HEBRON

Funeral services of the late Mrs. Edward A. Raymond were held at the Congregational church Sunday at 2:30 p. m. The Rev. John Deeter, pastor of the church officiated. The funeral was largely attended. Burial was at the Raymond lot in Colchester cemetery. The deceased was a native of West Woodstock but had spent most of her life in Hebron. The church had been closed for two weeks on account of the infantile paralysis scare but was opened for the funeral as circumstances made it impossible to hold it at the residence of the deceased.

Among Sunday guests were Mr. and Mrs. Sherwood Raymond and children of New Britain, and their sister, Mrs. Lulu Lord of Manchester Green. They took Mrs. Della Porter to Manchester where she will be the guest of Mrs. Lord for a week.

Miss Maud Clark of East Hampton spent the week-end at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Clark. Miss Irma Lord of the Willimantic State Normal Training school spent the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Loren M. Lord.

The chance warning of pedestrians prevented a young woman automobilist from driving from the Marlborough road towards Hebron Center on the partly constructed stretch which shortens the distance to the Green from the west. This road bed is banked up some ten feet high and there is a heavy drop of a few rods from the intersection of the roads. There were no danger signals placed to warn the automobilist away from this dangerous spot. Many drivers also get fooled by the new unfinished road to Marlborough which looks attractive but which ends a half mile on a sand bank. The old road should be taken as a detour toward the west as far as to the Frankel place but there is no sign placed to this effect where the old and new roads intersect. As the Marlborough road is used considerably it would seem that proper signs and danger signals ought to be placed where needed.

A considerable improvement is reported in the case of Winthrop Porter who has infantile paralysis at Hartford hospital.

CLERKS OBJECT TO SHUT-IN THURSDAY

But Many Merchants Favor Dropping Holiday; Sales Folk "Not Overworked."

The moot question of whether or not stores in Manchester will keep open for business Thursday afternoons and evenings instead of Tuesday evenings will come up for thorough discussion at 6:30 tomorrow night when the Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce meets at the School street Recreation Center. It has been urged by several of the leading merchants that it would be beneficial to their businesses to remain open Thursday instead of closing for a half-day as has been the custom for many years.

The sentiment of many of the salesmen and saleswomen in the stores, however, appears to be strongly opposed to the change.

One man said today: "We salesmen are not against any change for the betterment of business but do not think we should be deprived of our regular Thursday afternoon holiday to which I believe we are entitled inasmuch as we work half an hour longer each day than the Hartford store clerks and two nights a week to boot, while in Hartford the stores are closed every day in the week. Obviously, it is the idea of certain merchants to keep open Thursday afternoons with the view of preventing Manchester people from going to Hartford and trade. They should remember that a horse may be led to water but he can't be made to drink."

Merchants Differ It is evident, despite the clerks' attitude, however, that there is a strong drift of opinion among the merchants toward a change from the present arrangement of business hours. It is no secret that Tuesday night trade has fallen off. Many of the dealers contend that it will not only be beneficial to them to keep the stores open Thursday afternoons and evenings, but will also be an appreciated service to the patrons.

One merchant said he thought the clerks' fear from overworked and that there is no reason why they should not stay on their jobs Thursday afternoons the same as they do in the Hartford stores. "If they don't like it here, they should remember that the trolley cars run both ways, and they can go to Hartford and get jobs if employment there is so much pleasanter."

Attendance at the opening session of evening schools in Manchester last night was far greater than expected, Principal A. N. Potter said today. Many High School graduates have registered, taking mathematics and stenography courses.

Although the exact figures of the opening night's attendance are not available, about 450 students were present. Mr. Potter said that this number would be considerably increased by the registration of students during the session this week and might exceed last year's enrollment of 542 students.

TOWN PLANNING LOSES, CHARTER REVISION VOTED

vision, but disagreed that the Selectmen should appoint the Charter Revision committee. Several arguments relative to parliamentary procedure developed in this case. E. L. G. Hohenthal moved an amendment that a committee be named by the meeting to bring in the names of those who were to serve on the Charter Revision committee. William B. Rogers wanted to know how many should be on the committee that would pick the committee. Frank Cheney Jr. moved an amendment to Mr. Hohenthal's amendment that a committee of seven be chosen by the meeting to serve with the Selectmen in selecting a Charter Revision committee. The vote was put and carried. The committee named from the floor was: Edward J. Holl, E. L. G. Hohenthal, William Schiedge, Mathias Spiess, Robert V. Treat, Frank Cheney Jr., and Thomas Ferguson.

Appropriations The appropriations as proposed by the Selectmen were voted with the exception of the police and library items which were increased. In voting the park appropriation of $12,500 William C. Cheney, chairman of the park commission, said that more money could be used since the expense of this board is increasing every year, but he agreed with the Selectmen that expenses should be kept down as much as possible. On motion of E. L. G. Hohenthal the police appropriation was increased to $38,000. This was carried easily. Mr. Hohenthal also moved the increase of the library item by $500 totaling $2,000.

When all appropriations were voted Horace B. Cheney moved that the highway appropriation be increased $2,500 and placed at the disposal of the Selectmen for town planning purposes. Here again parliamentary procedure was debated but the motion was finally beaten.

A discussion of the advisability of attempting to be relieved of financial responsibility in connection with the Connecticut River bridge was brought up at the end of the meeting. It was the opinion of the meeting that if Manchester had equity in valuable property along the Boulevard it should hold it since it would someday be worth considerably more than is being spent for upkeep.

The votes passed at last night's meeting follow: VOTED—That this meeting authorize the appointment of not to exceed six policemen for the ensuing year.

TOWN MEETING

The defeat of the proposal to raise a town planning commission by the Manchester town meeting last night, while it undoubtedly carries with it some measure of disappointment to the more active proponents of the idea, cannot by any means be regarded as a rejection of the theory that town planning; rather, it means merely that the voters chose what seemed to them the better of two alternative ways of reaching a generally desired result.

The trouble with the kind of planning board contemplated by the general statutes is that practically everything depends on the quality and point of view of its personnel. It might be entirely possible to erect a commission whose members would work hand in glove and see eye to eye with the selectmen; and then, after a period of years, as the personnel of the commission changed, it might also be entirely possible for us to find ourselves with a planning board which would not work with the administrative body at all well.

Another point, for reasons of delicacy not mentioned in last night's debate, is that there is always a possibility of the intrusion into planning boards, as the years pass, of individuals not above combining the authority of the town planner with the foresight of the land speculator; for the temptation to direct the physical development of the town in directions where the effect on land values would be profitable to the planner or his associates might easily become very great.

Decidedly there is nobody now connected with the town planning movement here who is in the remotest degree open to suspicion of any such ulterior purpose. But even if the commission had been created and its first members were altruists to a man, the personnel of the board might not always continue to be so altruistic.

In the matter of charter revision the meeting took constructive action which the town will never regret. We are inclined to the belief that it was the part of wisdom to relieve the selectmen of part of the responsibility for the selection of the revision committee. The result should be the appointment of a highly capable group of revisionists, and the direct participation of the meeting in the matter eliminates any subsequent possibility of charges of bureaucracy.

Another matter on which it seems to us the town is to be congratulated is the increase by the meeting of the police appropriation by a small but needed amount. This is an unusual, if not extraordinary, thing for a Manchester town meeting to do and indicates a lively determination on the part of the voters to provide money where it is really needed, while maintaining rigid adherence to the policy of rationally strict economy.

SPYING

The Supreme Court of the United States is being called on to decide whether dry agents, in the pursuit of evidence against suspected violators of the prohibition laws, have the right to tap private telephone wires, particularly in states where it is against the law to intercept telegraph or telephone messages.

A large number of convictions were brought in Oregon as the result of systematic listening-in on conversations carried on by suspects. The eavesdropping was made possible by tapping the wires in an office building. Counsel protested that the method of the dry officers was in conflict with the fourth amendment to the United States constitution as well as being contrary to Oregon statute law. The trial court admitted the evidence and Ninth District Court of Appeals approved, though one of the judges strenuously dissented. Now the case is before the Supreme Court.

It will be interesting to note whether the Supreme Court agrees with the contention of the convicted persons that the tapping of a telephone line by officers of the law constitutes a violation of the right of the people "to be secure in their persons, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable search and seizure," as guaranteed by the fourth article of the bill of rights. And still further, whether federal spies are to be immune from the operation of the police power of the various states.

It would not be, perhaps, a vital matter to most people whether a bunch of bootleggers were convicted by methods a little questionable. But it is highly vital to all the people if a government right is established to exercise surveillance over the private communications of citizens generally. It is difficult to see any great difference between spying tapping wires to get bootlegging evidence and adopting the same tactics to get purely political information, as in Russia.

THE CATCHER

Tomorrow begins the crowning annual event of American sports, the World Series of baseball games. Four, five, six, possibly seven games will be played and every afternoon, while they are on, the economic efficiency of the United States will undergo an appreciable diminution. Millions of persons will be more absorbingly interested in each play of each game than in anything else in the world, for the time being.

And if all the dynamics that enter into the discussions over the virtues of the man who do the pitching were converted into applicable energy it would probably suffice to hurl a projectile to the moon or run the wheels of industry in forty-eight states. But nobody, unless he happens to make a home run with three on or to commit the unpardonable sin of a passed ball, will mention or even think about the catcher of either team. Of all the flock he will be the least considered—he always is.

It is only the wise old birds of managers who know that the most important cog in the whole baseball organization is the hard-working slave behind the mask. Half the time—and more than half—his are the brains of the team. Half the time—and more than half—it is the chap who grabs the ball behind the batter who directed its course. He is the strategist, the nimble-wit, the animating impulse of inside ball. Four times in five he knows more baseball than all the rest of the team, star pitchers included, put together.

But will the crowds and the public go mad over any catcher in this series? No, indeed. For the good and sufficient reason that they don't know what it is all about.

WHALERS' SHARES

An interesting article in the New London Day concerning the old whaling days, written by Judge Alfred Coit of the port city, sheds some light on the compensation received by the men who risked their lives in that extra-hazardous occupation. The case of the bark Emily is cited. She sailed in 1857, was gone forty-two months and took 1,022 barrels of oil. The catch sold for $43,000. The owners of the little ship received $28,000. The remaining $15,000 paid the officers and crew for the three and a half years' voyage. The captain, on a one-sixteenth lay, received $2,580—about $64 a month. The ordinary fore-mast hands, on a two-one-hundredths lay, theoretically received $215 each for their forty-two months, about $5.38 a month.

But since the slop chest account had to be subtracted from that theoretical share, the men probably got, at the end of the voyage, about the price of a pair of going-ashore shoes and two drinks. The rate of division of a whaling ship's earnings was explained, if not so precisely as in Judge Coit's article, perhaps as illuminatingly, by an old captain long since gone to his reward.

"You see," said this veteran, "when a whaler finished her voyage they used to set up a big screen on the dock, like a coal screen only a bit finer, and through it they ran all the oil they'd taken. What passed through the meshes went to the owners and the captain and mates. What stuck to the wires went to the crew."

Those, it will be remembered, were the "good old days" when everybody played fair.

BANKRUPTCY PROBE

Any expectation that the federal grand jury investigation into the Mischel-Sullivan bankruptcy case might ramify into an inquiry into the activities of bankruptcy lawyers of this state in general now seems somewhat unlikely of fulfillment. The dismissal of the jury at New Haven yesterday, subject to call, is believed to be tantamount to an admission that nothing further will be done until the missing Hartford attorney, Benjamin D. Baggish, is found. In which case it would appear rather unlikely that the grand jury is to be asked to investigate bankruptcy practice in general.

WANTED, A FIGHT

Whatever got into the Democrats of the towns of the state yesterday and caused them to turn out in proportionately larger numbers than did the Republicans, it cannot be said to have reached the Manchester Democracy with any such force as to set them jumping or whooping. From the extremely poor showing made by that party in the town elections it would almost appear as if the Democratic party in this town had forgotten its traditional virtue of being at least willing to fight.

It would be sincerely regretted if this state of affairs were to become chronic. The Manchester G. O. P. needs an antagonist to sharpen its teeth on. And what good, as an opponent, is a Democracy that has no more pep in it than was manifested yesterday?

HER CAREER

Young Miss Claire Pinioski, otherwise Clouting Claire the Morton Street Mauler, of Newark, who stands five feet two and weighs 130 pounds, is fairly raring to get at anybody and everybody, of either sex, of approximately her own size, in the prize ring. That's all right with us, if such is the way Claire feels about it, for we believe in that God-given right of self-expression. But somebody ought to impress upon Claire that here, of all the many that there are, is the career where one must indeed eschew matrimony if she would pursue her art.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER Washington.—As they try to guess what sort of farm relief legislation will be passed by the next Congress, such friends as the farmer has in Washington are sometimes bothered by vague doubts as to whether it will ever be possible to pass anything which the president can consistently approve.

Some bill undoubtedly will be passed and it might conceivably be passed over a Coolidge veto. The McNary-Haugen bill's supporters say they will push that measure again and try to beat the veto with it, but the chances are that they will finally accept some compromise bill which would attract more support in Congress and also stand a better chance of the presidential approval.

May Oppose Bill There is, however, a small insect in the butter. And that is that the president's message in vetoing the McNary-Haugen bill was so withering and so comprehensive that it might be reasonably construed as an argument against any sort of relief which would be anywhere near satisfactory to the farm bloc.

A study of the McNary-Haugen veto message in conjunction with perusal of almost any of the outstanding proposals for relief legislation shows this to be the case. Take, for instance, the so-called "administration bill" or "Jardine bill" which was ballyhooed at Rapid City as having the Jardine-Hoover-Mellon approval and strong prospects of support by Coolidge himself. This bill seems to be modeled after the lines of the old Curtis-Crisp bill, also known as an "administration bill," but that isn't the point.

While the "Jardine bill" is not at all satisfactory to the farm bloc, it is almost impossible to see how it can be satisfactory to President Coolidge, either. It doesn't contain the very controversial McNary-Haugen feature of the "equalization fee" but it contains numerous other features against which the president went definitely in record. And Mr. Coolidge is reputed never to reverse himself.

What Is It Then? The president described government price-fixing as a "great economic folly from which this country has every right to be spared." But this bill provides for "price stabilization" or "control" by a federal board appointed by the president and if that doesn't mean price fixing someone will have to explain the difference for those who are too obtuse to discern it.

Mr. Coolidge advised Congress that high prices one year always meant greater acreages the next year complicated by decreased production. But that inasmuch as the problem was one of crop surpluses an attempt to keep prices high would leave the farmer worse off than ever. Dumping surpluses at low prices prevailed at home eventually would bring the same commodities pouring back over the tariff wall into this country at prices below the domestic figure, he suggested. If surpluses were dumped at home, of course, domestic buyers would hold off buying in anticipation of the dumping.

Inasmuch as one of the duties of the "Jardine bill" farm board is to handle surpluses and no one has suggested destroying the surplus, something must be done with it and it is assumed that the idea is to dump it abroad and depend on the loss to be equalized by the gain at home.

"It ignores the fact that production is curbed only by decreased, not increased prices," wrote the president. But the "administration bill" does not provide for any scheme for control of production except through co-operatives and it most certainly does not suggest that production ought to be controlled by decreased prices. Both Have Same Fault The president said the McNary-Haugen bill would subject agriculture to "the tyranny of bureaucratic regulation and control." Well, the McNary measure provided for 12 members of a federal board to control and dispose of surpluses who would be selected from men named by farm co-operatives. The "administration bill" provides for a board of three men presiding appointed plus the secretary of agriculture who would have complete control of the agricultural system. In most respects it would appear to have antecipatory powers equal to those of the McNary-Haugen board and because three of the four members would be members of the party controlling the administration it has been charged that this bill if made law would be likely to throw the power of manipulating the entire national agriculture into the hands of Wall Street.

A New Yorker in Paris

Aboard the S. S. Paris, Somewhere at Sea, Oct. 4.—More notes from the log of a sea-going Gothamite. . . . The "lady-across-the-table" is what Parisians and Americans alike refer to as "the gigolos' delight." . . . Already she is talking of how divinely these paid partners of the Paris cafe dance. . . . Her age is uncertain, to say the least . . . Her face shows signs of at least one lifting and of many trips to beauty parlors, most of which seem to have been in vain. . . . She tries so terribly hard to be so terribly young and gay, except on those occasions when she makes reference to "before my dear husband died." . . . The rings, bracelets and necklaces inform you at once that "when the dear husband died" her financial troubles were over. . . . She talks blantly and endlessly of past travels over the Atlantic. . . . "But it is Paris I love. . . . One can always have a dancing partner there. . . . For a few franc you can buy the best gigolo. . . . And they all dance so well. . . . I spend a great part of my money just buying dances." . . . Another of our "dancing grandmas" setting out to be giddy. . . . They tell me that there is one on every boat. . . .

Which reminds me—the story has recently come from Paris of an enormously rich American society woman of fading years who has bought up most of the gigolos of the best dance resorts. . . . It was noticed that when she danced she wore long black gloves, although they were not in fashion. . . . She explained that she couldn't have her. . . . They were all right to dance with. . . . But. . . . well, you know how it is. . . . And there's the little French girl who has 90 per cent of the ship's male population in her wake. . . . Far more beautiful American girls sit about unscouted, watching with uncomprehending eyes. . . . At the table where the French girl sits the crowd ebbs and flows. . . . She can handle one or ten with equal dexterity. . . . And about her is that inimitable pert vivacity which cannot be imitated. . . . The beautifully chiseled girl from New England, for all the world like something carved from marble and put into clothing sits by watching in fascinated attention. . . . Here, across a few tables one can study the extremes of feminine method. . . . And since this is shipboard, and diversion is the aim, mademoiselle is mistress of the bar. . . . As she fills past the "girl-of-moments" they exchange uncomprehending glances. . . . Neither pretends to understand the other. . . . One can sense that the "marble girl" is thinking: "How does she do it?" While the French girl is saying to herself: "With her beauty why does she not have all the men? Why doesn't she thaw out and become feminine?"

And there's the sea-going goldfish. . . . From his gilded-in cage just over the children's sandpile he can wistfully look out upon the endless miles of water and contemplate the strange ways of humans who, not content with caging themselves, take a fish with them to sea, adding to his bitterness by making him look out upon water in which he can never dwell. . . . It's strange how thrilling the simplest incident becomes once one has cut loose from the hectic high-ways. . . . Last evening, about four bells, we sighted a school of porpoises. . . . Those who had witnessed this sight became the bar-room homers, carefully spinning their stories to the unfortunates who had been napping. . . . I saw a famous captain of industry rush from his stateroom as the news traveled about while a vaudeville team, looking for a booking in Paris, condescended to give him an eye-witness account. HEBRON

The feeling of uneasiness over the infantile paralysis situation has been somewhat allayed since it has been learned that the reported case in Andover has proved not to be that disease. There has however been one case in Andover. Health Officer J. Banks Jones has ordered the library to be closed for two weeks as well as the churches and Sunday schools and the center schools of Hebron and Gilead.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett G. Lord and their daughter Clarissa, also Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Robinson attended the wedding of Miss Esther Lord to Mahlon Chapman of Rockville on Saturday. The wedding took place at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Lulu Lord in Manchester. Others from this place attending the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Raymond, grandparents of the bride, Miss Clarissa Lord acted as bridesmaid.

Ernest Giordano and family who lived on the Clayton A. Lord place left town suddenly a few days ago, leaving many debts. Several attachments have been placed on such property as could be seized in the last day or two. The Giordano family, etc., had been disposed of by the family. The Lord place burned to the ground some months ago and since that time the Giordano family have lived in a temporary shelter erected by them. They were allowed part of the insurance money and were treated generously by those holding mortgages on the place.

Miss Helen Gilbert of the Unquava School in Bridgeport spent the week-end at her Hebron home.

Mrs. Helen White returned a short time ago from a visit at the lake cottage of her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. N. N. Hills in East Hampton, Lake Pocotopaug. Mrs. White's brother, A. A. Hills, has been ill at the home of a daughter in Hockanum for the past month, but has improved sufficiently to be able to return to Mrs. White's home for an indefinite stay.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Finley of Somers were guests at the home of Miss Daisy White recently.

The theft of a battery from one of the state trucks working on the new road was recently reported. The theft occurred at night it is thought. The trucks are parked near the green where the work is now going on. There is no clue to the guilty party.

Mrs. Florence Sherman Raymond, wife of Edward A. Raymond of Amston, died at the Middlesex Hospital, Middletown, Thursday, September 29, after a illness of about two weeks. The cause of her death was diagnosed as infectious neuritis. She was 46 years of age and was born in West Woodstock. She was the daughter of the late Oliver C. Sherman and of Mrs. Emily Sherman, now of Hebron. She leaves besides her husband and mother, a daughter, Ruth, and a step-son, Edward W. Raymond. She also leaves a brother. She was active in the Center Congregational church of which she was a member. She was also a member of the Grange and of the O. E. S. in Colchester. Funeral services were held at her late residence on Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

The latest reports from Winthrop Porter, who is ill at the Hartford Isolation Hospital with infantile paralysis, are that his condition is not so unfavorable as at first reported. At one time it was said that he was completely paralyzed and had only a fighting chance for life. It is now stated that he has at least a partial use of his limbs and is in a more favorable condition.

Owing to the near panic over the three cases of poliomyelitis or infantile paralysis in Hebron and Andover, it has been thought advisable to close the Hebron Center and Gilead Hill schools for two weeks or longer if necessary. The other schools of the town are not considered as being within the danger zone and will not be closed unless other cases occur which would call for it. The churches of the town will be closed together with the Sunday school for two weeks. No school was held on Friday in Hebron Center and Gilead Hill.

MULHALL CLOSES AT CIRCLE IN THRILLER

"Crystal Cup" Showing For Last Time Today.

Tonight will see the last showing of "The Crystal Cup" at the Circle theater, in which Jack Mulhall is starring. The theater will be closed until Saturday when it will open with "Body and Soul," a gripping problem play.

A "villain" who appears only in the first scene but whose sinister influence is manifest during the entire story is an unusual feature of "The Crystal Cup".

The villain of the story, nameless and without a definite personality, provides a psychological menace throughout the entire plot. Attacked by a brute at an early age, "Gitta Cartaret," the character played by Dorothy Mackall, has the terrible scope stamped so indelibly on her mind that she never completely recovers and in her consciousness is developed a lifelong hatred of men.

"The Crystal Cup," adapted from the daring novel by Gertrude Atherton, promises to be one of the most unusual pictures ever filmed.

"CAMILLE" ACCLAIMED AS NORMA'S GREATEST

Famous Film Star at State Today and Tomorrow—Country Store Thursday.

Norma Tadmage's greatest film feature is "Camille," which is the headliner on the State theater program today and tomorrow. In this film, which is acted out in modern dress, the great American tragedienne creates a new conception of the tragic French heroine of the Latin Quarter.

Desiring to make "Camille" one of the outstanding triumphs in Norma's career, Joseph M. Schenck, who produced the picture for First National release, re-secured a notable cast for the modern pictorialization of the Dumas classic, and assigned Fred Niblo as director.

Gilbert Roland, a young Spanish actor who recently was placed under a long-term contract by the Schenck organization, appears as "Armand," the impetuous young lover of "Camille." Lilyan Tashman and Rose Dione have important roles as "Olympic" and "Prudence" respectively. Portraying the various wealth, and titled admirers of the "Lady of the Camellias," Harvey Clark is cast as "The Baron" and Alec Francis as "The Duke." Other supporting players are Helen Jerome Eddy, Albert Conti, Michael Viseroff, Evelyn Selbie and Etta Lee.

Fed de Gresac wrote the 1937 adaptation of "Camille" and Chandler Sprague and Olga Printzlau prepared the continuity. Oliver Marsh is the chief cinematographer and the settings are the work of William Cameron Menzies, art director for all Joseph M. Schenck enterprises.

Furniture night comes again on Thursday with the feature "White Flannels," a whimsical comedy of American family life.

SOCIAL SERVICE TASKS ASSUMED BY COMMITTEE

Group Headed by Mrs. Lawrence Case to Gather Funds For General Hospital Work

A meeting to organize a social service committee was held yesterday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Lawrence Case, Highland Park. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Lawrence Case, president; Mrs. D. M. Sakiwell, vice-president; Mrs. A. E. Friend, secretary-treasurer.

This social service committee will financially assist Miss Jessie M. Reynolds in the social service work of the Memorial hospital and the town. During all the years Miss Reynolds has been in charge of this work there has been no organized system of raising money to pay for the expenses in connection with the work. She has been entirely dependent upon two interested friends to carry on the work.

Few people realize the many demands that arise in this work such as paying hospital bills for those temporarily financially embarrassed; supplies purchased that may be needed such as clothing and surgical dressings. In order to meet all these expenses the committee will send out letters of appeal through the town, the committee hoping to have the unanimous support of the townspeople. Any contributions large or small will be gratefully received and may be sent to Mrs. A. E. Friend, Treasurer, Church street, South Manchester.

Alexander Kerr of this town took a number of curious articles to Hartford yesterday to be placed in the Elizabeth Park museum.

The sea lion pelt is of a different color. It shades from a dark, mottled brown in the center of the back to a light tan on the under side.

Other articles which Mr. Kerr has loaned to the museum include an enormous pistol, which was taken from the hand of a dead French cavalryman on one of the battlefields in France during World War.

The pistol is almost a foot long and might weigh three or four pounds. It has no distinguishing marks on it and the name of the maker has been left off.

A sand eel, preserved in alcohol, is another specimen of sea life on the coast of Denmark.

An old sextant, manufactured in 1784 for one Captain Abel Orpin, probably the commander of a Yankee clipper, is another of the articles.

Mr. Kerr is continuing his rattlesnake hunts and at present has a happy family of six of the reptiles at his home.

The mother and her five children were captured last week. The mother, Mr. Kerr says, is the ugliest and most vicious rattlesnake he has ever seen.

AMERICANS BLAMED FOR GERMAN DROP IN BEER DRINKING

Berlin.—Despite the fact that American tourists are the most assiduous visitors of beer halls when they reach Germany, America is blamed by the Germans themselves.

This decrease is considerable. Beer flows here now in but three quarters the pre-war quantity, and the beer drinkers in this country today get away with only one pint a day 265 days a year.

Before the war the beer consumption divided among the entire population gave every German man, woman and child a yearly drink of 102.1 liters.

EMPLOYEES INTERESTED IN STORE CLOSING AFTERNOON

A prominent business house of this town has suggested of keeping open on Thursday afternoon.

Does that mean that the store workers will be deprived of an afternoon a week? If so, won't that cause ill feeling among employees?

Several of the store owners are co-operating and want to keep a half holiday as heretofore.

In all other lines of work, an average worker has at least a half day to enjoy or rest, why can't the store workers?

True enough Thursday afternoon is a valuable one. Why not close some other afternoon, one that will be satisfactory to the store owner?

The public, as well, sides in with the employees. They realize the hours that are put in are quite long on an average.

Although All Big Teams Have Played No One Man Stands Out. By MALCOLM ROY, Staff Correspondent.

New York, Oct. 4.—Strange as it may seem, the football season is getting under way this year without the eyes of the nation being focussed upon any great individual stars.

Expect Few Stars Perhaps the season will see the development of new crop of stars but the trend which the game has taken seems to lead away from the exaltation of one or two players on a team and the submerging of the others.

DEBATE I'm cockeyed with all this excitement. The big fight and foul lines and such.

Mr. O'Gooley says it WAS the battle of the century as far as he is concerned. He laid 100 smackers right on Dempsey's nose.

There's no truth to the rumor that officials of the Olympic marathon team have received the entry of Eugene Joseph.

Football Fundamentals

As Told by Famous Coaches TO BILLY EVANS.

When two punts are evenly matched, the one with the better punter invariably wins, unless some lucky break, such as a touchdown from a fumble or the like, decides the issue.

A good punter often is able to gain enough ground on exchanges of punts to enable his team to take advantage of the breaks and go over for a touchdown.

A punter who is an adept at kicking the ball just as he can catch it will win the series.

A fight writer says Tunney reminds him of a boy who is always afraid his garter will fall down.

Yankees, The Favorites, On Eve Of World Series

Hear World Series Through The Herald

In accordance with its past custom, The Herald will broadcast the play-by-play description of the World Series from its branch office at Bissell and Main streets. Graham McNamee and Phil Carlin will be at the "mike."

J. F. Barstow has installed a high grade receiving set and the latest type of a loud speaker to insure fans of perfect reception.

The Herald will also carry special stories on the series written by nationally known experts. Billy Evans, sporting editor of the NEA Service and an umpire in the American League, will write daily stories as will James L. Kilgallen, Ford C. Frick and Les Conklin.

Local Sport Chatter

It is expected that many Manchester fans will take advantage of the railroad excursion to New York Sunday as a means of transportation to the Yankee Stadium where the first New York game of the World Series will be played. Round trip fare is only $2.50.

All members of the Cloverleaves football team are requested to report tonight at the Community club playgrounds for a special meeting at 7:30. Manager Griffin has negotiations under way with a West Springfield team for a game here Sunday.

Johnny May, world famous soccer player, who is visiting his brother here, is also quite a golfer. In Scotland, he has often registered in the early seventies. Although out of practice, he went over to the local Country club course in $2 the other day with Alex Simpson.

Frankie Busch, local boxing instructor, has returned from a two-weeks vacation spent at his former home in Norwich. Busch announced today that the winter boxing classes at the School street Rec will convene next Monday night and that registration should be made now at the office.

Davis J. Walsh, sporting editor, is ill and will be unable to cover the world's series this year. James L. Kilgallen will handle the news leads of the series and I. N. S. also will carry stories by Ford C. Frick, nationally-known baseball expert. Les Conklin of the I. N. S. sports staff will supply daily features on the sidelights.

CUBS SQUAD NAMED FOR 4-NIGHT DRILL

The Cubs will either play the Sons of Italy in Middletown Sunday or the New Britain Blues in the Hardware City. Manager Vendrillo said last night.

The names of the first squad which consists of 23 players was also announced. Coach Dwyer expects this group to report for practice four nights a week, Tuesday (tonight), Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

The list: Mozzer, Finnegan, Miner, Pentore, Happeny, C. Vendrillo, Mantell, Groman, St. John, Cervini, Farr, Glana, Sylvester, Quish, Ambukewicz, Mahoney, S. Vendrillo, Mincucci, Donnelly, Dahquist, Boraski, Dietz, McCann.

BURKE vs. GOW
Ninety-seven years ago today James "Deaf" Burke, heavyweight champion of England, knocked out Andrew Gow of England in 22 vicious rounds at Temple Mills, Eng., for a side bet of $25. About 200 persons witnessed the affair which Burke engaged in to secure money to help him finance a siege of training in preparation for his big championship match with Simon Byrne, heavyweight champion of Ireland, which was fought in the spring of the following year.

Burke engaged in several of these bouts involving small side bets and some of his opponents furnished pretty tough opposition before being subdued.

Five Pirates Picked On All-National Nine

National League All-Stars

Two All-Star National League Teams

Hornsby, New York	Second Base	Frisch, St. Louis
Traylor, Pittsburgh	Third Base	Lindstrom, New York

L. Wanner, Pittsburgh	Center Field	Roush, New York
P. Wanner, Pittsburgh	Right Field	Wilson, Chicago

BY BILLY EVANS

What players constitute the two strongest teams that could be picked from the stars of the National League?

As in my American League roundup, I put that question to a jury of 20 baseball experts, made up of players, managers and umpires of the National League.

Since my knowledge of the strength and weakness of the players in the National League is not nearly as keen as my judgment of the American League stars, I was much interested in the response I received on the all-star angle in the senior circuit.

In most cases, I found a greater difference of opinion existing as to the outstanding players at some of the positions than I did in the American League.

Last season, Bob O'Farrell of the St. Louis Cardinals was voted the most valuable player in the National League. By deduction that would make him the best catcher. Not so this year, for a bad arm has put the Cardinal manager out of the running for first choice. "Gabby" Hartnett of the Chicago Cubs was best liked, with Earl Smith of Pittsburgh second choice.

In getting a line on the pitchers, I learned that Ray Kremer of Pittsburgh was generally considered the class of the league. I have always had the greatest admiration for the Pirate star. He's a wonder. However, the experts in picking the two best pitchers, this season's form alone considered, relegated Kremer to the second team because an injured knee kept him out of action for about two months.

Despite the fact that Manager

Bush of Pittsburgh has kept Cuyler on the bench most of the year, he is still regarded highly for his all-around ability. The Wanner boys are given center and right field, while Cuyler is moved over to left for the first team trio.

Barnhart of Pittsburgh, having a big year at the bat, Edd Roush of New York, who has been a trifle off at the bat, but still a wonder in the field, and "Hack" Wilson are the second choice outfield. While admitting the Chicago park is made to order for Wilson, he is given a place because of his great value to the Cubs, particularly from a batting angle.

There is little chance to keep such valuable men as Barnhart and Roush off the team.

Now you can start disagreeing with my National League experts who are responsible for the above selections.

QUOTE ODDS AT SIX TO FIVE WITH CHANCES OF GOING HIGHER

Crowds Rushing to Pittsburgh—All Hotels Crowded—Expect Records to be Smashed For Attendance.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN
Staff Correspondent

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 4.—With Babe Ruth and his slugging ball club in town, swinging bats in menacing fashion in practice at Forbes Field, hotels crowding up with visitors from nearby cities and ticket speculators operating on all sides, the bustling city of Pittsburgh was as excited today over the impending World Series, which opens tomorrow, as Chicago was on the eve of the "Furney-Dempsey" fight.

"Pittsburgh will take these Yanks," was the confident prediction of the home town rooters.

New York was a six to five favorite to win the series in the odds quoted by the gambling element this morning, and unless the National League partisans come to the scratch with heavier financial support in the next 24 hours, the Yankees will rule even stronger favorites when they take the field tomorrow.

Every train into Pittsburgh today brought more visitors eager to see the annual baseball classic. Judge Kenesaw S. Landis, the silver-haired commissioner of baseball, is here; so are scores of big league players, an army of sports writers and the usual run of sports luminaries.

Hotels Crowded

Hotel rooms are unavailable, even at $15 a day. Guests are glad to sleep in hallways of the hotels, and most rooms quarter from two to six persons.

Lineups And Batting Averages

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 4.—(United Press)—The probable line-up of the teams in the first game of the World Series tomorrow afternoon with the batting records of a week before the season's close:

NEW YORK (A. L.)

by the Pirates. Both clubs participated in 153 games, both "at bats" were identical at 5,295, but the Yankees scored 967 runs compared with 807 made by the Pirates.

Judge Landis planned this morning to hold a consultation with the umpires to go over the rules. This year there will be no temporary stands in the playing field. This will mean that pop flies will not go for two bases and that high-salaried ball players will have a chance to do their stuff in the outfield instead of watching baseballs float into the crowd.

Advance indications are that a record crowd will witness the series and that the $1,207,364 taken in at the gates last year will be surpassed providing the series runs for the full seven games as it did a year ago. The capacity of Forbes Field is 44,000 while the Yankee Stadium can easily take care of 70,000.

The ticket speculators here are putting in bushy bets. They are operating in the crowded hotel lobbies and in offices that have sprung up in all parts of the downtown section. Ordinary reserved seats were being offered at $25 while boxes, seating six persons, were quoted at $300, or $50 for a single game.

A London magistrate has decided that the father has the absolute right to decide which schools his children shall attend and which religion they shall be taught.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

A woman's gloves and handbag are found at the scene of Benson's murder and Markham, tracing them to Miss St. Clair, has her brought to his office. She makes slipshod answers to his questions but betrays concern when Markham asks if Leacock had not owned a Colt .45, the same type of gun that killed Benson. The girl Markham is certain of the girl's innocence.

NOW BEHOLD THE STORY

CHAPTER XVIII
"BELIEVE you chaps have another hallucination about crime," continued Vance, "namely, that the criminal always returns to the scene of the crime. This weird notion is even explained on some recondite and misty psychological ground."
 Markham was piqued.
 "But, I assure you, psychology teaches no such preposterous doctrine. If ever a murderer returned to the body of his victim for any reason other than to rectify some blunder he had made, then he is a subject for Broadmoor—or Bloomingdale. . . . How easy it would be for the police if this fanciful notion were true! They'd merely have to sit down at the scene of a crime, play bezique or Mah Jongg until the murderer returns, and then they'd have him to the bastille, what?"
 "The true psychological instinct in anyone having committed a punishable act, is to get as far away from the scene of it as the limits of this world will permit," Markham retorted. "I'm not waiting idly for the murderer to return to the voluntary return of the criminal."
 "Either course would achieve success as quickly as the one you are now pursuing," Vance said.

"First," Vance announced, "I shall determine the exact height of the guilty person. Such a fact will, no doubt, come under the head of invidious evidence—eh, what?"

"Not being gifted with your singular insight," retorted Markham, "I can only follow the inadequate processes of human reasoning."
 "No doubt," Vance agreed comically. "And the results of your activities thus far force me to the conclusion that a man with a handful of legalistic logic can successfully withstand the most obstinate and heroic assaults of ordinary common sense."
 Markham was piqued.
 "Still harping on the St. Clair woman's innocence, eh? However, in view of the complete absence of any tangible evidence pointing elsewhere, you must admit I have no choice of courses."
 "I admit nothing of the kind," Vance told him; "for, I assure you, there is an abundance of evidence pointing elsewhere. You simply failed to see it."
 "You think so?" Vance's nonchalant cockiness had at last overthrown Markham's equanimity. "Very well, old man; I hereby enter an emphatic denial to all your fine theories; and I challenge you to produce a single piece of this evidence which you say exists."
 He threw his words out with asperity, and gave a curt, aggressive gesture with his extended fingers, to indicate that, as far as he was concerned, the subject was closed.

Vance, too, I think, was pricked a little.
 "I know, Markham old dear, I'm no avenger of blood or vindicator of the honor of society. The role would bore me."
 Markham smiled loftily, but made no reply.
 Vance smoked meditatively for a while. Then, to his amazement, he turned calmly and deliberately to Markham, and said in a quiet, matter-of-fact voice:
 "I'm going to accept your challenge. It's a bit alien to my tastes; but the problem, y' know, rather appeals to me: it presents the same difficulties as the Concert Champêtre affair—a question of disputed authorship, as it were."
 Markham abruptly suspended the motion of lifting his cigar to his lips. He had scarcely intended his challenge literally; it had been uttered more in the nature of a verbal defiance; and he scrutinized Vance a bit uncertainly.
 Little did he realize that the other's casual acceptance of his thinking and but half-sarcastic challenge, was to alter the entire criminal history of New York.
 "Just how do you intend to proceed?" he asked.
 Vance waved his hand carelessly. "Like Napoleon, je m'en fonce, et puis je sois. However, I must have your word that you'll give me every possible assistance, and will refrain from all profound legal objections." Markham pursed his lips. He was frankly perplexed by the unexpected manner in which Vance had met his defiance.
 "I know, Markham old dear, I'm

But immediately he gave a good-natured laugh, as if, after all, the matter was of no serious consequence.
 "Very well," he assented. "You have my word. . . . And now, what?"
 After a moment Vance lit a fresh cigarette, and rose languidly.
 "First," he announced, "I shall determine the exact height of the guilty person. Such a fact will, no doubt, come under the head of invidious evidence—eh, what?"
 Markham stared at him incredulously.
 "How, in Heaven's name, are you going to do that?"
 "By these primitive deductive methods to which you so touchingly, pin your faith," he answered easily. "But come; let us repair to the scene of the crime."
 He moved toward the door, Markham reluctantly following in a state of perplexed irritation.

"But you know the body was removed," the latter protested; "and the place by now has no doubt been straightened up."
 "Thank Heaven for that!" murmured Vance. "I'm not particularly fond of corpses; and, untidiness, y' know, annoys me frightfully."
 As he emerged into Madison Avenue, he signalled to the commissionaire for a taxicab, and without a word, urged us into it.
 "This is all nonsense," Markham declared ill-naturedly, as we started on our journey up town. "How do you expect to find any clues now? By this time everything has been obliterated."
 "Alas, my dear Markham," lamented Vance, in a tone of mock solicitude, "how woefully deficient you are in philosophic theory! If anything, no matter how infinitesimal, could really be obliterated, the universe, y' know, would cease to exist,—the cosmic problem would be solved, and the Creator would write Q.E.D. across an empty firmament."
 "Our only chance of going on with this illusion we call Life, d'ya see, lies in the fact that consciousness is like an infinite decimal point. Did you, as a child, ever try to complete the decimal, one-third, by filling a whole sheet of paper with the numeral three? You always had the fraction, one-third, left, don't y' know. If you could have eliminated the smallest one-third, after having set down ten thousand threes, the problem would have ended."
 "So with life, my dear fellow. It's only because we can't erase or obliterate anything that we go on existing."
 He made a movement with his fingers, putting a sort of tangible period to his remarks, and looked dreamily out of the window up at the very film of sky.
 Markham had settled back into his corner, and was chewing morosely at his cigar.
 I could see he was fairly simmering with impatient anger at having himself been goaded into issuing his challenge. But there was no retreating now.
 As he told me afterward, he was fully convinced he had been dragged forth out of a comfortable chair, on a patent and ridiculous fool's errand.

"In 'Popular Fallacies About Crime' (Saturday Evening Post April 21, 1925, p. 5) Sir Basil Thomson also upheld this point of view.
 "For years the famous Concert Champêtre in the Louvre was officially attributed to Titian, since, however, took it upon himself to convince the Curator, M. Lepelletier, that it was a Giorgione, with the result that the painting is now credited to that artist."

EVERYBODY'S SAYING IT!

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

The mother of 19-year-old Bibi Rosen, dancer in the Folies Bergere, disliked her daughter's engagement to a Parisian doctor 16 years her senior, Mrs. Mariu Shifrin, the mother in the case, decided to break up the match. So she had her high school son wire a cablegram to the effect that "mother is very ill. Come at once." Bibi came. She reports that the romance and the engagement is broken.

Here's warning other mothers not to try this stunt in similar cases, however. Bibi must have forgotten her man in spite of "ad not because of her mother's trickery. Such a deception would ordinarily drive any girl right into a maternally-distasteful marriage.

"The Student Princess"
 Princess Juliana of Holland, now a student in Leyde University, has written a play called "Bibi Beard" which is about to be produced by the school dramatic club. Juliana will live to be a queen with all the rights and wealths and dignities of a beautiful kingdom hers. But Juliana will never be as happy as now when, as a child, she was named which drops the princess, she writes plays which her dramatic club finds worthy of production. It's "The Student Princess" plot in real life.

Flat Heels
 Women Bible workers of a certain church were recently told at a church conference that they could not have bobbed hair, wear bright colors or chic hats, wear earrings, fancy shoes, sleeveless dresses, or skirts more than 10 inches above the floor, though a 12-inch holster was preferred. The conference explained its ruling by saying that clothing proclaims the character of the worker and that the public can hardly look upon these workers as sincere, devout, unworldly women unless their garb proclaimed it.

My Way
 I wonder if it never occurs to the makers of such ukases that dress also makes character. Can they not see how embittered and self-conscious and inferior-complex and different any woman in brogans and high collars would get to feel—how

HANGINGS OF DISTINCTION—AND HOW!

BY VALERIE VANCE

The most prevalent error in decoration is the wrong wiring of pictures. To hang them correctly with two instead of one wire immediately gives the room an air of rest, of rightness. This is not more idiosyncrasy. The principle is that two wires, on a square or oblong picture, parallel with the sides of the picture, do not attract the eye up to a central point as does the wrong triangular wiring. The mechanical means of hanging a picture should be subordinate to the picture itself or such wiring defeats its purpose.

Another means is a wall hanging of a Paisley shawl or of some rare old silk, perhaps a grandmother's silk shawl, creamy with age, a valuable thing that in the effort to bring beauty out of a plain wall may better grace it than any other picture. Hang it in slight angle at the head of a bed than go to pieces folded away in a cedar chest, its beauty unenjoyed. It may be one of the very inexpensive cotton painted cloths of India, now frequently adapted as couch or bed covers. In the center of the light sparkling tassels below may be only a day bed but the grouping is most effective. Wall hangings need not always be tapestries.

Bare tables, with interesting tops, or—without, are distinctive because bare, bare of glistening dollies and mats, suggestive of business and too contrasting, if white; bare of too many ornaments that rob the tables of usefulness. One table, but not all, may be absolutely bare, awaiting any emergency of afternoon tea, sewing or card playing. With other, bareness is a comparative term. No look of a furniture collection is desired.

Lamps, how they do improve a room! A number of them add a look of luxuriance, comfortable living, a cozy, intimate feeling.

Color, choice in ornaments which may show originality, and their placing, flowers or berries, and hanging shelves are other little potent ways of gaining that rare quality of distinction.

Mother!

Child Gets Sick, Cross, Feverish if Constipated

Mother! Your child isn't naturally cross and peevish. See if tongue is coated; this is a sure sign the little stomach, liver and bowels need a cleansing at once.
 When listless, pale, feverish, full of cold, breath bad, throat sore, doesn't eat, sleep or act naturally, has stomach-ache, diarrhoea; remember, a gentle liver and bowel cleansing should always be the first treatment given.
 Nothing equals "California Fig Syrup" for children's ills; give a teaspoonful, and in a few hours all the foul waste, sour bile and fermenting food which is clogged in the bowels passes out of the system, and you have a well and playful child again. All children love this harmless, delicious, "fruity laxative" and it never fails to effect a good "inside cleansing." Directions for babies, children of all ages and grown-ups are plainly on the bottle.

Keep it handy in your home. A little given today saves a sick child tomorrow, but get the genuine. Ask your druggist for a bottle of "California Fig Syrup," then see that it is made by "The California Fig Syrup Company."—adv.

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL
 by World Famed Authority

By DR. THOMAS FISHER
 Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Since the feeding of human beings has become the new science of dietetics, all sorts of information is being offered to the public that has hardly yet begun to realize that some things are only theory, whereas others have been proved. Some of the worst bligs that has appeared comes from unenlightened health faddists who have never even studied the basic facts of chemistry, physiology and biology on which the science of dietetics rests.

Thus one item recently published asserts that asparagus may be used as a test of the kidney function, that it aids to control the beat of the heart, that it is a nerve sedative, and that it stimulates the kidneys and will help Bright's disease. This is on a par with the notion that fish and celery are brain foods.

Science refutes ideas. The slightest reason for believing that asparagus will do any of these things and the recognition of the odor of some of the by-products of asparagus in the excretions is not a test of kidney function any further than to show that the kidneys are there and that they do function.

Asparagus is of course an excellent vegetable for many purposes in the diet. It may be used as the basis of soups and fits well into salads. Twenty large stalks of asparagus eight inches long provide one hundred calories. They will weigh about 16 ounces. About 32 per cent of the amount of solid matter will be protein, 8 per cent will be fat and 60 per cent carbohydrate. Asparagus has been used as a food for at least two thousand years. More than twelve million bunches are sold every year in the United States.

May Have No Taste
 There was a time when medicine was not considered potent unless it had a strong taste or a peculiar odor. Nowadays we know that some of the most potent remedies may be without either taste or odor.
 The peculiar by-products of asparagus when taken into the human body have naturally impressed the credulous with the notion that it has extraordinary virtues. Instead it should be considered as a fine addition to the group of usable vegetables, providing certain food elements. There is not the slightest scientific evidence to support the view that the plant itself or asparagus, a principle isolated from it, are of any other practical value in medicine.

Education—An A. B. Isn't the Answer

By Olive Roberts Barton

study or for what work he is to prepare. The boy can't be blamed, for one has told him; he is too young to have a decided plan of his own. His father doesn't know, because he has never been to college. He has no precise idea of what the boy may learn there.

It seems to me that a lot of it is blind groping. The worst of it is the boy wants to know and the father wants to know, but just how are they to find out? There seems to be little aid in shaping the boy's destiny.

"Why can't colleges and universities establish centers where parents can go beforehand and be enlightened in plain English as to what their children can get if they spend four thousand dollars on their training? Catalogues that talk in units and credit and academic term don't mean a thing more to them than the Koran. Even an A. B. at the end of four years isn't the answer."

I wonder if I may venture a suggestion to American colleges and universities. It may fall to earth where someone may pick it up and make use of it. I am too inarticulate on the subject to know how, when, or where to begin revamping the system myself.

A man takes a boy to college. The boy is duly entered, his tuition paid, and the parent drives off. Now the boy doesn't know, and the parent doesn't know, just why the boy is there—what he intends to What's all this hustling about housekeeping and shopping and arranging and fussing? What's all this work in offices for, building businesses increasing incomes, reaching higher positions? Isn't the reward the wonderful hours of quiet and rest in our own comfortable homes, just enjoying life? Only we can make it a reward that's equal to its cost and only we can realize the fullness of our reward.

WINNING BEAUTY PRIZE DOES NOT MEAN STARDOM

Lots of Heartaches. "The beauty contest has been responsible for a lot of heartaches," says Harry Rapt, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer.

Director "Dad" Browning says his greatest success was with Lon Chaney and he is "no beauty."

Corinne Griffith, who was a Texas beauty contest winner, declares that acting is as much a business as anything else and that she does not think the winning of a beauty contest "means anything in the movies other than it may be an opening wedge."

Corliss Palmer, the southern beauty, over her success on the screen to a beauty contest. She won a contest conducted by Eugene V. Brewster's film magazines and later married the millionaire publisher.

It is significant in this connection that Mary Pickford recently devised a "best girl" contest to supplant the usual beauty contest method of obtaining prospects for the screen. She selected thirteen girls from as many cities in the United States for parts in her next picture. Brains were the prerequisite, not beauty.

Gertrude Olmsted, who once won a beauty contest in Chicago, says that the winning of such a contest "does not make you a star—it merely gives you the impetus to go into pictures." Similar sentiments were expressed by the other screen favorites who have taken part in beauty pageants.

A beauty contest in Brooklyn, N. Y., and almost immediately went to Hollywood. Dorothy Mackall, the English actress, won a contest in London; Mary Astor was a first national beauty winner; Mary Philbin, of Chicago, also was first in a beauty contest; Hope Dawn won one conducted by a Los Angeles newspaper; Mayron Aye won a beauty contest in Chicago and went to Los Angeles as a Sennett bathing girl; Lorna Lovell won a contest with 300 beauties and Miss Beryl Miller was "Miss Australia," winner of the antipodes contest. She also competed at Atlantic City.

There, however, are some of the girls who "made the grade." For the most part it is a heart-breaking story. The girl winner of a local beauty contest usually departs for an scores as pretty as she is; the competition becomes too keen and soon she either takes a part in a mob scene or a job in some other line or returns home, a sadder and wiser girl.

Yet today, when the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce is advising beauties to remain away from the motion picture colony because of the unemployment of so many of the attractive girls, the beauty contest winners continue to storm the movie citadel and plans are constantly in the making for new and bigger beauty pageants.

ASSESSORS' BOARD ALREADY AT WORK

Only Elected Yesterday But Has Been Doing Preliminary Jobs Just the Same.

Although not elected until yesterday, the new board of assessors has been working for more than a week on the card index of the Linder system and on the measurements of houses and garages and the transfers of property made since the last grand list was figured.

The board will start its official sittings on Monday and will be in session thereafter every week until the first of November to receive the lists filed by property owners. Lists will be filed on or before November 1 and the penalty for failure to do so is the addition of 10 per cent to the amount of the list.

The board this year consists of S. Emil Johnson, chairman; Samuel Nelson, clerk; and George A. Johnson. The latter two were elected yesterday while the former Mr. Johnson is continuing his present term. He has been a member of the board for 24 years.

George A. Johnson is in a paradoxical position as the result of his election. He is serving out the unexpired term of a man who is still on the board. Mr. Nelson resigned from the board of assessors this year but ran for a new term of office. Mr. Johnson was chosen to fill out the former's unexpired term.

The board will be in session every day except Saturday from 9 to 11:30 in the morning and from 7 to 9 o'clock in the afternoon. The Saturday morning hours will be the same but the office will close in the afternoon at 5 o'clock. The office of the board is located on the first floor of the municipal building at the extreme northwest corner.

TALE SPINNERS FORM LIARS' CLUB. Pana, Ill.—While motoring through Oklahoma recently Carl H. Prehls was attacked by a band of hostile Indians but he seized a tomahawk from one and slew 45 of them.

That is the story told from a speaker's platform here by Prehls explained by the fact that he is secretary of the Central Illinois Business and professional men organized the club because they wanted a social organization that would be "different." Once a month they get together for a session of well told falsehoods, and the ones who tell the biggest whoppers are made officers. Members point out that they never mix their pleasure with business affairs.

HOSPITAL TO SEND DELEGATES WEST

President Robertson and Two Doctors to Attend Minneapolis Parley.

Manchester Memorial Hospital will be represented at the 29th annual convention of the American Hospital Association at Minneapolis, Minnesota, the week of October 10th, by the resident of Trustees, William Robertson. Among others in attendance will be our local doctors, D. M. Caldwell, head surgeon at the Manchester Memorial Hospital, and Amos E. Friend, specialist in eye, ear, nose and throat.

At each annual convention such as this of the American Hospital Association, recommendations are made by the foremost hospital experts, and these are based on the most thorough research of the conduct of hospitals throughout the preceding year.

It is but fair to assume that good surgeons and good nurses must have the best conditions under which to work efficiently. And these improvements are not the creations of a day. On the contrary, it sometimes takes years of repeated convention sessions of the American Hospital Association on a given phase of hospital work to achieve a change that is of vital importance and enduring. However, a study of hospital progress during the last quarter of a century reveals the surprising fact, as President Brodwick has pointed out, that every important step that has been achieved for the betterment of hospitals was previously considered, discussed and afforded its initial momentum at one of the annual conventions of the American Hospital Association.

Millions of dollars have been given to hospitals in this country. In order that this vast wealth may be used to make and keep the hospitals of American modern in the complete sense of the word, the American Hospital Association in its annual convention, soon to be in full session, has planned a program covering every important phase of hospital management, organization, equipment and construction.

This coming week, therefore, will be an important one for us all. For who knows how vital to any one of us may be the discussions and decisions of the American Hospital Association next week at Minnesota, whether regarding bodily ailment or surgical care.

The M. X. club will be entertained by Miss Marion Tyler in Wetherfield this evening.

GOT THEIR GOOD NEWS THROUGH HERALD ALONE

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Holmes who removed to 37 Lancaster Road here three weeks ago from West Hartford found more satisfaction in reading The Manchester Evening Herald last night than they have in reading the two Hartford newspapers for years, they say. They got the "thrill of a lifetime" so to speak when they learned through The Herald that their son, Roger Branford Holmes, had been honored with a scholarship at Yale University in New Haven. It was exclusive information, the Hartford papers not carrying it until today.

Mr. and Mrs. Holmes, unable to verify the news through the Hartford newspapers, called at the branch office of The Herald last night and received assurance of its authenticity. A few minutes later they telegraphed congratulations to their son, Roger, who is only 17 years old. He graduated from the William S. Hall High school at West Hartford in June and is studying to be a chemist.

CHENEY A. A. GIRLS EAT, PLAN AND GIVE PLAY

Open Winter Season With a Harvest Supper and Put on "Little Red Schoolhouse."

Eighty members of the Girls' Athletic Association of Cheney Brothers sat down to a veal outfit and spaghetti supper last night at Cheney hall. The occasion was the annual "harvest supper" held for the purpose of starting the winter season's activities. Schedules for the bowling league were distributed. The first matches will take place next Friday night.

After the supper last night, a one-act comedy, "In the Little Red Schoolhouse," was presented by a cast composed of ten members of the association. It was cleverly presented and the actors were warmly applauded. Those who took the principal parts were "Miss Discipline," the schoolmarm, played by Miss Mary Volkert; Sally Freckles, the dunce, enacted by Nan Taggart; Smarty Lucy Lockett, by Helen Gustafson, and "Mickey Murphy" by Nellie Hagart. The scholars were "Annie Rooney," Louise Pukofsky; "Peggy O'Neil," Clara Jackmore; "Carrie Seamore," Helen Washkewich; "Rose White," Louise Roth; "Irene Rosenstein," Rosemary Palmer; "Dora Bar," the pianist, Helen Frederickson.

The hall was prettily decorated in Halloween trimmings of black and yellow and large waves of black-diolus donated by Charles Murphy were on the tables.

SLIDING TROLLEY SEASON IS ON; AUTOISTS BEWARE
Clear the Track For Electric Cars, Because Maybe They Can't Be Stopped.

This is the season of slippery rails on the local Connecticut company are having considerable trouble in avoiding accidents which might occur through inability to stop the cars because of the condition of the rails.

The condition is caused by the falling leaves, which, when they are run over by the cars, exude an oil which makes the rails as slippery as ice. Manchester has an unusual number of trees on streets along which the trolleys run and practically every yard of track in town is covered with the oil.

Sand cars have been run to Manchester for the purpose of distributing sand along the rails. The sand helps somewhat but the oil is renewed every time a fresh fall of leaves occurs.

Motorists are asked to be careful in driving on tracks in front of trolley cars. Motormen proceed slowly and with as much care as possible, with the result that the schedules are sometimes allowed to lapse, but it is often impossible to stop a trolley car promptly and drivers of automobiles must take this fact into consideration if accidents are to be avoided.

FREE BED FUND PLEDGE CARDS ARE GIVEN OUT
Pledge cards were distributed yesterday to the employees of Cheney Brothers for the Tuberculosis Free Bed Fund conducted at the plant. The cards carry amounts from 25 cents to $10 and the amounts subscribed will be collected when the cards are taken up in two weeks.

The Free Bed Fund has taken care of 80 patients since it was instituted and of this number 53 have recovered from their illness. These patients have been unable to pay the minimum amount which is required of them by the state for treatment in state sanatoria so the Free Bed fund has paid for the treatment.

At the end of last year the fund reported a total of 12 patients, five of whom are still under treatment, four of whom have recovered and are working, one discharged as non-tubercular, while two have died. The two deaths resulted from advanced cases of the disease.
