ALL ARE DEAD IN SUBMARINE, EXPERTS ADMIT

From Now On Navy's Work Will Be to Raise the S-4; Divers Place Chains Under Submarine.

Provincetown, Mass., Dec. 23.—Gray clouds seud across the sky—the seagulls hug the shore—the waves of the Atlantic churn in increasing fury and storm warnings fly from the beacon in Provincetown Harbor. All his seems to forecast a storm that will abandon the United States Navy to the S-4 until spring and let the torn hull of the vessel be the tom of the forty men who went down to death when the submarine was rammed by the destroyer Paulding last Saturday.

Though the dreary, bleak salvage work went on today, the naval authorities admitted that they had small hopes of raising the S-4 before spring, for they see that in the office, when will force suspension of their work. Divers continue to slip down into the ocean depths from the Falcon, bearing great hose pipes to force tunnels through the mud about S-4, though which chains may be placed and then attached to pontoons to raise the vessel. The work is on, but it is accepted as work that is unlikely to come to a happy end. The men within the submarine are dead. The frenzy of rescue work has passed and the salvage work is only another task of the sea, a task that stormy seas may end at any moment.

Fishermen Pray While the men of the navy work on at sea, the Portuguese fishermen of Provincetown stand on the shore intermittently praying and muttering. The work has reached them that the submarine may lie at the bottom of the harbor until spring and they are angry. These fishermen have brought some of the sea loaves from the old country with them and they hope that the sunken submarine as an ill omen and they will not launch their boats until it is removed. They probably face a winter of idleness.

Naval officers aboard the Falcon state that if the S-4 is raised it will be taken to the Charleston Navy Yard before it is entered and the bodies removed. No effort will be made to send divers into the vessel to learn how many bodies are in the case in the teeth of steel or how the men therein met their death.

RAISING THE SUB Provincetown, Mass., Dec. 23.—With life admittedly extinguished within the hull of the S-4, the task of raising the sunken sub from its grave off Provincetown Harbor today passed from a rescue drama into a routine salvage job. Lieut. Commander Edward Ellsberg, directing the operations, declared that unless unusually fair weather persisted it was not likely that the steel coffin with its forty dead men could be raised to the surface before next spring. Ellsberg was recovering today from a battle with the sucking waters when he descended as a diver to survey the S-4's condition.

We are going ahead as fast as we can until the weather halts us or the Navy Department calls off operations," said Admiral Frank H. Brumby, in charge of the salvage fleet. "This is now purely a salvage job and not a rescue job."

Storm Expected A wintry storm is due off Cape Cod.

20 MILLION DRIVE FOR YALE, SUCCESS

20,000 Graduates Contributed; President Calls It "a Vote of Confidence." New Haven, Conn., Dec. 23.—"A vote of confidence in the American University," is the way Dr. James H. Rowland Angell, president of Yale University, described the drive for twenty million dollars which Yale has just finished successfully. "The success of the endowment campaign in the brief time set for its completion and the astounding number of contributors demonstrate that the American people are not hopelessly dissatisfied with the methods and processes of university education in the United States," Dr. Angell today declared.

Twenty-thousand Yale graduates contributed the $20,000,000, with the assistance of hundreds of friends of Yale who are not enrolled on the attendance records of the university. As a result of the endowment fund's attainment President Angell today announced "we can begin the process of paying to our teachers salaries more nearly commensurate with the cost of living, we can add competent new members to the staff in under-manned departments, and for the development of honors work, and we can prepare to care properly for the library in its new home now building."

DIVER'S FIRST TRIP DOWN AFTER STORM

"We've lost her," Diver William Wickwire reported when he returned to the deck of the steamship Falcon from the first attempt to locate the sunken submarine S-4 after moderating weather permitted resumption of salvage operations at Provincetown. Here is Wickwire about to enter the water. The S-4's hull later was located, deep in mud, by dragging.

Hired To Clean Up Town, Police Chief Is Arrested

Springfield, Mass., Dec. 23.—Joseph A. Fouché, who resigned his job as corporal in the state police three years ago to become chief of police of the adjoining industrial town of Ludlow and who has been emulating Brigadier General Smedley Butler's cleanup of Philadelphia, was under arrest today together with four town officials. They are arrested on secret indictments handed down by the Superior Court Grand Jury, the indictments charging conspiracy and accepting bribes to protect James Ainsworth, of this city, alleged proprietor of a sign liquor distilling plant on a farm on the outskirts of Ludlow. Ainsworth was also under arrest.

TO SHELVE TAXES TILL NEXT MARCH

Senate, at Administration Behest, Likely to Put Off Cut Measure. Washington, Dec. 23.—With demands for emergency appropriations totalling $3,000,000,000 staring it in the face, the Administration, as represented by Senator Reed Smoot, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, decided last night to shelve the tax reduction bill until March 1, when the Treasury's 1928 surplus will be known accurately.

Even if this decision does not prevail and the Senate rejects it, it is certain to bring on an extended dispute in which Senator Smoot's long-standing influence both on the floor of the Senate and in the Finance Committee will be a preponderant factor.

If his wishes are fulfilled, it simply means that the $289,000,000 bill recently passed by the House will remain in the hands of the Finance Committee until March; that it will probably be revised downward, and that it may not exceed the $225,000,000 limit which the President and Secretary Mellon set as the amount taxes could safely be reduced.

On the one hand will be arrayed the Administration supporters, led by Senator Smoot, and on the other the elements impressed with the need for relief.

Grand Old Man Ends His Work; Tells About It

The grand old man has finished his active career. Spreading over a period of 25 years, his was the longest in his organization and his service was meritorious and deserving of praise, which was forthcoming. 'MEN ONLY' NIGHT SUITS THE MALE

Buyers and Sellers Not Always Sure But Business Is Done Somehow. Hale's store presented an unusual spectacle last night between the hours of 9 and 10. Instead of the customary force of women salespeople, all the counters were in charge of men, recruited from every department of the store. It was a new scheme, tried out this year for the first time, and it appeared to be a success. It was a shopping night for men, and men took advantage of the opportunity to buy things that they might find difficult to purchase ordinarily from women clerks.

The men customers on an even basis with the force of men who were selling the goods. Many of the clerks did not know half the names of the things displayed on their counters, but they were game and carried on in spite of the handicap. Butcher Uses Scissors Among the incongruous positions in which the men of the store found themselves was that of the butcher from the Health Market, who from the counter at the yard goods counter. Instead of a knife, he used a pair of scissors. He sold quite a lot of stuff. Men from the display department

"THE FOX" CAUGHT IN OREGON; NAMES TWO IN PARKER MURDER

Here Are Highlights Of Fox's Confession

Pendleton, Ore., Dec. 23.—Here are the highlights of William Edward Hickman's confession in the Umattilla county jail: 1. I took part in the kidnaping of Marion Parker, but not in the murder. Andrew Kramer killed and quartered her. 2. I picked up Kramer and a woman whose name I think is June Dunning on my way to Los Angeles from San Diego. 3. I wanted the ransom money in order to pay my way through school at Park college near Kansas City. I wanted about a thousand dollars and Kramer told me he wanted only about two or three hundred. Kramer seemed to want to have the girl kidnaped more than he wanted money. 4. At first I thought of kidnaping the daughter of Mr. Hayes, chief teller at the bank where I worked, but later decided that Mr. Hayes' girl was too young and would be harder to handle than Mr. Parker's girl, who was a little older. 5. Kramer and I committed several small holdups together, including robberies of chloroform from drug stores. 6. Marion was calm when I drove her away from school in the car and told her that her father was not hurt, but that she was Speedy Justice! This was the end to which all the law enforcement agencies of California were working today at top speed—to bring to a close the west's most sensational kidnaping and murder case.

"Fox" Trapped

In a cell at Pendleton, Oregon, William Edward Hickman, self-confessed kidnaper of twelve-year-old Marion Parker, calmly admitted that he believed the death penalty was near. But speedy justice was to be orderly justice. While an airplane carried speeding officers northward, Pendleton officers took steps to see that "lynch law" was not invoked and further that Hickman should not cheat the law through suicide.

Talk of "lynch law" however, was dwindling. In Pendleton order existed in the organization of the bank with which I am connected," said Arthur Reynolds, president of the Continental & Commercial national Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, to International News Service today. The country's largest financial institution outside of Wall street known theory that actions speak louder than words, by its broad expansion of facilities to extend a larger measure of service to its own customers in particular and to the country in general.

"In the fall," said President Reynolds, "the directors approved a plan to consolidate our commonly owned state and national banks, increase the capital and surplus of the national bank to 65 million dollars and declare a 40 per cent stock dividend, maintaining the old dividend rate on the new stock. The change was voted by the stockholders and on December First it went into effect. We should scarcely have taken such action if we had expected business to be bad in 1928."

Sees Prosperity Reynolds sees nothing to indicate depression during the first half of 1928. He looks for no "boom" in business as a whole, and visualizes a condition of "mere prosperity," which offers more or less leeway for general interpretation. Here's his outline of fundamental conditions that are likely to influence trade and business next year: "The money income of the farm-

Within eight hours after the word was flashed back here that Hickman had been captured at Echo, Oregon, the self-styled "Fox," stood charged in an indictment with the kidnaping and murder of the 12-year-old school girl. Grand Jury Meets Meeting in a dramatic night session, which lasted for eighty awful minutes, sixteen stern men, composing the Los Angeles County Grand Jury, returned a "true bill," designed to send Hickman to the gallows.

Their grim business finished, the grand jurors marched into the courtroom of Superior Judge Carlos Hardy and Foreman George H. Walhaus gravely handed the document to the presiding justice. Armed with requisition papers and a copy of the indictment, Detective Inspector D. W. Longuevan today awaited the first streaks of dawn to hop off in an airplane for the state capitol at Sacramento as the next step to bring Hickman back to the scene of the atrocious crime.

to reach Pendleton some time Saturday. That the law will deal swiftly, yet justly, with the confessed kidnaper of Marion Parker is an assured fact. "I will put this case ahead of everything else," Judge Hardy, who presides over the superior courts of Los Angeles county, has promised. "Rest assured that in this case the law will move with due regard for the man's rights."

HICKMAN IS LYING

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 23.—"Andrew Kramer," and "June Dunning" named as accessories in the kidnaping, slaying and dismemberment of 12-year-old Marion Parker by William Edward Hickman, were called the "helps of the trapped fox," by police here today. The fact that $1,400 of the $1,500 "blood money" exacted from Perry M. Parker father of the victim, was still in the kidnaper's possession at the time of his capture, eliminated the statement that he had contemplated sharing the ransom with a confederate, officers said. 'THE FOX' IS CAUGHT; CONFESSES TO CRIME

A guard, knowledge of the brutal mutilation of little Marion Parker of Los Angeles, whose kidnapping he has already confessed, William Edward Hickman today faced authorities.

Following his capture after a sensational automobile dash into the northwest from the scene of the crime, Young Hickman denied the killing of the little daughter of his former employer, and charged that the murder was the work of Andrew Kramer and June Dunning.

He described how horrible the body looked, with the eyes drawn open with thin thread, he drove with it to the father, he spoke of the seven parcels in which the limbs and lower torso of the girl were wrapped, he related the manner in which he took $1,500 from the father as ransom money for the safe return of the girl and then how he delivered the body.

Through all the horrible story, Hickman talked almost coolly. While continuing to deny any part in the killing and mutilation of the Parker child, the prisoner, betraying a startling knowledge of certain details of her death, accused to Connor.

Curious groups stopped outside the jail, casting inquisitive looks at the City Hall door. Hickman went to sleep at about eleven p. m., after a few previous short naps.

In the words of his guards, he slept "like a baby." So quietly did he sleep, in fact that D. C. Gurdane, brother of the chief and head jailer, had a sudden fear that something might be wrong.

He called another prisoner and asked if he could hear Hickman breathe. The beating of his heart was heard only faintly. Thereupon Gurdane knocked on the cell door until Hickman turned over on his side and continued to doze.

Cod here within the next few days. The following report was transmitted to the Navy Department today by Admiral Brumby:

"Divers have begun working a tunnel under the bow of the S-4 about at Frame 19 to pass receiving line and this work will proceed with all available personnel divided into two watches so that work may not cease while the weather holds. Divers are working in pairs with one using a blow hose while the other holds a light and stands by."

The pumping of oxygen into the torpedo compartment where the six surviving members of the crew were signalled for help continued today. Although no hope is held that any might still be alive—officials said the pumping would go on until the weather halted salvage operations.

Just One Week
Tomorrow will mark a week since the S-4 was rammed to the bottom of wood end by the Coast Guard Cutter Paulding.

For the most part these detectives of the deep pass off their experiences as only part of the day's work. F. G. Michaels, veteran Navy diver, is recovering in a Boston hospital after a narrow "squeeze" when he became entangled in the lines in the early days of rescue effort.

Leak in Diving Suit
J. E. Ingraham, during the last few hours of work in the depths, suffered a leak in his diving suit. It was necessary to jerk him quickly from the water. Ordinarily, divers are raised to the surface gradually because of the terrific pressure of the water.

of the widespread report that the Navy was going to give up until spring the work of salvaging the sunken submarine S-4 and her forty dead was made at Charlestown Navy Yard this afternoon by Rear Admiral Phillip Andrews, commanding the Third Naval District.

"I thought it was a hell of a place to stay forever," he said. "I was in soft mud which seemed to have no bottom. Everything was black before me and I struggled like a trapped animal. Then I decided to conserve my energies and lay still. I could feel wrecked pieces of broken steel—apparently from the sub beside me. If I moved I feared these pieces might rip my suit to pieces."

"I was afraid to ask the boys to pull me up on account of these pieces and for fear of getting the bends by too quick a jerk to the top. I decided to open the air valve and to fill my suit with air to see if this would carry me up. This was dangerous, too, as the suit might become too light and I might come up too quickly."

"I looked up and saw that my life line and hose was straight above so I told them to lift me up a little. I breathed better when I came out of the mud. I kicked myself around a bit to see the submarine but there was no sign of it. Then they lifted me fifteen feet more. After a while I told them to take me all the way up and I made it safely."

Ellsberg spent some time in the depression chamber after his experience. Only a few hours before his descent he had signed up with a syndicate to write his own story of the rescue operations.

"I found the air connections on the S. C. tube all right, and about 20 feet aft of the torpedo compartment, I found that the superstructure was ripped away at an angle of 45 degrees," said Ellsberg. "It was a clean rip. Sections of the plating from the Paulding dropped on the hull of the sub ahead of the gun."

"The cutter apparently sideslipped the bridge, because I found the forward lines torn away, the aft lines sagging and the supports gone."

TRY TO BEAT STORM

Boston, Mass., Dec. 23.—Racing to beat out another wintry gale blowing up over the North Atlantic today, intrepid Naval divers were engaged in a thrilling undersea drama in the muddy sweep 102 feet below off Provincetown in their efforts to tunnel under the bow of the sunken submarine S-4, according to radiograms from the scene to Rear Admiral Phillip Andrews, commanding the First Naval District.

Unless the submersible can be raised before another storm arrives the salvage operations probably will be postponed until spring and the forty coffins which arrived by steamship from New York and removed to Chelsea Naval hospital will not until then receive the bodies of the brave naval heroes who went to their doom off the exposed tip of Cape Cod.

In terse sentences the radiograms told of the progress being made by the deep sea divers in their race against the elements. The message read: "Divers have washed a trench into a point under the keel from the port side and are now working in a trench on the starboard side."

"These trenches are as deep as the top of the diver's helmets when standing and are six feet wide to protect the divers from caving sides. "This forenoon the wind shifted to about west northwest and was increasing. The sea was rising somewhat."

"Text of vent air from the torpedo room where six men were last heard alive but now virtually known to be dead, was one per cent carbon dioxide at midnight and half a per cent at eight a. m."

HOME REMEMBERED
Bridgeport, Conn., Dec. 23.—The Swedish Baptist Home of Rest is to be given $25,000 in five annual installments of $5,000 each, according to the will of Axel Hilmer Nilson, filed in Probate Court here today. HERE IS HIGHLIGHTS OF FOX'S CONFESSION kidnaped. She promised not to scream, so I didn't force her. Talking to her, I grew to like her and I am sorry now that she is dead. She was killed on Friday. The night before I took her to a movie in Alhambra. We were friends and, after I turned her over to Kramer, she told me she didn't want to stay with him, but with me.

Kramer's part in our original plans was to keep the girl hidden. My part to get the money from Parker.

I saw the detectives' automobiles, close to Parker's car, when I went to the place where the first meeting between Parker and myself was arranged. I had Marlon with me in my car, but didn't want to get caught, so I drove away with her and returned her to Kramer. If those detectives hadn't come along with Parker, he would have had his daughter all today.

Marlon was killed by poison, not by the knife. After Kramer had cut her up and wrapped several bundles, he brought the parts up to my apartment and told me to go ahead and collect the ransom money. I thought that Parker would want his daughter, dead or alive, so I went ahead Saturday night and met Parker, took the money and gave him a part of his dead daughter.

It was in my apartment when about two hundred detectives came there Sunday morning and searched around. I was singing and playing the phonograph. I talked to seven or eight of the best detectives in Los Angeles and asked them if there was anything I could do to help in the search. They were not suspicious of me and left after they had searched the place.

After I made my getaway from Los Angeles, I was supposed to meet Kramer at the Harold hotel in San Francisco. I stole the Hudson in Hollywood and made for San Francisco. I was stopped and questioned three times on the way. I told all the officers who stopped me that I hoped they would get the kidnapper. They didn't suspect me and let me drive right on. Kramer didn't show up at the appointed place in San Francisco.

After I noticed in a newspaper that my mother and the former chief of police in Kansas City had written a letter to me promising to see that I was treated fairly, I planned to escape to Kansas City to my mother's home.

OUR "WATCHDOG"

Now that the matter of the purchase of the High school property by the town of Manchester is out of the way it can do no harm to suggest to the people of this community that in the election of George E. Keith to the Board of Selectmen they build, perhaps, better than they know. For the history of the High school purchase is replete with details which show, quite conclusively, that in this new selectman the townfolk have a "watchdog of the treasury" possessing not only an amazing nose for the value received but a persistence as morally admirable as it may sometimes at first glance appear to be superfluous.

In the High school matter Mr. Keith evolved a theory of his own. That theory was that in establishing the price to be paid there was no reason for the townspeople to assume a moral debt for the many years of free use of the building they had enjoyed, because during all those years the situation created by private ownership of the education plant had resulted in a private control of education itself; not, in this selectman's view, to the unqualified advantage of the community but somewhat to its detriment. Proceeding from this basis Selectman Keith assessed the disadvantages of private control of the High school against the advantages of free rental, and produced a quotient much below the proposed price.

Nor was this quotient arrived at in a minute. Mr. Keith's figures were as skillful as they were voluminous, and his data had been collected at the cost of many hours of extraordinary labor. The only reason they did not carry absolute conviction to his conferees on the board was because they did not agree with his premises, which of course had to be theoretical.

No more did they convince us, but it must be said that they demonstrated a mastery of statistics and an original and highly courageous point of view.

The reason for going into this matter is that Selectman Keith has shown, in the affair—and in other and lesser matters since he has briefly been a member of the town's governing board—that he brings to the job a sense of responsibility which, though perhaps no greater than that of other members, has that meticulousness and precision which makes its possessor an extremely valuable member of any municipal government.

Selectmen, aldermen, members of finance boards who possess this quality are the Reed Smoots of municipal government. They get little glory, everybody at some time or another gets mad at them, but they are a wonderful check on unintentional extravagances and serve their publics mightily.

HICKMAN

After it began to look as though they might never catch this Hickman youth, originator of possibly the most cynically horrible crime in American police annals, he is at last in the hands of the authorities. Now it will be interesting to watch the development of maudlin sympathy for this "bright boy, led astray by the unsettled moral condition of the times."

After the Remus acquittal and in spite of the tremendous wave of wrath that has swept over the state of California, aroused by the kidnapper murder of the little Parker girl, it is quite logical to be prepared for a revulsion of sympathy in favor of this unspeakable boy.

He "wanted to go to college," if you please—and therein found justification for becoming a thief, a bandit, a kidnapper and a murderer—whether or not there is truth in his yarn that the usual "other fellow" did the actual killing of the stolen child, which is a question of no consequence. It is an almost absolute certainty that this scholarly ambition will raise up for him thousands of apologists.

Gully by his own admission of a crime which in one or two states, if we are not mistaken, carries the death penalty, and at least fundamentally responsible for the most abominable of all murders, this sniveling pervert, though apprehended, still is not yet convicted.

And it is a terrific arraignment of the general plane of this country's way of dealing with crime that, with the capture of the known perpetrator, the history of such a horror as the Parker murder should not be as good as complete instead of merely begun.

UNACCUSTOMED

To New Englanders, who are almost as familiar with such phenomena as they are with apple pie, it seems queer enough that 1,800 persons should be treated in London hospitals as the result of an ice storm that lasted only a few hours. One never thinks, here, of possessing any special skill or knack in getting about safely when pavements are glassy with frozen rain. Yet there must be something to it when, for no better reason than that such storms have been outside their experience hitherto, the people of London and Paris were rendered practically helpless by a freezer on Wednesday, and simply amazing numbers of them were seriously injured.

Perhaps the whole thing lies in recognizing the impossibility of marching along, head up and chest out, in the usual dignified way, when the ice glaze covers the face of the earth. Surely anybody, practiced or otherwise, ought to be able to shuffle about the way we New Englanders have to do on such occasions. But was betide the Londoner, the Parisian or the Manchesterian who deems it beneath his dignity to shuffle over pavements covered with a quarter of an inch of glass-like ice?

Over here we long ago learned that there is even less loss of dignity in taking one cautiously tentative step at a time, after the fashion of an elephant on a bridge, than there is in doing a whirligig flop and landing on our ear. Also less risk of broken bones. London and Paris apparently got their first lesson in this particular kind of proportion during the present week.

Give them two ice storms a year for a decade and it's our guess that their people will walk less gracefully but more safely whenever Jack Frost lays his mirror on the ground.

BACKING UP

Almost any of us can do an occasional stupid or silly thing. It is not all of us who have enough of self-mastery to undo it promptly when its stupidity or silliness is pointed out to us. It is only a few days since the president of the Blackstone Valley Gas and Electric Company of Rhode Island ordered his company's meter readers to act as dry snooters. The announcement of the order was instantly followed by a storm of protest and ridicule from all over the country. But very few of the critics had really gotten down to the business of roasting the Blackstone Valley concern and the storm was only just beginning to gather its force when the company yesterday revoked its order.

It was all a mistake, the company's president announces. It was all of that, to be sure; but just how the company came to issue the order, and why, instantly become matters of no consequence and the nonsensical, rather outrageous order itself fades into unimportance with the process of its abandonment.

In two weeks it will be forgotten that the gas company ever issued the snooting order. Nobody will hold any grudge against it. Everything will be lovely. Instead of which the concern could have erected a fine structure of trouble, for itself by merely being stubborn and persisting in its blunder.

Even the automobile wasn't much of a success until it learned to back up.

HARDINGS

Very brief and inconspicuous newspaper stories told of the removal of their final resting place, on Wednesday, of the bodies of the late President Harding and his wife, which were transferred from their temporary tomb at Marion to the costly Harding Memorial there.

Only a handful of persons attended the exceedingly simple ceremony. There is to be a more formal dedication of the memorial, probably next June, when it is expected that President Coolidge will deliver the dedicatory address.

There has always seemed to us to be something peculiarly poignant in the tragedy of the Hardings. It seems to have been such an unnecessarily irregular breaking up of a sort of charmed existence that must have contained more than the usual measure of happiness and which, in the natural course of events, might easily have been continuing today.

Warren Harding was one of the most charming of men and filled with the satisfaction of success. He enjoyed life in Marion to the full—had legions of friends, plenty of money and business success and a loyal, interested wife. There isn't the slightest reason to believe that he wouldn't have been alive and happy if he had remained there—nor that Mrs. Harding would not be there with him.

But the circumstances took him to the Senate and something very near to chance took him into the White House; and the responsibilities of their respective positions were too much for them.

Warren Harding in all probability had very little ambition to be President. He took the job, because it was represented to him that he owed it to his party, perhaps the least desirous President we ever had.

And all that he or his wife got out of it was premature sepulture under a magnificent memorial pile.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Dec. 23.—Politics, in case no one has ever said as much before, is a kaleidoscope. Calvin Coolidge has given the political kaleidoscope its two most effective twists this year, first by his indefinite statement at Rapid City and second by his more definite statement on the Republican nomination to his party's national committee in Washington.

Only one thing is certain—the game is on. No one knows who will be nominated, whether the winner will be apparent before the convention or whether all the decisive fighting will be in Kansas City. The present assumption, however, is that Hoover and Dawes will fight it out during the convention.

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

(21) How Did Connecticut's Factories Start?

While the first settlers in Connecticut, residing along the Connecticut river, took their living from the rich river land, those who settled in less fertile parts of the state soon learned to eke out their livelihood making small objects which they sold in the neighboring colonies.

Because they could replace tools, utensils and clothing from stores only at great expense and by traveling over almost impassable roads, these self-reliant settlers learned to produce those essentials necessary to pioneer life in cellars and barns and by the kitchen fireside. Inasmuch as a broken plow or hoe, or a shortage of nails meant a long delay in the progress of the work, the settler learned to be his own blacksmith and mechanic. He learned to make hand-wrought nails and repair tools for his own use. From this it was a short step to hammering out nails and shaping tools during the winter or on rainy days to be sold to the neighbors, thus establishing those household industries which were the start of Connecticut's industrial plants of 1927.

These household industries were given added impetus about the middle of the 18th century when two brothers, skilled in the art of shaping tin and sheet iron into small ware, came from Ireland and settled in Berlin, where they began work. Their goods, peddled among the colonists in handcars and by horseback, were eagerly bought as luxuries. Their success encouraged others to turn to inventions and manufacturing. Many shops were soon in full blast, the feeble forerunners of the industries that today place Connecticut twelfth among all states in the value of manufactured products.

Tomorrow—A Billion Increase in 20 Years

some way now, New York's delegates may be distributed between Hoover, Lowden and Dawes.

In Pennsylvania, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, who favored Hughes, is also forced to look elsewhere—to Hoover or to Dawes. There has been reason to believe that Mellon would prefer Dawes, but one hears that Governor Fisher of Pennsylvania, a Mellon man, is strong for Hoover and has some hopes for a Hoover and Fisher ticket.

Hoover's main weaknesses have been that he was weak in the middle west and with the politicians. The first weakness apparently remains, but his strength among politicians has increased and may increase yet more. If it increases far enough, he wins.

Dawes has strength in the mountain and farm states and is quite likely to have the Illinois and Indiana delegations and even a large part of the Ohio delegation at the convention.

All speculation, however, is likely to be upset at any time by some new twist—just like the little colored pieces of glass as they jump from one new pattern to another within the kaleidoscope.

One point can now be made definitely. The issue of upholding the Coolidge policies is going to figure importantly in the next six months. Whether the president does anything more to help Hoover or not—he did a great deal for him by his second announcement—the Hoover forces will brand Lowden and Dawes as anti-Coolidge candidates and ballyhoo the secretary of commerce as the one man who can and wants to carry out the Coolidge policies for four more years. It will be interesting to observe just how the anti-Hoover forces meet this argument.

The best available information is that Hoover will not resign unless he is nominated.

CLEVELAND AIRPORT

CLEAR 1,100 PLANES MONTHLY; IS RECORD

Cleveland.—Maj. J. Berry, superintendent of the Cleveland airport, in an address before the Real Estate Board here, declared that Cleveland has the best airport in the United States.

"Cleveland now is within 24 hours of any other city in the United States. Other cities may make claims, but Cleveland has the fastest service for ships to land 24 hours each day," Berry claimed.

Berry pointed out that eleven hundred ships a month are clearing from the air port and the many lines out of here have made Cleveland the air hub. He added that within two months installation would be completed of a radio beacon, radio telephone and radio correction, thus making this the second station in the country so equipped.

The Cleveland airport covers an area of approximately 1,000 acres. The land was acquired by the city in February 1925, actual construction work was begun on June 1, 1925 and on July 1 the airport was opened for night flying. It is located 25 minutes from the public square and is said to be the closest in all of in the country.

AL'S XMAS PRESENT

Albany, N. Y., Dec. 23.—Gov. Smith presented Frank Morris of Brooklyn, with a Christmas present today. He gave Morris, who is serving a 30-year sentence for robbery and grand larceny and assault, $100.

Morris' term would have expired last July but half of his commutation was forfeited because he attempted to escape. The governor said he acted upon the request of the state commissioner of corrections and the sentencing judge.

The British government's income from liquor taxes last year amounted to $700,000,000.

WATKINS BROTHERS, INC.

GIFTS FOR EVERY MEMBER OF THE FAMILY

New York, Dec. 23.—Christmas comes marching into New York speaking many languages, wearing many garbs and observing many customs.

For some four centuries the world has been sending its sons and daughters through the melting pot that is Manhattan. And for every land that sends us its children there is some ceremony strange to native eyes. It is true not only at Christmas, but at other seasons.

On Thanksgiving day, for instance, New York staged the Ragamuffin Parade, a pageant I have never seen in any other part of America. It is transplanted from Italy. Its participants are children. At first there were only the children of the poor; now it extends from Park avenue to the lowliest tenement belt along the river. The children appear upon the streets dressed in all sorts of rags and tatters. They wear their mother's skirts or their father's vests; they wear last summer's straws and last winter's silk kelly; they wear ancient old slippers and cast off curtains. They go from door to door, ringing bells and begging dimes.

In the Christmas season the peoples of the Holy Land come together at Manhattan's oldest spot. The children of Syria and Palestine—Christians, Jews, Mohammedans—clutter that little section up from the Battery where the Dutch settled that first village of New Amsterdam. Whatever ordinary differences of race or creed, they are dropped when the Yule season approaches. The story of humble birth in a stable is too close to their own lives to go unappreciated.

I have often felt that the Christ story is just a little bit closer to the struggling thousands of the tenements than to anyone else. The spirit of new birth, mid dirt, squalor and travail, is a story as old as the tenement walls.

It's a far cry from the simple gatherings under the olive trees upon the hillside of Lebanon to the cobblestones and wharves that circle the foot of Washington street. It's a far cry from the midnight mass parade by lantern light through the old world valleys to the midnight dash for the little church that stands near the North River.

They stand at the crowded corners in groups and talk of the homeland and at night tell the homeland stories to their children.

Across the city a tremendous Christmas tree flaunts its spangles in Times Square and the tattered bootblacks and ne'er-do-wells from the tenement belts gather at its base with mouths agape. Taxicabs whirl by and Broadway becomes more and more choked with the extra holiday signs and the orchestras play a little harder, a little longer, a little louder. Somehow the necessity of gaiety must be impressed upon the tired crowds at Christmas time. Somehow their spirits must be exalted.

Under her threadbare shawl an old woman sits and begs at a subway station. Her face marks her a child of the Holy Land. She can speak but a few words of English, and these badly. Over and over she repeats: "Geev a pennies please!" And I wonder what she thinks of as she sits and contemplates the mad rush of this new world beneath the abubled Broadway trees.

GILBERT SWAN

WIDOW OF LATE GOV. TO WED EX-WAITER

Boston, Mass., Dec. 23.—Mrs. Dorothy Woodman Parkhurst, widow of the late Governor Frederick Hale Parkhurst of Maine, is soon to become the bride of a Boston University medical school junior who is working his way through college as a headwaiter in a restaurant, it was learned today.

He is Cyrus Dimitri Cominos, who came to Boston penniless from Aiden, Asia Minor, following the wiping out of his family in the Smyrna disaster in 1922.

Young Cominos, who is thirty years of age, traces his descent back hundreds of years, and Greek geneologists claim his line reaches back to the famous Byzantine emperors of the Eleventh Century.

Herald Advs. Bring Results THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (167) Raising Silkworms It is not particularly difficult to raise silkworms. Any boy or girl in whose yard a mulberry tree grows can raise them. The moths are encouraged to lay their eggs on sheets of paper. These eggs are very tiny, 40,000 being required to weigh an ounce. The eggs must be kept in a cool dry place until the mulberry trees are in leaf. Then the eggs are placed in the sun or an incubator where they soon hatch. The tiny larvae begin to eat at once and grow rapidly. Within two months they molt, or change their skin, four times and eat several thousand times their weight in mulberry leaves. When the caterpillar is about three inches long, it ceases to eat, and begins to spin silk. The silk is a sticky fluid stored in sacs that run along the sides of the caterpillar's body. We see a tiny stream issuing from the caterpillar's lower lip. That is the silk, issuing from the spinnerets, or seripositors. (To Be Continued)

OPEN FORUM

BLAMES PROHIBITION FOR S-4 TRAGEDY

Editor of the Herald:

Should it be consistent with your policy to publish articles such as this in the "Open Forum" I will appreciate it if you will make any necessary corrections in the following and publish it.

Since last Saturday the various presses have been publishing heart-rending but nevertheless very true articles and editorials concerning the ill-fated submarine S-4, which was rammed off the coast of Provincetown, Mass. by the coast guard destroyer Paulding. In all the articles and editorials which I have read, and incidentally they have been numerous, I have been unable to find one which places the responsibility for this terrible sea accident.

Obviously, there must be some one responsible. Admiral Hughes states that if there ever was an accident pure and simple that the sinking of the S-4 is of that type. In reading the newspaper articles concerning this sea tragedy one is very apt to draw his own conclusion and establish his own opinion as to the responsibility. Some people will hold the commander of the Paulding to blame, some will be inclined to blame the commander of the submarine S-4; and then again some opinions will coincide with that of Admiral Hughes as stated above.

Everyone of course has a right to form his own opinion; and may I ask, has such an opinion such as the following one occurred to you? First we must consider the line of duty of each of these ships. A submarine as we know is for war purposes only, but the time for training its crew is in times of peace; this S-4 was doing in running a reliability test at the time that it was rammed. A torpedo boat destroyer also is designed to lend itself for war purposes, and the time to train its crew is also in times of peace; but, was the Paulding employed for war purposes or training its crew at the time it rammed the S-4? No. What then was the Paulding doing at the time of this accident? Well the Paulding was an old type of destroyer and had it not been for the activities of the Coast Guard it would undoubtedly have been put out of commission by the U. S. Navy at the termination of the World War. The Navy could not use it to advantage due to its inefficient operation as compared to the present day type of destroyer, so it was ordered turned over to the Coast Guard service, and they in turn employed it to enforce the greatest strain upon this great nations laws and jurisprudence; namely the 18th Amendment or prohibition law.

I do not blame the gallant commander of the destroyer, as he was doing his duty just the same as any citizen does his and principally for his bread and butter. In fact my immediate opinion as to the responsibility of the sinking of the S-4 comes pretty near to agreeing with that of Admiral Hughes. However, when we look into the distance, is not the 18th Amendment responsible more by far than any other reason? Had it not been for this amendment it is safe to state that the Paulding would not have been in the vicinity of the S-4; at any rate seeking rum runners. It would be safe to assume that the Paulding would have been in the scrap heap or at the bottom of the sea due to the fact that the U. S. Navy would have used it as a target for battleships or aircraft as they did others of the Pauldings type.

There are great financial expenditures made annually for the enforcement of the prohibition law; a law for which I am quite certain the majority of citizens in this country have no use for, and it may be all right to use some of the country's finances to enforce this joke, but when the money goes to send a $3,000,000 submarine to the bottom of the sea with its valiant crew, the value of which cannot be estimated, then the joke turns to tragedy and I am sure one that does not rest comfortably on the stomachs of the American public.

It must be very comforting to the minds of the ardent sponsors and supporters of this ridiculous law, and especially at this time of the year to know that their efforts are partially if not wholly to blame for the sacrifice of the forty young lives who now lie still in death in a sealed steel tomb at the bottom in "Davy Jones' locker."

Sincerely
MARCEL JOBERT

DEER FIGHT DUEL

Central Village, Conn., Dec. 23.—A herd of sixty wild deer held up traffic on the Fairbanks Hill turnpike, east of this town, for many minutes during the night while two bucks engaged in a duel.

Despite a tremendous din of automobile horns the deer kept up their fight until one of them fell exhausted, and then the herd departed. The Gallup brothers, local residents, witnessed the fight and declared it was terrible in fierceness.

The population of London is increasing so fast that 12,000 additional houses are required each year.

The Blazing Horizon

BY ERNEST LYNN

THE STORY TELLER
The story is told in the Indian territory and along the Kansas border in the '80's, when a fight was being waged by the "Boomers" for the opening of the territory to settlement.

Chief characters are:
TONY HARRISON, orphaned at 12 when his father was murdered in a poker game;
PAWNEE BILL, adventurer, Indian interpreter and showman;
JOE CRAIG, who takes Tony to the Bar K ranch to live;
TITUS MOORE, owner of the Bar K;
RITA MOORE, his little tomboy daughter.

When Tony is 15, Rita and her mother depart for Virginia and the boy learns for the first time how much he cares for the little red-haired orphan.

Months pass and word is received that DAVID PAYNE, leader of the "boomers," has been killed in the opening of Oklahoma. Pawnee Bill is so in Tony, although his benefactor, Titus Moore, opposes the connection with all his might. When Pawnee Bill goes out the following year with a wild party, he takes Tony along, and when the boy returns, Rita is back.

The terse offer amazed her, and for a moment or two she could not speak.

CHAPTER XXVIII
"Isn't it beautiful, Tony?"
It was, Tony agreed. They sat their horses on the crest of a little rise overlooking a broad green valley. To the south, partly veiled from their vision by the timber growth, flowed the thick Fork of the Arkansas. Cattle grazed peacefully in the valley, checked off on the west by a seemingly limitless stretch of barbed wire fence.

"Everything is so big," Rita continued, "so vast and limitless. I got awfully homesick for it at times, Tony."

"I'm glad to hear it. I thought maybe you'd get too civilized to want to come back."

She darted him a searching look. It had seemed to her that his remark had carried some bitterness with it. But Tony met her eyes and smiled. "No one could blame you," he said. "A young lady has to have something more exciting than a landscape in her life, I guess. How did you like the east?"

"Oh, it's wonderful. I'd be perfectly happy if I could have both. But there were times when I felt cramped—shut in. And no one seemed to understand me. They couldn't. They didn't know what I meant to be able to look in all directions as far as the eye could reach without seeing the limits of one's own back yard. Some of them refused to believe me."

"The youth nodded.

"Perhaps I know what you're thinking," she went on with some spirit, a little annoyed at his silence. "You're saying to yourself that it isn't my own back yard at all—are you?"

He reddened and lifted his eyes. "I was merely thinking," he answered, "that it would be nice if Titus Moore could only get the title to it. It'll saddle me somewhat when they take it away from him."

"And what makes you think that is so inevitable?"

"The population's drifting westward, and this," with a wide sweep of his arm, "is right in the path. People will battle right hard to get something for nothing. I must have been asked a million questions in the east this summer by folks who are thinking of going west and looking for a free quarter-section."

She shrugged impatiently and bent forward to pat Cherokee's muzzle. "I'm sure I can't understand why they think they have a right to come in here. This is Indian land."

"And the Boomers contend that the presence of the cattle ranches proves the Red men have more land than they need in the territory. They claim that a man has as much right to farm on a quarter-section as to raise cows on a ranch that's three or four hundred times as big. They've been agitating for the removal of all the cattlemen's fences in the strip, and they made such a racket about it that a few weeks ago President Cleveland ordered all the fences torn down."

She jerked up her head to look at him. "Does my father know that?"

"Sure," he answered easily and smiled.

"And will he tear all this fence down that he's been so long in building?"

"Not so as you could notice it. The Cherokee Live Stock Association decided not to pay any attention to the president's proclamation."

"But, Tony, that's wrong, to disobey the president's orders."

"I know it. At the same time, that fence cost considerable time and money."

"You're making fun of me. Come, Cherokee, we'll look for someone with better manners."

"Not at all," Tony disclaimed. "I'm being real serious. If the president wants to enforce his proclamation, he has plenty of troops in the territory to see that the fence is torn down. The cattlemen don't want to go to the trouble of removing their fence and then, after the job's done, learn that the government was only fooling. So Joe Craig tells me, there hasn't been a cavalryman around to inquire as to the Bar K's intentions."

"He glanced about him. When he spoke again it was on a different subject. "This spot here is where Joe Craig and I were sitting when I got my first look at you. Do you remember it? You came scooting down that stretch there like a bat out of—excuse me—like a Comanche Indian."

Her lips parted in a flashing smile. "I remember it, Tony. And you were such a bashful little boy, did you meet your fate when you were traveling?" She regarded him archly, her eyes beneath their drooping lids sweeping over his little, handsome figure.

Then and there he wanted to tell her that she had no right to ask such a question when she was the only girl who could possibly matter to him. He wanted to tell her of the thousand and one longings that filled him. Instead he turned a trifle pale beneath her veiled scrutiny and forced a careless little laugh.

"Not much chance, Rita," he said and turned away.

Her eyes as they lingered on him were a bit wistful.

"How about yourself?" he inquired with assumed nonchalance as he turned back to her.

"Have I met my fate, you mean?" She waited for his nod and laughed. "I'm not sure, Tony. I may have for all I know, but I haven't recognized it yet." Her eyes were dancing as she tossed her head in a gesture of abandon and her hair, like burnished copper, threw back the sun in a thousand glints. "Come, Tony, we must get back." She urged Cherokee forward and the youth followed in silence, drawing a dozen inferences from her laughing answer to his question, all of which were torturing. The only interpretation to put on her remark, he kept telling himself, was that she had met someone in the east, after all, about whom she was unwilling to talk.

He meant to bring up the subject again but the opportunity kept evading him. Several times he tried to direct the conversation into the right channel, but without success. Her mood, when it was not so responsive, was sarcastic. The nearest he came to it was when he offered to give her Cherokee.

She had been singing the praises of the young horse in a sudden outburst of enthusiasm for his beauty. "I'd give anything if I had him, Tony," she cried, putting her arms around Cherokee's neck.

"He's yours, then."

The terse offer amazed her. She stared at him, as if trying to learn whether he was in earnest, and for a moment or two she could not speak.

"Tony, you don't mean it, surely?"

"Why not?" he replied carelessly. "Barring myself, you're the only one the horse will have anything to do with. He seems to have worked up a real affection for you and I'm plumb jealous."

"But, Tony, that's not the point—that's not—"

"No? Well, let me put it this way, Rita: I've been living at the Bar K for five years and Colonel Moore has been like Santa Claus to me. He's the most generous man I ever saw. I'd like to do a little giving myself."

She saw that that beneath his flippant, reckless air was a deep earnestness, a desire to be liked for himself, by so doing, he could gratify a whim of his benefactor's daughter.

She shook her head slowly. "No, Tony, I couldn't do it. He's yours and you must never part with him. I didn't realize what he was saying. Thank you very much, though." His hand was resting on Cherokee's saddle and she impulsively reached over and laid hers on it. "Thank you," she repeated, then swiftly withdrew her hand from his and walked off.

The blood poodled madly through his veins. "Rita," he called, and then checked himself.

But she had stopped. "Yes?" He fumbled helplessly for words. "I—I just wanted to say that if you won't take him, he's at least yours when you're here. Thank you very much, though." His hand was resting on Cherokee's saddle and she impulsively reached over and laid hers on it. "Thank you," she repeated, then swiftly withdrew her hand from his and walked off.

EMPHASIZING TYPE WITH MAKE-UP
Whatever your type—silver, ash or golden blonde, chestnut, auburn, but ivory or olive brunet—emphasize that type. Never try to alter it.

Never under any circumstances, if you are an olive brunette, wear a light colored powder. There are beautiful tones of dark colored powder which will blend with your dusky skin and bring your individuality out like a cameo. Wear a brilliant rouge, orange or a dusky red, according to whether the make-up is for daylight or evening. Study the tones of your own skin and experiment in colors till you get it right.

If you are a very fair blonde, use the most delicate pink. Before applying the powder, use a very tiny bit of cold cream as a base so that the powder will go on smoothly. Should your skin be oily, dispense with the cream. If you wish to emphasize the delicacy of your type, of course the rouge must be delicate. Too vivid a rouge will appear coarse on blonde skin. But the brunet must strive for effects which will accentuate her already vivid coloring.

WINTER FERNS
If your fern looks dead, try putting it into another pot with a little richer earth and fertilizing with commercial food.

WINTER BULBS
Christmas bulbs that are getting too fast a start towards bloom can be retarded by keeping in a moderately cool, shady place.

UNUSED DOORWAY
An unused doorway may be converted into a living room asset by having shallow book shelves built half way up and the top left for a mantel.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLENE SUMNER

The physical strength of woman has been scientifically determined as only half that of man, according to a report from the Industrial Fatigue Research Board based on tests given 4335 British women. It seems to me that the board should confine its results to British women and not say "all women are half as physically strong as men." Granted, though, that the 50 per cent figure stands, it would be interesting to hear the results of some endurance tests given both men and women. Here's waging that the endurance of the half-as-strong woman would be found double that of the man.

"Debunking Motherhood"
"Debunking" motherhood seems to be a favorite occupation of some of our new mothers. We giggled wildly last night at bridge club to hear the new mother of a four-month-old son placidly announce that she was only just beginning to feel some real affection for her child, whereas hitherto she had regarded him as pretty much of a bore and bother.

"Me, Too!"
"Me, too," the pretty mother of two little girls too up-tale, "Betsy was at least a year old before I had any special use for her and I've never liked her nearly so well as Nancy. I get worried sometimes because I don't seem to have the traditional motherhood feelings."

Another Heretic
I met another friend in a store the other day. She commiserated with the original Mayflower Pilgrim Fathers were to be augmented by one in the near future, and she checked all attempted congratulations by remarking, "No, it's not grand at all. I have none of the authentic prospective-mother emotions."

What is it?
Now I happen to know that no children are better cared for and planned for and assumed as serious responsibilities than the children of the two friends who laugh at the old-fashioned sentimental "motherhood viewpoint." What does this reaction mean? Is it a pose attune with an age which belittles pure emotion? Is it honest evidence that all the to-do about motherhood's wonder was pretty much bunk manufactured by women in an age when motherhood as their only job and interest had to be inflated to tremendous proportions? Do you know, I find the new viewpoint awfully refreshing!

Why This Is
"Women for years have neglected to remedy their need of outside contacts to widen their interests and round out their personalities," comments Anne Morgan. One is tempted to answer with the obvious comment that until this present generation of women, woman has had little opportunity to make those "refreshing outside contacts" which have been the male lot ever since the first cave man went off on the chase with his fellows. It will take more than one generation "outside the home" to transform the average woman's diffidence as regards contact with strangers into self-assurance.

"Cave Women" Yet
Railroads, when asked why they provide no smoking or club car for women, explain that they have tried again and again to give women this convenience, but, finding that it is never used, utilize the space for more necessary conveniences. Women men just won't get "clubby" they have lived "in the cave" too long.

DISCIPLINE SHOULD HELP CHILD FORM GOOD HABITS
BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Punishment sometimes is necessary to break up unwise habits, but the most important function of discipline is to help the child to form correct habits.

For every action there is a cause and it is unwise for parents to punish misbehavior until they have determined the cause. The child becomes angry and has a tantrum because its action or wishes have been blocked in some manner.

In one case a three-year-old child was playing with dishes in the china-closet. The mother asked him twice not to do this, but he continued. Therefore, she whipped him and following the whipping he had a temper tantrum.

Natural Desire
It was perfectly natural for the child to want to handle the pretty dishes which were easily available. If the mother did not wish him to do this, she should either have shut the door so that he could not get at the dishes or she should have put him in another room. When she whipped him for handling the dishes she was treating him in an unjustifiable manner.

A second principle is that the parent should view each punishment in the light of an experiment. Sometimes parents will use the same type of punishment over and over for the same type of violation of discipline, without realizing that they are failing to get results.

Another important factor in discipline is not to ask the child to attempt things beyond his physical and mental powers. One should not expect a two-year-old child to sit still indefinitely. Such action is unnatural for a two-year-old child. Punishment of the child will not secure such a result; it will merely make the child moody and bad tempered.

The two fundamental methods of securing discipline are rewards and punishments. Rewards are relatively simple, since it is easy for the parent to know the things that the child appreciates most or to help the child appreciate the things most worthy of being appreciated.

Most punishments are unwise chosen. Whipping is seldom necessary or desirable. The easiest intelligent parent to know the things that the child appreciates most or to help the child appreciate the things most worthy of being appreciated.

Other Punishments
Sometimes a psychological punishment such as depriving a child

Why Harp on "Modern Women"?

By Olive Roberts Barton

The world gets better! For that we have the word of a certain philosopher whose lucid writings are matched only by his reasonings. He is supposed to know and one is inspired to believe him:

"These young people who scoff at religion, drink, gamble, and brook no interference with their excesses will marry, settle down and have children," is the substance of his statement. Or did he say "have children and settle down"?

It is as ever thus. The foolish things a parent has done, he is very careful not to allow his children to do, and to attain this end, he must give up his former habits, and take to the straighter and narrower way. I'm glad to see someone stick up for the younger generation. Foolish they may be, but vicious they are not, with few exceptions.

Saving up punishment for some hour later in the day, particularly when it is saved up for the father to administer, is inadvisable. Under such circumstances the child comes to the father to complain, and wholly as one with punches and to lose the connection between the fault for which the punishment is administered and the punishment itself.

of something he wants, putting him to bed for an hour, and interfering with his play may be far more efficient than corporal punishment.

Now then, a girl in Ohio murders her husband in cold blood and goes to a bridge party. She's the life of the party and every set of eyes is turned to her. "Rita," she says, "I'm killing gives proof of a startling hardness that makes a world, pretty well galvanized to shocks, gasp for air.

What happens? The blue-noses point their fingers at modern youth and shout, "You did it." Only a modern woman could do such a thing!

Now a thing! The know-it-alls who are dramatizing themselves more than the girl in question to leave off about this "modern woman" stuff. This girl is no more representative of modern woman than Loeb and Leopold are representative of modern man. As a matter of fact most of the murders committed by women are quite noticeably night-club life only through the movies, and who are decades older than the girl in question.

Why always harp on the modern woman? There may be slackers—there may be of a woman's moral, but there were always these also. As for murders, it didn't take "modern" woman to introduce that to a non too spotless world.

Once again, it remained for the underdog to create the most excitement in the Herald Bowling League last night. The Knights of Pythias took two out of three games from the Beethoven Glee Club knocking the singers from first place down into a tie for third place in the second round. The British-American Club tied the Cloverleaves.

The K. of P. team won the first game 499 to 455 and the second 499 to 476. Magnuson hit 111 in each of these games. In the last, he slumped to 88 but a teammate, Derrick, topped 113. However his team lost 493 to 453. In the Cloverleaves-British American club match, the over-north bowlers hit scores of 475, 500 and 507, winning the first and last games, their opponents hitting 484, 551 and 474. The second, Frenchman Wilson's short of creating a new team single. Stuart Taggart's 138 was largely responsible.

The Knights of Columbus won three closely contested games from the Center Church, taking the first by nine in the second round and the third by twenty-four. Sam Nelson's 109 was high. The Masons went over 500 twice in trimming the Bon Ami, winning those two games. In the other they were licked 494 to 484. The Masons' other two were 502 and 524. "Dubble" Stevenson hit 114, 101 and 113. The Cubs won three points from the St. Bridget's but their scores were nothing to brag about with a few exceptions. The church team came to life in the last game and gave the league leaders a bad lacking almost winning total pinfall and an even break for the match. There were but six pin differences between the teams. The West Side Rec. won three games in a row from Highland Park with scores of 461, 481 and 504. Benny Schubert's 134 was high.

DAVIS CUP IS WORRYING U. S. TENNIS LEADERS

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

New York.—Officials of the United States Lawn Tennis Association seem to be doing a lot of superfluous worrying these days about the question of just when we may expect to get the Davis Cup back. I say superfluous because I mean unnecessary. We will get the Davis Cup back in about ten years, unless we do a lot better and France does a lot worse.

Somehow and for no particular reason, the two countries have exchanged positions in the last five years. Just as we were remembering America was in man power five years ago, it doesn't take horse intelligence to realize that we could do no less than get the worst of such a transfer. Five years ago, Tilden and Johnston were comparative young players of great tennis ahead of them apparently. Five years ago, we had Vincent Richards, Howard Kinsey and other outstanding youths ready to step in when Tilden and Johnston stepped out.

Young Ones Missing Well, they stepped and most of our juvenile strength seems to have made a noise like a rubber heel and disappeared simultaneously. Outside of Johnny Does, George M. Lott, Johnny Hennessey and a few others, there have been almost no young players of major possibilities developed since Richard's day. We have stood still where once we were all advancement and progress and initiative. Lott, Does, and Hennessey now are top flight players but they lack Davis Cup experience, which means that we aren't due to win the cup this year and probably not next year, either. They are the sort of men one breaks in gently but firmly while the veteran members of the team are having their fling. We were doing just that with them when he decided that an amateur is a man who died in the county home or something.

And what is France doing? The answer is any five dollar word meaning plenty. It has four young stars now in Lacoste, Crochet, Borotra and Brugnot, who seem to be good for at least five years. This is encouraging enough, for a Gallic standpoint, but France is doing even better. Its tennis is developing young players who, in time, may be capable of taking up the banner which the others faller.

Pick up the paper almost any day and you are likely to read of a French unknown beating a member of the Big Four. Of course, he doesn't do this every day; once is enough in proving that the young French has the tennis to go on to bigger and better things. Two years ago, it was Peret who took the play away from the top flight men over there for a short time. Then he spoiled a promising future by turning professional. Last year Landry who broke through the dominance of the first team men. He didn't quite have the tennis to make the Davis Cup squad but apparently he is on the way to getting it. Landry will have a better chance this year with the challenge round scheduled for French soil.

And what of Georges Soyson, a 17-year-old, who recently beat Crochet in straight sets? That lad must have something, too. In fact, America could use a couple of Landry and Soysons. Youth alone can redeem our tennis prestige. And there is the difficulty. Because our young players are not what they might be, the best American Davis Cup team was about as youthful as a dowager's wrinkle.

INTERPRETS AMATEUR RULE
Amateur tennis players in England who accept money for writing newspaper or magazine articles, permitting interviews, broadcasting or permitting the use of a name for advertising purposes, will be declared professionals, according to a recent ruling of the English association.

HERE'S WORLD'S MOST VERSATILE ATHLETE SID TERRIS VS. PHIL McGRAW WILL DRAW A CROWD TONIGHT

OLYMPIC'S UNSUNG HERO WAS HYLAND

Tricky Stanford Halfback to Play Again in Tournament of Roses Game.

Los Angeles, Calif., Dec. 23.—One of the unsung heroes of the 1924 Olympic battlefield in Paris was a football player, a member of Uncle Sam's rugby team that was organized in a hurry, transported from California to France, in haste and landed back home with the championship.

The American swimmers, the oarsmen, the track and field stars and the tennis players who mopped up in Paris were acclaimed gloriously, but the rugby football player who scored what was perhaps the most astonishing performance, were barely recognized when they came home.

Among the fifteen young Californians who left their classrooms and offices to take the rugby fling to France was Dick Hyland, a same smiling Dick Hyland who is one of the big stars in the Stanford team that will meet Pittsburgh in the annual Tournament of Roses game at Pasadena.

Hyland was the big star of the American team that captured the French by winning the championship from a French team that was rated in its class almost as powerful as the New York Yankees.

Little was heard of the playing of the Americans in that memorable final match. More mention was made on the first pages of the daily print about the anti-American demonstrations in the stands, the riots and the disorders that sent several Americans to the hospital with cane gashes on their heads.

CONACHER OF N. Y. AMERICANS IS A STAR AT HOCKEY ET AL

Jim Thorpe is recorded as one of the greatest of all athletes because he was a superb football player, a baseball player good enough for experience in the major leagues and a track and field star who made the record for the Olympic pentathlon and decathlon.

George Owen was one of Harvard's most celebrated athletes because he won nine letters in three years of varsity competition in football, hockey and baseball and three freshmen numerals.

Other noted athletes like Christy Mathewson, Eddie Collins, George Sisler, Mickey Cochrane and Frank Frisch starred in football and baseball and any number of baseball players have been equally proficient at hockey and baseball.

But perhaps the greatest of all the versatile stars is Lionel Conacher, starting now with the New York Americans hockey club. He has a record of having been better at more sports than any other athlete.

He was recently selected as the greatest Canadian rugby player of all time in a survey conducted by a Canadian newspaper.

He was good enough at baseball to play a season as a regular with the Toronto club of the International League.

Local Sport Chatter

Jimmy Mistretta may play end for the Cubs next season. Jimmy is home from Notre Dame just now for the Christmas holidays and Manager Red Ventrillo of the Cubs says he has Mistretta's word he will wear a Cub uniform next season.

The Celtic Soccer team will travel to New Britain Sunday if the weather permits to play the Swedish American Club. All players are requested to be at the Center at 1:15 sharp. Sam Pratt will referee the game.

Wapping tasted a 47 to 46 defeat in a hair-raising game with All-Middletown last night. Wapping according to reports, Boyce and Hills each got eight baskets for the losers. The score was not turned in for publication.

There ought to be some fun when the Cubs and the Cloverleaves meet next week Tuesday in The Herald Bowling League at the K. of C. alleys. The Cloverleaves would like nothing better than to knock the Cubs out of first place.

A large crowd is expected to watch the basketball game at the Rec tomorrow night between the High School and the Alumni. Mac McDonald and Walter Dunn will meet in the second round while Leonard Berry and Johnny McCann are slated to battle it out. All matches except the finals will be played next week.

Incidentally, Bill Brennan, who made 21 balls in his match with Walter Dunn, has challenged the writer, who sunk 25 against Leonard Berry, to meet him in a special match before the finals to see who is the worst player in the tourney. The defy has been accepted. Both contestants will wear an old suit of clothes on the match. Brennan is the more confident of the two and even wants to bet his shirt but his opponent remembers that it's winter time now. Tourney rules will not be observed. As Brennan says, anything but kicking in the shins will be allowed.

Congress is going to get the Army-Navy dispute over football eligibility. Mr. O'Goody is worried, as the old fellow expects another amendment, and the last one ruined Congress with him forever.

Maybe Congress will pass a rule that all players must appear before a congressional committee and prove they didn't go to West Point or Annapolis in the hope of obtaining riches.

G. S. Fluke, London Journalist, has gone back home. He happened to be the guy who wired London the story of Phil Seay winning a fight, and now nobody ever will believe him again.

Which is the first time on record that a baseball manager, in December, admitted that his team just possibly might drop a game here and there next summer.

Bucky may lose ball games, but if he can only bag a couple more first basemen to help out Judge and Sisler, he'll have a great ball club.

A crowd broke up a soccer battle in Cleveland. They were just hanging on a few Christmas socks.

Miller Huggins says the Yankees haven't won the pennant for 1928 yet, and he's interested in bringing at least one good player from the minors. He probably figures one good player in the big leagues is worth two in the bush.

Mr. O'Goody lapped the headline in the press. "Tilden Will Defy England," and is wondering if Bill Thompson didn't inspire them words.

If Tilden defies England too much, the British Lawn Tennis Association may ask him how many houses he has received for those articles of his. Probably the white matter finally will go to the League of Nations and a general disarmament conference will be called.

Bobby Jones says golf is 80 per cent mental. Mr. O'Goody says the other 20 per cent is merely profane.

IN SCHOOL TO STUDY
Nash and Shiver, Georgia's great ones, couldn't make the trip to California to take part in all-star clash because of examinations.

Terris the Favorite in Third Number of Series in Lightweight Division — Both Boxers Popular.

New York, Dec. 23.—Once more the intense rivalry between Sid Terris and Phil McGraw breaks out in a rash of gloves tonight at Madison Garden.

Terris was a strong favorite for the third number of this colorful lightweight series because of the fact that the time he fouled McGraw in their second encounter he was away out in front and apparently had the Detroit florist headed toward a fall.

On the face of things, the series is an even break. To be sure, McGraw's victory was a negative one as he finished on the floor and Terris was disqualified for a low punch. On the other hand, McGraw gave an excellent account of himself in the first clash.

Terris got up from the floor that time to win but to this day there is a decided difference of opinion on that decision. The venerable Paddy Mullins, who manages McGraw, still believes at boxing writers no agreed with the official verdict and Paddy was never given to making squawks. He generally takes the breaf's philosophically but he contends that McGraw was the victim of a horrible miscarriage of Queensberry justice that night in Brooklyn.

In the old days when Terris was a skinny-jumping-jack he was not a crowd pleaser. Nowadays, he pulls plenty of patronage because he fights more, dances less and seldom goes through a bout without hitting the canvas.

Terris is a prototype of Leach Croser. Half the crowd comes to cheer and the other half hopes to see him knocked horizontal—but they all pay and that is what makes Terris a valuable asset to promoters.

Terris is a one to two shot in the betting. Aside from the Christmas money Sid and Phil pick up tonight, the winner gets a shot at Jimmy McLarin early in February.

BIDDING FOR ROOKIES

Col. Jake Ruppert, millionaire owner of the New York Yankees, and William Wrigley, millionaire owner of the Chicago Cubs, are bidding against each other for Lynn Lary and Jimmy Reese, star rookies of the Oakland Pacific Coast League club. The bidding has passed $100,000. Rather soft for Cal Ewing, owner of the Oakland.

LARGE CROWD ATTENDS CHURCH ENTERTAINMENT.
The annual Christmas entertainment for the Second Congregational church school attracted a large number last evening. A program of recitations and a pageant "Joy to the World" was well carried out by children from the beginners, primary, junior and intermediate departments.

A much bewiskered Santa Claus arrived at the appointed time and generously remembered all the little ones with gifts and candy. Later it was discovered that Fred Schonbar was Santa. Most of the children responded to the request to bring "white" gifts to be sent to the Children's Aid society.

FOUND DEAD IN CAR.
Pepperell, Mass., Dec. 23 — Wedged in the wreckage of his automobile, which lay crushed against a telegraph pole, the body of Joseph Willard, 45, paper mill worker of Groton, was found today on the isolated Pepperell-Groton road by Robert E. Taylor. The cause of the wreck was unknown. The body had apparently been in the car all night.

FOR SECOND TIME NEAR DEATH ALONE

Metcalf Escapes Drowning In Pond That Once Nearly Smothered Him.

George Metcalf, sixteen-year-old Manchester boy, had a narrow escape from death by drowning yesterday afternoon in Rickett Pond, which is off Oak Grove street in the Heights section of town. It was the second time in less than three months that the boy nearly lost his life in the pond.

Young Metcalf does quite a bit of trapping for muskrats about the pond. While crossing the pond on thin ice yesterday afternoon, he went down out of sight. Luck was with him, however, and when he came back to the surface, he struck the same hole through which he had fallen. Otherwise, trapped under the ice, he almost surely would have lost his life. As it was, he managed to hang onto the edge of the ice, and finally crawl out. He was alone.

Had Earlier Escape
Metcalf hustled back to his home on 178 Eldridge street and after changing his clothes appeared none the worse for his experience. Last night he told of another instance several weeks ago when he met with a similar accident at the pond.

This was before the freezing weather and there was no ice on the pond. Metcalf was out on one of his trapping expeditions and became bogged down in a swampy place in the neck of the pond. He had mistaken a mud hole for safe footing and sank in to his waist. As on yesterday he was alone. The good luck of being able to grab a branch of a tree saved his life as he was being sucked into the muck. It was nearly half an hour before he could pull himself out, however.

BABE IN MANGER REAL ONE IN THIS PAGEANT

Buckland Parent Teacher Association Presents Annual Christmas Entertainment.

Under auspices of the Parent-Teacher Association, the children of the Seventh District, entertained their parents and friends in the Buckland school assembly hall last evening. The hall was filled and the program was a most successful one. The evening, it is the custom at this school to have an annual get-together of pupils, teachers and parents at Christmas. The Parent-Teacher Association each year appropriates a generous sum to purchase gifts, candy and oranges for each pupil in the school, earning the wherewithal by social activities throughout the season. Children of pre-school age who were present last night received boxes of candy. The tree was beautifully illuminated and trimmed and William Moore filled the role of Santa.

At the hour of opening the children marched in from their rooms to the assembly hall. The first number was a Christmas pageant by grades 7 and 8, and children from the fifth and sixth grades sang the Christmas carols for the pageant. The manger scene was made more effective from the fact that a real, live baby with its mother represented Mary and the Christ child. Mrs. Levi Dewey of Wapping and her infant son consented to take these parts; the Wise Men, the shepherds and other characters were from the school. The Star of Bethlehem was a large electric star. The whole scene was very beautiful and both teachers and children were pleased for the time and thought given to it.

After the pageant the following program was presented:
Address of welcome, Stanley Dalecki.
Recitation, Christmas Eve, Odette Dilworth, George Donahue.
Exercise and song, Grade 1.
Playlet, Toyland, Grade 2.
Recitation, When Christ Was Born in Bethlehem, Herbert Seymour.
Playlet, King Christmas, Grades 3 and 4.
Song, Christmas At Sea, Grades 3 and 4.
Song, Christmas Bells, Grade 3.
Playlet, A Visit to Santa Claus Land, Grades 3 and 4.
Dialogue, Christmas Spirit, Grades 5 and 6.

STAY OF SENTENCE

Cambridge, Mass., Dec. 23.—Pending the decision of the Supreme Court on exceptions taken to the denial of motions for a new trial, a stay of sentence was granted to Lieutenant Thomas F. Coady of the Cambridge police force and Motorcycle Officer Henry K. Pelletier, who were convicted of charges of extortion and conspiracy to extort from motorists and their sweethearts parked on the Fresh Pond Parkway.

Lieut. Coady wept when Judge David F. Dillon in Middlesex Superior Court sentenced him to three to four years in state prison on the extortion charge and two months in the House of Correction on the conspiracy count. Motorcycle officer Pelletier was given three and a half years on the extortion charge and three months on the conspiracy charge. He smiled when the clerk finished reading the sentence. Coady was in tears.

LANGDON'S FUNNIEST COMING TO CIRCLE

"Long Pants" Scheduled For Saturday and Sunday With "Grinning Guns."

"Long Pants," Harry Langdon's funniest comedy, is one of two big features at the Circle theater for Saturday and Sunday only. The other is "Grinning Guns," starring Jack Hoxie, popular cowboy player. "Long Pants" is heralded as the greatest Langdon film feature. It is built around a logical, human story in which laughs are interspersed with that delicate Langdon pathos which distinguishes all his pictures.

Perhaps more than in any of his previous productions, Langdon's new story stresses romance. There are five girls in his young life—Alma Bennett, brunette charmer, who has the principal feminine role; Betty Baker, a new Langdon "find" as pretty as her name; Ann Christie, a petite miss with whom he falls in love, the round Babe London whom everybody knows, and Priscilla Bonner his leading woman in "The Strong Man."

In addition, there's a mother love running through the whole play, with Gladys Brockwell appearing as the mother. Albert Roscoe has a strong supporting role, and the balance of the cast is exceptionally noteworthy.

The old frontier newspaper, born on a fat-bed press and reared under the protection of editorial guns, is revived again in "Grinning Guns."

The newspaper office is a small town affair with the customary mass of hand-set type, an old hand press and a small job press. It is all reminiscent of the days when a gunman on a rampage was likely to remove several prominent names from the circulation list. The paper is in the mythical town of Sierra Verde. The town and the humble newspaper office provide the scene for most of Hoxie's activities.

"Grinning Guns" has its share of romance and thrills. In his efforts to rid Sierra Verde of its unscrupulous political boss Hoxie finds plenty of action. He fights as well as he rides and makes love as well as he does either of the others. Through the picture runs much rare comedy. One of the big thrills comes during a spectacular fire scene.

ROYAL NEIGHBORS IN SETBACK PARTY

Mrs. William Dillon Wins Hope Chest—Installation of Officers Next Month.

Mrs. William Dillon of Oak Place was the winner of the Hope Chest which Manchester Camp No. 2640 Royal Neighbors held a drawing on last evening following a short business meeting and a setback party. Friends of Mrs. Dillon have been congratulating her on the receipt of such a valuable gift. The chest with its contents attracted much favorable comment while on display at Watkins Brothers store recently. The returns are not all in but the camp expects to realize a considerable sum of money from the sale of tickets.

William Woodruff of Hartford draw the winning number and both he and his wife won second prizes at the card games. Nine tables were filled with players. First prizes were won by Mrs. Frieda Nelson and John Stevenson and Mrs. Johnson and Mrs. Swanson consolation trophies. A social time followed and sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

At the next regular meeting the installation of the new officers will take place and a supper will be served to the members at one of the local hotels. Mrs. Rachel Munroe who is a state officer will be in charge of the work.

"TEA FOR THREE" ONE OF 2 FILMS AT STATE

Second Is "Frontiersman," Starring Tim McCoy—All Star Cast in First Feature.

The State theater is offering two big features for the approval of its audiences today and tomorrow. They are "Tea for Three," starring Lew Cody, Aileen Pringle and Owen Moore, and "The Frontiersman," with Col. Tim McCoy in the leading role.

"Tea for Three," funny in itself, has the additional advantage of being a starring vehicle for Cody and Miss Pringle, who recently proved their co-starring worth with the release of their initial production, "Adam and Evil."

A Born Comedian
It was about two years ago that Cody took up comedy as his forte after it had been discovered that he was really a comedian all the days of his life—especially the days while his talents were being wasted on villainous roles.

Of all the screen comedy teams which have been developed recently by the various producing organizations I doubt whether there is another team that can really compete with Cody and Pringle for situation or sophisticated comedy.

The most unusual Indian battle scenes ever filmed will be seen in "The Frontiersman," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, coming to the State theater.

The story, an original by Madeline Ruthven and Ross Wills, is based upon the stirring frontier days of the South when Andrew Jackson and his Tennessee militia completely crushed the power of the Creek Indian Confederacy in 1813.

The famous frontier battle of Horseshoe Bend, in which the relative positions of the whites and Indians are completely reversed, has been reproduced with great fidelity to detail. Probably for the first time in the history of motion pictures, audiences are seeing the white troops as attackers and the red warriors as the besieged in a stockade.

POLICE DETECT MILK THIEVES

Complaints were received by the police department early in the week that somebody was stealing milk bottles from the doorsteps of homes on North School street. Sergeant John Crockett who investigated learned that a party of boys had an improvised hut on the shores of the Union pond. He went down there and found 7 empty milk bottles. The boys confessed that they were the guilty ones and promised faithfully that they would never do such a thing again.

GAMMONS, HOLMAN WINS TOURNAMENT

Cosco, Reyhl, Hanson and Patterson Winners—Cosco, Reyhl Highest Team Score.

The final game of the Community Industrial Set Back tournament was played last night at the "White House". Carlyle Johnson Co. and E. E. Hillard Co. made a desperate spurt to overhaul the Gammons, Holman Co. but to no avail. However only four points separated the second and third teams as the finish will indicate. The winning team was composed of Cosco, Patterson, Reyhl and Hanson. Incidently, Reyhl and Cosco turned in the highest individual team score of the evening of 139 and received the prizes in the form of two handsome nickel plated flashlights.

Refreshments were served by members of the Improvement Club team after the playing. A rising vote of thanks was given to Mr. Washburn in making the tournament a decided success. A purse of money was presented to Mr. Washburn by the members of the team. Mr. Washburn expressed his thanks by playing a holiday game of bridge with the team.

The friendships formed and the good fellowship of all the men had, he said, meant more than they realized, and that each had contributed his share to the community's goodwill.

A CHRISTMAS THOUGHT. Roberta Symmes. You have decked the walls with holly bright... Does it shine in YOUR Christmas sky? You have lifted the latch for neighbor folks...

VETER GOLF

KEEPING IN SHAPE A TREE keeps a SHOE in shape, they say. These puzzles are supposed to keep your vocabulary in shape. The change requires six strokes according to par, which is printed on another page.

Word puzzle grid with the word 'SHOE' in the top row and 'TREE' in the bottom row.

THE RULES 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW TO HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

THE FINNISH. The fish is a happy animal; He swims around with a happy smile; He seldom speaks in wrath or galle; He seldom uses language vile; He has no finger-nails to file! The fish is a happy animal!

THE TINYMITES

When all the skates had been tried out, the Tynmites began to shout. "Let's go back to the toy shops. We'll be glad to work some more. There still are things we haven't seen. To help with them we're very keen. We'll work until the work's all done. That's what we came here for."

ABOUT TOWN

New Haven railroad representatives were in town today attempting to locate the father and mother of Mrs. J. W. Warren, for whom trans-continental railroad tickets have just been purchased. J. W. Warren purchased the tickets at the Hartford railroad station, for his wife's parents. He did not leave their names and address, however. Anyone knowing Mrs. Warren's mother and father here are asked to notify James Rowland, traffic manager, Cheney Brothers, South Manchester.

Eighty members of the Manchester City Club enjoyed a Christmas party at the club's rooms on Oak street last night. A turkey dinner was served at 9:30 by Chef Urbano Ocano and a two-hour entertainment was then furnished, the Manchester City club quartet taking a prominent part. William H. Burke, the president of the club, in the role of Santa Claus, presented each member with a leather card case and a Cheney cravat as Christmas gifts from the club to its membership.

Clifford Symington is spending the Christmas holidays at the home of his mother at Huntington street. Mr. Symington is a graduate of S. M. H. S. and is senior class president at the Philadelphia Osteopathic College Hospital.

W. Harry England has recently sold three new houses, just completed, a seven room house on Lydall street to Raymond Jewell who moved his family into it last week. A six room house on East Middle Turnpike was purchased by Thomas Smith of Lake street who has already moved. W. J. Boland has bought a seven room colonial house on Wellington Road, Hollywood and moved into it yesterday.

W. Harry England is making good progress on the new house which he is building on the north side of Henry street near North Elm.

At the card party held Wednesday evening at the West Side Recreation Center, turkeys were won by George Olds and Mr. Carlson.

Gibbons Assembly, Ladies of Columbus will hold its regular meeting this evening in K. of C. Hall.

Miss Elizabeth Bennett, principal of the Barnard and Nathan Hale schools has awarded the contract to Contractor Henry Mutrie for her new home on Brookfield street. The house will be of frame and stucco construction and contain all modern improvements.

Arthur Barrabee of 52 Maple street, who is studying at New York University is home for the Christmas holidays.

Miss Gertrude Berggren of New York City will spend the Christmas holidays with her parents on Linden street.

Members of the present staff of South Manchester Public Library and former staff members, twelve in number, gathered at the Library last evening for a Christmas party. The gathering was held in the new rest room, where lunch was served. The room was very prettily decorated.

LINDY-AMERICAN WHIST CLUB MEETS.

Mrs. Joseph Murphy of 72 Birch street entertained the Lindy-American Whist club at her home this week, which was prettily decorated with holly and other Christmas green, and mistletoe over the doorways. Over thirty guests were present from this and other towns. Six tables of whist was played, the first prize winners being Miss Minnie Sargeant and Edward Hogan; second, Miss Elsie Knight of Thompsonville and Floyd Hastings of Hazardville; consolation Miss Anna Hastings and John Thompson. Refreshments were enjoyed at the close of the playing.

Last Minute Gift News

Of course, you heard about our "curfew hour" for men only last night. It proved that there was a real demand for this type of service and next year we will devote an entire night for men only. One man came into the store who had not been in for ten years. Another man drove frantically from Glastonbury in his "old model T". Santa Claus passed around cigars. All in all, it was a very enjoyable occasion.
