PACIFIC PLANE SENDS OUT SOS CALL

NINTH CUTS DEBT, TAX RATE, WITH BUT 30 PRESENT

Votes Charter Amendment Empowering Committee to Appoint Collector, Rate Maker, in Slim Meeting.

The Ninth school district last night decreased its tax rate from 2 3-4 mills to 2 1-2 mills, paid off $30,000 of its indebtedness, $20,000 of which is mandatory, voted to make the offices of tax collector and rate maker appointive by the committee rather than elective, and made appropriations totaling $108,845, with but 30 legal voters of the district present.

E. L. G. Hohenthal was named moderator of the meeting and immediately the question arose, "What constitutes a quorum?" Howell Cheney said that tradition put the number necessary to open a meeting at 15, but Charles R. Hathaway said that seven was legal in the Ninth district.

Amendment First It was voted to proceed to paragraph 6 of the call which was the amendment to the district charter making the office of tax collector and rate maker appointive. There was no objection to the motion made by Howell Cheney. The complete amendment, and Mr. Cheney's reasons, as advanced by the committee for asking for such an amendment will be found later in this report.

Thomas Trotter spoke in objection saying that he hoped that consolidation of all the districts would be accomplished soon and then all taxes would be collected by one man. He thought it wise to wait until consolidation. After Mr. Cheney gave his explanation, the vote was taken and carried by a large majority, three "no" votes being registered.

Committee Report Howell Cheney, chairman of the district committee, read his report. Along with the report Mr. Cheney presented considerable statistical data showing how school expenses over which the voters have little

HANG THREE MEN AT JOILET JAIL

Bandits Who Killed Guard Pay Supreme Penalty For Their Crime.

Joliet, Ill., July 15.—One singing, one praying and one cursing—three men dropped to their deaths today from a gallows in the Joliet jail. The trio was hanged at 7:15 o'clock this morning for the killing of Peter M. N. Klein, deputy warden of Joliet penitentiary.

The three were the sole survivors of a band of seven men who escaped from the prison after killing Klein in a daring dash for freedom in which Nathan Leopold, Jr., killer of Bobby Franks, was linked as chief plotter.

All Fearless Each of the murderers, Robert Torrez, Charles Buchowski and Walter Staleski, went to his death fearlessly.

More than 700 persons witnessed the hangings. Members of the convicting jury were led to reserved seats in front of the others and answered their names as Sheriff Markgraf called their names.

It was a carnival crowd. The blood lust of the Roman arenas was prevalent as the mob fought for vantage points to view the deaths. But with a clanging of bells, announcing the advent of the three condemned men, a silence settled over the gathering.

March of Death First came the sheriff followed by four priests. Two paces behind came Robert Torrez, bound and strapped. With a fixed fanatical stare, the Mexican gattered over and over the prayer he had committed to memory within the last week.

MR. EDDIE SUGAR NOW LEMONS'S AID

New York, July 15.—One of the messengers of the Harry R. Gelwicks Advertising Agency, Inc., of 369 Lexington avenue, is on his vacation. The other, John Lemons, was asked if he could get a boy to fill in for two weeks. Lemons said he could. Yesterday he arrived at the office with another boy who he said would like the temporary job.

"Fine," said the boss. "What's his name, Lemons?" "Sugar," answered Lemons. "Eddie Sugar."

TWELVE KILLED HUNDREDS HURT IN STREET RIOT

Socialists Revolt in Vienna, Burn Public Buildings and Battle For Hours With Police.

Vienna, July 15.—Conditions perilously close to revolution prevailed in Vienna today, when Socialists demonstrators, enraged at the acquittal of fascists charged with the death of Socialists, ran rampant through the city, burned the ministry of justice, demolished a police station and attempted to establish their own authority.

The mobs attacked police and troops and there were counter-attacks. The death list is reported as high as 12 with several hundred reported wounded.

Wild Cries Cries of "down with the government" were heard, and ministers were burned in effigy.

The ministry of justice was burned after the demonstrators had evacuated it at the urgency of Mayor Seitz. When the fire brigade entered the building, the mobs cut the fire hose.

All traffic has been stopped and telephone wires in the center of the city have been cut.

Excitement High In the center of the city the disorders have been quelled somewhat but excitement is still intense in the suburbs.

Fears are entertained that night-fall may bring new outbreaks. Clashes between workers and the police are reported from towns near Vienna.

The resignation of Chancellor Seipel and Police President Schobner is anticipated.

Food Hour Battle The battling in the streets of central Vienna lasted four hours with the mobs stoning the police and making attempts to lynch them. The rioters began to withdraw when troops were mobilized and opened fire upon them.

Police estimates of the dead are three police dead and six civilians dead. The police estimate the wounded at 250.

Mayor Seitz prevailed upon the rioters to withdraw from the center of the city and they are now marching towards the suburbs.

NEW HOPES FLYERS WILL REACH ROME

Postmaster General Greatly Interested in Flight of Bertaud and Hill.

New York, July 15.—When Lloyd Bertaud and James De Witt Hill bring the Fokker monoplane, "Old Glory," into the skies on a flight to Rome and return, with them will go the well-wishes of the man for whom they have carried Uncle Sam's air mail for the last three years.

He is Harry S. New, postmaster general of the United States, who has pledged the fliers the support and hopes for success of the Post Office Department.

In a telegram to the fliers, who are busy with preparations for the flight, Postmaster New said: "Be assured of my best wishes and those of the Post Office Department with which you both have been so long and honorably connected. May your first stop be Rome and may your flight be the great success for which we all hope."

Bertaud and Hill have made applications for their passports. The fliers hope to start between August 10 and 15.

NOTED REB. LEADER OF IRELAND DEAD

Countess Markievicz, Most Adventurous of Any Woman in History Passes Away

Dublin, July 15.—Countess Markievicz, famous woman leader of the Irish Republicans, died early today in St. Patrick's hospital here. Count Markievicz and Eamon De Valera, former president of the "Irish Republic," were at the bedside.

Countess Markievicz was stricken several weeks ago with appendicitis. Complications developed which resulted in her death.

Adventurous Life The countess, whose life was one of the most adventurous of any woman in history, was sentenced to death in 1916 for a part she played in an Irish rebellion. Her sentence was commuted to life imprisonment, but she was released from prison after serving one year.

Her stormy career during the Irish rebellion was followed by a series of interest in politics, and for the past four years the countess had represented one of the Dublin divisions in the Dail Eireann. She was re-elected as a member of De Valera's party in the last election.

WIFE OF EX-KAISER CHANGES HER PLANS

Was to Have Spent Month in Berlin But Republicans Fearing Monarchist Coup.

Berlin, July 15.—Suddenly changing their plans, Princess Hermine, wife of the ex-Kaiser, and his nephew Prince Sigismund, passed through Berlin today without stopping at the former imperial palace, several rooms of which had been set aside for them. Instead they went direct to their country estate, Saabor, in Silesia.

When Princess Hermine and Prince Sigismund left Doorn, it was understood they intended to spend the summer months in the imperial palace, at the head of the Unter Den Linden. Four rooms of the magnificent estate had been prepared for them, and a staff of former royal servants, relegated since the formation of the republic to the prosaic task of dusting the palace's relics of antiquity and deposited royalty, had been assigned to serve them.

Some factions had expressed the fear that the return of Princess Hermine to Berlin was the forerunner of a Monarchist coup.

BERLIN TO NEW YORK

Berlin, July 15.—Otto Koennicke, German ace, has made definite arrangements to start his projected trans-oceanic airplane flight from Berlin to New York, within a month; it was learned today.

Koennicke will pilot a specially built bi-plane. He will be accompanied by Viscount Solms.

Covering 7300 square miles, Canada's new national game preserve has been named Wood Buffalo Park and already has 6000 buffalo. The park is half the size of Scotland.

MANCHESTER TO 'GO ON AIR' FOR 13 WEEKS

Half-Hour Music Programs, Short Talks to Advertise Town; Plans Are Near Completion.

Unless plans already well advanced should fall through—and there appears to be no likelihood that they will—Manchester is on the point of receiving a measure of publicity that will establish it throughout the east as one of the best known communities in Connecticut.

Arrangements are in the making for a thirteen weeks broadcasting program, through WTIC, similar to the campaign recently conducted by Hartford. It is planned to devote a thirty-five minute period, once a week on a day yet to be determined, to the broadcasting of music rendered exclusively by Manchester musicians. And each of these weekly programs will be preceded by a five minute talk by some leader in the town's activities, describing the characteristics and setting forth the advantages of the town, industrially and as a place of residence.

Poster by Chamber This enterprise is being fostered by the Chamber of Commerce and negotiations have been brought to a promising stage by Secretary George E. Rix of that body.

On Monday night there is to be a meeting here between a committee of the Chamber and Dana S. Merriman, director of musical program at Station WTIC, at which it is expected many details will be agreed on.

BOBBY JONES WINS GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP

Breaks All Records in Scoring—Finishes 72 Hole Distance in 285.

St. Andrews, Scotland, July 15.—Robert T. Jones, Jr., gentleman and golfer, first, last and always, today won the British open golf championship for the second successive year and, in so doing, broke all scoring records for the open championship, both here and in his own country, America. While a distinctly British gallery went wild over the invader, Jones finished the seventy-two hole distance in 285 strokes, breaking the British record of 291 and Chick Evans' mark of 286, made at Minkindale in 1915.

Jones shot the final eighteen holes this afternoon in a fine 72, and the last putt holed out. British reserve suddenly was lost in the thrill of having golf history written and before Jones could escape from the green, he was caught by eager hands and lifted high in triumph.

Then the mob started for the sacred edifice of the club house with the evident intent of celebrating with a friend within but the police intervened in time.

BRONCHO BUSTING ON CHURCH LAWN HOT JOB

Wee Pony Gives Boys a Long Hard Task When He Goes On His Own.

It took the combined efforts of two boys for more than an hour last night to catch a tiny pony which had broken away from its tether at Globe Hollow. The animal appeared from the vicinity of the pond and ended up at the South Methodist church where it proceeded to graze quietly on the lawn.

The owner of the pony and a friend came to the church grounds soon after and tried to catch it. But the pony had a taste of freedom and would not be caught. The boys chased him off the lawn but when they would come close the pony would double back, run away and look at them from a safe distance.

The chase passed up Charter Oak street, through the Cheney meadows, and back again to the church lawn. His Nibs remembered the clover. The boys, hot and perspiring, stuck to their job and eventually must have succeeded in it, for more than an hour later, after 9 o'clock, the owner was seen riding the pony home.

"DROPPING INTO SEA. NO GAS. SEND HELP"

TWO PERSONS DIE IN MILFORD CRASH New York Auto Hits Parked Truck—Couple Killed Almost Instantly.

New Haven, Conn., July 15.—The deadly Milford Turnpike added two more names to its long list of casualties today. Mr. and Mrs. John Nelson Shreve, of Manuring Island, Rye, N. Y., were instantly killed when their car plunged headlong into the rear of a parked truck near the Orange town line. The fatalities ended a double-collision in which the truck figured. A few minutes before the Shreve car was wrecked, a machine driven by Thomas F. Mitchell, 195 Church street, New Haven, side-swiped the truck, went off the road and upset at the foot of an embankment. Mitchell escaped without a scratch.

A truck owned by Purdy G. Bleeker, of 412 Herkimer street, New York, was west-bound in control of Austin J. Kitteridge, of 32 Howe street, New Haven, with Mitchell's car following. Mitchell tried to pass the truck but failed to calculate the distance and was thrown off the road.

Kitteridge went to Mitchell's aid and the two placed the Mitchell car on the road again. Both men believed they were in West Haven and started to report the accident in that town. Kitteridge left his truck beside the road, well off the concrete and with tail light burning, he said today.

Hear Crash The two had proceeded but a short distance when they heard a crash, and returned hurriedly. A light car which they had not noticed was entirely wrecked against the rear of the truck and a man and woman were lying beside the road, apparently dead.

Neighbors hearing the crash went to the victims' aid and within ten minutes the two were in Milford hospital. Death came shortly afterward. Dr. W. J. H. Fisher, medical examiner, investigated and decided both had died from fractured skulls.

Shreve was 46, his wife 42. He was a wealthy New York wire manufacturer. The couple have four children, two boys and two girls.

Kitteridge, Mitchell and residents of the section where the accident occurred appeared before the coroner open for an examination this morning for an examination as the coroner opened his formal inquest.

The deaths today were the sixteenth and seventeenth that have occurred on the turnpike since January 1, last.

BIG BOUT POSTPONED

Detroit, Mich., July 15.—The Sammy Mandell-Phil McGraw lightweight championship bout was postponed today until tomorrow (Saturday) night.

Heavy rains of last night and today convinced promoter Floyd Fitzsimmons that it would be folly to try to proceed with the fight tonight as scheduled.

BARN BURNED

Shelton, Conn., July 15.—Fire of unknown origin today completely destroyed a large barn owned by the Bridgeport Hydraulic Co., at Trappalls reservoir. Thirty tons of hay and much machinery was lost. The ruins were still smoldering this afternoon. No estimate of the loss was available.

Disaster Overtakes Smith's Attempt to Span Ocean; Last Message From Plane Heard at 7:45 (Pacific Coast Time)—Three Steamers Rush to Scene, Estimated About 500 Miles From Hawaii—All Seaplanes At U. S. Naval Station Sent Out to Aid In Search—Aviators Thought to Be Afloat On Rubber Raft.

Honolulu, July 15.—"We are going into the sea. Have rubber boat. Send help." Thus did the little radio aboard the trans-Pacific plane City of Oakland early today sputter out in a last frantic SOS the news that disaster had overtaken the attempt of Ernest Smith, air mail pilot, and Emory Bronte, his navigator, to fly from California to Hawaii.

The message was picked up by the liner Calawall and relayed to the mutual wireless station here. The message was sent at 5:15 Hawaiian time or 7:45 a. m. Pacific coast time.

Smith's Position At the same time the naval air station picked up a message from the Smith plane giving its latitude as 27 and its longitude as 147.10. This message read: "Please rush help. Have rubber boat."

The first news that Smith's gasoline supply was running low and that he might be unable to complete his air voyage, brought the entire facilities of the islands to his assistance.

Every ship near his position was notified. All within a radius of 100 miles were asked to rush to the scene. The liner Calawall which had picked up Smith's calls was already on its way as were two other vessels.

Naval seaplanes were dispatched from Pearl harbor base at thirty minute intervals. The location at which the plane was forced down is believed about 500 miles northeast of Paia, Island of Maui.

CALLS FOR HELP Honolulu, T. H., July 15.—"Rush help. Running out of gas. Going down soon," was the cry of distress from the "City of Oakland," trans-Pacific plane, at 3:50 a. m. Honolulu time, according to radio reports from the lines Wilhelmina and Calawall, received here today.

The plane's position at the time of sending the SOS was 500 miles northeast of Paia on the island of Maui, the Wilhelmina reported. Both the Calawall and Wilhelmina advised they were rushing to the assistance of Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte, the mainland-to-Hawaii flyers.

Navy seaplanes hopped off from Pearl harbor at half-hour intervals to take up the search for Smith's plane.

The Calawall wireless that she should reach Smith's location by 7:40 o'clock if the plane stayed up. Smith gave his position last as Latitude 28.15; Longitude 145.45.

Carries Life Raft The City of Oakland carries a life raft similar to that used by Commander Byrd on the plane America.

This life raft may be inflated in a minute and a half with gas contained in a special tank.

Navigator Bronte is equipped with very signal lights in case of assistance and each of the aviators has a condenser cup which will distill water from their breath in the event their water supply becomes exhausted.

Bronte carries an army six-shooter revolver. When he placed it in his compartment, someone asked what it was for.

May Meet Sharks "We might need it to shoot a shark or two," he laughingly replied. In view of the news that the City of Oakland may soon be in the water this remark was recalled today with sinister meaning.

The plane carried 368 gallons of gasoline which Smith estimated would be sufficient for 26 hours flying. Strong headwinds, however, cut in greatly on Smith's speed, slowing him at times to a speed of around 75 miles an hour. The 26 hours, it was believed, ate up the estimated margin.

"The City of Oakland" is capable of remaining afloat for at least ten hours, it was estimated. In that length of time, Smith and Bronte would have an opportunity to inflate their life raft in case help was not forthcoming.

Emergency food rations for ten days were taken by the flyers. A patented device, whereby the gasoline tanks can be converted into pontoons, will buoy up the plane if it is forced to descend to the surface.

LOG OF SMITH PLANE FROM TIME OF START

San Francisco, Calif., July 15. Following is the log of the attempted flight of Ernest Smith and Emory Bronte from the California mainland to Honolulu: Thursday: 10:40 a. m. (Coast time)—Left Oakland Municipal Airport. 12:00 noon—Reported flying at 2,000 feet above fog for 100 miles southwest of San Francisco.

1 p. m.—Flyers radio all well. 2 p. m.—Plane radios encountering heavy fog. 3:45 p. m.—Steamer Monora reports receiving radios from plane. All well.

4:00 p. m.—Flyers radio fog heavy, but plane going strong. 5:00 p. m.—Smith again radios "all well." 6:00 p. m.—Smith radios "still foggy, but going strong." This message gave its position as Latitude 35.42 North, Longitude 129.24 West. It was then believed 380-miles out from San Francisco.

Friday: 12:01—The S. S. Lapurissima reported to the Federal Telegraph Company that it had heard the call signal of Smith's plane while about 1,800 miles out. The message was too weak to be heard distinctly.

3:25 a. m.—Army transport Kenovis, 800 miles from Honolulu, hears plane signalling at 8:20 a. m., but message indistinct. 8:30 a. m.—President Pierce, less than 400 miles from Honolulu reports inability to pick up plane's radio.

4:00 a. m.—Liner Wilhelmina fishes plane's position Latitude 28.58 North, Longitude 144.36 approximately 700-800 miles from Honolulu. 5:45 a. m.—Liner Calawall wireless Smith plane about 380 miles north of her. It had heard the call signal of Smith's plane while about 1,800 miles out. The message was too weak to be heard distinctly.

7:00 a. m.—"Landing in Water" SOS picked up by Navy radio.

In addition to radio, flares and pistol shots for calling attention to their location, the flyers have also in reserve two carrier pigeons which they can release in an emergency. The birds, alighting on any vessel in their path might be useful in carrying word of the plane's position if other signalling fails.

Early Bulletins San Francisco, Calif., July 15.—On the theory that "no news is good news," Ernest Smith and his navigator Emory Bronte, who are attempting a non-stop flight to Honolulu, are believed progressing favorably toward their goal this morning with more than half of their treacherous course behind them.

The only communication of any sort with the plane since 7 o'clock last night was reported by the S. S. Lapurissima, 1,300 miles, out from San Francisco, which radioed the Federal Telegraph company soon after midnight this morning that she had heard the plane's call letters. The message, however, was too indistinct to be copied.

Half Way Across On the basis of early communications with the flyers they should have passed the half-way mark about midnight last night.

No direct word has been received from them since 7 o'clock last night at which time they were approximately 650 miles west of San Francisco.

According to reports from vessels in the lane covered by the flyers, they are encountering excellent weather. The steamer Malana, en route to San Francisco from Honolulu, reported to the Federal Telegraph company she was about 1200 miles from San Francisco and that the sky was slightly overcast, with control have increased. The report is so illuminating as regards school problems that The Herald is printing it in full. It will be found later in this report.

Miss Emily G. Cheney read the report of the South Manchester Free Library committee and also that of the librarian. This report showed that $1,009 books had been issued during the year and that there are now 19,345 volumes in the library. The appropriation last year was $13,500. The report showed a balance of $33 in the library account, and an appropriation of $14,000 was asked for.

Recreation Report

Edward F. Taylor of the Recreation committee read the detailed report of recreation activities and the financial report showed an overdraft of $716.78. The appropriation last year was $20,000 and $20,716.78 was expended. Mr. Taylor explained that a new expense item not figured in the budget had been added for the cost of watchmen, and a larger heating charge was given the Recreation building. This accounted for the overdraft. Mr. Taylor's report was accepted, the overdraft approved and voted paid.

Committee Elections

R. LaMotte Russell and Rev. P. J. O. Cornell were elected unanimously to the school committee for a term of three years. Charles R. Hathaway was unanimously elected as clerk and treasurer for the term of one year. Earl G. Seaman and Robert V. Treat were named auditors and were given the power to hire a Certified Public Accountant to check the financial concerns of the district. Edward F. Taylor was named to the Recreation committee for a term of three years.

The estimated expenses of the district for this year will be $108,845. Howell Cheney explained when appropriations were reached. The grand list of the district is $33,000,000 and a 2 1/2 mill rate would raise $825,000. Other income will increase the receipts of the district to over $115,000. An indebtedness of $30,000 was retired this year, $20,000 of which was mandatory, and it is hoped that the floating indebtedness of the district will be redeemed next year. The appropriations as read by Mr. Cheney were voted and are as follows: Recreation, $20,700; Library, $14,000; Current expenses, $25,500. The treasurer was empowered to borrow not to exceed $70,000.

A 2 1/2 mill tax rate as of July 14, 1927 and due October 1, 1927 was voted.

Officers Thanked

Rev. Watson Woodruff moved that the committee and officers of the district be thanked for their efficient work. It was carried.

Howell Cheney asked for any discussion on important questions such as consolidation to be brought up at this time. He said that there were possibly two things the district would be asked to act upon in the fall. The town may vote to take over the present high school property and the district will be asked to concur in the matter, and the district may be asked to take over the present high school buildings. He believed last night's meeting too small for an expression of opinion on either of these questions or on consolidation but he hoped that the voters would give them considerable thought and be able to act with complete knowledge of the subjects in the fall.

Town High School

E. L. G. Hohenthal expressed the opinion that the town should own the high school so that students might go out from a Manchester High school and not from a South Manchester High school owned privately and controlled by one district.

Howell Cheney in answer to a question said that the district would have no other use for the present high school building nor for the Franklin school, now used for high school purposes. He said that he favored the town buying both these buildings, rather than leaving them to the Ninth district and building a new high school building.

The meeting adjourned when no further discussion of the subjects was forthcoming.

Following is the report of the Ninth district school committee as prepared and read by Howell Cheney, chairman:

Committee Report

To the Citizens and Taxpayers of the Ninth District:

The School Committee submits herewith the following report on the conduct of schools in the Ninth School District for the school year 1926-27:

The Committee for the year has been:

P. J. O. Cornell, term expires 1927.

R. LaMotte Russell, term expires 1927.

Miss Mary Cheney, term expires 1928.

John H. Hyde, term expires 1928.

Howell Cheney, term expires 1929.

The maintenance of education in the Ninth School District for the past school year has cost the town $260,307.85, which is an increase of $7,122.83 over the previous year, or a little less than 8 per cent. This is the amount which is chargeable to the town as distinct from the expenses for the maintenance of school buildings and property, which is chargeable to the District. This increase has practically been accounted for entirely in two major items—an increase in salaries and in the cost of educational supplies. The analyses of the year's expenses are shown in the Ninth School District maintenance account printed elsewhere giving the exact comparison of the various items.

Increases and Decreases

Salaries and wages of all classes constitute 38 per cent of our total school budget. These have increased

1 per cent during the past year. Fuel, light and power constitute 5 per cent of the total expense and this has decreased during the past year 1 1/2 per cent. Educational supplies, library books, typewriters, etc., constitute about 6 per cent of the total cost and have increased 11 1/3 per cent. The miscellaneous expenses constitute 1 per cent of the total school budget and have decreased 2 1/4 per cent. This annual report has had to frequently emphasize the fact that the wages and fuel were largely determined by the economic conditions and the registration of pupils, and that only as regards about 7 per cent of the total school expenses was there room for school economy unless the district wishes to put up with a lower class of teaching ability.

After a long period of expansion we seem to have reached the point in this district where the increase in teachers' salaries, unless some further unforeseen economic changes become effective, will not exceed the average normal increase in practically all rates of earning. During the coming year this rate of increase will not exceed 2 per cent, and it is our expectation at the present time that this rate of increase need not be accelerated in the immediate future. A reference to the table printed elsewhere shows a comparison of the salaries of teachers classified by supervisors, special teachers and grade teachers, since 1917-18 and continuing up to date. It is always necessary, however, to bear in mind that in studying continuing figures of this character we have gone through an economic revolution and that what these figures reflect is only the normal experience of everyone who has to earn a living.

"Exceptional Ability" Slighted

In our report of a year ago we made an elaborate analysis of the cost of teachers' salaries and the factors which determined them. We have fairly well continued in the policies then announced, except that we have not been able to base promotion upon the factor of exceptional ability to the extent that we hoped we could. The old tradition that teachers ought to be paid according to years of service, academic degree received, and extension work accomplished, persists in all communities, and only a rigid determination to make exceptional ability a determining factor in promotion can make this element more effective. The difficulty here is not only one of tradition, but arises out of the fact that every teacher we lose has to be replaced at a higher rate than the teacher lost was started at, and consequently there is not as much money available because of changes as resulted under the older conditions.

Condition of Schools

No startling changes have been accomplished in the condition of our schools during the past year. Continuing emphasis has been laid upon the two extremes of the system in developing a higher standard of instruction in the high school and in the lower grades. The reports of the superintendent of schools and of the principal of the high school should be carefully read by all parents and taxpayers. They lay before us their ideals in concrete form and the achievement of these ideals would be more definitely secured if the whole community entered into it. It is a perfectly self-evident fact that good schools depend upon good teachers, and good teachers depend not only upon the character of the supervision they receive and the remuneration they are paid, but upon the wholehearted backing of the community. It is hardly possible to estimate the stimulating effect which the intelligent interest upon the part of the community has upon every supervisor and room teacher. The schools therefore must always have the participation of the parents and of the taxpayers; and the Committee would again urge that every civic organization in the community have its special committee in charge of education, and devote itself continuously to the discussion of educational plans.

The town can conceivably have no more important interest than the promotion of the interests of its children. Upon that depends its future progress and happiness. It is true that the management of educational systems is continuously employing more and more expert direction, and that the problems involved are more and more of a technical and expert nature. Nevertheless, when experts become divorced from the contacts of life they go astray and no community can safely trust its schools entirely to experts, however skilled they may be.

The Collection of Taxes

The difficulty which the Ninth district has experienced for a period of years in collecting the last 10 per cent of its taxes is by no means peculiar to this district alone. It has been experienced by all districts and also by the town. It lies only in part in the difficulty of a single elected official in enforcing the legal methods prescribed for the collection of taxes, when such legal prescriptions give rise to serious objections on the part of a small minority of the electors. The difficulty also lies in a growing public acquiescence in the tardy and even the non-payment of taxes for non-legal reasons. It is further increased by the peculiar conditions in this district under which approximately one-half of the taxes are paid by cash check, and nearly 80 per cent of all taxes come in without any solicitation on the part of the collector. This has created a condition of which it is very easy for a collector to believe that he earned 80 per cent of his commission in merely turning in what comes without asking, when in reality he may have done less than 10 per cent of the real work.

Unquestionably and properly the electors of the district hold the School Committee morally responsible for the conduct of its financial affairs. If taxes are not collected, instead of spending a nominal rate in commissions we are paying a most extraordinary and expensive rate for their collection. It is impossible for a collector to believe that he earned 80 per cent of his commission in merely turning in what comes without asking, when in reality he may have done less than 10 per cent of the real work.

Unquestionably and properly the electors of the district hold the School Committee morally responsible for the conduct of its financial affairs. New York, July 15.—That particular hollow-square in the heart of the Wall Street district, where European passports are issued, now begins to resemble Broadway on the night of a big winter premiere. The line forms on the right and keeps the clerks exceeding the pen and ink speed limit until after closing time.

Girls and women apparently make up the majority of those who plead the European pavements during the vacation season. Surely this becomes a woman's world. She taps the four corners of the globe alone, or with a girl companion or two. I have it from M. McIntyre, of the Cunard line, that 140,000 female passengers were crowded on their boats last season, this being something like 65 per cent of the total.

The ultra-modern ship makes elaborate efforts to cater to lady's whims. On board the new French liner Ile de France, which recently made her maiden voyage, are "sidewalk shops" in imitation of the most exclusive French places. While riding home it becomes possible to catch up on all the shopping neglected in Paris.

This ship also has a built-in playground for children that includes a merry-go-round. There are "sidewalk cafes" to give the atmosphere of the Paris streets and the "largest dining room afloat," which accommodates 600 persons. There is a church chapel two decks in height. Paintings of the Paris ultra-modern artists decorate the rooms. Twin beds take the place of berths and lacquer and gold decorate the salons. There is a waterway along which boats can be rowed and a shooting gallery to keep wives in practice in case they hear reports of hubby's goings on when they return from abroad. There is a room done in marble from the Pyrenees. All lighting is indirect.

This is but a sample of the future of traveling. Comfort and grandeur heretofore unknown upon the sea is planned and one skips about the world now-a-days as though in a floating hotel. There are those who still insist on the sense of really being at sea and haunt the small ships for their atmosphere.

New York is cluttered with perennial travelers. There are certain men who go abroad with a little preparation as salesmen who jump between Chicago and Manhattan.

And there are employees of certain ships who know most of the famous ones of the world through ship contact.

On the Leviathan there is a chief steward who greets a dozen celebrities by their first names and who can tell you all about royalty, millionaires, hetresses and dignitaries. He has handled them by the thousands, seen their shipboard romances come and go, watched them in their unconventional moments, and made most of them his friends.

Dempsey's Left Deadly Weapon

By GEORGE BARRY
Special Correspondent.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 15.—"And now, children," said Leo Penochie Flynn, to the assembled class of sport writers, "can any of you tell me how many left hooks Jack Dempsey actually has let loose for human jawbones since last Sunday?"

"Yes," replied one, "he has un-torked eleven."

"Ah, that's a bright child," approved Flynn, "and who can tell me what happened when he let 'em loose—I mean those eleven since Sunday?"

"I can, teacher," spoke up the "bright child" thumbing the pages of a note book. "One hit Marty Burke and dropped him to his knees. Two hit Eddie McMillen and knocked him cold—and out of the ring. Two hit Italian Jack Herman and they had to lift Herman out of the ring. Two hit Jack Hildebrand and he was assisted from the ring. I have no record of what happened to the other pair, so I guess they missed."

"Correct," says Leo. "Correct, most eminently correct," beamed Leo Penochie. "Eleven left hooks, two of which missed and the rest resulted in knock-downs or knockouts. I guess that's something to write the home folks about, is it not?"

Before any answer could be made, Leo Penochie added: "This left hooking that the big fellow has been doing has been really against my orders. I've been requesting him to keep it parked away in camphor balls until he meets up with this Sharkey fellow. And I know Jack has tried not to use it. But every so often he forgets his cue and it slips out—and you children have seen what it can do.

Murderous Weapon
"Dempsey's left hook is the same old murderous weapon that it was in the earlier years—except that I think it's a bit better. I've been drumming it into him that he should shorten all his punches—especially that left hook. When he tosses it with a long, sweeping effect, he's just as likely to miss with it as he is likely to land. He's been secretly practicing the shortening idea. How well he has succeeded is shown by his record since he resumed work last Sunday morning. He's thrown it only eleven times in those five days—that is, he's thrown the real hook only eleven times, and nine times has he landed. How's that for marksmanship? And every time he's landed with it he's dropped his man or knocked him cold, dead out. "And he's just beginning to get good with it; just beginning, children. By the 21st of July—well, well, well, how sorry I feel for this Jack Sharkey fellow."

Dempsey scaled 201 today before his workout and said that he wasn't going to try to shear off any bulk in a drastic way until about a week before the battle.

Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE. This is chapter 82 of the series of articles written by an ex-soldier who is revisiting France as a correspondent for The Herald. CHAPTER LXXXII To the soldiers of the 28th and 77th American Divisions there was a region in the Argonne forest that was known to them in September, 1918, as La Viergette. It was at a point in this region, which is on the road from Binarville to Apremont and not far from the only other road that traverses the forest, known as "Haute Chevauchee" (Hochacochee) that the two divisions met and united to push the Germans out at Grand Pre. Scared by War "The Little Virgin," a tiny image of white marble but over ten inches high that stands on a pedestal under the trees some what back from the road. The statuette was placed there more than one hundred years ago by devout peasants of Apremont. Thus that region of the forest obtained its name. Tiny as it is, however, it did not escape untouched during the Argonne drive. One machine gun bullet clipped off some folds of the white robe at the waist, another severed a finger and perhaps a dozen others were imbedded in the pedestal. But, after the armistice had been signed, when the villagers of Apremont came up for the first time, they found their shrine, with its scars, just as they had remembered it from the days four years before—before the Germans came in. And in a simple ceremony of gratitude, the little group knelt at the wayside, under the trees, and offered a prayer. So All May See La Viergette is at the point of the roads in the Argonne where members of the American Legion may see it when they arrive in September. It still bears the marks of bullets—perhaps German—perhaps American. All along the roads the peasants

BRITISH STEEL PRODUCTION IS MAKING RECORD

England's Share In the World's Production Hits High Mark Since War.

London.—Great Britain is making at the present time more steel than ever before, except during some of the war years, and is continuing for more steel than in any previous period of peace.

March, 1927, was a record month the production being 949,600 tons. The British share in the world's steel production promises this year to exceed the share that fell to Great Britain in 1913, the record year for British industry.

British steel output is expected shortly to exceed one million tons per month.

Production Expanding. The whole production of steel in the world is increasing, the following figures of total output show: Year 1913 World's steel output, 76,000,000 tons. Year 1926 World's steel output, 87,500,000 tons.

Britain's share of the world's total steel production in 1913 was 10 per cent. Last year it dropped to 4 per cent, owing to the general strike and the prolonged coal strike.

So far this year the world is making steel at the rate of considerably more than ninety million tons for the full year, which would be at least fourteen million tons more than in 1913, and Britain's share of the total output promises to be 12 per cent, or 2 per cent more than in the last full year before the war.

British Consumption. Britain alone is consuming practically 100 per cent more steel than in the most busy pre-war days. The cause of this that steel is rapidly ousting wood, stone, brick and other materials. The shipbuilding industry is still far below pre-war level, and the armaments industry—another steel-user—is but a shadow of its former self; all the same infinitely more steel is being used than when these industries were in full swing. This means that the construction and engineering trades are taking tonnages of steel far greater than is commonly realized. The steady depletion of the world's timber resources, to name only one factor, indicates a progressively increasing demand for steel. And concurrent with the upward tendency in the cost of wood, there is a steady downward tendency in the price of steel, due to furnace and metallurgical improvements.

FREIGHT BARGES ON MISSISSIPPI GET NEW LINES

Success of Lines Spurs Waterways Commission To Make Extensions

Washington.—Success of the government barge lines on the Mississippi river from St. Louis, Mo., and Cairo, Ill., to New Orleans, La., has spurred the Inland Waterways Corporation to greater efforts to make similar lines from St. Louis to St. Paul and Minneapolis, Minn., commercially profitable. Service on this route, authorized by the 68th Congress, was started in an exceedingly small way last summer, the total outlay for the equipment used being only $63,000. Previously a group of business men and municipal officials of the Upper Mississippi section, alarmed by the increasing freight rates for hauls paralleling the river had raised a fund of $600,000 with which to found a water carrier system of their own, but this capital which could purchase only two towboats and 11 barges of the required types, was found insufficient for practical purposes.

Contracts For Boats. An appeal to the Secretary of War brought the Inland Waterways Corporation to the assistance of the upper Mississippi interests. Contracts were made for the leasing of the boats already under construction and these were supplemented by the building of other craft, expected to be available for operation in May, contracted for 45 additional steel barges and another towboat.

At the same time various river ports were proceeding with plans for the construction of suitable terminals. Those at St. Paul, Minneapolis and Dubuque, Ia., are expected to be ready for use by the end of this year, while bond issues have been voted to build terminals at Burlington, Ia., and the trillies, Davenport, Ia., Rock Island, and Moline, Ia. Work on the latter project is being held up, according to the latest available information, until the three municipalities can decide among themselves upon the location for the terminal.

Build New Terminals. Major General T. C. Ashburn, chairman of the corporation, believes other terminals or freight transfer stations should be constructed at several places which he considers "natural rail-water points of interchange." Among these he has included Clinton, Ia., Keokuk, Minn., (where the Minneapolis and St. Louis railroad crosses the Mississippi), Stillwater, Minn., where, on the St. Croix river, is located the state penitentiary, which uses great quantities of sisal; including the St. Croix, Wisconsin; Winona, Minn., Quincy, Ill., and Alton, Ill.

NUNGESSER RUMOR

Quebec, July 15.—An official search by air of the untracked reaches of Labrador for traces of the plane used by Captains Nungesser and Gull on their ill-starred trans-Atlantic flight attempt, arose as a possibility today. While every effort was being made to verify the report emanating from a hunting party that wreckage of "The White Bird" had been seen in a wooded section north of Chicoutimi, the provincial lands and forest departments in charge of aerial patrols, was reported considering an intensive search by airplane of the area where Nungesser's machine is believed to have been seen.

STATE IS OFFERING TWO BIG FEATURES

"See You In Jail" With Jack Mulhall Heads Program; "Enchanted Island" Also

A farce comedy starring Jack Mulhall and a drama of the South Sea Islands are on the double feature program at the State theater for today and tomorrow. Mulhall's picture, "See You In Jail," is as funny as the name would suggest, while wonderful possibilities are available in the second feature, "The Enchanted Island."

Joseph Henabery, who directed "See You In Jail," has the comedy spirit. It is easy to see where he has injected a lot of clever touches into this story of a youth who goes to jail in place of another man because he needs the money!

Ray Rockett, who produced the picture for First National, is also gifted in this respect, for he made "The Perfect Sap," recently seen here and which proved a real comedy success.

Mack Swain, always unctuously humorous, one of the real big-leaguers of the comedy films, has a fine chance in this picture and a lot of other clever people contribute their share. Among them are Crawford Kent, George Fawcett, John Kolb, William Orlandom, Leo White, Carl Stockdale, Burr McIntosh, Charles Clarey, Yola d'Avril and others.

"See You In Jail" can be recommended for its entertainment value and for the perfection of the production as well as the superior acting of the cast.

SCHOOL DISTRICT RESULTS

The achievement of the Ninth School district in cutting its tax rate in the face of a simultaneous reduction of $30,000 in the district debt is not at all evidence that the individual residents of that district are more thrifty or have any better brains than the individual residents of the other districts of the town; but it does indicate a better processing community brain, so to speak. It shows the superiority of systematic, business-like operation of school affairs over the hit-or-miss, scrambling methods inseparable from the maintenance of a large number of separate districts, none of which is a business enterprise large enough to justify the full-time attention of the people who manage it and the affairs of which are conducted at odds and ends of time devoted by persons who cannot be expected to concentrate on school management.

There is not the slightest reason why the school system of the entire town should not be run with the same close attention to economy and efficiency as marks the conduct of Ninth district affairs. It is merely a question of abandoning an ancient and outworn policy altogether unadvised to present needs and adopting one which will fit the size of the town and the importance of the problem at hand.

Under consolidation it practically goes without saying that the annual report of the whole body of Manchester schools would be as favorable as that of the Ninth district made last night. There is no magic in such management, merely method and concentration.

TOUGH ON COOLIDGE

Today President Coolidge is called on to exercise to the limit a quality which he is usually credited with possessing in unusual degree. He was scheduled to listen to the demands of a large delegation of the National Women's Party that he lend the force of his influence to the "equal rights" program of that somewhat exasperating group of chronic malcontents.

The National Women's Party is out for another amendment to the United States constitution, which shall make it forever impossible for any state or federal law to remain valid which shall in any way make any distinction between individual citizens on the ground of sex.

As a hectoring, bullying, brag-gart organization made up for the most part of petulant, angry and usually poorly informed women, the National Women's party, because it antagonized hundreds of thousands of otherwise complaisant men and disgusted hundreds of thousands of level-headed women, came pretty close to undoing the sound and solid work done for woman suffrage over a period of twenty years. It contributed less than nothing to the cause of votes for the then deprived sex. It has contributed less than nothing to the enlargement of women's share in government since the passage of the Anthony amendment.

Womanhood has never yet gotten anything by scolding and threatening a sex that at all times is able to take it over its knees and spank it—and never will. But men will never deny anything to women in the way of political privilege or anything else, that is sought through the medium of logic and justice, with or without a little tailory.

There is no need whatever of another equal rights amendment—and no utility in one. We already have two equal rights amendments which are dead as Pharaoh's blind horse. But there isn't a thing in the way of legal equality that the women of the country can't get out of their state legislatures—if they can only induce the National Women's Party to retire into the background and give the rest of the folks, men and women alike, a much needed rest from threats, mis-statements and bellicose challenge.

THE FORD REVERSAL

Sensible people of all racial and religious varieties will agree with

Louis Marshall, President of the American Jewish Committee, in frankly criticizing the action of certain groups of Jews which have shown a disposition to gush over Henry Ford since he recanted and apologized for the anti-Semitic utterances of his Dearborn Independent. Mr. Marshall and a number of other leaders have very properly pointed out that such proposals as the one to invite Ford to attend a Far Rockaway Jewish dinner to Charles Levine are in bad taste and entirely uncalled for in the circumstances.

Despite the Ford disavowal of the long campaign of accusation conducted by the Dearborn Independent, it would take an extremely ingenuous person, either Jew or Gentile, to believe that the automobile man was entirely candid when he asserted that he knew nothing about the attacks on the "international Jew" made by the publication which he owns. It would seem that there are other matters, besides his plans for automobile production, in which the word of the richest man in America is to be accepted with more than a grain of salt.

Such being the case people like Louis Marshall are entirely justified in taking the Ford apology at its face value, and no more. If Ford, out of a clear sky and without any ascertainable reason but the promptings of his own conscience, had come out with a free will disavowal of his antipathy to the Jewish people, if he had frankly declared that he had been libeling them through ignorance and that he had learned better and changed his mind, then there might be some reason for the Jews to make a fuss over him.

But when he makes the shifty sort of apology that he did make, and when that apology gives no intimation that he likes a Jew any better than he does a water moccasin, and when there are several reasons besides a change of heart that may have contributed to his getting out from under the Independent's policy, the dignified thing for any Jew to do is to accept the apology, pro forma, and let it go exclusively at that.

HOT DOGS

While we might be able to get up a fever of resentment against the quality of tyranny manifested by the Village Board of Scarsdale, if the weather were not altogether too warm for such emotion, we have nothing but pity for the abysmal ignorance of its members, who have banned forever from that high toned community the hot dog and the roasted peanut.

A woman trustee and the coach of a Scarsdale school's athletic teams put the evil deed over, both in their benighted folly asserting that the weenies and the goub-ers were ruining the digestions of the youth of the village.

As a matter of fact the hot dog has the utter approval of both medical authorities and economists—and as for the peanut, why, it was the sole dissipation of four generations of the soundest and fighting-est of Americans besides being the center pole of the great circus industry.

It is not known in Scarsdale that the hot dog and its accompanying roll constitute the sole commissary of practically the entire inter-urban trucking system? Are those purblind bigots ignorant of the fact that a great army of young men engaged in transporting the nation's commodities, to say nothing of its hooch, subsists entirely on weenies and coffee for days and days and then more days at a time?

How does the Scarsdale Board imagine the great automobile industry could continue to prosper if the millions of tourists constantly on the roads, condemned by the circumstances to spend practically all their cash on gas, oil and tires, could not sustain themselves on the succulent roadside barker?

But why worry? The Scarsdale boys and girls will veto the edit of the village elders.

HE WAVES WEARERS

There are champions all over the place. Champion endurance piano players—and champion listening endurers; champion sitters on flag poles and champion goers without sleep. Now comes Eddie Rabbits who plays in an orchestra in a Pennsylvania town—he is the champion wearer of a permanent wave. His wave has 53 curls.

There is no known law against a person of the male persuasion having his hair permanently waved. Also it might put the hard boiled to some trouble to explain the precise source of their antipathy to such a practice. Nevertheless we know of some hundreds of spots in these United States that Eddie or any other trousered creature wearing a permanent wave would do best to keep out of. This office is one of them.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, July 15—It's cheaper to buy a political convention than a whole state. This indubitable fact may not be foremost in the minds of those who would abolish the popular primary, but the defenders of popular government do not hesitate to assert that it is the principal inspiration of the anti-primary movement.

Former Senator Robert L. Owen of Oklahoma, president of the National Popular Government League, who recently went after Vice President Dawes for his attack on the primary system, insists that the whole thing boils down to a matter of economical corruption and says he can prove it.

"We've seen them buy conventions, legislatures and primaries," Owen told your correspondent the other day. "It only cost about $100,000 to get a Senate seat for Lorimer, but it cost Smith and Vare ten times as much."

Owen is among those who favor making it harder to buy high offices rather than easier. He believes, however, that Vice President Dawes is perfectly honest in his views and has only been misled by his friends.

Reactionaries at Work "Reactionary elements are trying to take away power from the people," Owen said. "The best evidence of the way they work and what they are after was the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars in a primary by the president of the manufacturers' association in Pennsylvania."

"In nearly a hundred cases of predatory monopoly whose evil practices were reported by the Federal Trade Commission to the Department of Justice, prosecutions were smothered. Are these predatory interests governing the country or not?

"We are not likely to have a dictatorship in this country, as Dawes and others suggest. The good people still have control of the Congress and if the big fellows impose on the people too much the people will kick them out and make them behave—for a while."

It was recalled to Owen that the dictatorship bogey had been raised by a new organization which perceived an organized campaign of ridicule against Congress, designed to lessen its influence and pave the way for a "man on horseback."

Owen thought it true that some of the abuse poured upon Congress might be inspired. "Professional Patriots Scored" "I've read with great interest," he said, "a book just brought out, called 'Professional Patriots,' showing how special interests finance such organizations for private advantage. I think most of the contempt in which some men profess to hold Congress is the language of the superficial ass who would exaggerate his own ego by looking down on the Washington monument. Egotism, as has been said, is the anaesthetic which nature provides to keep a man from dying of shame when he realizes what a fool he is."

Owen is an incurable idealist. Government by the people is his hobby and he has fought long and valiantly for it. With his right hand man, Judson King, director of the Popular Government League, he was instrumental in putting the initiative and referendum into more than 20 states. He practices law here since his voluntary retirement from the Senate, but spends much time defending free political institutions and public water power sites from predatory raids; he is not, however, one of those who believes that wealth means wickedness.

"Even the greediest of those who seek power through accumulated wealth discover the limitations of wealth," he says. "They can't eat or drink it. It brings responsibility and care. It often corrupts young members of rich families through temptations and the preoccupation of the head of the house."

"Many very rich men are finding ways to use wealth for public benefit in which they find a joy and a consolation in old age. There is a growing tendency in this direction."

If a human being could jump as far in comparison to his height as can the grasshopper, he could leap over the Flatiron Building in New York City.

Sun rays striking through goldfish bowls are said to have caused many fires. The bowls act as magnifying glasses.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of ELISE HARBERY, an American girl owning considerable property near the little town of PORTO VERDE in west central Brazil. Several mysterious deaths have occurred, but so far she has escaped harm, due to the shrewdness of her cousin and protector, VIOLAK, a curious mixture of American and Oriental blood and a student of criminology.

VIOLAK has been trying to persuade Elise to leave Porto Verde, letting him stay behind with his friend, LINCOLN NUNNALLY, an elderly American chemist, to solve the mystery. She finally agrees, but her departure is prevented by threat of floods. He suggests they travel through the country-side, warning the natives. VIOLAK suggests they travel through the country-side, warning the natives. VIOLAK suggests they travel through the country-side, warning the natives.

VIOLAK learns the flood warning is a ruse to get Elise out of his house and so informs him. The house and so informs him. The house and so informs him. The house and so informs him.

NOW BEGIN THE STORY
CHAPTER XII

THROUGH the apertures in the stones which served as windows Vilak and Nunnally could look down on the court through which they had passed a moment before, a court enclosed by a ruined colonnade or gallery.

From it rose the gigantic stone figure with the fire before it which they had noticed from the mountain. A figure which on this closer view seemed to be grotesquely carved in the shape of one of those fantastic creatures so common in the art of earlier civilizations, half human, half bird, with short arms and claws stretching out to the east.

On either side rose two shafts of stone. On one of these was fixed a rusty Spanish arquebus, on the other parts of a Spanish rack.

At the foot of the great figure Vilak could now perceive a smaller one. About the size of a man, it was obviously a crude and recent attempt to copy the impressive stone figure overshadowing it. It had none of the stoic Egyptian-like dignity of the other; its head was uncouth, with great wide-open mouth like the negro fetishes from the Zambesi. It had but a single roughly chiseled arm, which began at the chest and appeared to be clumsily hinged to the torso. The pressure would make it up or down.

The flat head had no fingers. Instead, what were apparently three sharp-pointed pieces of wood or thorns were thrust into the flat of the palm. Radiating out from this figure was a series of flat, table-like stones, the central one, the largest, being directly under the outstretched arm. Beyond this burned the fire.

Vilak drew away from the window. For half an hour he lay silent, thoughtful. The Chinese cast of his eyes accentuated. At last he spoke. "Wish I could reach for one of my cigarettes," he said gamely to the old man, who had rolled close to his side. "But since I can't, I'll talk. Might as well be cheerful. Won't help Elise or any of us by worrying. Look out that window and see if what I said about these people being a corking treatise on primitive religion isn't true. The big figure and the stone shafts are Inca, that imitation of the statue is absolutely African, and the rack and arquebus are European, of course."

"Perfectly natural that they should worship them. The rack and the arquebus were two of the most cruel and oppressive weapons the conquistadores had, and all the natives thought they were magical. The arquebus particularly would seem to be a nation of fire-worshipers. And fire-worship is certainly one of the most widespread of the savage religions. It's the first. The most conspicuous object in the savage's life in the daytime is the sun, which gives him heat, light, and food; the most conspicuous at night is fire."

The old man winced as a wasp settled on his arm. It flew away without stinging. With relief he rubbed his arm against the wall. "Why does that smaller . . . er . . . idol have that . . . er . . . hinged arm? It's quite . . . er . . . badly done." Vilak grunted. "Badly done, Nanny, I agree, but well enough done to be the cause of our deaths if we don't get out of here before-hand and if my theory about it's correct."

"I think I can see traces of the work of some tricky Indian shaman or African witch-doctor in that. The chap who's a little bit cleverer than his fellows and rigs up some device to keep them impressed. They're the original ward politicians, these witch-doctors and native chiefs. Only they frighten the other people into voting for them instead of taking them on picnics and giving them five dollars on election day. Incidentally, if you remember that statue looks much like the figure on the ring I showed . . . that night I certainly by the railroad embankment."

"Yes . . . er . . . yes. So it does. I remember. Quite. The ring you took from the half-breed with the unpleasant nose, who was guarding your cousin just now . . . yes."

"I hasten to correct you. The ring I took from D'Albentara."

The wasp returned again to the old man's arm. He waited until it had once more vanished before answering. "You told me you . . . er . . . took . . . took it from the half-breed."

"I told you that to keep you from getting suspicious at a time when suspicion wouldn't have been wise. I took it from D'Albentara's flag when I caught his hand in falling."

"Have you still . . . er . . . got it?"

"Three more days, amigos. Then at sunrise you will be laid upon the altar of the fire-god to await the moment for the sacrifice."

"Leading question, Nanny. Refuse to answer."

An . . . after the sun had set, the two negro-like guards brought food, untied them while they ate it, then securely bound them once more. That night both the prisoners slept the sound sleep of exhaustion. But the next night, hours after their guards had departed and deep stillness had settled on the city which lay unseen below the shining walls which marked their horizon, Vilak was still awake, flat on his back, his Mongolian eyes gazing dreamily at the ceiling.

The old man was lying near him, tossing restlessly, and rubbing at the thongs chafing his slight body. Suddenly Vilak began rolling toward the middle of the stone floor where the clay dishes bearing their supper had lain, and rubbing his long fingers in drippings of meat fat which still marked the spot, began coating his bonds with the grease.

Vilak continued vigorously rubbing his fingers against the strips of cloth. "To attract any rats which might happen to be around and let them gnaw me free. The way the ants did when we were prisoners in that camp near Porto Verde. Or perhaps attract the ants themselves. We've got to get out of here."

He coated Nunnally's fetters in the same fashion. All night they lay silent, afraid to speak and so frightened of some chance rat who might be their unwitting savior. But no rat and no ants came.

Night after night passed, days bringing with it some new attempt which a few hours of racking trial proved futile.

At last when Vilak with his finger-nail had scratched ten marks in the wall to number the days of their captivity, D'Albentara entered on his regular tour to see that his prisoners were safe and casually informed them that only three days remained until the feast of Rayml.

"A most interesting feast, most interesting, amigos," he murmured as he wiped his face with a silk handkerchief newly bought in Porto Verde. "I must not and cannot think of beholding it with pleasure. You know the feast of Rayml, is it not so, cavalheiros?"

"It is the feast of the sun, the end of the rainy season, winter, as you call it, when the sun has traveled farthest from its children and now turns to come back once more to warm them. Many are the Indian tribes who have it. Even those of the Indians of the great, the beautiful North America. Is it not so, cavalheiros? It is most picturesque of all, amigos. The African in the blood, is it not so? And I, too, have made a few improvements. All in the way of business, all in the way of business." He hastened to add:

"Yes, it is most regretful that you cannot see it as my guests. For many of the most interesting, let us say spectacles, will occur when you are dead. Or dying, amigos. Which is not pleasant . . . for you. Not for me, cavalheiros. Although this you will not believe. Much would I prefer to hold you as my cherished friends. But business, always business, this will not permit."

"Three more days, amigos. Then at sunrise you will be laid upon the altar of the fire-god to await the moment for the sacrifice. Which may be the first day of the feast or which may be the last. But which will surely, O amigos, not be long. Use well your time."

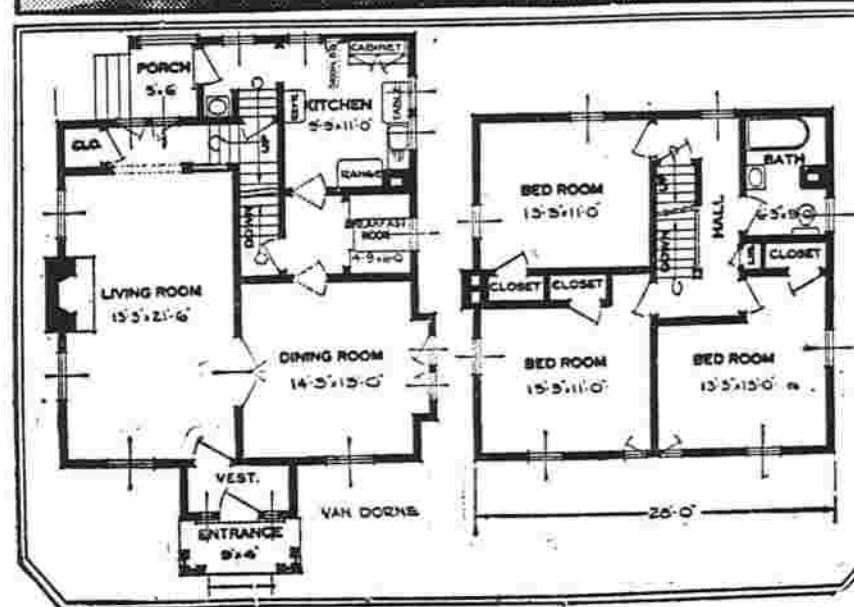

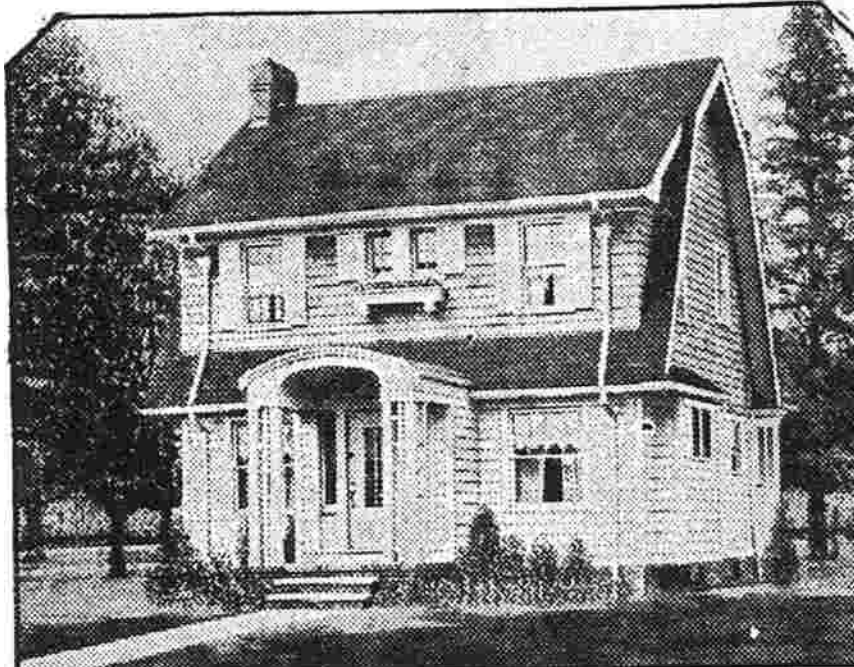

He strode out smiling, pulling the ends of his moustache.

Vilak tries another desperate plan of escape but again fails. The feast of Rayml arrives.

SYMMETRY WITHOUT, PLUS CONVENIENCE WITHIN

Seldom do homes achieve so happy a combination of exterior symmetry and interior convenience as that of "The Van Dorne." Ornate enough without to be attractive and pretty, yet not pretentious, it boasts of an arrangement of rooms within which afford the comfort and space of a domestic contentment. The living room occupies nearly one entire side of the lower floor. And space and nothing but space characterizes the three inviting bedrooms upstairs. For between $6,000 and $7,000 "The Van Dorne" can be built.

More detailed information about "The Van Dorne" may be had by writing The Standard Homes Company, Colorado Building, Washington, D. C.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

The old man who lives next door with three daughters confided over his yellow state rose bush the other night that he got "so danged tired of women's talk" he journeyed afar today to hold with an old cory that sparse converse which is sweet to him. The old man next door does not mind telling a joke even when it's on himself, so he confided that said old cory wasn't home but "his women folks were, and when I came home I decided that my outfit weren't such cacklers, after all."

Cal and "Women Folks"

I don't know just why, but the old man's confession reminded me that mighty representatives of the National Woman's Party have journeyed in the wake of the President to the Black Hills region to talk before the down-trodden and oppressed women of that belt. What a rest Silent Cal will get! You're right, I'm not in total sympathy with that particular female organization. I deny that there are many male rights which we don't have and should have, such as the special legislation report of the N. W. P. proves. But I maintain that women and the two never have been and never will be alike, and some discriminatory legislation is necessary and proper.

Poppa Was Mad

Here's a thrilling story plot. The aged scrooge or one of the most storied old churches of Paris was playing his bells the other Sunday when wild discord suddenly arose. Investigation revealed that the scrooge had hanged himself to the clapper of the largest bell. He had threatened suicide because his daughter had bobbed her hair. Just another story to occasionally remind ourselves of the unbeautiful spirit of age which so often shows itself when age meets youth. If youth demonstrated such narrowness, such intolerance, such a desire for a cruel revenge for some little disappointed act of age, what a to-do there would be about youth—just as there is!

The Man Waited
After his wife had been gone for 32 years, Fred Hessler of Chicago asked for a divorce. When the court asked him why he had waited so long before applying, he said that it was only of late that he had decided his wife Barbara was not coming back, the unique case of Fred Hessler seems only mete and proper.

Glove and Flag-Pole
In days of olden fairer laydes threw their gloves into the arena of wild animals in order to see if their brave and loving knights would plunge in before the rey-eyed beasts to regain their leader's little glove. Something of the same spirit seems to be in the heart of the sweetheart of "Sparrow," a Boston dare-devil who has just mounted a flag-pole where, he says, he will sit record, which, to date, is 12 days. "Sparrow's" sweetheart has dared him to do it.

Personally, I am much in sympathy with that knight of story who descended into the tigers' pit to get his lady's gloves, returned it to her but politely and firmly announced that he was through with any lady who so displayed her love and vanity for self, rather than love for another.

BLOOD-STAINED TEAR CASES MYSTERY IN MEDICINE

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

In 1581, a Latin observer recorded his investigation of a girl, aged 16, whose tears resembled blood. Since that time many physicians have written about cases of this type, and quite recently Dr. Z. R. Scott has reported a case observed by a baby in Pennsylvania.

A baby girl had progressed normally until she was six months old, when she developed a severe cold, nasal discharge and a slight cough. On several occasions during this time her mother noticed that when the baby cried especially hard the tears were red, and stained the linen. Some of these blood stained tears were collected by the physician and when examined were found to contain actual red blood cells.

As the cold in the head improved, the blood gradually disappeared from the tears. Every possible examination was made without involving any surgical opening of the tissues, but no definite changes could be found to account for this peculiar occurrence.

In cases that have been previously described, six were associated with the fact that women had not

A man said with great pride, "I was brought up to respect women," much as he would have declared, "I was brought up to be kind to animals," or "My mother taught me to be considerate of criminals."

This attitude in the male is to me not only entertaining but highly puzzling. How do they get that way—these condescending gentlemen who think they are crowning themselves and their sex with a special glory because they tolerate those frail creatures called women?

Women may not be as strong, they may not be as smart; they may be temperamental, afraid of bugs and mice and guns and thunder, but is there any reason on earth why a man should take special credit because he respects them? Why should he not respect them?

Suppose a man's father to have been a gay blade, and his grandfather a rouse of high degree. He may himself have had a vermillion record that has never bleached any nearer to white than a colorful terra cotta.

Behind him he will say, "We generations of pure and capable women. His sisters are pure and capable. His wife might be Caesar's, as far as character goes. Yet with the condescension that the Prince of Babylon might have bestowed on his Christian slave, he says magnifi-

FOR THAT TOO OILY SKIN

By Mme. Anne Gerarde
If your skin is oily, it means that your whole system has too much oil. So avoid eating butter and other fats.

Oily skins should receive the most scrupulous cleansing of all skins. Use only the lightest of skin foods and use it only once a day. After the skin food is used, be sure to apply a strong astringent.

Several times a day dip a piece of cotton in witch hazel and sponge off the face, paying special attention to the enlarged pores characteristic of nose and chin. This has the double advantage of cleansing and closing the pores.

Once a week rub the face thoroughly with one of the soft dry me used for that purpose. Then cut a lemon in half and rub the face thoroughly with this. Lemon is the most drying of all astringents and also has a bleaching property that helps oily skins.

JACK'S NEW MANAGER LEO FLYNN

Jack Dempsey

The Life Of Jack Sharkey

BY HENRY L. FARRELL U. P. SPORTS EDITOR

New York, July 15.—(United Press).—During a professional career that has been comparatively brief, Jack Sharkey has been one of the most active boxers in the ring.

Up to the time that he fought Mike McFigue last winter he said he had cleared less than $30,000 and couldn't afford an automobile.

Sharkey perhaps could have gotten bigger purses if he had used the gun on promoters but he could not have secured as many engagements as he did and he figured it was better for his future to fight oftener for smaller purses than to loaf around between big discouragements.

The afternoon before the Dempsey-Tunney fight, Sharkey and Buckley were standing in front of the Bellevue-Stratford Hotel in Philadelphia with a rather mournful look.

Sharkey doesn't like to have his picture taken romping around the floor with the two little kiddies or in an affectionate pose with his wife but he is a home man first, last and always and he lives just like an ordinary young business man.

He has a pretty home in Boston, not ornate like the Dempsey mansion, but dressed into the most excellent of taste.

Borotra French Net Star, May Be Forced To Retire

Paris, France, July 15.—Jean Borotra, the picturesque "Bouncing Basque" of tennis, sometimes the greatest and at worst one of the best players in France, may soon disappear from international competition.

Borotra's business keeps him traveling a great deal, as can be seen from the fact that he spends nearly 200 nights in trains or in boats last year.

Business from the fact that he spends nearly 200 nights in trains or in boats last year. Often he has shown up at tournaments in airplane just in time to change for play.

He was not able to go to Rome this year as a member of the French Davis Cup team playing Italy. He hopes to play in America this year with the team but that will be his last appearance in major competition.

There is never a dull moment when he is on the court. His threatened retirement has caused considerable consternation.

RUMORS OF SPLIT WITH FLYNN ARE RIFE 'ROUND DEMPSEY CAMP

Ex-Champ Is Disregarding Manager's Instructions; Is Going to Train Just As He Thinks He Should.

By DAVIS J. WALSH I. N. S. Sports Editor.

Saratoga, N. Y., July 14.—Rumors were rife today about the premises of the big sock and belt man, William H. Dempsey, to the general effect that somewhat strained relations prevailed between Dempsey and some of the men of his official family.

Another story was that Flynn and Gus Wilson had formed a mutual aversion society. But, when asked point blank about the matter today, Wilson issued a rather detailed denial while Flynn professed vast amusement that any such state of affairs could have developed in surroundings so happy and carefree.

One thing is an absolute stand-out, Flynn may be Dempsey's manager, at least conversationally, but he hardly can claim to be Dempsey's trainer.

Meanwhile, the impression has gained some headway that some of Jack's sparring partners aren't exactly for him. He "copped a sneak" on Italian Jack Herman yesterday when he crossed a terrific left hook to the jaw just as Herman was offering the usual hand shake at the start of proceedings and that isn't exactly a clubby thing to do with a sparring partner.

Yet, in spite of the fact that Dempsey's training has raised no one's blood pressure in this vicinity, there seemed to have some Dempsey sentiment in camp today. Old Tom

1. When the umpire is hit by a batted ball before any play has been made on it, how is it scored? 2. How is it scored when a baserunner is hit by a batted ball on which no play has been made?

1. Batsman is credited with a hit and entitled to first, but no baserunner can advance unless forced. 2. Runner is declared out and batsman is credited with a hit.

These latter appeared to think that Dempsey might be making a "mug" of himself up here for reasons best known to himself, but that he would throw that alleged boxing stuff of his right out the window as soon as he got in the ring.

RUTH PRAISES LOU "If that baby keeps on hitting 'em like he did yesterday, he should make anywhere from 40 to 60 home runs this year."

Babe Ruth was doing the talking and Lou Gehrig was the subject of conversation. The day previous Gehrig had hit two home runs to beat the St. Louis Browns, being responsible for five of the eight runs scored by his team.

"What is more," he continued the Babe, "he's going to make it tough for me to lead the majors in home runs if he keeps up that clip."

Unquestionably Lou Gehrig is Ruth's biggest menace as the world's greatest slugger. He is bound to be Ruth's successor as the Sultan of Swat. His acquiring of the crown is simply a matter of time.

GERHIG SWATS OFFERINGS OF MACFAYDEN

New York, July 15.—There's no telling how many home runs Laruping Lou Gehrig would hit in a season if he batted against Danny MacFayden, Boston hurler, all the time.

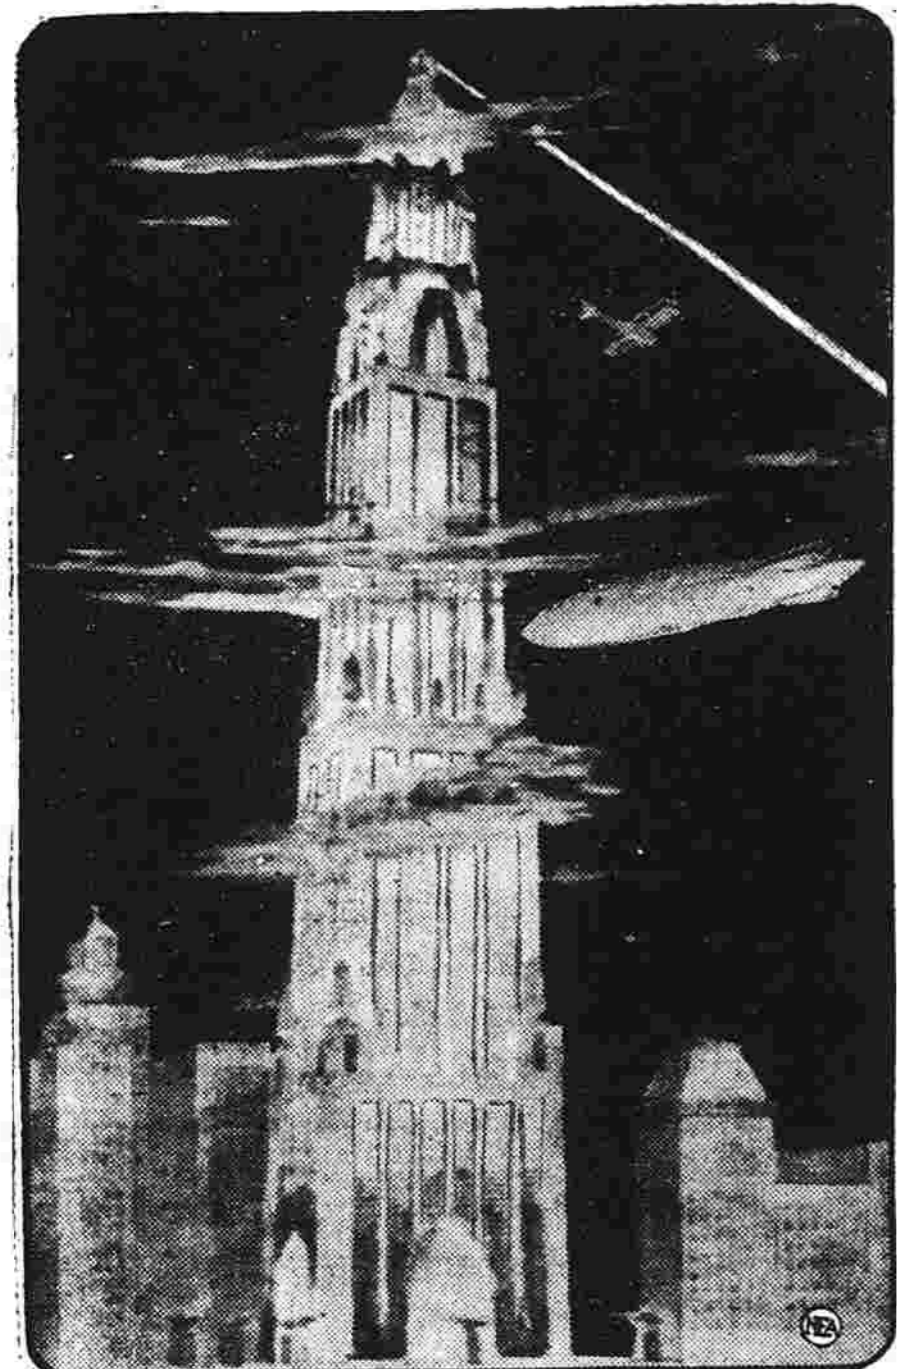

Columbia Lou, in his string of homers up to July Fourth, 28 then, had smacked four of 'em off the offerings of young MacFayden.

Chicago Proposes 300-Mile Beacon

A tower 1320 feet high, topped by a light that could be seen by aviators for 300 miles, is the project studied by Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago. A beacon of 1,200,000 candlepower is included in the plans which were suggested to Mayor Thompson by Samuel Insull, Jr., president of the utilities magnate. Besides helping to make the city an aviation center, the light would be a spectacle for visitors to the world's fair in 1933, its backers say.

BILLY EVANS Says

A Mystery of the American League.
How did all the American League teams waive on First Baseman Joe Harris?
That thought occurred to me very strongly last winter when the wire reports carried the information that Pittsburgh had taken Joe Harris over the waiver route from Washington.

During the past month I have given more consideration to the matter and, since Harris has been starring for Pittsburgh, the answer is still a mystery to me.
Joe Harris slow of foot, I know, but he never was a speed merchant. He isn't a brilliant fielder but he always could and still can hit the old apple.

In these days of hit-and-run baseball any player who can hit .300 is worthy of considerable attention, despite any other weaknesses he may have.

That's the kind of a guy Joe Harris is. During his major league career he has been a consistent .300 batsman, having an average of .319 over a seven year period.

Pirates Took a Chance With Harris.

Despite his great ability as a batsman seven American League clubs passed up the chance to get Harris when Washington asked for waivers and Pittsburgh was the only National League club that was willing to take a gamble with Harris at the waiver price.

Manager Donie Bush, who starred as an American League player for years, was familiar with the true worth of Harris as a batsman, otherwise he might have skidded on to the minors.
In all probability, the great batting of Joe Harris against Pittsburgh in the 1924 world series with Washington influenced the Pittsburgh club in taking him over.

Harris, it will be recalled, was the batting hero of the series. His timely hitting kept Washington in the running. His average was .440 and he got 11 hits in 25 times at bat.

Passed up by 15 major league ball clubs, we now find Joe Harris leading a pennant punch to the Pittsburgh offense and also performing most capably in the field.

Started Long Winning Streak.

For a month this spring Joe Harris sat on the Pittsburgh bench, little more than a spectator. The Pirates started with a plunge, winning seven out of the first eight games.

Then came a severe slump, Bush's team dropping from first to fifth place with a thud, with a percentage around the .500 mark.

Donie Bush was desperate at the sudden unexpected turn of affairs. He realized he needed more punch at the bat. Hal Rhyme at second was fielding well enough but couldn't hit 'em safe.

Bush made a drastic change in an effort to get more batting strength into his lineup. He shifted Grantham from first to second, a position he played with varying success while with the Chicago Cubs, and sent Joe Harris to first.

The day that Bush shifted Harris to first base the Pirates started a winning streak of 11 straight games that eventually carried them to the top of the National League race.

Would Have Helped Several Clubs.

During a recent winning streak of the Pirates, Harris made 23 hits in 32 times at bat, a truly remarkable performance. During that stretch he at one time reached first base 12 times in succession either through the medium of hits or bases on balls.

At this stage of the race in the American League there are several managers who could use Joe Harris at first base to advantage.

No doubt he would be much welcomed by Connie Mack. Jim Poole, who played first base most of the time last year, and the recruit Brannon have failed at the bat. The latter, a star in the American Association, was touted as certain to deliver.

In his dire extremity Connie Mack has pressed Jimmy Fox, third-string catcher, into service at first.

Recently when Joe Judge was on the bench because of injuries, Washington, the club that asked waivers on Joe Harris, was compelled to bring Fritz Speaker from the outfield to first, breaking up the outer defense of the Senators.

Incidentally, a right-handed batter of the Joe Harris type would have fitted into practically every American League club as a pinch hitter. I'm surprised the Yanks passed him up.

Joe Harris was surely a welcome addition to Donie Bush's Pirates but it is difficult to understand how so good a batsman could be waived out of the American League.

KANSAS BUILDS NATURAL GAS HELIUM PLANT

Million Dollar Factory Under Construction Is Second In Country.

Arkansas City, Kansas.—Construction has started on a plant for the extraction of helium from natural gas, at Dexter, near here. The plant will be the second in the United States for the manufacture of helium gas, and will be built at a cost of $1,000,000. The first and only such plant in the United States at present, is located at Fort Worth, Texas.

The plant at Dexter is being built by the Kentucky Oxygen and Hydrogen company. Contracts have been signed with the United States government to supply the government with a large part of the gas.

In Big Field
The helium field is said to extend for several miles in all directions from Dexter. The field was discovered during the world war, at which time the government made a survey and announced plans for the construction of a plant there. However, the end of the war culminated the existing demand for the gas and the plans were dropped.

Helium gas is non-inflammable and for that reason one of the most valuable so far discovered. Its most important use thus far is for the inflation of balloons and dirigibles.

In Natural Gas
Professor H. P. Cady, head of the department of chemistry of the University of Kansas, is the scientist who first discovered the gas as a component of natural gas. He was experimenting on samples from Dexter wells when he made this remarkable contribution to aviation. Prof. Cady was interested in Dexter's experience with its natural gas twenty years ago. Wells were drilled and a good supply of natural gas brought in. The gas was piped for homes and business uses and not until then was it discovered that the gas would not burn without being primed with a kindling fire.

The natural gas at Dexter is said to contain as high as 2 per cent helium, whereas the richest of the Fort Worth wells contains only about 1 per cent.

TO PENALIZE STUNTS "PULLED" IN CAMP

Punishment For Rough Initiation of "Rookies"; Soldiers Busy.

By Staff Correspondent. Camp Trumbull, Niantic, July 15.—Initiations of the severity employed in camp last year will not be tolerated during this encampment, Lieut.-Colonel Orville A. Pettiford said today when interviewed by The Herald correspondent. It had been rumored that rigid penalties would be given those who attempted to emulate the stunts pulled off at the last encampment of the 169th Infantry, C. N. G., when scores of the rookies were painted with dye that not only was very hard to remove but also spoiled their clothing in many cases.

Following which they were blindfolded and ordered to lay flat on their backs. Then came a dose of spaghetti. Afterwards, they were marched to the nearby Niantic River and given a cold bath. All took it good naturedly except Private Tumliensky and he was given additional "rations." Privates Sullivan, Grybowski and Finn were out of camp at the time but will "get theirs" later. Company G's initiations will start after the bivouac. A class of more than 25 is to be "entertained."

Manchester soldiers returned from their night's bivouac shortly before noon today having spent a night in their pup-tents under ideal conditions. A full moon added to the splendor of the night. The things that pleased the soldiers most were the fact that they were supplied with mosquito bars and an additional blanket apiece. These were brought to the scene of the bivouac at Waterford near Pleasure Beach with the other baggage. Lieutenant E. M. Thompson, of Company G, was named battalion supply officer and had charge of this work. He saw to it that the meals were also brought to the men.

The soldiers marched out of camp yesterday afternoon at 3:30 headed by the Regimental Band which went as far as the bridge over the Niantic River. Major Clarence C. Scarborough was in charge of the First Battalion to which were attached the Howitzer Company and the Medical Detachment. Although the weather was very warm, the soldiers made the six-mile hike without any mishaps. The men marched for 45 minutes and then rested 15 minutes. Only one other halt was made. After arriving at the camp, supper served. Here is what the Manchester boys ate. Company G: bacon and baked beans, canned peaches, bread and jam, lemonade; Howitzer Company: veal loaf, potato salad, bread and butter, sliced watermelon and lemonade. Company G also served coffee and sandwiches just before taps. In the morning, the G boys ate beef stew bread and jam and coffee; the Howitzer: boiled eggs, cantaloupes, bread and butter, coffee and doughnuts. Both companies found a broiled mackerel dinner awaiting them when they returned to camp following their morning maneuvers.

Yesterday morning at the marksmanship qualification tests, Sergeant Jimmy Finnegan, Corporal Mozzer and Private Bob Brennan registered a perfect score in the 25-yard rapid fire tests with the automatic pistols. The qualifications have not been completed but may be today. More than a score are in line for qualification in the Howitzer Company and a good majority are expected to succeed. Company G was busy yesterday morning under Captain Herbert H. Bissell working out the problem of "company" in the afternoon and will take up other officers for ten minute rides. In responding to a compliment paid him by Colonel Hunter who called him "the best sergeant he had ever ridden with," Captain Fleet spoke briefly to the officers. He said that while the chances were one in a million that anything would happen during the afternoon trips, he felt that a word of warning should be voiced in connection with the parachute.

Shortly after their arrival, Captain Fleet took Colonel Hunter up for a ride and later his adjutant, Captain Irving E. Partridge Jr., went for a "cruise." Then Photographer Reed took the air to take pictures of the camp. At officers' mess noon, it was explained that Captain Fleet would remain in camp during the afternoon and would take up other officers for ten minute rides. In responding to a compliment paid him by Colonel Hunter who called him "the best sergeant he had ever ridden with," Captain Fleet spoke briefly to the officers. He said that while the chances were one in a million that anything would happen during the afternoon trips, he felt that a word of warning should be voiced in connection with the parachute.

How to Jump. "Friends," he said, "all you have to do in case anything should go wrong with the plane is to remember where the ring is attached on the left side near the heart. Stand up, dive overboard, hold your feet one-two-three slowly and then pull the ring. If you still have hold of the ring when you land, you are a good parachute jumper. If not, you're not."

When Colonel Hunter asked how many officers would like to go for a ride, nearly everyone in the mess-hall raised his hand. This being impossible, however, the lucky men were selected by seniority. Those who went up were Majors Harold L. Burr, Samuel A. Butler, Joseph I. Nolan and Captain Philip E. Hawley. William J. Maxwell, Henry P. Feege, Joseph I. Lawton, Harry H. Hertweck, Kenneth R. Moore, Edwin H. May, Ellison S. Smith, Christopher Scaife, Joseph R. Morin and Lieutenant George A. Wardin. Several of the more nervous passengers were given the thrill of their life when Captain Fleet guided his plane skillfully through loop-the-loops, nose dives and other daring feats. Major Butler and Captain Hertweck apparently had the most nerve. At least the plane did more stunts when they were in the air.

Field inspection will be made Saturday morning and all tents will have to be furled and the equipment laid neatly on the bunks. It is becoming harder each day to select the company having the neatest street and most sanitary kitchen. Yesterday the honors went to Company K and Company I respectively. Neither Manchester unit has yet obtained this honor.

There were no more baseball games yesterday afternoon, the field having been ordered kept clear for the airplane. Buglers George La Flamme of the Howitzer Company and William Reuben of Company G are attending the buglers' school each morning where they receive further instruction in their work. It is no cinch to be able to blow the various calls exactly.

Private Alfred Phaneuf is losing much prestige as a checker player. Already he has lost to Private Jack "elder seven times in eight games. This is most unusual for Freddie who came to camp with unlimited laurels won in Manchester. Too much sleep is given as the cause. Both Manchester mascots, Frankie Klein and Bobby McCormick, went with the Manchester troops on bivouac last night. They fitted into the pup-tents much better than did most of the soldiers and said they had a "handy time."

Someone bought a pair of hair clippers in the Howitzer Company; the other night they failed to survive the initial test which was Private Bill Taft's wig. His comrades drub him. "The shik of Manchester."

Private John Anello of Company G is on the disabled list because of an injured leg, suffered in a wrestling bout with Private Crannick. He claims his opponent bit him, but Crannick emphatically denies this. Later Corporal Giorgetti flogged Crannick but the latter says he wasn't at his best because of worrying too much about being accused of attempting to "decour" Anello.

The fourth squad of Company G which is in charge of Corporal Giorgetti is called the "Fighting Fourth" and the "B. V. D. Warriors." Those who have attempted to enter their tent in the dead of the night will attest to the fact that they have a kick like a mule. Incidentally, this quarter is the last to bed every night and the last to get up in the morning. Both Private Maurice Waddell and the writer can speak for their prowess as "cousins" however. Someone ought to get a tear gas bomb or something of that kind if they plan to attack those fellows.

Private Tommy Pegant and "Detour" Dancoese were selected for provost guard duty yesterday with another company which was short of men. It is understood good looks figured chiefly in the selections. This was especially so in the case of "Detour" who is known the world over wherever roads are on the blink.

Tent mates of Private Clarence Behrend are becoming tired of being woken up in the wee hours of the morning continually by his talking in his sleep. He repeatedly exclaims, "Ruth, Ruth, Ruth." He insists, however, that "Ruth" isn't his girl.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT" MERCHANTS-KIWANIS CAMP WEEK July 11th to 16th. BONELESS HAMS 33c lb. DAISY HAMS. We will have a special on shank ends of ham weighing from 4 1/2 to 7 1/2 lbs. These are all fresh cut ends. We have sold more sliced ham than usual this week and therefore made more ends. Cold sliced Ham is a meat that appeals to most people during the summer especially. Shank Ends of Ham 12 1/2c, 15c and 19c lb. Special on Canadian Bacon at 59c lb. Pure Lard 15c lb. Fresh Eggs 44c dozen. Pinehurst Creamery Tub Butter 45c lb. Real butter and real good value. SCOTCH HAM. Last week we broke all records for the number of pounds of Fowl and Chickens sold. Buyers show good judgment to use fowl right now—the quality is excellent and the price very low on poultry. Again tomorrow we will have a nice lot of 4 to 5 lb. Fowl for fricassee. A few 5 lb. Roasting Chickens. Now is the time to get tender native broilers. We will have meaty little milk fed broilers from the best poultry farm in Bolton and also a few 4 lb. Roasters or Fryers from the same farm. Cold Boiled Ham. Eckhardt's Franks. Pressed Ham. Chicken Roll. Liverwurst. Veal Loaf. Bologna. Salami and Summer Sausage. Cervelat. Genuine Spring Lamb. Small Legs. Chops. SHOULDERS OF LAMB. Boned and rolled. These shoulders make nice meat to slice cold. PINEHURST MARKET NEWS. If every customer who finds it convenient will phone us tonight it will be a big help. Mr. Avery is sojourning at Block Island. (I am glad he picked such a hot week to enjoy the ocean breezes) and as a result the meat department will be quite busy Saturday—so if you will phone tonight for the things you want early we will more than appreciate your thoughtfulness. In the fruit section tomorrow you will find some Sweet Rip Honey Dew Melons. Also good Cantaloupes, Plums, Bananas and Watermelons. We will have more Telephone Peas and Blueberries from Birch Mountain. From Peterson's will come Native Beets, Cabbage, Carrots, Lettuce and Celery. Cucumbers, Squash, Green Beans and Tomatoes will be the best we can find on the market. LARGE CAN SLICED PINEAPPLE 33c. On Saturday we have found it physically impossible to take orders up to 7:45 for the eight o'clock delivery and get the trucks started on time. Therefore, from now on Saturdays we will have to close orders for this 8 o'clock trip at 7:30. Tomorrow again we offer you Pinehurst Hamburg at 25c a lb. That is an excellent value is proven by the large sale we have built up on this item.

Australian Prophet Announces End Of The World In Five Years

Capetown.—The end of the world will come in 1932, when the waters of the seas will swallow the lands and all that is in them. Such is the prediction of the Rev. Frank James Highett, a Church of England parson from Australia, who is now preaching in Capetown. Rev. Highett claims to have "the whole blessing of Christ," and to be able to cure "incurables," make the rain fall; divert a storm and still the waves. But first he has to be "told by Christ and instructed by Him."

"I am a disciple of higher spiritualism," he told reporters. "The people living today have made a mess of the world and God is going to clean it up."

"From now until 1932 the world will experience a great deal of trouble and the worst will be experienced in 1932. After the end of the world in 1932, however, there will come a glorious age, when the earth will be peopled by one big nation."

TOO HOT, SO QUITS JOB AFTER HALF A DAY

Felipe Inspector at Spinning Mill Gets Plenty By Noon In Torrid Weather.

This cat had the courage of its convictions in greater degree than the humans with whom it was associated yesterday. A half day's stint in the terrific heat was enough for it, while the employees of the Spinning Mill went back in the afternoon.

Yesterday morning the animal, a handsome tiger type, followed employees of the twisting department into the mill, watched them take their cards out of the box and followed them into the manufacturing room.

She stayed there all morning, gravely walking up and down the aisles, inspecting the machinery and giving the workers the once over. When the noon whistle blew the cat went out to the hall, waited until the workers had deposited their timecards in the box, and returned to the mill tacitly, resigning her inspection.

In the afternoon the cat was nowhere to be seen and although twisting machine operators watched for her, she did not come back.

The Lowest Rates For Herald Want Ads

are given on orders for SIX DAYS and that is the right order to give to secure the most satisfactory results.

Advertising is cumulative in its effect and an ad that is published for SIX consecutive days has greater result producing power than one published for one, two, or three days and then repeated after a lapse of two or three days. This is a fixed and proved rule in advertising and you can depend upon it.

REMEMBER

that when you get results before the six times are up you can stop your ad, by mail or telephone if you wish, and you will be charged ONLY for the actual number of times the ad appeared in the paper, charging at the rate earned.

This is a service arrangement for the benefit of our advertisers.

MILL REPRESENTATIVES VISIT AT SANATORIUM

Go to Norwich State Tuberculosis Institution—Many New Buildings Erected.

A group representing the Tuberculosis Free Bed Fund of Cheney Brothers journeyed to Norwich in three cars recently to visit the State Tuberculosis Sanatorium, which is taking the cure. They were all found doing as well as can be expected.

Since the last visit of the representatives of the Tuberculosis Free Bed Fund to the sanatorium, there have been three new buildings erected, namely Administration building, consisting of ten offices, a meeting room and a post office, a Bed Fund to the department in the basement, and sleeping quarters for members of the medical staff on the second floor. In the laboratory and x-ray department is mentioned, entirely new equipment and later an original research work in tuberculosis will be done in this laboratory. A new infirmary for women, accommodating sixty patients and a staff house accommodating thirty-two members of the male staff have also been completed. These buildings are semi-detached and are being made in the kitchen which is situated in the main building and new roads, driveways and cement walks are being laid.

The sanatorium has a census of something over two hundred continuously. At present there are two hundred and fifteen patients. Usually the number runs between two hundred and ten and two hundred and twenty. Dr. Hugh B. Campbell who is superintendent, and one of his assistants, Dr. Lawrence, of whom he has two, showed the group through the institution.

The following people, representing the different departments in the mill made the journey: Dr. Robert P. Knapp, Medical department; Dr. Clifford H. Harvey, medical department; Robert Fryer, Spinning; Mrs. Douglas, B. G. Weaving; Miss Lucy Ladd, Spinning; Miss Swanson, Ribbon; Alex. Madden, B. G. Weaving; Thomas Heritage, B. G. Felipe Inspector at Spinning Mill Gets Plenty By Noon In Torrid Weather.

This cat had the courage of its convictions in greater degree than the humans with whom it was associated yesterday. A half day's stint in the terrific heat was enough for it, while the employees of the Spinning Mill went back in the afternoon.

Yesterday morning the animal, a handsome tiger type, followed employees of the twisting department into the mill, watched them take their cards out of the box and followed them into the manufacturing room.

She stayed there all morning, gravely walking up and down the aisles, inspecting the machinery and giving the workers the once over. When the noon whistle blew the cat went out to the hall, waited until the workers had deposited their timecards in the box, and returned to the mill tacitly, resigning her inspection.

In the afternoon the cat was nowhere to be seen and although twisting machine operators watched for her, she did not come back.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

SENSE and NONSENSE

MARY'S LAMB AGAIN
Mary had a little calf
Encased in sheersilk.
And from the things that we have seen,
That calf sure knew his milk.
She took it to a co-ed school,
And the boys became quite bold.
They learned to love the little calf,
At least, so we are told.
Now, don't misjudge our Mary;
Or criticize the staff.
For the little thing we're speaking of
Is a really truly calf.
Only success speaks with authority.
Add unsolved problems: What goes with all the stolen umbrellas.
Scientists say that there are some people who cannot drive cars.
But they all do.
Every knock is a boost except when one woman knocks another and then it is nothing but a knock.
We have also noticed that the table cloth no longer reaches to the knee of the table leg.
Sometimes a little money in the bank takes a lot of worry off the mind.
'Where'd you all get dat darby hat?'
'A surprise from mah wife.'
'A surprise?'
'Ah come home the other night unexpected and found it on de table.'
A boss is a man who arrives early when you are late and late when you are early.
A monologue is a conversation between a reactor and a prospect.
GROWING OLD GRACEFULLY
Delightful is a ripe old age
If it be not forgotten
That one should keep serene and sane.
Instead of getting rotten.
Bore: Yes, I don't know how it is but I feel thoroughly wound up tonight.
Hostess: How strange! And yet you don't seem to go.
The best people go to church and the church is trying to go to the others.
Subbubs (to applicant for job): Do you know anything about gardening?
Applicant: Sure! I worked in a roof garden all last winter.

LITTLE JOE

IT TAKES PULL TO GET ANYWHERE IN A ROWBOAT.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The little Princess cried, "Don't run! The popcorn storm is all in fun. The kernels cannot hurt you. They are much too soft and small. Don't hide beneath that spreading tree. It's safe out here as it can be. When there's enough upon the ground, I'll stop the popcorn fall."
The Tinies watched her for a spell and then she heard "wee Clowny yell. "I think that we'll stay where we are until the shower is through. Excuse us if we make a fuss, but you are bigger, far, than us. We fear the corn might hurt us though it doesn't bother you."
The Princess answered, "Oh, all right. Just wait. I'll try with all my might to make the storm of popcorn stop. You funny little men." And then she shouted, rather rough, "Oh, popcorn—stop! We've had enough!" And very soon the storm was over, and it was clear again.
Out rushed the Tinies from the tree, exclaiming, in one voice, "Oh gee! Just watch us eat our fullest fill of popcorn from the ground."
"Here's plenty here," the Princess said, "for all of you. Go right ahead." The Tinies were surprised to see how much good corn was found.
When they had eaten quite a lot, more than they should, as like as not, the Princess shouted, "Follow me, and do not be afraid. I'll take you now to Syrup Falls. I wish you all had overalls for you could help the man who knows how popcorn crisp is made."
It wasn't long till they were there. The scene they saw was truly rare. A wall of rocks towered over head. It was a wondrous place. And, in between the rocks of stone, they heard a rushing liquid roar. A brownish sea of syrup foamed and dropped down into space.
The Tinymites help shovel popcorn into boxes in the next story.

JACK LOCKWILL IN THE WOODS

by Gilbert Patten

Tom McNally, Lockwill's former enemy at Rockdale Academy, who had become his staunch friend, was frying bacon over a fire before a small tent in the woods when Jack reappeared, followed by Darling, Bambi, and Garibaldi. The sight of them, coming forth from the woods in which the evening shadows were deepening, astonished McNally. "A bear!" he shouted, staring.

The girl made the bear's chain fast to a small, stout tree while Willie and Jack told McNally what had happened. "That means trouble for us," said Tom.

"Oh, that jayhawker was too scared to come back here tonight," declared Darling, proudly pouring the trout from the creel. "Here's our supper." Jack cooked the trout himself. The still hungry bear was fed, and the little party was sitting around a strip of canvas spread on the ground to serve for a tablecloth, when a wild-looking, bare-headed man came crashing out of the dark woods, jabbering excitedly. "Here's the trouble I predicted!" exclaimed McNally, seizing a stout cudgel and leaping to his feet, ready for battle.

New York State Party Comes By Motorbus to Inspect Beautiful Structure.

A party of men and 30 women came 107 miles by motorbus yesterday for the express purpose of inspecting the South Methodist church here. The Ladies' Aid Society of Castleton, N. Y., Methodist Episcopal church held its annual outing yesterday and picked South Manchester as the locale.

The party, after being on the road for more than six hours, arrived at the church at 1:45 yesterday afternoon and was welcomed in behalf of the local Ladies' Aid Society by its president, Mrs. Ezekiel Benson, Mrs. William Black and Mrs. Joseph Stepe.

Tables had been laid in the Boy Scout room in the basement of the church and the visitors ate basket lunches there. Coffee had been provided by the Manchester women and the cool basement, after the hot ride in the motorbus, was a relief to the visitors.

Knew Church by Reputation
Following the luncheon the party was taken on an inspection trip through the church. The visitors made enthusiastic comment on the building, although some of them said they were already familiar with it because of what they had heard about the beautiful structure before they came here. Each of the visitors was given a souvenir dedication program, the gift of the church trustees.

Group pictures of the party were taken on the lawn of the church. The start for Castleton was made at 4 o'clock.

Lured by Description
The Castleton people picked this place for their annual outing through the instrumentality of an aunt of William Black, local church member, who lives in that town. She was a visitor here some time ago and when she returned home she told of the beauties of the church in Manchester. It was promptly decided then that the outing would be held in this town.

The officers of the Castleton society who were in the party yesterday were Mrs. Albert Folmbee, president; Mrs. Robert Phibbs, secretary; Mrs. Samuel Taylor, second vice-president; Mrs. R. Harris, third vice-president, and Mrs. Pauline Hudson, fourth vice-president.
