SERVICES: January 8th, 1928. 1st Sunday after Epiphany 9:30 a. m.—CHURCH SCHOOL

The Evening Herald Sunday School Lessons by William T. Ellis. For Every Age, Creed and Nationality.

AN OLD-FASHIONED BIOGRAPHY WHICH STUCK TO THE FACTS. The International Sunday School Lesson for January 8 is, "Jesus And The Sick"—Mark 1:21-45.

Rared since boyhood in the atmosphere of newspaper editing, I have had a deep sense of the importance of fully ascertained and verified and clearly written facts.

His was the practice of the Apostles and of the early Church. Their preaching was simply the telling of a story. They regarded themselves as witnesses.

What Are One Man's Troubles? We share the amazement of the Capernaum crowd over this revelation of the character of Christ, so swiftly depicted within a few hundred words.

How To Read a Biography has been its division into "texts," primarily for homiletical purposes. Everybody is accustomed to read the Scripture, if at all, only in regular portions, and for just some from its continuity and life-likeness and accuracy of the greatest Book is missed by most readers.

Best of all possible preparation for the study of the Life of Jesus upon which the Sunday Schools have entered is simply to read, at a single sitting, the entire Gospel of Mark. It should be read as if it had just come from the press for the first time, and as if all of its information were being freshly released to the world.

Not an editorial writer, but a reporter, was John Mark. Before he is through with his first few pages of copy he is portraying the Hero of the Bible in full action. Really, this is wonderful writing. Consider it: The Hebrew prophecy fulfilled; the words of the prophecy; the Messiah baptized by John and attested by heavenly powers in the wilderness; the first preaching of Jesus, and his disciples; the message and miracles in Capernaum, and the first preaching and healing tour throughout Galilee, all are told, with cameo clearness, in the first thousand words of the biography.

Not a man wise in his own conceit? There is more hope of a fool than of him.—Proverbs 26:12. Within my earthly temple there's a crowd: There's one of us that's humble, one that's proud;

ASST. ATTY.-GENERAL

The appointment of Judge Raymond A. Johnson of this town to the newly created position of Assistant Attorney-General of Connecticut not only is a deserved compliment to ability but provides a new and additional reason why Manchester should felicitate itself on having Judge Johnson in the General Assembly as a representative.

DEBTS

Financial and government circles in Europe and America have recently been more or less stirred up by reports, persistently printed in financial and business newspapers in this country, to the effect that the United States State and Treasury Departments are becoming more sympathetic to a program coupling reparations with a re-adjustment of Allied war debts and are working on plans for an international conference which might proceed toward the adoption of S. Parker Gilbert's recommendation that the total of Germany's reparations be fixed as soon as possible.

Emphatic denials of any such purpose on the part of the United States as the suggestion of a conference of this character have been issued by Secretary of State Kellogg and by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon.

Yet we shall not hear the end of these rumors—not this year nor next nor probably for a good many years to come. Because there is bound to be a grain of truth to them. It is impossible for the United States government to go placidly on its way in complete indifference to the irremovable fact that war reparations and debts have never yet been settled to the final satisfaction of all the peoples concerned.

Eventually, no doubt, we shall have to face the fact of reparation. So will England, so will France, Generations unborn at the time of the World war are not going to consent to carry on with the wreckage of that debacle around their necks.

We may take with a grain of salt the government statements that no thought is being given to reparations and debts, just as we may take with several grains of salt the forecasts of any early re-adjustment of the problem.

FLUNKED

Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran is distressed because 90 per cent of the prohibition agents failed to pass the Civil Service examinations. Every applicant for administrators in Los Angeles, Savannah, St. Louis and Fort Worth flunked.

aren't particularly concerned if they can't spell big words." Perhaps Dr. Doran is wholly justified in his protests against the character of the examinations to which his sleuths were subjected.

Nevertheless it would appear to be a fair assumption that the civil service examiners have not been much harder on applicants for dry jobs than upon aspiring post office clerks, mail carriers or typists in a Washington department.

We should think, for instance, that it might be a good idea for a liquor enforcement officer to have read not only the United States constitution but the Volstead act and the various court decisions affecting its enforcement.

UNTRUE

Reports emanating from Mexico to the effect that the casualties of the American Marine forces in Nicaragua since last May have been very much greater than the Washington authorities have permitted to become known are unworthy of the slightest credit.

No such outrageous thing has ever been done by our national government in any of our wars, and no such thing is likely ever to be done.

It may be remembered that charges were made shortly after our troops began to go to France that huge losses had been sustained by the American army there and were being kept from the public.

Whether one is in complete sympathy with our course in Nicaragua or not, it is simply foolish to credit irresponsible reports about large numbers of our Marines being killed in face of the certain fact that the truth is being told about the deaths, which actually number 16.

CHARMED LIFE

A retired United States army officer who had fought in eighty-six battles died in his sleep in the post hospital at Fort Totten, Staten Island, the other day, at 82. He was a Connecticut product. His name was Owen Jay Sweet and he was born in Kent, this state, in 1845.

That made him 17 years old when, in 1862, he was commissioned second lieutenant in a New York regiment and went to help put down the Rebellion. When the war ended, three years later, he was a grim and hardened warrior, filled with scores of experiences under fire, and a major, at 20.

After that he fought Indians, fought in Cuba as a colonel, fought in the Philippines, fought Moros in the Solu archipelago; eventually was retired in 1909 as a brigadier-general—and kept right on living at an army post until his death.

Among the battles in which he took part during the civil war were those three devastating engagements, Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville and Gettysburg, to have survived any one of which stamped a soldier as among the fairly lucky. And they were but three occasions among more than twenty-eight times as many when he faced flying lead. At Gettysburg he was one of five officers who led a charge. Two of the others were killed, one wounded and the fourth captured.

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

(33) Plated Ware Production Has Increased.

The manufacture of plated ware in Connecticut which dates back many decades is ninth in importance insofar as value of finished product is concerned.

During 1900 Connecticut, with about a third of the total number of plated-ware factories in the United States, turned out products amounting to $9,538,397, or 76 per cent of the total value for the United States which was $12,609,000.

This, Connecticut's plated ware production was nearly three times as valuable in 1925 as in 1900. From a percentage basis, however, Connecticut dropped from 76 per cent of the country's production in 1900 to 48 per cent in 1925.

York can find no better way of throwing a monkey wrench into the ticket gouger's machine than to egg on the treasury department to prosecute the ticket pigs for evading the United States tax on the tickets they sell.

But then, the whole thing is rather ridiculous. Nowhere save in New York would there be or could there be any such situation.

THE BISHOP OF LONDON

In a Parliamentary debate, the Bishop of London recently referred to American prohibition in the following terms: "Are you quite certain that on the other side of the Atlantic they have made a gigantic mistake? You go over there and see, as I have seen in the last few weeks, Ford's works with a thousand motor-cars which have brought the workmen there with their fur coats and every kind of prosperity. Ask the real people in the midst of industry whether it has done such harm to the industry of that country."

"As a patriotic Englishman I look with the greatest possible alarm on our industries failing while those over the water were never so full of prosperity because the working man goes to his work sober on the Monday. What we hear about the little sily fools with flasks in their hip pockets does not matter in the least. It is a mere straw on the surface. What matters is what is going on among the working people. That is what matters to the nation. Our industries are not flourishing as they ought to be. After going right through America from end to end, as I did for no less than six weeks, I look with considerable alarm upon a nation that spends $316,000,000 on drink continuing to compete with a 'dry' country."—adv.

It was in front of Jack's that Sam, the most famous of Manhattan's hack drivers, flourished. It is said that he seldom if ever actually drove a fare. His game was to "move in" on bibulous gentlemen, who generally paid him his fare in advance and then forgot about it over their next drink. "Whereupon Sam would return to his seat, to keep an alert eye open for the next one. Invariably Sam would get at least one "set up" out of it for himself. When he had collected a sufficient amount, without leaving his stand, he would drive back to the stable, a night's work done.

Speaking of hack drivers, there is another Sam—this one colored—who still clings to Broadway after midnight. He is known to every member of the theatrical profession, particularly the old-timers, and brings them a flavor of other times in a world cluttered with taxis and noise. Al Jolson is the particular favorite of this particular Sam and few weeks pass without at least one hack ride from the theater home. Sam invariably gives Jolson the first chance, camping almost nightly at the stage door. If Jolson does not care to ride, Sam goes elsewhere in search of customers. Meanwhile he picks up a few dollars from tourists who like to see the Gay White Way in old-fashioned style. GILBERT SWAN. THE EYES HAVE IT. "Seems to me a woman who rather have beauty than brains." "Take it any way you want it. Those sheep back there—with a contemptuous sweep of the arm toward the line of Boomers—won't get hurt if they listen to reason."

"Steady there," advised Tony Harrison. His own gun was leveled, and the man on the ground was gazing into the black orifice of Pawnee Bill's.

"Just for that I think I'll have to take those pop guns away from you little boys," said Pawnee Bill.

The "Canary" Murder Case

"As he peered out into the room he saw a sight that froze his blood. The new arrival—in the midst, perhaps, of some endearing sentence—seized the lady by the throat and proceeded to throttle her. . . . Imagine his emotions, my dear Markham. There he was, crouching in a dark closet, and a few feet from him stood a murderer in the act of strangling a lady!"—Philo Vance's theory of the murder of Margaret Odell.

HERE is a tale which is fine enough to serve as a model for writers of the mystery story. When he wrote THE BENSON MURDER CASE, S.S. Van Dine achieved honor enough to satisfy most authors, but with THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE he enters the hall of fame.

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE is another story about that remarkable fellow, Philo Vance. And what a story it is! Never before have you read of a crime so baffling, so devilishly ingenious, as the murder of the beautiful and luckless Margaret Odell; never has there been as magnificent an exhibition of the power of a truly intellectual mind as Philo Vance displays in running the murderer to earth.

This is the story that is being talked about from one end of the country to the other. THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE jarred loose a widespread notion that the mystery story has reached its highest expression in the hands of Gaboriau and Conan Doyle, and awakened critics to the realization that genius once more was turned loose in the field of detective fiction. It is thrilling, it is ingenious, it is well written. It is everything a mystery story should be.

THE "CANARY" MURDER CASE begins January 16 only in the

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (179) SPONGE DIVING Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

Most of the sponges are obtained by divers in the Mediterranean, the West Indies and off Florida. Here are pictured boats in the Mediterranean Sea and divers stripping the sponges from the rocks.

In Florida sponge culture is sometimes carried on artificially. Small portions of sponge are strung on a wire made of lead with a copper core and this is suspended in shallow water. In six months the fragments have grown into sponges six times their bulk.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

SENSE and NONSENSE

When preaching prevention of dangers we fear, The many will listen, But few of them hear.

No rug on the floor—happy. Hundred dollar rug on the floor—dissatisfied. Five hundred dollar rug on the floor—jealous of the Joneses. Thousand dollar rug on the floor—five hundred dollars in debt.

Retribution is slow, but sure, declares musician pointing out that the fellow who wrote "Sweet Adeline" is now compelled to clerk in a New York post office for a living.

Burglar (to distracted lady)—"Here, put this gat next to your dome and if you make the slightest noise—shoot yourself!"

How can a color-blind person tell a "greenback" so quickly?

Small Son: "Father, what is an egotist?" Father: "An egotist, my son, is a man who tells you those things about himself which you intended to tell him about yourself!"

Anybody ever hear a flapper sing "Home, Sweet Home?"

It Isn't Your Town—It's You If you want to dwell In a town that's swell, And the kind of a town you like; You need not pack, Your clothes on your back, And go for a farewell hike, For you'll only find, what you've left behind; There is nothing that's really new It's a knock at yourself When you knock your town; It isn't your town—IT'S YOU!

Towns are not made By men afraid, Least someone else get ahead. When everyone works And nobody shirks, You can lift a town from the dead. And if while you make Your personal stake, Your neighbor can make one too, Your town will be, What you want it to be; For it isn't your town—IT'S YOU!

Some like to think of heaven as a place where they won't feel duty bound to attend amateur shows.

Little girls should be seen and not heard. Well, nobody can say they're not seen.

Trying to knock a small white ball into a very small hole has kept many men out of much larger holes.

Whenever a politician seeks to enlist the support of the people in a campaign in which he desires to keep dark his motives he invents a slogan.

A bob-haired, scantily clad flapper was making her application at the pearly gates and St. Peter was putting her through her category.

"What's your occupation?" he inquired. "Men call me a gold-digger," she giggled.

"I'm sorry—but on account of the paving we can't let you in here."

It is about time now for Muscle Shoals to get back on the front page.

The doorway to the underground which, in the snow, had now been found was closed, of course, and Coppy said, "How can we make it swing?" Jack Frost replied that's up to you. The thing that you will have to do is keep on shoveling snow away until you've cleared the thing.

SKATERS NOW EAGER FOR ANNUAL CARNIVAL

Bright Moonlight Sees Big Crowd at Center Springs; Wallett Does Stunts.

Center Spring lake was crowded with skaters last night, a large throng taking advantage of the moderate temperature and the full moon which was so bright that it was not necessary to use the three flood lights. The ice is in fine condition now and many of the skaters are anxiously awaiting announcement as to when the annual skating carnival will be held.

One of the treats for visitors at the pond, daytime or evening, is opportunity to see one of New England's foremost fancy skaters in action. He is a Manchester young man, Frank "Woody" Wallett of 23 Hawthorne street. Wallett is well known both as a baseball player and skater. Monday night, Mr. Wallett and a partner, Miss Miriam Davenport of Springfield, will give an exhibition at Hartford's skating carnival.

OPEN FORUM

TEACHER TRAINING

Editor, The Herald:

Every friend of religious education must recognize the fact that, other things being equal, a trained teacher or superintendent is more efficient, and consequently more valuable to the cause, than one who is not trained. The success or failure of the present continent-wide movement for an adequate program of Religious Education will depend very largely in every church and community upon whether or not a supply of trained teachers and leaders is developed. The churches must realize this basic fact just as the public schools have come to realize it, and act accordingly. In our public school systems millions of dollars are expended annually in the training of teachers supervisors, administrators, and specialists, and it is conceded that no expenditures bring larger returns. Sound educational principles, efficiently administered and practiced, are as essential to success of Religious Education as to general education, and the application of such principles is in no wise incompatible with the preservation and development of the highest spiritual values.

This is the purpose and aim of the Teacher Training School to be conducted by the Manchester Council of Religious Education on Jan. 19, 26, Feb. 2, 9, 16. Classes will be held in the South Methodist church. This opportunity is open to the general public.

SUIT AGAINST DEAD MAN IS THROWN OUT

Orr Action For Damages Can't Be Sustained By Connecticut Law.

Because there is no law in New York which permits the continuation of a suit against an estate after a defendant has died, the decision against Robert Orr, suing the estate of George Jarvis in the Supreme Court of Errors yesterday afternoon.

Orr, who was injured in an accident at Brainard, New York on November 20, 1926, sued Jarvis' estate for damages. Jarvis was killed in the accident and Orr's suit followed. A subsequent decision by Judge Newell Jennings in Superior Court, sustaining a demurrer, denied Orr's claim.

Judge Jennings held that as the cause of the action arose in New York, Connecticut laws could not be invoked by the plaintiff. As there is no survival statute in New York which permits of action being continued against the estate of a deceased person, Judge Jennings found that the action was automatically terminated on Jarvis' death. The survival statute in Connecticut, he held, could not be invoked on an action which had its cause in New York.

The decision of yesterday said: "The right of action for Orr's injuries arose in New York and was extinguished at the death of Jarvis in existence there. Our own survival statute cannot revive the right of action which arose in New York and had been extinguished, nor can it create a cause of action based upon a wrong occurring in the state of New York, it has no extra-territorial force."

POLICE COURT

Because of an accident that took place on Hartford Road at Bridge street last Saturday evening, Ernest Ruebin of Server street was found guilty of reckless driving by Judge Johnson in the Manchester police court this morning. Ruebin was defended by Attorney Frederick R. Manning. The car he was driving ran into one driven by Joseph Gatta of Hartford.

Ruebin's car was on the left hand side of the road when the accident occurred and apparently he was careless about making the turn into Bridge street. He admitted thinking he could cut in ahead of the on-coming car driven by Gatta, misjudging the distance. Judge Johnson imposed a fine of $25 and costs.

TOWN PLAYERS PICK CAST FOR THE HAUNTED HOUSE

Two New Comers Get Parts in Play to Be Put on in February.

The cast of "The Haunted House," by Owen Davis, which will be presented during the latter part of February by the Town Players, was picked last night when the Players met at the Recreation Center. First rehearsal will be held on Monday evening at 7 o'clock and subsequent rehearsals will be held on Monday and Friday evenings until the play is produced. Two newcomers, Miss Faith Fallow and Edward Noonan, are in the cast.

Miss Ruth Calhoun will assume the active direction of the play and will be assisted by Louis Smith, who will be unable to shoulder the full responsibility because of his presence in the cast of characters. "The Haunted House" is a hilarious mystery comedy. The plot centers around an author who for the moment is writing a detective story and is living his story while he writes it. A murder has been committed and everybody is accused of it. The solution of the plot is most unusual but none the less plausible.

Following is the cast of characters:

- Morgan, the tramp, Louis Smith.
- Emily, the bride, Miss Alice Marshall.
- Jack, the groom, Crombie Donaldson.
- Thomas, the chauffeur, Eric Crawshaw.
- Duncan, the author, Albert Addy.
- Helen, his wife, Miss Beatrice Armstrong.
- Isabel, the girl, Miss Faith Fallow.
- Erza, the constable, Leonard Johnson.
- Ed, the Milkman, Raymond Tilden.
- Grogan, the detective, Edward Noonan.
- Evans, the father, Harry Bellamy.

The scene is laid in Cedar Point, Connecticut, the country home of Evans.
