

BOSTON GREETES COL. LINDBERGH, 50,000 PRESENT

Hub Plans Monster Welcome To Hero—World Famous Aviators Meet the Flying Colonel As He Lands.

Boston, Mass., July 22.—With an enthusiasm that surpassed anything ever witnessed in Boston, this staid old New England city roared forth a mighty welcome to Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh when he arrived here at two o'clock today for the third stop in his nation-wide tour.

Sweeping out of the skies like a lone eagle the "Spirit of St. Louis" capably piloted by the intrepid flyer who braved the danger of the Atlantic in the first non-stop flight from New York to Paris, Lindbergh made a perfect landing after circling the East Boston airport several times.

30,000 Present
Fifty thousand persons lined the extremes of the huge airport field and burst forth with a mighty cheer as the flying colonel landed. National Guardsmen augmented by a force of city and state police held the huge crowd in check as the silver plane swept up the field to come to a stop.

Mighty Noise
Whistles on scores of vessels in the harbor burst forth with a noise that made hearing almost impossible. Automobile horns added to the din that was supported by the prolonged cheers of the crowd.

Captain Horace H. Helsen, commanding officer of the airport went forth to greet the hero colonel. He was then escorted to the United States army hangar where the greetings of the city and state were extended him by Mayor Malcolm E. Nichols and Gov. Alvan T. Fuller.

LEAVES PROVIDENCE
Providence, R. I., July 22.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh hopped off from the Quonset Point military reservation for Boston at 12:25 o'clock.

Getting away to a pretty rise, Col. Lindbergh went high in the air and then took a nose dive towards the earth giving the crowd which had gathered to see him go a thrill. After performing a few stunts he straightened out and headed for Beach Terrace, Bristol, the summer home of Gov. Aram J. Pothier.

Gov. Pothier was unable to attend the welcome exercises here yesterday because of illness and it was as a mark of respect that Col. Lindbergh flew over his estate. From Bristol, the flying colonel went over the Blackstone valley dropping messages in Pawtucket, Central Falls and Woonsocket.

Before leaving the military reservation at Quonset Point, Col. Lindbergh had luncheon with the 11th Cavalry, Rhode Island National Guard which was in camp there.

Just before Col. Lindbergh finished his luncheon, Major-General John A. Lejeune, ranking officer of the United States Marine Corps arrived and joined him. Gen. Lejeune was here to inspect the citizen's military training corps and the marine detachment at Newport.

NEW HAVEN BREWERY WORKING FULL BLAST

Police Find Seven 5,000 Gallon Vats and 90 Barrels of Real Beer.

New Haven, Conn., July 22.—A $50,000 New England flood has been stemmed today. But while the question will remain in some minds as to whether this particular flood should have been prevented, authorities were continuing their efforts. The "flood" consisted of $50,000 worth of beer which was to be turned loose over New England out which fell short of its goal when police took a hand.

The huge cache, the largest brewery ever uncovered here, was found in a four story building. Andrew Hugo, former brewery employe, was arrested. A companion escaped the raid.

Seven 5,000-gallon capacity vats were seized together with 90 barrels of beer and a modern "cold brewing" plant.

It was also learned at the inquest that the establishment had been sold by Morris Bender to Samuel Hirst several hours before the blast. The coroner's decision was reserved.

DEMPESEY FIGHT CAUSES DEATH

Philadelphia Men Fight on Street Over the Big Fight in New York City.

Philadelphia, July 22.—An argument over the outcome of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight in New York last night resulted in the death of Thomas Caloucci, 27, here early today.

Caloucci, a staunch supporter of the ex-champion, objected to the remarks of John Derogattis, 20, about Dempsey early last evening. In the ensuing quarrel, Derogattis, police assert, struck Caloucci on the jaw. He fell to the street unconscious and was removed early today to the Pennsylvania hospital of a fractured skull.

Derogattis was arrested and charged with manslaughter. He will have a hearing today before Magistrate Coward.

MOVIES DISPROVE STORY OF A FOUL

Dempsey's Next to Last Punch Landed on the Edge of Sharkey's Belt.

New York, July 22.—The official motion pictures taken at the Jack Sharkey-Jack Dempsey battle in the Yankee Stadium last night give no evidence to support Sharkey's claim that he was fouled. The pictures, placed on public exhibition this afternoon, show that Dempsey's right to the body, immediately preceding the knockout punch, landed just on the edge of Sharkey's belt.

Dempsey's right hand punch to the body is shown clearly in the pictures. The left hand jolt to the jaw, which sent Sharkey sprawling to the canvas, came a fraction of a second later and the pictures show clearly that it was thrown by a drafted cook, the former sailor out of commission.

The pictures substantiate the claim of ringside witnesses who said that the right hand punch was squarely on the seller's chest, the famous blow that Fitzsimmons used to stop Corbett. There is no doubt that this punch hurt Sharkey but it was not enough alone to stop him. It was the smashing short arm left hand jolt to the jaw that ended matters.

WARNS FOREIGNERS TO STOP ATTACKS

Labor Official Says Latin- American Delegates Are Making Wild Charges.

Washington, July 22.—Inflammatory attacks on the foreign policy of the United States in its dealings with Latin American republics coupled with charges that the machinery of this government was being used in the interest of Wall Street bankers, caused President William Green to call a halt in such tactics on the part of Latin American delegates to the Pan-American Federation of Labor in session here today.

Green warned the delegates that the hearing is not a clearing house for the political lies of Latin America. He cautioned that the delegates must not seek to use the convention to air such grievances.

BROADCASTING HEARD IN FAR OFF AFRICA

Johannesburg, S. A. July 22.—South African amateurs were successful in hearing the wireless broadcast of the early rounds of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight last night. The broadcasting began to fade in the seventh round, however, and the result was inaudible.

London, July 22.—Broadcasting of the early rounds of the Dempsey-Sharkey fight was picked up here by amateurs, but the latter rounds were marred by fading.

FIND HIDDEN LOOT (?)

Southington, Conn., July 22.—Has someone discovered the hidden treasure of Albert Meyers, confessed robber of the Plantsville national bank? The question is current here today with the sudden appearance in the community of many five and seven dollar gold pieces. It is believed the coins may be part of the Plantsville loot. Meyers admitted he had buried his share, amounting to about $700 in a woods near here, which he claimed later to be unable to find.

SEA TRAGEDY TOLD BY CREW IN NEW YORK

Cook Murders Wife—Sailors In Mutiny—Food Gives Out—Captain Is Given Poison on Trip.

New York, July 22.—A tragedy enacted on a four-master schooner, Kingsway, now anchored at Quarantine, was disclosed today in Federal Court with the arraignment of Earl Battice, a negro of Gulfport, Miss., on a charge of murdering his wife. The master of the vessel and members of the crew were held as material witnesses.

Battice admitted that he attacked his wife with a razor while the schooner was off the Gold Coast of Africa on February 5. The woman died a few days later, but not until she had signed an antemortem statement.

The statement was marked with the blood of the dying woman, Lucia, who had gone aboard the vessel with her husband, who shipped after the start of the voyage when the cook deserted the vessel. In it she charged that "just because he had a girl in Porto Rico he wanted to get rid of me." Battice admitted the attack.

Captain Tells Story
It was from the captain, F. E. Lawry, that the most complete, although still partial story of the strange, unlucky voyage of the Kingsway was obtained. Lawry did not sail with the ship when she left New York last fall on a trading cruise, but joined her at Pensacola, Fla., when her first captain was taken ill.

Long before the murder disension settled on the ship and cast dark shadows across her gray sails. Long after the Negro had slashed his wife with a borrowed razor, trouble continued sometime with Battice at the bottom of it and again from other causes. For days the vessel lay becalmed, while the food ran short. Once the skipper was poisoned by food and again all of the members of the crew were laid low by the means prepared for them by a drafted cook.

Jealousy apparently grew up between Battice and his wife, prompted on his part by attentions to her from at least one member of the crew. On the day of the murder the Negro sought a revolver from other members of the crew. He found none. Then he borrowed a razor from a sailor, explaining that he wanted a shave. It was with this weapon he horribly slashed his wife.

It was days before she died and she screamed almost incessantly until life left her.

THINKS PHONE CALL CAME FROM BAILEY

Oneco Official Traces It to Springfield Where Missing Man Has Relatives.

Oneco, Conn., July 22.—Belief that the anonymous telephone call received here yesterday to the effect that James Bailey, missing Oneco Democratic leader had been seen in Suncook, N. H., was from Bailey himself, was expressed today by Justice of the Peace C. B. Montgomery.

Bailey disappeared after his wife had filed assault charges against him. Mrs. Bailey was later removed to a mental sanitarium.

The call was traced to Springfield, Mass., where Bailey is known to have relatives. Belief had become widespread here that Bailey was dead in the woods near Oneco and Justice Montgomery expressed the theory that while Bailey did not wish to face assault charges, he nevertheless desired to refute the death rumor and employed the anonymous phone call method.

Bailey's son volunteered to aid authorities here today in the search for his father.

Mrs. Bailey exhibited body bruises at the time a warrant was issued for her husband who was a former town selectman. Mrs. Bailey herself was leader of the Women's Democratic activities in this community.

Battle Arouses Nicaraguan Ire

Ontario's Gold Coast Paradise For Runners

Cleveland, Ohio, July 22.—Three hundred miles of Lake Erie shore line between Toledo, Ohio and Erie, Pa., along which there are but two United States customs boats, is known to lake shipping men as "Ontario's Gold Coast." It is the fairland of rum runners who have organized the business of supplying Ohio, founding place and the world headquarters of the Anti-Saloon League.

Despite the hazards of open lake navigation and the combined efforts of the state and federal enforcement organizations, the Canadian liquor smuggling traffic on historic Lake Erie has expanded at such an alarming rate during recent months that it has forced the re-establishment here of border patrol force abandoned in March, 1926, when customs officers believed the Ohio's Rum Row had been wiped out.

14 for 300 Miles
Resuming operations on the 300 mile patrol with 14 men and two boats after an open season of fifteen months, Customs Collector A. P. Fenion, in charge of the Cleveland operating base, found the smuggling trade again deeply entrenched in the legitimate lake commerce.

Although Cleveland's liquor receipts are considerably larger than a year ago. They are still relatively unimportant as compared with the volume of Canadian stocks entering Detroit and Toledo, according to prohibition operatives. Little of the Cleveland stock goes beyond the city by truck, whereas at the western end of Lake Erie, almost half of the Toledo landings are trucked inland to Ohio, Michigan and Indiana, some of it reaching as far west as Chicago and as far south as Cincinnati.

Thorn for Smugglers
Besides being twice as far from the Ontario shores as Toledo, Cleveland's smugglers are grievously hampered by District Attorney A. E. Bernstein, celebrated throughout the country as one of the most drastic prohibition prosecutors in the Department of Justice. The federal courts at Cleveland, also are noted along the Ontario border as exceptionally severe in dealing with prohibition law violators. These factors, combined with the greater hazards of navigation in the open lake to Cleveland, bring Canadian whiskey to $10.00 a quart here as against $4.00 to $5.00 in Detroit and $4.50 to $6.00 in Toledo.

Even these handicaps, however, have not driven the elusive rumcraft from Lake Erie and 851 prohibition convictions in the Federal Courts for the northern Ohio district.

FULLER SEES RADICALS IN PRISON CELLS

Sacco and Vanzetti, On Hun- ger Strike, Visited By Gov- ernor—They Demand a Public Hearing.

Boston, Mass., July 22.—Two hungry and disillusioned men sat in Charlestown states prison today and talked with the man who is to decide whether they shall live or die on August 10.

Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of murder, met Gov. Alvan T. Fuller for the first time, when the chief executive visited them in their cells. Scenes filled with drama, as have been all scenes in the cases of the two Italian radicals, were enacted when the governor met the condemned men.

Answered Questions
With the pangs of hunger torturing them, Sacco and Vanzetti answered the questions of the governor concerning their case. They have been on a hunger strike for the past six days. This morning they again refused their breakfast as they have all meals since Sunday morning.

Want Public Hearing
The hunger strike was inaugurated in protest against the methods employed by Gov. Fuller in investigating the trial at which they were convicted. They requested a public hearing rather than a private investigation.

No comment was forthcoming from Gov. Fuller as he left the prison, concerning his conversation with the two men. Warden Hendry declined to repeat any of the conversation. It was believed that the chief executive was bearing the conclusion of his investigation of the cases and as a final part of the work made the visit to obtain the men's own version of the seven year fight for life and events preceding their arrest and conviction.

GYPSY SMITH'S WIFE STARTS LAW SUIT, TOO

Charges Evangelist With Cruelty and Infidelity Just as He Charged Her.

Norwalk, Conn., July 22.—On the heels of Evangelist Gypsy Pat Smith's suit for divorce filed in Superior Court yesterday, there came today similar action brought by Mrs. Karin Tjader Smith, his estranged wife, who likewise charged cruelty and infidelity.

The evangelist is at present conducting a revival in Alabama. Mrs. Smith charged that her preacher husband was unfaithful between the dates of April 23, 1926 and May 27, 1927. April 20th was the date of their wedding in New York and May 27th the date of their estrangement. She additionally charged that her husband had an incurable and infectious disease. She also asks for custody of the year and a half old son and requests restoration of her maiden name.

There are four other evangelists in various parts of the country who adopted the name of "Gypsy Smith."

CAROL MAY RETURN TO RUMANIA; THINKS HE SHOULD BE KING

Grieves In Paris Because He Threw Away Crown—Con- siders Himself Rightful Heir to Throne—Friends Be- lieve He Will Desert Mme. Lupescu—Prince Gets No Answers to His Request to Attend King Ferdinand's Funeral.

LATEST BULLETIN
Berlin, July 22.—Reports from Bucharest this afternoon stated that clashes between supporters of Prince Carol and government troops have broken out in Fagaras. The reports state that several were killed during the fighting.

Paris, July 22.—Former Crown Prince Carol of Rumania, is "the man who would be king."
Tardy realization of his previous follies has succeeded Carol's genuine grief for the death of his father, King Ferdinand.

Carol is grieving today because he threw away the crown. Until today in numerous long talks with the former crown prince, the correspondents always addressed him as "Your Highness." When the International News Service correspondent was received by Carol this morning, he unsuspectingly used the same greeting.

Carol cast a side glance at the correspondent and said nothing. After a strained silence, Mme. Lupescu, the beautiful, red haired Rumanian woman with whom Carol has been living in Neuilly, made the correcting remark.

Thinks Himself King
"It is His Majesty, please," Carol seemed to reply. His attitude indicated plainly that he considers himself a rightful king. He is disturbed slightly that the world does not recognize the fact.

Realizing that he lost the Rumanian throne through folly and the love for Mme. Lupescu, Carol for the first time, seems annoyed slightly by her presence. Evidently he realizes how incongruous it was that she should be at his side when he heard the news of his father's death.

The former crown prince has to admit himself that Mme. Lupescu's presence embarrasses his family in their communications with him. On the other hand, Mme. Lupescu apparently fails to notice the change in Carol. But she is overawed by the possibility that her lover may mount the throne of the biggest kingdom in the Balkans. Evidently she does not stop to think what her own position would be if this happened.

May Return
It would not be surprising, Carol's friends declare, if, in his effort to be dignified and show a kingly demeanor, and to prepare himself for a possible return to Rumania, Carol desired his beautiful, red-haired companion, who accompanied him to Paris from Rumania.

Carol has not received a reply to his request for permission to attend his father's funeral at Bucharest. "I am afraid I will not get there," he said.

If Carol remains in Paris, he insists he will attend a memorial service in the Rumanian church on Sunday, waving aside the warning that a plotter may attack him if he shows himself in public.

The ex-crown prince is dressed entirely in black including a black satin four-in-hand necktie. Mme. Lupescu wears a black satin gown with a narrow white edging, black shoes and stockings.

A vase of flowers rested beside the portrait of Ferdinand upon the piano in Carol's villa. There is another portrait of the late king upon the mantel as well as two pictures of Michael, the five-year-old son of Carol, who has been proclaimed king of Rumania.

LAST ACTS OF KING
Bucharest, July 22.—One of the last acts of the late King Ferdinand was to address an indirect plea to his son Prince Carol not to attempt to return to Rumania to take over the throne.

This was disclosed today when the official gazette publishing King Ferdinand's political testament which included a letter written to Premier Bratianu on July 16, five days before his death. In this letter King Ferdinand makes his indirect plea that Prince Carol refrain from complicating the political situation.

"As a Christian I am constantly thinking of the moment when I will stand before my God," said King Ferdinand's letter.

"As a Rumanian and king, I constantly think of the fate of my country, to which I have devoted my life on this earth."
"God has willed that the crown, with which the fate of the country is inextricably connected, should rest upon the head of my minor grandchild, Michael."
"I lead to heaven to protect him and bless him so that under his rule Rumania may grow and become stronger.

Appeals to Subjects
"I appeal to all good and honest subjects to help him maintain order in the country."

"I can't view the future without thinking in my fatherly heart of my dear son Carol, who I wish a happy honest life in the new state which he himself has selected contrary to our wishes."

"I do not doubt that as a true Rumanian he will work to enable Rumania to develop peacefully under the rule of his son. In order not to disturb the peace of the country, I have denied myself the joy of seeing him again. By the same token I demand of him not to return to the country until the legal authorities permit him."

"My son Carol must, by his behavior, teach to all respect for the legal situation created by his own renunciation of the throne just as it is his duty as a Rumanian, son and father, to fulfill the obligations which he took up of his own initiative and which were not imposed upon him by anybody."

THRONGS OF MOURNERS
Bucharest, July 22.—Peasants, dressed in their gaudy picturesque costumes, streamed into Bucharest today from all parts of the kingdom to visit Cotroceni Castle where King Ferdinand's body is lying in state and to witness the funeral cortege on Sunday.

The body, attired in its military uniform, lies in a plain oak coffin, with gold trimmings, in the central hall of the castle with a sword and crown beside it. There is an honorary guard of soldiers in the palace and another outside.

Little King Michael, the five-year-old monarch of Rumania, whose rule will be conducted by a Council of Regency until he is 18, unless a coup upsets the regency in the meantime, was taken to see his grandfather and he gazed solemnly at the wasted features without saying a word.

Swear Allegiance
The army and navy has sworn loyalty to the new boy king. Bayonets guard the little fellow whenever he goes abroad. He cannot play at liberty as he did two or three days ago.

Little Michael will be the central figure of interest when the funeral is held Sunday. The date of the funeral was set originally for Saturday, but was postponed 24 hours to enable King Alexander, of Jugo-Slavia, son-in-law of the late king, to arrive here from Belgrade.

The city and the country at large are quiet. But troops are still massed at strategic points.

The official Gazette publishes today the king's will and a letter he wrote some time before his death relating to state and family affairs. It is understood that Carol will receive a bequest of cash and securities. Originally he was to receive Ferdinand's body, but that Carol sacrificed this fortune, along with his royal rights, when he deserted is wife for another woman.

Apparently the Rumanian people at large are taking little interest in the plans of Carol. It is believed generally that he will not attempt to return to Bucharest for the funeral. Whether or not he will attempt to oust his little son from the throne, is a riddle of Balkan politics.

It is deemed certain that disgruntled politicians will make an effort to have Carol publicly proclaim himself king and attempt to return, but his mother will counsel him against such action.

A group of National Guardsmen accompanied the murderer on his trip to protect him from any possible violence.

Burley, a former farm hand, assaulted Miss Bertha Reese in her home and then killed Miss Reese and her sister-in-law, Mrs. O. E. Reese as they lay in bed.

Don't Agree With Writers Who Say Dempsey Won His Fight By Fouling.

Manchester fans who attended the Dempsey-Sharkey fight at the Yankee Stadium in New York last night were almost unanimous today in saying that the blow which paved the way to the Dempsey victory was a fair one. Sharkey claimed a foul when he was hit in the midriff by Dempsey's terrific left.

Looked All Right to Them. Frank Madden, one of the local men who had a seat near the ringside, said that he appears to be the blow was absolutely fair. Other Manchester men said the same thing. One party, consisting of Herbert Carlson, Jack Cavagnaro, Thomas Brennan and Joseph McGowan, were loud in their praise of Dempsey and said that Sharkey was beaten fairly in that fatal seventh round.

On recommendations made by the city council at the special city meeting held a short time ago there was appropriated $1,000 to be divided, $500 for the survey and $500 for the inspection and rectifying of the septic tank that it might function properly.

The work is being done by a firm which has headquarters in Paterson, N. J., and the head of that company was in the city last evening in conference with the city officials and also some of the mill owners.

The Hockanum starts from Snipe Lake and carries out the work and being the stream to which it takes just about one third of the water that it carries out through the tank to the filter beds.

The fall is sufficient to carry the sewage along without clogging the mains, but the trouble, the investigation has shown in the matter of cleaning the sewage before it enters the sewer.

One of the troubles that might for the present be left undone, but would play an important part in clearing up the pollution of the river, would be the dredging of the river through the last third of the swamp, which would allow for a faster flow of the stream and would also get it into the river under conditions that would help in clearing up of anything that might go through the tanks otherwise.

It is this was done the trouble that is now had at the filter beds would be soon overcome and it would allow the sewage disposed of in the septic tank to be clear water, free of soap and lime, into the beds, where with the changes such as dipping up the bottom of the filter under the surface of the bed cover, would give it better chance to seep through, it would clear the situation and give the towns below a purer supply of water than they would be expected to follow.

The question is one that will give rise to the benefits that will be derived. At present Rockville, at the head of the stream, could get along under the present conditions, it is claimed, but if the changes were to be made in Rockville there would be benefits to the towns below the stream who might be assessed for their share of the benefits that are so derived, or it might be taken up as a general health measure and the state be asked to pay all, or at least part, of the cost that will be entailed.

Superintendent of Almshouse Reed must go. This is the statement made by First Selectman Arnold to The Herald representative today, the first statement that has been made by any of the selectmen concerning the almshouse, which is just at present attracting much attention. "It's hard to get a man to take that kind of a position," he further said, "but the work of the present man has not been in harmony with that of the board of selectmen. The selectmen are in charge of the town's affairs and are responsible for the results." In the case of one of the selectmen Mr. Reed will hardly talk with him. "There has been a general discontent since the burning of the barn in 1925 that has not helped matters," he continued. "Will you insist upon his resignation?" he was asked. "The board has given it considerable attention and when we have arrived at a decision that his resignation should be asked for we are not going to turn about. He will go," was the reply.

"We at no time made any charges concerning money matters at the farm and have not done so at present. It is just a case where a change was considered necessary. We have been trying to get the place cleaned up and we are going to get it cleaned up. In fact this will be done pretty soon," was another statement made by Mr. Arnold.

Not Afraid of Job "If Mr. Reed in doing his talking now thinks that it will have any effect upon the election of the selectmen, it does not bother me. I would not walk two steps to ask a man to vote for me and I do not care for it, either at election or right now," Mr. Arnold said.

There seemed to be no doubt after listening to the manner in which it was expressed but what the resignation will be turned in and that a new superintendent at the almshouse will be in charge on August 15, or before that, as the resignation states, if Mr. Reed decides to leave before that time.

May Have Broken Shoulder An X-ray picture is being taken of the shoulder of Robert Richardson, who was injured in the automobile accident yesterday, as there is considerable pain being suffered by him which, with the swollen and bruised condition of the shoulder seems to indicate that there may be a badly wrenched or a possible fracture. Otherwise he was resting comfortably and seemed brighter this morning. Should the X-ray disclose that there is a fracture it will probably be a day or two more before the swelling goes down and the bone could be set.

Permanent Medical Service Aroused by the number of physicians and surgeons who have left or are planning to leave the Veteran's Bureau for other fields the D. A. V. will urge upon Congress the establishment of a permanent medical service in the bureau modeled after the medical corps of the Army and the Navy, believing that professional observation and treatment of the former service men will be improved if doctors will become "retired" men in the bureau rather than accepting appointments largely upon a temporary basis.

Due to the number of men threatened with losses of benefits through delay of filing claims and presenting proof the D. A. V. wants all time limit for applications removed and also desires extension for conversion and reinstatement of insurance on occasion of the men who formerly held government policies have allowed them to lapse.

Congress will again be petitioned by the D. A. V. to end the discrimination against permanently disabled former emergency officers of the Army by granting them the same retirement privileges as have been extended to all other officers of the Army, Navy and Marines.

At More Compensation In the belief that mentally disabled veterans are suffering a hardship by being held to $20 a month compensation, the organization through the completion of the $20 and the D. A. V. will ask that the presumption cause in the act governing the Veterans' Bureau be extended to include constitutional and chronic diseases.

There are several other items on the program which the D. A. V. will present to Congress, but one of the points upon which early action is especially expected is the provision for the completion of the permanent hospital construction program at emergency speed. A measure calling for $11,000,000 to provide new hospitals in several sections of the country passed the House in the last session, only to be held in the closing filibuster in the Senate.

DRAFT CAPITAL AND LABOR FOR WAR, VETS' PLAN

Universal Conscription Is Plan to Be Presented to Next Congress.

Washington.—Disabled world war veterans organizations will demand of Congress the enactment of a universal conscription law to draft capital and labor in the next war just as the nation's man power was called to the colors in 1917, maintenance of an adequate national defense capable of sudden expansion in the next emergency and increased appropriations for civilian military training camps to provide better equipped leaders in the future.

This was the declaration of William F. Tate, of Atlanta, Ga., the new national commander of the Disabled American veterans, who has been in Washington conferring with the several officials on the legislative program with the disabled veterans will place before Congress next December.

CHENEY TEAM IS WINNER AT LEGION'S BIG NIGHT

Defeats Service Men's Team 12 to 6; Thousand Set Game, Listen to Concert.

Cheney Brothers defeated the American Legion baseball team last night in the first of the Legion ball games and sport programs at the West Side playgrounds. The score was 12 to 6, accounted for by the heavy hitting of the Cheney team, coupled with three errors made by the ex-service men.

Partons of Cheney Brothers crashed out a homer and a double on the offerings of Matteson, who started the game for the Legion. Russell, Matteson and Brennan all occupied the mound on occasion, but could do nothing with the silk workers.

More than a thousand people attended the affair and listened to the concert given by the Rockville City band. A dance followed in the West Side Recreation Center. The summary of the game:

Table with columns for American Legion and Cheney Brothers, listing players and scores.

KANSAS FARMER IS GIVING UP HOME TO PERSEVERING GHOST

Great Bend, Kansas.—Declaring that his large ancestral home isn't nearly large enough to house a ghost in addition to his family, Fred Koett, 41-year-old farmer near here, is preparing to move from his home and give the "spook" that has disrupted his peace of mind and slumber for several months "plenty of elbow-room." He plans to desert the house indefinitely, or at least until every evidence of the intruder has vanished.

"I believe this fellow wants me to leave," Koett said. "He's got something on his mind and maybe that's it. He wouldn't keep up his pestering me if it wasn't. He hangs pictures backwards on the wall, blacks my hired man's eye, opens the family bible and changed the Virgin Mary in different places. Last winter we all saw him peeping in the windows but we could never find any trace of him in the snow."

On one occasion a number of charges of buck shot were fired through the wraithlike form of the ghost by five farmers awaiting him from ambush. The shots did not leave a single trace of blood, however, and the form flitted away.

The five farmers are willing to make affidavits that the "spook" rose high in the air and floated soundlessly over a six foot wire fence like a slow motion picture of a pole vaulter.

Deputy sheriffs were ordered to guard the house, and for awhile periodic appearances of the ghost ceased. Wayne Lameroux, county attorney, was asked to prosecute the "spook" so he ordered the "ghost guard" to capture him at any cost.

NAB MISSING WITNESS

Stamford, Conn., July 22.—Eugene Ferguson, 29, scheduled as the state's star witness in the famous trial of nine gangsters following the cloak and suit strike disorders of last year and who disappeared just prior to the trials, was in the custody of police today and headed for the Bridgeport jail.

Ferguson, a taxi driver, witnessed the attack of the gangsters on Enrico Pozzolo and Erich Pozzolo, strike breakers, and after being cited as a witness, disappeared and has not been seen for almost a year. He was recognized by a policeman last night and arrested on an old bench warrant.

The nine gangsters, now serving long prison terms, were convicted without Ferguson's testimony.

NEW ZEALAND DROPS WORD 'AUSTRALASIA'

Washington.—New Zealand is trying to suppress the use of the words "Australasia" and "Australasian," at least insofar as they concern New Zealand, according to a letter sent to the State Department by the American Consul General at Wellington, N. Z., W. L. Lowrie.

The letter, sent out by the Associated Chambers of Commerce of New Zealand, declares that for several years business men of that dominion "have sought to discourage the use of these terms, in the hope of their eventual elimination." We know what the words are intended to convey, but people overseas who have little knowledge of this portion of the world may be excused for thinking that the terms refer to a land somewhere in, or to the south of, Asia.

ONTARIO'S GOLD COAST PARADISE FOR RUNNERS

(Continued from Page 1) In the year ending July 1 I have had little influence upon the speedboat traffic and blind cargos which are the main source of supply for Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown, Canton, Sandusky, Toledo and Columbus. Only ten prosecutions in the Cleveland and Toledo federal courts last year involved lake carriers in the liquor trade. Only four seizures have been made since the re-establishment of the Toledo-Erie patrol on June 1.

Many Hiding Places In addition to maintaining a constant vigil along 300 miles of open coast, Cleveland's force is required to keep a watchful eye on the important ports of Toledo, Cleveland, Sandusky, Port Clinton, Lorain, Ashabula and Erie, each of which has numerous private docks to afford refuge to the smaller carriers of the outlawed trade.

While the two customs boats skirt the coast's "hot points" in an attempt to drive off the high-powered motor launches which dart in almost at will, lake steamers push into the public docks to land blind cargoes of 50 to 200 cases. When the customs officials direct their limited equipment to the wholesale dock shipments, the swift speedboats take up the trade under cover of night to lure the patrolboats again into the open lake.

Only a 24 hour shore guard can catch the speedboats. Prohibition officials say. Built to move in as little as six inches of water, the boats sweep up the beach wherever their shore signal lights tell them the coast is clear. Unloading crews in hipboats drag the craft to a land anchorage and pass the cargo, man to man, to waiting trucks. Docking facilities are never required.

Taking advantage of the fact that the rum boats cover between 45 and 55 miles an hour as against a maximum speed of 30 miles an hour for the United States government patrol craft, the smugglers have devised a large-scale game of blind-man's-bluff for the entire Ohio bor-

ALL LOCAL TALENT IN KIDDIE REVUE

Manchester Children Alone In State Show Beginning Monday.

All of the juvenile talent in Manchester will be represented in the Kiddie Revue, which opens at the State theater on Monday for a run of three days. A total of 150 children, who have been trained and directed by Manager Sanson of the State, will appear in the three-act musical comedy. The revue is entitled "The Yankee Rose of Manchester" and the leading parts in the production will be taken by Rosanna Lindo, Myrtle Muir, Billie Shee and Ada Robinson. All four are considered among the leaders in juvenile entertainment in this town and in rehearsals have been coming along well. Some of them have been on the boards before and others are newcomers. Scenery for the revue have all been brought from New York. A number of the properties, however, have been developed by Edgar Anderson, the State's scenic artist. The revue was written, directed and will be staged by Manager Sanson.

Announcing GEORGE A. BROWN West Center and Cooper Streets. Phone 869 Why We Chose Auburn We wanted a car that we could endorse 100%. Of course, all manufacturers make big claims for their cars, but we ignored all of these claims. Because we know automobiles, we felt qualified to make our own comparisons. We did. Then we drove the different cars and tested them in every way. Then we interviewed owners in different parts of the country. Every where we ran into amazing evidence of Auburn's success. Nothing has ever impressed us so much. We found Auburn cars outselling higher priced cars after the most severe competitive tests. We found Auburn dealers in other cities were happy. We never saw such enthusiasm! These dealers are free from consumer complaints. Their service requirements are nil. Yet, we did not see how Auburn could build so much better cars and give so much more value and still sell them for less. Therefore, we went to the Auburn factories. There, we had the greatest education of our long automobile experience. Words cannot describe the expert care with which Auburn cars are built—the fine engineering—the better materials—and the more painstaking workmanship. They simply pour quality into Auburn cars. We studied every step of manufacture and now know why and how Auburn cars perform better and endure longer—it is built into them, down to the smallest detail. We took Auburn Cars right off the end of the assembly line (even before inspected, let alone tested) and drove them. We did everything but taste the water in the radiator and we found why Auburn owners and dealers everywhere are saying that Auburn cars are built right, right from start to finish. Then, we were left no option. We had to choose the Auburn. Still, we do not ask you to take our word. Come and see these Straight Eights and Sixes. Make your own comparison, do your own driving, and if Auburn does not give greater value in every way and meet your requirements better than any other car, you will not be asked to buy. 6-66 Roadster $1095; 6-66 Sport Sedan $1195; 6-66 Sedan $1295; 8-77 Roadster $1395; 8-77 Sport Sedan $1495; 8-77 Sedan $1695; 8-88 Roadster $1995; 8-88 Sport Sedan $2095; 8-88 Sedan $2195; 8-88 7-Passenger Sedan $2595. The Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

by PAUL ADAMS
Herald Staff Writer

Entrance to General Headquarters at Chaumont.

This is chapter 88 of the series of articles written by The Herald correspondent who is revisiting France as an advance guard for the "Second A. E. F."

CHAPTER LXXXVIII
The rumor-foundry of the A. E. F. that French caserne at Chaumont which was General Headquarters—"GHQ"—is still open, but business has slackened up considerably since 1918.

While production is maintained by a small garrison of French infantrymen and some red-hatted Colonials, it cannot compare with the volume of those years when the boys "got it straight from a corporal who knew a sergeant who was a dog-rober for a second lieutenant who had a washwoman who told the sergeant that the lieutenant was tipped off by a captain what ate at the same mess with a brigadier general from GHQ that the outfit would move in two weeks.

They turned out rumors in Chaumont in those days—rumors that spread like wildfire, rumors that brought flares of joy and anticipation, rumors that brought sorrow and depression. But rumors—rumors—rumors—always.

Chaumont today is just a quiet little city in Haute-Marne. It takes three hours and fifteen minutes to get down there from Paris on a rapid train that stops only at Troyes. The narrow streets are paved with wood blocks and the ancient houses are unchanged. The citizens of the department and the citizens of the aid and friendship commemorating the aid and friendship of Americans during the war. The road leading out past the caserne is called the "Avenue des Etats-Unis."

Up in the park that overlooks the beautiful valley of the chateau—a valley which was known to Caesar—the residents stare with mild curiosity and easy recognition at any American visitors. Prices are modest, much more modest than they were nine years ago.

The status of Edme Bouchardon at the entrance of the Lycee has just been repainted. Everything else, however, is just about the same as it was. But if any members of the American Legion who go down there in September expect to pick up any choice rumors that have come straight from a belly-robbing mess sergeant who knew a wagoner who was a buddy of a shavetail who knew General Pershing's chauffeur's washwoman, they'll be disappointed. Because the famous rumor-foundry of the A. E. F., while it hasn't been shut down, doesn't produce anything

SCYTHE IS MEMORIAL

Waterloo, N. Y.—Clarence L. Schaffer, owner of the famous Scythe Tree Farm has decided to sell out and retire. The historic old place was named after a scythe that was hung in a stable by James Wyman Johnson when he went to war in '61. He died in a war hospital and the tree gradually wrapped the tool that Wyman had left there as a memorial.

COURT SAYS MEN MAY BEAT WIVES

Paris—If you ever live in Paris with a wife who refuses to cook your breakfast—or darn your socks—or won't be satisfied with staying at home—
You'll find yourself safe from conviction of cruelty if you administer an old-fashioned spanking or even sterner punishment.

A ruling handed down by a Paris divorce court says that it is a husband's privilege to punish a wife for any dereliction from her matrimonial duties, or even if she nags him beyond endurance. It was based on an old French law, still in force.

HOOVER

There are, in the Republican party, a good many Hoover-for-President advocates. They are not particularly vocal but they would like to see the breaks come right for the nomination of their favorite. But Mr. Hoover has flatly declared himself as not in the race, and not going to be in the race, if President Coolidge intends to run again.

Nevertheless it is evident that considerable work is being done by the Hoover advocates to prepare the way for his nomination in the rather improbable but not impossible event of Mr. Coolidge declining to enter the contest.

With the national conventions still almost a year away it begins to look as if the choice of the Republican party, after Coolidge, might be either Lowden, Dawes or Hoover, and as if there was no other present probability worth consideration. Of these three, there are a great many firm adherents of President Coolidge who would prefer to see the Secretary of Commerce receive the nomination in case the President declines the honor. He is a man of vast capacity. He has accomplished big things, great things. His vision is as lightning fast as it is broad. He has a genius for decision and for putting decision into effect. As an organizer he has probably no equal in America. He is a progressive whose feet are on the ground—the progress that he stands for is economic and it is national.

Coolidge, of course, if possible, if not Coolidge then Hoover. That seems to be a growing sentiment in the East.

YOUTH, OLD AGE

War Shacker Jack Dempsey was madly cheered by thousands upon thousands of fanatics of the "manly art" last night when, by using punches dubiously close to it not quite within the foul limits, he won a dog-fight of a pugilistic contest from the Lithuanian sailor who calls himself Sharkey and who is probably the star braggart of pugilism of all times. Anywhere from a million to a million and a quarter of dollars is said to have been paid for the spectacle by the audience. The dog-fighters—it would be to libel a respectable sport to call them boxers—each take more money for the performance than most diligent contributors to the good of mankind earn, to say nothing of accumulating, in an entire long lifetime.

In our view there is just one aspect of this Dempsey-Sharkey fight that is not too squalid and perverted to be interesting. If a certain uppercut passed by Sharkey to Dempsey had chanced to have say five per cent more effect—if it had happened to squeeze a nerve center with the least bit more directness—it would have been Sharkey instead of Dempsey who would have won. And in that event practically every sports writer in the country would have started his story of the battle with the old, old chestnut, "Youth must be served," which is what they say when they are trying to say, "Youth will prevail." They would have been prating today about the hopelessness of an old, old man of thirty-two trying to match punches and stamina with a flaming youth of twenty-four.

As it is, they have forgotten for the moment, this ancient wheeze. But, like Dempsey, it will come back. It will come back if and when Dempsey happens to take a licking from Tunney. "Old age can't come back." The old age of thirty-two! Rubbish and fiddlesticks! There are probably a hundred dock-wallopers of forty-five along the New York North river water front who could lick both these birds put together, granted the leave to punch below the belt, bite, kick and gouge—which slight amendment to the rules would do little damage to the kind of exhibition that drew a million dollar gate at New York last night.

TRASH CANS

The plaint of the street sweepers that the public does not co-operate in keeping the business sections of Manchester free from litter is probably not entirely groundless. But neither is the public wholly to blame. The temptation to cast into the street such unconsidered trifles as opened envelopes, cigarette wrappers and the like, with which one scarcely knows what else to do, is considerable when no orderly way of disposing of such things is provided. It would doubtless add greatly to the neatness of Main street and vicinity at the south end, and of the Depot Square neighborhood at the north end, if a sufficient number of public trash cans were provided. They are not an enormously costly convenience and perhaps would pay for themselves in the amount of labor saved.

Twenty of these receptacles, disposed at street corners throughout the business sections, would be practically certain to work a revolution in the habit of using the streets for a rubbish heap. It is the experience of every community that employs them—and that means most communities, nowadays—that the people will avail themselves of the facility without compulsion. And if it should prove otherwise, then a town-by-law providing a penalty for littering the streets and sidewalks would have reason and justice behind it.

MALTHUSIANS

There is to be a World Population Conference in Geneva next month. It is going to consider what ought to be done about the overcrowding of the earth, which it is assumed will have some eight billion human beings hanging on and riding through space on it at the end of about three more centuries. There have been all sorts of worriers, and there are all sorts of worriers. But none that are or ever have been seem so utterly futile and such excess baggage as the worriers who, ever since Mr. Malthus first sprung his overcrowding theory, have been envisioning dire things to come from the future presence of too many people.

There are too many people now—a great deal too many—in spots. Why look far into the future for a condition that can be found in any one of a hundred cities today? Why start about a jammed valley of the Orinoco in 2227 when such a jam can never by any possibility equal a New York subway jam? It strikes us that it would be an infinitely more worth-while thing for humanitarians and scientists to devote their thoughts to the relief of present congestion, thus encouraging future increase of population, than to try to erect safeguards to operate three or five hundred years hence. Because, if the human race keeps on herding into great groups of five or ten million, it's the safest kind of a bet that sooner or later the huddling will result in their being wiped out—and there will be no need to stew about an excess of total population.

Nobody, as a matter of fact, has the remotest idea how many human units this globe could sustain in comfort and happiness, if life were intelligently governed, but it would probably prove to be many times the eight billions of which the Population Conference are afraid.

Besides, what is the matter with having a little faith? The records prove that to pioneer peoples, who have need of many children, many children come; and that to these same peoples, when their pioneer days are passed and not so many children are needed, fewer children come. We have a sort of easy confidence that there is never going to arrive a time when there will not be standing room a-plenty on this planet for all the people simultaneously present as its occupants. Call it the wisdom of God or call it the order of Nature or what you please, the human family has never yet been asked to perform the impossible task of maintaining itself without a reasonable chance to do so. It is our guess that it isn't going to be.

ECONOMIC LOSS

A resident of Columbia County, N. Y., writing to the New York Times, makes the despairing suggestion that, somehow or other, some of the many thousands of destitute, unemployed, able-bodied farm hands of the flooded lower Mississippi valley be transported to the Columbia county region, where crops are threatened with ruin for the lack of help to harvest them. He declares that it is quite possible to induce unemployed workers from towns to go to the farms, even at four dollars a day and board, asserting that the loafers prefer to go with empty pockets rather than employ their muscles in agricultural labor.

This is interesting and it is apparently a serious state of affairs that the New York state men bewails. But it is doubtful if he exactly appreciates the situation of these so-called town loafers who, he assumes, are content to be broke when the alternative is manual labor. Not that there is no unemployment, ment, for there probably isn't a state in the union, including our own, in which there are no potential workers without jobs. There never has been, unless possibly at the very peak of the war rush. Yet there is extremely little of destitution; very few of the unemployed who beg their food. There is an easier way of getting money, nowadays, than either pitching hay on a farm or begging from door to door. The great bootlegging industry offers food and shelter and pocket money in return for the smallest amount of effort that will provide those commodities anywhere in the world. Only the police and those who have made a frank study of the effects of the illicit liquor trade have any conception of how really important a percentage of the people of this country are engaged in it. That the proportion is large enough to have a real effect on the labor market is unquestionable. It is not because idle men no longer care to eat that they refuse employment on the farms or in other legitimate seasonal activities. In thousands of cases it is no longer an alternative between a job and starvation. The understudy for a professional bootlegger who can "handle" six half pints a day can eke out a living, of sorts, anywhere and any time. And the country is full of those who are doing it.

WHEN BUTTERMILK?

A news dispatch tells of the derailling of a train when it hit and killed a cow—at, if you please, Buttermilk lane. The dark suspicion comes that that lane was named recently—very recently. There are some newspaper correspondents who just cannot resist the temptation to embellish.

New York, July 22.—Each year Manhattan swallows up 50,000 sons of 50,000 American mothers. From farms, from hamlets and from villages they come, each believing that here are to be found the opportunities denied by their former provincialism.

Over and over again the story is told. In some rural community shaded by quiet trees, some lad has long been looking at the skyline. He has been brooding over the smallness of his world and inwardly revolting at the apparent monotony of his life. Perhaps he must rise in the morning and work in the fields perhaps he must seed and sow and harvest; perhaps he must feed the stock and do the chores. Or it is a little town, where things haven't "broken" so well for the young man. He blames the place and the "breaks." If only he could get to the "big place."

And so they come in an endless parade. Few arrive with more than $100 in their jeans, few leave without the tears of a mother upon their shoulders. Manhattan scarcely knows they have arrived. But for certain statisticians who turn these strugglings into cold figures there would be no way of knowing. Just now, the best of statisticians say that the task of getting along in New York is harder than ever before. "The ill-equipped and broken-of-purse are clogging the avenues of opportunity as never before in the city's history," says a letter upon my desk. "For the clean lad who comes with a little money, a good stout heart and the willingness to do anything, there are still a few footholds. But the climb is long and often heartbreaking." I don't expect this to be heeded by the army of ambitious—but there it is, for what it's worth.

On the outside of the picture—perhaps 75 per cent of those who have climbed very nicely in this man's town are from "the provinces"—as they call the outside world.

The last word concerning New York is a magazine, The New Yorker. It is run by one Harold Ross, with whom I used to cover the waterfront in San Francisco. The three interpreters of New York are O. O. McIntyre, who hails from Ohio, Indiana and way points; Burton Rascoe, who came out of Illinois, and yours truly, who browsed in from Michigan, Colorado and San Francisco. Roy Howard, who heads the Scripps-Howard newspapers, came from Indiana; Ray Long, who edits the Hearst magazines and Harry Burton, who operates McCalls, came from Ohio; Edward Ferber hails from Illinois; Robert Henri, the great artist, is a son of Cincinnati—and so it goes. Jimmy Walker, the mayor happens to belong here.

Every big office now has its official bootblack. Youngsters with their box kits adopt a building as soon as it is finished. Some have to pay for the concession and a fat concession it is in the Broadway belt, where it sometimes takes half a day to make a single floor, thanks to the new arrivals. Horatio Alger's bootblacks were mere pikers compared to these, some of whom make more per day than the office clerks, whose shoes they shine, make in a week.

One kid is paying for the family home in Jersey out of the shine profits of a new 20-story building. GILBERT SWAN.

Well, you can't expect warm days in winter, can you?

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, July 22.—Internal dissension continues in the Department of States, and the consular insurgents hope to obtain a congressional investigation of the foreign service promotion system.

Members of the preponderant consular branch continue to charge favoritism and unfair discrimination on behalf of a small group of wealthy and socially elite members of the diplomatic corps. They are doing missionary work among members of Congress and claim to have excited considerable interest, although high officials of the department will exert every effort to forestall any formal investigation on the ground that it is unnecessary and that if there is anything wrong with the promotion system, it is fast being remedied.

Congresswoman Edith Nourse Rogers who carried on her husband's fight to give consuls promotion according to merit.

Public revelation of the bitter row within the service three or four months ago was followed by some developments for the better, according to the consuls, but they are far from satisfied.

Squabble Over Plum Passing Their complaint that members of the diplomatic branch were being promoted much oftener than the consuls, although all were supposed to be equal under the Rogers Act, has been met by a promotion list which affected some 30 consuls and no diplomats. A smaller list of promoted consuls is expected to follow, but the insurgents declare that 125 consuls must be promoted before they will be on a parity with the diplomats.

Furthermore, they contend that the little diplomatic clique which they say formerly drew the promotion plums has now been given its counterpart in the consular service. For instance, it is cited that the Rogers Act provides for promotion on merit and that the foreign service is supposed to be concentrating in Latin-America, with the theory that it is more important to have high-grade men there than elsewhere. But only two of the last list of 28 promotions went to consuls in Latin-America and the majority went to Europe.

Now that the consuls are getting a few promotions, it is alleged that those who have been in service in the department here, where they have established social contacts with the right people, are the ones being taken care of.

Congresswoman Backs Consuls Lawrence Dennis, who served in Nicaragua, accused the department of sending its favorites to Europe with promotions while forgetting the hard workers without "pull." Dennis was persuaded to stop talking and was all ready to take a promotion and a position at the American embassy in Paris, when he was suddenly hired by J. and W. Seligman of New York, international bankers.

Who will lead the battle in Congress for the consuls remains to be seen. Last session, Congressman Edwards of Georgia demanded answers from the Department of State to a series of questions which covered the whole range of consular complaint. It is understood that the Department of State finally has drafted a lengthy answer to Edwards which has been mimeographed and will soon be made public. It is said that the department admits certain defects in past procedure, but insists that the spirit of the Rogers act is now being observed.

In case Edwards is satisfied and does no more, fireworks may come from Congressman Edith Nourse Rogers, whose late husband wrote the foreign service act. Mrs. Rogers recently said that there should be 125 to 130 consular promotions to bring consuls up to an equal ratio with diplomats and remarked in effect that if it were true that the consular service suffered from an "inferiority social complex" the diplomats suffered from a "superiority social complex and an inferiority business complex."

MINER'S HOSPITAL

Picher, Okla.—Ottawa County zinc and lead miners will have a tubercular hospital of their own if plans of Mrs. Bobbie Joseph, welfare nurse of the American Zinc Institute, mature. Ottawa commissioners offered a site for the institution and 8000 mine employes in the tri-State district have endorsed the plan.

CONY ISLAND HOLDS LOST CHILD RECORD

New York.—More children are "lost" at Coney Island than any other place in the country, according to officials of the New York State prison commission. In a report on the condition of the 28th police precinct at Coney Island the prison commission revealed that from May 30 to September 20, 1926, a total of 2,838 children were reported lost at Coney Island. As high as 100 children were reported lost in one day last summer. So many boys and girls have been lost at Coney Island in the last few seasons that this year five lost children's stations were established along the beach. The prison commission said the police should not be compelled to look after all the "lost" children who are brought to the station house. The report said, in part: "The police of this busy precinct should not be required to undertake the care of these children with the many other important matters in which their services are needed." The commission recommended that representatives of the New York city police department confer with officials of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children in an effort to work out a plan which would provide for the care of the lost children and Coney Island.

NEW DIESEL ENGINE FOR IMMENSE SHIPS

Belfast.—A sensational development in the Diesel engine for ships is foreshadowed in a report that preliminary steps were taken at Harland and Wolff's engine shops here to build an engine of close on 100,000 horsepower. As an engine of this size would require a vessel of over 50,000 tons it is inferred that the new engine is designed for the mammoth new White Star liner to be built here. At present the most powerful Diesel engine in the world is about 25,000 horsepower.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
VERA VICTORIA CAMERON, plain but efficient secretary in the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co. lives with her aunt, FLORA CARTWRIGHT. Flora is a frivolous creature and has been divorced several times. She cannot understand Vera's lack of interest in men and her devotion to business.

With a strange new hope in her heart, she lifted her hand to knock on the door beyond which Jerry Macklyn was no doubt awaiting her impatiently.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER 1A

FROM fifteen to fifty dollars a week in five years had not been easy, and she had not always been happy, but—she was succeeding. She had taken business so very seriously.

She had never had a real sweetheart. Calvin Trumble, who had wanted a "helpmeet" who could earn more than her half of the expenses, didn't count; neither did Aunt Flora's discarded suitor, middle-aged Mr. Perdue, who had talked pathetically of his broken heart and his motherless little children. How did Aunt Flora do it? She had had four husbands, could marry again tomorrow if she wanted to. And Aunt Flora was useless, a spendthrift, a pleasure-mad, vain woman.

When she entered the foyer of the twenty-two story office building where the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company occupied an entire floor—the factory was in Jersey—she was again the brisk, business-like young private secretary. A pleasant excitement routed her depression.

She went briskly to her office, a little cubicle outside the private office of the sales manager, opened her desk, arranged notebook and pencils ready for a call from her boss whenever he happened to stroll in—late as usual on Monday, filed a basket of correspondence which she had answered on Saturday, and was, at ten o'clock, making a careful graphic representation of a sales report on business for the month of March when an office boy skidded into the room with a letter. "The old man wants to see you, Miss Cameron," he grinned at her.

Any other girl in the world would have snatched up a vanity case and powdered her nose before obeying that summons. Vera rose instantly, did not even pat the smooth, flat braids of her brown hair, for she knew that they lay in immaculate order against her brow and over her small ears. She was guilty of one evidence of vanity, however. She took from his hanger the severe little jacket to her new suit, buttoned it snugly over the white silk blouse, arranged collar and cuffs with quick, deft fingers and then walked briskly but unhurriedly down the long corridor to the door marked "Mr. Canfield." She tapped, with fingers slightly cold with nervousness, upon the door labeled "Private." As she opened the door to Mr. Canfield's old fellow of invitation, a girl almost collided with her, a girl leaving Mr. Canfield's private office with an open notebook in her hand. "Mr. Canfield will see you now, Miss Cameron," the girl spoke in a litting, sweet voice, a voice that fairly rippled with triumph.

"Thank you, Miss Canfield," Vera answered, her voice cold and even. Rosemary Fitch! Rosemary! Aunt Flora's mocking, fond warning—"I'm afraid you may find out!"—came to Vivian's ears, in which the blood pounded sickeningly, as cleverly as if her aunt were there, noting her defeat, her incredible defeat.

"Come in, Miss Cameron. How are you today? Fine, I hope," Mr. Canfield boomed cordially. "You see we're making some changes around here—"

Vera closed the door with a fangled, trembling hand and walked jerkily to the seat beside the president's desk.

"Mr. Canfield," she began tremulously, but courageously, for anger made her brave. "Is Miss Fitch going to take Miss Holmes' place as your secretary?"

"Well, yes," the big, broad old man nodded, his keen, slate-gray eyes narrowing as he regarded her quizzically. "Have you any objections, Miss Cameron?"

"I had hoped to be promoted to the position myself," Vera told him, her mouth, her adorable, kissable mouth held firmly to keep it from trembling. "I have been with the firm longer than any of the other girls, now that Miss Holmes is gone, and I—I know I'm a better secretary than—than—Miss Fitch."

"You mean that you can take dictation faster, turn out more letters, make better graphic representations than Miss Fitch, don't you?" Mr. Canfield asked gently, almost pityingly.

"I certainly do," Vera retorted, tears welling up in her eyes, to her intense disgust.

"I agree with you, as to those qualifications, Miss Cameron. You are probably the most efficient secretary this organization has ever had—"

"Then why—" Vera interrupted him indignantly.

"Miss Cameron, I'm an old man and I don't want to work as hard as you would make me work," the president of the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Company leaned back in his chair, which creaked under his weight, and regarded her humorously.

"I'm president of the company, as you know, Miss Cameron, but I don't do a whole lot of work. Got plenty of high-powered executives to do the drudgery for me. Sometimes I don't dictate a dozen letters a day. Most of my appointments are with the big buyers, for social purposes only. I leave the business interviews with Benham and his boys. Why, girl, I couldn't possibly keep a human dynamo like you busy and contented. You'd be shaming me into doing a lot of meddling with the department heads, just to keep me busy, so I could keep you busy. As I said, I'm getting to be an old man—and by the way, you didn't contradict me, as little Rosemary Fitch would have done—"

She gasped, started to speak, but Canfield waved a broad, fat hand at her.

"Just one of the duties of my private secretary," he chuckled. "You can see that you wouldn't suit at all. I play golf a lot, and I like to have an adoring young audience sit in that chair and ooh and ah when I tell how I went around the course in par."

"Of course, I want a secretary who can write an intelligible letter and who won't bail up my appointments for me and one who can make hotel and Pullman reservations without being told. But Miss Fitch has brains enough to do all those things and yet she's human enough to humor an old man and make him feel like a great big conqueror every minute he's fiddling around on the job. Do you get my point?"

"Why did you send for me, Mr. Canfield? To—to humiliate me?" Vera rose, trembling so that she could hardly stand.

"Whoa there, child! Don't fly off the handle! But damned if it doesn't make you attractive, to get all flushed up like that. I sent for you because I have a new job for you, one that you'll simply eat up. You're going to be much happier with Jerry Macklyn than you could possibly have been with me—"

"Jerry Macklyn?" Vera was guilty of interrupting her employer again.

"The new advertising manager. Starts to work this morning. He's another demon for work, and the biggest about Peach Bloom Cosmetics and the business in general. Benham and I both agreed that he meant you and no one else."

"Thank you, Mr. Canfield," Vera stammered. "Do I report to him this morning?" Her voice was sassy, girlish, her adorable mouth flashed a wide smile at the shrewdly observing old man opposite her.

"Sure you do. He's waiting for you. He has Stafford's office, of course. And by the way, the job carries fifty a week, the same as Miss Fitch would have had. He added in a kindly voice, unlike his usually heavy boom.

"Shall I—shall I be allowed to write advertising copy too?" Vera quavered happily. "I've been taking an advertising course at Columbia two evenings a week, as well as an extension course in chemistry—"

Canfield's laugh boomed out. "I'd have bet that you had," he assured her, but his eyes were very kind. "Sure you'll be allowed to try your hand at copy-writing—booklets, things of that sort. Now, run along and don't think too harshly of the old man."

Jerry Macklyn! Jerry Macklyn! Jerry! He had asked for her. What if he didn't know her personally? He knew the kind of person she was, had wanted her above all others. Oh, it did pay to study and work hard—What a nice name he had! Jerry Macklyn! Would he be a Jerry sort of person, as Aunt Flora would say? Maybe—She paused outside the door which was still labeled "Mr. Stafford," in honor of Jerry Macklyn's predecessor, and for a moment she thought wildly of rushing back down the corridor to Rosemary Fitch's office, to ask her for the loan of her powder compact and her lipstick. But she knew that she couldn't do that—lay herself open to ridicule, have Rosemary Fitch giggling about her in the rest room—

With head high, and a strange new hope in her heart, she lifted her hand to knock on the inner door beyond which Jerry Macklyn was no doubt awaiting her impatiently.

BLAMES PSYCHOLOGY FOR TURNPIKE DEATHS

Highway Commissioner Says Autoists Speed Up When They Hit This Good Road.

Orange, Conn., July 22.—Psychology entered into the discussion at the state, county and city conference on the Milford deathpike situation here when Highway Commissioner MacDonald declared that the great number of deaths was largely due to that cause.

"There is a certain psychology that marks the opening of a new road which goes for recklessness and speed," he said, recalling the first year of the Darien flats road and its casualties. "There is a strong desire to 'let 'er out,' he explained. Although many plans were discussed including the installation of stop-and-go lights, sidewalk construction and other precautions, about the only action forthcoming was the promise of Commissioner MacDonald to put warning signs along the entire road, reminding speeders that the highway is "patrolled day and night." He said no state aid could be expected in the building of sidewalks.

CUBS AND PIRATES BECOMING DIZZY

By LES CONKLIN. I. N. S. Correspondent.

New York, July 22.—The Cubs and Pirates are reeling around the National League ring like Jack Sharkey today, while the world's champion St. Louis Cardinals are apparently on the verge of pulling a Dempsey and regaining their proud position at the head of the pack. The Cubs are in first place again, but they got there by the somewhat negative method of losing only one game while the Pirates were losing two.

Having been walloped by the Giants, the Cubs tossed off a seven to three decision to the Phillies yesterday. They now are only 2 1-2 games in front of the third place Cardinals.

Ray Kremer, Pittsburgh pitching ace, regained his early season form but unfortunately Kent Greenstedt regained his form of two years ago at the same moment. Each allowed only five hits but the Braves won, two to one, and then added insult to injury by taking the nightcap, five to two.

The Giants, after tying the score with a brilliant five-run rally in the ninth at the expense of Haines and Alexander, tossed the game to the Cardinals in the tenth, seven to six. John McGraw was put off the field for the first time in 3 years, during one of many wrangles.

Babe Herman uncorked a wild throw in the thirteenth and the Reds nosed out the Robins, two to one. Luque and Spittin' Bill Doak twirled scoreless ball for nine innings. The Yankees win whether they hit or not. They got only five singles off Connally of the White Sox, but bunched four of them in the eighth and won four to one, while Hoyt subdued the enemy. Although Goose Goslin got four hits including a homer in four times at bat, the Senators lost to the Browns, five to four, when Bennett doubled with the bases full in the ninth. Darkness ended the second game when the score was tied at two all at the end of the seventh. The Senators now trail the Yankees by 12 1-2 games.

CITY ROOF GARDENS FOR PLAYGROUNDS BOSTON HEALTH PLAN

Boston.—Establishment of municipal roof gardens for the use of children of the city in connection with health programs will be undertaken by the Boston health department this summer. Children who are below the average physical standards will receive the benefits of the new elevated playgrounds.

The "health roofs" will be located in centralized sections of the city and elaborate plans for their conduct are being formulated by Dr. Francis X. Mahoney, city health commissioner and recognized authority on the care of youngsters.

The chief purpose of the roof playgrounds according to the commissioner is to insure the children of good health before they enter school in the fall. In this way it is hoped that hitherto backward children who are so because of ill-health will be more progressive in their studies.

A study of landscapes will be made before roofs for the new playgrounds are selected. Uninspiring scenery will be screened off from view. Effort will be made to have great views of the harbor as a natural picture for the children to gaze upon as they participate in the health building play.

It is planned to confine admission to the roof playgrounds to children ranging from five to twelve years.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (36) Hawaii's People

To the south and west of the Hawaiian Islands are the Philippines, named for King Philip II of Spain and first seen by Magellan. There are more than 7000 islands in the Philippines. The 1920 population was more than 10,000,000, of whom not more than 12,000 were white. A Filipino is shown here plowing, with a buffalo hitched to the plow.

Thousands of people in Manila live in house-boats moored in the Pasig river, as shown in the picture above.

Here is a typical village of the Igorrotes, a fierce people who until recently were noted as head hunters.

The resources of the islands are very great. Gold, silver, iron, lead, zinc, copper, sulphur, petroleum and lead are found. There are thousands of coconut-palms. The coconut-palm furnishes food, drink, oil, timber and rope, a tree producing about a hundred nuts a year. Here natives are shown piling nuts for market. (To Be Continued)

Jungle Breath

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Attempts have been made on the life of ELISE MARETTI, an American girl owning considerable property near the little town of PORTO VERDE, in west central Brazil, she has escaped harm due to the shrewdness of her cousin and protector, VILK, and his friend, LINDOY NUNNALLY, an elderly American chemist, in their efforts to determine the reason for the strange enmity for Elise.

Living near Porto Verde is one GAYLORD PRENTISS, a strange and forbidding character, who has evinced a hatred for Elise.

TINKY, Elise's two-year-old orphaned nephew, is kidnapped. A native reports Prentiss has been seen with the baby. The trail leads into the jungle.

Calumny overtakes the expedition. Vilk organizes a party. Native trackers are injured or desert. Treachery breaks. Their white friends are never victims and are left with a friendly tribe.

Elise, Vilk and Nunnally finally emerge from the jungle. Presumably they come to the outskirts of a strange city, resembling the old Inca civilization. Here they are made prisoners. They discover they are in the tower of CAYLUS D'ALBENTARA, whom they had known as an engineer back in Porto Verde.

The ruler of the city decides to marry Elise and to put Vilk and Nunnally to death. They are to be tortured at the feast of BATALAGOS, who are Elise's nephews and Prentiss, who are prisoners also. A friendly Indian slips a dagger to Vilk, who cuts his hands, then proceeds to save the natives by walking through first. Vilk starts to relate the strange story of Prentiss.

"I was in that building with Batalagos this afternoon. In a great stone basement of it is gold."

NOW BEGIN THE STORY

CHAPTER XLVII

"MERELY this," Vilk answered. "The first quest for gold, and to my mind the much less important, was the attempt of Limey Potts, Pasquale Branza, and Detto Cicerone. Three rogues working together, they believed—with reason—that they could easily get many thousands of dollars from you by kidnaping Tinky. That was why Limey was in the tree waiting for you to drive by the day Tony Barbeta was killed. He was going to cause you to have an accident or abandon her in their plans, and to follow up the information they had gained. Which brings us to the second and more important quest, the one which concerns Prentiss and D'Albentara."

The tom-toms began to sound monotonously. He listened heavily a moment, then continued. "I've told you many times before that these people aren't Inca. Far from it. But they have been living in these Inca ruins for many generations and naturally have taken over any of the Inca possessions which remained."

"If you remember your histories, you'll recall that the thing they had most of was gold. Gold in such enormous quantities that the Spaniards who first saw their cities wouldn't credit their eyes. Walls and the nobles' houses were literally covered with it, great vases, and even furniture made of it. Called it 'the tears of the sun.'"

He gazed toward the chief's palace silhouetted against the starlit sky. "I was in that building with Batalagos this afternoon. In a great stone basement of it is gold."

The hideous painted priests began a droning chant. "You know Prentiss is an archeologist. He's always specialized in Inca archeology. Some years ago he got into that trouble with the museum, you heard vague rumors about some of the Indians in D'Albentara's camp, and catching the poor drunken fellow we saved that night—you don't know about that incident, Elise—tortured him to see what he knew, and found his information highly interesting."

"Then, discouraged by the lack of success in their schemes to get money from Elise, they decided to abandon her in their plans, and to follow up the information they had gained. Which brings us to the second and more important quest, the one which concerns Prentiss and D'Albentara."

The tom-toms began to sound monotonously. He listened heavily a moment, then continued. "I've told you many times before that these people aren't Inca. Far from it. The WOMAN'S DAY

Are women peers of men? "Peer," according to our prized friend the dictionary, means "an equal." Now, considering that according to legal rights, any accused must be judged by a jury of his "peers," it is strange that as long as men have been fit to protect their trial by a jury of all or part women, on the score that said jury was not composed of their "equals."

It "Riled" Charlie

Charlie Hoxie of Alaska was one man who felt that way about it and took his case to the Supreme Court. That court's decision said that Hoxie was tried before his "peers" even if they were women. Someone suggests that if the Supreme Court had thought differently, what an opening it would have given women prisoners convicted by juries composed of men! The obvious intimation being that if a woman is not a man's "peer," by no stretch of the imagination can a man be considered a woman's "peer." But avast with such fuel for unworthy sex antagonism!

Married Women in England

The married woman in England, it seems, must choose either bridge or scrubbing as her profession.

So writes the well-known feminist, author and lecturer, Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale, in an article of exasperation at prejudice in England against married professional women.

Mrs. Hale cites dismissal of various teachers and dead mistresses of girls' schools for having babies, and scores the defect of "The Married Women's Employment Bill" which would have permitted any unemployed woman to take a job because of maternity.

"No one dismisses unskilled workers because of marriage and maternity," she continues, "any more than the public is expected to lose its pets—singers, actresses, or musicians—on marriage."

Comes Home

No question raises such a hullabaloo in our own country as "the right" of the married woman to hold a job. It seems to me that Mrs. Hale gives a real argument to the unmarried females who get peeved if married women "who don't need to" work. She says:

"These unmarried women do not see that for the sake of a momentary advantage they are being disloyal to the progress of their sex, and killing their own future chance at the two basic needs—love and work."

Wife's Wages

Champions of wages for wives may be interested in having this figure around handy; home makers of the United States add eighteen billion dollars to the annual income of the country. This, according to the National Bureau of Economic Research. The same bureau estimates that the average housekeeper does $1751.34 worth of work a year.

Tell that to the husband the next time he refuses you that postage stamp!

Here's another interesting figure furnished by the same bureau. Ninety-five per cent of American wives do all—ALL—the housework. Who said things about lazy, parasitic, bridge-playing American wives?

"Gross neglect of beauty" was named as cause for divorce in a suit filed in a certain court lately. After an exhaustive search it proved to be a mistake, and the word "beauty" was changed to "duty." Of course, according to the short story writers and various "marriage advisers," the first-named cause would be quite sufficient.

ARTIFICIAL RESPIRATION BEST TREATMENT FOR SHOCK VICTIMS

This is the first of three health talks on treatment of persons who have sustained electric shock.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Electric energy is widely used in industry today. As pointed out by Dr. H. E. Fisher, it is the most powerful and best understood source of energy known to mankind.

In the infancy of the industry, electrical injuries, including electric shock, electric flashes and electric burns, were far more frequent than at present. A large number of accidents and deaths are still attributable to carelessness and to the light manner in which the average person holds the low voltage currents, such as the 110 and 220 volt currents that are used in the home and in the shop. Dr. Fisher suggests three aphorisms that should guide everyone working with electric apparatus:

- 1—Look upon all electrical apparatus with awe and respect, regardless of high or low voltage.
- 2—Look upon all people who have become electrified and are unconscious as alive and treat them by artificial respiration, regardless of whether their shock has been

A convincing article about health, and the tendency of people to dramatize their illness, lies on my table. The article says that people rather like to be ill.

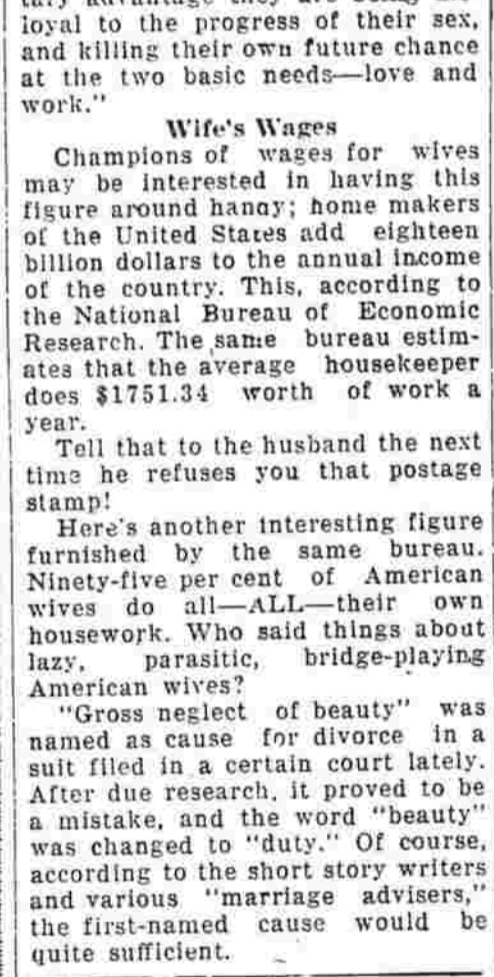

I do think that people like to discuss their ailments more or less, but I also think there is a huge army of people who suffer greatly and who suffer silently.

I know that there are thousands of women and girls standing up all day or doing other tedious work who are literally "dropping of their feet." They have little time to go to doctors, little time to rest, and many of them dare not take time for necessary treatment. Every morning sees them in their regular places, "grinning and bearing it." May they not be forgiven if they mention it once in a while to a listener who understands and sympathizes?

There are men in all walks of work with families depending on them who spend day in and day out, poring over ledgers, practicing professions, and keeping the wheels of business turning, who never know a day free from headache or some other equally distressing pain. The work of the world is not done altogether by well people in any means.

Of one thing I am reasonably sure. The human race, for all its

AROUND WORLD
FLIGHT TO WAIT
BETTER PLANES

Aviation Leaders Think Motors Are Far Ahead Of Balance Of Machines.

New York—An around-the-world flight with many a stop may be just around the corner of time but it must wait until the building of planes for such a super human effort becomes as far advanced as the construction of motors.

This formed the consensus in leading aviation circles today in the wake of the recent non-stop trans-Atlantic and trans-Pacific flights.

Whatever else these epochal flights may have disclosed, one fact was forcibly brought out which the technical men concerned with aviation deem of paramount importance—the planning and building of motors approximates perfection.

Motors dependable. Hereafter the average person regarded an airplane trip with mingled feelings of misgivings, and the fear of a stalled engine hundreds or thousands of feet in the ether was foremost. Airplane engines were viewed somewhat in the same light as prima donnas—too temperamental to get familiar with.

But the trans-ocean flights, topped by the remarkable performance of the three motors in the America which functioned perfectly on Commander Richard E. Byrd's memorable trip, have virtually dispelled this trepidation from the mind of the average person.

With the experience gained in building airplane motors in the years since the Wright brothers electrified the world with their heavier-than-air flying machine, engineers have been educated to a point where today they make them almost fool-proof. It took the recent cross-ocean flights, however, to impress upon a skeptical public how far motors have been developed.

Remarkable Progress. Even those closely identified with aviation, aware of the remarkable progress made in this respect, were at least mildly surprised by the performance of America's motors. For approximately 43 hours through the most discouraging weather conditions, the three engines popped away steadily, never faltering once until a shortage of fuel made a forced landing necessary.

And therein lies the problem in an around-the-world non-stop flight—a plane so built as to carry sufficient fuel for such an effort.

The motors used in each of the trans-ocean flights were good for 100 hours, on a conservative basis, without need of mechanical attention, according to experienced engineers. And 100 hours at the rate of 100 miles an hour would take a plane 10,000 miles.

Today it has been proved that motors have practically been made safe enough for a non-stop flight around the world. But aviation must await the planning of a ship capable of carrying enough fuel for such a breath-taking attempt.

HUNGARY WILL TAX CHILDLESS COUPLES
Budapest.—Childless married couples, as well as bachelors, will be taxed in Hungary for the benefit of children and sick people if a new Social Welfare Bill becomes a law.

Drafted by the Minister of National Welfare, the Bill provides that the inheritance taxes shall be graduated in inverse ratio to the number of children in the family, while simultaneously a special "punishment" tax will be levied on bachelors and childless married couples.

The proceeds of the tax are to be devoted to a double purpose: child welfare and the special aero plane service soon to be inaugurated for rushing urgent cases to the Budapest hospitals from places in the provinces where the hospital equipment is limited.

DEMPESEY KNOCKS OUT SHARKEY

Walsh In Review of Fight Says Bostonian Should Have Not Slugged As Dempsey Was Almost Played Out—Thinks Ex-Champ Will Be Easy For Tunney.

By DAVID J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor
New York, July 22.—They had two strikes on Babe Ruth and then he hit one over the fence.

The old story, ancient as sin itself, the tale of the hare and the tortoise, was repeated all over again at the Yankee Stadium last night when Jack Dempsey, the great killer of fistiana, added another pellet to the old hatch pole. He knocked Jack Sharkey, that painfully confident young man from Boston, colder than a frappe after forty-five seconds of fighting in the seventh round, at tottering on his tortoise seat as the hare and the hare was skimming over the landscape as only a hare can.

They were just about to declare it no contest out of resigned pity and prepare the melancholy obituaries about the man who was compared with the man who wasn't, when suddenly out of nowhere Dempsey lashed away in clinch and sent a left to the body and jaw and Sharkey was no more.

Yes, they have had two strikes on Ruth. Many a man, they say, was born that way, but it means nothing to Ruth just as it means nothing to the man who wasn't. It means nothing to Jack Dempsey.

Always Dangerous

For Dempsey, often compared to the tiger, might as well be broken and toothless as long as a tiger breathes he is dangerous to human-kind and so it is with the man that lives within the man who masquerades under the name of William Harrison Dempsey.

It seems like taking something from a citizen who has about everything today, when I see Dempsey lost just as much as Sharkey won it. This great hook-and-I-man hardly could go wrong against the remnant of a Dempsey that plodded doggedly about the ring last night. But the point is that Sharkey did go wrong, awfully, painfully wrong.

Sharkey a Sap

He thought he was a pretty good fighter and I am not convinced yet that he wasn't and isn't. But the pitcher who slips one to Babe Ruth in the groove just because George is two down and one to go is a sap of purest ray serene and you can't deny my word for it that Sharkey was a most sincere sap last night.

He had before him the spectacle that was presented at the Philadelphia Stadium last September when Gene Tunney, who has declined to meet Dempsey body to body and heave at it like a couple of longshoremen. Instead, he moved rapidly about in widening circles making a steady and unceasing effort to slap Dempsey about with quick, short punches and then went right away from there.

I don't say that Sharkey is a Tunney. But I certainly do not think Dempsey a statement to which undoubtedly he will place his seal and hand today.

Had the Speed

He ought to know it, anyhow, for he can't keep a secret and truth is never for him. He had the superior speed but he refused to use it, being too vain to back away even from the human killer.

It didn't seem to matter that Dempsey's legs were gone and that in three rounds or less, they must fold up under their own weariness. No, Sharkey was too arrogant for such a finish as that. He must finish Dempsey with his own hand and, in such a program, it was inevitable that one man or the other must go quickly. In such a game, the odds were all with Dempsey and so Sharkey, of necessity, was selected. I hope he likes the office.

Low Blow

Of course, the question of Dempsey's left to the body had to come in for severe scrutiny and, in truth, it was low enough to deserve inquiry. It landed at or under the belt; not over it, in any case. But the writer is not particularly concerned with the punch in question. You can't foul a man with a punch on the jaw, and it was such a punch that finished Sharkey.

Further, there was no claim of foul in Sharkey's corner and the referee calmly went on with the tuneless ten, apparently serene in the belief that everything was as it should have been.

Anyhow post mortems of that kind never won a fight. Hit them over the fence and, if the umpire says fair, it is so ordered even if you gather about until daylight and weep until your vests are sodden.

No, this fight is dead; long live the next one. And live long, it will.

Next in Chicago

Dempsey and Tunney are set now to repeat their rampage of the ring, only this time they will play Chicago just by way of diversion and for good measure.

No battleship no smoke up is needed. Dempsey is the greatest man before the public today. He is the darling of the galleries again, a man whom they trusted and whom they trusted not in vain.

Not many champions shorn of their titles have come back to such an impressive gesture as Dempsey made last night. Willard did it against Lloyd Johnson and then folded up against Louie Firpo. This may or may not be prophetic but

FIRST RINGSIDE PICTURES OF BIG BOUT BY HERALD'S SPECIAL SPORT SERVICE

THE FINISH—Two striking photos of the knockout in the Dempsey-Sharkey heavyweight bout at New York, these. The one at the left was "shot" an instant after Dempsey landed the deciding blow. Sharkey is on his knees, sinking to the floor, where a moment afterward he lay prostrate, face down. Referee O'Sullivan is holding Dempsey back. Then came the picture at the right—Dempsey helping carry the helpless Sharkey from the ring.

WHAT FIGHTERS SAID

New York, July 22.—Jack Sharkey said: "Dempsey won that fight by hitting me a foul blow. While I was protesting, he clipped me on the chin and put me down. I was sure they would give me the fight and I will never get over the surprise I felt when they gave it to Dempsey."

Jack Dempsey said: "It was a fair blow so far as I remember. It started and landed fair. While Sharkey was kicking to the referee I quit, but when the referee said to continue the fight, I hooked a short one to the liver and clipped one to the chin and Sharkey went down for the count. Sharkey is a great fighter and a game fellow, but I was absolutely certain I would win."

don't mind saying that I shudder to think what Tunney will do to the gasping, spavined Dempsey of the first six rounds last night.

But, then I picked Sharkey to win in ten rounds, so it is probable that no one cares particularly how much or how violently I may shudder in the future.

However, as I saw it, Dempsey kept charging in with the old aggressiveness and played to the body as viciously as of yore. Except for his painful lack of speed and stamina, he fought a typical Dempsey fight. It merely was unfortunate that Sharkey didn't get around to doing the same for himself.

OUR SOLDIER BOYS LIKE SHAM BATTLE

Only Rate Good Eats Better Says Correspondent and He Ought to Know.

By Staff Correspondent Camp Trumbull, Niantic, July 22.—Judging from the eagerness with which the men of the 169th Infantry, C. N. G., jump into the thick of the fray in the sham battles, there is nothing the soldiers like better on their military program—unless it's their grub. And even that is forgotten when the men are ordered to advance and later to "charge." There was further evidenced yesterday morning when two separate battles took place a mile or so from camp. Both Manchester units were under fire.

Yesterday's engagements showed a vast improvement over those gone by. The officers handled their troops far more efficiently and the men conducted themselves much better than the day before when the greater part of both battalions were annihilated. The main difficulty, however, in these sham battles seems to be that of stressing upon the men the importance of keeping under cover. Time and time again, they will hurry through open territory that is subjected to not only rifle fire but also machine gun fire.

One of the U. S. Army officers here who acted as an umpire in an engagement the other day made a frank but true statement when discussing the battle with the officers at the close of the engagements. He said that at one time it was the custom in the Russian Army to make every tenth cartridge a load-sham bullet, the result being that the men kept strictly under cover when making an attack, that is, when possible.

The battles yesterday morning took place around the Old Stone Church cemetery in East Lyme. In fact, part of the first engagement which brought together the Third and First Battalions under Majors Nolan and Morrison respectively, actually took place in the cemetery. Many of the men lay behind tombstones in the defense army. A machine gun nest was noticed in a sunken grave behind one large tombstone. A pile of hay which had been cut recently in the graveyard served to conceal the nest. The cemetery furnished a sort of a gruesome aspect to the scene. Many of the graves were those of gallant men who in 1776 gave their lives that this country should be free.

The engagement lasted nearly an hour chiefly due to the cautiousness with which the attacking party advanced. The defense position was situated on a rough hilly territory, and according to army officers, could never be taken in actual warfare by a force of equal strength. And that was the decision the umpire gave in the first engagement. No sooner had the battle ceased, than orders were issued for the First Battalion to eat their noonday lunch and move on to the scene of its bivouacs at Rogers Lake.

The Third Battalion was ordered to move back toward camp but hadn't progressed far before the fire again broke the silence. The outposts of the Second Battalion under Major Scarborough had bumped into the returning troops and had opened fire. The result was that the attacking party was again taken prisoner. However, the main body of troops was well handled by Major Scarborough with the result that about half an hour later it executed a surprise attack on the Third Battalion's right flank that brought the victory despite a somewhat delayed attack. The G boys were in the midst of the firing.

Further proof as to the excitement which arises in these sham battles was given when two or three fist fights broke out between men of the rival armies. The trouble occurred when the men were cut off from their own troops but refused to be taken prisoners. In each case the participants were quickly separated. One group of men in the excitement charged the enemy with fixed bayonets but Col. Pettey intervened in order that there might be no possibility of injuries whatsoever. Even though the men belong to the same regiment, when they enter into combat, some of the most quick tempered often lost control of themselves when they come face to face with the "enemy" and precaution has to be taken against any possible mishaps.

At the conclusion of the second engagement which was about 12:30, the Third Battalion marched back to camp but the Second continued on its way to Fred Stone's spacious ranch some six miles away. The men halted long enough to eat their lunch and then continued. The two bivouac battalions established a strong outpost soon after making camp as a safeguard against any surprise attack but this did not materialize so after spending a night of well-earned rest in their pup-tents, the men marched back to camp this morning, tired but in fine spirits for they realized a good dinner awaited them.

Late this afternoon the regiment marched in review, its last of the 1927 annual encampment here. Tomorrow morning will come the final formal inspection and then the

MISSIONARY FUNDS FALL OFF HEAVILY; WORK HANDICAPPED

London.—So serious is the financial position of several of the old English and Foreign missionary societies that it is stated that several of them may have to close down. The London Missionary Society, one of the oldest and largest, has an accumulated deficit for the last two years of $295,000, and the Board have decided that unless an immediate increase of $125,000 in income can be obtained this year the society will be compelled to close down.

Other societies involved are the Baptist Missionary Society, which closes the year with a deficit of $175,000; the Church Missionary Society, whose deficit last year was $62,000; the Church of Scotland, with an accumulated deficit of $135,000 and four other societies with a combined deficit of $170,000.

TEXAS PAGEANT TO CELEBRATE LA SALLE VISIT

First White Colony In State To Honor Founder This Year.

Bayside Beach, Texas.—Texas' first annual historical pageant and festival commemorating the early exploits in this state of Robert La Salle, early French explorer, will be held this fall on the site of the first white colony established in Texas by the intrepid Frenchman in 1684.

The chief feature of the fête is to be an industrial review, similar to San Francisco's Portola parades in which the landing of the daring navigator and his little group of brave colonists will be depicted. Other phases in the march of Texas history, particularly in its relation to the Matagorda Bay region, will be portrayed in the proper continuity; including the rise and fall of old Indianola, vanished port of Matagorda, where once flourished a thriving commerce with New Orleans, and with the pioneer Texas towns that sprung up about the early Spanish missions of the southwest.

Review Early Days The pageant also will review the ox-cart freighting between Indianola and San Antonio, in the early part of the eighteenth century; skirmishes with the Indians and the Mexicans; the dawn of the cattle-raising era during which early sailing vessels and the first steamboats were laden with beef for distant lands; the agricultural era, witnessing the ascendancy of King Cotton, and finally the rebirth of the Texas gulf coast as a new playground and resort section, with modern boardwalks, bathing beauty parades, the fashionable casino and the invasion of the pleasure-hunting horde.

Rich in history and tradition, the west coast of Matagorda Bay provides a wealth of subject matter for the pageant. Besides the ruins of La Salle's early colony, a year after the founding of which he was slain by a jealous follower, there remain the ruins of the first Lutheran church established in Texas and the foundations of the first military fort established in the southwest by the United States government.

Historic Parade Across this ground, also trekked the early German colonists whose descendants comprise the greater part of the population of a dozen south Texas communities. Improperly favored these immigrants landed at old Indianola and resolutely set out afoot to find the land of promise. Some perished, but others established great landed estates from which posterity has reaped a rich legacy.

A touch of romance will be supplied by the appearance in the historical procession of Jean La Fitte, early buccaneer who harassed the commerce of gulf waters in the days when Spanish galleons plied their courses to New Orleans, Galveston and Indianola. Routed from his stronghold on Galveston Island by the U. S. Navy, the picturesque La Fitte and his numerous crew of fugitives from justice, swarmed into the peaceful Matagorda Bay and here established a new haven of refuge. The usual crop of tales of buried treasure has sprung up around the La Fitte tradition but thus far no chests of gold or jewels have been unearthed. But this phase supplies an enchanting flavor to the pageant and will not be neglected.

SALVATION ARMY'S PICNIC TOMORROW

The annual picnic of the Salvation Army Sunday school children takes place tomorrow. The outing is to be held at Columbia Lake. Three large New England busses will take the children to the lake and it is expected that the number going in the morning will be about one hundred and twenty-five. There will also be a large number of autos, which will bring a number of the older folks in the afternoon. Altogether it is expected that there will be close on two hundred taking part.

Preparations have been made for a big time, and to give the children an enjoyable day. There will be baseball, running games and other contests, while many will take advantage of the fine fresh water bathing. In the evening there will be music by the band. The children bring their own lunches, and the Sunday school furnishes hot drinks at dinner and supper time. Each child should bring along a cup to use for the hot drinks. To make the races more interesting, good prizes will be given to the winners. The busses will leave the citadel at 9 a. m. and return about 6:30 or 7 o'clock in the evening. Those who are members of either the senior or junior bands, should bring along their horns.

KEITH'S WORKERS WON'T EAT AGAIN FOR A WEEK

Wotta Feed These Furniture Jugglers Put In!—Hold Outing at Rocky Point.

The employees of the G. E. Keith Furniture company sojourned at Rocky Point, R. I., on their annual outing in keeping with the spirit of Merchant's Day. This is the third successive season that they have spent at this popular resort and in the opinion of all that were present, the festivities of yesterday were the best ever. They started out promptly at seven-thirty in six automobiles with only one absentee from the force which was caused by illness in the family and it was greatly regretted that he had to be left behind.

Owing to the knowledge of the leading car, good time was made, and no mishaps recorded and the party arrived at their destination in good season. The weather while somewhat threatening in the early morning, caused a few of those who were unaccustomed to being up at that time of day to be fearful lest the weather was to spoil their pleasure, but the sun broke through the clouds and perfect weather was assured. A very carefully prepared program had been laid out by the committee appointed for the purpose, and the opening event which was a baseball game, went through on schedule time. This baseball game between the sales force and the shipping room, was really the star sporting event of the occasion, and proved conclusively by the final score which was sworn to by a notary as being 16 to 9 in favor of the sales force that the old timers certainly can come back. The shipping force was a comparatively youthful team, and did not lack for enthusiasm and knowledge of the game. Their principal difficulty lay in the fact that they could not solve the pitching of their opponents and failed in several very notable occasions in their fielding ability. They were very adept at running bases, the only trouble being they could not get on the bases an "Imperial Palace" all their own. The game was a considerable talent which in the past had proved itself on the baseball field, and this with their batting record was too much for the opposing team as shown by the score.

Following the baseball game, was a very spirited game of volleyball, engaged in by those who felt the need of more exercise; the final score was unannounced. Dinner hour was set for one-thirty sharp, and it is needless to say that there were no absentees when that hour arrived. A special full course shore dinner for which this resort is well noted, was provided by the management, and a table reserved sufficiently large to accommodate the entire company was provided. From the clam chowder to the desert there was nothing missing and the quantities for each course were most generous. By the looks on the face of the management, it was quite evident that he felt that no profit had been made. Their capacity for punishment of a meal of sea food is beyond description. Just to give you an idea of what was required to feed this party, the writer asked the chef to give him some figures and the following are what was supplied for the party of twenty: three gallons of clam chowder, four bushels steamed clams, five pounds country sausage, seven dozen clam fritters, fifteen pounds sword fish, thirty-seven lobsters, thirteen water melons, three pounds pudding. He lost track of the olives and pickles, the amount could not be computed. There was not much activity immediately following the dinner, but later in the afternoon, all of the midway attractions were generously patronized, and the bowling alley came in for its full share of attention. No scores, however, are obtainable.

The party left for home about five o'clock and evidently arrived safely as they all reported for duty this morning, and aside from a few stiff joints and the loss of athletic prestige are all apparently once more in good spirits and ready to meet their efforts to the more serious things of life.

N. E. CHURCH SCHOOL IS CONCLUDED TODAY

The north end vacation church school ended its regular sessions and first season at noon today. The closing exercises which will be typical of the work carried on will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 and all parents and friends and others interested are cordially invited.

Another attraction will be the display of handicraft, including articles made by the woodwork, basketry and sewing classes for the last three weeks. A representative of the Junior Achievement Bureau will be present to judge the gifts which the children have been making for their mothers or other members of their families, also toys, many of which will be sent to the Children's Tuberculosis hospital at Niantic.

The little children of the primary department have made scrap books for the same institution. Workings on gifts for others serves to inculcate the principles of unselfishness in the children and to awaken sympathy and love for those less fortunate.

GIVES INFORMATION ON AUTO LIGHTING

Lighting equipment for motor vehicles and its proper use in Connecticut provide subjects for many questions regularly asked the state motor vehicle department and to give complete information considerable space has been devoted to "equipment and accessories" in the June department bulletin.

"All cars, except those with special permit, must be equipped with headlight devices on the approved list," the bulletin says. "Twenty-one candle power is the maximum for any electric lamp or bulb in such devices."

The use of accessory lighting appliances, both in combination with approved devices is discouraged, because it is believed that there are enough efficient approved devices to meet all needs, if they are properly used. The present attitude of the department, however, is that accessory devices may be used by motorists upon their own responsibility, provided they do not conflict with the legal requirements.

"Connecticut has no approved list of tail and signal lights," the bulletin continues "but any such light which complies with the Massachusetts requirements will be satisfactory here. It is required that the lower portion of the plates shall be at least fourteen inches from the ground."

JAPAN'S "48 DOLLS" TO HAVE PALACE

Tokio.—The 48 dolls, representing the state of the United States, which were sent to Japan as messengers of friendship from school children of America, are to live in an "Imperial Palace" all their own. The palace is to be especially designed and built under orders from the Empress of Japan.

The problem of housing the dolls was perplexing authorities of the Department of Education, due to the fact that the department still is housed in temporary buildings erected after the earthquake of 1923. When the Empress heard of the difficulty, however, she proposed to have a special palace built for them.

It is planned to erect a wooden building, modelled along the lines of the Imperial Palace at Tokio, built and furnished entirely in Japanese style. In this palace the 48 dolls will be housed, together with Japanese host-dolls which will be provided by the Empress. The palace will be provided with all the toys and playthings which make children happy.

When one is informed that these winged insects, for which no name has yet been found, show jaguars in the Amazon jungles such a nasty time that Mr. Jaguar prefers suicide in the river to their attack, a good idea of what is in store for the tsetse fly is obtained.

CROWD HEARS FIGHT AT HERALD OFFICE

Big Throng Jams Bissell Street As Dempsey-Sharkey Bout Comes Over.

More than 500 people listened to the returns of the Sharkey-Dempsey fight last night in front of the Herald office on Bissell street. The crowd began to gather about 8:30 and by the time the first announcements were made Bissell street had been kept solidly with fight fans.

First the sidewalk was choked up and soon after that the roadway was a solid mass of people. The parking space next to the Kacey hall was full of automobiles and those in the cars enjoyed ringside seats. One man sat on the roof of his truck, on the level with the Herald loud speaker and had the best time of them all.

It seemed to be the idea of many of the fans that the nearer they were to the loud speaker the better they would get the returns. This was proved to be a fallacy, for the boys in the rear ranks across the street heard every word much more clearly than did those close to the horn.

The inevitable children were there in large numbers. A crowd of them surged around the horn table and kept their places all evening. Whether they were interested in the fight or not could not be told by the expression on their faces. They seemed as excited as wooden blocks. When the fight was over they lingered a while to see if there was something else going on and then went home.

Dempsey Crowd
It was a Dempsey crowd through. There were only three Sharkey men to be identified and if there were any others who favored the Lithuanian, they did not make their preference known. The Dempsey men did all the shouting and when the Sharkey supporters acclaimed some feat of their hero they were told to shut up and to stay shut up.

The cheering when Dempsey landed telling blows was so loud as to drown out the voice of Announcer McNamee, who was doing the broadcasting. In contrast to this din was the dead silence when it was announced that Sharkey had staggered the former champion with lefts and rights to the head.

When it was announced, in the seventh round that Sharkey had fallen to his face and was being counted out, a new note came into the roaring. As the count neared the fatal ten the tumult grew and when the announcer cried "out" the crowd went crazy. Hats went into the air, backs were slapped and voices cracked with shouting. Those who had won money went out to collect their bets. Some who hadn't bet were sorry. Some who did were sorer. Little groups lingered here and there to discuss the fight. They knew plenty about it, for the reception on the radio at The Herald office was nearly perfect.

The outfit, a Fada 8-tube neotrodyne, was installed through the courtesy of Barstow's radio shop and was operated all evening by John Barstow, proprietor. Connected to a Magnavox loaned by Campbell Council of the K. of C., the machine brought every word of the announcer clearly to the crowd. Once in a while however, the roars of the crowd at the Yankee stadium made the voice of the announcer hard to distinguish.

RADIO 'UNPREPAREDNESS' DEVELOPED BY A SCRAP

Merchants Day Found Many Fight Fans Hustling For Repairs.

It seemed yesterday that almost every radio in town was out of order. John F. Barstow of Barstow's Radio shop, through whom The Herald was enabled to give the returns of the Sharkey-Dempsey fight last night, was in great demand all day but practically none of those who sought him found him.

At the Bissell street branch office of The Herald inquires for Mr. Barstow came in from early morning until early evening it was Merchants' Day, however, and Mr. Barstow had closed up his shop for the day and had gone fishing. Other radio shops were closed and those who wanted service on their sets had either to do it themselves or go without.

At 8 o'clock Mr. Barstow came to the Herald office to install the radio set with which the returns were to be given and within 15 minutes had sold a number of radio tubes to people who wished to get their sets in working order before the fight.

The idea seems to be that people aren't using their radio sets in the summer so much and that most of those who wanted service yesterday, on account of the fight, had turned on their machines for the first time since warm weather set in, to discover that they were not working properly.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) 'Twas queer to see the Tinies stare and watch marshmallows blown in air. The husky man was very kind and did a lot of tricks. He'd blow them big and blow them small and very quickly showed them all the way to make the candy land on funny little sticks. "Oh, my," said Clowny, "that looks sweet. I'd sure like one of those to eat." The old Marshmallow Man replied, "Just help yourself, my son. Don't eat them, though, while they are hot. You'd burn yourself, as like as not. It doesn't take them very long to cool when they are done. The Tinies then each took their turn, first making sure they didn't burn. The fluffy candy tasted great. Of course 'twas cooked just right. Wee Clowny shortly got his fill and then gave all the rest a thrill because he'd messed the candy and it made his face all white. And then the big Marshmallow Man announced a very thoughtful

SENSE and NONSENSE

SO THIS IS CALIFORNIA! There are twenty-six ways of pronouncing Los Angeles, all wrong. The state grew so fast that they had to divide it into two parts called Northern California and Southern California. And they had to put two deserts and a mountain range in between them to keep them from fighting. The celestial-named city was made the capital of the southern, and the saintly named town to the north the capital of the northern end of the state. In '55 a law was passed forbidding earthquakes inside the city limits. There are more beautiful women in Los Angeles than in any other city on earth. But they all come from somewhere else. Some men grow up to a job, and some just swell above the neck. Woman is taking man's place everywhere, even in the barber shops.

An Irishman was once asked to define a water pipe. "Shure, an' it's a hole filled with water, with a piece of iron around it." "Banks with notes to collect should obtain a receipt of the automobile dealers who sell cars on installments." "Ha, the same old gas," said the villain as he stuffed the red bandanna down the hero's throat. Many a perfectly good husband has been drowned in three months of Campbell's soup. Russian dancing, as far as we are able to judge from our knowledge of vaudeville, consists of folding one's arms in front of one and running while sitting down. Our local undertaker has been making a handsome profit until his untimely death last week. It is said that he went into the hole on this affair.

THE GREAT MIDDLE CLASS If flowers, my dear, are poetry, And vegetables prose, Then what, will you be telling me, Are fruits, do you suppose? The right man can make a good job out of any job. Blessings are usually in disguise, but curses don't ever seem to feel the need of a disguise. OUR PURPOSE "The wisest men that you ever knew Have never dreamed it treason To rest a bit, and jest a bit, And balance up their reason; To laugh a bit, and chaff a bit, And joke a bit in season." "Didn't I see you going down the street the other day with an apple in your hand?" "Quite so, old chap. I was going to call on the doctor's wife." It is sad to see the little calves in green pastures and think how soon they will be chicken salad. Unless you're ashamed of yourself now and then you're not honest.

SEEKS TO BE FIRST MAIL AIRMAN HERE

Carl Neilson of Manchester Hopes to Enter Service; Second Local Aviator.

Manchester will have its first representative in the United States Air Mail service if Carl Neilson, 22, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chris Neilson of Park street, is accepted by the government. In the event that he is accepted he will probably start on the New York to Chicago run as a pilot on January 1.

Young Neilson has been a regular student at the civilian airport at Brainard Field for the past two years and has about completed the necessary number of flying hours to obtain a license as a pilot. He has not yet made his application for a license, it was said in Hartford yesterday.

Will Be Second Aviator
If he enters the service he will be the second Manchester man to become an aviator. The first was Charles Hall, who came here from England before the United States entered the war, and went back to become an officer in the Royal Flying Corps.

Lieutenant Hall, a brother of Leonard Hall, a popular Manchester athlete, returned to Manchester after the war, having engaged in a number of battles with German airmen in France. Neilson has had instructions in flying at least once a week for many years and is intensely interested in aviation. Members of his family say that he has not made his plans known to them but he himself said last night that he hoped to "make" the air mail service if possible.

BALL GAME FEATURE OF WATKINS OUTING
So Called "Hartford" Team Beats "Manchester"—Osano Prepares the Dinner.
Sunburns and sore arms are the only noticeable effects today of the outing held by Watkins Brothers at Lake Pocotopaug, East Hampton yesterday. A perfect day helped to make the outing one of the best ever enjoyed in the many years this store has been going to East Hampton for these much anticipated events. The casualties were all due to the annual baseball game which each year is the leading event of the outing, and this year proved equally interesting. The Hartford store finds itself no longer capable of placing a representative baseball team up against the strong organization of the South Manchester store so it was necessary to choose up sides. In fact only two players were seen on the field yesterday from the Hartford store. The game was filled with those amusing errors and blunders that come from not playing regularly. However, it was highly contested, the side calling themselves the Manchester store having everything their own way until the last few innings when the "Hartford store" came through with a rally that gave them the game. Followig is the summary:

Hartford . . . 103 133 2—13
Manchester . . . 491 211 0—12
Following the baseball game, bathing and boating were enjoyed until the arrival of Chef Osano and by the time dinner was ready to be served everyone was ready to eat. Clam chowder, spring chicken, potatoes, fresh peas, tomatoes, lettuce, celery, pickles, bread, coffee and watermelon was the order of the big feast.
Volley ball, bathing, boating, horse shoe pitching, and the usual trun around the lake in motor boats, rounded out a perfect day. Moving pictures were taken of interesting happenings by Norman Thrall of the Hartford store so that the outing will be permanently recorded for the years to come.

The party broke up about seven o'clock after a lunch of hot-dogs, also prepared by the chef, the employees returning in time to be able to get the fight returns broadcast last night.
I can recall at least a half dozen games that Detroit would have won this year had George Daus been on the bench waiting for the word to do the hero stuff.
