IRELAND'S HISTORY TOLD BY PAGEANT

Mythology of Emerald Isle to Be Recited in Play Form Tomorrow Evening.

St. Mary's Irish Pageant, it is expected, will fill Cheney hall tomorrow evening, not only by the hundreds of Manchester people who came from the Emerald Isle. Only one performance is to be given of the pageant which has been written especially for St. Mary's parish by Miss Ines Temple of Hartford. The large cast has been rehearsing faithfully under her direction for the past few weeks and a very delightful evening of legendary Irish history, folk dances and songs will be the result.

Following is the program: Introduction: Beside the Fire Read by the Reverend James Stuart Neill "And still around the fires of peat Live on the ancient days; There still do living lips repeat The old and largest lays." I—The Coming of the Firbolg II—The Fomorians Cromlech and Druids III—The Tuatha Da Danaan IV—The Harp of the Dagda V—The Coming of the Gael VI—The Invasion VII—The Arts of the Milesians VIII—The Story of Deirdre The Banquet-Hall The Abode of Deirdre The Chess-Game The Lament of Deirdre for the Sons of Uisneach VIII—Cúchulainn's Lament over Ferdiad IX—Clonmacnoise X—Caell's Poem on Crede's House Interlude: A Group of Irish Songs XI—Saint Patrick XII—The Incident of the Harp XIII—The Incident of the Harp XIV—The Exile's Love for Erin Cast: Miss Mildred Aitken, Miss Eileen Barnesley, Mrs. Wm. Brennan, William Brennan, Thomas Brown, Miss Edith Cordy, Joseph Cordy, Miss Helen Crawford, Mrs. Edward Delect, Thomas Faulkner, Miss Dorothy Freeburn, Miss Myrtle Freeburn, Miss Edna Fox, Miss Viola Greenaway, Mr. Robert Holmes, Miss Ruth Holmes, Miss Marian Husevar, Arthur Jobert, Jean Jobert, Viola Jobert, Miss Miriam Jones, Miss Sally Jones, Miss Anna Kelly, Ward Kerr, James Kilpatrick, Mrs. James Kilpatrick, Miss Gertrude Liddon, Miss Ethel Madden, Miss Florence Madden, Miss Violet Madden, Miss Harriet Muldoon, Randall Brown, Miss Arline McCabe, Miss Josephine Russell, J. S. Neill, Mrs. J. S. More than 500 people heard an excellent rendition of Noble's cantata, "Glória Domini," by the choir of the South Methodist church. The solos in the cantata, all for baritone or bass, were sung by Robert Gordon, and the choir was assisted by several well known Hartford singers.

Mr. Gordon's work in the concert last night showed considerable improvement over his singing in the same cantata last year, showing the effect of more experience and training. He sang both the baritone and the bass solos with equal ease and effect, appearing to best advantage in the number "O Lord God of Israel."

The chorus was excellent in the many numbers, but was outstanding in the final chorus, "Great is the Glory of the Lord." This chorus, a paean of rejoicing, gave the choir an opportunity to exercise its fortissimo and was a contrast to several other numbers which required delicate shading and lessened volume.

The cantata is the work of the well known New York organist, T. Tertius Noble and the words were selected and arranged by the Rt. Rev. C. W. Stubbs, D. D., Bishop of Troy, Central, England.

Proceeding the program Rev. Joseph Cooper outlined the cantata, both from its biblical standpoint, and gave some history concerning the scenes around which the words were written.

A leading feature of the program will be a cantata, "The Man Without a Country," by E. S. Homer. Nine voices will be in the chorus and Miss Olive Nyman will be the guest soloist. The musical clubs have been rehearsing under the direction of Miss E. Marion Doward, supervisor of music.

Following the entertainment in the assembly hall the teachers will be in their home rooms and will be very glad to discuss with parents matters concerning the pupils.

FR. McCANN REDUCES CHURCH DEBT $12,000

Brings Down St. Bridget's Indebtedness From $16,000 to $4,000—Decoration Nearly Done.

At St. Bridget's church Sunday the nearly completed work of interior decorating in the auditorium and sanctuary came in for careful observation on the part of those in attendance. From the comments heard, the congregation is much pleased with the results. The scaffolding is still in place, as the final touches are yet to be put on, and the electrical fixtures have not been installed. When the scaffolding is out of the way, the real beauty of the decoration will be evident.

In the article in the Herald Saturday on the improvements at St. Bridget's a typographical error occurred, which gave the reduction of the church debt as from $6,000 to $4,000 during the pastorate of Rev. Father McCann. As a matter of fact, the figure 1 which was inadvertently omitted stood for 10,000, for the debt reduction through the efforts of Father McCann with the co-operation of his parish was from the sum of $16,000 to the present indebtedness of $4,000.

The parish-wide collection to meet the cost of the church decoration is now well under way, and excellent progress is being reported. The general committee in charge has assigned each committee its work, George H. Williams is chairman of the committee, and Miss Mary E. McGuire is secretary.

FIGURES

There is no reason, apparently, why the officials of the Anti-Saloon League should not win, gloriously, every debate, argument or discussion with wets into which they enter, for they are completely superior to being trampled with such trifling matters as facts. Here is an illustration.

Rev. Howard Hyde Russell, associate superintendent of the League, speaking at a dinner of the founders of the organization, a few days ago, made this declaration: "At least 85 per cent of the making and selling of liquor had disappeared and six billion dollars more actual cash is in the country's pocket since prohibition."

As a matter of fact there is not six billion dollars more actual cash in the United States than there was in 1920, when the prohibitory amendment went into effect. There is not five billion dollars more; nor four billion, nor three, nor two, nor one. There is not half a billion more.

The total stock of money in the United States on the last ascertainable date, July 1, 1926, was altogether, including gold, silver and paper currencies of all kinds—everything that conceivable be described as "actual cash"—eight billion, three hundred and seventy-two million, nine hundred and eighty thousand, four hundred and sixty-eight dollars. And this includes the more than four billions in gold coin and bullion held by the United States treasury and Federal Reserve banks.

In 1920 the total stock of money was seven billion nine hundred and nine million, nine hundred and ninety-eight thousand and ninety-nine dollars.

The gain between the first days of prohibition and the latest date on which it is possible to base comparisons, was, therefore, about four hundred and sixty-three million dollars, which is considerably less than one-twelfth of the gain which Dr. Russell asserted had been made.

These figures are applicable if one translates Dr. Russell's term of "the country's pocket" as meaning the country itself. If by any chance he meant to convey the idea that the people of the country had six billions more cash in their personal possession than before prohibition, it would become necessary to draw new comparisons to properly exhibit the value of his statement. Because there has never been a time when the people—and that includes everybody, banks, merchants, manufacturers, Henry Ford, Rockefeller, the Mellons and all—had anything like a total of six billions in cash, let alone six billions more in 1927 than in 1920. Because the entire circulating medium of the country has never yet approached six billion dollars.

Last year the total of money in circulation in the United States was a trifle less than four billion eight hundred and thirty-five million—and if that were six billions more than when prohibition came into effect it would show that at the end of the period of personal liberty the circulating medium was about a billion two hundred million less than nothing, which we take the liberty of doubting.

Oddly enough, as a matter of fact the banner year in the country's history, so far as money in circulation went, was the year when prohibition went into effect, when the total cash at work in the country was five billion, three hundred and thirty-two millions, about half a billion dollars more in the "country's pockets"—figuring on this alternative basis—than after six years of prohibition.

Now the anti-prohibitionist who tried to prove that liquor liberty was a good thing by showing that there is less money in circulation under prohibition than previously would be laughed at by his own sympathizers. The things have nothing on earth to do with each other, of course. But Anti-Saloon Leaguers can hang their arguments on such preposterous pretensions and get away with it among their followers, even when they multiply or divide the facts by ten or a dozen after the fashion of Dr. Russell.

That the good doctor did, in this case of the "country's pocket," multiply the facts by a dozen, is demonstrable. Unfortunately it is not possible to demonstrate, from known facts, the extent of the fallacy in his assertion that 85 per cent of the making and sale of liquor has disappeared; because there are no known facts, either in his possession or in the possession of his opponents. However, if the 85 per cent out of liquor be regarded as being exactly as truthful as the six billions of added cash—which we have every right to assume—then Dr. Russell's over-statement of his case multiplies the reduction of the use of liquor by twelve. And instead of there being only 15 per cent of the liquor consumed that there was, before prohibition there is actually 180 per cent.

Which is probably a far better guess than the Anti-Saloonist intended to make.

HARDHOOD

Announcement that the second volume of Rupert Hughes' iconoclastic book "The First President" reveals the house hold of George Washington as just such a home as is now denounced as the origin of all vice is not unlikely to be followed by a large number of cat-fits thrown by those worshippers of myths who have dominated the teaching of history in America for two generations.

Though it is possible that Mr. Hughes, in his zeal as a hunter-down of ridiculous idealism, may have somewhat lost his sense of proportion, there is little doubt that the picture of the times which he draws is far nearer the truth than those which, until very recent days, had been exclusively held up for the instruction of American youth; nor that the exceedingly humane Washington whom he uncovers bears a much closer relationship to the actual truth than the impossible sanctified creature so long mounted on a pedestal of fiction for the adoration of a nation—and at which every normal small boy in the United States has always secretly wanted to heave a rock.

In his portrayal of George Washington as a normal Virginia gentleman of his period, given to the perfectly normal life of his times and his locale—where and when wine, ruse, shows, cards for money and numerous gallantries were part and parcel of the civilization—it may be that Mr. Hughes has not enlarged proportionately on the graver aspects of the life of the Father of his Country; but he has a right to reply to any such charge with the declaration that such was not his job. That is a side of history which has been exhaustively covered many times. Mr. Hughes is undertaking to destroy an utter misconception on the part of the people of this country as to the intimate personal life of their first President, to make it understood that Washington was not a stone image breathed into animation by the fates for the sole purpose of leading the colonists to political freedom.

But it takes a brave man to do that. Any writer who is weary of bric-a-brac and years for turmoil and prickbats has only to start in to show that somebody's ikons are made of wood and paint.

The next thing to expect is that Big Bill has challenged Hughes to mortal combat with machine guns.

DRUNK DRIVING

Instead of being resentful at the Derby man who has challenged the right of the commissioner of motor vehicles to revoke his license after he had settled a case of arrest for driving an automobile while drunk, the public should be, in a sense, grateful to the individual in question for testing the law in the case. Because if there is any weakness in the statutes it will be a good thing to have it developed so that the next Legislature may rebuild the law with steel reinforcement and copper sheathing and put some more and bigger teeth in it.

The person who goes out on the highways drunk at the wheel of an automobile—or half or quarter drunk—is as deadly a menace to the lives of his fellow citizens as a madman with a gun. He may not hit anybody with his automobile; also the madman may not hit anybody when he scatters his bullets around. But the one is deserving of no more license or liberty than the other.

And if there is a single loophole in the present law, whereby citizens of Derby or any other town in the state fancy they can defy the motor authorities and the police power of the state of Connecticut, it will be exceedingly good thing to have it known.

DIVES

Quite a number of persons appear to be not only shocked but amazed by the declaration of District Attorney Banton that the pursuits of raising customers' checks and picking their pockets are regularly carried on by managers and hostesses of New York night clubs. That is because they have failed to understand one essential fact about these places—that they are not only the same breed of cat as the old time honky-tonk of the Bowery, Park Row and Eighth Avenue, with their fur dyed and themselves quartered around Broadway and Times Square, but that in a good many cases the men and women who run them are the same individuals, or at least their natural heirs and assigns.

The sailor or bargeman who used to be rolled, and thrown into the street from the free-and-easies of the nineteenth century rather expected such an experience to end up his sight-seeing and made no fuss about it. The butter and egg man is merely less sophisticated and less of a sport.

People who, in "seeing the sights" of New York, spend their time and their money in dives have no sound reason for complaint if they run across the kind of thing that dives are run for, whether the dive has a blazing sign on Broadway or a door up an alley in the slums.

Washington waited until September, 1796, two months before election time, to decline a third term in his famous farewell address. Incidentally, he used a form of the word "choose" when he apprised the country of his resolution "to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made." He was not ambiguous; he actually apologized for his decision; he used about 570 words where Coolidge used 10 and everyone knew what he meant. There was no talk of drafting him and the Senate had no need to pass any anti-third term resolution.

"Every day the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome," he said. "While choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it."

Washington, too, apparently had a "western wing" on his hands, although it may not have resembled the Norris-Borah group which undertakes to array the west against the east.

"In contemplating causes which may disturb our union," he said, "it occurs as a matter of serious concern, that any ground should have been furnished for characterizing parties by geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern, Atlantic and Western—whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views. The inhabitants of our western country . . . have lately seen . . . a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicious propagated among them of a policy in the general government and in the Atlantic states, unfriendly to their interests. . . ."

He warned against blocs and lobbies "all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, obstruct or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities. . . . which would put in the place of the delegated will of the nation the will . . . of a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community. . . ."

As for economy, armaments and debts: "Avoid occasions of expense of cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently avoid much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may

Des Moines, Ia.—After a college entertainment, students were amused when one of the co-eds clog danced for a minute and ended up by turning a couple of cartwheels. Hailed before the disciplinary committee of Des Moines University, she pointed out that the dance and the cartwheels were only part of the regular physical education training. Officials, shocked, decreed that hereafter only folk dancing would be taught.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington. — The seventieth Congress will soon meet and consider various issues of import and if the people of the United States refuse to get excited about these issues, it may be because many of them have been up in one form or another for the last 125 or 150 years.

The twentieth century finds Mayor Bill Thompson of Chicago howling against King George III just as the eighteenth century found the fathers howling likewise. The administration of George Washington had its problems of taxes, debt reduction, federal economy, armaments, third term, foreign relations and so on, even as the administration of Calvin Coolidge. The same blocs and lobbyists then as now, and there were statesmen to protest them.

Washington waited until September, 1796, two months before election time, to decline a third term in his famous farewell address. Incidentally, he used a form of the word "choose" when he apprised the country of his resolution "to decline being considered among the number of those out of whom a choice is to be made." He was not ambiguous; he actually apologized for his decision; he used about 570 words where Coolidge used 10 and everyone knew what he meant. "Every day the increasing weight of years admonishes me more and more that the shade of retirement is as necessary to me as it will be welcome," he said. "While choice and prudence invite me to quit the political scene, patriotism does not forbid it."

Washington, too, apparently had a "western wing" on his hands, although it may not have resembled the Norris-Borah group which undertakes to array the west against the east.

"In contemplating causes which may disturb our union," he said, "it occurs as a matter of serious concern, that any ground should have been furnished for characterizing parties by geographical discriminations—Northern and Southern, Atlantic and Western—whence designing men may endeavor to excite a belief that there is a real difference of local interests and views. The inhabitants of our western country . . . have lately seen . . . a decisive proof how unfounded were the suspicious propagated among them of a policy in the general government and in the Atlantic states, unfriendly to their interests. . . ."

He warned against blocs and lobbies "all combinations and associations, under whatever plausible character, with the real design to direct, control, obstruct or awe the regular deliberation and action of the constituted authorities. . . . which would put in the place of the delegated will of the nation the will . . . of a small but artful and enterprising minority of the community. . . ."

As for economy, armaments and debts: "Avoid occasions of expense of cultivating peace, but remembering also that timely disbursements to prepare for danger frequently avoid much greater disbursements to repel it; avoiding likewise the accumulation of debt, not only by shunning occasions of expense, but by vigorous exertions in time of peace to discharge the debts which unavoidable wars may sanctity of homes raided by prohibition agents without warrants are generally only cheap imitations of the court argument of James Otis in 1761 against the Writ of Assistance. Otis proclaimed that "special warrants only are legal" and: "One of the most essential branches of English liberty is the freedom of one's house. A man's house is his castle; and, 'hlist he is quiet, he is as well guarded as a prince in his castle."

Patrick Henry, in his longwinded oration against the federal constitution, raised the issue of congressional apportionment which dacked. He objected to the wording of the provision that representatives should "not exceed one for every 30,000" on the grounds of ambiguity. Henry may have been overheard, but his protest that "four of the smallest states, that do not collectively contain one-tenth the population of the United States, may obstruct the most salutary and necessary amendments" is reminiscent of the present day plaint about the difficulty of adding new amendments, or repealing any existing.

Other instances of repetitive history might be cited endlessly.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

COMMANDER R. E. BYRD TO SPEAK IN BRISTOL.

Will Address Manufacturers Association Banquet—Major Hodges on Program.

Representatives of industry from all parts of the state who will gather at Bristol on November 28 for the annual meeting and banquet of the Manufacturers Association of Connecticut will hear, among other speakers, Major LeRoy Hodges of Richmond, Virginia, advocate of eastern port development and of better trade relations between New England and Virginia.

Major Hodges was the originator of the plan to send to Connecticut a group of Virginians headed by Governor Byrd and other notables, to inspect the state's industries and endeavor to effect a greater exchange of commodities between the Old Dominion and Connecticut. As a result of this initial trip a group of Connecticut business men and industrial heads with representatives of the other New England states met in Virginia, on invitation of the Southern group, and there formed the New England-Virginia Conference. Several meetings of that group have been held, the last at Portland, Maine, and out of them have come constructive steps towards the improvement of water transportation facilities and freight rates between New England ports and Hampton Roads, as well as recommendations for the establishment of regular air service between New England ports and Hampton Roads, as well as recommendations for the establishment of regular air service between New England and the South and similar proposals, a number of which, including that in regard to air service are already achieving accomplishment.

Major Hodges comes from the same state as Commander Richard E. Byrd, who will give the feature address of the evening, describing his various flights, including that to the North Pole and the Atlantic flight last spring, when, lost above France with no possibility of effecting a safe landing, he managed to save his instruments and the lives of his two companions by landing in the water off the coast at Ver-sur-Mer. Commander Byrd is a brother of Governor Harry E. Byrd of Virginia who, it is hoped will also attend the meeting. Both he and Major Hodges will be introduced by Governor Trumbull who is a member of the Manufacturers Association and who will preside as toastmaster.

The manufacturers' sessions, at the invitation of DeWitt Page, president of the New Departure Manufacturing Company, will all be held at the Endeavor Inn, the hotel operated by the company for its employees. The Inn, one of the finest structures of its kind in the country, directly adjoins the New Departure plant. One of the features of the day will be an inspection of the plant, arranged by the company's transportation of the several hundred guests from one part of the plant to another being handled by means of the company's own buses bought in from the Meriden and Hartford divisions.

At the annual business meeting in the afternoon President E. Kent Hubbard will present his annual report and officers and directors will be elected.

Billy Evans Says

JOHNSON MEMORIAL

The wires the other day carried the report that the owners were considering some sort of a memorial that would perpetuate the name and deeds of B. B. Johnson, retiring president.

One of the memorials suggested was a home for aged ball players who, while not destitute, were in need of some of the comforts that help make life worth while.

On the same sports sheet there was an item almost hidden from view at the bottom of the page conveying the information that Roy Patterson, former Chicago White Sox pitcher, had died in the Montgomery County Home in Pennsylvania.

It seems some 10 days previous Patterson had been picked up, quite ill, wandering about the streets of a suburb of Philadelphia. In poor health, as a result of the privations he had apparently been suffering, his death soon followed.

With genuine sorrow I read of the death of Roy Patterson particularly under the conditions stated, for if there ever was a fine fellow in baseball it was this same Patterson.

Fame of Patterson

When Chicago won the pennant in 1926, Patterson did his part, but as a member of a pitching staff made up of Ed Walsh, "Doc" White, Frank Smith and Nick Altrock, he traveled in fast company and didn't get much of a chance to shine.

Patterson was brought to Chicago in 1900 by Charles Comiskey from his St. Paul club, which he had joined the year previous. For three years he pitched great ball for Comiskey, then suffered an injury to his elbow that greatly handicapped him for two seasons.

In 1906, he pulled a real comeback and was of valuable assistance in putting over the "Hitless Wonders" to a pennant. That same year the Sox won the world's championship from the supposedly invincible Cubs. Patterson didn't get a chance to work in the series.

There was a recurrence of the arm injury in 1907 and Patterson later drifted out of the majors, then to the minors and later obscurity.

Baseball is a big business, involving millions of dollars, and it would seem that it should be some way of taking care of the needy deserving who did their bit toward making it the great sport it is.

It would have been a fine thing if the major leagues or the American League sponsored such a charity. Roy Patterson richly merited help, yet died unknown and forgotten, by many who would have liked to have aided him.

It would be a fine thing for the American League to endow such an institution as a Johnson memorial to the game or at least inaugurate a scheme to put it over.

Roy Patterson was a fine chap. Things must have broken badly for him after he passed out of baseball. He didn't deserve the fate that overtook him.

A Real Charity

It has been about 15 years since I last saw Patterson. I had no idea that he was other than prosperous. It was with great sorrow that I read of his plight and death.

GOV. FULLER'S FAVORITES

By A. & P. Gypsies

Even a busy governor of a great state finds time to enjoy music. Governor Fuller of Massachusetts has given the A & P Gypsies two of his favorite musical selections and these will be broadcast this evening.

The program for this evening is dedicated to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, following the Gypsies' custom of dedicating each of their programs to one of the various states in the Union.

New England as a whole comes in for notice on this November 21st program, as several numbers are suggested by the season of Thanksgiving inaugurated on New England's rock-bound coast. Among these is "1620" a suite by the American composer, Edward MacLachlan.

The Gypsies introduce Wilfred Glenn, popular bass soloist, as their guest artist for this evening.

The state "Thank You" programs featured by the A & P Gypsies each Monday evening are arousing nationwide interest. Many city and state bodies—Chambers of Commerce, Lions, Rotary Clubs, Kiwanians, etc., are co-operating in making the Gypsy broadcast hour a real boost for the state being featured.

STATE THEATER GIVES AWAY TWENTY TURKEYS

Audience at Tuesday and Wednesday Show to Participate in Gifts—"Annie Laurie" Ends Today.

The State theater is running somewhat in competition with local meat markets this week, for turkeys are to be given away at the performances on Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Ten of the birds, the best that can be obtained, are to be given each night.

On the bill for the two days is "The Notorious Lady," starring Lewis Stone, Barbara Bedford and Ann Rork.

Mr. Stone has the role of John Carey, soldier and adventurer, and critics say, it is one of the best ever created for him. Miss Bedford is "The Notorious Lady," whose notoriety, incidentally, is gained through a sacrifice for her husband, Ann Rork, a woman who comes in First National pictures, acclaimed for her work in "The Blonde Saint," has a colorful role of a half-caste beauty.

Principal scenes in "The Notorious Lady" are in Africa, where Carey (Stone) seeks to lose his identity and forget the past.

"Annie Laurie," starring Lillian Gish and Norman Kerry, drew a big audience to the State theater last night. This great feature, the biggest of Miss Gish's successes, is a story of life in the highlands during the height of the wars between rival clans.

The story tells of the love affairs and battles of the son of one of the clans, who falls in love with the daughter of the rival clan leader. Clever acting, wonderful settings and every detail true to life, make the picture one of the most finished of the year.

POLICE COURT

Edward Rudinski of 195 Union street paid a fine of $125 and costs in the Manchester police court this morning for driving his motorcycle while under the influence of liquor.

He was arrested by Traffic Officer R. H. Wirtalla at Woodbridge and Oakland street last evening. The officer noticed the man's condition and the way he was driving the machine. He followed him to Green avenue where he had fallen off the machine. William Kelly was riding on the rear seat of the motorcycle and he too was drunk.

Both men were taken to the police station and Dr. Moore who examined them stated in court this morning that both men were under the influence of liquor.

Kelly was found guilty of intoxication and paid a fine of $15 and costs.

Frank Anderson of 218 Oak street paid a fine of $10 and costs for failure to obey the rules of the road. He was involved in an accident on High street last week. He was represented by Attorney William S. Hyde.

Adam Genio and Peter Molas, two transients who gave their home as Hartford, were found guilty of intoxication and each fined $10 and costs. As they were unable to pay they were sent to jail. Both men were arrested by Patrolman John J. McGlinn, who testified that they were helplessly drunk. They were found in front of Tablinow's store on Main street.

As to the nine persons who were arrested last Thursday night on the charge of keeping liquor with intent to sell, and whose cases were to have been heard this morning, they were again continued until next Friday.

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Monday, November 21.

Mary Garden will be the stellar artist in the third General Motors family party to be broadcast through WEAF and the Red network at 9:30 Monday night. Like the first two programs, the hour will be divided into three sections with notable leaders in the respective fields of entertainment—classical, humorous and popular—the microphone in each. Mary Garden, famous grand opera prima donna, supported by a symphonic orchestra, under the direction of Cesare Sodero, will be the main attraction of the first part of the entertainment. In the second part, Leo Carillo, will make his first appearance over the radio along with another vaudeville favorite, Gladys Rich. The third division will be made up of popular selections interpreted by orchestras under the direction of Edwin Franko Goldman and Patrick Conway. Rosy and His Gang have also arranged for gala concert this evening on WTIC, from 7:30 through WJZ and the Blue network. Besides most of his famous songs, Rosy will also present Merle Johnston, saxophonist, and Dominick Caputo, horn player. Highlights have been arranged also by WEAF, WNAC, WRVA, WOO and WNYC.

A FLYING FIELD AFLOAT

An armored flying field afloat is the U. S. S. Saratoga, viewed from the bow (left above) as she was formally commissioned at Camden, N. J., as flagship of the United States aircraft fleet. Below, Rear Admiral Julian L. Latimer (left) commandant of the fourth naval district, congratulates Captain Harry E. Yarnell upon his new command. The Saratoga is the biggest vessel ever constructed in America, having a length of 888 feet from end to end of her two-acre flying deck. It can house and service 83 planes; cost $40,000,000; displaces 33,000 tons and can speed through the water at 40 miles an hour. At the right is a stern view of its curious superstructure, which lies entirely to starboard to widen the flying deck. Here you see four of its eight-inch guns, their turrets and, on a fighting top above, two of its anti-aircraft rifles, which are aimed and fired at hostile planes by a "mechanical mathematician." Four torpedo tubes complete its armament.

NEW RADIO APPARATUS GUARANTEES PRIVACY, IS LATEST ANNOUNCEMENT

Chicago.—A radio sending and receiving apparatus that guarantees privacy in conversations has been perfected by the Bell Telephone Laboratories. It was announced here at the convention of the Independent Telephone Association.

Listening in on the new device results merely in the outsider's hearing an unintelligible jumble of sound although the person at the right receiver receives the conversation clearly and distinctly.

An artificial larynx which will enable persons who have lost their vocal cords through operations to talk again was exhibited. A small "receiver" for teaching the deaf to "hear" again was displayed at the convention. The device has five miniature individual receivers which are placed upon the finger tips. When a word is spoken, there is a definite rhythm of vibrations recorded by the receivers and soon as the deaf persons learn to understand these rhythms ordinary conversation may be "heard."

BURTON ALE RECIPE IS NOT FOR HOME BREWERS AMERICAN WRITER TOLD

Burton-On-Trent, Eng.—Amusement enlivened a meeting of the Burton Town Council when the Mayor read a letter received from Columbus, Ohio, asking for Burton's famous ale recipe for home brewing purposes in America.
"Your city has sixty breweries. Now I would ask you," appealed the writer, "to see the brewmaster of the brewery who makes Burton ale to send me the receipt for making such at home for home use and not for sale."
"We are in a prohibition country, but seven out of every ten families make a home brew and the Government is losing $300,000,000 a year."
"There are more drunks now than when saloons were wide open. If you can possibly do me this favor I will be your friend for life and hereafter."
Though appreciating the writer's frankness, the Mayor is reluctantly compelled to inform him that the recipe is copyright.

DIRECTS ATHLETES

Paris.—By examination and tests with different apparatus, Dr. A. Theoris, connected with the French Athletic Federation, is able to tell aspiring athletes just what sport they are best fitted for. Often, he says, an athlete of ideal physique lags behind in some sport where he could become a champion in another line.

Last Year the RED CROSS said: "Prepare now for inevitable future disasters" THEN CAME THE FLOOD!

LAST year, in asking your support, the Red Cross warned against inevitable future disasters—explained the imperative need for preparedness.

You responded—willingly. And in the nick of time—for there followed two of the worst catastrophes this nation has known. In Florida, a devastating hurricane. In 7 states, the Mississippi flood.

Nor did the list end there. While appalling destruction on the Mississippi gripped the attention of the world, the Red Cross acted quietly, efficiently, as your agent of relief. Not only on the Mississippi, but in twelve other disasters, which occurred simultaneously.

Again—the same month which saw the great Florida hurricane also witnessed a tornado in Ohio—a devastating fire in Alaska... floods in Illinois, Kansas and Iowa. And, in every case, the Red Cross directed the immediate relief, carried out the permanent rehabilitation.

Now—once more—the Red Cross must prepare for future catastrophes. And again we feel that every American will hasten to renew his membership in this great humanitarian organization.

If you believe in helping humanity, you believe in the Red Cross. 5,000,000 members are necessary if the needs shall be met.

WORLD'S OLDEST CLOCK IN ROCHESTER COLLECTION

Rochester, N. Y.—Still ticking the hours away in a manner creditable to Father Time himself, what is said to be the oldest running clock in the world holds the place of honor in the antique and numismatic collections of Dr. George P. French, whose collection of United States cents admittedly is the most complete in the world.

Discovered in a London attic and sold by an antique dealer to Dr. French, the clock, an unusually fine specimen of the hooded Friesland type made in 1558, is almost unique. Another specimen, made at about the same time, holds a prominent place in the collection of the British Museum, but has long since ceased to run.

In Dr. French's collection of curios is P. T. Barnum's famous mermaid, an example of the famous showman's statement that there is "a sucker born every minute." After the stir it created died down Dr. French purchased it. A monkey torso cleverly inserted in the mouth of a sea bass made the illusion which caused much comment in the scientific world.

DEMPEY-SHARKEY GO COMES TO THE CIRCLE

To Be Shown Thursday and Friday With Hoot Gibson in "The Prairie King"—Slow Motion Too.

Manchester fight fans will be allowed to decide for themselves on the alleged foul which one Jack Dempsey, formerly heavyweight champion of the world, is said to have committed on one Jack Sharkey, late of Boston, in their elimination some months ago for the right to face Gene Tunney. Pictures of this fight will be the main attraction at the Circle theater on Thursday and Friday.

The complete pictures of the whole fight, including those of the round in which the foul is said to have occurred, will be shown. That particular round will be shown at the regular speed and later in slow motion so that any of the so-called questionable blows may be seen when they start and at their finish. That fight lost for Jack Sharkey the opportunity to meet Gene Tunney, heavyweight champion, and some months later Dempsey was beaten by the champion in Chicago. The pictures of the latter fight have been exhibited but rigid censorship had been clamped down on the Sharkey films so that they could not be transported without making their owners liable to imprisonment, or fine.

The Blazing Horizon

COPYRIGHT 1927 by NEA SERVICE

CHAPTER I

IN 1871 a few buffalo hunters, among them a certain Captain Stone, pitched their camp on a little knoll in Kansas just north of the Indian Territory line.

The captain was a far-seeing man. He noted the abundance of spring water, the succulence of the prairie grass and the not unimportant factor of the place's nearness to the border of a land from which the government, in accordance with its treaties with the Indians, had excluded the white man.

As the population increased, Cox and Emerson put in a real outfitting store and a man named Dickie installed a restaurant, with bar, foot-rail and all accessories.

The big boom that started with the coming of the railroad found Gordon W. Little writing on table in one of Caldwell's busy restaurants and longing for something that would more nearly satisfy the normal youth's desire for adventure and the opportunity to make a fortune.

As he saw it, the main requirement for the latter was a working capital, whereas Gordon Little and capital were not yet acquainted.

Newton Little, his father, had had about all he could do to make ends meet. Gordon was 19, and the oldest of the children.

Albert, Elsie May, Lena and Gordon's foster sister, Lucy Conant, as Miller in Bloomington, Ill. Two years before, calamity had descended on the family when fire had destroyed the mill, and the Littles now lived near Wellington, Kansas, six miles from Caldwell.

where the father still patiently tried to eke out a living from another four mill, but counted more hopefully on the productivity of the farm land that he had purchased.

Gordon Little stood in the doorway of the restaurant, his gaze roving idly over one of the strangest medleys of humanity a man ever looked upon. It was Saturday afternoon in Caldwell. Bronzed, chapped cowboys from the nearby ranges, stopping enroute from their fatiguing herd riding, rubbed elbows with roughly dressed railroad laborers, for the Santa Fe extension was not yet finished and Caldwell was the haven of thirty souls who worked along the right of way.

Here were cattle thieves, horse thieves, Indians, desperadoes; women, some with children and others with hard eyes and painted cheeks and a ready smile for each passing male.

A cluster of hoofs and an enveloping cloud of dust moved down the street. Three men dismounted in front of the restaurant.

The tallest of the three, a man with a shaggy black beard, eyed the youth with cold appraisal and waited. Little did not appear to notice him.

A harsh voice broke in on his thoughts. "We're hungry. Are you gonna stand there and go to sleep or invite us inside?"

Little straightened up with a start. He murmured something in apology, then led the way into the dining room and indicated a table for the trio. Glibly he recited the bill of fare.

The bearded man listened impatiently and then gave his order. "And get a move on," he added surlily.

"That's Tom Benton. He's ornery," said another waiter, as Gordon went into the kitchen.

Presently a loud command in Benton's surly tones called Little forth. The man was pounding on the table with his fist. "What kind of beef do you call this? This steak's so damned tough you could sole boots with it." The color deepened in Gordon Little's ruddy cheeks and resentment flamed within him. He made no answer but started to remove the offending meat. Benton's heavy stare never left the youth's face.

"I said the steak was tough," he repeated. "I'm waitin' to hear you admit it."

A calm voice drifted in from the doorway. "I didn't know anything for anybody came too tough for you, Benton." Benton swung around and met the smiling blue eyes of a broad-shouldered, fair-haired cowboy who had entered at the moment with half a dozen companions. The bearded one glared. "I don't remember issuing any invitation for you to horn in on the conversation, Joe Craig."

Joe Craig grinned. "I declare to goodness I clean forgot my manners, Tom. I always was disappointing to my folks that way. They never could count on me to uphold the family reputation for politeness and so I come to Kansas and get a job riding for Titus Moore, not wanting to embarrass the family for the rest of their lives."

"But it's downright strange about that steak. You see, all the beef that's served in this place happens to be Bar K beef. Benton can't hear your two friends complain."

"Maybe I'm a little more finicky than my friends," Benton said sarcastically. "I always was hard to please. As for it being Bar K beef, maybe that's the reason it didn't suit me. There's a lot of things about the Bar K I can't get wild about."

sound of running feet and a few of the diners rushed to the door to look.

"Someone came in presently to announce that the town marshal had been shot. Craig looked up with an expression of mild interest. "That's who is the town marshal now? I can't keep track of them."

"Not it—was," corrected his informant. "Name was Sam Fortune." "Now, ain't that too bad?" sympathized Craig. "With a name like that you'd sort of expect better things was in store for him. Who shot him?"

"Brad Becker. Brad and him got in an argument over the name of an author. They were both lit. Becker claimed the book was written by Shakespeare and Fortune said it was written by a man named Bunyan. They were too literary for me."

"Ain't it the truth?" Joe Craig wagged his head sorrowfully. "Did they say what book it was they were arguing about?"

"Yes, they did. It was Paradise Lost or something like that. What in hell are you laughing at?"

For the moment Craig was speechless with mirth. A few of his companions smiled, but the others exchanged bewildered looks.

"That," said Craig finally, "is what comes of pursuing the higher learning too far. Where's Becker now?"

"He headed for the border. But he'll be back. Fortune wasn't killed in the line of duty and Becker wasn't arrested or anything. They got in an argument, called each other a liar and got mad. Fortune drew and Brad was quicker. You can't convict a man for that."

"Not in Caldwell, anyway." Craig turned to address the other Bar K men. "You boys going up to Mag's place?"

"We'd sort of counted on it," one of them said. "Go ahead, then. I'm staying here to talk a bit to my friend Bill Little."

"Tom Evans," Craig said to Little, "was telling me you was hoping for the day when Oklahoma would be opened for settlement. Bill, you've been listening to bad advice. If people want to settle somewhere, why don't they fill up western Kansas with their own country down below the line. Also it's cow country, and if the noble red men are willing to permit the use of their lands for grazing, why let 'em graze. Me, now, I'm a cowboy. Why don't you come to work for me? The Bar K will be glad to have you."

"I'm obliged," said Little, "for the offer. Right now I've got other ideas. I'm trying to land a teacher's job in the Indian school at Pawnee. That's Indian country for the white back in Illinois."

Craig was watching two figures moving toward them through the twilight. The taller figure was that of a man about 35, slender and tall. There was about him in the cut of his black clothing, in his calm, deliberate movement, an air of elegance. He wore a frock coat, a round-crowned soft hat, lower and smaller of brim than Craig's. His hair was smooth-shaven, except for thin black sideburns that descended nearly to his chin.

The boy with him must have been 12 or thereabouts. He was dark like the other and had the same black eyes. His hat, which he carried in his hand, permitting the cool breeze to ruffle his wavy hair, was a small replica of the man's. A pitying smile played about Gordon Little's lips. "Poor kid," he said softly. The sight of Anthony Harrison never failed to evoke his sympathy, possibly because of the impression of loneliness the boy always gave him.

The Harrisons were talking, the man smiling and shaking his head at something, the boy serious-faced. When they drew within earshot the man stopped his laughter and fell silent.

Little learned enough about Harrison in the short time they both had been in Caldwell to know something of the man's strange ways. A taciturn man, curt, grave, unbending only when he was with his boy, Father and son had been living alone in a little cabin on the town's edge. Jeff Harrison spent every evening of the week, save two, gambling. It was rumored that he gave those evenings to his boy.

with a bulky, fear-inspiring body guarding his side. Many of these mythically ferocious chieftains have been rat-like weaklings, with pinched faces, undernourished bodies and more cunning than strength. They could not hold their own in any equal contest and so go about, day and night, accompanied by a huge brute—usually a down-and-out prizefighter.

The gangster business today is largely a "bruiser" business. The chiefs hire out their gangs for "rough work" in labor troubles. Labor fights in this part of the world are mean fights, accompanied by cracked heads and bruised bodies.

For, perhaps $50,000 a "Little Augie" would undertake to "settle a strike" for the bosses. In fact it was just a transaction. I am "Little Augie" left in his grave with "a bullet in the back." He roused a few jealousies through the appointment of lieutenants.

So he "got the works." Tomorrow the new chief who takes his place had best look out. "Little Augie" left his name at the Rec office. They will avenge his death. There will be another "shot in the back" some Saturday night and nobody in the passing crowd will be able, two minutes later, to remember having heard or seen anything.

REC NOTES

There is some misunderstanding about the manner in which partners may be formed at the setback parties held Wednesday evenings at the West End Rec. For this reason, Miss Dorothy Hardy, who is in charge, announced today that persons may play with anyone they wish but that the highest point scorers, whether two women, two men, or a man and a woman, will win the turkeys. The same rules apply to the second prize winners for groceries. This rule applies to only setback parties as partners change after every two hands at whist parties on Saturdays.

A hooked-rug class will be formed at the East Side Rec. at 10 o'clock Wednesday morning providing enough entries are made. Those who are interested should sign their names at the Rec office. A fee of one dollar will be charged in addition to membership.

JOE CRAIG threw away his cigar and gazed at the backs of the departing Harrisons. "Little," he said after a minute, "that's a mighty handsome little boy."

"Takes after his father. I can't help feeling sorry, somehow, for Toby Harrison. No mother, and a gambler for a father. Leastwise, I don't know anything else Jeff Harrison does for a living."

"The boy has to sit around all alone at night and wait for his daddy to come home. Some evenings he goes with him and waits outside."

"Don't he ever go inside?" "His daddy don't permit it. Jeff Harrison's a gambler, but he ain't a common one. Another thing, I've never seen him speak to a woman since he's been in Caldwell. The boy don't, either."

"Now that's kind of queer," pronounced Joe Craig. He departed a few minutes later. "I'll be traveling up to Mag Woods' place. Have to keep an eye on the boys. They can stand just so much liquor and then they feel an irresistible desire to shoot things up. It's just plain animal spirits with them, but I don't approve of it myself—not when I'm responsible for them to the colonel."

Mag Woods' place was one of the most pretentious buildings in Caldwell and Mag herself was a remarkable woman. She had reputedly made a fortune with her big dance hall just across the Arkansas river from Wichita, and when the boom in Caldwell she moved down to the new town to lure the freely squandered dollars of the free and easy souls who came there for their periodical flings.

For Caldwell was raw and wide open. Its trigger fingers perpetually trembled. The very little law enforcement in the town; men quarreled and killed in Caldwell and walked on about their business, or rode south four miles and crossed the border of No Man's Land. Over night, almost in his calm, dejected mood, he had become a friend on one knee while on the other he rested the hand holding his six-shooter and pumped bullets in the floor. Mag Woods herself bore down on him, but before she had flung his arm up with a loud "Whoopie!" and fired in the air.

The bullet rang against the iron plate protecting the musicians. The music stopped suddenly and the fiddler struck his head out and looked wrathfully down.

"If you-all don't quit that damn foolishness down there," he threatened, "you ain't gonna have no orchestry. I'm havin' trouble enough gettin' hold of the good music, and you're plumb ruined two of them in the last month."

He was greeted with loud jeers. The bantam rooster mounted a table and started a speech.

"I'm leaving," Gordon Little announced after a while. He stepped down the street he encountered the pathetic figure of Jeff Harrison outside the Big Buffalo.

The place was blue with tobacco smoke. The professional drone of lookout and croupier rose above the voices of those packed around the roulette layout; nearby was a fero bank and close to the door five men sat at a table playing poker. Little caught himself with a start as he recognized one of the players as Tom Benton and another as Jeff Harrison. Benton was in his usual bad temper. The pile of chips in front of him was small and as Little watched he flung down his hand and glared at Harrison.

"Wish I was as lucky as some people," he cried. "Something in the man's tone, ugly, impatient, struck harshly on Harrison's ear. Without changing expression, he said, "It's not your night you can quit, you know." He stacked the chips in front of him, adding them to his already numerous neat piles.

"You ain't quittin'," Benton declared surlily. "Luck's bound to change, Tom," a man behind him said. It was one of his companions of the restaurant.

Little walked away from the table, glad somehow that Jeff Harrison was winning. He watched the faro game for a while, but his interest lagged and the restless feeling within him would not subside. His eyes roved about the saloon. It was doing a thriving business. Men stacked the bar two deep. The place rang with laughter and loud talk. Little stopped again at Harrison's table, taking his place behind Benton. Harrison was dealing and as Benton picked up his cards, one by one, Little felt something akin to a shiver creep up his spine. Benton had picked up four jacks. He saw the man's wrists stiffen; then Benton, leaned back in his chair, assuming nonchalance, but with wary eyes on Harrison, almost directly opposite.

The player on Benton's right tossed a solitary chip in the center. Benton raised, not for the limit of five dollars as Little had expected, but for two. They all stayed, and ton lay back again and watched the draw with slitted eyes, his gaze never once leaving Harrison's hands as the handsome, dark-eyed gambler dealt.

The man on Harrison's left took one card, the opener three. Benton said, "Deal to the next man," when Harrison paused in front of him. The next player whistled. "Pat!" he exclaimed. "Give me three cards."

"Dealer takes three," announced Harrison in an even voice. "I'll let the pat hand do the betting," remarked the chip.

Benton shoved some chips in the center. "Five dollars."

The man on his left threw in his hand. Harrison, however, tossed in ten dollars' worth of chips.

A pleased light crept into Benton's narrowed eyes as he watched the other players drop. His hand trembled as it fondled his chips. "Your five and five better."

Harrison's eyes were dark, expressionless pools. Once more he dealt. Benton's stack was almost depleted. He fumbled at his belt and brought forth a little sack, from which he poured some gold.

"I'd like," he said, "to buy some more chips, and if you, indicating Harrison, "ain't got any objections, I'd like to raise the limit."

Harrison inclined his dark head. "You can remove it completely if you like."

At sight of the little sack, Benton's companions, both of whom stood near Little, exchanged a quick, warning look. Benton smiled. "Ain't no use buyin' chips. Here, counting out the gold pieces, 'is my pile. There's five hundred there. If you want to call it you kin. It's too much for you you might want to call part of it." Contempt edged his voice.

"I'm calling all of it," Harrison said quietly, "mine's higher." He held four kings.

The tables held for a moment; then occurred the drama that Gordon Little was not to forget as long as he lived. Benton looked at Harrison's cards, amazement and incredulity written on his face. He transferred his gaze to his successful opponent, who was raking in the money and chips. His face glowed; with a loud bang he crashed his huge fist on the table.

Harrison looked up inquiringly, a slight smile playing on his lips, and the smile goaded Benton to fury.

"I said a little while back," he uttered, trying to keep his voice level, "that I wished I had some people's luck. I'm not so sure it's luck." He folded his arms and glared at the other.

Harrison paused in the act of gathering in the stakes. "I'm not so sure I know what you mean," he said calmly.

Benton laughed mockingly, at the same time rising and backing away from the table. "You dealt and drew three cards. Ask anyone in here what chance a man has of making four by drawing to a pair."

A red flush stained the gambler's handsome face. Other than that there was no sign of emotion. Quietly he looked into Benton's eyes, and Gordon Little's heart sank. He knew instinctively that Benton's hand had closed about the butt of a six-shooter the moment he had folded his arms. If Harrison made a threatening move it meant his death. Didn't Harrison know it?

He started to cry out as he saw Harrison's hand go toward his left breast, but in the same moment he heard a boyish voice behind him and was aware that Tony Harrison had come in. At the sound of the boy's "Daddy!" Harrison's eyes wavered. In that instant Benton fired.

New York—When the gang world "give the works" recently to "Little Augie," successor to "Kid Wropper," the press intimated the world that "he fell with a bullet through his back."

That's the way New York gangsters fight: they strike from the dark and shoot in the back. It is their cowardly code never to give their enemies the slightest chance. They never meet an opponent in fair fight; they travel, like wolves, in bands when the hunt is on; they speed by on high-powered cars, sniping from a window and then speeding on again.

places when a pistol cracks from a passing car—as was the case in the slaying of "Little Augie"—but no one seems ever to remember the number of the automobile; no one appears who saw anything or heard anything.

Thus far works as an accomplice. The good folk of the East Side themselves in gang affairs, they bring their shoulders and leave the police without open clues. In the end the gang world tries its own cases, convicts—and kills.

Yet, in spite of outward secrecy, news of gang doings travels with telegraphic speed. The gangs are supposed to talk in whispers, but somewhere there is a sounding board that seems to about such whispers in many directions.

Not long ago two suspects were jailed in a spectacular gang war. Learning from past experiences the police kept secret the day of the hearing and yet, one hour before the Essex Market court opened, a mob of 1500 had gathered in the street.

PARSONS THEATER

"Let's Move" the new farce comedy that is announced for this week at the Parsons Theater, Hartford ought to have a special appeal to the public because it is so utterly true to life something quite uncommon in comedies especially farcical comedies. The subject matter however of "Let's Move" will find a responsive cord in the hearts of many of its spectators who will probably recall having been thru the same experiences. Jessie Hein Ernst and Max Simon have written a play that looks as though it was the outcome of experience and as though there was a satirical force behind it to something the restless spirit of the public. In the forthcoming presentation Russell Mack is the featured player and he will be assisted by the inimitable Maude Eburns, Betty Lawrence, Dorothy Tierney, Russell Fillmore, Charles Hampden, Hans Hart, Cliff Heckinger and others. Seats are now on sale for the entire engagement which should prove one of the jolliest events of the theatrical year.

For the first time in history, Manchester triumphed over Willimantic at football Saturday when Coach Tommy Kelly's 1927 edition won its most important game of the season at the McKee Street stadium. The margin, a most decisive one, was 19 to 6. In the four years the two schools have met on the gridiron Manchester hitherto had not even scored a point, not to mention win a game. Consequently, a most cherished victory was Saturday's.

Playing wide awake and alert football every minute, the aggressive Manchester swarmed all over the Thread City aggregation from the very start when Ernie Dowd, brilliant local back, raced seventy yards for what looked like a sure touchdown had not Manchester been outside on the matter of fact, Dowd stepped off the sideline during the early part of the run.

Manchester was not dismayed at this reverse and annexed a six point lead within the first five minutes of the game. It came when, after failing to gain sufficiently, Manchester called upon Lupien to kick and the Manchester wingmen were down the field like a streak of lightning. Two local warriors struck Warren like a ton of brick as he caught the ball and "Pitt" Henley recovered.

Keeney Goes Over
This was on the thirty yard line but the local backs tore into the opposition for a first down. Captain "Doc" Keeney slipped off tackle for eight more yards and Bob Treat made it another first down. Two more rushes by Captain "Doc" Keeney proceeded to make five consecutive first downs bringing the ball to the ten yard line as the first period ended. It looked as if a score were inevitable but upon resuming play, Manchester's line turned back the visitors in four successive plays to gain possession of the ball on the seven yard stripe. Through out the rest of the second period, neither team threatened to score.

Dowd's 80-Yard Thriller
The opening play of the second half brought the biggest play of the game. Manchester succeeded to receive and the visitors got off a beautiful long high kick that sailed way down the field finally resting in Bob Treat's hands. Treat started toward the right. So did every player on both teams. Ernie Dowd came around to the left fast, took the ball on a clever lateral pass from Treat and dashed eighty yards for a touchdown. Willimantic's right side of the forward line and the field defense was "sucked in" beautifully on the play. Keeney plunged through right tackle for the extra point.

This unexpected play took the starch right out of the visitors. They were never themselves thereafter although they fought hard to the finish. It was not long after that Manchester recovered a Windham fumble on the latter's thirty yard line. The locals advanced to the 17 but there struck a snag. There was no further scoring until the final period when Manchester uncoiled its best ground gaining tally of the contest making five first downs in succession to crash over for a touchdown. Splendid dashes of tackle, skirts around end and bucks through center by Shannon, Keeney and Hansen respectively, were outstanding in this march. Keeney made the score and Lupien's dropkick fell short.

Saba Prevents Shutout
The game drew rapidly toward a close without either team threatening further. With victory a certainty, Coach Kelly then sent in every available player on the bench and just before the game ended, Saba skirted his own left end for twenty-five yards for a touchdown. The try for point was a failure.

The statistics show that Willimantic and Manchester both made eleven first downs and that Manchester was penalized five yards four times and ten on against five, five-yard setbacks for the visitors. Manchester tried four forward passes, completed none. Windham tossed fourteen into the air and four found their mark.

One thing was evident in Saturday's victory and that was the importance of practice. Throughout the past week, Coach Kelly drilled his team on Windham plays, obtained by scouts. Windham has one play in particular that has gained considerable ground all season, one where a backfield man ducks through tackle in a fake formation, but this play was stopped repeatedly by the aggressive Manchester forward line. The kickoff play on which Dowd raced for a touchdown had been rehearsed many times and saved special for this game.

Everybody Helped
It would be both hard and unfair to attempt to pick any individual star in the playing of the Manchester team. True, Dowd was sensational in his end runs, but for that matter, so was Keeney in his line bucks, Gill on end runs, Shannon and Treat on off-tackle slashes and Hansen through center on trick plays. On the line, it was the same.

HARVARD COACHES NOT DISCOURAGED

Despite Disappointing Season Crimson Team Looks Forward to Next Year's Team.

Cambridge, Mass., Nov. 21.—Despite a disappointing season just closed, Harvard today looked forward to an eastern championship team next year.

Head Coach Arnold Horween is slowly but surely putting Crimson football back into the Percy Haughton class.

Harvard has returned to a desperate fighting mood as evidenced in the Yale game, and is being given a whole-hearted support.

The Crimson too, is losing only Coach Arnold Horween in addition to the veteran material, Eddie Casey, one-time famous Harvard openfield runner, as coach of the freshmen will send forward to the varsity squad several first class players.

The Casey list includes Ben Batchelder, a wonderful back, Ticknor, a defensive back, Tommy Gilligan, a fighting quarterback; Henry Gildea, a center; Baldwin and Ogden, a pair of fast wingmen; Gilman and Werner, who will contest for Pratt's position at tackle; Gade, a guard; and Huseley, a backfield player of marked ability.

Horween will have a tough schedule in 1928, including a clash with the Army, but he will have a wealth of material as Harvard football begins to look up once more.

LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT MATCH
New York, Nov. 21.—Jess McMahon, official Madison Square Garden matchmaker, today opened negotiations looking toward the untangling of the light-heavyweight controversy when he announced that he was endeavoring to sign Leo Lumski, coast contender, and Jimmy Slattery, National Boxing Association champion, for a bout December 21. Lumski has agreed to the terms, he said.

Cheney Soccer Team Wins 2-1

Cheney Brothers defeated the Swedish Americans at soccer in New Britain yesterday two goals to one, before a large crowd.

This game was played at Milton Brook Park before a large crowd. Game was called at 2:30.

The Swedish Americans took the kick off with the sun on their backs and playing on the best half of the field the other end being muddy. The play was pretty even for the first 20 minutes when a foul was given against one of the Swedes for jumping on an opposing player.

Godman took the kick and with a perfect pass to Godman beat Olson for the first goal. The ball was no sooner centered than Lindberg got away on the right wing, crossed the ball to Almqvist who beat Forstenstrom. This tied the score in the first half.

One of these Illinois, which won the Big Ten title by beating Ohio State. The rest, barring faculty memory, are Georgia, Pittsburgh, Washington & Jefferson, New York University, Southern California, Tennessee and Minnesota. All are undefeated to date but I fear the worst for some of them.

Georgia's Record
Georgia, having won on Saturday with the same impressive ease that has featured all of its games this year, is the only team in the country with a perfectly immaculate record. The team has been tied once and sometimes twice. Yet Georgia merely is the Southern Conference bellwether, not its champion. It won't be until it beats Alabama on Thanksgiving Day and Georgia Tech on December 3, which may happen but is not what you might call obligatory. In fact that Tech game will be a competitive riot.

A Parallel
Almost a parallel may be drawn from the coast conference race, where Stanford, beaten twice outside the pale, finished its conference season undefeated on Saturday with a victory over its arch rival, California. Southern California also kept pace with the line of march by beating Washington State but, unfortunately, this game did not finish the Trojans' season.

North Ends Ahead 12-0 in "Prelim"
The Mohicans of Meriden lost to the North Ends in the preliminary game to the Cloverleaves-Cubs battle. Owing to the lateness of the Mohicans arrival, only a half a game was played and the managers refused to call it no contest.

AMATEUR BOXING STARTS TOMORROW
Cheney Brothers to Stage First Show At School Street Rec; Large Crowd Expected; Strong Card For Seven Bouts.

All indications point toward a crowd of more than 500 persons at the opening amateur boxing show given by Cheney Brothers' Athletic Association at the School Street Recreation hall tomorrow night. There will be seven bouts in all. The first will go on shortly after 8 o'clock.

Waterbury, Springfield, Danielson and Hartford boxers will grace the card. From the Brass City will come Rollo Rolland, Joe Blarco, Lucien Gregory, Jack Harmon, Jack Sharkey, Del Laws, Leo Dorrin and Ray Dolan. Springfield will send George Lindell, Al Annoni, Charlie Shea and Billy White, while Danielson will have Joe Gouliani, Rene Poliquin, and Reouid Robard. From Hartford will come Joe Reid, Joe Shine, Harry Secher, Ray Strong and Eddie Camp.

BUT EIGHT TEAMS UNDEFEATED THUS FAR THIS SEASON

But Three Conference Championships Are Still to Be Decided—Southern California Looks Good.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

New York, Nov. 21.—One conference championship was definitely decided on Saturday, to the ultimate regret of Minneapolis, a regret tinged with the realization that its team died hard, bravely and well; another was reduced to the probability of a final standoff and two more were left dangling in mid-air like a pair of Sundae spoons on the Monday luge. Yes, today is wash day in the old locker room and only a comparative few teams can come to the ceremony with clean garments.

One of these is Illinois, which won the Big Ten title by beating Ohio State. The rest, barring faculty memory, are Georgia, Pittsburgh, Washington & Jefferson, New York University, Southern California, Tennessee and Minnesota. All are undefeated to date but I fear the worst for some of them.

CUBS HAVE BETTER CHANCES BUT LACK THE FINAL PUNCH

3,000 PERSONS SEE STRUGGLE; CLOVERLEAVES RALLY AT END; TEAMS VERY EVENLY MATCHED

Each Team Has Chances to Score; Cubs Lose Ball on 11 Yard Line; McLaughlin Misses 22 Yard Place Kick; Cubs Miss Two Field Goals; Cloverleaves Have Edge First Half, Cubs the Second; First Downs 7-6 for South; Penalties Even. Next Game Uncertain.

BY THOMAS W. STOWE

Two very evenly matched football teams, the Cubs and the Cloverleaves, matched brain and brawn for sixty minutes here yesterday afternoon in a bitterly fought struggle that ended in a scoreless tie. Fully three thousand spectators wedged into Hickey's Grove to see the town championship classic, the largest crowd that ever watched an athletic combat in Manchester.

The South End eleven came the nearer to scoring when it was checked on the 11 yard line in the third quarter but although the Cubs gained more yardage and had more chances to score, they lacked the final punch when opportunity stared them in the face. The Cubs tried two difficult field goals and the Cloverleaves one fairly easy one.

The officiating was very satisfactory to both players and spectators. They had the game under control every minute. The Cubs were penalized 50 yards and the Cloverleaves 55. Completion of total yardage reveals that the Cubs gained 154 yards against 133 for the Cloverleaves. Arrangements for another game have not been completed. The managers will meet tonight at The Herald office at 7 o'clock to discuss the matter. It is possible that the playoff will be at the McKee street stadium next Sunday. The total receipts yesterday were $980. Each club profited to the extent of $374.75 after expenses were deducted. It is estimated that less than two-thirds of the crowd paid admission because of the open field.

KEEGAN IS TIPPED OFF BY LOCAL FLAPPER
After all the due precaution that was taken that the officials for the game yesterday would not get any idea about either team before game-time, Referee James E. Keegan obtained all the "inside dope" in a most unusual manner.

Arriving at the Center by trolley car, Mr. Keegan alighted and inquired for direction to the branch office of the Evening Herald. A pretty young girl of about eighteen summers offered to guide him inasmuch as she was going that way herself.

The girl said she didn't know, but that their names had been in the paper. Then she proceeded to tell him she was a south end fan but that the north end had a good team although it was inclined to be a bit too rough.

South's Best Chance
On the next play, Mantell came back from end, took a pretty lateral pass and then heaved a perfect forward to Mozzar who nestled the ball on the 17 yard line. The south end fans went wild with delight for it was the first real break of the game and it looked as if the Cubs would score. It looked even more so when St. John and Donnelly brought the ball to the 11 yard line on line plunges.

Poor Judgment
At this point of the game came the play which saved the day for the Cloverleaves. It was fourth down for the Cubs on the 11 yard line with only two yards to go for a first down. It seemed that either Schubert or Farr should be hurled at the line, but the Cubs elected a forward pass. St. John to Mozzar which was incomplete. With this failure went the best chance of the game for either team to score.

Zwick Misses Dropkick
Eddie Gill, who proved the best punter of the game, booted the pignikin out to midfield. A fifteen yard penalty imposed because Walter Mosk was caught tripping and a couple of line bucks brought the ball to the 21 yard line where Zwick elected to try a dropkick for a first yard line. Donnelly slipped through guard for the vital distance but Captain Jimmy Finnegan was caught using his hands illegally and the Cubs lost fifteen yards plus a golden opportunity.

team. Standing on his own goal line while his line held tight, Gill punted out to the center of the field. A Zwick-to-Farr forward pass and a fifteen yard penalty brought the ball back out the Cloverleaves 22 yard line but again the Cloverleaves held and the Cubs lost the ball on downs on the 29 yard line.

Cloverleaves Rally
With only eight minutes to play, the Cloverleaves came to life and started to rip into their rivals with the ball back out the twenty yard line and after failing to gain sufficiently, the Cubs fell into punt formation.

North Gets Break
Farr went back to kick. He was standing on his own goal line. The pass was low. He fumbled it. Three Cloverleaves were charging toward him. It seemed sure he would be caught but the brilliant south end player scooped up the ball and managed to connect hard enough with his feet to drive the ball to the thirty yard line where Brunig Mosk fumbled the ball. In the mad scramble that followed Ambrose was ruled the winner and the Cloverleaves took possession of the ball on the twenty-yard line. Moonan made seven yards around right end. There were only two minutes left to play. Moonan picked up another yard but Brunig Mosk lost it on the next play.

North Misses Chance
Rather than to risk another line buck with only three yards to go, Moonan called for a place kick. Bill McLaughlin went back to make the try. Moonan knelt down on the 22 yard line to hold the ball. It was an excellent chance to win the game, but McLaughlin's boot was low. It went for a touchback and the Cubs took the ball on the 20 yard line. After a couple of line bucks, Farr booted out to the 43 yard line. There was less than a minute to play. Moonan hurled a forward pass that was incomplete and then tossed another which Billy Schoneski caught on the 20 yard line for a gain of 23 yards. Time expired before the teams could line up again.

Smith Roughs Farr
While it is difficult to pick any one individual hero of the great battle, for everyone gave all he had, the work of Ding Farr, Benny Schubert, George Moonan, Jake Greenberg and Whitty Mullen stood out. Others may have played equally as good but the work of this quartet was more conspicuous. Farr and Mullen gave fine exhibitions of sheer grit when they were injured several times in a row only to continue. Mullen had to be carried off the field before he would quit. Farr, on the other hand, got away some beautiful punts and made many good gains for the south. Once he was badly fouled by the ball to the thirty-yard line again, but continued. The play looked inexcusable.

Splendid Punting
Eddie Gill outdistanced Farr at the punting art but both men were to be complimented on their fine punting work, not only for being blocked. Several times they were hurried but always the toe beat the opposition. The north surprised a bit when it used Gill for the majority of the game even though he has not played with them all season. He fitted in remarkably well.

Cubs' Left-Side Weak
In the center of the line, there was so much hot action that it was almost impossible to get a line on the individual efforts of any player. Lippencott, Mullen and Tyler for the Cloverleaves turned back all the Cubs except Schubert during the greater part of the game while Greenberg, Happney, Merrer and Pentore put the quietus on Walker Mosk when he hit center. One of the surprises of the afternoon was the weakness of the left side of the Cubs' line. The Cloverleaves made repeated gains through Captain Jimmy Finnegan's post.

Don't "Take Out Men"
There was a tendency of both teams to fall to "dump the end" on wing plays and consequently McCarthy, Schoneski, Mozzar and Groman spoiled many plays that were shot their direction. There were times, however, when they were securely boxed, but taken as a whole there was a general fear of offensive plays and the result was that the game was a scoreless tie. The officials said after the game that they thought the teams played a very good game considering the rivalry that players turned back to the game. They called the penalties as they saw them. Both teams were well satisfied. There was not the least sign of a fight between any of the players although the tension ran high. The same was true among the spectators, there being not the slightest disorder that necessitated police attention.

Teams May Disagree
It is not known when the next game will be played. Both teams were all excited after the game and it was decided to meet at the branch office at 7 o'clock tonight at the Herald branch office to decide the matter. It is understood that the Cubs will contend they are entitled to the next game on their own field, the stadium. Two years ago when the Cubs and Cloverleaves made no first game was played over north and resulted in a scoreless tie. The next game was at the south end and the Cloverleaves won 19 to 0.

Means More Money
There is nothing in the agreement that states any of the next game shall be played in case of a tie. One thing is a certainty and that is that both teams would profit to the extent of several hundred more dollars if the game is played in an enclosed field. Whether the north end will agree to this remains to be seen. It is understood that Coach George Moonan and Captain Brunig Mosk are willing but this may not be the sentiment of their team.

It is estimated that more than 300 automobiles were parked in the Grove about the gridiron yesterday. There was not room for another one. In addition, the streets were strata with cars. Many persons watched the game from the St. Bridget's cemetery. The hilly section about the field afford a fine view of the game without one being close to the sidelines. Six policemen were on duty at the game to prevent any disorder and to solve the traffic situation. Everything went off serenely. They were Chief Samuel G. Gordon, Sergeant John Crockett, Michael Fitzgerald, David Galligan, Edmond Donaldson, and Albert Roberts. The latter did special duty for the Cubs. After the game was over, the traffic was so heavy that cars went four abreast up Oakland street to the north end.

During the game and between the halves, the Rockville Band furnished music that added a college aspect to the game. It was hired by the north end business men who chipped in $50 for their services.

By Percy L. Crosby

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

Nowadays the question is: How many times should a girl marry before she settles down?

SENSE and NONSENSE

Many a man who marries for a home doesn't stay in it much after he gets it.

If matches are made in Heaven, who under the world has been manufacturing our fire extinguishers.

The only farm relief that will really benefit the farmer will be to relieve him of his farm.

What others say of me, matters little. What I myself say and do, matters much.

A certain Manchester woman about to be married decided to test her youthful sweetheart, and with this object in view, called on a girl friend.

"I want you to go for a walk with Wallace," she confided, "and at a suitable moment ask him for a kiss."

Her friend blushed, but consented.

The following day the bride-to-be called round to see what had happened.

"Did you ask Wallace to kiss you, dear?" she asked.

"I didn't get a chance," was the rather apologetic reply. "He asked me long before I'd thought of it."

More Missouri! During the red-hot elections in Connecticut one can never tell just what is coming next.

"I am a practical farmer," he said boastfully at one meeting. "I can plow, reap, milk cows, and do anything you want me to around a farm. Just tell me something I can't do."

A meek little voice from the back of the house yelled out, "Can you lay an egg?"

The ocean voyager said that he was so sea-sick he didn't know what to do, but he soon found out.

Limericks A sporty young man from Mont. Slipped up on a peel of ban.

His remarks as he fell In the mudpuddle—Well! It didn't sound quite like Hos!

Boston, Mass., Transcript. A sporty young fellow from Ore. Thought the rain past—it started to pour.

He was tall, he was lank, And his suit shrank and shrank Till his trousers he never wore.

Our Funny Ancestors A gentleman opened doors for ladies. And at dances wore gloves lest he soil his partner's gown.

And in drawing rooms juggled top hat, cane, gloves, bread and butter, cup of tea and conversation.

And in the evenings asked her father's permission to sit in the parlor with daughter.

And at dinner parties abstained from smoking until the ladies had left the table.

That was back in the age when, in dancing, the feet were employed.

It is hard to make some coal dealers see the error of their weights.

LETTER GOLF

MARY TO DOUG

MARY has been married to DOUG longer than most Hollywood couples stay hitched. Changing MARY to DOUG is a par six. A solution is printed on another page.

Letter golf grid with MARY and DOUG words.

THE RULES

1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par a given number of strokes.

2—You can change only one letter at a time.

3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

The common people are spoken of as if there were any other kind.

When it comes to getting things done you will find a dozen people willing to help with the grunting, to every one willing to take hold and actually lift.

THE TINYMITES

The giant finally said he would describe his land as best he could. The Tinies gathered round real close and my, but they were thrilled. They chattered fast and someone said: "We're ready now, please go ahead."

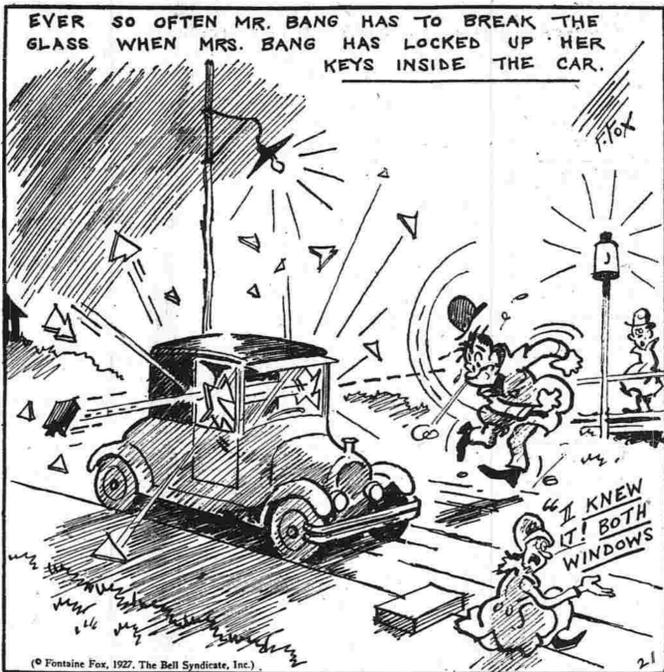

(The Tinymites see the Bad Buddies in the next story.)

Jack Lockwill Back at Rocklake

by Gilbert Patten

The coming contest between the two freshman teams aroused no small interest in the school. "You were a sucker when you agreed to it, Jack," declared Willie Darling.

"Where's Jack?" she cried. "He's gone home," answered Willie. "He got a telegram from the family doctor to come instantly. His mother is critically ill."

"Oh, it was a mean trick to get him out of the game today and beat his team!" exclaimed Betty. "Jane Hargon told me. She's indignant. That telegram was a fake!"

One hundred and fifty miles away, Jack Lockwill had just met his mother, who appeared quite well. He learned from her that the doctor hadn't sent the telegram, and he saw through the detestable stratagem of his enemies at once. "In less than three hours the game begins at Rocklake," he said. A little later, astride his pony, Dynamite, he galloped madly away.
