JAPS ATTEMPT TO PREVENT A PARLEY CRASH

Delegates Call on Gibson to Make Appeal—London Press Continues to Blame United States.

Geneva, Aug. 2.—Japan's delegates to the Tri-Partite Naval Disarmament conference are making a final desperate effort to save the conference from complete failure.

Viscount Admiral Saito and other Japanese delegates called upon Hugh Gibson, chief American delegate, late last night and pressed the importance of not permitting the conference to adjourn on Thursday without some fruit.

Jap's Proposal

The Japanese suggest that an agreement to prevent a race in armaments between now and 1931 will do much to save the situation. They suggest that the British, American and Japanese delegates may be able to reach an agreement concerning building programs between now and 1931 which the Washington treaty will come up for renewal.

LONDON'S VIEW

London, Aug. 2.—Postponement of the plenipotentiary conference until Thursday has led to speculation here concerning the possibility of some sort of an agreement among the participating powers, although the general feeling today was that the delegates would merely draft a formula leaving the way open for further discussions.

The Geneva correspondent of the London Times says that the concluding stage of the conference is invested with "fascinating and tasteful interest" because the method in which the end was encountered is "to serve the purposes of domestic politics in the United States."

This correspondent declares that the political clause introduced by the Americans "officially opens the door to the worst abuses of naval competition," and that the United States does not want limitation except "to the level of American preponderance at the cheap price of the draft of the political clause was described as an effort to obscure the issues upon which the conference breaks up."

RUMANIA CALLING UP TROOPS; FEARS TROUBLE

If Prince Carol Returns He Has Many Friends Among Military Cliques.

Berlin, Aug. 2.—The Rumanian government is calling up nearly 500,000 reserves as a precaution against possible uprisings following a recent statement made in Paris by Prince Carol. It was reported here today.

Border guards have been strengthened, the reports state.

Official reasons for the military movements are given as "maneuvers."

Premier Bratianu is reported to be prepared to keep Prince Carol out of Rumania at all costs, even though the public is apathetic regarding the prince's return.

Prince Carol has many followers among the military cliques, some of whom hope for promotions through his restoration. Reservists might be able to offset the pro-Carol influence in the regular army.

Many observers believe that Prince Carol might endanger his life by returning to Rumania, where he has some bitter enemies.

TO ATTEMPT FLIGHT TO TURKEY'S CAPITAL

Capt. Fonck and American Flyer to Start for Constantinople in One Hop.

New York, Aug. 2.—Aviation's longest non-stop flight will be tried soon by Captain Rene Fonck, who is attempting to span the Atlantic ocean by airplane met with disaster at the take-off here last September.

The French war ace, with Naval Lieutenant L. W. Curtin, will start from Roosevelt Field for Constantinople within a few weeks. It was learned today.

Instead of the 3,600 mile flight he attempted last year, Fonck will try to go about 5,100 miles.

He and the young war officer, who saved his life by jumping from the burning Sikorsky plane last fall, will make the flight in another Sikorsky plane. It is nearing completion in the Sikorsky factory College Point. Only the two will go.

NEW MEXICAN POST

Mexico City, Aug. 2.—It was reported today that a measure would be put before the next session of Congress to create a new Cabinet post—Secretary of Labor. It is believed that the creation of this post would lessen the conflicts between labor and capital.

TO PEDAL WAY ACROSS OCEAN

Two English Lads to Start Monday for New York in Strange Craft.

Dover, Eng., Aug. 2.—Edward Tierney of Saltford, and Dick Hayman of Swinton, hope to make a bid for world fame by pedaling their way across the Atlantic ocean to New York.

The two men have constructed what is probably the strangest craft ever seen on the seas. It resembles a baby submarine. It is twelve feet long, five feet deep and three feet across the beams. It weighs eight tons and draws two feet of water. It is entered through a small conning tower. Its locomotion power is supplied either by pedals or a windmill arrangement.

When the seas are heavy the craft can be made watertight and the men inside can roll about as long as their supply of air holds out.

The two peddlers of the high seas plan to push their way out of Dover harbor next Monday and expect to pass the Statue of Liberty before mid-September.

'WE'VE MADE UP' AIMEE'S MESSAGE

Evangelist and Her Mother Kiss as Though They Never Had Been Trouble Between Them.

Los Angeles, Calif., Aug. 2.—"Aimee and Ma' have made up."

That was the reassuring message circulated today among members of Aimee Semple McPherson's million-dollar Angelus Temple regarding the bitter quarrel of the evangelist and her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy.

A conference of attorneys, representing both founders of the great religious enterprise, reached a tentative settlement of their dispute. Fundamental conditions of the agreement, it is understood, are that "Mother" Kennedy, who her daughter ousted as active manager of the Temple several days ago, will surrender her management of church finances for half of the $100,000 personal property held jointly by her and "Sister."

She will continue as an adviser and trustee. The attorney's announcement stated, but Mrs. McPherson will take over actual control.

The division of property will not affect Angelus Temple and its biblical Bible school, it was announced.

A amicable settlement of the bitter quarrel came at a time when mother and daughter seemed estranged. Aimee had hinted broadly her desire for the reconciliation. Mrs. Kennedy, before the kidnapping story of her daughter. Earlier in the dispute, Mrs. Kennedy declared she had "never got the truth" of her daughter's abduction story, however, in the pen of "hallelujahs" that greeted announcement of the reconciliation. Mother and daughter kissed as affectionately as though there had never been a rift in their relations.

LEVINE TO RETURN BY PLANE, AUG. 15

To Use Same Machine and Same Motor He Used in Going to Germany.

Nottingham, Eng., Aug. 2.—Charles A. Levine flew with Charles B. Chamberlin in the Fokker monoplane Columbia from New York to Germany, announced here today that he expects to hop off on the return trans-Atlantic flight on or about August 15 in the same plane. The Columbia is now in Le Bourget, near Paris, where the flight will start. Levine denied that he had broken with Maurice Drouhin, the French aviator whom he picked to pilot the Columbia on the return flight.

It is understood that the same motor will be used that brought the Columbia to Europe, although a new Wright whirlwind motor was shipped from New York to be installed in the plane if needed. Experts who looked over the Wright whirlwind motor which brought the Columbia across the Atlantic, said it was in excellent condition for the return flight after a little overhauling.

MARINE DISASTER

Tokyo, Aug. 2.—With twenty seamen and officers dead, eighteen missing and thirty-seven injured seriously, the explosion of deep sea bombs on the mine-laying Tokiwa developed today into one of the greatest disasters in Japanese naval history.

The crippled warship will dock tonight, returning from annual naval maneuvers in Buaya channel.

DESERTED BY ACCOMPLICES, HE CONFESSES

James Beadle Turns State's Evidence in Sensational Southern Murder Case—Defense Shocked by Move.

Franklin, La., Aug. 2.—Failure of Dr. Thomas Dreher and Mrs. Ada Leboeuf to furnish counsel for James Beadle, the third of the trio on trial here charged with the murder of the woman's husband, caused him to turn state's evidence, his daughter, Irene Beadle, declared today.

"When they were first arrested," Irene said, "we thought that Dr. Dreher would hire counsel to protect them all. The doctor assured us that everybody would have a fair trial."

"We thought that right up until Sunday afternoon when they had a conference with their three lawyers, but after that conference papa saw they were going to try to make him the goat and try to pin everything on him."

Loses Confidence

"All Sunday night it got more and more clear to him that they were trying to do him, so early Monday he asked for Sheriff Charles Peot and then requested that he get a special lawyer, as he had lost confidence in the others."

Beadle's dramatic move caused consternation in the defense camp and caused no little excitement among the spectators in the courtroom.

The confessions, Sheriff Peot claims to have from Mrs. Leboeuf and Dr. Dreher, will be admitted into evidence, Judge Elmon having ruled they are admissible.

Both Beadle and the doctor are endeavoring to lay the actual shooting at the door of each other.

Defense counsel, having accepted the admissibility of Mrs. Leboeuf's confessions, it is probable that this will be the main point of error to be contested in an appeal if the case is found guilty of the alleged murder.

ROYAL PARTY OFF FOR PRINCE'S RANCH

Wales to Stop at Ottawa and Then Seek Seclusion—Crowds Gather Today to Say Farewell.

Montreal, Aug. 2.—The magnificently appointed royal train bearing the Prince of Wales, his brother, Prince George, Premier Stanley Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin, left here this morning for Ottawa, the capital city of the Dominion.

A reception by the mayor and government officials awaits the royal party upon its arrival in Ottawa at noon.

Along the railroad, flag-docked stations were crowded with villagers who came from far and near to cheer the prince and the premier as they sped through.

From Ottawa, the royal train proceeded west via Toronto and the Prince of Wales' ranch in the river, Alberta. Meanwhile Premier Baldwin will take a short rest at Banff, in the Rockies, before returning to England.

The royal train, eleven cars in length, is the scene of luxury with fixtures of inlaid mahogany and a well-stocked library. European chefs of international fame prepare the royal meals. Radio music entertains the party en route.

The train left Windsor station soon after breakfast for the 100 mile run to Ottawa following another public acclamation in the streets of Montreal for the royal party. Up until midnight the crowds packed the sidewalk in front of the residence of Edward W. Beatty, K. C. president of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, where the prince and Premier Baldwin were entertained at dinner.

In the early morning all approaches to the Ritz hotel were jammed twenty deep with snoring hoppers, struggling matrons, cheerless abels and conservative businessmen, craning their necks for a peep at Britain's next king, at his handsome younger brother and at the man who piloted Britain's ship of state through the general strike.

COUNTRESS TO WED

New York, Aug. 2.—Dispatches reporting the forthcoming marriage of the Countess Salm, former Milcent Rogers, and Arturo Rames, wealthy young Argentinian, attracted considerable attention here today in society circles.

First news of a possible marriage between the countess and the Argentinian was carried in International News Service dispatches from Paris on May 17.

COOLIDGE NOT TO RUN IN 1928, HE ANNOUNCES

CALVIN COOLIDGE

Rapid City, S. D., Aug. 2.—Calvin Coolidge, in terse and dramatic fashion, today renounced all claim to the Republican nomination for president in 1928.

In one line sentence, he made the following announcement to a group of startled newspapermen:

"I do not choose to run for President in Nineteen-Twenty-eight."

There was no amplification of the little writer announcement. Each reporter received a copy on a slim sheet of flimsy paper and Mr. Coolidge waved them out of his office signifying the audience was ended.

There had been no advance information that the President intended at noon, to make the most momentous announcement of his political life. At the regular Tuesday conference, held at nine o'clock in the morning, he had added at the end:

"If you gentlemen will return at noon, I shall have a further announcement to make."

The speculation generally, backed up semi-officially had been that the statement would have to do with the impending failure of the naval conference at Geneva.

Promptly at twelve o'clock approximately twenty newspapermen were ushered into Mr. Coolidge's office. He stood waiting beside his desk until all were in and his secretary, Everett Sanders had closed and barred the door.

"Is everyone here?" he asked. As replies were given in the affirmative, he said:

"I have here a little announcement. Will you gentlemen file past desk in a single file to receive it?"

A GOAT, A GARDEN, SUIT FOR $25,000

Waterbury, Conn., Aug. 2.—A goat, a garden patch and the zealous owners of each, figured here today in a $25,000 damage suit.

Thomas Cotter owned a goat. Arthur Greenwood owns a garden. Cotter charges Greenwood assaulted him because the goat had laid waste to a considerable section of the garden. In the encounter Cotter claims he lost the sight of an eye and asks $25,000 therefore.

Walks To N. Y. To See Ruth — It Rained

New York, Aug. 2.—Rain gave Clarence Wilson, of Milford, Conn., the chance to realize his heart's wish—to see Babe Ruth in action. But rain also robbed the youthful worshiper of the king of clout of the spectacle he walked weary miles to see. With his feet swollen in two normal sizes, and a week in the King's county hospital in prospect, Clarence today told doctors where he had tramped from his home in Milford, to see Ruth hit one out.

His family didn't have the money to spare to pay his carfare to New York and to buy a ticket to the Yankee Stadium. So Clarence earned it, escorting townsmen home from the Milford railroad station under an umbrella. He hiked all the way to New York. Then the game was rained out.

Hertzick and footsore, Clarence left the stadium with his raincheck and started the long hike to Milford. He lost his way and wandered over to Brooklyn. Then he collapsed. Police took the weary lad to the hospital.

WORLD FACING SHORTAGE OF RUBBER—O'NEIL

President of Big Tire Co. Sails for Europe to Study Situation—Edison's Plan Won't Work, He Says.

New York, Aug. 2.—The world will face an acute shortage of crude rubber within three years despite the discovery of bug grafting and new planting, it was predicted by William O'Neil, president of the General Tire & Rubber Co., of Akron, Ohio, before he sailed for Europe on the liner Aquitania to study the rubber situation abroad, chiefly in England.

O'Neil based his prediction of a shortage on an observation that consumption is increasing much more rapidly than production of crude rubber. Because of the natural increase in the demand, manufacturers are agreed on this point, differing only as to when a shortage will be felt, he stated, this year has witnessed again in the industry of approximately 15 per cent over 1926, he said, pointing out that the trade as a whole is using more crude rubber.

Edison Can't Help

O'Neil said that rubber manufacturers do not expect Thomas A. Edison's experiments to have an appreciable effect on the situation.

"I don't say that he can't get a plant that will produce rubber," he explained, "but when Edison attacks a farm product where labor is paid only 20 cents a day, he isn't following the lines laid down by most manufacturers. They go after the high cost lines."

O'Neil pointed out that labor costs in the rubber producing centers average about six cents a pound, based on a daily wage of twenty cents. In America, he said, where farm labor receives approximately $5 a day, discovery of a plant that would grow here and yield even three times as much rubber as the best producers in the Straits settlements, would make production costs prohibitive.

Despite the belief that there will be a rubber shortage in three years, O'Neil sees no immediate prospect for increased tire prices. However, he does think that tire prices will be higher next year, as he expects the price of crude rubber to advance.

The tire business as a whole, he said, is good and manufacturers are making money. Last year, he said, they took a loss because of the rapid decline in the price of crude rubber.

GOTTSCHALK CASE OVER UNTIL AUG-16

Attorney Corbett Asks Reduction of Bond—Refused—Hearing Today.

Henry W. Gottschalk, through his attorney, Frederick J. Corbett of Hartford, pleaded not guilty to the charge of forgery in the Manchester police court this morning. Attorney Corbett waived the reading of the complaint. He asked for a reduction of the bond required for his client's appearance in court of $5000.

Gottschalk was arrested yesterday afternoon for forging the name of Louis H. Palmer to a Heath and Company check for $78. Gottschalk has been employed until a few weeks ago as manager of the Heath nurseries here, a branch of the C. Burr Company. It is alleged that Gottschalk had been placed in a straight jacket and later was raving in a padded cell.

The condition of Sacco did not appear to alarm J. Joseph J. McLaughlin, the prison doctor. Friends and sympathizers of Sacco and Vanzetti denied that the way was being paved for an examination of the two men by alienists. It found the men would be sent to the Bridgewater Insane hospital rather than the electric chair if Gov. Fuller in his review decided against them.

Finishing Review

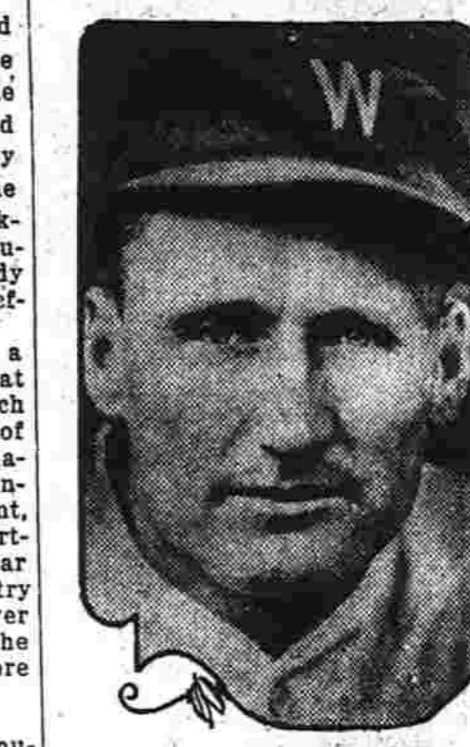

Today the governor was rounding out his review. He worked far into Sunday night, was busy writing and interviewing witnesses for twelve hours yesterday and was at the task again at a local hotel early this morning, later going to the State House. A few more witnesses remained to be questioned.

The decision of the chief executive was the most carefully guarded state secret on record in Massachusetts. The condition of Alvan T. Fuller, Jr., the governor's ten-year-old son, who was stricken with appendicitis and was operated on at a local hospital, improved and the chief executive held to his tentative date of Wednesday night as the time for the announcement of his momentous decision.

GOVERNOR APPEALS TO COLLEAGUES TO HELP END THE STRIKE

Nation's Fans Hail Johnson

WALTER JOHNSON

Washington, Aug. 2.—Twenty years ago today a gangling, tow-headed youth who could throw a baseball harder than anybody else in Welter, Idaho, made his bow to Big League baseball.

"Who's Johnson?" queried the 300 fans, seated in American League Park on August 2, 1907, when the announcer bawled that Johnson was going to pitch for Washington against Detroit.

There will be no need for any one of the thousands of fans in the Stadium this afternoon to ask "Who's Johnson?" The whole baseball world has known who Walter Johnson is almost since that day twenty years ago when he made his inauspicious entry into big time. Today he will pitch against Detroit, just as he did 20 years ago this date, and a thousand of fans will be pulling for the great veteran.

Walter Johnson Day

It is "Walter Johnson Day" and he will be acclaimed as no baseball player has ever been acclaimed in the national capital.

First off, a diamond-studded medal is to be awarded to him commemorating his nearly a quarter of a century in the league, the presentation will be made at the home plate just before the game is called by Secretary of State Frank B. Kellogg. Prior to that he will be the honor guest at the dedication of a granite plaque standing at the club entrance, on which is depicted for the fans of future years, his amazing 20-year record. And it is likely that when the veteran departs for home after the game, it will take an automobile to carry the gifts a loyal fandom will heap upon him.

Nine times in the twenty years that "The Big Snake" has pitched for Washington, he has worked in between 40 and 50 games a season. His record shows he has won 414 games in his big league career, and lost 273. He has faced 5,887 batsmen and struck out 3,482. His best year was in 1913, when he won 36 games and lost 7.

UNDERWORLD TIP CATCHES SLAYER

New York Sleuths Arrest Chicago Man Who Confesses He Murdered His Wife

New York, Aug. 2.—Working on an underworld tip, detectives arrested today Howard West, 32, cousin of the notorious Chicago bandit, Martin Durkin, on charges of having shot and killed his wife. West confessed, police said, admitting he had killed his wife after he heard that Durkin had been paying attention to her.

Durkin is now serving a fifty year sentence for the murder of a prohibition agent in Chicago.

West came to New York soon after the murder of his wife, according to police. He was arrested in a room in 60 New Chambers street, where he had been stopping.

West became enraged over the conduct and fired five shots into her body, police said he told them.

NEW DRY OFFICIALS

Washington, Aug. 2.—Final reorganization of the Federal Prohibition Bureau is announced today by Seymour Lowman, new dry chief. Appointments were made as follows:

H. H. White, who has been acting as assistant commissioner, is named general supervisor of field officers.

Al O'Connell, deputy commissioner, is appointed assistant commissioner to succeed White.

James B. Jones, special assistant commissioner, is named deputy commissioner to succeed O'Connell.

Ohio's Chief Executive Wires to Governors of Indiana and Illinois for Co-operation—Wants to Break Deadlock Between Miners and Owners.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 2.—Gov. Donahay asked today Governors Ed Jackson, of Indiana, and Len Small, of Illinois to join with him in an effort to have union miners and operators of the central competitive field resume negotiations of the Miami wage conference.

Donahay, it is said in the governor's office does not contemplate interference in the economic disputes between operators and miners, but is seeking the co-operation of Jackson and Small to reopen the negotiations which brought about the cessation of union mine operations in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois, when workers and their employers failed to reach a wage agreement.

Coal Situation

"The coal situation in Ohio," Donahay telegraphed the governors of Indiana and Illinois, "is reaching the point where public welfare demands the breaking of the deadlock between the United Mine Workers of America and the operators. I am told that the same conditions prevail in Indiana and Illinois.

"Will you join me in requesting the reconvening of the interstate conference on miners and operators?"

Please wire whether you are willing to join in a concerted effort on the part of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois to have the controversy reopened in the hope of a settlement on an economic basis."

Willing to Talk

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 2.—"We are willing to enter into a conference at any time, or any place, in an effort to bring to an end the present tie-up of the mining industry."

This was the statement of Harry Fishwick, president of the Illinois District, United Mine Workers of America, when shown an International News Service dispatch from Columbus, Ohio, today stating that Gov. Vic Donahay was planning to call a conference with the governors of Indiana and Illinois seeking to have union miners and operators resume negotiations for a settlement.

HOLD OIL PROMOTER IN STOCK SWINDLES

Los Angeles Police Send Word to Arrest Axel Swanson in New York.

New York, Aug. 2.—Axel Swanson, 35, of New York, secretary and treasurer of the Lewis Oil Company is being held today in police headquarters pending his extradition to Los Angeles in connection with the alleged $75,000 Indian Oil Corporation stock fraud in that city.

Swanson was arrested on an order telegraphed from Los Angeles by District Attorney Asa Keyes, in charge of the investigation, which already has reported in indictment of fifty-five bankers, brokers, motion picture producers and others.

Inspector Coughlin said Keyes had telegraphed that Swanson had been indicted on a charge of grand larceny.

CHINESE TROOPS HOLD STANDARD OIL RESIDENCE

Garrison Now at Wuhu Composed of 60,000 Men. Adm. Williams Reports.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Chinese troops have occupied the Standard Oil Company's residence at Wuhu, Adm. C. S. Williams, commander of the Asiatic fleet, reported to the Navy Department today.

Efforts are being made to have it evacuated, he added.

With the arrival of 5,000 troops and two planes, the garrison at Wuhu now totals 60,000 men, Williams said.

Williams indicated that renewal of warfare between the Moderate and Extreme Nationalists is imminent. He reported that troops of the 4th and 11th armies, are moving from Canton toward Nanchang.

Another report in that representatives of the two factions were holding a conference at Kuling.

FULLER IS CALLING COUNCIL TOGETHER

Boston, Mass., Aug. 2.—Despite official denial, it was learned from a reliable source this afternoon that every effort, by mail and telephone, was being made to round up a quorum of the governor's council tomorrow, the date set for the announcement of Gov. Alvan T. Fuller's decision of his review of the case of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, convicted of a double slaying.

State House observers took this to mean that the council was to be asked to act and the most persistent report was that the governor had decided on a long respite or until the legislature comes in next January in order to give that body an opportunity to draft a law giving the State Supreme Court power to look into evidence as well as points in law.

When the case was before the Supreme Court of error of law could be argued and a new trial was denied. Unlike supreme courts of many other states, the highest tribunal in the Bay State has power only to examine alleged errors of law, cannot consider evidence.

SHIP TO SHORE PLAN

Washington, Aug. 2.—Clarence Chamberlin's feat in hopping of the Levittan at sea and landing safely with mail, brings nearer to consummation plans of the Post Office Department, which have been evolving for some time for the establishment of a regular ship-to-shore and shore-to-ship service for Trans-Atlantic mail. Second Assistant Postmaster General Glover announced today.

One of the plans under consideration was that each Atlantic liner an auxiliary plane. The plane would remain on shore until the vessel was from 24 to 48 hours at sea and then catch it with last minute mail and passengers. The ship would then carry the plane to within an equal distance from the European shore, when the plane would hop off with mail and passengers and beat the vessel to port.

STRIKE HANDS

The severest critics of President Coolidge, even political enemies who begrudge him credit for any disinterested, statesmanlike motives...

It does not follow, however, that the method of projecting the conference was necessarily as wise as its conception was lofty.

As was to have been expected, the Geneva conference, from the moment of its beginning, degenerated into a battle of strategists...

In view of this a strikingly novel proposition is being advanced in certain quarters. It is proposed that President Coolidge invite into personal conference with himself the actual head of the British government...

The Geneva conference has been prolific of technical development. It has talked, gun-wise and ship-wise, far over the heads of the people supposed to be represented.

If the President and the Premier will get together for a couple of hours and talk common sense it is entirely possible that they can settle this apparently baffling question...

RADIO OF THE BRAIN?

Here is a story which, if it proves out, will start rattling around the world some ideas which, though not new to a handful of theorists...

More than two years ago Col. F. H. Fawcett, British explorer, left the outpost of civilization in Brazil on a long and hazardous expedition...

through this medium a number of times since his disappearance into the jungles; on several occasions receiving the same message through persons living in widely separated parts of the world...

Mrs. Fawcett would appear to have told her story at the right time. It should be easy to check the physical inaccessibility of the explorers at the moment of her making it.

A few years ago Mrs. Fawcett's statement would have been flatly jeered at in every quarter. But now we have radio. The results of unseen and impalpable agitations are common knowledge.

Governor Fuller has announced that his decision in the Sacco-Vanzetti case will be given out Wednesday night.

TIME OF DAY

What that decision will be there is, of course, no way of knowing. The impression among newspaper men on the spot seems to be that it will be interesting to speculate as to whether or not a faint clue to his determination may be gleaned from the time of day set for the release of the decision.

The Sacco-Vanzetti case holds a tremendous amount of interest all over the country and all over the civilized world.

Behavior of troops under fire, which military theorists point out, varies with training and equipment. Seasoned soldiers can stand heavy losses before they will break.

Behavior of troops under fire, which military theorists point out, varies with training and equipment. Seasoned soldiers can stand heavy losses before they will break.

Judging from this position it might seem as if possibly the time of day announced for the decision may indicate that the finding is to be for the condemned men.

SUPPRESSION

Since the success of the Anti-Saloon League, a buckwheat organization having its origin in a little Ohio village, in hanging prohibition about the necks of the American people...

having anti-evolution legislation passed in every state in the Union. The idea is absolutely grotesque when it is directed to any commonwealth less benighted than Tennessee...

Still we cannot worry, even if we try, about the Connecticut Legislature's liability to adopt a statute proclaiming the world to be flat and providing imprisonment for anybody who has the temerity to doubt that the first woman was literally made out of a rib taken from the first man.

FARM RELIEF

It is probably impossible for the mind of man to conceive a federal farm relief measure of any sort whatever that would not prove, upon adoption, to be loaded with dynamite.

Only a transcendent wisdom can provide ways and means for giving the farmer higher prices without raising the cost of living in the industrial sections.

ARTIFICIAL

A rather silly discussion is being waged in the Paris newspapers concerning the respective attractiveness of English, American and French women.

And all the while everybody on earth knows that there is much difference between any two of a dozen American girls, in attractiveness or in any other way.

WHAT CAN I DO FOR YOU? HOOVER ASKS THE WORLD

Editor's Note: This is the first of two stories about Herbert Hoover, secretary of commerce and director of Mississippi flood relief. The information in today's story and the story that will appear later were obtained from Mr. Hoover on his most recent visit to New Orleans on flood work.

New Orleans, La.—When you go in to see Herbert Hoover, you are apt to find him stuffing shredded tomatoes into the bowl of a plain brass pipe.

"Well, sir, what can I do for you?" is a customary greeting.

That remark epitomizes the life of Herbert Hoover, the man whose word will bear most weight in any conference seeking to devise ways to prevent future flood disasters in the Mississippi basin, and preventing Mississippi floods is Hoover's big job these days.

Ever since Hoover stepped out of Leland Stanford University in 1895, he has been asking the world practically if not actually, "Well, sir, what can I do for you?"

Hoover does not talk about himself. He has almost a hundred degrees and medals which he keeps at his home in California. Hoover never mentions them.

He is a big man, big in mind and action, big in bulk. Two hundred and eight pounds, six feet and an inch. His strides, the long, effortless, distance-eating strides of the engineer, going some place and getting there on time.

His eyes are steady and blue gray. His hair is beginning to turn gray. His jaw is the sort you associate with quick thinking and swift decision.

Hoover's Famous Suits

The famous double-breasted dark blue suit, not much different from other double-breasted, dark blue suits which he has worn in years before, is known the world over. His hat is usually a light gray with black band. His necktie is rich, but rich in subdued color—his only hobby of dress.

These are the externals of this man who has tackled some of the biggest jobs in the world—chairman of the American relief committee in London at the outbreak of the war; chairman of the commission for the relief of Belgium; U. S. food administrator; member of the U. S. war trade council; chairman of the U. S. grain corporation; member of the international food council, the supreme economic council, the European coal council; director of various economic measures in Europe after the armistice and organizer of the machinery by which food supplies were sent to stricken Poland, Serbia, Czechoslovakia, Germany, Austria, Rumania, and the rest of the Baltic states—and so on and so on and so on, every job requiring abilities of the highest order.

As Secretary of Commerce, Hoover has brought to that post his remarkable abilities, and has put American foreign trade almost at the top of the world. While doing

CHILDREN'S SOCIETY MAKES ITS REPORT

Appeals for help for 500 children who had met some sort of misfortune have been answered by the Connecticut Children's Aid Society during the first six months of 1927, according to a statement recently given out by Philip H. Gale, president of the Society. This number is in addition to 221 who were in the care of the Society at the beginning of the year, making a total of 721 children to whom some form of help has been given.

The girls and boys represented in this total of 721 came from all parts of Connecticut with Hartford and Fairfield Counties leading in the number of applications for help.

Among the reasons for which the children have been brought to the care of the Society have been the death of one or both parents, unfit surroundings, illness, cruelty and poverty. Some of the children, who range in age from six months to fifteen years, need only temporary care while perhaps a mother is ill in hospital; for others, permanent plans for care and education must be made.

One outstandingly interesting story is that of ten-year-old John who was "keeping house" for his father in a one-room tenement. John's father was a night watchman who slept all day and left his small boy alone each night. Naturally John's evenings were spent on the streets because, as he expressed it, his home was "a lonesome habitant." John's nocturnal habits landed him in the hands of the probation officer, the Children's Aid Society was asked to help out. John is now using his excess energy on the big farm which has become his foster home and which is near enough to the city for his father to visit him every Sunday. His father is delighted by the excellent care John is getting and gladly pays his son's board from his weekly wages.

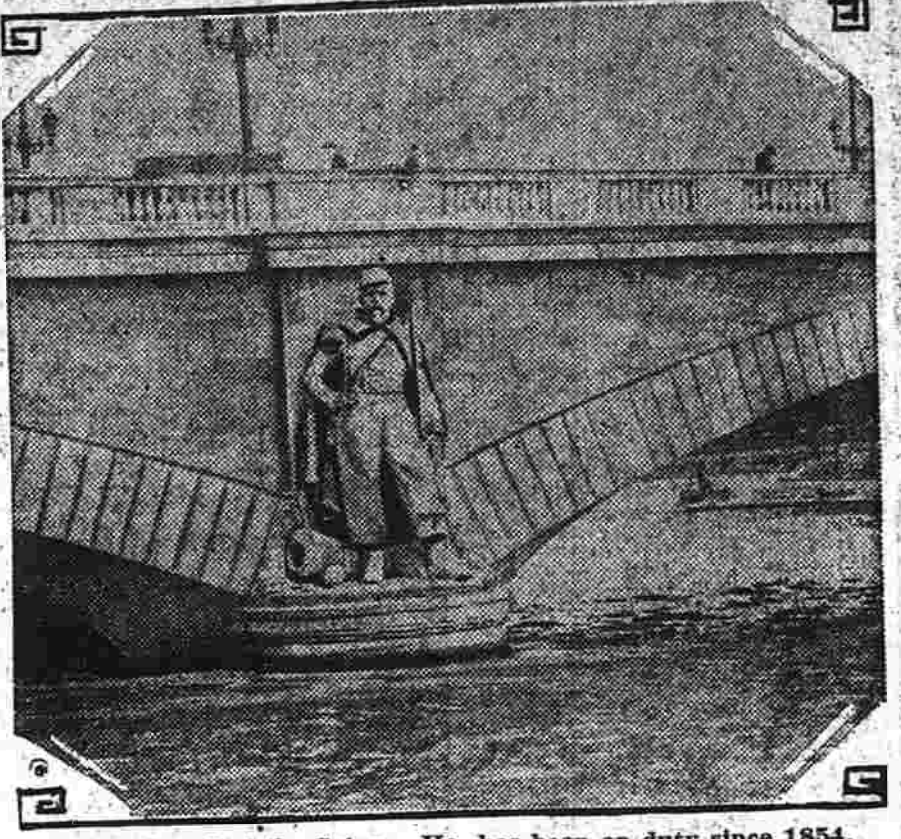

Foster home care has been given to 226 children since January 1, 1927. Preventive work, as it is called, figures incorporated in the report has increased considerably during the first half of this year. Advice and assistance were given to 495 boys and girls during this period when no actual financial expenditure was needed as against $100,000 for service for 551 of a year ago.

Outstanding in this latest report is the number of self-supporting boys and girls who are living in homes where they are earning their way by household or farm labor. Four of these were under the protection and careful supervision of the Society on the first of July 1927.

Ralph Barrow, executive secretary of the Connecticut Children's Aid Society, states that the Society feels strongly the need for an effort with regard to the older boys and girls who may be self-supporting, but who are still in the care of the Society, to give them a sense of their responsibility as self-respecting citizens. Mr. Barrow wishes that the Society is making every effort to make and abide by their decisions.

The geographical distribution of the calls for help is as follows: Hartford County: Hartford 229, East Hartford 2, Wethersfield 4, Bristol 5, Manchester 6, Buckland 1, New Britain 12, Bloomfield 5, Thompsonville 1, Glastonbury 1, Plainville 12, Southington 4, South Manchester 1, Windsor 2, Forestville 3, Hazardville 5, Eastford 1, Canaan 1, Sharon 2, Washington 3, Kent 1, Torrington 3, Milton 1, Northfield 1, Bantam 1, Tolland County: Andover 1, Windham County: Willmantle 3, Killingly 4, Woodstock 2, New Haven County: Devon 1, New Britain 19, Wallingford 3, Middlesex County: Middletown 12, Cromwell 1, East Hampton 1, New London County: New London 17, Norwich

Ex-Buck PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE

The Guard of the Seine. He has been on duty since 1854.

This is Chapter 97 of the series of articles by a correspondent for The Herald who is revisiting France as an advance guard for the "Second A. E. F."

CHAPTER XVII.

Standing at the main pier of the Pont d'Alma in Paris, where he stares rather fiercely at the passers on the boats that ply the Seine, is a statue of one of Napoleon's guards—a Zouave with a mission in life that is mighty peculiar for one with all his pretentious whiskers and his dignified demeanor, he is just a gauge. For when the water gets up to his shoe tops, as it does sometimes during the spring tides, the skippers of the tugs and barges lay to, because they know there's not room enough to pass under the arches. And if it should ever get up to his epaulet again, as it did in 1910, all of Paris will interpret that situation as a reason for feeling to the hills.

From old residents along the banks of the Seine it was learned that this guard—"The Gauge of the Seine"—has been on duty ever since the Pont d'Alma was constructed, which was in 1854. Originally intended as a sort of a decoration, he quickly slid into the commonplace mission that he now follows. In spite of the ignominy, he has never given a sign that he was hurt. Mais, non! True to the traditions of the guards, he has accepted his fate, as he found it. He has stood there all these years, one hand on his hip and the other resting on his musket quite unconcerned. In fact, his attitude is a bit nonchalant. It would seem that with all his just cause for resentment, he remains oblivious to the odium of it all.

On authoritative information—this from the commissioner of streets and bridges—the Pont d'Alma will be reconstructed this year. The arches will be raised and the bridge will be widened. The time the American Legion arrives in September.

It is also understood—this is but a rumor—that the Zouave will also be given an opportunity to change his attitude. Not that he will register displeasures at the lowliness of his station in life! Mais, non! Just that he will shift his weight from his right leg to his left, and get himself into a comfortable position to notify the passing mariners of the heights of the flood waters of the Seine for the next few centuries or so.

START WORK ON NEW BUILDINGS AT DUKE SCHOOL

Forty New Structures to Cost $20,000,000 at Durham, N. C.

Raleigh, N. C.—The dream of James B. Duke, which gripped the imagination of the world through his endowment to Duke University three years ago, will soon be realized.

Over at Durham, the home of this southern seat of learning, the foundation is being laid for the starting of construction in September of the University's new buildings, representing an expenditure of $20,000,000.

This, in itself, it was estimated will be one of the biggest construction programs ever undertaken in the South. The mammoth project will require several years for completion, and no part of the new plant is expected to be in operation before the fall of 1929.

The site of the new campus has been the scene of a beehive of activity for the past few weeks, where the entire surface of a mile-long plateau is being leveled for the construction of the plant.

The estimated group of 40 buildings will run North and South, extending over the top of the mile-long plateau from tip to tip.

On the Northernmost tip, nestled among pines and somewhat separated from the main group, will be the new Duke Medical School, which is estimated to cost $4,000,000 alone, and which will be operated under a separate endowment of $10,000,000.

The medical school, it was said, will be among the first to be completed, and is expected to begin functioning under the direction of Dean Wilbur Cornell Davidson, M. D., now of Johns Hopkins, by September, 1929, according to present plans.

Looking a little to the South from the towering chapel spire, visible for 20 miles around, one will see the schools of engineering, chemistry, religion, forestry, class room buildings, laboratories, the library and the administration buildings.

Big Athletic Bowl Further to the South will be the dormitory group of buildings, with a capacity of holding 3,000 students.

Southwest is the giant athletic bowl, easily accommodating 40,000 persons. Nearby adjacent to a state highway, will be parking space for thousands of automobiles.

Meanwhile, plans for construction go on under W. S. Lee, chief engineer for the Duke Endowment, President W. F. Few, of Duke University, and other school officials are concerned with the type of instruction, and the ideas that are to be contained in this gigantic Southern University.

Many special schools of graduate study are to be established in the next few years, and deans appointed for these. Departments will be strengthened and courses added.

And, one by one, eminent authorities in their field are being added to the Duke faculty.

BEACONS FOR OCEAN HOPS SEEN POSSIBLE

Washington.—This summer's onrush of non-stop flights over the Atlantic has revived the idea of establishing radio beacons across the ocean to make such air travel safe.

So great a radio authority as Dr. J. H. Dellinger, head of the radio laboratory of the U. S. Bureau of Standards, foresees this possibility.

Such a proposal, says Dellinger, is entirely feasible and while these beacon stations will not be established in mid-ocean this year or next, it is not unlikely that they will be constructed within ten years.

Such a proposal, says Dellinger, is entirely feasible and while these beacon stations will not be established in mid-ocean this year or next, it is not unlikely that they will be constructed within ten years.

Cost of putting these up, however, would be high. They would have to be anchored 500 to 1,000 miles apart, to radiate double beam signals for passing aircraft, or a powerful station radiating 100,000 watts of energy, would have to be built on either side of the Atlantic.

Trans-Atlantic airplanes taking advantage of these directive radio beacons would have to be equipped with a radio receiving set operated by one dial, a visual indicating device for denoting when the aviator is traveling in a zone of safety as outlined by the double-beam radio waves, and a means of shielding the airplane engine ignition system so as to prevent interference with radio reception.

At present, most of the experimental work of the radio laboratory of the Bureau of Standards centers about the receiving apparatus for use on airplanes. Experimentally, there has been developed at College Park, Maryland, a simple, one-dial receiving outfit which is practically automatic in operation, and vari-colored lights flashed on the instrument board of the flying craft indicate to the pilot when he is on or off the signal zone or path of safety.

LOWER APPLE YIELD REPORTED THIS YEAR

Columbus, O.—That apple a day may be harder to buy this year than last.

Prospects for the country's apple crop are 25 per cent less favorable now than they were for the 1926 crop in June of last year. The crop promises less than the average crop of the past ten years, it is reported by C. R. Arnold, rural economics extension specialist at the Ohio State University on the basis of recently nation-wide estimates of apples at this time last year were reported to promise 78 per cent of a normal crop.

This June indications are for 57 per cent of normal, according to the United States Department of Agriculture. Average for the past 10 years is 70 per cent of normal.

Only one leading apple state, Michigan, reports a crop likely to equal last year's.

New York and Washington, produce more than a fourth of the nation's apple crop, both report apple crop conditions as less promising than last year or the 10-year average. Washington, with a June 1 report last year of 82 per cent, this year reports apple crop prospects as 64 per cent of normal.

Washington's 10-year average on June 1 is 85 per cent normal.

New York, reporting 85 per cent on June 1 last year, this June reports 72 per cent of normal expected. New York's 10-year average is 78 per cent of normal.

SPEED LIMITS VARY ON EUROPE'S ROADS

London.—While England is considering either increasing the speed limit of auto traffic, or abolishing it altogether, traffic experts are looking over the wide range of speed regulations in various parts of Europe.

This runs the gamut from the low limit of three miles an hour in congested parts of Bulgaria to no limit at all in northern Ireland.

The average speed limit runs around 25 miles an hour in open country, but for city driving it ranges from four to 15 miles.

Traffic, however, especially in cities like Paris, Berlin, Vienna and Brussels, shows that the police officials are rather lax in enforcing the laws.

Finland has a limit of 28 miles an hour on the best roads by day, but at night this limit is cut down to 12-1.2 miles an hour.

Bulgaria has gone even farther. Drivers are forbidden to smoke or speak while driving through towns or other congested districts where the speed limit is from three to eight and a half miles an hour.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (46) The Bering Tragedy

UNITED STATES TIRES ARE GOOD TIRES

THERE are a dozen places in building a tire where a little rubber could be saved. An ounce here, another ounce there—but adding up to thousands of pounds in a year's production.

But the car owner can never tell when this skimping is going to cause him trouble. When he pays his money for a tire he wants to be sure it will stand unusual road conditions, and that the strain of sudden braking will not uncover a weak spot. He wants to be sure he will get the full mileage to which he is entitled.

U. S. Royal Cords are built with the idea that every man who buys them should get all the mileage that can possibly be built into a tire.

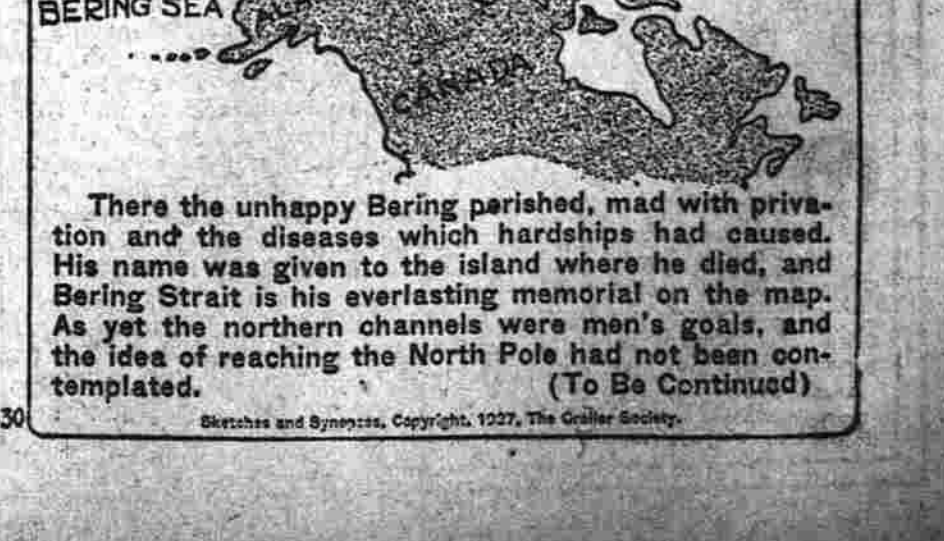

The policy of "Plenty of Rubber" governs every operation in building U. S. Royal Cords. It puts plenty of rubber not only outside, where you can see it—but inside, too, where it does not show but where the strain comes.

"Plenty of Rubber" proves its value in the final test—the service of U. S. Royal Cords on the wheels of your car.

Billie Dove Aspires To Lillian Russell's Beauty Crown

Billie Dove (left), rated as today's typical American beauty, and Lillian Russell, who twenty years ago was called the original American beauty.

By DAN THOMAS

Hollywood, Calif.—Is Billie Dove to succeed Lillian Russell as the American Beauty?

In the days when Lillian Russell was queen, small waists, large busts and great masses of hair were the vogue.

Billie Dove has run the same gamut of hard luck that so many other really good stars have been forced to traverse during the year.

It is interesting to compare Billie Dove with Lillian Russell, who was acclaimed "the original American beauty" some twenty years ago.

BEGIN HERE TODAY
VERA CAMERON, assistant to JERRY MACKLYN, advertising manager for the Peach Blossom Cosmetics Co. falls suddenly in love with a man whom she hears called SCHUYLER. She overcomes him and he will be at Lake Minnetonka in June. Jerry Macklyn has just previously proposed to Vera that he transform her from the old-fashioned type which she is into a beauty, with the aid of Peach Blossom cosmetics, and that he be allowed to photograph her in every stage of the change.

Vera has indignantly refused, but when she sees Schuyler, her need to be beautiful so she can go to Lake Minnetonka in June amounts everlastingly else and she goes back and agrees to Jerry's plan.

Vera's emerald-green eyes remind Jerry of an unaccepted Sunday evening picture. He is in his desk and he asks KITTY PROCTOR, the professional beauty specialist to use that picture as a model.

During the transformation, Vera lives with Kitty Proctor and when Vera and Jerry, after the experiment is completed, go to Vera's apartment which she shares with her aunt, FLOA CARSWORTHY, Flora is astonished at Vera's beauty. Vera tells them of her trip to Lake Minnetonka in June. Flora later agrees to teach Vera or Vee-Vee, when she tells her all she knows about charm and appeal. When Vera asks Jerry one evening to teach her how to be "fatal to men," he demurs with an eloquent flourish. Finally, however, he agrees to "teach" Vera for three weeks prior to her trip to Minnetonka, and in the meantime he makes it a point to contact with Jerry.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER X

IT WAS Saturday, June 18, and half past twelve o'clock. Vera Cameron was regarding with humorous dismay the array of packages which almost covered the flat top of her desk when Rosemary Fitch entered, carrying a large parcel.

"Hello, Vee-Vee! It won't be long now! Aren't you thrilled to tears at the thought of being away from work until after the Fourth? Here's a vacation gift from Mr. Canfield, and my dear, it's the first time, in the memory of the oldest inhabitant, that Stephen M. Canfield ever gave a girl a box of candy on her departure for a vacation. Five pounds! I'm staggering under the load!"

"Isn't he a dear?" Vee-Vee laughed. "Everyone has been marvelous to me. Just look! French perfume, a complete kit of Peach Blossom Cosmetics with my initials in gold, from Mr. Benham, you know; five boxes of candy, three boxes of flowers, half a dozen of the new books—oh, I never dreamed people could be so sweet, Rosemary."

"People?" Rosemary laughed, a little maliciously. "You mean men, don't you? How many of these marvelous presents are from girls? Not one, I'll bet my week's salary."

"You win!" Vee-Vee laughed.

"I, for one, am glad you're going away, even if it is for only two weeks," Rosemary confessed. "And being glad still that the old man is being dragged off to Europe by his daughters. I suppose Jerry—Mr. Macklyn—has told you that I'm to be his secretary while you're away. You can stay as long as you like, Vee-Vee. Don't hurry back on my account!"

Vera was startled by the pang of jealousy that contracted her heart. "He's a decent sort to work for, Rosemary, but I'm afraid you'll find it's a pretty heavy hot weather job. I never saw such a dead for work."

"You seem to have stood up under it pretty well," Rosemary

"Jerry, don't humiliate me like this!"

Fitch retorted. "As I've told you a dozen times, I never saw anything like your transformation, Vee-Vee. I'll never forget that first day that you came down, with your hair bobbed and in that gorgeous ensemble suit. Not a soul in the organization recognized you. Remember how Ruth Hall thought you were Mr. Macklyn's new secretary and told you all about Vera Cameron, the girl who used to work for him? I thought I'd die, it was so funny!"

"I remember," Vee-Vee acknowledged, her mouth tightening. "It was—very funny. Will you thank Mr. Canfield for me, Rosemary? I'm afraid I won't have time to write him a note. I've got a thousand things to do before my train leaves tonight," she hinted, praying that jealous little Rosemary would leave.

"Is Jerry—Mr. Macklyn—in?" Rosemary dropped her voice to a whisper as she glanced toward the closed door of Jerry's private office.

"No, he's at the printer's. But I'm expecting him back by one o'clock. He wanted to see me before I left," Vee-Vee answered, busying herself at her desk.

"Where are you going on your vacation, Vee-Vee?" Rosemary asked.

"That's a secret," Vee-Vee smiled.

"The girls say you've been spending all your noon hours shopping, and that Jerry has given you three half days off, in addition to Saturday afternoons," Rosemary persisted. "You must be going to Newport or to Hollywood to get into the movies. I wouldn't blame you a bit. You're the most stunning thing I ever saw, with that gorgeous copper-colored hair and those green eyes. Listen, Vee-Vee, will you tell me one thing? Are you engaged to Jerry Macklyn? All of us know he's wild about you and that he's been rushing you like mad. I saw you at Smallwood's and at the Manhattan Yacht Club with him—"

"I'm not engaged to Mr. Mack-lyn, Rosemary," Vee-Vee interrupted her rather sharply. "I have no strings on him at all. You can spend the entire two weeks I'm gone vamping him if you want to. And—good luck to you!"

"Oh, thanks, Vee-Vee! I think he's simply precious. Is he a good dancer?"

"Divine," Vee-Vee said curtly. "But he's a dictator. It's all I can do to take his letters when he's working at high tension. And he has a most annoying habit of doing most of his dictating around four o'clock, and expecting every letter to be written before his secretary leaves. I'm just warning you," she added casually, turning back to her desk so that Rosemary should not have a chance to fathom the expression in her green eyes.

"You can't scare me off," Rosemary laughed. "Goodbye, Vee-Vee, dear. Have a good time—but don't hurry back!"

When Rosemary had gone Vera Cameron began to open and close the drawers of her desk, her mind a chaos of emotions. An hour ago she had been so happy in the realization that the 18th of June had finally swooped. The goal for which she had striven for six mad, miracle-working weeks was just ahead. Her reservation had been made for a room and bath at the expensive, exclusive Minnetonka Hotel. Her railroad and Pullman tickets were snugly secured in her new lizard-skin handbag.

Well—she drew a deep, quivering breath that betrayed her panic—it was done now, for better or worse. She had just enough money left to pay for two weeks in the Minnetonka Hotel. She had been so frantically busy getting ready for her sortie into the world of idleness and fashion in search of the man she had fallen in love with, that she had not had time to be frightened before. Now that she was ready to go a black swarm of fears swooped to cause them, her squeezing at her heart, sending prickles of goose-flesh all over her body. What if "Schuyler" had changed his mind, was not at the Minnetonka after all? What a fool she would have made of herself! How Jerry Macklyn would laugh at her if she came back, penniless and dejected! And even if "Schuyler" was at Minnetonka, what right did she have to suppose, for one insane moment, that she could make him desire her above all other women—women of his own set, women of wealth, fashion and charm?

What a fool, what a fool she was! She beat her clenched hands against her desk.

"Hello, there! All set to go?"

Vee-Vee looked up, startled, into Jerry Macklyn's broadly smiling, ruddy face.

"Nearly ready," she replied, rising. "I'm glad you got back before I left. Rosemary Fitch was in—she brought me a five-pound box of candy from Mr. Canfield."

"Got the old man going too?" Jerry chuckled. "This vamping of yours is assuming the proportions of a scandal. I've been to the printer's—got proofs on those ads and the booklets. It looks great—better even than I'd hoped. Your photograph like a million dollars. Believe me, young woman, you're going to be famous from Portland to Portland when these ads of 'The Peach Blossom Girl' come out. Ziegfeld and the movie producers will be writing-us for your name and to offer you staggering contracts—here, look!"

Jerry spread a series of printer's proofs across the top of her desk. Two photographs stared up at her from each of the pages—a picture of a plump, dowdy, freckled girl, her eyes concealed by horn-rimmed spectacles, and, in amazing contrast, a picture of Vera Cameron after the miracle had been wrought—a breath-takingly beautiful girl.

Jerry's cheerful voice boomed on, ignoring her dismayed silence. "But her's a picture of the booklet that will be mailed to every woman in the social register, from New York to San Francisco, and distributed free by every retailer of Peach Blossom cosmetics. Wrote it myself, and it do say as 'schuyler' it's the proof," The 'Ugly Duckling: A Modern Fairy Story,' he quoted with relish. "Tells the whole story of how a homely, unattractive stenographer was turned into the prettiest girl in the United States—the Peach Blossom Girl herself." "That booklet alone will sell millions of dollars worth of Peach Blossom Cosmetics, or I'm a liar, or a fool that doesn't know the first principles of the advertising game."

Vera clenched her icy hands to keep them from resting upon the desk and leaning toward him. Then, made reckless by desperation, she took a quick step toward Jerry Macklyn, laid her hands on his shoulders, raised her pale face, with its tear-luminous green eyes and imploring mouth, and said:

"Please, Jerry, I couldn't bear it! Have my picture broadcast—to people to laugh at and joke about—oh, can't you see how it would humiliate me? I'd rather die, Jerry!"

Jerry Macklyn reached for her hands, held them in a grip that hurt her, but his face was grim and his blue eyes were suddenly like cold steel. "I'll tear up these ads—on one condition, Vera!"

Color flamed in her cheeks. She struggled to release her hands. "And that is?"

"That you give up your trip to Lake Minnetonka!"

(To Be Continued)

Will Vee-Vee recognize what is in Jerry Macklyn's mind, and give up her trip to Lake Minnetonka? Read the next chapter.

This And That In Feminine Lore

Mrs. Aida Pettjean, who always keeps right up to the minute in equipment for her beauty parlor, has a brand new automatic device for curling eyelashes—the latest beauty fad. For the present she will give a free demonstration of curled lashes with every French bleach pack, which is ideal for removing freckles and sunburn and toning up the facial muscles. Her ring is 1872.

The stockings in pink tones are no longer modish and the tan and golden shades are the last word in fashionable hosiery. At a recent Paris fashion show, out of the models wore hosiery of almost golden tones, with metal cloth sliders, a forerunner of the fall and winter styles.

New shoulder flowers are of felt in a variety of colors, each individual flower fitted out with stamens and standing out perkily from the dress.

Judging from the popularity of draped skirts this summer, it is predicted that the fall and winter costumes in the soft velvets, light weight satins and woens will be draped, that is, in many cases the fullness will be drawn up under one hip under a buckle or bow, a style popular a few years ago and always effective in fabrics that fall in graceful folds.

At the Old Wood Shop, Pitkin street may be found a number of interesting door knockers, reproductions of early colonial types, in brass, copper and iron, also small, room door knockers.

Casserole of Vegetables
Eight small onions, 2 cups green beans, 4 medium sized tomatoes, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 3 tablespoons buttered crumbs, 1 cup chopped cooked meat.

Choose tiny silver skinned onions. Peel and cook in boiling water until tender but not broken. Cook beans in boiling water to barely cover and water is cooked. Scald and peel tomatoes. Cut in slices and cook ten minutes. Rub through a coarse sieve to remove seeds. Melt butter, stir in flour and slowly add tomato puree, stirring constantly. Season with salt and pepper and add chopped meat. Arrange onions in well buttered baking dish and fill spaces between onions with beans. Pour over tomatoes and bake twenty-five minutes in a hot oven.

Peaches au gratin may be made from either canned or fresh peaches. If the fresh ones are used make one cup of syrup to take the place of the syrup from the can. Take six peaches, pare and remove stones and cut in halves. One cup rolled crumbs—corn flakes may be used—two tablespoons butter. Roll peaches in the crumbs, place on a baking sheet and dot with bits of butter. Bake in hot oven until the crumbs are browned and serve with a sauce made as follows: One tablespoon each butter and flour blended, 1 cup beef syrup, three tablespoons syrup from preserved ginger and three tablespoons chopped preserved ginger. The flour, butter and syrup should be brought to boiling before adding the ginger, syrup and chopped ginger.

Mrs. Halpe Davis Elkins, wife of Senator Stephen B. Elkins of Virginia, was the daughter of a United States Senator Henry Davis, and is the mother of one, Davis Elkins who was appointed to serve out his father's term of office at his death in 1911. He was again suggested for the senate while he was overseas in the war service and his mother, who always had a taste for politics, took over the direction of his campaign and he was elected. Mrs. Elkins is said to have given advice to all three, father, husband and son and is still as interested in political matters as she was 50 years ago, was back when "women's place was in the home" and "women's vote" was something to draw cartoons about.

One of my Easter plants last spring was a Chinese primrose of the usual variety. It came from the florist's shop early in April, filled with bluish pink flowers. I immediately placed it in a north living room window and there it has been ever since, continually covered with blossoms, and requiring no care except frequent watering for all primroses love plenty of moisture. The peculiar thing about it was that before one bunch of flowers faded another would shoot out until four and sometimes five little clusters had bloomed on the one stem. The green calyxes left by the successive blossoms were also very pretty and the plant has survived for almost four months, when all of a sudden the leaves turned yellow and the stems drooped. It is evidently tired with such continued effort in hot weather and regrettably I have put it aside, but when another Christmas or Easter comes around again I think I shall want to experiment with primroses instead of daffies or even Easter lilies.

Lemon Bread Pudding.
Six thin slices of stale bread, 1 cup milk, 4 tablespoons granulated sugar, 2 eggs, 1 lemon, 1-8 teaspoon salt, lemon filling.

Spread bread with lemon filling and arrange in a buttered 3-pint pudding mold. Beat eggs slightly, mixing in sugar and salt. Add milk and stir until sugar is dissolved. Add grated rind of lemon and pour over bread. Cover mold and place in a pan of hot water. Bake one hour in a moderate oven and serve warm.

To make the filling, combine grated rind and juice of 1 lemon with 4 tablespoons softened butter. Cook, stirring constantly, over a low fire for two minutes. Add 1 cup granulated sugar and 3 eggs slightly beaten. Cook, stirring, until mixture thickens. Cool and add three or four drops of vanilla. Spread on bread.

$24,000 Not Enough
If a wealthy husband accustoms his wife to luxuries, it is his duty to continue those same luxuries in the way of alimony, if he divorces her. This was very outspoken contention of a mid-west attorney for the wife of a wealthy man in a recent divorce suit. The girl earned $18 a week as a theater ticket office girl when he married her less than 10 years ago. Now she contends that she cannot live decently on the $24,000 income yearly from a trust fund settled upon her. One is inclined to scoff, of course, probably, but it's just as hard to wear $2 stockings when one has been used to $10 ones as to return to cotton hose when one has been used to $1.55 silks.

Foolish Ladies
I attended a hotel banquet not long ago. Fried chicken was the piece de resistance. It was served almost uncooked. Practically every man in the party sent his back to the kitchen, but practically every woman insisted that she "liked it rare like that," kept the plate, and went hungry. Maybe there's an answer there to the question why men get better service than women. They row if they don't. Women accept rather than complain.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

I wonder how many wagers have been made by Feminist America as to the probable duration of the Bud Stillman-Lena Wilson marriage. The odds, I gather, seem to run about fifty to one that the marriage will not last more than five years. I join that crowd, unless Pitt Potter Stillman calms down and forgets her major generalissimo role. She indicates all the makings of the cartoonist type or mother-in-law. I am convinced that it was her wedding and not Bud's that was so dramatic and different and picturesque, don't you know!

"Oh, Thank You!"
Lena, Mrs. Stillman has boasted, doesn't know the difference between $100 and $1,000,000, which makes one feel sorry for Bud when he gave her that million dollar wedding present. She probably showed no more enthusiasm than if handed a nickel. One would think, too, that a new husband would get little fun out of giving his lady love a platinum and diamond bracelet when she'd appreciate a $2.95 one just as much. A sense of values does count, Mama Pitt, to the contrary notwithstanding. Mama Pitt however, told me herself, when I interviewed her about her daughter-in-law, that Lena will get her ideas of values soon enough. "Did you ever know a man who knows he knows he doesn't know, to refuse milk for beer?" she asked me.

Try to match the natural flush of the face.
If your face is small and thin, rub a little rouge all over your cheeks and you will get an impression of a healthy, round contour.

If you have a big face or an exceptionally round one, put your rouge only on your cheek bones. Rub it lightly until the edges of the rouge spot blend into the color of the cheek. The best make-up gives the impression of a flush, not a definite rouge spot.

"Phillips Milk of Magnesia" Better than Soda

Instead of soda hereafter take a little "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" in water any time for indigestion or sour, acid, gassy stomach, and relief will come instantly.

For fifty years genuine "Phillips Milk of Magnesia" has been prescribed by physicians because it overcomes three times as much acid in the stomach as a saturated solution of bicarbonate of soda, leaving the stomach sweet and free from all gases. It neutralizes acid ferments in the bowels and gently urges the souring waste from the system without purging. Besides, it is more pleasant to take than soda. Insist upon "Phillips," the only drug store. "Milk of Magnesia" has been the U. S. Registered Trade Mark of The Charles H. Phillips Chemical Co. and its predecessor Charles H. Phillips since 1876.—Adv.

lar indoor and outdoor sport of the day, a thing that has come to pass perhaps, because the average American has too much money to spend. This wonder smote me as I attempted to buy a $1.25 cluster of yellow panicles for my beige crepe dress. The panicles looked very good to me, but the clerk insisted on showing me how really swell they would look if I combined them with apple blossoms or violets or some maiden hair fern or a rose or 'so, anything to multiply their value. One can't even ask for a bottle of perfume without being advised to "blend" two or three other bottles and make it cost more. No wonder a few other countries, where folks have a real appreciation of luxuries, rather hate us!

SPECIALIST TELLS HOW TO USE ROUGE

By Mme. Anne Gerarde
The best rouge is the safe variety. Dry rouge is harder to put on, never looks so natural, and comes off too easily. The ideal rouge is the same red as a drop of your blood.

Before applying rouge, put on the lightest possible coating of foundation cream. As make-up should be a work of art, apply delicately and always use too little water than too much.

Try to match the natural flush of the face.
If your face is small and thin, rub a little rouge all over your cheeks and you will get an impression of a healthy, round contour.

If you have a big face or an exceptionally round one, put your rouge only on your cheek bones. Rub it lightly until the edges of the rouge spot blend into the color of the cheek. The best make-up gives the impression of a flush, not a definite rouge spot.

Good Nature and Good Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
About three years ago experiments were begun in the Oklahoma agricultural experiment station in Stillwater, Okla., to find out whether there was a possibility of poisoning from zinc-lined containers.

There was no actual knowledge as to how much zinc was present in the tissues of animals and of plants used as foods, and a difference of opinion as to whether or not such zinc was poisonous. Since that time numerous investigators in different places have been studying the subject and reports are now available to indicate that an apprehension of harm from this cause is hardly warranted.

The feeding of animals with substances containing zinc is the chief method used for determining the possible deleterious effects. No noticeable harmful changes were noted, however, on the feeding of zinc. Through three generations of offspring their chemical tests did not reveal any accumulation of this matter in the organs when the animals when examined after death.

Butter milk normally contains a small amount of zinc, which amount increases after contact with zinc containers. The amount of zinc appears to vary according to the length of time the butter-milk is in the container, the amount of acidity of the butter-milk, and the newness of the zinc surface that is exposed to the action of the buttermilk. When material containing zinc in the dosage concerned was fed to animals, it did not seem to injure them in any appreciable way.

When zinc was added to the diets of the animals, either in the form of pure zinc or of zinc salts in amounts as large as are ever found in contaminated foods, it did not interfere with their growth, reproduction, or normal functions through three generations.

It was found that zinc is regularly present in the internal organs of the animals fed with ordinary foods, and that the amount present did not increase appreciably when the animals were fed with foods containing additional amounts of zinc. Apparently the zinc taken into the body is promptly excreted by the usual routes.

KEEP BABY PREFERENCES TO YOURSELF
By Olive Roberts Barton

Many an expectant mother spends sleepless nights because her husband has declared that no baby will be welcome in his house except a boy, or girl, as the case may be.

If the father of an unborn baby has a preference for a particular sex he should keep it to himself, or at least not let his wife know of it. It is a natural enough thing for a parent to hope that a child will be one sex or the other—mothers, too, in their secret hearts have a preference usually themselves—but if they realize that the father has his heart set on a son, or a daughter, it is likely to cause them endless and unnecessary anxiety and subsequent unhappiness.

A mother during the pre-natal period has not only the right to be happy, but her physical health at that time depends to a large extent on her peace of mind.

Not only her health, but the health of the child depends upon the mental condition of the mother before birth. Half of the babies who die during their first year, die as a result of conditions that existed before they were born.

But aside from the physiological aspect of the matter, it is a cruel thing and a silly thing for a husband to take the stand that he will be disappointed if the new baby is not a boy—or a girl. And then if his wishes are not fulfilled and take it out on the mother, and the child, too, for months and even years to come.

Thank heaven, such men are few. But they do exist.

But all men should be careful about expressing a preference, even lightly. Wives are likely to seize upon their words and brood over them for weeks. Things are likely to be exaggerated at this time, and there is enough to bear without the added worry of useless sentiment.

WEBB PUTS CUBS IN THE LEAD; GIANTS DEFEAT THE CARDS AGAIN

Rookie Outfielder Ties Score With Homer and Then Wins Game With a Single—How Others Fared.

Local Sport Chatter

By LES CONKLIN
New York, Aug. 2.—Mrs. Willie Wright's special twins are doing a special Charleston and novelty dance today in honor of Earl Webb, rookie outfielder, who beat the Phillies single-handed and lifted the Cubs into first place. After the Phils had taken the lead with a five-run rally in the eighth, Webb tied the score with his fourteenth homer of the season and then won the game with a single in the ninth, six to five.

Pardon us, East Gloucester! Yesterday's Herald said the Sons of Italy trimmed you 9 to 4 but the correct score, we have been informed, was 4 to 0 in your favor. The error was the result of mistaking a zero for a four in the box score which was submitted to us on two pages torn from an old scorebook and without a single note regarding the game attached. Hence, the result that gave the Manchester players more than one laugh last night. Moral: Do not turn in baseball box scores without some notes about the game are included.

It is understood that Chesny Brothers will play either the Manchester Green team or the Heights Thursday night. Incidentally, speaking about the team from the Green, Elmo Mantell reminds us that they didn't bother reporting the game they lost up in Andover a couple of weeks ago. How come, he wants to know.

The tennis tournament started at the East Side Playgrounds Monday afternoon resulted in O'Leary and Rossi defeating Bieber and Johnson, 6-4, 2-6, 6-0. Friday afternoon at 1:30, Richardson and Bennett will meet Saunders and Kovis.

The management in charge of staging the amateur boxing shows at Capitol Park would be glad to have some Manchester boys show their wares in Hartford some Monday night. Leo Cleary informs us. He could be glad to make arrangements for Pat McCavanaugh, Tommy Pagan, Al Dowd or any others who may wish to get on a card in there. His phone number is 1229.

The chances of the Community Club baseball team continuing the season appear exceedingly remote. Manager Wilfred Bulla is away for a two weeks' encampment with the cavalry at Natick and no one seems to take any interest in trying to push matters forward. It is about a month since the Community Club last appeared on the field.

The junior baseball league which "Dodger" Dowd has organized seems to be proving very popular among the youngsters. He has succeeded in getting the teams evenly balanced, which is usually a mighty hard job in itself. The league standing and scores speak for themselves.

It is expected that a team of swimmers from Globe Hollow will go to Capitol Park Sunday to meet a team coached by Howard Stepp, Markley, Warnock, Bissell, McKay and Addy will be on the local team, but there will be others.

The Manchester Evening Herald, Manchester, Conn., Gentlemen—

Perhaps you would like to know of the pleasing results I have received from the classified advertising that I have been running daily in the Herald.

Only yesterday I received two inquiries from Hartford as a result of an ad now running, offering a business for sale.

I think that direct inquiries from outside of Manchester in addition to the results secured in this city is ample evidence that advertising in the Herald Classified Columns gets results and does pay.

"PAWNEE BILL'S" NAME IS SAM PRESSBURGER

St. Louis Exposure Shows Necktie Game Run by One Karchmer of Shady Repute.

"Pawnee Bill," so-called blind necktie merchant of St. Louis, has the backing of Jacob Karchmer, shady ticket seller and financier, according to information received from a St. Louis friend of a Manchester man today.

It was with Pawnee Bill's neckties that Manchester was flooded some time ago and frequent appeals for payment have been received by those who got the ties. Chamber of Commerce officials advised local people to do nothing whatever about the ties, neither to return them or to pay for them.

The letters took a different tone after a while and the latest was one from a certain attorney who confessed to be the receiver for the St. Louis Knitting mills and asking for the prompt payment or return of the ties so that settlement could be made. The Chamber of Commerce through The Herald advised people to disregard the St. Louis have.

Investigators in St. Louis have found out that the blind man is a person named Sam Pressburger and is the agent of Karchmer. The latter was arrested some time ago on the charge of obtaining money under false pretenses. It is said that his office has been stripped of equipment and that the "knitting mills" have discontinued manufacture.

MANCHESTER GETS A NEW FAST MAIL

Letters From Here at 2:30 Will Now Catch Air Service for Chicago and South.

Opportunity for much speedier delivery of west-bound mail is made known to Manchester patrons by the information today that Postmaster Oliver F. Toop has been authorized in his effort to obtain mail dispatch at 2:30 every afternoon. The change goes into effect tomorrow.

In many cases where mail has a Cleveland, Chicago or other western destination of similar distances, it will mean that it will be delivered almost a day in advance of train time. This will be possible because the afternoon dispatch from Manchester will arrive in New York in time to make connections for the trans-continental night air-mail service at 9:35 p. m. from Hadley Field which reaches Chicago early the next morning.

The present schedule of mail from the south end post office calls for no outgoing mail from 11:30 a. m. to 6:10 p. m. with the result that the bulk of Manchester's mail has been sent out on the evening mail. This is much too late for air mail connections. Therefore Postmaster Toop applied to Chief Clerk R. E. Bridget of the Railway Mail Service at Boston for permission to send an afternoon dispatch. This was granted with the proviso that sufficient mail be sent daily to warrant the change. Consequently, it is up to Manchester patrons to take advantage of this opportunity if it is to be taken, and Mr. Toop is of the opinion that the afternoon dispatch will be of especial benefit to merchants and business men. All mail for this dispatch must be deposited at the post office not later than 2:15 in order that it may be prepared for the 2:30 dispatch which is picked up at the north end depot at 2:50. Only mail having a destination to points west and south of Hartford can be satisfactorily accommodated in the dispatch which will not be sorted until after it passes through Hartford.

The change makes possible the first satisfactory air mail connection for Manchester mail.

LITTLE JOE

TOO MANY PEOPLE LAY THEIR WORK ASIDE FOR A RAINY DAY.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The rabbit hopped, and hopped, and hopped and never for a moment stopped. It seemed to clear a dozen feet each time it took a bound. Said Scouty, "If we hang on tight I'm sure that we will be all right. But if we don't, we'll likely flop and land upon the ground." "Oh, this is fun," was Carry's cry. "I really like this sort of ride. The rabbit's back is nice and soft and makes a dandy seat. He travels at a rapid gait, but, gee, if he should stand up straight I don't know just how we'd hang on. That wouldn't be so sweet." Through bushes large the rabbit went and 'bout a half an hour was spent amid the trees and shrubs and such that grew on every side. "Oh let's look for some open space," said Copy. "I don't like this place." And then a sort of gateway, leading from the woods, was spied. "Gee, I'm as hot as I can be," wailed Clowzy. You could plainly see that everyone felt better when they reached the open space. A fuzzy squirrel then hopped right by and Mister Rabbit winked his eye, jumped up beside the squirrel, saying, "Come, let's have a race." The race was on, and my, what thrills. The Tynmites expected spills, but everything went nicely till the squirrel ran out of sight. He'd won the thrilling race at last 'cause he knew how to run, a real fast. Then Clowzy started hopping up and down, with all his might. "I'm getting cold," he loudly cried. And then a monstrous hill was spied. "Oh look! Oh, look!" he snapped again. "That hill is all ice cream." The Tynmites all slid right down from Mister Rabbit to the ground. And then they raced up to the hill, with very happy screams. (The Tynmites meet the Taffy Man in the next story.)

SENSE and NONSENSE

The best way to keep from getting run over by an automobile is to get a job on the police force.

TO BE DISCONTINUED Old Flivver, you are doomed. You soon will be extinct. As many and many a rattling time With you's forever linked!

To the young man's horror he discovered that he had thoughtlessly put his arm around the girl in the taxicab with him. "Beg pardon," he stammered, coming out of the clench, "but that driver is so reckless and goes so fast—I needed support." "Well," she replied, just like that, "he hasn't slowed down yet, has he?"

HAPPY?

The world is so full of springtime, And the cows are full of grass. The roads are full of flivvers, And the tanks are full of gas. The flivvs are full of youngsters And the youngsters are full of pep, And all in all it's good advice To sort of watch your step. Columbus, Ohio, Dispatch.

With practically everything So heaping full of things, It's our plain duty to, by jing, Be happier than kings.

Will: Dou you find it easy to find the knocks in your car? Bill: Yes, when my wife is riding on the back seat.

He that putteth his hand to the steering wheel and obeyeth the instructions of the back seat driver shall wake up in heaven or in the hospital.

A SAD STORY ABOUT JOE Cross crossing cautiously. Joe saw the train, But wouldn't stop. So they dragged his flivver to the shop.

It only took a week or two To make his Lizzie good as new. But though they hunted high and low, They found no extra parts of Joe.

Marcia: Honestly, I was all aquiver when the fellow I was out with last night proposed. Maude: He must have had you out in a Ford.

Now that all the world has an automobile half of it refuses to stay at home and let the other half visit it.

A STILL FLIVVER "Still driving the flivver?" I asked of a man; "Oh, yes sir," he answered, "As still as I can."

There's nothing the small town inhabitant enjoys more than a fire unless it's an awful automobile accident.

Drive right and more people will be left.

*Salesman (after trying to sell tractor for two hours): You see, it's easy to handle and the price is very low. Now, I'll throw in the clutch. Farmer: By golly, that's all I'd been waiting for. I knowed I'd get something extra if I'd hold out awhile.

LIBRARY REMOVAL OF NO GREAT HELP SAYS SUPT. HOWES

Eighth District Must Consider Building Problem Very Soon—One Room Will Not Alter Situation.

The following letter was received today from Superintendent of Schools A. F. Howes in regard to the library removal question in District 8.

Editor The Herald:

Kindly permit me to make a statement or two in your columns in regard to the question of removing the library from the Robertson school building.

First: There is no doubt whatever that additional room must be had for seating purposes in September. The situation is a fact, not a supposition. For two years past we have been using a basement room as a makeshift for a fourth grade overflow. Relatively small groups have been seated in the room but the coming year provision must be made for 35 pupils. It would be wrong from every point of view to use the basement for so large a group, and there are no other vacant rooms. The School Committee, very reluctantly I believe, decided that the only way to meet the situation was to ask for the library room.

Second: In considering the question of removal, the fact should not be overlooked that the presence of the library in the school building has been a source of constant benefit to the school children. Many more boys and girls have learned to read good books than would otherwise have been likely, because it has been easy and natural to step into the library at the close of school session. The upper grade classes have also found the library very convenient for reference work. It follows that the library should not be removed except for very urgent reasons.

Third: The necessity of one additional seating room immediately is only a single item in a much larger problem. Considerably more than one seating room will be needed in the Eighth District in the very near future. Five years ago we enrolled 335 pupils. Last year the enrollment was 395, an increase of 21, and a similar increase of 24 pupils, two thirds of a standard school class. To put it another way, our enrollment is growing at the rate of two standard classes every three years. In my judgment, four additional rooms should be added to the Hollister St. plant at the earliest possible date. With a little rearrangement of grades this would relieve congestion at both ends of the district.

Fourth: If the voters of the Eighth District would move at once to take up this building program so that school officials would know that by Sept. 1, 1928 or a little later, the present congestion would be permanently relieved, I would personally favor trying to find temporary quarters for our extra fourth grade so as to permit the library to remain where it is.

 A. F. HOWES.

One Table Remnants At Greatly Reduced Prices

While taking inventory in our Yard Goods Department during the past week, we came across many short lengths, ranging from one-half to three or four yard pieces. It is not our policy to keep such short lengths as these in stock, so we have taken them all out, measured them, and put low prices on them for quick selling.

Manchester women will find many short lengths that can be made up into crisp morning frocks, children's play dresses, aprons, boys' blouses, etc. The assortment includes most all our summer stock of yard goods, including

PROCRASTINATION

Isn't it peculiar why people will put off ordering coal until the last minute when they could just as well have their bins filled before the cold weather arrives?

It's human nature to put off until tomorrow what can be done today, but every sudden cold snap keeps us busy writing orders, each order stating "must be delivered at once."

All of which leads us to ask, have you ordered your winter supply of coal?
