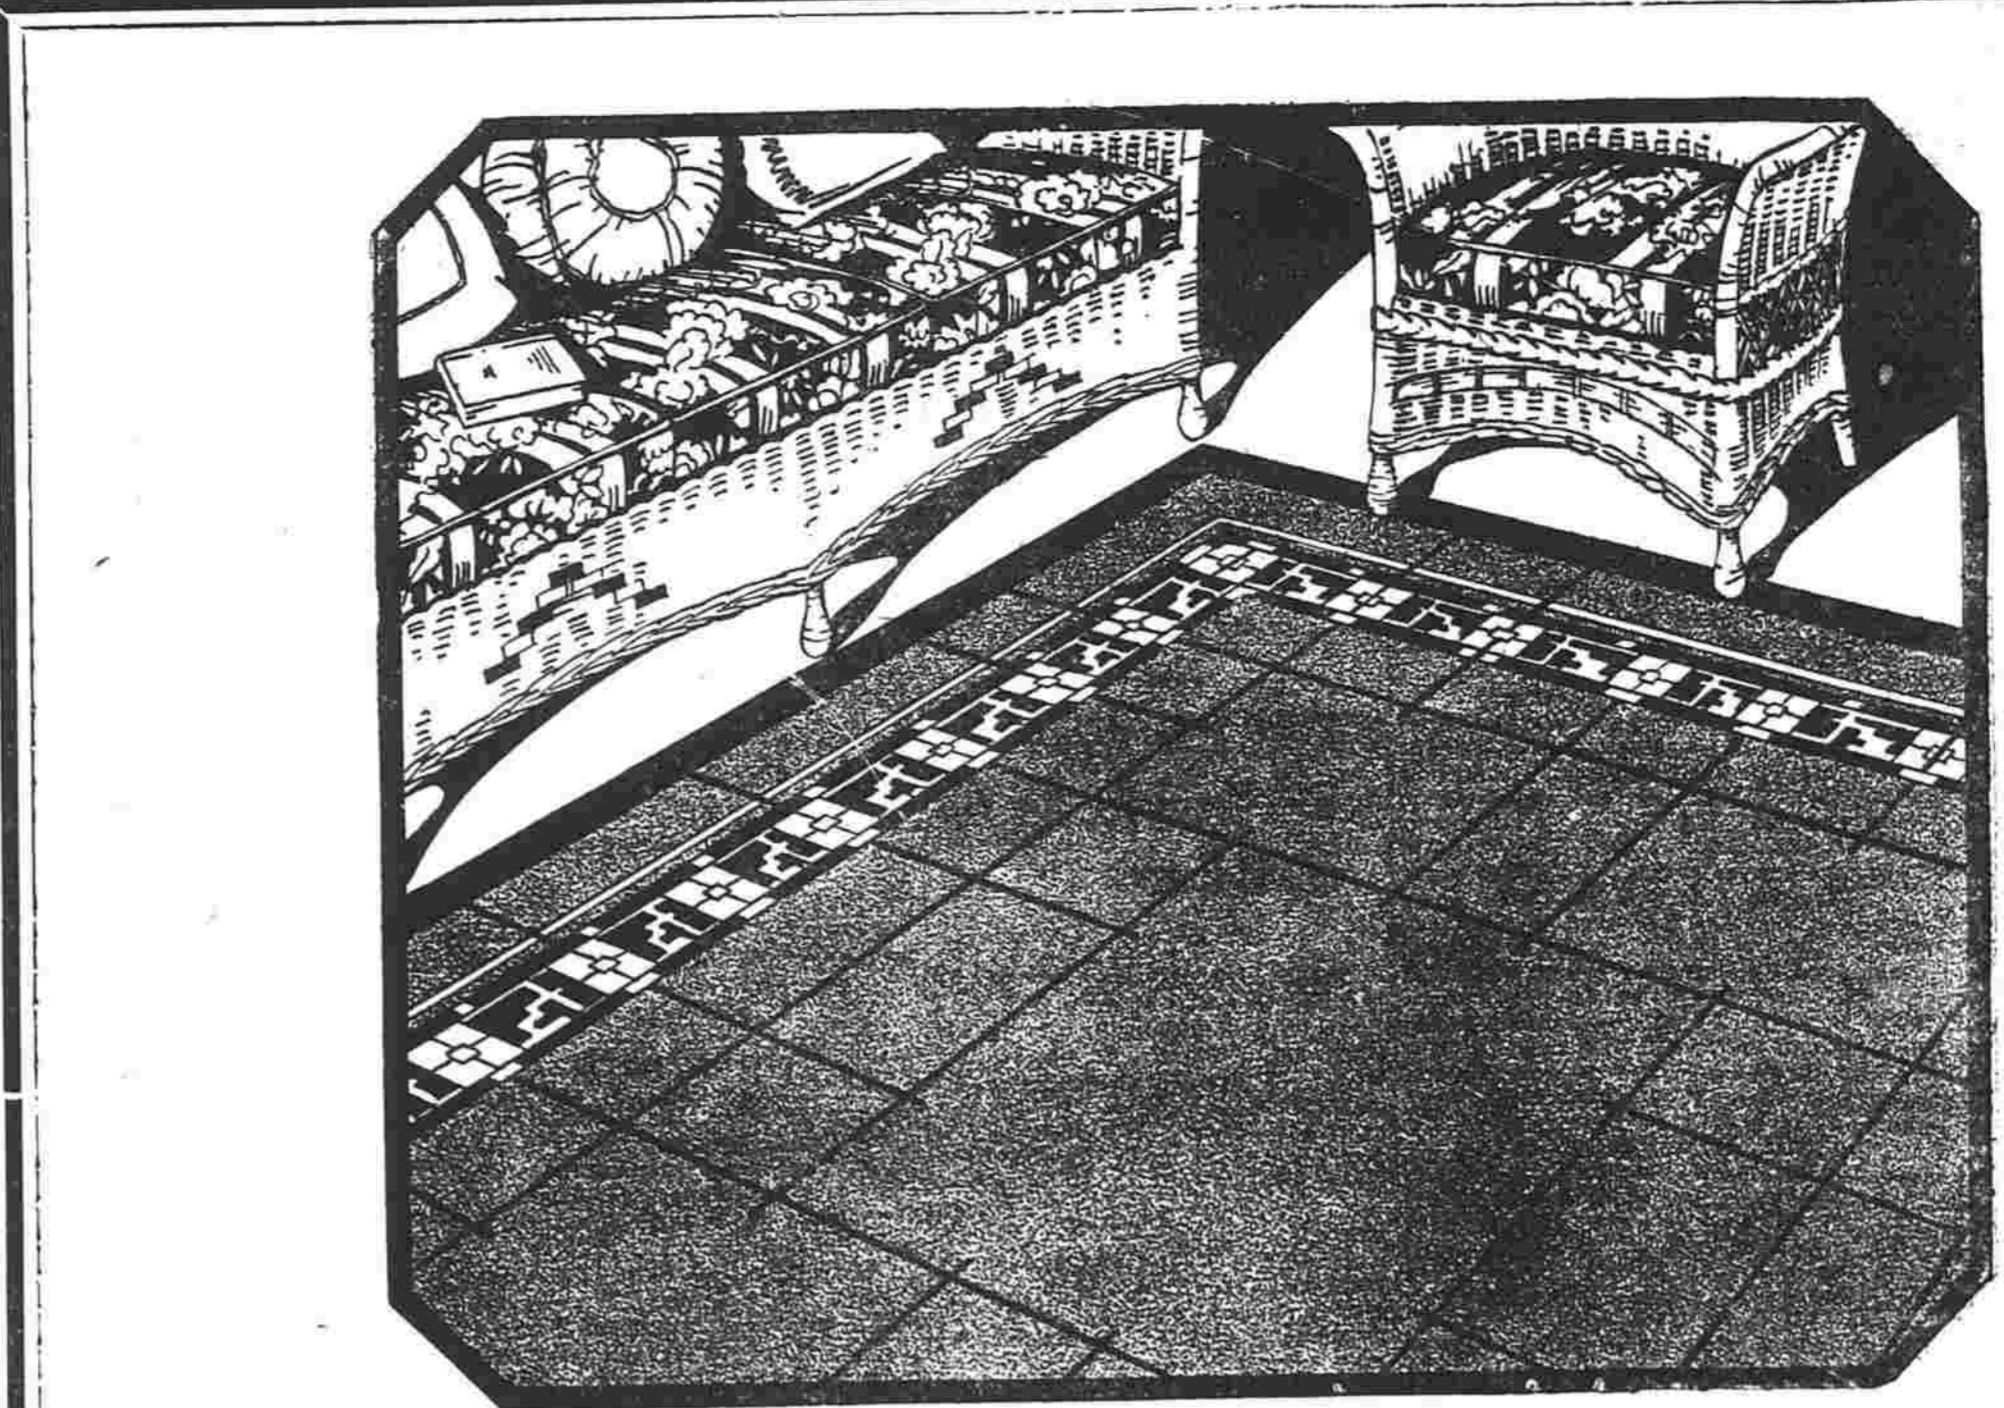

Washington, June 27.—Aviators keep right on setting new records for altitude, distance, endurance and whatnot, but if it were not for the barograph these records wouldn't count.

The barograph is the small instrument which proves that the record-breaking pilots aren't fibbing. If Lindbergh or Chamberlin had stopped in Newfoundland for a rest and then claimed to have made a non-stop flight, the tracings on the barograph's little chart would have given them away.

One of the very last things that happens when a flier starts off across the Atlantic or up for a new altitude is the sealing of the barograph. Most of this sealing has been done by Carl F. Schory, secretary of the contest committee of the National Aeronautic Association, which, in co-operation with the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, of which it is a member, determines the authenticity of records.

Schory, for instance, sealed the barographs on the Spirit of St. Louis, the Columbia—Chamberlin plane and the Sikorsky plane in which Rene Fonck failed so tragically to start the New York-Paris non-stop year.

The barograph is a steel box eight or ten inches long, with delicate but simple mechanism which records both altitude and the duration of the flight. At one end on the steel bottom of the box, slowly revolves an upright drum, on which is rolled a chart. Resting on the drum is a finely pointed pen, the other end of which is attached to a series of vacuumed diaphragms at the other end of the frame. As the plane attains altitude, the atmospheric pressure lessens. The diaphragms expand, controlling the pen and pushing it upwards on the drum, making a tracing the while. When the plane is standing on the ground the drum shows a horizontal line and, of course, if the plane comes down to the ground after a flight the fact is duly recorded by the sinking pen. The drum makes a revolution every hour, every two hours or whatever time is desired.

They always give impetus to the science, interesting both the public and the investors. They are proving that planes will fly consistently and are becoming more and more reliable.

New York, June 27.—The chimney sweep is about again, plying his trade. He generally appears shortly after the last nip of frost has made irreplaceable no longer necessary. He walks the byways of Manhattan, an incongruous figure in a rushing, modern world, crying his street call which sounds very much like this: "Chimmasweep ... chimmasweep."

Most of the world has heard about the bright lights of Broadway, but little is said of the picturesquely antique street lights to be found in other sections of Manhattan.

In MacDougall Alley, jutting off from Washington Square, old English street lights are still used. At dusk a lamplighter goes about his rounds and through the night the oil lamps flickering in the wind. Patchen Place, in Greenwich Village, boasts of one of the few remaining lamp-posts of the venerable vintage associated with comic strip tipplers.

Manhattan Snap-Shots—a cafe that hires only brunet waitresses and carries on its menu a little note: "If you prefer blonds, eat elsewhere. We furnish service." Another cafe menu asks patrons kindly to refrain from engaging the pretty waitresses in wisecracking exchanges. "We require our waitresses to be ladies during working hours," the notice ends. And after working hours? ...

In four Broadway skyscrapers a fine of $10 results if one is caught smoking. Millions in movie films are in these buildings. A fireworks company in the downtown commercial belt has a sign in the window reading: "We will make any battle scene on order." Just walk in and order your own war! ... A bootlegger had advertised a shipment of genuine "pre-war stuff". ... "What war?" asked the wise guy. ... "The Chinese revolution, you sap!" snapped the bootlegger.

PUBLIC AROUSED BY FRAUD TALK

Repeated Warnings Make People More Cautious; Some New Data.

Prepared by Manchester Chamber of Commerce.

It is gratifying to note a decidedly increased inclination on the part of the public in general throughout the country to accept with more seriousness, the repeated warnings of the various organizations which are trying to suppress the constantly growing volume of fraudulent sales. House to house salesmen report that it is increasingly hard to gain an audience with the average housewife; that they are more critical and cautious; ask more questions and are less inclined to accept their unsupported word for anything.

This is exactly as it should be. In the final analysis, the general public are the ones who have it in their own hands to check this evil, and it is only because of the ease with which fortunes have been made by unscrupulous firms and individuals that the business has grown to such an alarming extent.

Classified Advertising
A concrete illustration of just what an enormous amount of money is wasted through the answering of classified advertising alone, is shown by a single case of card gilding, where a dollar sent for an outfit, brought one company in six months, more than $50,000. Of this amount, $7,000 was refunded to dissatisfied customers, $5,000 was paid in general expenses by the concern, leaving them a clear net profit of $38,000, or at the rate of $75,000 clear profit a year. Examination showed that four out of five of those who sent their dollar were never heard from again, as they realized as soon as they got the material that they could not do the work. When one considers that this was the result of one single fact advertisement in the classified column and that advertising managers of metropolitan newspapers are deluged with copy for such advertising, some idea can be gained of the amount of money involved.

The local Chamber has personally investigated a number of such advertisements holding out inducements to housewives to do work with card coloring and gilding, embroidery and fancy work, scenario copy writing and typewriting, and in every case it has been found that the requirements were so exacting and impossible for anyone except experts that there was a hope of one person in ten thousand ever having their work accepted.

Sales Privileges and Outfits
Another fertile field for fraud is the sale of canvassing outfits and territorial sales rights. Anyone approached with such a proposition as this should reach for the rolling pin and "beat" the man or woman who attempts to sell them.

A recent case of this kind was brought to the attention of the Chamber of Commerce where a company sold six exclusive rights to canvass Manchester, for perfume and toilet articles, charging $5.00 for each selling outfit and selling right.

Despite repeated protests that the outfit was worth much more than the $5.00, no argument could induce them to take back the outfit and refund the money. It proved conclusively that the sale of the outfits alone is a paying proposition and investigations have shown that not one in a hundred is ever used.

Mail Order Sales and Unordered Merchandise
Reports of National organizations show that the unorderd merchandise scourge is dying out due to persistent education. Even the sale of legitimate mail order houses are being affected by this persistent national campaign of education, and incidentally, some honest house to house salesmen and women are finding it hard to do business.

Shoes and Stockings For Sample
The persuasive salesman still continues, however, to do a rushing business. Reports continue to come to the Chamber of Commerce of salesmen of stockings and shoes who take orders, collect a substantial deposit and depart. In many cases they are never seen again, and in others, when the goods are received, they are not like the sample or else, because of a poor fit, cannot be worn. Why anyone should buy a pair of shoes that they have never seen is hard to understand. It wouldn't be surprising if a report were received that some salesman had been around and taken orders for a set of false teeth by mail. There seems to be just as much sense and reason why one should give an order for a set of teeth as for a pair of eye glasses or a pair of shoes, either of which can do anyone just as much harm if not properly fitted.

We at the Chamber of Commerce sometimes wonder if, after all, we are not mistaken. It sometimes seems as though people really enjoy being cheated, and cheerfully pay their money to unknown salesmen just to be entertained by them with a smooth line of talk. It may be that some people even look upon it as a form of diversion, something which breaks the monotony and takes up their time without the trouble of dressing up and going to the theatre, and that they are willing to pay the price. If this is so, far be it from us to interfere with their enjoyment, but if, on the other hand, you do want to get your money's worth and if you do want to know the facts regarding any particular stock or merchandise sale, or the responsibility of any sales representative who calls upon you, you have but to pick up the telephone and call 1449 and the facts will be obtained for you.

I am wondering if you can help me to express a note of thanks to a number of people, who kindly sent a beautiful flag for the use of our Methodist Memorial in Chateau-Thierry.

I wish it were possible to express the gratitude we feel to the friends in South Manchester, who gave that beautiful flag to our Methodist Memorial in Chateau-Thierry.

FRATERNAL BODIES ATTEND SERVICES

Masons Hear Sermon at South Methodist; Odd Fellows, Orangemen Present

Despite bad weather there was a good attendance of Manchester Masons at their annual St. John's day services in the South Methodist Episcopal church yesterday morning.

The Masons met at Odd Fellows hall and marched to the church, headed by Herman E. Montie, worshipful master, and James O. McCaw, senior warden.

Suitable music was arranged by Archibald Sessions, choirmaster of the church. The choir sang "Babylon's Wave" and another chorus number with an incidental baritone solo by Robert Gordon.

Following the sermon the Masons moved to their rooms in automobiles because of the heavy rain. They completed their services in the lodge rooms.

The Sermon Following is the sermon of Rev. Mr. Cooper:

"Here we are among the beginnings. Everything is formless, chaotic but behind that chaos is God standing in the shadow. Out from that chaos came order, beauty, fruitfulness. Life. Postulate God of all this wonderful creation and you explain it intelligibly, without Him it is ever deepening darkness.

Light is one of the greatest mysteries of this creation. Nature has no greater wonder than the sun. We do not wonder that the Parsees worshipped it. Masons have been accused by their enemies with being sun-worshippers. All I can say is, I must have some idea of what the sun is to its Creator he is at least offering homage to the greatest object that we find in the world of things.

"Hail, holy light, offspring of heaven's first-born, Or of the Eternal, co-eternal beam, May I express thee unblamed since God is light!"

"Look at the earth when sunless. It is stagnant, shadowed with suspicion; death reigns in the dark. The first rays of the sun trumpet an awakening. The sun's rays touch the earth and everything responds to that touch. Mountain peaks pass on the electric thrill. Ocean waves mirror its pathway around the globe. Birds greet it with old and unimagined splendor and every blade of grass is crowned with a coronet of flashing pearls.

"Without light not a leaf would grow, not a flower would blossom, not a speck of life would be seen. At the poles what do our explorers find—nothing but ice and snow, not even death except for themselves.

The Word Light "The word light is not only used to express the luminiferous ether that gives our physical organs their power to see around them but to express by analogy the operations of other parts of this complex self. We speak of the light of intelligence. It is the ability of the mind to know the nature of things and to apply that knowledge to the manifold uses of life.

"Intelligence combines education and common sense. It means a greater grasp upon the realities of life, a finer use of the goods of the race, a better appreciation of all opportunities to help our fellows. In our land and time there seems to be no lack of this light of intelligence. We are almost blinded by the excess of light poured in upon us from many sources. This light brings ever deepening responsibility to a well-organized conscience.

"The widening mental horizon should mean the consecrated hand and heart. There is a danger lurking in this increasing power. Knowledge is power to blast or blight. Dynamite can be used to blow up a schoolhouse with its smiling children or blast a Hellgate for expanding commerce. We can use our knowledge for forging checks or fabricating silk. We can use it for feeding our own selfishness or for feeding the victims of a rampant Mississippi. We can Prussianize our knowledge for world conquest or christianize it for world service.

Increase of Moral Sense "Our moral sense demands a like increase with expanding knowledge.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (16) The Tides

Both the moon and the sun attract the water of the earth. The moon attracts the earth's water on the side nearest to it, causing high tides; then draws the earth away from the water on the other side, leaving a high tide there, as shown in the illustration above.

The sun also exerts a pull on the waters. When sun and moon are pulling the same direction very high tides result.

Floods thus often result from the action of sun and moon, drawing the water to a certain part of the world.

When the sun is pulling in one direction and the moon in another, as shown above, the tides are not so strong as at other times because the pull of one offsets that of the other. These lesser tides are called neap tides, meaning narrow or scanty (To Be Continued)

AUER BAFFLES PITTSFIELD AS MATES LACE OUT 18 HITS

Rain Delays Game But Hartford Has No Trouble In Winning; Schinkel and Mangum Hit Hard; Second Game Not Played.

Pittsfield looked much more like a tailend ball club than Hartford in the Eastern League game played at the McKee street stadium yesterday afternoon. There was a large crowd of fans considering the unsatisfactory weather conditions which necessitated the postponement of one of the scheduled two games. Hartford won in a walk, pounding two hurlers hard to chalk up a 10-3 score. A few more victories will bring the Senators out of last place and start them on a much-needed jaunt up the ladder toward the first division. Bransfield's crew has won 12 out of its last 17 games.

Hartford pounded Enzmann and Reynolds hard and rattled 18 hits, four of which went for extra bases. Meanwhile, the Hillies found Roy Auer quite a puzzle and nicked him for only six bingles and a double. Pittsfield scored but one run up until the ninth and then apparently eased up a bit inasmuch as he had the game all but won. Three hits came that inning for Pittsfield, Auer's only weakness was issuing passes and with that exception he was never in danger.

Schinkel with four out of five and Mangum with three out of four, were the heavy hitters for Hartford.

The Senators scored in every inning except the second and seventh, Pittsfield being continually "in the hole." Five errors were chalked up against the Hillies compared with none for the Hartford team, which by the way, offered a snappy fielding exhibition. Davis' outfielding was particularly good for Hartford and his catch from Enzmann's bat in the fifth was a beauty.

American League Experts Pick The Navy To Win At Poughkeepsie

By DAVIS J. WALSH, I. N. S. Sports Editor

New York, June 27.—He may turn out to be a lingual bromide, but the visiting preacher always (flits the back pews; the guest conductor may have been dropped on his head in infancy but he leaves them bleeding and mutilated in the aisles and I suppose, therefore, there is no necessity to become perturbed over the fact that an ordained member of the intercollegiate Rowing association no longer can win his own race at Poughkeepsie. This has been the case for the last six years and it probably will be so again on Wednesday when four members and three "guests" will line up for the varsity race with only the latter having a chance at the title.

The melancholy truth of the matter is that, back in 1895, four colleges, inspired by the notion that it was to be an annual regatta for the members and for the members, started the association. But since 1920, two others have been finishing its races. Seven years ago, the rowers scored a swarming triumph when Syracuse, Cornell, Columbia and Pennsylvania finished in that order. It was a great moral victory. There were only four starters.

Guests Arrive

After that the "guests" began arriving and it was mostly done at the finish. In 1921 the Navy won with California second. The Middle reed led the following year and this time Washington was second. In 1923 it was Washington's turn to win with the Navy second. The former also won in 1924 but the Navy didn't send a crew to the race, so the members were greatly encouraged. It looked like a big chance for them to place at least one-two in their own best but Wisconsin, another guest, slipped into the runner-up position.

VANCE IS LEADING LEAGUES' PITCHERS

Has Fanned 89 Batsmen This Season—Ruth Laid Up With Wrenched Knee.

New York, June 27.—Dazzy Vance, strikout king of the National League for five consecutive years, has fanned eighty-nine batsmen this season and is leading the league in that specialty by a wide margin. The Brooklyn speedball artist whiffed six men yesterday, in winning his ninth game of the season from the Giants, seven to one. George Uhle, former king of the American League pitchers, fanned seven men and allowed but four hits as Cleveland whitewashed the Browns, two to nothing. In the second game, which St. Louis won seven to three, Foyuses of Cleveland accepted thirteen chances at second base.

A third king, Babe Ruth, is tottering on his throne. The King of Swats is out of the game with a wrenched knee and has fallen behind his 1921 home run record. Meanwhile the Crown Prince of Swat, Lou Gehrig, clouted his 22nd homer of the season yesterday and is only two home runs behind Ruth.

What was the time taken by Georges Michel in his channel swim last September?—D. M. M. Michel traversed the channel from Cape Gris-Nez to St. Margaret's Bay, six miles east of Dover, in 11 hours and 5 minutes.

WILEY HIT HARD IN C. B. A. A. DEBUT

Meriden Insilcos Win Easily 10-5; Walsh Hits Triple, Homer, Fans 10.

Cheney Brothers were the only semi-pro baseball team to play over the week-end. The game scheduled at Westfield, Mass., by the Community Club was cancelled on account of rain yesterday. Cheney Brothers were defeated again 10-5 by the Insilcos in Meriden, Saturday.

The game marked the initial appearance of Wilfred Wiley, star moundman for the S. M. H. S. team, and he was hit rather freely as the box score will attest. Walsh, the Inslico pitcher, found Wiley for a home run and a triple in two times at bat. He was hit and walked the other two times. Walsh struck out ten, Wiley two. Each allowed nine hits. Cheney Brothers, however, made five times as many errors and they helped Meriden to no little extent. Meriden got away to a commanding lead in the first two innings and was never threatened thereafter. The box score:

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Attempts have been made on the life of ELISE MARBERRY, an American girl who owns and lives on property adjoining the queer little inn-like-bordered town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil.
Several mysterious deaths have occurred, including that of one of her foremen. Her two-year-old orphaned nephew is kidnapped. It is found again, however, through the efforts of VIILAK, her cousin and protector, who is known to Porto Verde as ATTORNEY D. VILAK, Elise's lawyer. Vink has been for LINCOLN UNIVERSITY, an American chemist, to help him get at the bottom of the mystery. They are ignorant of the cause of this hostility toward Elise but suspect that it may have been LLOYD PRENTISS, a refined and fascinating character, is somehow involved.

A few moments later he was speeding back. "The dam at Avilos has burst," he said quickly.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY
CHAPTER XXVI
VIILAK rode to the wharf to ascertain if the floods were holding up the boat or whether it would arrive on time. But the drowsy, red-shirted negro clerk in charge could tell him nothing.
Leaving the dock, he visited the slovenly tobacco store, bought some tobacco and matches and meeting D'Albentara, who had come on a similar message, rode with him part of the way along the road.
D'Albentara said regretfully that he had not yet had an opportunity to thank Elise for her courtesy as he had been having considerable trouble with two or three of his men, and this had occupied all his time. He feared, he added, that he might never have the pleasure of a visit, as the rising waters had been playing havoc with the railroad property in other places to a far greater extent than at Porto Verde, and he rather thought he might be ordered back in the direction of Avilos that afternoon.

He had received no information about the boat, though he thought that in view of the conditions it would very likely be delayed, perhaps even a day or two. They shook hands at the crossroads and Viilak rode to the fazenda.
"Looks mighty doubtful about your getting away tonight," he remarked a trifle anxiously as he entered Elise's room and watched her heap piles of baby clothes into a trunk. "Mighty doubtful. And after what happened yesterday, you yourself know how vital it is that you get away. I suppose all we can do is to go down to the wharf at six o'clock when the boat's supposed to come in and wait. Then, if it doesn't come, we'll have to build a raft, or something equally desperate, and ship you down two thousand miles on that."
By noon Elise had finished her packing. She spent a few hours in giving explicit directions to the servants as to what was to be done in her brief absence, then, after a quick tea, gave the child to Hannah, who was waiting in the dog-cart beside a gray-haired negro driver. Then she mounted her piebald mare and touched it lightly with her whip.

They rode off, Viilak and the old man on horseback on either side of her, the carriage close behind. They reached the wharf and dismounted. Six o'clock arrived without the boat, prolonged whistle that usually marked the arrival of the steamer at the bar a mile up the river. Seven o'clock. Still no whistle, no trail of black smoke. Seven-thirty. The equatorial night began its swift descent. Eight o'clock. Total darkness and the boat nowhere in sight.
Elise slushed impatiently through the mud of the tiny dock. "We'll have to camp here all night, I guess," she said. "I don't know whether anybody else is, but I'm getting hungry. Extremely hungry. And irritable."
She peered up the river anxiously, then began pacing the dock rapidly. Suddenly she turned as a confused murmur of excited voices drifted up from the silent, darkened town square a quarter of a mile away. A clatter of hoofs sounded up the road. The noise became louder.
Viilak's eyes narrowed. "Wonder what that is," he murmured. He took a bit of betel. "Think I'll go have a look. Back in a hurry." He spurred into the darkness.
A few moments later he was speeding back. "The dam at Avilos has burst," he said quickly. "A wall of water forty feet high is sweeping down the valley. But it won't reach here for half an hour or more. You and Nanny hurry up to Chacos Hill."
Elise and the old man looked at him incredulously, for his voice was even as though he were relating some placid story in the corner of a dim lighted room. He had barely finished speaking when a horseman came speeding down the road shouting in frenzied Portuguese that death was upon the inhabitants if they did not flee. He vanished. Windows opened violently, lights appeared, animals crumpled, men cursed, bedlam broke out in the street.
"You and Nanny go on to Chacos Hill," Viilak repeated. "With 'Tinky.'"
His words roused Elise from her daze. She caught the bride of her horse. "What are you going to do?" she asked.
"Go and warn some of the people in the outlying districts here. Don't get excited, Nanny. Keep cool, keep cool," he added, as the old man, trembling with excitement, tried to scramble upon his horse and helplessly entangled his foot in the stirrup. "A man's like an engine. Much better when he's cool. Half an hour's a long time. Don't be stampeded!"
Viilak stooped down and with a quick movement freed the other's foot. The old man clambered onto his mount. Elise, too, leaped into her saddle. "I'm going with you," she said to Viilak. "We can't let these poor people on the outskirts die like beasts. Two of us can cover much more territory. Hannah can take Tinky up to Chacos. She's proved she can take care of him. It's only a few minutes."

"All right. We've no time to argue. Come on."
She kissed the baby quickly, then spoke a few words to the driver of the dogcart. The vehicle rattled off. The old man looked confusedly after it an instant, bewilderingly began to follow it, then turned and came awkwardly galloping back to Viilak. The three riders sped toward the murmuring town square. As they reached it a pack-truck parade began to sweep past them.
Here a donkey struggled heroically to trot through the sloughs with its fat master and screaming mistress clinging hysterically to its back; here three squealing pigs dashed ahead of a grunting negro, driving them on with a club; there an Indian woman with huge ornaments in her lips and ears scurried through the mud shouting at the five naked and shivering children who ran before her. So absorbed were the terrified villagers in their headlong flight that they hardly saw the three riders courting past, and Viilak was constantly bringing his horse to a violent halt in order that he might not run them down.
Elise swept her mount round a bit to pop into a street and a frenzied householder. "Where are you going?" she flashed to Viilak.
"Prentiss' place," he snapped. "He'll get it the worst down there, he's so low. We've got time. We can get to Itzitha Hill from there just as quickly as to Chacos from here and be just as safe."
He heard her draw a sharp breath.
"I realize that you don't like him. I don't, either. But however bad he is, we can't let him drown. No one else in the town will think of warning him, so he's hated. After all, he is a fellow human being. All grudges are done in a case like this. It's the jungle law as well as the human."
She stooped to swoop safely under a low-hanging branch. "You're right. Of course he's not to do it. It was drifting into the family feud state of mind, I guess."
They swept on, and began to leave the city behind. Here and there Viilak on one side of the road and Elise on the other checked their horses for a moment before a miserable caber or a dog came trotting to the occupants the news of the disaster. But in each case an answering shout, or kinky head bobbing frantically through a door told them they had already been notified.
"Hold on," he called to Elise as he bobbed furiously up and down. "No one's been overlooked. They've been quite systematic in carrying the news. Couldn't have done better if one man had taken charge of it. Never knew these lackadaisical natives to have so much method and energy. It's a wonder."
They wheeled past a Porto Verdean bouncing along in a clattering ox cart, through a pack of racing, wild-eyed dogs who had been infected with the human panic and were fleeing from them they knew not why. Viilak's eyes widened as they had crossed so slowly a few hours before. Viilak looked down at the narrow stream below. "That's odd, too," he murmured. "Water looks lower than it did this morning."
They took the crossroads paralleling the railroad tracks and galloped on.

Prentiss is disgruntled of Viilak, but really admires him. He is invited to his house, where a new danger is encountered.

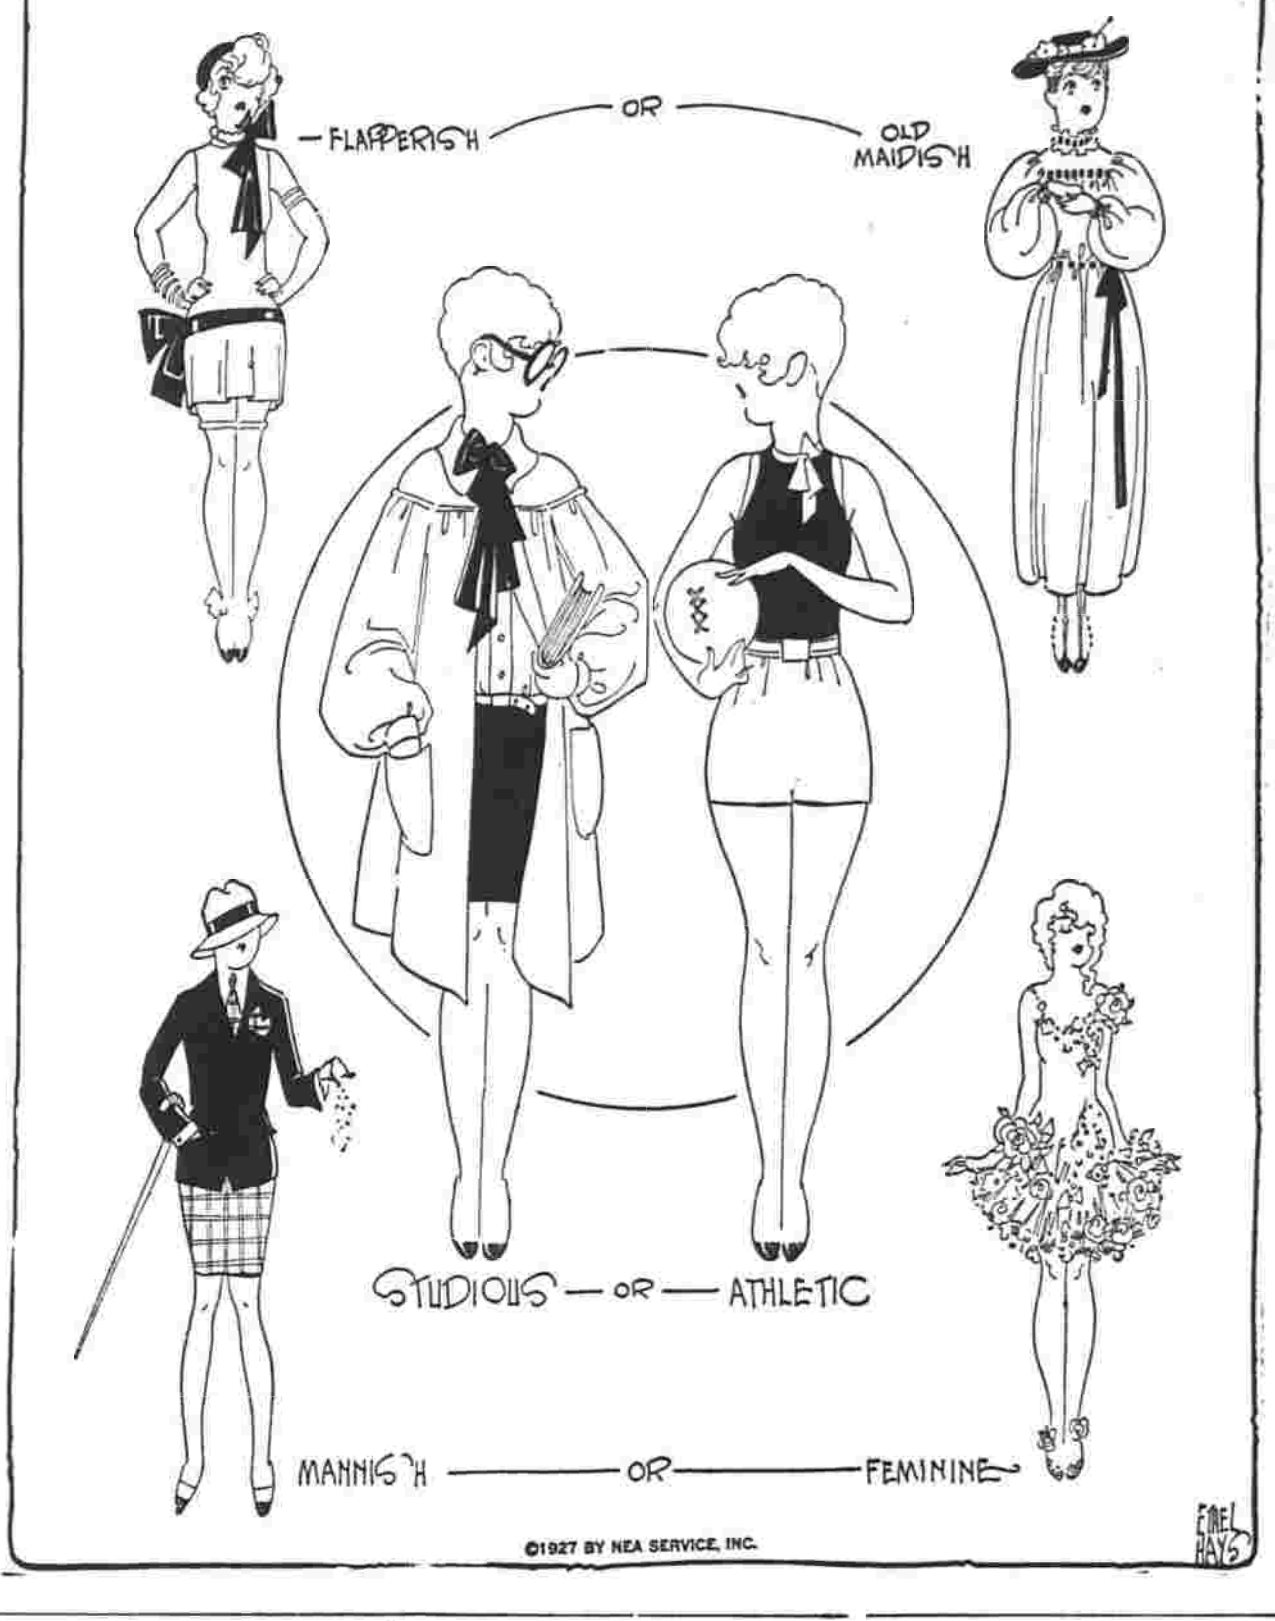

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

A maid from Hollywood apologizes, as it were, for such a thing as a husband. She admits that most motion picture cities have husbands who are kept concealed from the public. She explains a general belief in her circle that the fans want marriageless stars. In her apology for husbands, Miss Del Rio says—"The right kind of a husband—one with brains and a sympathetic understanding, is of infinite help to his wife. He can give her encouragement when she needs it."
How D'ye Like It?
Wonder how the boys like this picture of what is expected of them? And what a titter it gives some of us as we picture the reversal of the duties of the sexes! Time was when wives were taught that it was their duty to smooth his furrowed brow when he came home from that hard day in the office. Now, 'twould seem, 'tis the husband's part to soothe her harrowed spirits when she comes home from a hard day at the office or studio.
Whiff From Past
"Gentlemen may not smoke while ladies are in the bus." So read a sign in a downtown bus which I recently rode through banks of sweet wild clover, buttercups and daisies, and past sprawling old farm houses mantled in climbing yellow and pink cinnamon scented roses. The sign seemed at one with the region through which I rode. It harked back to a day when the "very smell of smoke" made any truly feminine and delicate lady ill! That was a day when she faints at the sight of a snake or a mouse and "just died" if her petticoat showed. And yet, hard-boiled though we may be, how "sorta nice" is this protecting chivalry, even though we oft yearn to shout, "I just love the smell of a good cigar!" Long may the pastoral viewpoint wave!
The W. C. T. U.ers!
Speaking of smoking, at a recent W. C. T. U. meeting another broadside was fired at smoking ladies. The county president again said that the time had come when all good women, as mothers and citizens, must rise up and protest against the evil of cigarette smokers and its influence on boys and children. She asked hotels and restaurants to forbid women smoking in their edifices.
Think It Through!
Now, lest you misunderstand me I am not advocating wholesale and universal smoking. I am only trying to point out a few things which never quite gotten accustomed to the sight of a babyface Miss 14 smoking anywhere, nor to most any woman puffing vigorously in public. But I do get all out of patience with an organization which tries to foist traditional taboos upon other people just because they are taboos, and without real informative backing. Truth compels me to state that many physicians and scientists declare that smoking harms no one as declare that it does. When the W. C. T. U. or anyone else will fight with facts and not prejudices, I'll listen to them—but not before!

Good Nature and Good Health

SEASICKNESS MALADY PUZZLES BEST MEDICAL SCIENCE
This is the first of two health talks on Seasickness—its cause and cure.
By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine
There are as many views of the cause of seasickness as there are specialties in the practice of medicine. Neither the physiological nature nor the causes of the condition are known. Attempts to treat the condition by all sorts of medicines have failed in most instances, and mechanical appliances are of little or no value. Another or habits of life have been suggested without effect.
The Russian physiologist, W. W. Boldyreff, has recently considered the various available views as to the nature of this disturbance. Boldyreff points out that seasickness is not confined to people on the ocean, but may be associated with various types of land occupation. Some persons develop the condition when riding on street cars or trains, some by swinging and sawing, some persons get it when houses are shaken by the wind, others by riding up and down on elevators.
Rocks is not the special motion most frequently responsible as is obvious from the fact that babies have something to do with seasickness, he believes, is more pronounced in young people and in animals, more noticeable in women than in men. It is increased by cooling of the body and stopped temporarily by fear or pain, but coming back, as these sensations cease, with greater force.

TOMORROW: Prevention and Treatment of Seasickness.

TEACH YOUR CHILD THRIFT
Olive Roberts Barton
Thou shalt teach your child thrift. Since extravagance has become our national sin, it is more important than ever, from an economic as well as an economical standpoint, that children be taught thrift.
Now thrift is almost invariably misinterpreted. It does not mean saving—at least not in the terms of hoarding. It means the intelligent handling of money.
Money spending is a real science. And as we begin to teach the child all other things at an early age, why not the manipulation of money?
The idea that should never be planted in his mind is the "more is better" idea. The "more is better" idea should be stressed. Now if you make a child put every cent he gets into his bank, to put into the big bank later on to draw interest, you might as well be stuffing the stones and leaves as far as the educational value to him is concerned.

He knows that money will buy, but he knows not what or how much it will buy. Hand a young fellow who has never had an money education, his bills paid by his parents, and a vague and cheerful idea that there is no limit to its buying power—hand him a thousand dollars. I give him a month.
But hand a like sum to a young man who has had money education, and instantly conscious of limit, he will probably save the biggest part of it.
An allowance is the A, B, C of money education. Give a child of six (school age is young enough to begin) say a dime or a quarter a week. No matter what wealth may be in the family, give him very, very little. Out of this make him pay his Sunday school money, buy his pencils, or ruler, or whatever necessity he decides he must have. Teach him that the money is his very own but that necessities come first. If there is any left over then he may indulge in the luxury of a soda or an ice cream cone or a bit of candy. And don't buy his luxuries for him, and don't give him another cent until allowance day.
He will learn to walk past a candy store or balloon man or a movie with money in his pocket. That's the big thing. And he will learn what the pinch means if he has spent his money too quickly or too foolishly. That pinch is the best thing in the world for him. Let him feel it.
As he gets older trust him with more and more responsibility. Let him pay for more things for himself. He will learn the great lesson of doing without this in order to get that.

An Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE by PAUL ADAMS

The Cafe du Dome, Paris, where many Americans gather and rub elbows with celebrities at aperitif time.

This is chapter 67 of the series of articles written by an ex-doughboy who is revisiting France as a correspondent for The Herald.

CHAPTER LXVII

At one of those brass-rimmed, round-topped tables in Paris on the sidewalk in front of a cafe near the church of St. Augustin in the Boulevard Malesherbes for a sit and a sip, just as the Legionnaires will sit this September.

"Pamp! Pamp! Pamp!" The incessant horns of the incessant taxicabs—a two-wheeled cart passes belonging to the Societe du Gaz due Paris and a sign tells the goggled world that the institution sells coke on detail.

"Encore, garcon, encore!" But the French don't call the waiters "garcons," as do the tourists. . . they abbreviate the word to "son" . . . and it gets the service.

There's a detail of blue-voiced Polius carrying rifles. The sergeant is a little fellow—not over five feet five . . . and one of his gangs is at least six feet four . . . what an admirable guard or tackle he would make.

Work is going on in the moving of the large barn on the H. C. Porter place in order to allow for the coming through of the new road from Marlborough. A great deal of dissatisfaction is being expressed by the townspeople at the cut made by the steam shovel in the approach to the postoffice corner in the work on the Amston road.

The road cut as it now lies much nearer to the postoffice and the house next to it known as the Post place that was indicated by the position of stakes and by the survey as shown by the diagram exhibited by the road commissioners in a town meeting. The workmen were restrained from cutting some valuable shade trees only by the remonstrances of property owners, but the road cut in so close that these trees are partly undermined and the value of the property damaged.

The safety of the corner would seem to be threatened also. Mr. Starr who represents the federal survey admits that it was not necessary for the road to have taken this direction at this corner.

NECKTIE FAKIRS
TRY A NEW DODGE
Receiver Now Writes to Recipients of Unsolicited Stuff, Demanding Pay.

Those fortunate people in Manchester who received neckties from one Paunee Bill of St. Louis and were asked to send one dollar in payment for them have noticed a new wrinkle which has been adopted by this person in an effort to get the money.

When the ties were first sent to Manchester during the past year the Chamber of Commerce advised all who received them to disregard letters which might be sent out. Repeat letters have been received from time to time, each one more threatening than the one preceding it but people took the advice of the Chamber of Commerce and have done nothing about them.

The new scheme was exposed today by George E. Rix, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce. He had received a letter from someone named Don J. Livingston, who styles himself the receiver for the St. Louis Knitting mills, to which Paunee Bill is indebted. He claims to have been appointed receiver by the Circuit Court and demands the return of money or the ties so that the accounts of the business may be adjusted.

Mr. Rix says, however, that the letter is only another ruse to collect Paunee Bill's money and has advised Manchester people to disregard the letters entirely. The letter he received today follows:

"Dear Sir:—
"Sometimes ago Paunee Bill mailed you three rayon neckties, requesting that you examine them and if you thought them to be honest value you were to mail one dollar or otherwise you were to return the ties in stamped envelope enclosed.
"On June 11th, by order of the Circuit Court, I was appointed receiver for the

The first five questions today were prepared by the American Nature Association. Answers to all the questions are found on another page:

2—Do both male and female frogs and toads croak?
3—What are the differences between rabbits and hares?

5—What animals in the United States hibernate?
6—What is ymirgyry?
7—From what state or states was land taken for the District of Columbia?
8—In what state is Mt. Vernon, Washington's home?
9—What is the fixed mint value of a troy ounce of pure gold?
10—What state of the union has the least dense population?

LITTLE JOE

Few kids forget to forget what they were sent to the store for.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Excitement now was at its peak. Imagine riding in the beak of any flying pelican. 'Twas strange as it could be. The Tinymites were tickled pink, and Scouty shouted, 'Just to think that just a short time back I was away down in the sea.'
The pelicans flew very high, and all the Tinymites saw the sky. It seemed like being carried in a miniature balloon. They passed by small clouds now and then, but quickly they were gone again. Said Scouty, 'Gee, I hope that we get some place pretty soon.'
'Let's take a nap,' someone replied. 'We may as well sleep while we ride.' The others thought the plan a good one, and soon they fell asleep. The birds kept going like the breeze and moved with quite apparent ease. The leader set a pace for all the other birds to keep. All of a sudden Coppy woke, and read the others when he awoke.

SENSE and NONSENSE

If Mr. Ford—as has been rumored—brings out an eight cylinder car he will probably call it Henry The Eighth.

The Psalter According to the Ford Driver
'The Ford is my chariot,
It shall not want;
It maketh me to lie down in wet places;
It destroyeth my soul.
It leadeth me into the deep waters.
It leadeth me into the paths of ridicule for its name's sake.
It prepareth a break-down for me in the presence of mine enemies.
It will fear more evil when it is with me.
Its rods and its shafts discomfort me.
It annootheth my face with oil,
Its water holleth over.
Surely I go down, if Lizzie follows me all the days of my life,
I shall dwell in nthe house of the Nuts forever.

Hard times is when you can't borrow enough money to buy an auto.

'Oh, George, a filling has dropped out of one of my teeth.'
'Well, now Mable, don't let that worry you. There's a filling station just around the next corner.'

How Come?
A tire on his car was flat.
But, gosh, he didn't care,
He threw it not away, although
He gave the thing the air.

Another thing the matter with a lot of folks is an automobile bought on a credit hitched in front of rented rooms.

The more patient pedestrians—fewer pedestrian patients.

How It Was
He tried to drive his car across
Before the rushing train.
And thus it was he took a loss
He'll never take again.

Automobiles have made the uncertainty of life more so.
The riches that once took wings
Now take automobile wheels.

Little Miss Winnings.
Went out aspinning.
Driving a new Cadillac;
Along came a flivver
A race it did give her,
And left her a mile down the track.

During a recent speed-law enforcement wave in a western state a motor policeman stopped an autoist. He was met by the inquiry, 'What are you stopping me for? I wasn't speeding.'
'I know it, 55 was the reply.
'And I am not drunk—have not even been drinking.'
'I know that, too, but you haven't your dimmers on.'
'That's funny; I certainly put on everything that Mary laid out for me.'

A jack is that little notched business that lies on the garage floor while your tire is flat ten miles away.

Jack Lockwill's Police Dog

'Get a lamp, Mandy,' directed Jack. When a lighted lamp was brought, he took it and went into the musty-smelling section of the house. Thor sniffed suspiciously behind him, bristling and whining. Mrs. Lockwill entered also. 'Oh, do ghost will catch yo' all!' moaned Mandy, from the door. Suddenly, Jack lowered the lamp and stared at fresh tracks in the thick dust on the floor.

The dog sniffed at the tracks, growling hoarsely deep in his throat. 'Somebody—a man—has been here recently!' declared the astonished boy.

'Do come away, Jack!' pleaded his mother. 'Not till I've investigated this,' he answered, following Thor, now moving swiftly along the course of the tracks.
In a dark bed-room, he found a high-posted bedstead that had been left when the furniture was removed. A horse-blanket, smelling of the stable, was spread on the bed-spring, and crumbs of food were scattered on the floor. 'Somebody has slept here recently!' decided the boy. A shriek caused him to whirl round. 'Help! help!' screamed Mandy's voice. 'Do ghost has got me!' (To Be Continued)

ONE IS ARRESTED IN 3 COLLISIONS

Drunk Charge Follows Main Street Crash; 3 Cars In Twin Hills Double Bump.

Three automobile accidents were reported at Police headquarters here over the week-end but no one was injured. Considerable damage was done to cars and one driver was arrested on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor.

The first of the three crashes occurred at 4:15 Saturday afternoon on Twin Hills. Three automobiles, all owned and driven by Hartford persons, were proceeding toward Manchester. The drivers were Joseph Cohan of 152 Clarke street, in a 1925 Oakland sedan; Miss Isabel A. Dilena of 91 Mansfield street, in a 1927 Willis Knight sedan and Barton E. Moore, Jr., of 125 Hunting street, in a 1927 Chevrolet coupe.

Suddenly the first one slowed up because Cohan figured he would be unable to pass a parked automobile before an oncoming machine. Miss Dilena, driver of the second car, also slowed up but Moore, a photographer for a Hartford newspaper who was on his way to Manchester to take pictures of the Spock-Cheney wedding, was unable to stop his car quickly enough.

At 8:15 Saturday night the second crash took place. This was at the intersection of Cooper and Walnut streets and again occupants of the cars escaped injury. A Buick sedan owned by Walter A. Strant of 192 Main street was parked on the east side of Cooper street, headed north, and another machine was parked on the opposite side of the road.

HORRAY, HORRAY, HORRAY NOW WE'RE ADVERTISED

Of course, Manchester had nothing to do with it but we are getting a lot of publicity today in hundreds of newspapers around New York and New England.

A big oil company is advertising summer tours for autoists and Manchester is printed on the map that accompanies the ad. Manchester is printed in large black type and Manchester, N. H., doesn't even show on the map!

Last night and resulted in the arrest of Charles August of 13 Liberty street on a charge of drunk driving. He was driving his Buick sedan north on Main street and attempted to make a left-hand turn into Bigelow street when his car collided with a Ford sedan driven by Alexander Shearer, of 125 Hilliard street which was proceeding south on Main street.

She was attended by Miss Mildred Strickland of Hartford who wore pale rose-colored georgette with a large picture hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses and blue delphinium.

Among the guests who motored to South Halifax from Manchester were Mr. Richmond's immediate family, also Mr. and Mrs. James Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Tryon and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Mitchell. Other guests were present from Hartford, Wilmarctic, New Haven, Poughkeepsie, Castleton-on-Hudson, and New York City.
