RADIO TELEVISION IS NOW PRACTICAL

Persons in Homes Heard and Saw Speakers in Laboratory Miles Away—Simple Apparatus Used.

Schenectady, N. Y., Jan. 14.—Radio television for the public will be a reality within five years, it was predicted today following the first successful demonstration of television broadcasting here.

The possibility that homes throughout the world may soon be connected by sight, as they now are by voice through the radio, was demonstrated in the radio laboratory of the General Electric Company. More than twenty persons in a darkened room of the laboratory and other groups in three homes in different parts of the city saw a miniature moving picture of the radio announcer in another room of the laboratory.

The picture and voice of a smiling young woman were received, simultaneously on the first home television, or picture receiving machine, ever built. The observers clearly saw the smoke of her cigarette and the flash of her hand.

First Broadcast

The possibilities of television were demonstrated last year in an experiment made by the American Telephone & Telegraph Company. This latest performance, according to the inventors of the machinery, was the first broadcasting and reception by means of instruments, which within a few years may be installed in homes that possess loud speakers.

The apparatus through which, it was predicted, radio fans may some day look at the features and take in the gestures as well as hear the voice of speakers miles away, was developed by Dr. E. F. W. Alexanderson, consulting engineer of the Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric Company, and his assistants in the laboratory here.

The set used in the demonstration was of simple construction, not unlike an ordinary phonograph cabinet in size and exterior appearance. In the demonstration, the transmission of the moving object was made on 37.5 metres wavelength, while the voice was simultaneously sent through the air on 379.5 metres.

The receiver used by Dr. Alexanderson, it was explained, differs from the ordinary short wave receiver in that it converts the electro-magnetic wave into light instead of sound and the light becomes an image corresponding in movement to the action of the person at the transmitting end.

BOSTON K. OF C. HALL IS SWEEPED BY FLAMES

Nearby Houses Menaced by Fire Near the Famous Bunker Hill Monument.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 14.—Knights of Columbus building on High street, Charlestown, across the street from Bunker Hill monument, was swept by fire early today.

Occupants of nearby dwelling houses—men, women and children to the number of at least a score—fled to the street when a fire burst through the roof and menaced nearby property. Several roof fires started but were quickly extinguished, although the houses were flooded by water.

The fire raged in the third and top story and the cupola of the K. of C. building until dawn before it was under control, the illumination from atop Bunker Hill attracting thousands to the scene.

LITTLE GIRL'S SLAYER IS STILL AT LIBERTY

Whole State Aroused Over Fiendish Crime—Expect an Arrest Today.

Flint, Mich., Jan. 14.—Despite redoubled efforts of every law-enforcing body in Michigan to apprehend the fiendish slayer of 5-year-old Dorothy Schneider, he was still at large early today.

The little girl was kidnapped, murdered, and finally attacked and mutilated. Her body was found Thursday morning in a creek three miles from her home at Mt. Morris, Mt. Morris.

Discovery of new clues led authorities to predict several developments in the case today, probably the most important of which will be the questioning of a former Detroit man who has been arrested six times at Detroit on statutory charges and is now on parole from the Michigan state prison. He now lives near Lapeer.

TREASURY BALANCE

Washington, Jan. 14.—Treasury balance Jan. 12: $184,137,484.72. Current receipts: $15,200,810.25.

INDIGENT JUAN IS JAILED AFTER A LIVELY CHASE

Invites Himself to Be Guest of Girl, Who Flees; May Be Man Who Annoyed Spruce Street Girls.

A man claiming to be William Beckwood of "nowhere" was arrested late last night after an exciting chase on East Center street on a charge of breach of the peace after he had annoyed a pretty Benton street girl who was on her way home.

In court this morning, Judge Raymond A. Johnson found the man guilty as charged and sentenced him to fifteen days in jail. The costs of court amounted to $15, so in case, "Mr. Beckwood" hasn't any cash available, he will spend fifteen more days in jail.

Late "Business" Hours

When "Beckwood" tried to impress upon the court that he was doing nothing out of the way, he said he was engaged in his regular business of selling pictures and offered a view of the "Battle of Manila" as proof. The judge was not inclined to believe his story in view of the fact that the incident took place at 11:30 at night, a time when most salesmen have concluded their daily work.

The girl, whose name is withheld in deference to her earnest wish, said the man did not talk pictures to her. Instead he wanted to know if he could accompany her home and stay at her house for the night as he said he had nowhere to go. Frightened, the girl fled to her home. She told her adventure to a relative Frank P. Clancy, who lives at 38 Benton street.

Mr. Clancy, who had retired for the night, dressed quickly and hurried out in search of the prowler. He met Walter Wirtalla, well known local dancing teacher, who was on his way home from the School Street Recreation Center where he had supervised the dancing following the High school basketball game. Mr. Wirtalla was in evening clothes but did not hesitate to go hunting.

The two men sighted "Beckwood" still loitering in the vicinity. He ran and they gave chase. Beckwood eluded his pursuers some two or three times. About 25 years of age and of light build, he proved especially nimble of foot but he was finally captured. A short but spirited tussle ensued but "Beckwood" lost out. Patrolman Albert Roberts was notified and arrested Beckwood. Mr. Wirtalla spoiled his evening clothes.

For two or three days there have been persistent reports that a mysterious man has been following at night in the general vicinity of Spruce street, which intersects East Center street not far from Benton. In court "Beckwood" insisted, however, that he only came to Manchester yesterday from Bloomfield. His general description corresponds fairly well with that of the reported masher of the Spruce street neighborhood.

SNOWLESS WINTER BREAKING RECORDS

College Crews Practice on Open River; Thunderstorms in and Around Boston.

Boston, Mass., Jan. 14.—Juggling of high and low pressure areas has brought the warmer temperatures of the south to northern latitudes and spring-like weather continued here today, smashing all snowless winter records of more than half a century. No cold weather was in sight for this district.

Five Harvard crews practiced on the open Charles river. Thunderstorms, lightning and rain, put the high power electric light line from Turner's Fall to Pittsfield out of commission. There were other signs of spring.

Since winter came on December 22nd, Boston and vicinity had no winter sports, snow plows have remained in their barns, the jobless have had no more rework, and the streets for this purpose remain untouched in treasuries of city and towns, dealers in winter clothing have about become discouraged and coal dealers reported their bins overstocked.

NEW BRITAIN COP ROBBED BY BANDIT

New Britain, Conn., Jan. 14.—Policeman Eugene Kieffer, of the New Britain force, was held up by a lone unmasked highwayman here today and robbed of his own police service revolver and forced to walk down the road with his hands above his head. The bandit escaped through police of this city, Hartford and many surrounding towns may have been searching for him for hours.

Kieffer had picked up an abandoned stolen car owned by Mrs. Grace Long, of 32 Lorraine street, Hartford, and after calling headquarters for aid in disposing of the machine set in the car. According to Kieffer's story a man walked up to the machine, pushed a revolver into his ribs and said "stick up your hands or I'll drill you." Kieffer obeyed, the man took his service revolver from his belt, and ordered Kieffer to march down the road.

Chamberlin Still Up; After World's Record

Mitchell Field, N. Y., Jan. 14.—German aviators. Chamberlin and Williams began their flight at 10:21 a. m., Thursday. Disregarding hardships caused by leaking gasoline and the spoiling of their food supply, the aviators courageously persisted in their attempt during their second night of continuous flying. In notes dropped from their plane, they indicated that they were still cheerful and confident.

They must stay up until 3:34 o'clock this afternoon to officially break the mark of 52 hours, 22 minutes and 55 seconds, set by two

YOUTH KILLS SELF AS AN EXPERIMENT

Keeps on Writing Until Unconscious—Tells How It Feels to Die.

Yonkers, N. Y., Jan. 14.—"Just as an experiment," Stephen Bross, 23-year-old student of psychology, turned on a gas jet and committed suicide in the bath room of his home, leaving a note in which he depicted his impressions of impending death.

"I will come back to see you," he wrote his brother, "this is just an experiment. Don't embalm my body or put a stone or monument on my grave."

"Well, I put on the gas," the first note started. "I know what life is—I want to know what death is like. Will I find out? It won't be long now. It takes a long time to feel the effects of gas. It doesn't smell so badly. I'm getting a little dizzy or is it my imagination?—I am losing my ambition to write any more—and then a scrawl.

William Manton who lives in the same house found Bross' body. The pencil and notes lay under his head. Police worked over Bross' body with a pulmotor for about an hour but could not bring him back to life.

Bross also left a note to his mother. It read: "Dear Ma: Don't cry over me as it will be foolish. Just forgive me. I gave you enough trouble and I am doing this to prevent giving you any more.

"Goodbye, "Stephen."

CREMATE BODY TODAY OF NOTED NOVELIST

Ashes of Thomas Hardy Go to Westminster Abbey—Heard To Be Buried.

Dorchester, Eng., Jan. 14.—With villagers and laborers lining the roads in homage, the body of England's great novelist, Thomas Hardy, was taken from his home at daybreak for the journey to Woking, where it will be cremated. The cortege was very simple. While the ashes will be interred in Westminster Abbey alongside those of Dickens, Macaulay and other noted literary men, the heart will be buried in the family vault in Shinsford churchyard.

The funeral service will be held at Westminster Abbey on Monday afternoon, with the Rev. Foxley Norris, dean of the Abbey officiating. The text of the funeral service will be "Let Us Now Praise Famous Men." The service will last about half an hour and will bring together the most famous assemblage of literary men in modern times.

Foreign News In Cable Flashes

London, Jan. 14.—Blue pajamas are "almost a religion" with the Prince of Wales, according to a writer in the "Outlook," organ of the British men's outfitters trade. The Prince of Wales' liking for blue is almost a passion, said the writer. "I remember looking into his bedroom at a country house and seeing half a dozen pairs of blue crepe de chine pajamas spread out."

Genoa, Jan. 14.—Motion pictures and even radio broadcasting were warned against as vehicles spreading immorality today in a joint pastoral letter signed by ten bishops of the Province of Liguria.

Vienna, Jan. 14.—Jurors in the Town of Krems who were to decide the fate of young Alois Riehl, slayer of his sweetheart, ran away rather than settle the conflict between their sense of justice and their sympathy with the defendant. When asked to withdraw to the jury room, the whole group took to their heels. After a moving picture comedy pursuit constables and bailiffs rounded up the reluctant jurors and haled them back to court. Compelled to render a decision, the unwilling jury gave a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, refusing to confirm the state's charge of murder.

Belgrade, Jan. 14.—Dissolution of the revolutionary Macedonian committee was demanded of Bulgaria by Jugoslavia today as reparation for the murder of Judge Velimir Prelicich in Ueskub by a young Macedonian girl, Maria Boulev. Miss Boulev shot the Serbian judge and killed two other persons on herself but was prevented by an angry crowd from committing suicide. She was accused of acting for the Macedonian revolutionary body.

Belgrade, Jan. 14.—Death and starvation are stalking through Bosnia and Montenegro, according to the newspaper Novosti today. Those without food, the newspaper said, were plundering the land and all Mohammedans were fleeing to Turkey for safety.

Pavia, Italy, Jan. 14.—The last survivor of the Battle of Novara, fought in 1848, died in Varsi today at the age of 102. He was Andrea Pozzi.

Rome, Jan. 14.—The report emanating from Vienna that the Italian-Yugoslav friendship pact had been extended six months was denied here today. It was stated that the pact had now expired.

WHIPPING POST BILL GOES TO LEGISLATURE

Provides For 50 Strokes For Males Convicted of Various Crimes—Other Bills.

Boston, Jan. 14.—Boston's book censorship laws, which banned 65 popular books as "obscene literature" were under fire today as bookshelves made the first move of their battle to straighten out the tangle by presenting a bill to the Legislature.

At the same time a bill to re-establish the whipping post as a means of punishing criminals was filed. Fifty strokes would be given to males convicted of robbery, intent to rob, assault with intent to murder, criminal assault or extortion.

Another sidelight of the news was the police report that in the campaign to rid the state of mad dogs and stamp out rabies an average of fifty canines were being picked up daily, the quarters of the Animal Rescue League being jammed with masterless mongrels. A total of 275 dogs have been picked up by police in Metropolitan Boston to date.

The Board of Trade of Boston Merchants had placed the Legislature a bill laying down an entirely new procedure of determining when a book contains "obscene or impure literature."

HEALTH CONDITIONS.

New York, Jan. 14.—Health conditions in the United States are improving. In fact, 1927 was the healthiest year yet experienced, according to a report transmitted today to the association of life insurance presidents by its manager, George T. Wight.

Americans had the benefit of a lower death rate than usual in 1927, he reported. This record was achieved by the United States in the face of a rising tide of deaths from external causes, fatal automobile accidents alone showing an increase of more than nine per cent over the year before.

FOR PUBLIC DISCUSSION

Havana, Jan. 14.—Groundwork was being laid here today for a movement in the Pan-American publicity. Minister Cuervo and some of the other delegates of a smaller republic favor a complete reorganization of the Pan-American union, giving it political authority to deal with international problems on the American continent, just as the League of Nations deals with international affairs abroad.

The United States delegates, it is understood, are opposed to the project of turning the union into "a live political organization" with power to deal with political issues between states. The United States maintains that the union should be President Coolidge is on his way toward Havana, Cuba, on his first departure from the United States...

On Monday night he will deliver an address before the Union of American States on the sixth annual Pan-American Congress...

We do not in the slightest degree agree with those who find the occasion an opportune one for satirical comment...

The Nicaraguan episode, at worst, is nothing more reprehensible than a mistake; and mistakes of the head should not be permitted to destroy friendships of the heart...

GOBBLED

The Monroe doctrine, in a word, is the avowed determination of the United States government to prevent the control of any territory of the western hemisphere by any country of the eastern hemisphere...

FITTING

So far we have been quite unable to determine whether the Indian authorities who are so anxiously seeking to prevent the marriage of the former Maharajah of Indore and Miss Miller of America...

REPUDIATION IN ORDER

The mere fact that Secretary of the Navy Wilbur has presented to Congress a building program involving the expenditure of more than two and a half billion dollars...

There is not the slightest probability that the Wilbur plan will receive any considerable degree of support in Congress...

But it will not suffice merely to ignore the Wilbur program. It will have to be the business of the Republican leaders in Congress to disavow the Navy department schedule in very plain terms...

on so many occasions when no danger threatened? Is it to yield to a policy of infiltration precisely what it was prepared to defend against open assault?

We haven't the slightest intention of becoming excited or warlike over this revelation of British activity in Bolivia. It would probably be an excellent thing for the United States if four or five million Englishmen and their families were living in Bolivia and developing its doubleless great resources...

But one wonders whereabouts is the cleverness of our trade expansionists, who in the last two years have devoted themselves so eagerly to getting marines into little Nicaragua for the sake of a few pennies worth of mahogany logs...

THE DONKEY

At all events nobody ever said anything truer than did Al Smith in his letter to the Jackson day diners when he declared that the Democratic party "cannot attain success by relying wholly upon the mistakes of its political adversaries."

Wherein the perspicacious New Yorker uttered, so to speak, a mouthful. Likewise, if he is to be the candidate of the party for the Presidency, he cut out a job for himself. That job is the complete making over of the Democratic party...

The Democratic donkey has never specialized in constructive effort; never has been much of a harness animal; never has been at hauling actual loads. Its forte has been prying and kicking, and at the latter department of political activity it is without a peer among political parties anywhere...

But when a donkey has grown old in the exclusive exercise of its bray and its hind heels it is a serious question whether it can ever be taught the new trick of plodding along the road of constructive progress, hauling the little old government cart...

The Democratic party has been growing weaker for years simply because it didn't mean anything. It doesn't mean any more today than it did four years ago, or eight years ago. It is much better represented by Reed and Hedlin than by Al Smith—just noise and violence.

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

(39) A Famous Oak Tree

Only once in her history which dates back almost 300 years, and then only for a year and a half, has Connecticut lost that autonomy which she cherishes as her birthright. The single occasion when her liberties were threatened resulted in the traditional story of the Charter Oak.

For 50 years following the absorption of New Haven by the Connecticut Colony under the terms of the charter granted the latter in 1682, Connecticut was engaged in a constant struggle to maintain the rights which the charter had granted.

Sir Edmund Andros who had become royal governor of New England in 1686 came to Hartford on October 31, 1687, while the General Assembly was in session, to seize the charter.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington.—The game of job and counter-job has been developed to a science in Congress. Frequently someone puts over a fast one which is not fully appreciated except by those immediately concerned.

The people of this country would not, of course, tolerate such a condition of affairs. What's more, they would be extremely likely not to tolerate any political party sponsoring it.

No sooner was Dill's resolution read than Senator Smoot, Republican, arose to his feet. His brain-dished, proposed farm relief measure prepared—or sponsored, at least—by former Senator Miles Poindexter and asked that it be printed as a public document.

It is a handy book in an Allico blue cover with a hymn in the back part. We gather from it that Rev. William A. Williams does not altogether believe in evolution.

CHICAGO DIVORCES INCREASE IN 1927; 4,500 CASES HEARD

Chicago—Divorces in Chicago have increased in 1927 approximately twenty-eight per cent over 1926, according to figures announced here by the Superior and Circuit Courts.

Four thousand, five hundred divorces were granted in the Circuit Court this year compared to 3,400 in 1926, Thomas O. Wallace, clerk stated. Attaches of the Superior Court, while they said no official figures had yet been compiled, stated a corresponding increase was noted.

"The increase is not unnatural," Judge Joseph Sabath of the Superior Court, who has heard more than 40,000 divorce cases, announced. "Divorce increases can be increased directly to the city's increase in population. And another thing, many people seeking a divorce come to Chicago to become more anonymous, since it is a large city."

PARIS TOO MUCH FOR COMMUNIST EXPENSE MONEY

Moscow—Gay Paree was too much of a temptation for two good Communists who were sent to the wicked French capital on business and evidently had a swell time.

They came back with an expense account of $1,000 for two months and were promptly put in jail on charges of squandering the people's money.

Managing Director Piolunovsky and his Assistant Dugany of the government Automobile Sales Department went to Paris ostensibly to buy machinery for the new Moscow automobile manufacturing plant.

Not in their. At the last moment, it is charged Piolunovsky decided to take his wife. It took him two weeks to get a permit to leave the country, but business was not so urgent.

Two weeks after the arrival of the purchasing agents in Paris, some high government council decided that the auto plant should not be built just now, and informed Piolunovsky that there was no use in the embargo had been placed on the importation of these machines.

Furthermore, the Attorney General's office found discrepancies in their expense accounts. One of them charged $390 for a "small" dinner of three persons. The other charged $400 for the same sort of a dinner on apparently the same date.

The Supreme Economic Council immediately discharged the wayward sons of Marx with every sin member of the board of directors of the Auto Sales department because they failed to report the extravagance of their $791,924.19 leagues. Piolunovsky and Dugany are liable to a minimum sentence of ten years in prison.

A SAD CASE. It was midnight. In the club's smoking room sat a young man huddled in his chair. A friend asked: "Hello, not gone home yet?"

"No, I—I darra'n't go home yet!"

HAINES' BIGGEST FILM AT THE STATE SUNDAY

"West Point" Shows Life at Military Academy—Song Contests on Program.

William Haines, now one of the most popular juvenile actors on the screen, is the star of the much advertised picture, "West Point," which is the feature at the State theater on Sunday and Monday.

Haines' new vehicle is a vivid romance of life at West Point, with Haines in the role of a cadet in a story of love, football, and life as one of Uncle Sam's student officers.

There are three comedy moments in his training, arrival at the academy, and other details of the picture, with a pretty love interest and a big dramatic climax.

Spectacular reviews of the West Point cadet's dress parade and other elaborate scenes were filmed under the picturesque battlements of the famous military academy, on the Hudson, filmed on the steamer "De Witt Clinton," of historic fame, are intriguing. Reproductions of student dances, and other social affairs at "The Point," are also among the unusual scenes in the new picture.

NEW STORIES TOLD IN VOLUME ON LIFE OF HANS ANDERSON

London.—Hitherto unpublished details of the life of Hans Christian Anderson, the Danish story-teller whose fairy tales have been loved by children the world over for generations, are contained in a new biography which is attracting great attention here.

DAVID CHAMBERS CONTRACTOR and BUILDER

First and Second Mortgages arranged on all new work. 68 Hollister Street, Manchester, Conn.

the volume—"Hans Anderson, the Man," contains many revelations regarding the life of the wax-tongued, and delves deep into his tragic love affair with Jenny Lind, the famous Swedish singer. The book reveals that although from the world through his work, he could never induce a woman to be his wife, and died an unhappy bachelor. Although he was attracted by many women, the biography says, he gave his heart only to Jenny Lind and remained true to her all his life, even though she would not marry him. He made every effort to win her love. She went about with him, entertained him in her home, and was happy to be with him—but only as a friend. The writer seeks to find the reason that all Anderson's efforts to win himself a wife proved futile. Some contemporaries said that his personal appearance defeated his longing for a wife and a cozy home. He was immensely tall and awkward, and in a poem of his youth he compared himself to a "scarecrow in a field."

Rembrandts Of The Autos, These Local Young Girls

Angelina and Celia, Daughters of Peter Baldwin Grew Up In the Atmosphere of a Carriage Paint Shop and Became True Artists—And They Quit "Just Because"—But Read This Interesting Little Tale.

"They were the best workmen I have ever had and I don't believe I could duplicate them anywhere," their boss said. "They were workers to whom I could give a complete job with all the confidence in the world, knowing that the work would be done in good time and as well as I could do it myself."

He liked these workers of his. Not only because they were good workers, but also because they were his children. And they were two girls, doing work that many men could not do as well, even though trained through years in the trade. Two girls, of barely high school age, who had, through playing around their father's shop, picked up his trade until they fairly rivaled him. As a matter of fact, he says that the best job ever turned out of his shop was done by the two children without a bit of help from anybody else.

Good Workman
Peter Baldwin is known to be a carriage and auto painter of no mean ability. His work is considered about the best that is turned out in Manchester and a job by Baldwin was always satisfactory, whether it was on a hack or a wagon in the old days, or on a sedan or a roadster in these days of horseless carriages.

Peter Baldwin started his career as a carriage painter in the old One shop at Manchester Green, the building at the corner of Pitkin and East Center streets, now occupied by a garage. He painted wagons, surreys, cutters and whatever other kinds of vehicles there were in those days before the auto took the business of the street cleaners away from them, and he learned his trade thoroughly.

In those days a man learned a trade. He started cleaning the vehicles and if he happened to make progress at this he was given a paint brush and a pot of paint and set to work on the rough parts. After a few years he might be fortunate enough to be painting the finishing coats, and in a few years more they might let him put the stripes on the work.

Stripes Is Difficult
Stripes were an integral part of the paint jobs on all vehicles. There had to be stripes along the wheels, from the hubs to the rims. They had stripes all over the wagons and the more stripes and the more artistically these stripes were made the more the job would cost. There were long stripes and short stripes; curved stripes and straight stripes; stripes that went around angles and worked themselves into intricate arabesques. There just had to be stripes and no self-respecting carriage painter would have thought of letting any wagon, not excepting hearse and hacks, go out of the shop without its full complement of stripes.

Peter Baldwin learned his trade in those days. He painted wagons for years and years and when the wagons began to peter out and the horses to decrease he turned his attentions to automobiles.

Decline of the Horse
He saw the gradual decline of the horse and the rapid strides made by the automobile. Fewer and fewer wagons came into his shop to be painted and soon the funeral hacks, which had to be painted every so often anyway, were shoved into the background when automobile funerals ceased to be a novelty. A funeral is always a novelty—to the person in the coffin, but the automobile funerals were novelties for a number of years.

Now there are no funeral hacks. A Manchester liveryman is reported to have sold seven or eight of them a few years ago for five or six dollars each.

As a result of this transition from the era of the gay nineties to the age of speed and violent deaths the carriage painters suffered. Their business declined and it seemed that another of the arts would be lost. But the automobile, which had ruined their business, came to the rescue.

Automobile owners, as soon as they began to buy cars which would last more than one season, wanted them to look as well the next season. They bought their first cars on the recommendation of the salesmen that they would go at a certain speed. They bought subsequent cars to stand up and when they stood up they had them painted.

Black Color Makes White Paint, Says Local Painter Who Knows

Painters use black color to make white paint look whiter!
It's a paradox, whatever that is, but Peter Baldwin says it is the truth. All white paint has some other color in it, no matter how small the percentage, and the surface painted will carry this tint to some extent. Painters, when they want a dead white, use a little black coloring to minimize the other shade which may be mixed with the white and the result is the nearest thing to a white color that can be developed.

on the decline, Mr. Baldwin says. This was brought out when the interviewer noticed a sign on the wall to the effect that "all cars must be taken out within three days after they are finished. We need the room."
"We don't need the room so much now," he said, "that sign is pretty old and it doesn't mean what it did in those days. We really did need the room then but we don't need it now."

Little Auto Painting
"Automobile painting is a great extent in going the way of carriage painting. It simply isn't being done."

This was a startling statement. Asked to explain himself Mr. Baldwin went on:
"Formerly an automobile used to be good for two or more seasons in the possession of its original owner. At the beginning of the second or third year he had it painted. He couldn't afford to buy a new car and he wanted something that looked new."

"So he brought it into the shop to be painted and he would probably run the car two or three years more before it would be sufficiently old for him to turn it in as part payment for a new one."

"Now he buys a new car and runs it one year. The next year sees a new model of that make on the market and the changes in the new model make the old car look quite out of date. The automobile owner doesn't like to be seen in a last year's car so he trades the old one in. It is easy, for payments may be made over a period of ten or twelve months."

"The traded car is placed on the market and some person buys it—if the dealer is fortunate—and runs it. He doesn't spend any money on it for a paint job. If he wants it to be painted he buys a can of paint at the ten cent store and goes to work. The idea of spending money to paint a second hand car doesn't appeal to him."

Demand Speed
So that's how the land lies in automobile painting. Furthermore, Mr. Baldwin maintains that owners don't care so much about the appearance of their machines now. They want a good looking car, it is true, and they want plenty of speed, but they take their machines out in weather they would not have ventured out in years ago.

But to get back to the story, Peter Baldwin mourns the loss of two of his best workmen, those two daughters who grew up in the paint shop and became so clever with the brushes that they could turn out an automobile between them that would look like new.

That isn't a statement that is made on the spur of the moment. It is true, for there were few unsatisfactory jobs done at the Baldwin paint shop while the children were there.

Those girls simply grew up in the atmosphere of the shop. They played there after school when they were little tots and it seemed natural for them to start in helping their father on Saturdays when there was no school and during the vacations. They delighted in it and while playing they simply learned the trade.

Angelina was the first one to enter the shop as a full-fledged worker. Her teacher in the grammar school said that she had wonderful natural artistic talent that might be developed. It was at first planned to send her to art school but subsequent developments prevented this.

Her artistic ability had to find some outlet and the paint shop afforded just such an opportunity. When there were no automobiles to paint there were colors to be mixed and a bit of decorating to be done now and then. If things were slow the Baldwin home was enriched by little pictures, rather artistic things by the way, done with carriage paints.

Mr. Baldwin showed one of the little pictures to the interviewer. As an example of color harmony it was very good and its artistic merit was high.

"Celia did that one day in a few minutes while she was waiting for something to do," Mr. Baldwin explained. Celia is the younger of the two girls.

It was the picture of an old-fashioned house, each corner flanked by tall poplar trees. A curl of white smoke arose from the tall chimney and fleecy clouds hovered overhead. The background of the house was a vivid green.
The girls did this sort of thing ever since they were very young and a mark of excellent in school drawing came to be the rule rather than the exception. It became so common that it was disregarded altogether and accepted as a forgone conclusion.
Even the younger children of the family display talent in decorating and drawing. The Baldwin home contains many oil paintings and charcoal drawings which have been turned out by the children, who would rather do this sort of thing than play with dolls or toys.
Artistic Family
They have it in them. Peter fields in which to earn their living. That satisfies them all right but their father still misses them around the shop.

"Yesterday and To-day"
Mr. Baldwin makes interesting comparisons between the painting of yesterday and the painting of to-day. As in everything else, he says, it has speeded up and labor-saving devices have taken the place of the brush in many instances.

In lacquering the brush is not used at all, for a brush would be too slow. The stuff dries so fast that the person painting a machine would be away behind. The spray gun is used for a faster job on the lacquered surface.

Automobile owners will not consent to have good jobs done on their machines any more. It takes too long for these good jobs and people don't like to have their cars laid up any more than a week at a time. Formerly a good paint job would take several weeks, and in the old days a carriage maker would not let a job out of his shop until it had seasoned for several months.

Made Own Varnishes
Those were the days when they made their own varnishes in monster kettles in their back yards and made their paint from dry pigment and oil. To-day varnish is bought ready made and paint is mixed at the factories.

The varnish of to-day is not like the varnish of yesterday, Mr. Baldwin maintains, because of the fact that it is not aged enough. Several months to a year are needed for aging varnish but production is so rapid now that the stuff is sold as soon as it is made.

Painters buy their colors ready made. That is, they buy the cardinal colors and mix their own shades from them. The reporter found this out when he looked around for the paint pots with the different colors in them. He was told that there were only five colors which come into the shop and that all other colors are made from them.

It would be impossible for him to get the same shade year in and year out from the manufacturer," Mr. Baldwin said. "The color would vary somewhat, even though the variation might be only the slightest. And two manufacturers never make the same shade of color for any of their standards."

He took two color charts, each from a separate paint manufacturer, and compared the colors in them. Two cards, labeled "Brewster green" were compared and the variation in the shades was considerable.

"The names of these colors are more the names of general shades near a given color and serve to show somewhat the different colors that go into their makeup," Mr. Baldwin explained.

"For instance, a good painter can tell at a glance what colors enter into a peculiar shade of gray or buff. He knows just what colors he must put together first to start him on the way to the shade and as soon as the combination works out he can add the other colors that are needed."

Cardinal Colors Differ
And another thing. The cardinal colors, red, yellow, blue, white and black, are never the same in the pots of the different manufacturers. They vary according to the chemicals that are in the pigment. One manufacturer's red will be different from that of another manufacturer. One man will make a yellow which is lighter than another and the same is true of the blue, white and black.

"There is no pure white or pure black anyway," Mr. Baldwin says. "Every bit of white paint has either some yellow or some blue in it and the difference can only be seen by comparison."

He brought out two pots of white lead, each from a different manufacturer. They were both supposed to be white but one was tinged with blue and the other leaned slightly toward the yellow.

"They're both white, however," Mr. Baldwin said, "and nobody disputes that. But the fact remains that neither of them is a pure white and nobody has yet developed a white pigment that is entirely free from other colors."

And there isn't any pure black. Mr. Baldwin proved this by sandpapering a little spot on an enameled fender. The black that came off was brown. He maintains that black is either dark brown or dark blue.

And he ought to know, for he has grown up in this business of colors.

In 42 months Chrysler, due to splendid public endorsement of its products from their very introduction, has come from 27th to 3rd place.

Of the 43 motor car manufacturers in the N. A. A. C. all but two, far longer established, have been outsold by Chrysler.

The order of precedence is determined by the dollar volume of sales in the twelve-month ended July 1st preceding the National Show.

In the forty-two months since the introduction of Chrysler the public has purchased more than eight hundred and fifty millions of dollars' ($850,000,000) worth of Chrysler motor cars.

No other make of car has ever recorded such phenomenally rapid progress.

There can be no more impressive public endorsement of Chrysler performance, Chrysler long life, Chrysler quality, Chrysler value, supplied in four great price fields by Chrysler's four great cars—the New "52," the Great New "62," the Illustrious New "72" and the New 112 h.p. ## THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (185) Bringing the Ore

We have seen how great steam shovels load the iron ore into railroad cars. Here the cars are shown dumping their loads into carriers which take the ore into the holds of great freighters. This picture was taken at Duluth, where the dock will accommodate a whole train of ore cars.

This is one of the great scoops used in unloading iron ore. It dips down into the ship and picks up hundreds of pounds of ore.

Now we come to the steel works. Here is pictured a row of blast furnaces. In the center is the hoist which raises the ore, the coke and the limestone from the railway cars at the bottom. Sometimes a great steel works has dozens of these huge furnaces. The furnaces are given names by the workmen, such as "Betsy" and "Emma". (To Be Continued)

HARD YEAR AHEAD
Sammy Mandell, the recognized holder of the lightweight championship, was placed in what the boys call for frying grease frequently during the last year and he'll be in line for the title because he has not been in a fight since he was champion. Just what are the specifications of a fighting champion cannot be fully defined because there are so few of them.

The name of Tommy Loughran comes to mind when there is any mental exercise given to the definition of a fighting champion, but he is one notable exception.

Mandell's name appeared frequently late in 1927 as the winner of bouts here and there, but they weren't big "here and there" and the boys insinuated that Eddie Kane had been so successful in fighting virtue that Mandell had wanted him to take charge of the new map.

Most of the criticism directed against Mandell and Kane came from the east side of New York where two Ghetto boys, Sid Terris and Ruby Goldstein, mounted the push carts and cried that they weren't getting a square deal.

Mandell has just as much right as the other champions to hold out for his price. The lightweight championship cost him $20,000. He had to guarantee that Rocky Kansas would get $10,000 for defending his title and when the gate didn't come up to the proper figure Kane had to dig down and make the purse good.

There was no scandal attached to Mandell's title defense. He had a long time in places, at weights or over distances that the New York Commission regards as championship requirements, but in refusing to be blackjacked into a match in New York he has merely exercised the rights that champions have taken unto themselves.

Excessive Dribbling Kills Manchester's Chances; Locals Lead All of First Half But Meriden Does Same In Next; Scrubs Win Again.

Billy Evans Says

During the season of 1927, the Washington club of the American League has on its pitching staff a southpaw by the name of "Dolly" Gray, so named because of a popular song of those days bearing the title—"Goodbye Dolly Gray."

Gray was a southpaw along the lines of Herb Pennock of the Yankees. He didn't have a world of stuff but he had plenty of poise and, as a rule, great control. In his particular game he was drawing the corners too fine.

Excessive dribbling and loose handling of the ball were the chief factors in the 37-27 defeat which Manchester High suffered in its basketball game with Meriden High last night at the School street Rec before a crowd of close to 700 persons. Manchester held the lead the first half but Meriden grabbed the honors in the deciding period.

Peace And Tranquility Suzanne's Formost Wish

By MINOTT SAUNDERS

Nice, France, Jan. 14.—Suzanne Lengien remains the world's greatest woman tennis player and could easily defeat Helen Willis or any other woman champion.

These are the emphatic statements of "Papa" Lengien at this time when the Riviera is getting interested in the series of popular tennis tournaments which are held here each year, and which reached their height with the great battle between Suzanne and Helen in 1925.

On the most photographed woman player, she now refuses to face a camera at all. Some of her friends fear that her spirit is broken by her unhappy adventure into professional tennis, but others insist that she is simply tired.

THE TINYMITES

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.

"Well, well," said Scouty, "This is great. It seems that I can hardly wait to open up this dandy box. I wonder what we'll find. The guard was kind to give us this. I hope that nothing goes amiss. Come on, let's open up the gift. 'Twill surely ease my mind.' So that's just what the Tinies did. They tried their best to lift the lid, but, shucks, it wouldn't budge an inch. They tried some more, and then wee Copy said, with weary smile, 'I think we'd better rest a while until we get our strength back. Then we all will try again.' 'A good idea,' wee Scouty cried, 'cause I've small pains all through my side. But, tell me, just where can we sit? The ground is very cold.' 'Right on the box,' wee Cloway said. 'To sit in snow I always dread. The box is dry and I am sure that it will safely hold.' And so, their work they quickly stopped, and all jumped right up on the box. 'Hurray!' yelled Carry Tinymite, 'I'm glad it didn't break. 'Tis really sad we've had no luck. I guess this box top's merely stuck. As soon as we have rested up, another try we'll make.' Just then they heard a flutter near, and everyone looked up in fear. 'Oh, look,' yelled Scouty, 'it's a bird!' And, sure enough, it was. A monstrous eagle swooped around, and shortly dove down toward the ground. His big wings kept on flapping till they made an awful buzz. Of course the Tinies held their breath, 'cause they were almost scared to death. They watched the eagle zip around, as if in happy play. And then, with a moment's pause, it grabbed the box up in its claws, and, with the Tinymites aboard, it promptly sailed away. (The eagle takes the Tinymites for a ride in the next story.)

BANQUET SPEAKER

Noted Wit to Enliven Nautical Dinner For Fathers and Sons.

The Men's Friendship Club of the South Methodist church, for its forthcoming Father and Son banquet, to be held on February 14, has secured as the speaker of the occasion Bishop William F. Anderson of the Boston area, who is well known here.

Bishop W. F. Anderson

Bishop Anderson has a reputation as a very entertaining and eloquent speaker. Always his talks are admirably adapted to the occasion. With the young folk his genial personality and witty talks have always made him a favorite. The special auspices under which he is to appear here makes it certain that his address will be entertaining as well as beneficial.

Elaborate Setting
 The remainder of the program is well under way and the committee is sparing no effort to promote an affair of unusual attractiveness and novelty.

In charge of the decorations are Sydney Strickland and Eric Crawshaw, and their scheme is an ambitious and unusual one. Starting on a basis of a voyage through life, the decorations are of a nautical character—entrances made along gangways, passage through the various sections until the "mess hall" is reached. The stage will be set out as a ship's deck, complete with all the equipment of steering wheel, ship's bell, etc. Other items of decoration include an illuminated light-house, ships' streamers and pennant, wireless installation. All the necessary ship's officers to navigate the ship will participate.

Captain George E. Nicholls will take the wheel when the ship leaves port and will be assisted by Chief Mate Arthur E. Gibson. The important position of wireless operator is to be filled by "Sparks" R. W. Wilson.

Assignments to the tables, which for this time will represent lifeboats, will be strictly in the order that tickets are sold, so those purchasing their passage tickets early have the best "cabins" assigned to them. Arrangements are being made where by 400 can be taken on this voyage, and it is certain to be an event interesting and long to be remembered.

RADIO RECEPTION FOR
FIGHT HERE WAS BAD

Radio reception was unusually poor last night and as a result it was difficult to get a clear description of the blow-for-blow account of the Jack Sharkey-Tom Heeney fight in Madison Square Garden, N. Y.

The static was much more troublesome than it has been for weeks. Despite the fact that the broadcast was coming over the air from Station WJZ, New York, one of the easiest stations to hear here, it was impossible at times to even hear the voice of Graham MacNamee, the announcer at the ringside.

Hundreds of Manchester persons listened to the broadcast at their homes. Many others went to public places such as the Community Club.

KELLOGG CRITICIZED
 Paris, Jan. 14.—Secretary Kellogg's failure to react favorably to Foreign Minister Briand's reservation that a multilateral peace pact be restricted to "aggressive war" was criticized sharply today by the Parisian press, which called Kellogg's action "unwillingness" to see the merits of the plan.

GOMPFF-LONEY

The Misses Edith and Frances Schultz will furnish piano and violin music as the guests are assembling and will play the wedding march from Lohengrin as the bridal party proceeds to the church.

The bride will wear a gown of white bridal satin trimmed with rhinestones and pearls. Her veil of tulle will fall from a cap of lace and orange blossoms. She will carry a shower bouquet of white bridal roses and white sweet peas. The matron of honor will wear Nile green georgette with rhinestones and hair bandeau of rhinestones and pearls. Her arm bouquet will be of Biarcliff roses.

Following the ceremony at the church a reception for the immediate relatives and close friends will be held at the home of the bride, sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas England of 270 Oak street.

Has Your Motor Lost Its Pep?
We Can Give It New Life

We want to tell you something you should know—something we have learned through experience about motors.

In the first place 85% of motor troubles can be traced back to faulty valves. You may blame the ignition system, or the carburetor or the piston rings or the oil or the gasoline or anything you wish but the fact remains that about 85% of motor troubles can be traced back to faulty valves.

And every motor of the poppet valve type is subject to valve troubles. It cannot be otherwise. The valves work at high speed, under great pressure and in a terrific heat. Every other working part of a motor is cooled by air, water or oil. But valves cannot be cooled and as a result of the conditions under which they work, they warp, twist, get out of true, they leak, lose compression and throw the whole motor out of balance. When this condition develops they should be refaced and resealed and in order to give you the most up to date service in this line we have installed at the expenditure of several hundred dollars the Kwik Way system which is a series of scientific operations by which motor valves are serviced with mechanical precision without the use of grinding compound, and recognized as the most modern, up to date process known.

Now Think of This

1600 revolutions per minute means 800 explosions on each cylinder, 800 exhausts, 800 intakes, 800 compressions or 3200 cycles per minute.

Imagine This Terrific Heat

The heat in the motor at the instant of the explosion runs as high as 3200 degrees. The burned gases in the motor pass the exhaust valve at a temperature of from 1300 to 1600 degrees. 800 exhausts per minute means thirteen exhausts per second of gases ranging from 1300 to 1600 degrees. A blow torch of blasting flame. Now you know what we mean when we say too much attention cannot be given to proper valve action in your motor. It is a fact that properly faced and seated valves will do more to increase the efficiency of your motor than any other one thing and we are equipped to do your job 100% perfect. Stop in and let us show you this equipment. Don't forget, we sell the famous
