PAPER NAPKIN FACTORY HERE INADVISABLE

Herald Finds Expert Opinion Warns Against Crepe Pa- per and Napkin Manufac- ture—Market Flooded.

The plan for inaugurating a paper napkin manufacturing concern in the Oakland paper mills, underwritten by local men after the mill had been purchased with local money, is not advisable. The Herald believes after a thorough investigation. The proposition was placed before the Manchester Chamber of Commerce directors last Thursday by President Sidney L. Willson of the American Writing Paper Company and William McCorkindale, of Holyoke, who holds a patent on a napkin making process.

Three prominent paper manufacturers in Manchester and an out-of-town authority on the manufacture of paper were consulted by The Herald. All of them were non-interested parties and The Herald believes their opinions in the matter reliable. All of them considered the plan inadvisable.

Cost of Mill High. The figure placed on the mill property is too high, the local manufacturers believe. The price placed on the property is $110,000 as it stands. The buildings and equipment are in first class condition. Three local manufacturers placed the value of the property at not over $75,000 and one was as low as $50,000.

Even with the mill purchased The Herald believes that the paper napkin business would be an unprofitable venture. Figures were produced by an out-of-town bank representative whose work is the investigation of paper manufacturing financing. His opinion was that the crepe paper and paper napkin markets are flooded. There is keen competition in the field and there are 24 independent manufacturers of crepe paper and napkins outside of the paper manufacturers' association. A like product is produced in mills where the cost of labor is much less than in this section and where the materials necessary for manufacture can more readily be secured.

McCorkindale Bankrupt. It is also pointed out that the Meco Company, a paper napkin manufacturing concern, of which William McCorkindale is superintendent, is now bankrupt after an attempt to carry out just such a plan in Williamansett, Mass. If the plan would not "go" in Williamansett, it is doubtful if it would succeed here in Manchester.

GERMAN FLYERS TEST LIFEBELTS BEFORE HOP

Expect to Start Flight to New York Some Day This Week—Foggy Today.

Dessau, Germany, Aug. 8.—John Ritzler and Cornelius Edzard, who hope to hop for New York in a Junkers plane this week, were busy today testing new lifebelts, and the tests were made in a bathtub.

Ritzler, who is afraid the American girls may think him old-fashioned because he doesn't know the modern dance steps, spent some time practicing new dance steps. Correspondents who have arrived here have remarked at the similarity in appearance between Ritzler and Col. Lindbergh, the German being of the same blonde type.

Charles A. Levine today wired congratulations to the two flyers on their having broken the endurance flight record of the world.

Fog banks prevented test flights early today, but it is hoped that flights may be made later in the day.

WALKER DIES SUDDENLY.

Windham, N. H., Aug. 8.—Edward T. Walker, New York lawyer who was bequeathed the bulk of the thirty million dollar estate of the late Edward F. Searles, eccentric millionaire, died suddenly of a heart shock today while visiting at the country home he inherited.

ADMITS SHE ELOPED WITH MARRIED MAN

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 8.—Admitting she had eloped with a man who has a wife and two children in the old country, Lucy Volpe, 17, of Springdale, missing since July 20 was found on the streets here today by police.

The man for whom she says she left her home was not with her. The girl is being held for her relatives.

IGNORES DIPLOMACY IN BRIDGE SPEECH

Vice President Dawes Talks Frankly in Discussing Failure of Geneva Parley.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 8.—As the international peace bridge between the United States and Canada stretched open to traffic today, discussion on both sides centered upon Vice President Dawes' frank illustration to the recent naval parley failure during his speech at the dedication ceremonies yesterday.

To the surprise of about 100,000 persons gathered to witness the ceremony which was presented by Premier Baldwin of England, Premier King of Canada, Secretary Kellogg and Governor Smith, Dawes disregarded all diplomatic barriers and plunged into discussion of the Geneva failure.

Failure to agree, he said, might have been caused by under preparation beforehand, or by the lack of sufficient understanding of each nation's necessities. Laying the failure also to the possibility that there was too exclusive concentration on its own needs by each nation, he added:

His Remarks. "If in their respective programs, under the principle of equality, the United States requires heavy cruisers which Great Britain does not need, and Great Britain requires light cruisers which the United States does not need, there is no excuse for inaugurating a competition under which ships will be built which neither of them need."

Premier Baldwin, in his speech at the ceremony, which was held at the center of the bridge. There they halted at a ribbon stretched across the structure. On the other side of this waited the American party.

The prince and Mr. Dawes shook hands across the ribbon which was then cut simultaneously by Mrs. Dawes and Mrs. Drouhin, wife of the lieutenant governor of Ontario. The entire party then came to American soil.

Gov. Smith made the first speech of welcome which was answered by Premier King. Secretary Kellogg, declared that the bridge was a great factor for international good will. The Prince of Wales also stressed the unity between the two nations.

GENERAL WOOD'S BODY SENT TO WASHINGTON

To Be Buried With Highest Military Honors—Died Sunday in Boston.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 8.—The body of Major General Leonard Wood, governor general of the Philippines and former chief of staff of the United States Army, was flown to Washington tonight for burial with highest military honors beside the rough riders he once commanded.

The body will be under guard of six soldiers from Fort Banks, led by Captain Roger Williams, U. S. Infantry. Mrs. Wood, who was with her husband when he died Sunday morning in a local hospital following an operation for a tumor, and Osborne Wood, Leonard Wood, Jr., and Miss Louise Wood, the general's children, accompany the body to the national capital.

Messages of tribute to the memory of the man who might have occupied the White House but for the exigencies of politics, came to Mrs. Wood today.

SOLDIER DESERTS.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8.—The "Lindbergh flame" which apparently fired David M. Harrison with the urge to enlist in the air service, had sputtered out today. At least he was listed as a deserter from the 118th Observation Squadron, A. C., by the adjutant general's office.

DEMOCRATS OF STATE LAUNCH A SMITH BOOM

Leaders of Second Congressional District Gather and Talk Over Party's Chances in Connecticut.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8.—With the avowed intention of animating a somnolent Democratic donkey to a degree of activity which will make of him a battering ram to clear the path to the presidency for Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, 150 Connecticut Democrats made their initial move yesterday in their part of the next political campaign.

The occasion was a dinner of the party chiefs and workers at Ferry Tavern, Old Lyme, under the auspices of the Democrats of the Second Congressional District. Although a quiet gathering, it was full of significant gestures. No potential candidate other than Gov. Smith, was applauded. No opportunity moment went by without a call for harmony in the party, state and national. Leaders were taken to task for, and admitted, failure to bring complete unanimity of purpose. At least one candidate was more or less put forth as a desirable member of the national House of Representatives from this state. Finally, it was indicated there would be no lack of volunteers to run for state posts if Gov. Smith becomes the party's national standard bearer.

Of the leaders present yesterday, five were recognized as prospective candidates for governor in the next race. They were Mayor Alfred N. Phillips, Jr., Stamford; Charles G. Morris, New Haven; W. E. Thoms and Mayor Francis P. Guilford, Waterbury; and David E. Fitzgerald, New Haven.

Citron's Address. On the program as a three minute speaker, William M. Citron, Middletown, minority leader at the last Legislature, in a fifteen minute talk brought the meeting from a humdrum state to a spirited political gathering in which the question of "What is wrong with Connecticut Democracy" was to the front.

"We all know the Democratic Party in this state is sick," he said. "Bickerings and animosity among leaders and in the rank and file have brought about this condition. It is the duty of our leaders, who are big men, mentally and physically, to get the party back into a healthy state. Let's not sacrifice any more high calibre candidates."

Situation a Joke. "We all know the condition of

CONTRACT IS DRAWN FOR ATLANTIC HOP

Levine to Pay French Pilot 100,000 Francs a Year— Case of Death Widow Gets 300,000.

Paris, Aug. 8.—Charles A. Levine and Marcel Drouhin today signed a definite contract for a flight from Paris to New York in the Bellanca plane "Columbia."

The signing of the contract eliminates a prolonged series of disputes and arguments between Levine and Drouhin, who was given a tentative contract to pilot the Columbia several weeks ago. The contract was legalized at the United States consulate.

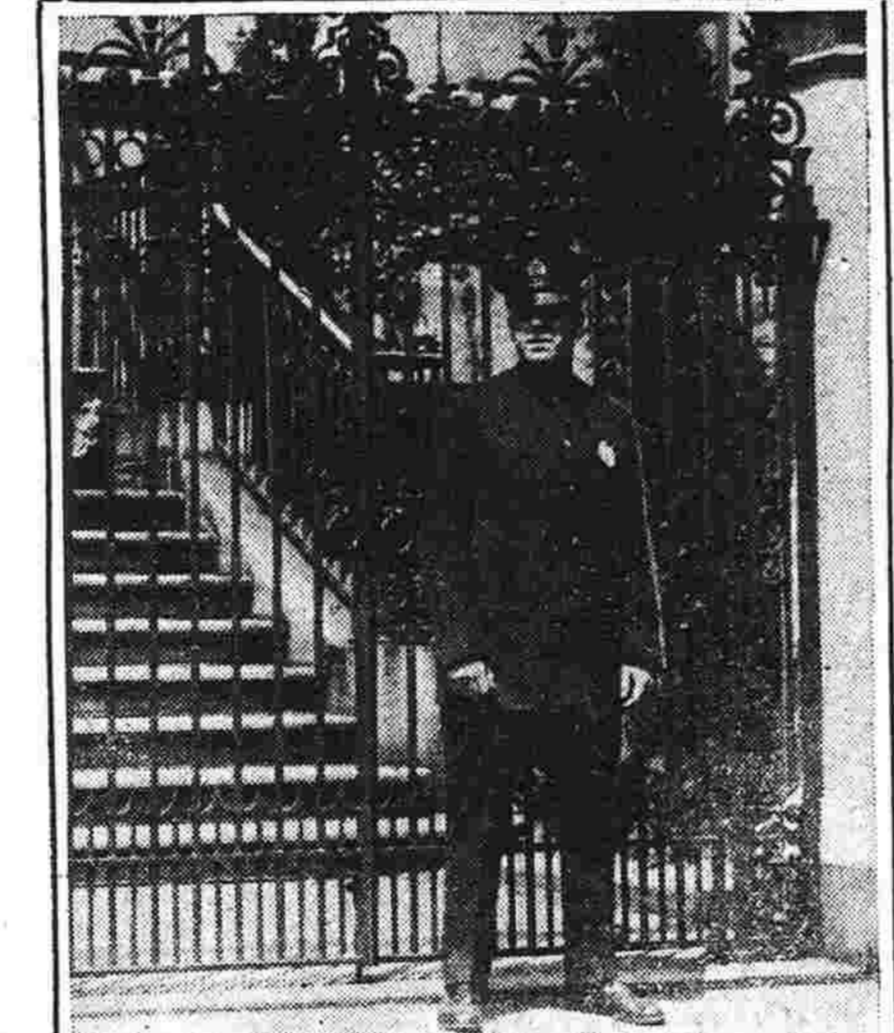

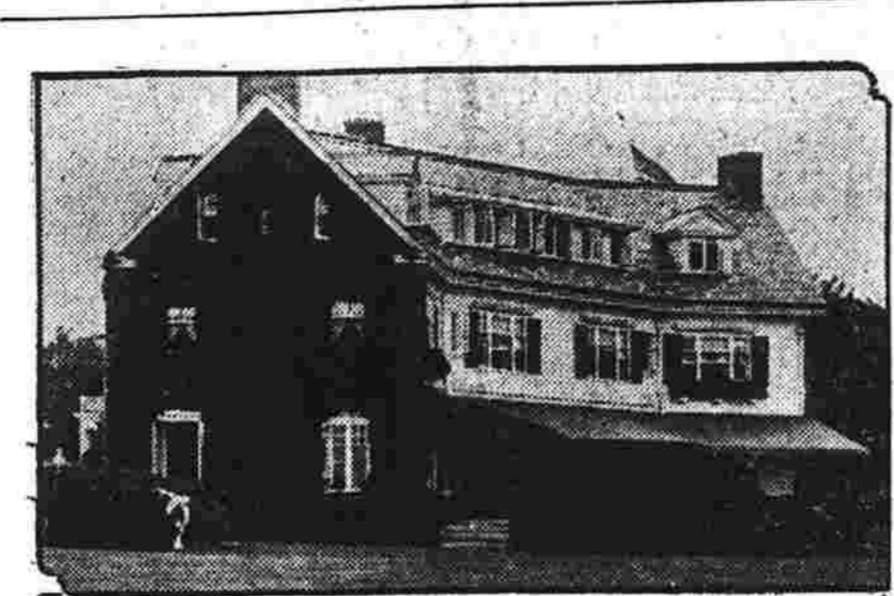

Under the terms of the contract if any other plane crosses the Atlantic from Europe to the United States before the Columbia makes a start, either party has the right to cancel the contract within eight days.

Fair Contract. "In fairness to Levine I must say that the contract is fair to Drouhin," said Charles Beach, Drouhin's attorney.

Levine agrees to pay Drouhin 100,000 francs for his services for one year and Levine also deposits a banker's letter of credit for 300,000 francs in a bank. This sum payable to Mme. Drouhin in the event of Drouhin's death. In the event that the flyers are not heard of for a month after their departure Mrs. Drouhin will draw 10,000 francs monthly on account for six months, when she will draw the balance.

In the event of an accident totally incapacitating Drouhin, Levine accepts responsibility to the amount of 300,000 francs.

Guarding the Governor-Judge

Immediately after Governor Alvin T. Fuller, of Massachusetts, had rendered his Sacco-Vanzetti death decision, strong guards were placed on his residence. Above you see his summer home at Northampton, one of those guarded, and below a police sentry before the door of his urban abode in Boston.

TALK OF SUCCESSOR TO GENERAL WOOD A GOOD ONE, TOO

Thomes, Stinson, and Wadsworth Mentioned Today for Post in Philippines.

Washington, Aug. 8.—Major General Leonard Wood will be laid to rest in Arlington cemetery among his comrades of the "Rough Riders" regiment which he commanded during the Spanish-American war.

Burial will be tomorrow with full military honors. In all army posts the colors were at the half staff today in honor of General Wood. He had a spectacular career in the army, rising from a surgeon to an officer of the line, and finally to chief-of-staff, the highest post in the military command. His rapid promotion resulted Christy Brothers big five ring wild animal shows which made a most favorable impression here two years ago is making a second visit to Manchester today, arriving early Sunday morning from Putnam.

The show this time has grown remarkably since its last appearance here and now uses a special train of 25 twenty-two foot steel cars and seven Pullman sleepers to transport it. It has also the biggest collection of wild animals ever seen here with any show. All day Sunday crowds thronged the circus grounds and had a chance to see most of them free. There were eleven elephants, twelve camels, such peculiar looking animals as water buffalo from the Nile, yakals from Tibet, eight genuine reindeer, two of them with magnificent antlers; two American bison, humped backed sacred cattle from India, one of the families having a calf; a stork, three ostriches and more than thirty dens of the more common species of lions, tigers, leopards, bears and wild boars. They show was strong in babies. They were to be seen on every side. There were baby lions, baby leopards, baby camels, a family of baby hyenas, said to be the only one ever born in captivity, and half a dozen

GIRLS MAKE ATTEMPT TO BREAK FROM JAIL

Arrested on Charge of Theft They Were Nearly Out When Seen by Watchman.

Stamford, Conn., Aug. 8.—Florence Williams, 21 and Elsie Pierce, 23, New York girls who made an elaborate but futile effort to escape jail Sunday after their arrest on charges of theft, were sent to the State Farm today on pleas of guilty. They had been arrested at the request of Emanuel Silva, yacht hand for Walter Lashar of Bridgeport, who claimed they had flirted with him and then relieved him of $17.

Early Sunday the girls tore up the plumbing in their cell, using the pipes to force the window bars apart sufficiently to permit an exit. They then dropped three ropes by means of an improvised rope made of torn blankets but were caught in the fall yard when observed by Winfield Merritt, night watchman.

SACCO REFUSED STAY; GUARD U. S. EMBASSIES

World Wide Red Demon- strations Planned for To- morrow in U. S., Europe and South America—All U. S. Embassies Are Heavily Policed—Expect Strikes in a Dozen Cities.

London, Aug. 8.—The world-wide Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations together with reports of bomb outrages in America continued today to be widely featured in the London newspapers with many papers editorially condemning the American communists for their violence. They declared that nothing could excuse the outrages which would have the effect of hardening rather than softening public opinion towards the two condemned men however innocent or guilty they may be.

Police Watchful. While the authorities generally do not fear any anti-American violence in London the watchfulness of the police is not being relaxed. According to reports circulated in Rome it is doubtful if Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti would be allowed to enter Italy even though they should regain their liberty in the United States and be deported from that country, said a Central News dispatch from Rome today.

Italy Interested. The Italian government is closely watching the situation created in the United States by the case, but it is stated officially that the government is not interested in the fate of the two condemned radicals and will make no representations to the United States in their behalf, the Central News telegram added.

A special guard was maintained today over the United States Embassy building as the result of Communist threats over the impending execution of Sacco and Vanzetti. So far as known the written protest delivered at the embassy yesterday by a Communist demonstration in Hyde Park, Trafalgar Square and in Grosvenor Gardens has not been forwarded to Ambassador A. B. Houghton, who is spending his vacation in Scotland.

IN SWEDEN.

Stockholm, Aug. 8.—Swedish Socialists and Communists conducted a demonstration here today protesting against the affirmation of Sacco and Vanzetti's death sentence by Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts. The government has provided extra safeguards for the United States embassy building here and for consulate buildings throughout the kingdom.

Papers Rap Fuller.

Paris, Aug. 8.—Radical newspapers today renewed their attack against the American judicial authorities and Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts for the death sentences imposed upon Sacco and Vanzetti. About 10,000 Sacco-Vanzetti sympathizers paraded on Sunday, carrying red flags and singing Communist songs. Vanzetti's sister carried a red flag.

POLICE PROTECTION.

Munich, Germany, Aug. 8.—Special police protection will be given to the United States consulate building here until the high feeling of the Bavarian Communists and Socialists dies out. A hostile demonstration was made on Sunday during which orators protested that "Sacco and Vanzetti must not die."

Buenos Aires, Aug. 8.—Police

Sacco-Vanzetti mass meeting after a meeting crowds marched through the business district smashing windows. The South American Humanitarian League has issued an appeal to workers to boycott United States goods.

THREE BURNED TO DEATH

Wilkes Barre, Pa., Aug. 8.—Three persons, a father and his two sons, were burned to death at a fire destroyed a hotel and residence owned by William Owens, 40, one of the victims.

Owens was trapped when he returned to rescue his two sons, and met death with them. The other victims were William Owens, Jr., and Allen Owens, six.

Mrs. Owens and a daughter escaped unhurt, and the former with minor bruises.

NEW YORK IS READY FOR AN EMERGENCY

14,000 Cops on Reserve— Subway Explosion Still An Unsolved Mystery.

New York, Aug. 8.—The perpetrators of the subway bomb outrages, supposedly in protest against the death sentences imposed upon Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti, were still at large today, although five men had been arrested since early Saturday morning as suspects.

The entire city force of fourteen thousand policemen mobilized at maximum strength, is not only bonding every energy to run down the bombers but is exercising the utmost vigilance to prevent any further violence.

Special Squad

A special squad of fourteen motorcycle policemen has been detailed for emergency duty to rush to any district where disorders are threatened. Two armored cars are held in readiness for instant service.

Ever during the World War the precautions taken were no more vigorous than those being exercised today.

A call for a one-day strike tomorrow of approximately 500,000 workers, as a protest against the execution of Sacco and Vanzetti, went forth today.

Meeting Tomorrow

The strike call was issued by the Socialist Party, the I. W. W., the Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee, which is largely Communist, and by agents of trades unions. The strikers were urged to attend a mass meeting Tuesday in Union Square.

In calling a strike, the Socialist Party and the trade unions representatives asserted that they represented approximately 330,000 workers. They disclaimed any connection with I. W. W. and Communist propaganda, which have issued calls for protest strikes.

The Sacco-Vanzetti emergency committee said that ten thousand marine transport workers would walk out.

ORDINARY FISHERMAN CHAMPIONED BY ADAMS

State Commissioner Favors Stocking Lakes With Com- mon Pond Fish.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 8.—The "common garden variety of fishermen" that great mass of citizens who fish regardless of the quality of the catch, found a champion today in William Adams, Connecticut commissioner of fisheries, who spoke before the American Fisheries Society in convention here this morning.

The ordinary fisherman doesn't care whether he catches trout or the common pond fish," Adams said, "and we must come to the realization of the desires of this group rather than cater to the few Simon-pure anglers."

The commissioner was speaking on the need to stock more ponds with pickerel, perch and other lesser fish rather than concentrate on the lordly trout and bass.

He suggested that a number of ponds should be under state control for the breeding of this common species of fish in order to better stock state streams and ponds.

Lawyer for Radicals Loses First Legal Skirmish— Court Refuses Three Pleas—"No Attacks on Courts," Hill Says, "All Judges Are Human and Liable to Err."

Boston, Mass., Aug. 8.—Attorney Arthur D. Hill today lost the first legal skirmish to save Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the electric chair.

Judge George A. Sanderson, in State Supreme Judicial Court, refused to grant a stay of sentence, refused to issue a writ of habeas corpus and refused a writ of error.

Attorney Hill had based his pleas on the alleged prejudice of Trial Judge Webster Thayer and following the Supreme Court ruling motions for a revocation of sentence and a new trial were before Judge Thayer at Dedham for the eighth time.

Court's Decision

Regarding the writ of error, Judge Sanderson decided: "After giving it as careful consideration as I have been able to in the arguments and history of the case as far as it has developed, I consider it my duty to deny the application for that writ."

"The court," he said, "has no authority to grant prayers for a stay or delay of execution of sentence."

Denying the application for a writ of habeas corpus, he said: "The question sought to be raised by the habeas corpus as they are presented by evidence in the case and offer of proof is not a question that ought to be tried or under the habeas corpus and for that reason I must order the petition dismissed."

If the second legal battle—that at Dedham this afternoon—is lost no more avenues are left in the state court, Attorney Hill will carry the fight to a justice of the United States Supreme Court.

The Supreme Court refusing a new Sacco-Vanzetti trial but Attorney Hill declared that there never had been an examination of the fact as it concerned the alleged prejudice of the trial judge.

"No man exists who is wise enough to pass his own prejudice," exclaimed Attorney Hill. "No man who has been subjected to criticism as has been directed at Judge Thayer in this case can act fairly."

Witches of Salem. He continued: "Men who tried the witches at Salem were men of piety and wisdom yet we know how they erred. They were not conscious of their error as may be the case of Judge Thayer today."

Attorney Hill said that Sacco and Vanzetti cases had "no religious tinge, its place being usurped by economics, a condition which, he said, was dangerous to the welfare of the commonwealth."

Attorney Hill urged Judge Sanderson to use elasticity in his interpretation of the statutes of the Bay State.

Declaring that he would not criticize Gov. Alvan T. Fuller who in his review found Sacco and Vanzetti "guilty," the defense counsel stated that the governor "had done a great injustice to former Defense Counsel William G. Thompson and the legal profession in stating in his review report that the lawyers had erred in time in which to bring before the courts the new features brought out in the Fuller investigation."

Wanted Re-examination. "What we want for our clients is a re-examination of the supreme judicial court of all the facts of law in this case," said the defense lawyer. "They have never been examined as to the prejudice of Judge Thayer."

Attorney Hill told Judge Sanderson that he would raise the question of the decision of Chief Justice Walter Perley Hall of the superior court who was allowing Judge Thayer today for the eighth time to pass at Dedham courthouse on the question of a new Sacco and Vanzetti trial.

Attorney Hill said that the case would be tried to the United States Supreme Court if all efforts in the state courts were exhausted.

He said the petition of a writ of habeas corpus was based on Judge Thayer's alleged remarks concerning Sacco and Vanzetti and their radical views as set forth in a series of affidavits. Three cases before the United States court were cited by Attorney Hill before the court took a recess.

MONDAY, AUGUST 8.

LEONARD WOOD

The death of General Leonard Wood, governor-general of the Philippines, comes as no surprise to the considerable number of persons who were aware of his physical condition. Due to the delicacy of the situation the newspapers have almost entirely ignored the fact, well enough known in informed circles, that General Wood's ill health was attributable to a tumor of the brain. So long ago as 1920, when he was being seriously boomed for the Presidency, this condition was not unknown; and it is probable that more or less veiled intimations of it did more than anything else to drive the doctor-soldier-statesman from the Presidential field.

General Wood's greatest claim to distinction was an almost abnormal courage combined with a limitless personal loyalty which he rendered to the few individuals who commanded his respect and regard.

There is an unwritten chapter of history, having a tremendous bearing on the course of political events in this country, which demonstrates this latter quality of General Wood. It is this:

The famous charge of the Rough Riders at San Juan Hill—the reflex of which everyone will acknowledge to have been eventually responsible for making Theodore Roosevelt President of the United States—was the most skillfully advertised military achievement in our history. And it has almost entirely been lost sight of that Colonel Leonard Wood and not Lieut.-Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was the actual commander of the Rough Riders at that time. It was the absence of Colonel Wood from the field of action that gave his second in command the glittering opportunity for glory.

Now every army man of that period knew that Leonard Wood was afraid of nothing on earth; that he was a fighting man in every fibre of his being; that any suspicion that he might have avoided the San Juan scramble through cowardice or anything approaching cowardice would be worse than ridiculous; that for Wood to keep out of that affair must have caused him extreme anguish of spirit.

Yet he did keep out of it. At the time there were conflicting reports as to the reason. It was sometimes said that he was away, making arrangements for supplies. It was generally accepted, however, that he was in hospital.

As a matter of fact General Wood was not only neither ill nor away from the scene of action, but at the moment when the American batteries on the left were ordered to cease firing on the Spanish entrenchments so that the infantry might be appeared in one of the battery positions and from that point watched the attack on the hill a mile or more away. Of this fact there is proof in the hushed testimony of veteran regular army officers who saw and talked with him there; but they have never dared to make their knowledge public.

Leonard Wood yielded the greatest chance for glory that had come to an American soldier since Gettysburg in order to contribute to the fame of a politically ambitious friend. And as long as he lived he never opened his lips to make that fact known. It is small wonder that he received exceptional advancement at the hands of President Roosevelt.

The mental attributes of Leonard Wood may have been unduly exaggerated. There is a good deal of doubt as to whether he possessed in the slightest degree the qualifications of a statesman or a civic leader. But he was a magnificent fighting man. And in his loyalties he was well nigh godlike.

MODIFICATION

Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoetzel proposes to ask all competent authorities to co-operate with his department in an effort to list all the mental defectives, drug addicts, habitual drunkards, bootleggers, ex-convicts, reformatory graduates and the like who have come under official observation. The idea is to cancel or refuse automobile driving licenses in such cases, on the theory that persons of these classes are likely to contribute to the number of accidents. The commissioner will undoubtedly receive nothing but applause for this determination—perhaps not even the enthusiastic and industrious assistance of some of those who will applaud the loudest. That automobile license should be in the possession of semi-idiotic persons, criminals, dopesters, drunks, nit-throwers and perverts is unthinkable. But that many of them are is a fact. The motor vehicle department is entitled, by every right, to the sincere co-operation of all persons in a position to assist it in ridding the roads of these menaces.

Nevertheless, if every driver falling under the proscribed classification were to be kept off the highways, the decrease in the number of automobile accidents, while worth obtaining, would be unlikely to importantly affect the situation.

There are so many otherwise sane, well behaved, intelligent and exemplary persons who lack the imagination to realize the dangers of the road, and so are willing to "take chances," that the elimination of the obviously unfit would be merely a drop in the bucket.

Probably not one accident in a hundred is precipitated by an ex-convict, an epileptic, a drug addict or a person who has legally qualified as a common drunkard.

The main hazard in the automobile situation lies in the carelessness, the unrealisation of peril and the impatience of respectable persons who are up to the average of citizenship and brains.

To what extent the ghastly dangers of the road are to be attributed to the desire to show off the speed of the driver's car, there is no way of knowing. But the advertising campaigns of the automobile makers, who brag that their cars will do sixty, seventy, eighty miles an hour, the perpetual patter about "fashion in and out of traffic," "lightning pickup" and "limitless power," must have done more than a little to create among drivers generally a state of mind where every rational precaution is held to be cheap and contemptible. Certainly such a state of mind exists.

And we still insist that in removing all speed limits the Connecticut Legislature did its bit in fostering this dangerous and destructive tendency. If the highways of Connecticut are ever to be made safe, or anywhere near safe, it will not be done alone by denying licenses to a handful of the obviously unfit; but through some approach to this subject which will seem utterly revolutionary as compared with any remedy yet suggested.

Connecticut has spent millions of dollars in the creation of what its people expected would be a system of highly useful and economically advantageous roads. Many of its people are beginning to wonder if this enormous expenditure has resulted in the building of anything but a system of speedways, wonderful for the pleasure of the speed lunatic, but death traps in the perils they have made possible and fast becoming useless to scores of thousands of the people who paid for them.

The Milford pike has set many persons to thinking.

THE REDS

Desperately as the lawyers for Sacco and Vanzetti are battling to save the lives of these men, even more desperately do the red radicals of the country seem to be striving to prevent the success of the legal steps being taken in their behalf. Every threat uttered against the institutions of America, every bomb exploded, every hint at forthcoming violence, adds just so much to the instinctive resistance of authority in every form to the appeals for clemency for the doomed men. If there had been no such threats and bombings and red battle cries, the rising tide of demand for sheer justice might well have succeeded in preventing Wednesday's executions. But now thousands of advocates of leniency for Sacco and Vanzetti are hardening their hearts. The instinct of self preservation—a law stronger than the urge of justice—is beginning to operate, perhaps to the fatal prejudice of the men in the Charlestown death house.

As a matter of fact it is extremely doubtful whether the frothing reds who have been organizing this propaganda of violence protest against the Sacco-Vanzetti executions have any real desire to save the lives of those men. They live and thrive on the hateful excitement of bitter class enmity. This Massachusetts case is as the breath of their nostrils. They revel in it, for it gives perfect play to every ugly and destructive instinct of deliberate enemies of organized society. Were Sacco and Vanzetti to be commuted today the red agitators would loose in an instant the very core of their "cause." They would not want that. They hope to roll the tragedy of these two anarchists over their tongues for many a day. They see in it the finest opportunity they have ever had of stirring up disension and destroying faith in American institutions. What do a couple of human lives signify to them, in such a circumstance?

Sacco and Vanzetti, dead, are worth a million Saccos and Vanzettis, alive, to the hairy monster of anarchy.

Every instinct of the orderly minded is to accept the challenge of the reds and let the condemned pawns move to their death in the electric chair, innocent or guilty. But this is a primitive instinct. Intellectual strategy demands the opposite course. The commutation of the sentences of Sacco and Vanzetti would be justifiable, even in complete disregard of the facts of the evidence and of the trial, on the ground that it would rob redism in America of the ugliest badge that has ever been put in its hands.

HARD BOWLED

This town has grown up. When the Board of Selectmen can go serenely ahead with a meeting scheduled to be held on Circus Night, then we have assuredly arrived. To be metropolitan is to be blasé—even over a circus. Woo, for the good old days!

WASHINGTON LETTER

Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles dealing with the present condition of prohibition and its enforcement. The stories are an up-to-date summary of some of the broader aspects of an important situation.

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Aug. 8.—Whatever the benefits or damage accomplished by prohibition, the great "wet and dry" fight has completely altered the political situation of the republic.

Whether he is running for the presidency or a constableness a candidate for office today must meet the issue and declare himself. Regardless of his personal merits and the soundness of the platform, he must face the likelihood that he will be elected or defeated by a certain number of voters who will be swayed by his attitude toward the Volstead Act.

To be sure he may straddle the issue, but many candidates have found that there is no safety in such a course when his opponents are straightforward about it. Thus, a man may be a perfect wizard at catching stray dogs and lose his position at the pound to a partially blind and lame fellow who is better adapted to the pursuit of tortoise but who nevertheless "thinks right" on prohibition.

The country loses its Wadsworths and Lenroths and gains its Heflins and Maxfelds. Or it loses its Peppers and Butlers and gains its Vares, all with little regard to the actual merits of these men.

Affects Party Organization The great importance of the prohibition issue to a politician's career is matched, of course, by its importance to the two great national parties.

It threatens to wreck the Democratic party completely and it becomes more and more likely to cause serious trouble for the Republicans. Both parties are subject to the tug-of-war between the two forces. The difference seems to be that the Democrats hold their dog-fights in the open while Republicans, relatively speaking and insofar as national politics goes, keep theirs behind the scenes. At this writing there appears to be some faint talk of a wet bloc at the next Republican national convention, made up of delegates from such states as New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Illinois. But it's very faint.

A loose chain of newspapers is under taking to show that the Anti-Saloon League was once on the verge of seeking impeachment of President Coolidge, a story which, for purposes of these dispatches, is chiefly significant as indicating the close hook-up between prohibition and politics.

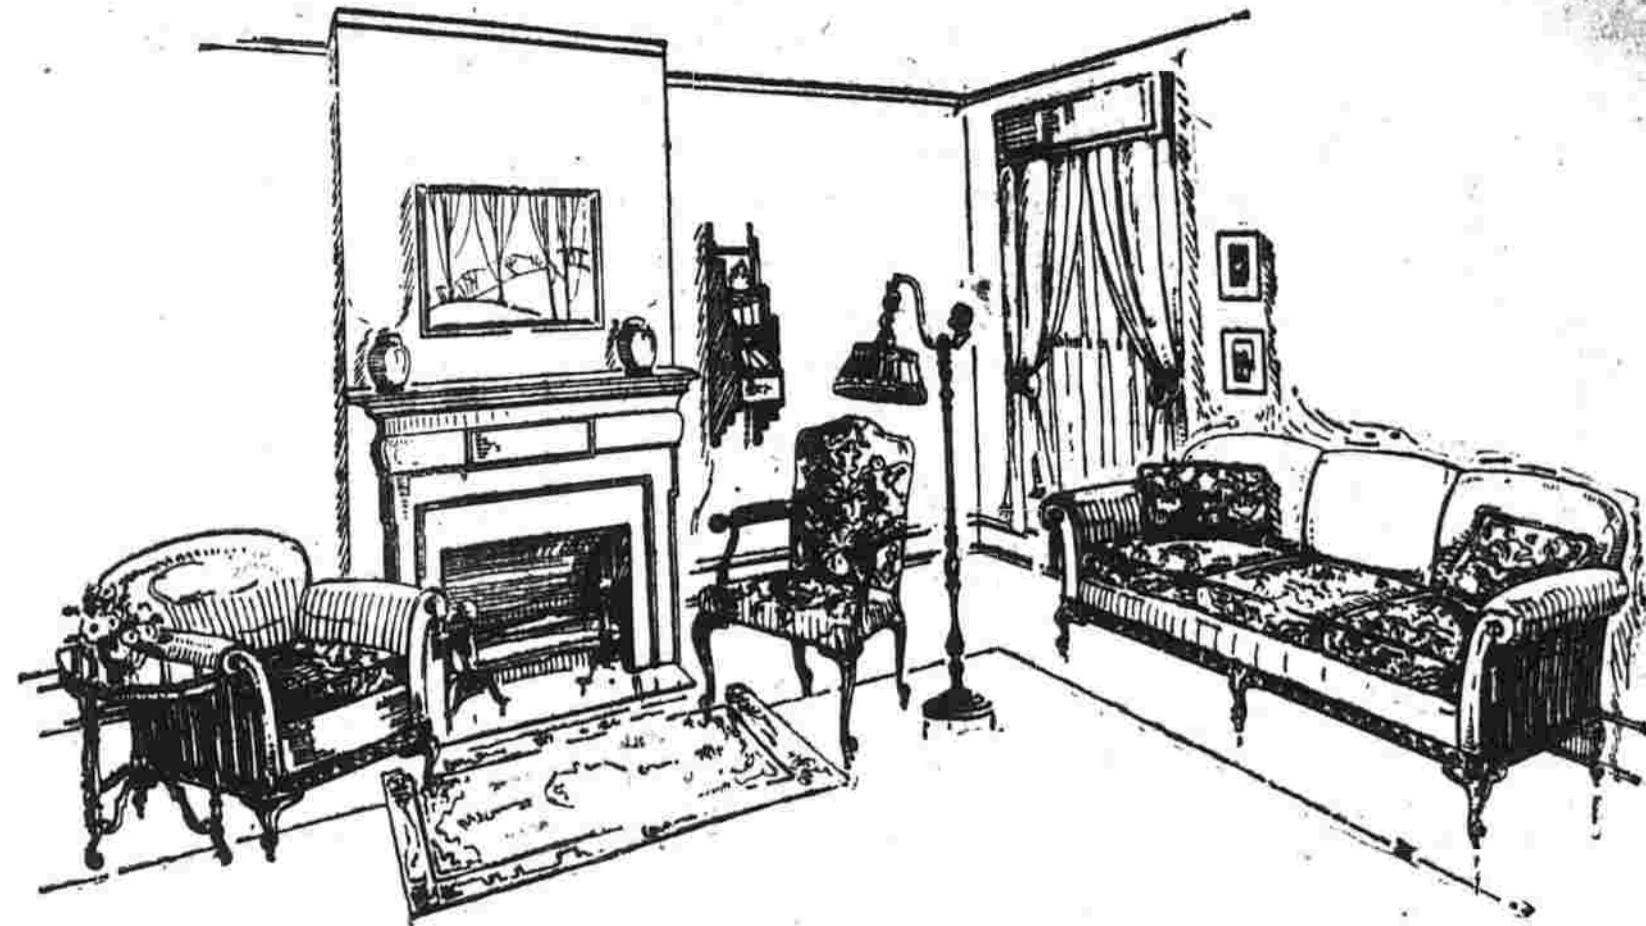

How Politicians Butt In The fact is that there is no love lost between the prohibitionists and most Republican politicians. Publicly and privately, the league is forever brandishing its bludgeon and demanding that the politicians jump through the hoop. What serves to keep many politicians of both parties in line is the knowledge that the league still has the support of the "church vote" and many captains of industry. Politicians are generally pragmatists.

Of most interest from both the ethical and practical points of view is the relation of politics to actual prohibition enforcement.

Two prohibition administrators have recently left two of the most important posts on the prohibition battle front, New York city and New Jersey. At about the same time, another enforcement executive was squeezed out at Buffalo. As one man they shouted that politicians were interfering with honest enforcement and that no honest attempt was being made to administer the law impartially. It was an old cry. Unfortunately, it is the same complaint which General Andrews himself has made privately and which he may make publicly when he is definitely out of the government service.

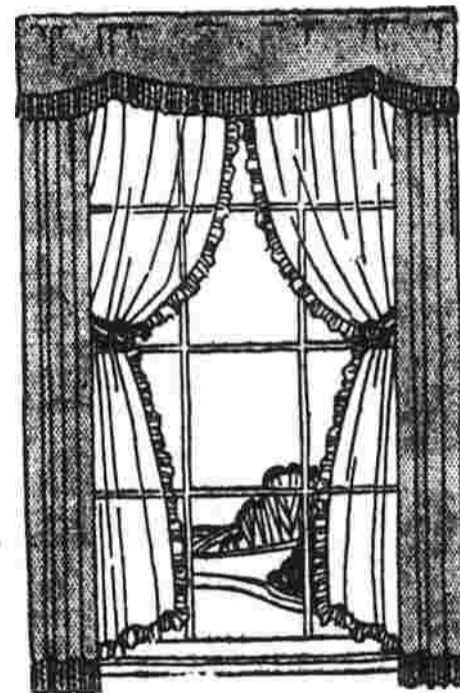

Andrews, when he took office, promised to keep politics out of enforcement. He soon discovered his mistake.

WATKINS BROTHERS, Inc.

EXCLUSIVE REPRESENTATIVES FOR CRAWFORD AND CHAMBERS RANGES.

New York, Aug. 8.—Just after sundown—about the time the first Broadway lights, like evening stars, anticipate the coming night, there appears in certain haunts the wreck of what was an American idol. Unless you know him, of course, you wouldn't notice him. He's like a thousand others you will meet chomping along the side streets toward the beckoning lights. He's heavy, paunchy, aging. He isn't exactly unkempt, but he's a bit threadbare. For a moment you would recall some of those pudgy, unkempt part played in the films by Emil Jannings. He has that way of slouching along.

As he nears Broadway he sits down on the side-steps of a movie theater. When his hat comes off you notice that his hair is graying, and thin. Nobody notices him.

Now let's cut back 25 or 30 years, as they say in the movies! Out of the Antipodes had come a battling featherweight by the name of Young Griffo. They tossed him into the ring over at Conan Island and branded him the cleverest "feather" that had blown to America. He was awol! And what rep he made! What a following he had! And he made plenty of money.

But Broadway went just a little to his head. . . . At any rate he didn't use the old bean. He would take the roll of bills he had just made and show up in a bar room, buying the boys round after round, and drinking a pretty stiff assortment himself.

Thus it went for a while. Nothing but success! And a round of drinks to each new victory. Five years. . . . ten years. . . . Today a sloppy figure ambles alone Forty-second street. . . . a fat figure. . . . Soft and generally a bit wobbly. For he still takes a few drinks. Oh yes, it is our old friend Griffo. What a featherweight! Falling away to a couple of hundred pounds now! Getting more down and out every day.

If you stop to talk with him, as he sits in the gathering shadows of his lumbering shoulders and tell you. . . . "Ya, I had lots of money then. Blew it all in like a sap. And here I am." Yes, there he is. Five years more. . . . ten years more. . . . The round, lumbering figure still comes at nightfall. . . . comes and ambles up the street, sits down awhile and watches the crowd go by, gets up and waddles away again. You wonder why? Well, the old fellow hasn't forgotten the crowds. They used to sit around the ring side and cheer him. Now they just pass by, but they're crowds just the same. . . . gay crowds going to the theater and sad crowds ambling like himself into the side streets that lead to the waterfront. . . . The other night I saw him coming down the street. All along the main stem men were hailing taxis and speeding away to the stadium for a world's championship fight. Men stood on the corner and talked about the big fight and Griffo just stood and listened and went on.

FREE HOUSE LOTS IN SPRINGFIELD

But There's a Sting to the Offer the Chamber of Commerce Warns.

Prepared by Manchester Chamber of Commerce

An old friend in the Free House Lot game pops up again.

During July a Manchester woman called at the Chamber of Commerce asking what was known about the Premier Mortgage and Realty Company of Springfield, Mass.

Their operations were described to her and she was told that the Springfield Chamber of Commerce and the Springfield Business Bureau had broadcasted warnings against their operations.

The woman then described her dealings with the company telling how she and her husband went to Hilltop Heights, Ludlow, Mass., to look at the real estate development being sponsored by the Premier Company.

"The Free Lot" which they were shown was, in this case, sufficiently desirable so that this woman and her husband were satisfied to accept it on the basis of the offer in their printed literature, namely $42 to cover the survey and the drawing of legal papers.

They paid their money last October and were given a simple receipt for their money with a promise that the deed would be sent them at once.

Two letters and one personal call since that time have brought the assurance that the matter would be attended to at once and that their deed would be sent them.

Their last two letters, however, have not been answered and a letter addressed to the Premier Mortgage and Realty Company by the Chamber of Commerce three weeks ago is still unanswered.

The matter has been referred to the Springfield Chamber of Commerce and the Springfield Business Bureau with the request that the Springfield police be notified.

The question which naturally arises in one's mind is, "Why do these people keep this woman's money and refuse to give her the deed in accordance with their printed literature?" This the Chamber of Commerce proposes to find out.

Connecticut Mercantile Service Another old friend (?) gets busy. About a year ago several Manchester people brought to the Chamber of Commerce letters from a collection agency making demand for various amounts of money alleged to be due from them to clients of the collection agency. The Chamber of Commerce was satisfied from the stories of the people who brought in the letters that they did not actually know anything about the accounts which they were being asked to pay.

The Chamber took the matter up with the agency, The Connecticut Mercantile Service of New Haven, Connecticut and after considerable correspondence, succeeded in finding them that they determined to have an explanation as to what the various amount represented and to whom the money was owed.

This inquiry developed the fact that one account covered a ton of coal purchased in Danbury by a family who had a life-long residence in Manchester.

Another item was for a large expensive automobile tire purchased in Waterbury by a man who never owned any other car but a flivver and had never motored through Waterbury.

This latest demand is for a large bill of groceries, alleged to have been purchased of a firm that has not been in business in Manchester for 11 years.

As in previous cases the collection agency shows no disposition to enter into any explanation but the Chamber has advised them that no further steps toward the collection of this bill be taken until further information of proof of its validity be produced.

The Chamber would appreciate it if any Manchester people receiving communications from the Connecticut Mercantile Service, would refer the matter to them.

Postal C. O. D. Abuse Two examples of the continued abuse of the postal C. O. D. privilege has come to light during the past few days.

In one case a Manchester professional man's wife received a package from the Real Silk Hosiery Co., by mail C. O. D.

As she had never ordered the goods she refused them and reported the matter to the Chamber of Commerce.

Within a few weeks the lady went away on her vacation and the package was again received by mail C. O. D.

It happened, however, that the husband knew of the previous transaction and it was again refused and the matter reported to the Chamber of Commerce who took the matter up direct with the General Sales Department in Indianapolis.

A very courteous letter was received in reply expressing regret for the occurrence and annoyance caused the customer, and explaining that with large number of selling agents which the Real Silk people had in the field, some errors were bound to occur.

The fact remains, however, that there was a persistent effect to use the United States Mail in disposing of unordered merchandise to people who had no desire for the merchandise.

A second instance involved the Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce himself who in a moment of weakness bought a Kriss Kross Razor Strop from a salesman whom he had never seen before.

The order blank and all literature and credentials were perfectly in order.

The stropper itself was a cute, shiny little do-dad and of course the agent could make it appear to have almost human intelligence.

One dollar deposit was paid and after waiting four or five weeks a letter of inquiry was sent to Rhodes Manufacturing Company, St. Louis, Missouri.

The answer came back very promptly, "yes there was a Rhodes Manufacturing Company and they were very pleased to receive the secretaries' communication and regretted that the agent had failed to turn in the order."

The same man brought a post-card saying that the shipment would be made immediately and to be sure to have the money ready for the postman.

The price quoted by the salesman, printed on the order-blank and in the postal notice of shipment was $2.90.

Instructions were left to pay the postman $2.90 if received while the secretary was out.

accept the C. O. D. package and that it awaits instructions from him, as to disposal.

Of course that's all right! The secretary will make a Christmas present to some friend of the secretary the material is secured for a good story even at his own expense, and the oft repeated vow to have no dealings with unknown solicitors is again renewed.

TEN COMMANDMENTS AT STATE TOMORROW

Esther Ralston in Modern Version of Mosaic Code—Good Supporting Cast.

Ten commandments that Moses himself never dreamed of are exemplified in Esther Ralston's greatest picture, "Ten Modern Commandments," which is the attraction at the State for tomorrow and Wednesday. The beautiful blonde has done wonderful work in this picture and has made it something worth seeing.

The story is delightful. Jack Lait is credited with the original. Judging from the color and atmosphere he must have written it backstage. Esther Ralston appears as the beautiful theatrical boarding house maid, a child of the stage, who refuses to get behind the footlights. She has a different thought, however, when her sweetheart, capably played by handsome Neil Hamilton, can't sell his songs.

Esther goes on the stage; sells Neil's songs and, in fact, accomplishes all she set out to do through the help of "Ten Modern Commandments" which are shown her by members of the chorus.

Never before has Miss Ralston appeared to better advantage. In "Old Ironsides" she was beautiful; in "Children of Divorce" she was charming; in "Fashions for Women" she was vivacious, and now in "Ten Modern Commandments" she combines the three, retaining the best features of all.

The supporting cast is excellent. Neil Hamilton of "Beau Geste" fame, plays up to his usual high standard as the young composer. Arthur Hoyt, Maurice Truax, Romanne Fielding, Jocelyne Lee, Rose

AN EX-BACK PRIVATE goes back to FRANCE by PAUL ADAMS

This is chapter 102 of the series of articles by The Herald correspondent who is revisiting France as a scout for the American Legion.

CHAPTER CH
Madame Marie Bazin of St. Dyonis-Lore, near the Chateau de hambord, has her own system for fixing valuations.

As "The Grandmother of the A. E. F.," Madame Bazin has received thousands of letters from former American soldiers who were billeted in her vicinity. She keeps them stored in a half-dozen boxes—her treasures. Not long ago she was displaying her scrawled mementoes to a visitor. All a-flutter, she presented letters from Philadelphia, Baltimore, Detroit and hundreds of cities. Her search, however, was with a definite objective. She wanted to find the last communication she had received from Frank E. Payne, an orphan soldier whom she had figuratively adopted in 1919.

Letters were strewn all over the room in that search. Every box was opened and the contents scattered. Finally, after a full half hour, Madame Bazin, her eyes sparkling, found the missive she was looking for. It was from "Frankie," as she called him, and bore a Honolulu postmark. Scrawling in pencil, "Frankie" said that he had just secured a good job as a cook on a Pacific liner and was "doing good." He enclosed his love and said he would send along a few packets of chewing gum in a separate package.

Madam Bazin couldn't read "her boy's" script. But that made no difference. This was her last letter from him and she exhibited it with touching pride. When it was handed back she touched it to her lips. Then she began replacing the treasures in the boxes.

As she worked, a particularly distinguished-looking letter fell to the floor. She reached down, picked it up and, after an instant's scrutiny, gathered it up with a pile of postcards. Apparently, it meant very little to her; certainly it had no significance as compared to that missive from "Frankie." It would have been neglected if Madame Bazin's visitor hadn't extracted it. The contents were succinct.

"Tres Content de votre avis a Chambord."

The date of the letter was Oct. 20, 1923. And it was signed by J. Pierpont Morgan, of 12 Grosvenor Square, London.

Aw! Yes, Monocles Tell 'Em Apart

Beth and Betty Dodge of Los Angeles have found a new study—monocles. The Los Angeles twins, who recently returned from England with a fine collection of the eye-pieces, insist that the wearing of the semi-windshields is more than a hobby, it's a science. The twins are identified by the monocles. Beth wears hers only in the left eye, while Betty concentrates on her right.

BLAME ON MEN FOR DIVORCES IN MOST CASES

Expert Says Seven Years Study Shows Why Women Leave Home.

Philadelphia.—The men are to blame for most of the present-day marital difficulties according to records of the large number of divorces cases and matrimonial differences aired in the Philadelphia welfare department asserts Romaine C. Hassrick, chief of the legal aid department.

The old question of "Why do men leave home," is just the reverse today, it is now, "Why do women leave home," according to Hassrick.

Hassrick has been studying the subject for seven years. He blames the husbands in more than 60 per cent of the cases where wives walk out and break the connubial bonds.

"I don't want to appear prejudiced," says Hassrick, "but more than 12,000 cases where divorce and annulment, or matrimonial and domestic differences are considered, come under my observation each year, and in most instances the man is to blame."

Ten Good Reasons.

"There are ten good reasons," says this welfare chief, "why women in these modern times leave home and hubby to get along as best they can."

"First, in my opinion," he says, "is the inclination of the newlyweds to be extravagant; a desire to live beyond their means. They seek a neighborhood in which the rent is too high or they buy furniture or an automobile on the installment plan. Thus financial difficulties arise, often leading to a quarrel and estrangement."

"Second is incompatibility, disillusionment and inability to enjoy the same things together.

"Third is unreasonableness; an unwillingness to give and take in the course of married experience."

"Fourth is intemperance; a greater love on the part of the man for bootleg liquor than happiness in a home."

"Fifth, infidelity, and in but a very small number of cases can be attributed to the wife."

"Sixth, interference by parents."

"Seventh too many children."

"Eighth, nagging, frequently on the part of both but more aggressively and effectively on the part of a discouraged husband; a flying off the handle over some small, inconsequential matter that becomes an obsession with one or both."

"Ninth, lack of humor, as applicable to the circumstances arising in the course of married life."

Many Other Reasons.

Temperament, too, according to Hassrick, sometimes figures in a husband or vice versa. "We see many temperamental people, who do things spontaneously and then regret it an hour afterward. They come here to seek a remedy. But they don't get it. We try to help by advising," he added, "but we never prescribe how to keep happy through married."

In the records of the bureau all sorts of odd reasons for the disrupting of homes are to be found. Sometimes it's another woman in the case, or a man. Again, they have grown tired of each other and want to make a change. Bad cooking and the wife's untidiness, too much "in-law" and his or her unworthiness are among some of the other reasons for breaking up a home.

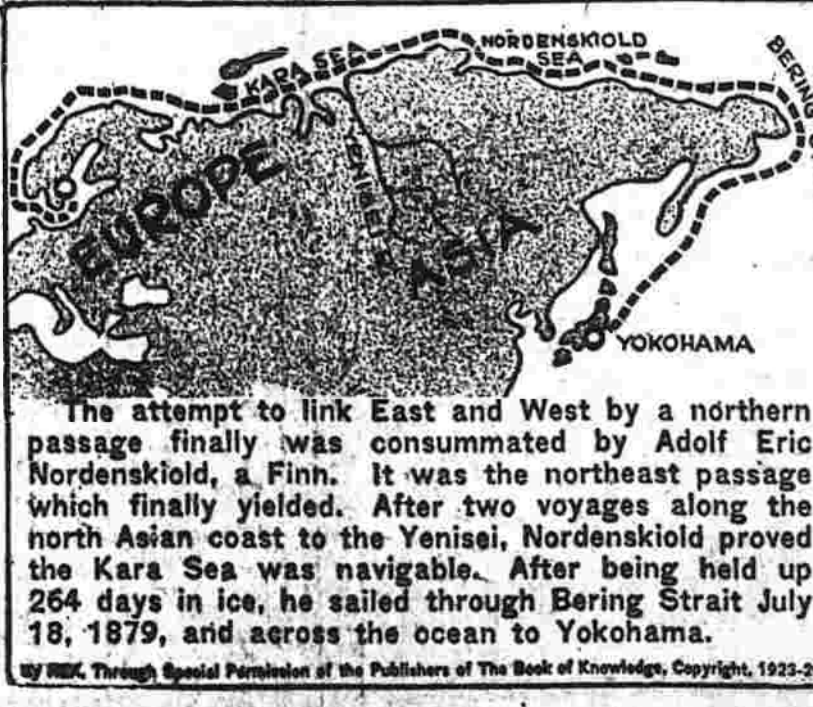

"And the thing happens with all classes of people," says Hassrick.

The office of the bureau is virtually a rendezvous for people with trouble.

"Why we even had an Indian in here the other day who said his wife left him because he smoked too much. Maybe he did," added the welfare worker, "but the girl in the case smoked, too, only she preferred a more expensive brand of tobacco."

Paris says that the proper waist-line for women this season is at least half an inch above the hips.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (51) Amundsen

The attempt to link East and West by a northern passage finally was consummated by Adolf Eric Nordenskiold, a Finn. It was the northeast passage which finally yielded. After two voyages along the north Asian coast to the Yenisei, Nordenskiold proved the Kara Sea was navigable. After being held up 264 days in ice, he sailed through Bering Strait July 18, 1879, and across the ocean to Yokohama.

TULSA PLANS BIG SEPT. RECEPTION FOR COL. LINDBERGH

Tulsa, Okla.—Only a few hours after word has been received that Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh of trans-Atlantic fame would visit Tulsa in September, the Tulsa Chamber of Commerce began formation of plans for one of the state's greatest receptions.

The Tulsa free state fair and the International Petroleum Exposition both will be in full swing and thousands of people from all over the United States are expected to be in Tulsa at the time Lindbergh arrives.

Hundreds of prominent oil men and government officials have been invited to attend the banquet of the Mid-Continent oil and gas association, to be held September 30. Secretary of Commerce, Herbert Hoover, has been asked to be the principal speaker for the occasion. Governors of all oil producing states will be urged to attend.

All events will be arranged so as not to conflict with the Lindbergh celebration.

"Our only aim is to make Lindbergh's visit the greatest event in the history of the state of Oklahoma, Mayor H. F. Newblock, wired the Lindbergh backers in New York.

"Aviation will be the big factor of this year's exposition," the mayor said.

His route led through Barrow Strait, down to Peel Sound, along the De la Roquette Islands, past the magnetic North Pole, then east of King William Land, with men sounding the uncharted waters the whole time. For two years he was held in Simpson's Strait. His task seemed impossible when winter stayed him again at King's Point in Mackenzie Bay.

INDIAN RACE WINNERS ACT LIKE WHITE FOLKS

Leaders in Coast Run Pose For Movies, Sign Theater Contract and Buy New Autos.

Is the Noble Red Man a better specimen of physical prowess than the Caucasian who ousted him from his hunting grounds in the forest primeval?

The question has been warmly discussed on the Pacific coast since eleven picked Indian runners staged the Redwood Highway marathon of 480 miles from San Francisco to Grants Pass, Oregon, in the latter part of June.

Mad Bull, a Karook Indian, one of the Oregon Cavemen entries, reached the goal first in the Redwood Highway race.

By way of comparison, coast experts recall that Edward Payson Weston, who crossed the continent at the age of 70 and covered 3700 miles in a fraction under 74 days, holds a record of 5,000 miles in 100 days, an average of 50 miles a day.

However the races may agree or differ in physical characteristics, one striking similarity between Red and White men today was revealed by the actions of the two Indian winners immediately after the finish of the Marathon.

JERRY MACKLYN, advertising manager for the Peach Bloom Cosmetics Co., proposes to change VERA CAMERON, his plain, old-maidish secretary, into a beauty and to photograph her in each stage of the change. At first Vera indignantly refuses, but that same day when she sees and falls hopelessly in love with a man she hears called SCHUYLER, she reconsiders.

She hears he is going to Lake Minnetonka in June, and as she goes back to Jerry with her decision, she tells herself she will undergo anything to be beautiful by June. Because of Vera's green eyes, Jerry is reminded of an uncaptioned Sunday supplement picture of a handsome woman, and he asks the beauty specialist to refashion Vera, using the picture as a model. The picture was in his desk when he took the job and he supposes it to be of an actress. Vera is astonishingly beautiful after the transformation.

When she sees Jerry not to use her picture in the advertising, she refuses unless she will give up her trip. When she leaves, he gives her an envelope which she is to open only if she finds herself in a "jam." At the hotel the clerk and management become deferential, offering to change her room and sending a maid up for her use.

In the dining room she sees the man she has come all the way to meet. When he sees Vera, he comes to her table and asks if she does not remember that they met in Palm Beach five years ago. She tells him he is mistaken and she leaves in confusion. After dinner, Mr. and Mrs. Bannister approach Vera and Mrs. Bannister gives her the hotel key, including the fact that Schuyler Smythe and NAN FOSDICK are probably engaged. She tells Vera to join a swimming party. Mrs. Bannister's air is deferential, and Vera begins to wonder who they think she is.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XV

WHEN Vee-Vee returned to her room for an hour's rest before dressing for the swimming party which the lively Mrs. Bannister had arranged, she found a great basket of yellow roses on her desk. Her first thought was that Jerry had sent them from New York the night before, after leaving the station, but when she lifted the card attached to the green wicker basket she read:

"With the compliments of the management of the Minnetonka Hotel."

While she was wondering whether the Minnetonka extended the same courtesy to all its arriving guests, there came a knock on the door. She opened to a large, florid, semi-bald man who bowed and beamed:

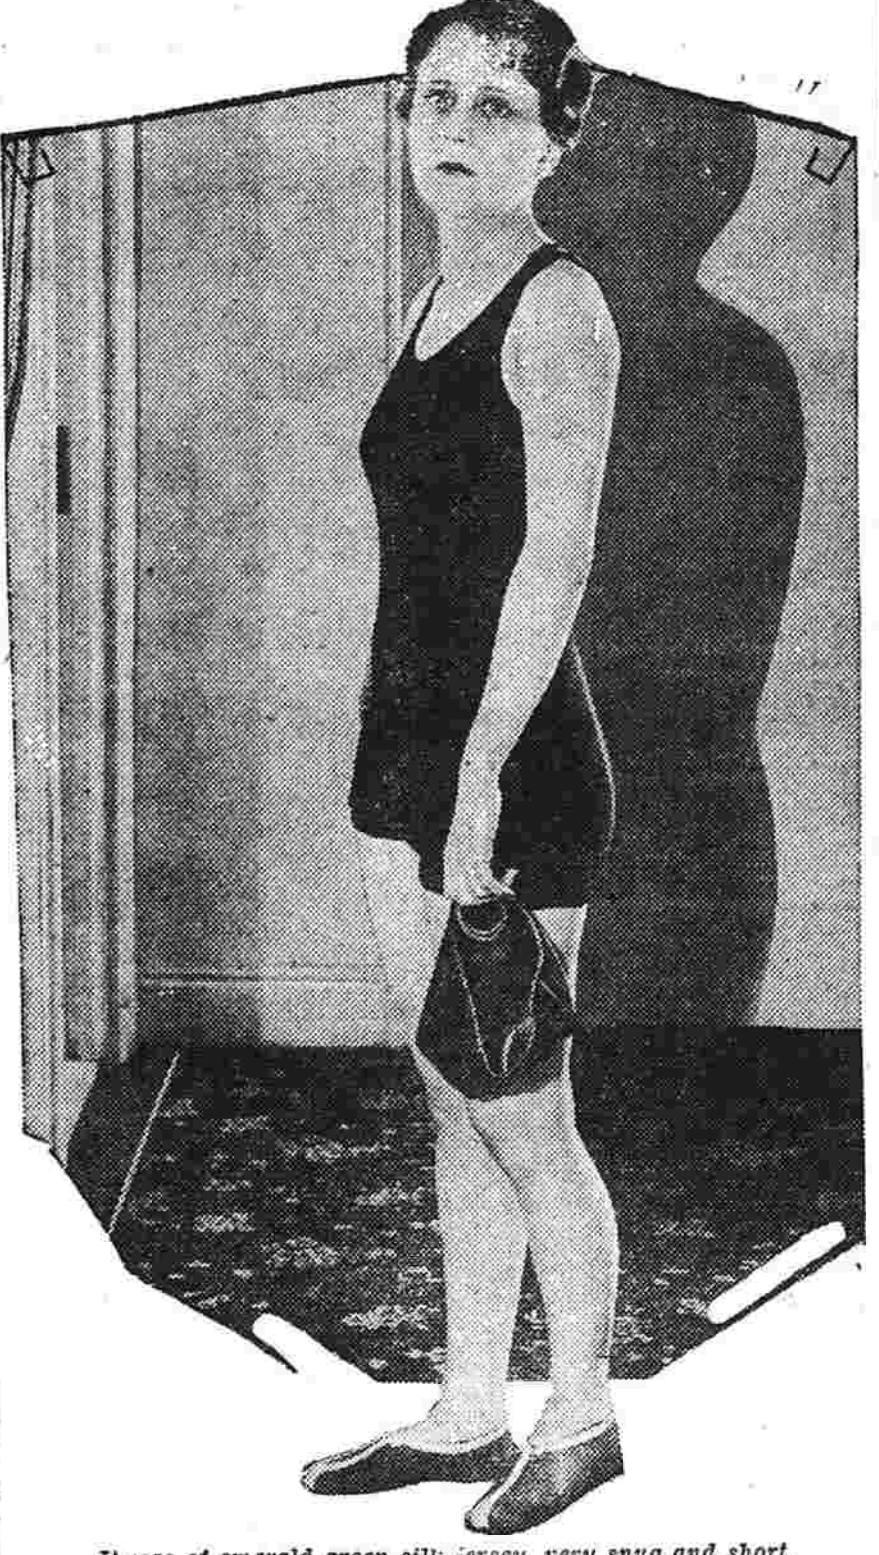

"I am Mr. Thurston, the manager, Miss—er—Cameron," he told her.

Vee-Vee had a hysterical desire to laugh and to tell him, "My name is not Miss Er Cameron; it is Miss Vera Cameron," but she controlled the impulse, merely nodding gravely.

"In the first place, Miss—er—Cameron, I'd like to assure you that we are delighted to have you, highly honored in fact," the big man began awkwardly.

"Thank you," Vee-Vee smiled, the dimple in the corner of her mouth flashing out at him. "I have just been admiring the roses you sent. It is very kind of you."

"Grown in our own conservatories," Mr. Thurston beamed. "Now, Miss—er—Cameron, the management would like to put a suite at your disposal, something more in keeping with your—er—standard of living, if you don't mind my saying so—"

It was of emerald green silk jersey, very snug and short.

"Thank you," Vee-Vee retorted firmly. "I like this room very much. I congratulate you on the good taste of your decorator. I have really no desire at all to change."

"It was about to add—at the same price you are paying for the one room," Thurston hastened to assure her, as if he were familiar with the tight-fistedness of the rich.

"Thank you," Vee-Vee repeated, more faintly. "I am very comfortable here."

When he had gone, Vera leaned weakly against the foot of her bed and groaned aloud: "Well, I wish I understood perfectly! What the devil is it all about?"

Again she remembered the letter which Jerry Macklyn had brought her, the letter which she had read in the train. What was it he had said?—"You're not to open it unless you find yourself in a jam."

She opened her envelope handbag and drew out the letter, weighed it in her hands thoughtfully. It was quite bulky. She was about to tear it open when a curious hesitancy stayed her fingers. After all, she was hardly in a "jam." She had merely been mistaken for someone else. As a result of the mistake the management of the exclusive Minnetonka Hotel was excessively anxious to please her, and guests who would probably have liked to put a suite at your disposal, something more in keeping with your—er—standard of living, if you don't mind my saying so—ing as she understood. She was about to slip into her bathing suit, conveniently laid out for her by the maid who had unpacked her trunks, when a sudden thought brought a cry of dismay to her lips.

"Good heavens!" she groaned. "I don't dare go in swimming for fear of ruining my complexion! I'll have a million freckles in two days, and Kitty Proctor won't be here to peel me again."

Wrapping a kiss on her slim, white, naked body, she got the big box containing a complete assortment of Peach Bloom Cosmetics. Searching frantically among the black and gold jars, with their pretty sprays of peach blossoms, she found what she was looking for—a greasy, vanishing cream which promised its users to prevent freckling and sunburn.

"I'll look like Schuyler's Miss Fossdick in less than a week if I don't take care," she told herself ruefully, as she drenched her face with the cream. She worked in the vanishing cream swiftly, with the tips of her fingers.

She had brought three suits with her, but the one that the maid had laid out was her favorite, since it matched her eyes. It was of emerald green silk jersey, very snug and short.

Mrs. Bannister had told her that there was a special elevator in the right wing of the hotel, which delivered its passengers into a sun parlor connected with the pavilion leading to the lake. Vee-Vee was wearing her beach coat over her bathing suit and swinging her cap by its chin strap when the elevator descended to the sun parlor with her.

"Oh, there you are!" Little Mrs. Bannister, bulging plumply out of a very tight red satin bathing suit, came bounding toward Vee-Vee. "What a dream you are! John, isn't she too divine! My dear," she lowered her voice to a whisper. "I don't blame you for anything! Any girl as sublimely beautiful as you are is a law unto herself. I just wanted you to know that I didn't blame you!" And she squeezed the bewildered girl's arm affectionately.

John Adaire Bannister—to use his whole name as his wife invariably did—revealed narrow shoulders and knobby knees in a loosely fitting wool jersey suit, as he advanced with amusing deference to Vivian's side.

"The others are coming right down," he told her, his eyes lighting up with admiration as he took in the lines of her slim, perfect body.

Even as he spoke the elevator door opened and Schuyler Smythe stepped out, alone. He was wearing a purple and black dressing gown over his bathing suit, shabby brown leather slippers on his stockings and feet.

"Miss Fossdick not here yet?" he asked, of no one in particular.

"Oh, Mr. Smythe!" Mrs. Bannister clapped her hands and bounded toward him. "Have you met Miss—er—Cameron?"

"Yes, met—a long time ago," Schuyler Smythe smiled directly into Vee-Vee's eyes.

When he bowed before her, Vee-Vee extended her hand. To her surprise and embarrassment, he raised it to his lips, murmuring as he did so, his dark eyes upraised so that they regarded her with humorous steadiness:

"But her highness has forgotten the humblest of her subjects!"

Vee-Vee's plan shows signs of success. Schuyler is smitten with her charms and Nan Fossdick exhibits jealousy. In the next chapter.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

Why can't we humans live and let live? But we can't. It's not enough for us to go serenely about our own lives and our own jobs, but we must have the audible approval of the rest of the world, and its spoken admission that our loves, our jobs, our play, is more worth while than that of all the rest. In addition to approval and acceptance of our lives, we demand pity and sympathy and recognition that our lot, perhaps, is harder than that of anyone else. Not until we stand thus accepted and thus paid tribute to as poor mortals are we at peace.

No two classes of people so illustrate this truth as married women who have life and job in the home, and an unmarried woman whose life and job is outside the home. The wife seems to think that only by disapproving of the other woman's life and work can she warmly accept her own, and the unmarried business woman seems to believe that only by jeering at the efforts of the home maker can she really justify her own existence.

The little squabble goes on especially merrily in a family which contains both kind of women. The married daughters will doubtless come off as victors in the argument and have much the easier time convincing the major portion of the family that their lot is hardest and their job most worth while. The reason for this is evident. The party having lived in an age when all women were either married or hired girls, naturally know one life, its trials and meaning, but not the other. It is natural, too, for them to uphold their own lot.

The business daughter in a family whose major members are married is expected to understand and sympathize with and enter into the general and individual problems of her family. She is supposed to appreciate to the full when brothers-in-law are out of work, when the children have measles, when rent goes up, when the house needs painting, when sister can't have a new dress, or when the plumbing freezes.

But no one ever gives a thought to her own life or her own task or if they do it is with the bland assumption that "Molly certainly has it nice; nothing to do but sit in a nice clean office all day long and draw her pay just as regular." No one ever thinks to consider Molly's trials and competition, various office troubles, and the eternal nerve-draining task of "delivering the goods."

In self-defense at depreciation given her, Miss Business Woman hoots and jeers at the inefficiency of home staying women who make mountains out of mole hills. One of the things that more or less irritate of the business woman is to the effect that if she managed her wage-paying job as sloppily as wives manage their jobs, she'd be fired pronto. Another gripe of Miss Business Woman is that the average wife thinks herself killed if her work is not finished by afternoon and the rest of the day is not for rest and amusement.

The one big truth which Miss B. W. misses is that her own job and responsibilities generally ends at 5 P. M.; the stay-at-home woman's never. There is always one more thing that can be done. After all, the old law of compensation works here as effectively as anywhere. For every gain of one, there's a loss, too, for every loss, a gain. And how futile and silly and insane such a use of measuring sticks is, anyway!

GOOD MAKE-UP FLATTERS THE EYES

By Mme. Anne Gerarde

All eyes are flattered by an artistic make-up. Light eyes demand to be scrupulously careful, for carelessness in making-up the eyes kills expression and gives a cold, hard look.

Choose the color of your make-up paste and powder by the color of your eyes. Blue eyes take mauve make-up; brown take black.

First, shade the lower lid with a little paste, scarcely touching the center, but shading gradually toward both inside and outside corners. The tone of the eye determines how much to use. Make-up should emphasize the iris, rather than kill it.

Next, shade the upper lid all over lightly, darkest near the eyelashes and growing lighter as it rises until it disappears into the eyebrow unnoticeably. Dust lightly with the matching powder. Never leave a gummy, greasy look but never use too much of the powder.

It is far better not to make-up the eye at all than to do it crudely, or too much.

Phyllis Haver Turned Down Contract To Win Success

By DAN THOMAS

Hollywood, Calif.—Once a vamp, always a vamp; once innocent, always innocent—at least that's the movie motto used by directors and producers.

Phyllis Haver has kicked over the "dope bucket" as far as such rules are concerned. No director can say to her, "No, Miss Haver, you can't play this role because it is entirely foreign to your character."

who, when she discovers that she is losing her husband, bobs her hair and adopts other flapper styles to win him back again. More versatility.

The secret of Phyllis' success is not a method that can be recommended to the average potential star. After completing her Mack Sennett contract the blonde actress took to the free lance field, turning down all contracts. In this way, although she did not work steadily at first, she was able to choose her own parts to a certain extent. And she did not allow herself to become branded as any particular type.

It was a big gamble—as anyone in celluloid life will testify, but she took it, and won.

torization in your last film." And the reason is that pretty blonde Phyllis Haver has proved her versatility.

For some reason or other Miss Haver didn't get along very fast at first. Perhaps it was because Mack Sennett had her tied up as a bathing beauty too long. But despite the fact that she had little chance to "step out," Phyllis acquired a world of good training in those bathing girl comedies.

Her first definite step toward stardom was the performance she gave in "What Price Glory." Her role of an American vampire in the Philippines was small but vital and she won the unanimous praise of critics with her portrayal. Her next part was a light comedy role in "The Rejuvenation of Aunt Mary."

Then came the greatest role of her career. Phyllis was cast as the soulless woman in Emil Jennings' "Way of All Flesh." Just as an example of her acting, while I was looking at the picture the other night a woman behind me turned to her companion and whispered, "Isn't she terrible—I would like to wring her neck."

Miss Haver is now in the midst of her first starring production, "The Wise Wife." In it she plays the part of an old-fashioned wife

HOARSENESS IS DANGER SIGNAL REQUIRING PROMPT ATTENTION

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The average person whose voice suddenly becomes hoarse is likely to attribute the condition to over-use, or to say that it is just a slight cold and will disappear.

Hoarseness is such a common affliction that it seldom receives the attention that it should. On the other hand, loss of the voice or hoarseness may sometimes be the first and only danger signal of some serious disease in which prompt treatment may save the patient untold suffering or even early death.

Dr. George D. Wolf has recently considered some important aspects of this subject. In children the sudden appearance of hoarseness may be due to the fact that some foreign material, usually a coin or some other metal substance, has been swallowed or inhaled into the larynx. If it is found that a child has suddenly begun to choke and turn blue and that these symptoms have cleared up at once and been followed by hoarseness, the swallowing or inhaling of a foreign body should be suspected. Fortunately, the presence of such a substance can be promptly determined by the use of the X-ray.

OUR MORALS ARE UP TO US

By Olive Roberts Barton

What is an obscene book? What is a bad book?

To answer that we're sort of up against it, aren't we? A frank book may teach a lesson in spite of the fact that it might conflict with the book of etiquette; a book that deals with fundamental problems surely need not be taboo because the things that occur in it run parallel with actual events in every day human lives.

True, there are prurient and pernicious books—lots of them. But so often we find them the rage of the social season, their very apparent immorality glossed over because they concern the smart set. And as they are accepted by the smart set, the country swallows them hook, sinker and line, the watch and ward societies included.

Along comes a real story with a problem that may very well be your own problem, or your child's problem—for after all who can deny that the human being in spite of culture, education and moral ethics, is an elemental creature?

The book censors start to fumble and call for the police. Need we hide our faces from a story because it involves the elements?

"Delightful," said people as the curtain fell and they gathered up their empty wraps. There was no thought of censorship. Yet the play closed on a scene where a husband watched his wife hatted and furred go out of his house for a few weeks to live with another man. "Should I come back in six weeks?" says she. "Yes, come back," growls he. Curtain. Applause!

Clever comedy—the whole way through. Beautifully done, but pernicious!

I saw another play the censors were holding their noses over. Elemental—yes! But with a fine moral lesson that should have taught charity and sympathy. A really great, strong play. I'm afraid our morals are up to us. There are bad books, bad plays, bad liquor, bad movies. We can't add an amendment to the constitution for everything that is wrong. Suppression is only an advertisement anyway.

DELANEY TAPERS OFF TRAINING; READY FOR BOUT ON THURSDAY

Will Rest Until Wednesday —To Go to New York by Easy Stages in Auto— Confident of Winning.

By SID MERCER Delaney Training Camp, Leconia, N. H., Aug. 8.—A svelte that has been denied Jack Delaney for two weeks settled down over this camp today with the departure of his manager, Pete Reilly for New York. For the last two days here Jack can rest and meditate without being disturbed by any strident voice except that of Trainer Doc Casey and the doctor's admonitions near him except when his time to come on the boxing gloves.

Reilly put his tricks back in the bag after Delaney boxed a few rounds for the education of a throng of Sunday spectators. The hot matches, the explosive cigars, the sneezing powder, the cold deck of cards and the snipe decoys were padlocked against a return of Reilly with more combat.

Delaney, who has less to say than anybody around his own place, chuckled when he saw Reilly limping to his car. Jack's manager sprained an ankle Saturday night on a snipe hunt in the woods.

Need Elevator "I knew Pete would get it sooner or later," chuckled Delaney. "He hasn't missed a night running his lightening expedition to the swamps and losing the customers. He missed a jump last night and now look at him. Guess we'll have to put an elevator in my corner Thursday night to get Pete up and down."

Boxing never seemed to be on Delaney's mind except when he puts on the gloves. You hear little conversation about "fistcuffs" around this camp and there are several professional boxers around.

"I dunno," says Delaney when you ask him about his opponent next Thursday night, "guess he's a tough guy. Pete'll tell you."

Delaney boxes here today for the last time. He will drive down to New York by easy stages, starting early tomorrow morning. Two pals from Bridgeport, Gene Ozzello and Owen Curley, will accompany him here this summer, will accompany him first to Holyoke and Bridgeport and then to New York. He probably will loosen up at the Garden gymnasium Wednesday afternoon and then all the boys can get a peek at him. Mrs. Delaney, who is spending the summer here, will not leave. She has never seen Delaney fight, in fact, never saw him box in training up to this time.

Peter Reilly thinks Delaney is a sure thing to stop Paolino. He says the Basque will not rough Jack in the clinches or hold him close and attack the body with short punches.

Delaney has been boxing easily these few days, taking every precaution against a cut or bruise. He lets go the gloves with his real stuff. Now and then he unorks a left hook to the stomach that Mr. Paolino will not like. At other times his left is dangling in such a way that he can either hook or jab with it. He "mixes 'em" to good effect and makes openings for right uppercuts or crosses. But he hasn't wasted his ammunition and his sparring partners are not faring badly.

CHENEY BROS. ADD NEW BALL PLAYERS

Hope to Score More Impressive Victories Over Local Teams in the Future.

Because the team in general is not altogether satisfied with the unexpected close opposition which two supposedly inferior local teams have given it in the past fortnight, Cheney Brothers have decided to take on added strength for the remainder of the baseball season.

Announcement was made today that Jack Linnell, Jack Stratton and probably other players will be added to the lineup and while no reason was advanced, the aforementioned statement is probably not far from the truth. Then, too, Cheneys have been weakened somewhat by having players on vacation.

But, be the reason for the bolstering as it may, the changes are to be made ere the twilight tilt with the Bon Ami Thursday at the West Side. Recently the north end contingent held Cheneys to a 5 to 2 decision and the other night Manchester Green showed up well in coming out on the short end of a 3 to 1 count. In both cases, the results were surprises inasmuch as the C. B. A. outfit is supposed to be composed of far more experienced players.

Maybe Thursday night will bring about a change. But if it doesn't, the fans will probably be more pleased for the last two games have been well played and interesting and increases attendance has turned out in each instance. In other words, the fans prefer to see the home boys in action.

Cheneys will practice tonight at the West Side at 6 o'clock in preparation for their attempt to scalp the Bon Ami again Thursday. Saturday afternoon will find the Cheneys "imprisoned" at Wetherfield for a shot at the States Prison team.

The Bon Ami game with the East Hartford Dixies Saturday was cancelled late Saturday morning. Next Saturday, Broad Brook will play here.

HEIGHTS SWAMP ANDOVER 10 TO 3

Gleason Holds Mantelli's Farmer Boys at Bay; Burkhardt Touched for 14 Hits.

The fast stepping Heights found little trouble in winning from the Andover team in that town yesterday afternoon. The score was 10 to 3. Manchester scored three runs in the first inning and Andover tied the count in the second, only to go scoreless the remainder of the contest.

While the Heights were pounding out 14 base knocks, Gleason was limiting the Andoverites to six singles. The only extra base blow was a triple by Lovett. Burkhardt was on the hill for Andover.

The Heights are dickering for a twilight game Thursday night and will play in Hartford Sunday at Sage Park against the St. Anthony team. Yesterday's box score:

NO SIGN OF CRACK IN CUBS' PLAYING

New York, Aug. 8.—Although rival contenders and baseball observers have been predicting for some time that the Chicago Cubs are due to crack, the Bruins refuse to be experted out of the National League pennant race.

The Cubs have lost to Brooklyn only once all season. They spotted the Robins to a 100 run lead yesterday and then tossed them out in the eleventh, six to five.

A three-run rally in the eighth featured by Holm's homer, enabled the Cardinals to down the Braves, six to four, and advance to within two games of Pittsburgh.

The Reds ran wild and took both of a twin bill from the Phillies, six to one and two to one. Jake May and Red Lucas held the Phils helpless.

scoring all their runs in a big rally featured by Bengough's double, the Yankees stymied the White Sox four to three. Wilcy Moore, the champion relief pitcher, saved the game.

The Senators banged out fifteen hits and swamped Cleveland twelve to three. Hadley, Washington's lanky rookie from Birmingham, stood for no nonsense from the Indians.

National League "Play Fair and Work Hard" Is Johnson's Only Formula For Success, Evans Writes

By BILLY EVANS

When I asked Walter Johnson for the success formula he used during his career as a ball player, he laconically replied: "Play fair and work hard."

Those five words tell the story of the remarkable success and world-wide popularity that Johnson has achieved over a period of 20 years as a league pitcher.

Without fear of contradiction, I say that Walter Johnson is the most beloved ball player in all the history of the game. There is no better way to judge one's standing than in the rank and file of the profession in which one is engaged.

Ask any ball player who knows Walter Johnson how he regards him and the reply is always the same: "He's a great pitcher and an even greater fellow."

Walter Johnson hasn't an enemy in the game. He has been one of the players that has more than done his bit in uplifting the game to its present high standard.

"They're all tough. Any player capable of making the big league grade isn't to be treated lightly by a pitcher."

It would surprise you if I said some batters, generally regarded as weak hitters, have been most troublesome to me.

"Take Everett Scott, who for years was one of the star shortstops of the American League. Scott was far from a 300 batter, but was one of the most dangerous hitters I ever faced in a pinch. He had a habit of slapping or pushing at the ball rather than swinging and very often that proves the best system against speed, which has always been my greatest asset."

"What a marvelous hitter Larry Lajoie was! I remember Crawford told me that he had seen plenty of woe. This Speaker, Eddie Collins

CANADIAN BOXERS IN 'DROME TONIGHT

Four Man Team From Dominion Expects to Stop Hartfordites.

The Massasoit A. C. is staging its last amateur boxing show of the season at the Hartford Velodrome tonight.

Canada is sending a four-man team which will engage a selected Hartford four-man team, in addition to these inter-area bouts, there will be at least eight inter-city clashes, which will bring together nearly a score of the leading amateurs of Connecticut and Massachusetts.

Joe Howard of Hartford will clash with Sam Houson of Canada. Ladies will take on Willie Burns; Mickey Roberts is bracketed with Angie Dunn and Vic Morley is on the books to battle Harry Chevallier.

The inter-city bout that promises the most action is that which will pit Lariviere of Waterbury clashing with Harry Ryder, hard-hitting Hartford colored boy. Lariviere kayoed Ryder at Waterbury Thursday night when Ryder was well out of control. The Capital City brawler will be seeking revenge with a Capital R tonight.

Another bout of rare promise is that in which Marino Pagoni of Springfield will meet the fast-traveling Dan Doran of Hartford.

Ladies will be admitted free and there will be a band concert by Tassilo's band. The usual popular scale of prices will prevail.

The entry list and some of the pairings for Monday night's bouts:

165 pound class—Joe Howard, Hartford; Sam Houson, Canadian champion.

160 pound class—Joe Bard, Hartford; Billy Burns, Canada.

147 pound class—Vic Morley, Hartford; Harry Chevallier, Canada.

122 pound class—Mickey Roberts, Hartford; Angie Dunn, Canada.

Inter-City Bouts. 133 pound class—Dan Doran, Hartford; Marino Pagoni, Springfield.

160 pound class—Lon Gamber, Hartford; Billy Kelly, Waterbury.

Hartford and suburbs — Eddie O'Sullivan, 194; Paul Tero, Johnny Gusta, Joe Glento, Joe Reed, Tom Orlando, Joe Champ, Wm. Dombriski and Bill Taylor, Terryville.

LOCAL SWIMMERS WIN ALL HARTFORD EVENTS

Take First and Second Places in Every Event Competed in at Capitol Park.

Capitol Park swimmers proved easy for the Manchester merman who competed there yesterday and the local boys took first and second in every event in which they were entered. Markley, Buckland and Hicking were winners.

Markley was pitted against Warnock in the 100 yard swim and won it by a narrow margin. Warnock, in the next race, the 50-yard backstroke, gave Buckland, the winner, a hard battle and lost by little more than a yard.

Hicking and McHale, two of the juveniles, put up a pretty exhibition in their 50-yard free style, the former winning with little to spare. McHale pressed him all the way and the two of them led the rest of the field by more than fifteen yards at the finish.

THE TINYMITES STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KNICK

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

The smokestack, made of peppermint, had melted to a mixed-up tint. The ship itself was spreading out upon the whipped cream sea. The sun kept shining mighty hot. The times knew that, like as not, in a half hour or maybe less, in trouble they would be.

Across the Taffy Clowny ran, a-shouting, "Where's the Taffy Man?" "I'll bet he'd help us if he knew our boat was fading out. There's nothing left now but the rim of our good ship. We'll have to swim. I wonder if 'twould do much good if we would stand and shout."

Then Scouty said, "Let's try that plan, and yell as loudly as we can. Perhaps someone will hear us and will save us from the sea." So, up they stood, this frightened crowd, and all of them yelled, right out loud, "Please help this bunch of Tinymites. We're scared as we can be."

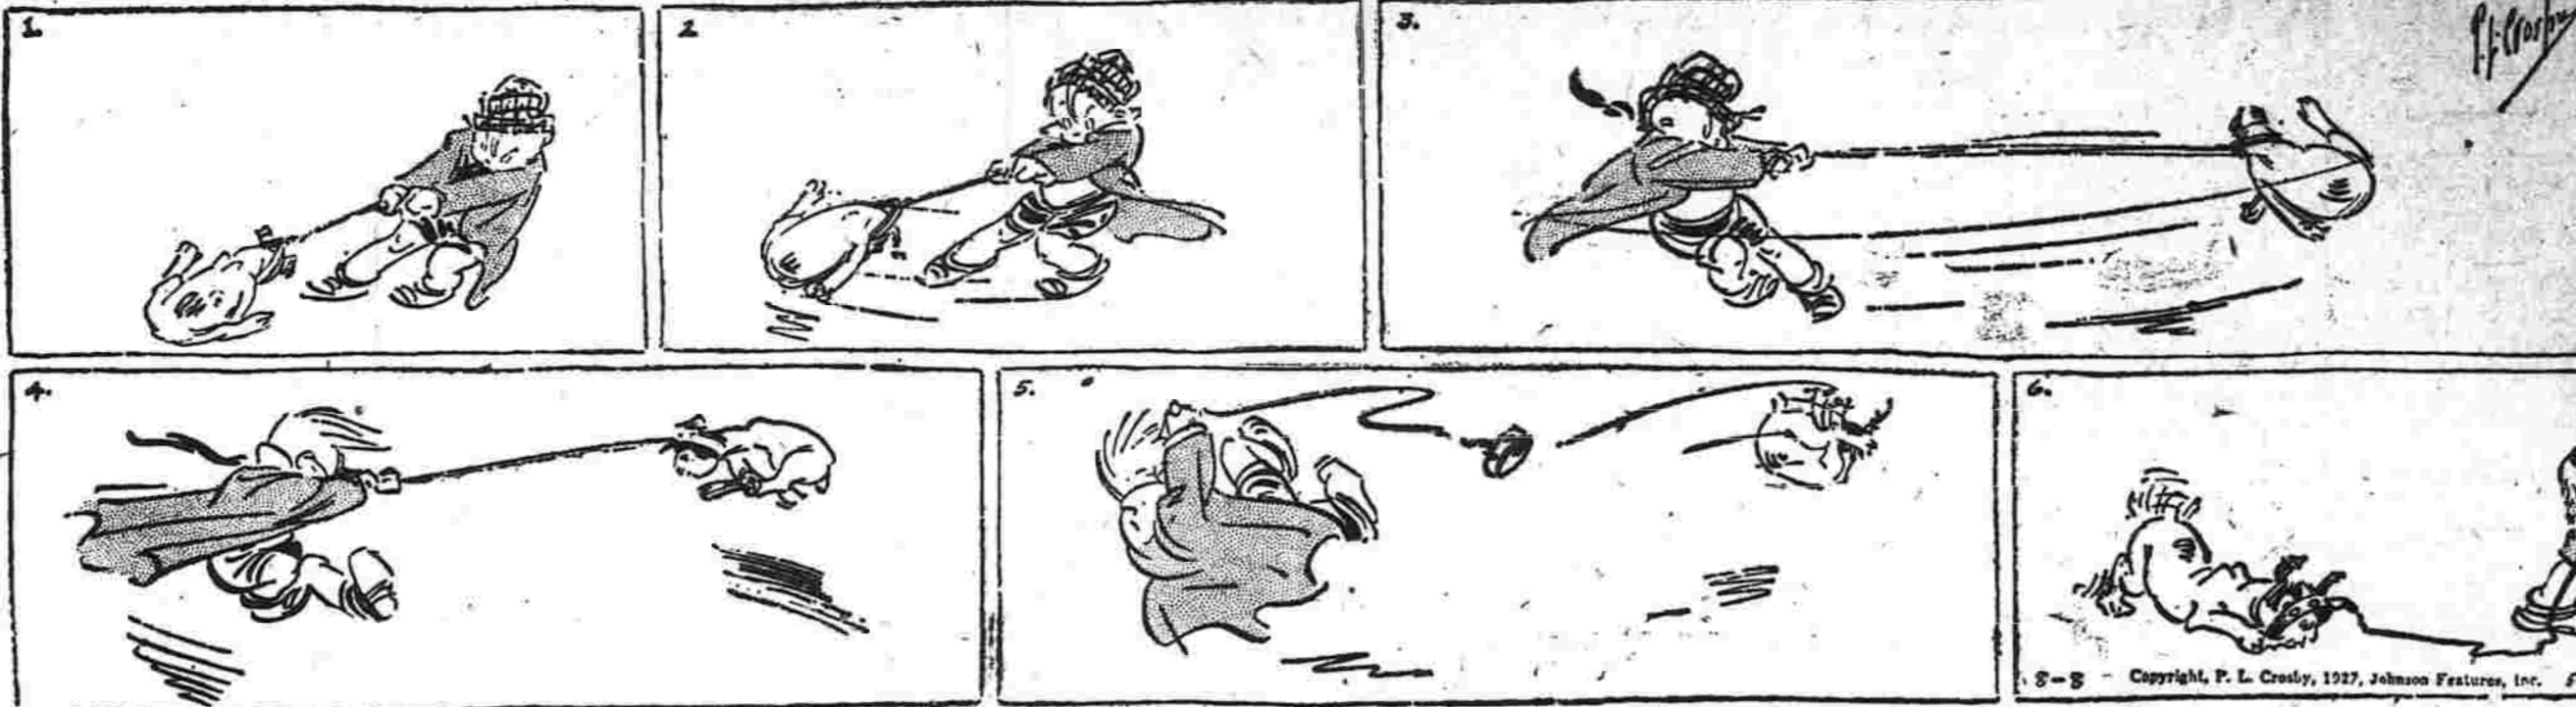

Just then the whipped cream, near at hand, began to foam to beat the band. It looked just like a geyser as it jumped up in the air. "Oh, look!" said Carpy. "Goodness me, a boat's come right up from the sea, and now it's heading for us. Gee, this gives me quite a scare."

Then Coppy yelled, with interest keen, "Why say that thing's a submarine. I'll bet it's coming after us. At least I hope that's true." And sure enough, the boat came near, and filled the Tinymites with cheer for, from the upper part of it, a man was peering through.

He shouted, "Say, I have a hunch I'd better rescue all your bunch. Just climb aboard my submarine. 'Tis we that you were found." And so, the Tinymites did as told, and shortly they had grabbed a hold and climbed up on the sub. Then Scouty said, "We're safe and sound."

(The submarine runs up on land in the next story.)

"The leader of the trio was a big fellow who looked husky enough to be a match for two or three ordinary boys. His pugnacious face wore a grin of satisfaction. 'Grab him if he tries to dodge and run,' he ordered, advancing on the Indian lad. 'Run!' echoed the latter, standing his ground. 'Why should I run?' 'Because you're the dirty bum who smashed our canoe,' was the answer."

"You speak with a crooked tongue," declared the copper-colored boy, resting his hands lightly on his narrow hips. "I've never seen you before."

"You won't want to see us again after I'm done with you," said the huge chap. "I'm 'Buke' Saunders, and I'm going to fix your face so your mother won't know you."

"And I!" said the young Indian, "am Tom Longpine, son of a sachem, Peter Longpine. My father has taught me it is fool's wisdom to fight the white man, even when we are in the right. Always the white man sends us to jail." "That's where you belong," retorted Saunders. "And whether you fight or not, I'm going to give you the mauling you deserve." He sprang at Tom Longpine.
