

LATIN WOMEN ASK FOR EQUAL RIGHTS

200 Parade in Havana Before Delegates of the Pan-American Congress Today a Holiday.

Havana, Jan. 28.—The first public demonstration for women's rights before the statement of the Americas as staged today in connection with the international celebration of the birthday of Jose Marti, the hero of Cuban independence.

More than 200 North American and Latin-American women, carrying banners "demanding" women's rights, circled the statue of the Cuban leader and passed in review before President Machado of Cuba and the delegates to the Sixth Pan-American Congress.

Twenty-one white clad women representing the 21 republics of the new world marched in the parade. Homing pigeons carrying the message of "equal rights" were released in the course of the ceremonies.

Addresses were delivered by Senora Pilar Jorge de Tella of Havana and Miss Doris Stevens of Washington. The theme was that "Pan-Americanism will not succeed without the women."

The conference itself suspended practically all business in homage to the Cuban patriot. Due to the pressure of its work, only the international law commission met. The delegates of all the republics assembled in the imposing Aula Magna or grand hall of the University of Havana for special services in memory of Marti.

SOKOLSKI AGAIN IN POLICE COURT

"King of Homestead Park" In Court For 23rd Time For Operating Still.

The "King of Homestead Park" has reached the end of his reign! Financial conditions, "wife-testing" experiments and court affairs have served to make it apparent that Frank Sokolowski, of Congress street much longer as slim.

Sokolowski's latest appearance in the limelight came yesterday afternoon when he was arrested for keeping a house with intent to sell. When Sokolowski appeared in court this morning for the twenty-third time, he was found guilty and sentenced to forty days in jail in addition to having a fine of $200 and costs imposed. A fourth of the jail term came from a suspended sentence handed down in the local court last October on a similar charge.

It was the third time that Sokolowski had been before the local court on a liquor charge. In addition he has been arrested and convicted for manslaughter in connection with the death of his wife a few years ago. There were countless other charges brought against him.

The case of John Barry, of 293 Oak street, charged with assaulting his wife, Minnie, who had to receive medical attention at the Memorial hospital, was continued until Monday morning.

Worth $5,000 Sokolowski is said to value his property at $5,000 but it is understood that this is only a question of time before "The King" will be ousted. The place is said to be mortgaged for $5,000. An attempt to secure an additional mortgage of $2,000 was blocked by an attachment on the entire property brought by several creditors a few days ago.

Sokolowski was sawing wood in the back yard of his home when Lieutenant William Burron and motorcycle policeman Rudolph H. Wirtalla called yesterday afternoon while on a search for a prize rooster which Joseph C. Carter of Main street had lost.

The officers detected an odor coming from a nearby stack. Smoke was coming out of a stack. Investigation brought about the discovery of a coffee-blower still in action. Two gallons of liquor and twenty gallons of mash were further evidence. It developed in court that Chief Samuel G. Conroy had received a complaint from a woman and her daughter that their husband and father had been getting liquor at the "Homestead."

Sokolowski told the officers that he would smash the still and quit the business if they would give him another chance. He was told to "tell it to the judge" or words to that effect.

IBANEZ IS DEAD; NOTED NOVELIST

Writer of "Four Horsemen", "Mare Nostrum", "Blood and Sand" Passes Away.

Paris, Jan. 28.—Blasco Ibanez, famous Spanish novelist, died today at Mentone, on the French Riviera, according to a dispatch from that city.

Ibanez, a political exile from his native country due to his attacks on the monarchy and the dictatorship of General Primo de Rivera, had lived in a beautiful villa at Mentone for the past few years.

He was taken ill some time ago with pneumonia which was complicated with diabetes. For several days attending physicians had despaired of saving his life.

The writer was reported dead yesterday, but the reports proved false, however, it was determined that his condition was most critical.

Senora Ibanez, with several physicians and nurses have been keeping a vigil at the bedside of the famous writer since his condition became critical.

Ibanez's sons were reported hastening to Mentone from Spain.

A prolific writer, Blasco Ibanez had many of his works translated into other languages. In the United States he was best known for his "Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse," "Mare Nostrum," "Blood and Sand," "The Torrent," "The Tempress," and "Woman Triumphant."

After the war his popularity in the United States increased and he journeyed to Hollywood, Calif., where several of his works were produced in motion pictures.

PLAN BUSINESS BLOCK AT MAIN, PARK CORNER

N. B. Richards Calls For Bids On One Story Store Building On West Side of Main.

N. B. Richards, president of the Manchester Lumber Company, and owner of the property at the corner of Main and Park streets, is planning for a new store building to be erected on the site. It will be the first business block on the west side of Main street between the Center and Hartford roads.

Plans and specifications have been drawn and bids will be received until Wednesday. The plans call for a building 60 by 125 feet, one story high, with basement. It will be constructed of brick and hollow tile with a face brick exterior. The store fronts will be of copper.

The property at this corner was purchased a few years ago with the idea of building either a large business block, or an apartment hotel there. However, local business did not warrant further store or office construction at the time and development of the plot was delayed. These new plans will allow for a group of small stores and may pave the way for further development of the residential side of Main street.

GEN. DU PONT DYING

New York, Jan. 28.—General T. Coleman Du Pont, millionaire and United States Senator from Delaware, was reported today to be near death at Irvington-on-Hudson.

A severe attack of hiccoughs, complicated by pleurisy, was said to be sapping his strength, which has not been great since he underwent a delicate throat operation at a New York hospital in October.

BURGLAR DROPS THROUGH GLASS ROOF OF HOUSE

Thought It Was Tin and Is Now Dying In Boston Hospital—Carried No Weapons.

Boston, Jan. 28.—A supposed burglar today attempted to enter the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Johnson, 9 Loubourg Square, Beacon Hill, crashed through a glass roof and dropped 15 feet into the Venetian gardens. Mr. Johnson, a wealthy attorney, and his wife are wintering at Miami, Fla., and the body of the dying man was found in the gardens by Miss Joanne Shaw, 17, who lives at the Johnson home.

Miss Shaw summoned the butler, Arthur Belke, and the man was removed to Massachusetts General hospital. It was said that he was Bernard Rafferty of Roxbury.

Police believed that the dying man had a companion who escaped. The man received his injuries when his head struck the paved walk in the Venetian gardens.

District Excited
Loubourg Square, home of many wealthy persons, was agog with excitement as two patrol wagons of police rushed to the Johnson home in response to a telephone call from Miss Shaw. Police found the butler standing over the body. Miss Shaw was in a highly nervous state.

The officers found no revolver or other implements. This led to the belief that the man who fell had a companion. The visitor had entered the estate by scaling a high wall from an alleyway.

The glass roof in the pale light of early morning has the appearance of slate or tin, probably deceiving the intruder. He had reached the center of the glass roof, which extends from the wall to the house, when he broke through two panes of glass and dropped to the paved walk below.

90 MORE MAFISTAS ARRESTED IN ITALY

Mussolini Determined to Stamp Out Black Handers in Italy.

Palermo, Sicily, Jan. 28.—Continuing the Fascist government's vigorous campaign against the Sicilian Mafia Society, agents today arrested 90 persons suspected of being members of that organization. The arrests were made at Alta Villa and Bagheria.

The backbone of the gang which terrorized Sicily for years was broken recently when more than one hundred persons, including many women, were sentenced to long terms of imprisonment after a trial at Termini which lasted several months.

Those arrested today were believed to be stragglers of the larger group.

"He Must Be Insane" Mrs Hickman Avers

(Copyright, 1928, NEA Service, Inc.)
I have a message for mothers. Don't let your boy get away from you. Don't let him out of your sight until you are sure he knows what he's about.
Of course, it seems that with all the talking and reasoning I did with my Edward before he left home he would have remembered some of it. But as soon as he got away it seems he didn't realize or pay any attention to what I said to him.
Must Be Insane
It's just too pitiful, too pitiful for words. I'm just so hurt, so hurt. He's not so black. His raising hasn't been to that effect. He's bound to be insane.
Young like he is. The way it's all put up as if he was a soulless monster. If only a closer watch could have been kept on him, if I had been with him, if I had had him go away this wouldn't have happened.
Edward just can't be right that's all. Or he never could have done a thing like that. When he was a boy growing up he was just like other boys. He was a mischievous and lively child. It's been in the last year he's changed. He's been restless and

PLAN EASY EXAMS. FOR "DRY AGENTS" "THE 4 DAY LINE"

75 Per Cent of Them Failed Last Time Because Papers Were Too Difficult.

New London as Terminal of Trans-Atlantic Route In Resolution Offered.

Washington, Jan. 28.—The bitter controversy between the federal prohibition office and the civil service commission as to the intellectual qualifications of dry agents probably will be terminated soon with a material modification of present requirements, it was learned today.

Commissioner J. M. Doran said that he had been assured by the commission that new examinations would be called in most of the districts and that as a result a majority of the 1,500 agents of the United States would be qualified.

Eligibles certified as a result of the first and second examinations will form the basis for a satisfactory prohibition force, according to Doran. The commission was informed that a strong protest has been made by federal courts, United States attorneys and marshals at the elimination of some of the government's star dry performers.

Pressure likewise has been brought on the civil service authorities by temperance organizations, who object to the "wrecking" of the dry army, even though many of them were shown to be shy on intellectual attainment.

Initial examinations stumped about 75 per cent of the dry agents. Prior to these tests prohibition authorities said they had gone through the organization carefully and eliminated virtually all of the crooked or inefficient agents, leaving a force of trained and qualified men.

The new examinations, according to Doran, will be of "a more practical nature" than those which caused "many failures among agents and executives."

SEARCH FOR MISS SMITH SHIFTS TODAY

Met the Missing Heiress While Working in Louisiana.

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., Jan. 28.—Search for Miss Frances St. John Smith, missing college freshman, suddenly shifted to Louisiana, Arkansas and Alabama today.

This was the result of a story in letters to her parents in Butler, Penn., by Miss Helen Coss.

A girl who said she was Miss Smith was pictured by the Pennsylvania girl as "fighting" her way against the world to prove unjust alleged criticisms of her relatives and teachers. She was employed in giving away chewing gum in Louisiana, Arkansas and Alabama.

Three state detectives of the large group here received orders to be ready to start south on a moment's notice.

Miss Coss was being interviewed by authorities at Covington, La. According to word from Butler, Pa., the letters to Mr. and Mrs. Coss from their daughter were postmarked Stuttgart and Conway, Ark.

The information Miss Coss wrote that she and "Miss Smith" were employed by a chewing gum concern giving away samples in an advertising campaign. Miss Coss had run away from home and the other girl in the gum distributing campaign said she was the "Miss Smith" who had run away from Smith college. She fled, she said, to prove to her parents and her professors that she could make her own way in the world.

The girls had separated but Miss Coss wrote that "Miss Smith" was "somewhere in the South." Miss Coss was detained in Covington awaiting arrival of her parents.

As the result of the conference of all authorities here investigators today had catalogued all theories, letters and tips and sifting them one by one.

College authorities and the majority of investigators had eliminated the "campus prowler" theory and the theory that the "teubben" who made several young women his victims in the neighboring city of Springfield had any connection with the Smith case.

MYSTERIOUS DEATH

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 28.—Authorities here today launched an investigation into the circumstances surrounding the death of Major Wallace McCutcheon, former officer in the British army and one-time husband of Pearl White, motion picture actress.

McCutcheon's body, with a bullet hole in the head, was discovered in a hotel room. Beside the body was a revolver and a note saying: "Have a drink."

HICKMAN JURY IS QUICKLY CHOSEN TO TRY 'FOX' MONDAY

LINDBERGH REACHES BOZOTA, DELIRIOUS WITH JOY Cheers Its New Hero and Heaps Honors Upon Him.

Los Angeles, Calif., Jan. 28.—With three women and nine men tentatively chosen to sit in judgment upon William Edward Hickman, the way was paved today for the beginning of testimony Monday as the Marion Parker kidnaping and murder trial stood adjourned over the week end.

The jury which must decide whether the confessed abductor and killer of the 12-year-old school girl was sane or crazy at the time he stole and slew his little victim, was virtually completed when Superior Judge J. J. Trabucco adjourned court late yesterday.

Although District Attorney Asa Keyes reserved the right to further challenge the tentative jurors when the trial is resumed next week, both the state and defense indicated they were satisfied with the selection.

Judge Trabucco announced he would act on the prosecution's motion at the resumption of the trial Monday morning before swearing in the jury.

Jury Passed

Examination of the talsen came to an abrupt close at the end of a long day's session when Keyes passed the jury after exercising only four of the 20 peremptory challenges allowed the state.

The grizzled prosecutor was on his feet in the next instant, however, demanding the right to avail himself of his remaining challenges as Jerome Walsh, chief defense counsel, passed the jury with four defense challenges unused.

One of the 47 prospective jurors called to the box, five were barred because they were opposed to capital punishment. One woman was excused when she said she was too nervous to sit in on the trial.

A talesman who happened to be a personal friend of Richard Culliton, associate defense counsel, was allowed to leave by mutual consent of the court and opposing attorneys.

Among all of those questioned regarding what reports they had heard of the kidnaping and killing, only two said they had listened on the radio to details of the crime. All but five owned radio sets. One woman affirmed she never would permit a radio in her home, while another was equally as positive she never was able to hear anything over the radio.

None of the prospective jurors had attended any church since December 13 last and none had heard any preacher discuss the kidnaping and slaying of Marion Parker.

WOMAN IS KIDNAPED BY N. Y. GANGSTERS

Was About to Start From New Haven to Brooklyn When Stolen By Gunmen.

Boston, Jan. 28.—Police and detectives today were scouring the countryside along the Lexington-Concord road for a alleged bandit to them by Mrs. Margaret Mallich, 33, of New Haven, Conn.

Mrs. Mallich, mother of three children, collapsed from her experience at North Cambridge. She related an astounding story of being kidnaped by Mafia gangsters who sought to gag her testimony against a notorious gunman in a Brooklyn, N. Y., trial, police said. The woman declared she had been kidnaped by four gunmen in New Haven as she was starting for Brooklyn to testify against Joseph Florino, charged with murder. She had been held in a house near here, she said, but could not give its location. She collapsed on the steps of a local church.

The woman accompanied the detectives on the search. Police said they gave credence to the woman's story, and the man-hunt was instituted immediately after the woman left Cambridge city hospital where she had been treated for exposure and exhaustion.

BOSS VISITS JIMMY

Cambridge, Mass., Jan. 28.—Mayor Andrew J. "Boss" Gillis, vitriolic mayor of staid old Newburyport, was in New York today "hobnobbing" with Mayor "Jimmy" Walker.

Before he left for the "big town," His Honor w. judge at a local prize beauty contest.

The girl "Boss" chose as a "prize beauty" was Miss Edith Fitzgerald.

"How about a little kiss," said the chief executive as he handed the pretty girl the loving cup.

"Sure," she said. Their lips met.

HOOVER'S SURVEY

Mr. Hoover has had an enormous experience with committees. He has found that a voluntary committee, when its personnel is appropriately selected and made up of interested and earnest workers, is worth a hundred official commissions made up of job holders, no matter what the object in view may be.

Now he has appointed a big committee of leading business men and economists to supervise a broad inquiry into changes in economic currents in the United States. It is not going to cost the government anything, being financed by private persons interested in the country's welfare and in the welfare of their own enterprises.

It is believed that the survey will be completed about the spring of 1929. And when it is done it is highly probable that we shall know from it a great deal more about the meaning of the word "prosperity," and what the exigencies of the times shall require if prosperity is to continue, than we know now.

The spring of 1929, when the great economic survey will be ready for report, is just about the time, in all likelihood, when Herbert Hoover will be inaugurated as President of the United States.

It is entirely possible that, from the keen understanding of strains and balances developed in his engineering mind, and from this intensive and comprehensive study of business causes and effects, Mr. Hoover will be able, in his first Presidential message to the American people, to give them more and sounder, and more beneficial advice as to the getting of their bread and butter than has ever before been given by any President. And unless signs fail it will come most opportunely.

There is no sense in pretending that there is not considerable nervousness over a possible slackening of this "prosperity" which some people are so lighthearted as to attribute to a "state of mind," and which nobody at all has ever convincingly explained. Not knowing absolutely what has created our prosperity it is logical that at times there should be a feeling of uncertainty as to how long and to what extent it will continue.

It should cause neither surprise nor dismay if, somewhat more than a year from now, the people of America should find themselves with reason to be profoundly grateful for having at the head of their government a business and organization genius who has found out exactly what makes prosperity and exactly how to keep it going.

It is because there is not in public life in this country another individual so exceptionally equipped for this immensely important responsibility that we hope above all things to witness the nomination and election of Herbert Hoover to the Presidency.

RUTHLESS UNCLE SAM

Some of these days it may dawn on some political party that there is business to be had—that is, votes to be attracted—by promising to try to cure Uncle Sam of his utterly ruthless meanness in his business deals with individual citizens.

No business concern in the world could get anything but a universal boycott if it tried to make such contracts as the United States government makes—leases of post offices, for instance, which bind the lessor to every possible sort of obligation and leave the Post Office department free to void them and vacate at any time it happens to see fit; gouging of rural mail carriers; supply contracts which can be suddenly terminated at the will of the War or Navy departments, without recourse for the supplier; manufacturer or merchant; and particularly the old gentleman's supremely cheeky assumption of immunity from taxation under any and all circumstances.

Prior to the war one-third of the waterfront of Hoboken was owned by German steamship companies. The great piers and warehouses paid about one-tenth of the taxes of the city. The United States government seized the German property and has kept it ever since. It has diverted much of the shipping from the New Jersey city, occasioning great loss of employment and general business. And, of course, the nearly $400,000 a year of taxes has faded into the air—has to be paid by the other Hoboken taxpayers.

Hoboken has to provide police and fire protection for the piers, in self-defense. The city is staggering under the burden. But there is nobody in the federal government who cares a hoot.

For a fine, noble old gentleman, Uncle Sam can be the stingiest and most indifferent creature on earth. The party which undertakes to reform this bad habit of his will gain supporters—many in Hoboken and not a few elsewhere.

AMBITION

Very few men who are not vigorous, nimble and free from liability to dizziness and from laziness, and who have not at least a sketchy idea of the habits of electrical currents, would think of aspiring to the job of lineman. Not many foreigners unable to speak, read or write English ever apply for positions as editors of American newspapers. Cigar makers unfamiliar with gems are not apt to ask Tiffany's to appoint them diamond buyers. Usually a person who seeks a job has at least a start in the direction of fitness for it. Which makes it all the more difficult to understand Jim Reed's ambition to be President of the United States.

In his own especial way the Missouri senator is as sublime an egotist as Tom Hefflin. In his different way he is every bit as narrow. He has one political god and one political principle. The god is Jim Reed and the principle is to get something for the god. He was a lawyer in Cedar Rapids, Iowa. If he had been a Democrat in those days it would be known, for a Cedar Rapids lawyer who was a Democrat would have been put in a museum. He moved to the Democratic state of Missouri in 1887 and by 1888 was beating the bass drum in the Kansas City Democratic organization.

He has been getting the gravy ever since. As a senator he has been heard often and without difficulty—but he has never advanced a single constructive idea, never given the remotest suggestion of being anything but a small partisan politician, whose every move has been for self-service.

Yet this political common scold is actually under the impression that people would vote for him for the Presidency! We have seven bigger men on the Manchester Board of Selectmen.

MAGRUDER, PLUNKETT

Admiral Magruder was deprived of his command and placed on "waiting orders" because he had the temerity to say, in a magazine article, that in his opinion the Navy was not organized as well as it should be, that it had too many rear-admirals commanding fleets of tug boats, etc., and that it could be made more efficient by the cutting out of much red tape and snafoodle. Which everybody in the United States, with the possible exception of Secretary Wilbur, and the rear-admirals, believes to be more or less true.

Admiral Plunkett, in a speech before a civilian body, made the declaration that the huge building program proposed by the Navy department was made necessary by the inevitability of war with "our commercial rival" by which he afterward told a newspaper reporter he meant Great Britain.

Admiral Plunkett is not relieved of any command or otherwise disciplined, though the effect of what he said might easily be a million times more disastrous than all the written criticisms of Admiral Magruder. It is stated officially that "rebuks is withheld."

Admiral Magruder offended the dignity of the Secretary of the Navy. Admiral Plunkett magnified it. That makes a whale of a difference.

ALARM CLOCKS

There is a Dr. Paul V. Winslow in New York who, to judge from his euphemistic name, may have inherited his love of gentle sounds from his forebears. He does not think at all well of alarm clocks. He thinks they should be, if not suppressed, at least subdued and their now strident summonses set to music. It is very bad for the human system to be awakened suddenly, says Dr. Winslow.

We wish the article we read about Dr. Winslow and the Big Bens had gone into more detail. We should admire to know how it is proposed to awaken a person, so to speak, a little at a time instead of all at once. We can't help wondering whether Dr. Winslow would have the whole man awakened by a sixteenth part of real awakenedness, as a first measure, and then go on with gradual applications of

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

Compiled by the CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(51) Connecticut's Peace-Time Army.

No state in the Union boasts three regiments with so ancient and honorable service as the 16th Infantry, the 19th Field Artillery and the 102d Infantry, units of the Connecticut National Guard—the state's peace-time armed force. All three organizations are direct successors to regiments authorized by act of the Connecticut Assembly in October, 1789.

The total strength of the national guard at present is kept between 4,000 and 4,500 officers and men. In addition to the 102d and the 16th which make up the 85th Infantry Brigade, and the 192d, there are a number of other units of the 43rd division in the state. These are the 118th medical regiment; the 11th observation squadron, air service and special troops. Other units of the C. N. G. are the 1st squadron of cavalry and the 242d coast artillery. Another branch of the organized active militia is the 5th battalion, naval militia, which has four divisions in Connecticut.

The governor is commander-in-chief of the forces of the state, except when they are called into the service of the United States. The adjutant-general, appointed by the governor, is the chief of the governor's staff of thirteen. There are five state staff corps and departments.

Connecticut's military organizations require an annual appropriation of more than $300,000.

DEATH RATE IN U. S. LOWEST FOR 1927 IN WHOLE HISTORY

New York.—Despite an alarming increase in the number of fatalities resulting from automobile accidents, and a decided increase in other forms of violent death, the death rate for the United States as a whole, from all causes, was lower during 1927 than for any previous year on record, according to statistics compiled by 52 leading life insurance companies.

According to these figures, the death rate among policy holders in these 52 companies was $23.5 per 100,000 for the year, a decrease from the $78.1 per 100,000 registered for 1926. Fatal automobile accidents showed an increase of more than 9 per cent over the previous year; homicides decreased by 1.1 person per 100,000, but suicides increased 1.1 persons per 100,000.

In comparing the 1927 death rate with that of the previous year, the report noted the fact that the 1926 rate was itself well above the trend of recent years and, if taken by itself, as a basis of comparison, would unduly emphasize the decreases of 1927. The real significance, the report stated, lay in comparing the 1927 report with that of 1925, whereby a decrease of 12.2 persons in the insurance death rates was registered, and with the 1921 report.

BELGIUM ONLY PAYS $10.28 ANNUALLY FOR SUPPORT OF PRINCESS

Brussels.—The Belgian Government gives Crown Prince Leopold $10.28 a year for the support of the little Princess Josephine Charlotte. The Prince himself gets $346.84 for the support of himself and the Princess Astrid. The Prince is a Captain of the Grenadier Guards, and that's a captain's allowance for each child. But father's rich, so Leopold doesn't worry. In fact it is reported that Albert, King of the Belgians, is the richest monarch with the exception of George V, of England.

Formerly the Royal family was allowed $100,000 a year but the Government increased this sum to $215,000 for 1927, but aside from this sum King Albert is reported to own considerable property in New York and also several ranches in the Western United States. The King's affairs are handled through "unhomme d'affaires" known as the "intendant." Most of Albert's fortune is in real estate and stocks and bonds, although he is reported to be the owner of several Belgian automobile factories as well as the principal in numerous colonial interests.

WESTERN NEW YORK FACES SERIOUS SHORTAGE OF ICE

CHILI, N. Y.—Western New York is faced with a serious shortage of ice, the usual season for cutting now three weeks overdue and not a cake out.

Farmers and dairymen who have their own ice houses and effect an appreciable saving through cutting their own ice are faced with the prospect of buying refrigeration throughout the coming year. Thus far the warm weather has prevented formation of a crop and no relief is in sight.

A week or ten days of steady cold weather is necessary to form ice sufficient to bother cutting, harvesters say, the usual time for good cutting starting in the middle of December.

And Lew Leslie, for such was the bright young man's name, be-

It's a Great Life If You Don't Weaken

New York

New York, Jan. 28.—Manhattan snap-shots: Wall Street messengers running from skyscraper to banks with skates dangling over their necks. . . . Even as the small boys of Sauk Center who plan to go skating after school. . . . The church on Washington street where a statue of the "holy child" hovers over a sign reading: "No children allowed to play in front of this church." . . . And at Malachy's church in 49th street where a sign reads "The actor's church." . . . And each Sunday morning you will find chorines and stars alike ascending its steps with prayerbooks in hand. . . . For there are as many regular church-goers among the playfolk of Broadway as among any other class of people. . . . Theatrical weddings of time generally held either at St. Malachy's or the Little Church Around the Corner. . . . In the latter stage folk once erected an "actor's altar." . . . Henry Ford dodging flivvers near 48th street. . . . Youngsters looking sad because there has been no snow and the Christmas sleighs stand idly in hallways. . . . The baby buggies of the Bronx. . . . Tens of thousands of them. . . . Fur merchants wringing their hands because the weather has been so mild. . . .

And the Sphinx store on West 23rd street. Here you can buy all sorts of assorted Sphinxes. Just who buys a Sphinx, and why, remains a mystery. There is no other business place in Manhattan. Large and ornate Sphinxes, slightly damaged by the ravages of time decorated the gateway of ancient Corinthian columns. In a large courtyard, just inside the gate, are a dozen others in every size and design. . . .

Perhaps it's a bit late for a Christmas story. But the other day, on Broadway, we heard a story of a fellow who for years has made a habit of feeding homeless chorus girls on Christmas Day. A year ago he found 46 chorine, who would have eaten in lunch in some of the cafeterias had he not happened to know them. This year the word went round chorus girls. A hundred girls showed up and he could manage to feed only about half of them. The others had to be turned away. . . .

And yet they write fiction about chorus who are invariably being stepped out on wild eating and drinking parties; they spin yarns about the girls who are always being taken out to dinner. It isn't always that way, Max—us!

It takes all sorts of "rackets" to make up a street like Broadway. About a year ago a bright young man took over a night club that was hopelessly flopping its wings. It didn't seem to fly much better when he put it under new direction. He experimented with one kind of entertainment and then another. It seemed certain that he would go to the wall. And then a bright Barnumesque idea struck him. His knowledge of human psychology told him that people like to go places where they think they can't get in. Thereafter, for several weeks, whether he had 10 people in the same house or 30 he told all applicants for admission that the place was overcrowded and he could not take care of them. The back another night, generally to the place with the same greeting. The general impression went around that the place was among the most popular in New York. Suddenly a great rush began. Everyone wanted to go because it was, noted about that they couldn't get in. Within a short time the place was actually turning them away. . . .

COOLIDGE MAY ADDRESS 1928 PEACE SOCIETY

Cleveland.—President Coolidge may be the principal speaker at one of the greatest gatherings of international statesmen ever assembled in America, when the American Peace Society celebrates its 100th anniversary here May 6-11, according to Theodore E. Burton, president of the Society. The American Peace Society, which firmly supported the United States during the World War is the world, Burton pointed out at a World Wide Meeting.

"This and the society's purposes are the reason why President Coolidge is honorary chairman of the society's centennial celebration committee and a possible speaker; and why the world's leading statesmen have demonstrated their interest in the centennial," Burton said. The 100th meeting of the Society will be of world wide importance due to the subject: "The means of saving promoting peace without sacrificing justice," to be discussed, it was said.

Three hundred of Cleveland's leaders in business, banking, religion and education have already formed a preliminary organization to complete arrangements for entertaining the diplomats and other public men from European and Latin American countries, China and Japan.

Many Nations Coming. These have either definitely accepted invitations to attend or have signified their desire to come if affairs of state do not prevent. Adequate national defense for the United States; policy of the government of the United States on the question of disarmament; what can be done toward the ultimate outlawing of war; military training in schools and colleges, and in what way may real peace workers effectively combat un-American propagandists, are some of the subjects which will be taken up at the meetings.

A LEAP YEAR DUEL

Pillsburyoverseas.—Leap year was ushered into this town with a duel between two young maidens who had matrimonial designs on the same man. Luise Fazekas met her rival on one of the main thoroughfares. When their could not agree as to which should have the man of their choice they drew penknives and proceeded to slash away in such a convincing manner that the crowd had difficulty in stopping the combat. They were hustled off to different physicians for repairs.

Christmastide lasts from December 24 (Christmas Eve) until Epiphany, January 6.

WASHINGTON LETTER BY RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington, Jan. 28.—Here are a few little true stories of the life in Washington. "That man," said an elevator operator in the House office building as one of our 435 congressmen left the car, "had perfume on him."

"Yeah?" "Yeah," reiterated the elevator operator, "I just said that so you wouldn't think it was me."

"The congressman," said one of the girls in one of the offices, "is sick. He has been sick since the beginning of the session and couldn't show up. We decided that we would have to have him sworn in at his home so that he could be paired, which would make him feel a lot better."

"He thought he was paired at the beginning of the session and it made him feel good, because he takes his job very seriously, when he felt that his absentee vote helped organize the House. But it didn't count because he hadn't been sworn in. But we didn't ever tell him his vote didn't count because it would have made him feel bad."

"My boss," said another of the girls, "doesn't pay any attention to his business any more. He pays too much attention to me. He ought to pay more attention to his wife and have her in Washington more, instead of paying so much attention to me. I can't get any work done to me. He is too old, anyway. You don't know of a good job anywhere, do you?"

"I once had a boss," reminisced another, "he was a congressman from New York. His district was half Jewish and half gentile. He was a Presbyterian and a Jew opposed him for re-election. When the votes were counted he found that he had carried all the Jewish precincts and the Jew candidates had carried all the other precincts. The only way he could explain it was that each race knew its own man best."

"I," said another, "this one secretary to a senator, "am unquestionably one of the biggest, if not one of the very best liars in Washington. If I were not a big liar and a good liar, I could not keep my job. My boss is always after me, demanding that I tell bigger and better lies."

"My boss delights to remain in the solitude of his inner office without ever seeing anyone, with rare exceptions. He has his machine sewed up at home and so isn't worrying about re-election. Sometimes I simply can't be big enough from getting in to him and after such occasions, almost invariably my boss curses me out."

"Congressman _____ took a bunch of us girls into his office for a drink the other day," said another, "and just about made us all sick. We thought it was corn, but he said it was Scotch. Some of these southern congressmen will drink almost anything and like it. Northern congressmen are almost as bad, but their taste seems to be a little bit more cultivated. Anyway, that stuff gave me a sore tummy and I don't want any more."

Tiny Needle the Magnet That Drew Rich to Him

With It Herman Chapnick, of Birch Street Clothed Wealthy and Celebrities Here and in Europe; Knew Stage Stars and Pugilists, College Boys and Blase Flappers Along New York's Famous Broadway.

An old saw runs to the effect that it takes nine tailors to make a man. Some were turned around and said that some of their like need eight more. But that was only a case of sour grapes. Probably he had just received his tailor's bill.

Anyway, if it does take nine tailors to make a man, how many men could be made by one tailor?

If he stayed in the business from childhood? Would he have to have the assistance of the other eight or could it be said that after he had fixed up nine men he had done the equivalent of making one of them?

That question is a bit involved and to save it from becoming more so, the matter will be dropped right away. But if anybody can answer that question he is welcome to do so. He won't get any reward for it.

A Local Man
To get back to the subject of this story: This tailor who is the subject of the whole affair is a Manchester man. He has lived in this town and carried on his business here for several years and scarcely any of his customers know that he once had among his customers some of the most famous men and women in the country.

Leading theatrical lights, men in public life, prizefighters and millionaires were at some time or another creations of his needle. His collection of autographed pictures is bigger than similar collections of many men who go into the business of collecting them.

In this little shop on Birch street Herman Chapnick sits cross-legged on his bench and sews, sews, sews, all day and far into the night when business is rushing. He's putting into practice the training he received while still a child in Warsaw, Poland, supplemented by experience gained in the big cities of Europe and the larger cities in this country.

He has a lot to think about as he goes back into old times, as he does occasionally. He has travel behind him and associations which many climbers would give much money to have had. He doesn't boast of them, just mentions them casually. They happened all in the day's work so he puts them down as commonplace.

He's the tailor we're talking about and if he made a man every time he tailored nine of them, he's quite some creator. He can't begin to give an idea of how many men he has tailored. He's been in the business too long and as a matter of fact he has never given a thought of it.

Started at Nine
He began to sew when he was nine years old and he has been sewing since. He is better now than he was then, for he has a lifetime of experience behind him and he can testify that he has the experience that only work in many different countries can give one.

Now he is in Manchester and he expects that this town will be his home for the rest of his life. He tells us that he has been around the globe quite a bit in his younger days and that he has at last stopped for good.

When he started out to be a tailor he was nine years old. He was bound out in the usual way, receiving nothing for his work over a period of five years while he was an apprentice. He got his board, but let him tell of it.

"You couldn't call it board," he said. "It wasn't worth two cents a week and they wouldn't feed animals the stuff now they gave us then."

Long Hours
Long hours were the rule rather than the exception and there was no overtime pay. There wasn't any pay at all the boys who were bound out in this fashion usually arose in the morning to go to the synagogue. They got up around four o'clock and spent a couple of hours at their devotions.

Back to the job at seven o'clock, they went ready until about five o'clock in the afternoon, then they again went to the synagogue. Among Orthodox Jews, such as Mr. Chapnick, this was the custom.

Here's Story of Bushelman and a Goose; They're Not What You Think, At All.

Herman Chapnick, Birch street tailor, is a full-fledged member of a Yale fraternity. He can't remember the name of the fraternity but he was given the initiation just the same.

He happened to be called to the university one day to measure Reggie Vanderbilt for a suit of clothes. He got into the dormitory and into the Vanderbilt room when he was set upon and given a ride on the blanket.

When it was finished he received the grip from all those present and was from then on an accredited honorary member.

On another occasion a college student with sheepskin under arm asked Mr. Chapnick what he knew about grammar. The tailor answered by asking him how he would write a letter asking a manufacturer to send him two of the irons used in the trade called in the singular "a goose." The student knew he could not write "geese" or "gooses" and was stumped. Chapnick answered that one should write: "Please send me one goose" and beneath it "also send me another" with ditto marks over the word "goose." When he asked the same student if he knew what a bushelman was the student answered, "A man who makes bushel baskets."

Do YOU know the answer?

This getting a license was by no means the easiest part of the apprentice had to go through an examination that was as stiff in its way as college examinations are. The old masters of the guild were the inquisitors and under their watchful eyes the young men were required to go through all the movements of their trade.

The Examination
Mr. Chapnick admits that he was a bit shaky. Those old fellows were masters at the trade and they watched every move that the young fellows made. If there were any misuses they soon found it out and each mistake counted against the applicant for membership.

The apprentices were given a model, told to fit the model to a suit, cut the suit and make it. Every process had to be gone through under the watchful eyes of the old timers and when the suit was turned in for approval they judged it. It was one of the hardest parts of learning the trade and journeymen never considered their apprenticeship ended until they had gone past the examining board.

Anyway, Mr. Chapnick finished up and went through the tests. It was then that his real travels commenced, travels that were to lead him to the most famous of the capitals of European lands and eventually to 45th Street, New York.

Gained Experience
He learned many things on his way to this country and he stayed until he could do nothing more. He stayed until he had made enough money to enable him to move on and he kept on moving. He had what is called the "loose foot" or wanderlust.

He was a wanderer, one, as they say, Mr. Chapnick should be some broad. He has done plenty of it. He can read the foreign news in the papers and visualize just where things have happened in Vienna, Hamburg, London, Dublin, Warsaw and a dozen other big European cities.

He knew them intimately for he made it his business to know them. He also knows New York and Chicago, for he worked in those cities too, in the former for a good many years but not so long in the latter.

New York Shop
His shop in New York was located on 45th Street, near Fifth Avenue, almost directly opposite the Harvard Club. It was to the tailor shops in that section of the city that the wealthy and famous came and of these people who were famous and well-to-do Mr. Chapnick had quite a number as his customers.

It was different then, catering to people who did not care how much they spent on a suit of clothes. They always left to the tailor and whatever advice he gave them they followed, no matter what the cost.

There were millionaires, sportsmen, prizefighters, actors and actresses, men and women in every class of life, but all with plenty of money. They couldn't have come to those tailor shops if they hadn't had the wealth that they possessed.

Tailors in that section of New York were always well-to-do in the city. The clientele seemed to gravitate toward 45th Street and Fifth Avenue for that was the center of New York's life at the time.

The Gay Nineties
They were coming to the end of the Gay Nineties then and the automobiles were just a few years distant. The dandies in their sport clothes drove their four horse hitched and single hitched through Central Park and along Fifth Avenue and on a good day the streets were crowded with scions of the richest families, racing with each other or trying out their blooded horses.

Automobiles were a hazardous sort of thing and more of a novelty than anything else. The spitting, roaring machines, mostly of one-cylinder construction, frightened the horses and were generally condemned as nuisances. A few years later and they had become more popular and were accepted by those young men who had formerly gone up the avenue behind high-stepping thoroughbreds.

Motor coats and motor veils, goggles and linen dusters were all the go at the time. They were flowing things in their automobiles, to catch the dust on the roads. The streets were not the asphalted affair we have now and an automobile ride was more of an ordeal than a pleasure. The linen coats been to the Wilsons some time before. They were greatly interested and asked me about it. "I told them that the Wilsons had sent for me in their automobile and had brought me from the shop to their home and back to the shop again."

Wife Jealous
"Wilson's car was one of those two-thousand dollar affairs, glistening with brass and silver, and I described it to the Tinneys."

"Mrs. Tinney thought for a while and after some deliberation she said to me: "You wait and see the kind of a car Frank and I will send you for that next time we want you."

"She was as good as her word and the next time I went to the Tinney home I went in style, in a car that cost about twice as much as the one owned by Wilson."

"There was a real rivalry between the two men. "Mrs. Wilson, however, was a motherly kind of woman, nothing like an actress, although she was performing every day on the vaudeville stage. She was one of a trio of blackheads for the three persons kept their act up for many years."

Those were the days before Tinney and his wife, the former had begun. Now the papers tell of Imogene Wilson, and the various spats and fights they have had.

Happy Home Life
There was none of that when Tinney was married to this woman, Mr. Chapnick says. Their home life was ideal and not a cloud marred their marital happiness. Imogene must, then, be of a different type, or Frank must have changed a great deal since then.

James Cruze was another of the local man's regular customers. Cruze is known chiefly as the producer of the immortal moving picture, "The Covered Wagon," which appeared several years ago. He has become one of the most famous of the moving picture directors of the present day and it is said that he has not yet reached his climax.

Cruze was a rather homely sort of person who was acting and directing in New York at the time. He drifted to the moving picture field and has made a name for himself, both as an actor and a director.

Theatergoers of a past generation will remember the great Della Fox, one of the most famous of the vaudeville actresses who flourished in New York during the Gay Nineties. She also was one of the famous personages who made the Chapnick shop her headquarters for clothes and she told Mr. Chapnick many things.

One thing she told him to do and that was to keep away from the west. She came from Los Angeles to talk to him. She told Mr. Chapnick that the coast was a wonderful place to live but not to make money.

Mr. Chapnick worked for many of the greater clothing establishments in New York, notably B. Altman and company. In the employ of that company he was an expert fitter and was usually called upon to go to the homes of wealthy people who did not want to come down to the tailoring shop.

Homes of the Rich
Some of the places he went to were those of the richest people in New York. He mentions one residence where to get through to the mistress of the house one had to pass three people, the footman, the maid and the butler. After these three personages had looked over the visitor, he was either admitted or tossed out.

He later had his own shop in the district and did a rushing business. He tells of the extravagance of some of the younger members of the rich families Harvard club across the street would never consider anything less than two dollars a satisfactory charge for sewing on a button.

Sometimes if they ordered suits and they didn't like them after they were made they would pay the tailor and tell him to keep the clothes. This happened a number of times and after a while Mr. Chapnick thought nothing of it.

Autographed Photos
All of these autographs are gone now, for they went with the business when it was sold. Some years after Mr. Chapnick sold his business the purchaser of it bought the whole block in which it was located. But New York pulled on him and he wanted to see other cities. So he went to Chicago and stayed there for a couple of years. He learned more and more about the trade, spending two whole years in night schools which were kept mainly for the instruction of tailors.

Then he came to New Haven where he did much work for the students at Yale. One of his customers was Reggie Vanderbilt, later to become well known as a sportsman and traveler.

But Mr. Chapnick is in Manchester and here he will remain. His two boys have about grown up here and this town is more home to them than the other cities they have been in. One of the boys is studying medicine and the other law.

Books

Of the new novelties America has produced in the last few seasons we believe the most important to be Julia Peterkin, Elizabeth Madox Roberts, Glenway Westcott, Thornton Wilder, Ernest Hemingway, and Marie de la Roche. Westcott's "The Grandmothers" and Miss Roberts' "My Heart and Flesh" compete strongly for first place among the novels of 1927. Certainly young Westcott wrote a mighty fine story and so did Miss Roberts, though we cling to her first work, "The Time of Man," as being one of the contemporary classics.

The general selection seems to favor one or the other of these two books. But, with no intent to start any arguments, our own taste leans toward Mrs. Peterkin's "Black April." This Southern woman started with those fine darky stories, "Green Thursday," "Black April" is a particularly excellent novel of negro life. She can write and, one of these days, everyone will find it out.

Hemingway, perhaps, should not be listed with newcomers. He had already been known for his short stories before "Men Without Women" appeared, just as Louis Bromfield, author of "The Good Woman," had been shouted over before. The name of Thornton Wilder is perhaps the least known in the collection of newcomers.

Wilder created attention through abilities revealed in "Cabela." This year he made a real contribution with contemporary literature with "The Bridge at San Luis Rey." Wonderful Arnold Bennett tossed his hat in the air and said something about this book being the finest in a generation, or something like that. Wilder is a splendid artist of whom a great deal will be heard.

Two 1927 volumes which gave us more real enjoyment than anything from the fiction mills were "Trader Horn" and Colonel Lawrence's amazing record, "Revolt in the Desert."

Carl Sandburg was responsible for a collection, "The American Songbag," which has in it everything we like to sing. And then "George Bellows, His Lithographs," is our idea of something meriting the over-used word "magnificent." It has been a biographical sketch by Thomas Beer, who is quite our finest biographer.

Out of the writer of "quick information," biography, and such, which has come in quantities hitherto unheard of, we select "Our Times," by Mark Sullivan; "Pages From My Life," by Chaulipin; "Henry Ward Beecher," by Paxton Hibben; "America," by Henrik Willem Van Loon; "New York Nights," by Stephen Graham; "That Man Heine," by Lewis Browne; "Gentleman Johnny Burgoyne," by F. J. Hudleston; "George Sand," the Search for Love," by Marie Howe; and Judge Lindsey's much discussed "Companionate Marriage."

Edward J. O'Brien saves us each year the trouble of picking out the best short stories. He reads all the magazines and tells us what in his annual "Best Short Stories of 1927."

Of interest in connection with his selections for 1927 is the inclusion of a tale, "Minstrels of the Mist," by Ben Lucien Burman. Burman is the author of some popular newspaper serials, including "Jungle Breath" and "The Parrot Lady." His particular short story meter is the relating of atmospheric tales of the Mississippi river folk.

Burman tried for two years before he could crash the magazines with writings of which he felt personally proud. It was almost that he saw in print—in the Pictorial Review—the story O'Brien selected as one of 1927's most alluring.

'HICKMANISM' BLAMED FOR BREAKING DOWN YOUNG FOLKS' MORALE

Cleveland, O.—A new disease, "Hickmanism" found among young people, caused by negativism and suppression in the home and schools is breaking down the moral of our boys and girls.

This was the startling revelation made recently by Dr. George F. Arps, head of the department of psychology at Ohio University and national authority on the problems of adolescent children.

"Relief can only come from the proper treatment of the brains of children while in the process of unfolding," Prof. Arps advised.

The psychology professor cited the case of William E. Hickman, who started the world by kidnapping and slaying the 12-year-old Los Angeles school girl, as an example of the inroads the new disease is making.

"The 'don't' process of training the child, begun in the home and continued through the lower school, must be stopped," Prof. Arps emphatically asserted. "Rather than carefully guiding the child in expression, our attitude as a rule, toward children is that of suppression. Suppression may be accomplished in two minutes, leading by gentle strokes expression may take an afternoon. However, this extra effort and time is worth the trouble."

"We should lead our children out of the wilderness of doubt, uncertainty and sometimes despair, when they pass from the infancy to adulthood through the turbulent rapids of emotional, spiritual and physical hazards."

In conclusion Professor Arps intimated there are moral and physical derelicts "because no guide or mentor accompanied them on the perilous adventure 'from childhood to adulthood.'"

25 CRUISERS

5 AIRCRAFT CARRIERS

This layout shows what Secretary Wilbur's $800,000,000 program would add to the United States navy, and presents a comparison between the American and British navies.

WILBUR PLANS NAVY FOR U. S. EQUAL TO ANY

Tells Congress We Should Spend 800 Millions—Our Chief Need Now Is More Cruisers.

Washington.—Suppose Congress should adopt Secretary Wilbur's plan for $800,000,000 worth of naval construction during the next few years; how would the United States navy compare with the British navy when that construction was completed?

Construction in Four Classes Secretary Wilbur's program calls for construction of four classes of ships—cruisers, submarines, aircraft carriers and destroyers.

Cruisers head the list, and it is in this class that the United States navy shows the most marked numerical inferiority to England's.

England Strong in Cruisers England has 49 cruisers in its fleet, and has 17 more either building or appropriated for.

sure, 22 additional cruisers; but they are all obsolete—some of them were built before the Spanish war; and none has the speed or gun power to cope with a modern vessel—and practically all have been placed out of commission.

Thus the addition of 25 modern cruisers, as planned by Secretary Wilbur, would still leave this country numerically behind Great Britain.

Next come the aircraft carriers, representing a branch of navy service created a dozen years ago. The United States navy now has three; but of these, two, the Lexington and the Saratoga, are among the largest naval vessels afloat anywhere, and considerably outclass any other of their kind any other navy is to offer.

In submarines, highly important in modern naval warfare, the United States navy already has first place. There are now in commission 50 submarines flying the United States flag; a fleet very nearly double the size of England's.

In destroyers, likewise, the American navy is now far ahead. The navy boasts 276 modern destroyers, and while a number have been placed temporarily out of commission they are kept in good condition and could take to the sea on short notice.

It is the secretary's contention that this building program must be adopted if the United States is to have a "first-class" navy.

England has 49 cruisers in its fleet, and has 17 more either building or appropriated for.

Neither the advance reviews of the Fox Films publicity department nor the reviews of New York and Los Angeles critics have fully appreciated the significance of "The Seventh Heaven" at the State and Circle theaters on Sunday, for the sheer beauty, fascinating interest and gripping heart appeal of this marvelous picture.

If a picture can be perfect then this picture is. Story, photography, direction, acting—none of these have been surpassed and never will be again.

But every actor in this remarkable entertainment is splendidly cast and plays his part with a sincerity that touches the hearts of the audience.

ENGLAND OFFERS WAYS TO STOP SUB DISASTERS

London.—With nationwide grief still being expressed over the tragic loss of the United States Navy submarine S-4 and its crew in the Atlantic Ocean off Provincetown, Mass., many suggestions have come from mariners and authorities throughout England advocating measures to prevent a repetition of the disaster.

In a recent interview, Rear Admiral Sir Charles L. Otley, former director of Naval Intelligence for Great Britain and one of the greatest living marine authorities, declared the criticism which was levied at the Navy Board in Washington for its failure to rescue the imprisoned men.

"The familiar transition from a very natural outburst of sympathy to an unstructured condemnation of the authorities for failing to save those gallant lives," Sir Charles declared, "is deplorable and mischievous. The supreme consideration in naval manoeuvres must be the furtherance of fighting efficiency.

"In view, however, of the frequent recurring loss of submarines during peace exercises, it is but natural to ask whether some compromise cannot be hit upon between the Scylla of a ruthless and the Charybdis of a careless pursuit of maximum fighting efficiency at the expense of reasonable safeguards.

"Had it been practicable to bring the submarine to the surface quickly after the collision, the lives might have been saved. Argye to admit that such rapid salvage is for ever impracticable? "To raise a vessel of 1,000 tons or more from the ocean bed without the aid of her foundering seems a colossal task. The special technicalities of submarine construction must, however, be taken into account.

"The loss of each buoy-rope would be made fast to the salvage chains. The salvage procedure would be simplicity itself. The rescuing vessel would pick up the buoys, bring them to the surface, and reattach them to the main line.

Simple Method "The loss of each buoy-rope would be made fast to the salvage chains. The salvage procedure would be simplicity itself.

It has been learned that the British Admiralty now have under consideration an emergency submarine signalling device which, it is stated, ensures the prompt location of the sunken vessel.

NEW YORK COPS TO LEARN COURTESY AND TO BE "GENTLEMEN"

New York.—Heretofore the big, burly New York policemen have been taught to shoot straight and swing a mean night stick; to the general neglect of Chesterfieldian manners. But that is all past now.

It all started recently when Commissioner Warren, unobserved by the traffic policeman, heard the custodian of traffic hand out a summons to an automobile driver who had "taken a chance" on passing a traffic light.

The police officer used, Commissioner Warren thought, was much too vigorous and blunt to be considered representative of his department.

Thereafter an official polishing process has begun in New York's police department. Every traffic policeman in the city is to be taught courtesy—a sort of finishing school course guaranteed to pound into the dumbest flatfoot in "Hell's Kitchen" district an "old family" cordiality and a chew-with-your-mouth-closed refinement.

SPEED DEMONS AT INDIANAPOLIS FEBRUARY 15-23

Indianapolis.—February 15th to 23rd will witness a serious effort on the part of the world's fastest automobiles to wrest the world's speed crown from Major H. O. D. Seagrave on the Ormond-Dayton, Florida, beach course.

Foremost among the American entries is the American Mystery car of Frank Lockhart, peer of American racing drivers. This machine known as the Lockhart-Stutz Special is nearing completion at the Stutz Motor Plant here.

Other Entries The other three outstanding entries are those of Captain Malcolm Campbell, British ace, who will drive a secretly built 450-horsepower Napier engine car; J. M. White, Philadelphia automobile accessory manufacturer, who has entered a 36-cylinder, 1,500-horsepower four ton mysterious motor monster and H. Dependin, French winner of the 1927 Grand Prix of Spain, who has wired the small Special committee that he will have a "surprise" car at Daytona in February in time for the speed trials.

Compared with the Philadelphia monster car and the huge foreign entries, Lockhart will drive the smallest car powered by the smallest engine ever used in a speed contest which has been built by Lockhart and Stutz engineers here is

The Rec Five proved beyond a shadow of doubt that it is deserving of support by defeating the Diamond Match quintet of Springfield 40 to 32 last night at the School street Rec gym before a crowd of about three hundred persons.

Exhibiting a pretty brand of passwork with fast cutting and accurate shooting, the Rec Five gave a good account of itself. Manager Clune's aggregation won the game by virtue of a first quarter spurt that shot them into a 20 to 2 lead.

The Springfield team was unable to score a field goal until the second quarter had started. In fact, the visitors were completely outclassed in all departments of the game the first period. Yet, they came back and put up a splendid battle.

While Manchester was smothering the visitors in the first quarter, it was nevertheless evident that the Diamond Match team was much better than the progress of the game from a standpoint of scoring disclosed.

This they proved conclusively in the next three quarters. Springfield nosed out the Rec boys 9 to 8 in the second quarter making the halftime score 28 to 11.

In the third quarter, the visitors were unable to get a start, and the visitors won handily 13 to 4. This brought the score of 32 to 24.

Soon after the final period commenced, Manchester scored two baskets in rapid succession but the plucky Diamond Match kept close on the heels of the Rec Five.

The caliber of the game improved in the first half. The game was checked. Sprinfield's foul shooting was exceptionally good. The team made good ten times in a dozen attempts. The Rec Five caged but six in sixteen.

HAGEN LEARNS NEW LESSON IN BASEBALL DEAL

New York, Jan. 24.—It's always good policy to stick to your own racket, especially in sports. Walter Hagen's experience with baseball is enough to emphasize that bit of philosophy had we not other experiences to twiddle about in our heads.

Not at all pleasant was Walter's attempt to buy into the International League, and it is more than likely that the golfer will lose part of the $25,000 he gave as first payment on the Rochester franchise.

One also remembers Rogers Hornsby's experience with the horses and all the trouble encountered before it passed out of the news.

And the experience of several ball players who in the past mixed up with the gambling element can also be termed a lesson.

HAIL LOUGHRAN AS TRUE TYPE OF FIGHT CHAMP

New York.—Panegyrics are being penned nowadays about the admirable qualities, in and out of the ring, possessed by Tommy Loughran, the light heavyweight champion. The boys hailed him as a true type of fighting champion because of his performance in taking on McTigue, Slattery and Lomski in title bouts within a matter of two months and they listening with real respect to his challenges leveled at the various heavyweights, beginning with Gene Tunney and, for all know, perhaps ending with the precise, correct young man.

However, the one man Loughran wants to fight hasn't been mentioned. He happens to be the only one of the big time fighters who is able to secure the biggest contract in the history of all baseball, $70,000 a year.

Perhaps, however, if any mistake has been made, it wasn't Ruth's. Perhaps it came in making the contract for two years to elapse. Anything Ruth started the present of season with a right good will and was down to 226 pounds at McGovern's in December. He hasn't been back since and his total work for the winter total exactly two.

At any time is a good time to loaf, the writer would say, offhand, that Ruth has picked a bad one. He is verging on the age of thirty-four and, when an athlete gets fat at that stage he is inclined to stay that way. In any case, it doesn't throw itself with the facility of other and perhaps better days and its removal takes a greater toll in stamina and vitality.

Of course, I shouldn't go forth burying the poor old fellow in that out-of-fashion. For one thing, he is a big and fine fellow, and he is a party to the funeral, in which case we would have nothing to weep over and naturally that would sadden us tremendously. However, with my old friend, George Herman Ruth, looking like the back of a hack, it may be that I will be able to enjoy a real good cry yet.

HILLIARD WINS LEADS SETBACK

The Manchester Community Club setback tournament was resumed last night at the White House. Forty-eight hands played. The E. E. Hilliard Company was high scores with 183 tallies and they also had high individual score, winning the night prize. Refreshments were served after the games. The score last night was as follows:

Records were shattered last night when the Liberty overpowered the Bulldogs by a score of 106 to 26. These teams are in opposite divisions of the Community Club junior basketball league.

Two players on the Liberty team scored many more points than the entire Bulldogs aggregation. They were Spencer and Hansen. The former registered 18 field goals and a foul for a total of 37 points and Hansen shot 16 baskets for 32 tallies. The score the first quarter was 29 to 4, the first half, 51 to 10 and the third quarter it stood 78 to 20. Coleman was beat for the losers. The summary:

BABE RUTH PUTS ON MUCH WEIGHT DURING WINTER

Now Weighs 240 Pounds; Has Done No Exercise Since Last Fall.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
I. N. S. Sports Editor

New York, Jan. 28.—"Salvaging the wreck of Babe Ruth," was the title of a learned treatise pronounced a year ago in a glow of self-satisfaction by professor Arthur A. McGovern, the big and little biceps man who takes them and breaks them to his will. Today, it seemed possible that Mr. B. Ruth might be going about the business of wrecking the salvager. Mr. Ruth, who can gain weight by chewing a stick of gum, hasn't so much as glanced at a medicine ball or taken a dumb-bell in hand, at least the inanimate kind, since December.

The story now in circulation is that the Babe is in for a big year; that, in fact, he can't miss. Any get, weighing more than 240 pounds with the season only two months away, just couldn't have any other kind, it seems.

Good Times, was the conservative venture at Ruth's poundage today by a man far from expert in matters of this degree. It means that the boy friend look considerably like the Round Ruth of 1925, when he came north from Springs training in the comfortable folds of a stretcher. They rolled him down the runway of the Pennsylvania station, helped him tenderly into a waiting ambulance and off he sped, feet and into the neither world beyond the cloistered silence of the receiving ward.

He emerged two months later a pale and interesting invalid and vowed that forever henceforth his would be a life of uncompromising austerity. He spoke also for extreme abstemiousness at the dinner table and forthwith went in for light repasts of no more than eight courses. But, for two consecutive winters, he did do what the professor told him, at least in the professor's presence, the latter going all the way to Hollywood last year when the boy friend might uplift the drama without straining a careless tendon.

Greatest Season. In consequence, Ruth staked himself to two of his greatest seasons in 1925 and 1927 and meantime, he was able to secure the biggest contract in the history of all baseball, $70,000 a year.

Perhaps, however, if any mistake has been made, it wasn't Ruth's. Perhaps it came in making the contract for two years to elapse. Anything Ruth started the present of season with a right good will and was down to 226 pounds at McGovern's in December. ONE MINUTE INTERVIEWS WITH SPORTS CELEBRITIES.

BILL TILDEN SAYS I am not as pessimistic about the chances of the United States to regain the Davis Cup from France, as are the writers on tennis. No matter how great a player may be, and tennis has produced a number of scintillating stars, time and effort will always produce a greater one. The United States lost a great player when Vincent Richards decided to turn professional. Of more recent date, has been the proof that Bill Johnston and myself, as well as a number of other veteran players, are going back.

Turn to the pages of tennis history and you will find that Smith of England met his superior in Doherty; Rice of Australia met his Brooks; McLoughlin of America met his Williams, who in turn met his Johnston, and then I happened to enter the scene.

Tennis, like all other sports, runs in cycles, and for three or four years the French menace has been ever present. During the next year Lacoste, Cochet and other French stars have held the upper hand.

On form, it seems that France, with its long list of first-string stars and many prospective youngsters should hold sway in tennis for some time, but there is nothing certain about it.

For five or six years several of us veteran players have rather hogged the spotlight in tennis. Now that the older players all seem to be retrograding at the same time, I look for many new names to break into the headlines as far as tennis is concerned.

There are a number of younger players who are certain to help in regaining lost tennis prestige. It will be well to watch the youngsters like Deeg, White, Shields and others during the coming season. They should do well.

BOYCOTT OF FANS

There is some talk that the irate fans of New York will boycott the Giants next season to make dear old owners feel their protest against the trade that sent Rogers Hornsby to Boston.

From previous experiences it has been demonstrated that the fans of the major league club owners are rather hardened against the utterances of the public and that their most vital spot is the old dough roll.

Anyone who is at all familiar with baseball conditions in New York knows that any talk about an organized boycott to punish the Giants owners for the harsh way they treated the poor Rajah is the bunk.

They don't take baseball that seriously in New York. The fans have had enough to steam them up to the boycott heat in the past with the Dolan-O'Connell, the Phil Douglas and the Chase affair, and the Black Soxers, but they cooled off and continued to visit the Polo Grounds occasionally.

We don't subscribe to the claim of the magnates that baseball is the heart of the nation and the savior in time of war and peace, but there is something about the game that strikes a forgiving note among the customers.

The fans who support the Giants in New York like to go to the Polo Grounds for some reason, but there certainly is no precedent to make one believe that they will stay away because Hornsby was chastised by Charley Stoneham.

On the other hand, it will be interesting to count the boys on the third base side, where some betting is done, when Hornsby pays his regular visits with the Braves and whatever team he lands with. The boys in that certain person who considers that certain kinds of debts cannot be collected legally, if there ever had been any real time.

Washington when a writer asked Commissioner Landis for a copy of the testimony taken from Cossy Dolan and Jimmy O'Connell on the grounds that the public was entitled to it.

"Since when are you the custodian of the public?" the commissioner asked with a mean look.

As long as the customers pay baseball hasn't much concern about the public, and unless some tremendous change has happened in sentiment, New York will continue to be a paying customer for some time.

CERVINI LEADS HERALD LEAGUE AVERAGE COLUMN

K. of C. Man Has 106.1 Mark; Murphy and Sardella Close Seconds.

Frank Cervini, anchor man on the Knights of Columbus, leads the individual bowling average column in The Herald Bowling League but are close enough behind him to make his chances of copying that honor at the end of the season, far from a foregone conclusion. Cervini has averaged 106.1 for 33 games; Murphy 104.2 for 32 games and Sardella 104.2 for 17 games. The latter, however, has rolled less than seventy-five percent of the games to date.

Thirteen members of the league are sporting averages that have three figures on the left of the decimal point. The Masons have four of these, Cole, Murphy, McAdams and Stevenson. In fact, the Mason team is averaging a trifle over 100.

The averages include all games in the first round but not last Thursday's. The averages of every player on every team follows:

PARK SUPERINTENDENT REPORTS ICE UNSAFE FOR LARGE CROWD

Fifteen Foot Strip of Two-Inch Ice Round Entire Pond; Ice in Middle From 3 to 6 Inches, 22 Measurements Reveal.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 24.—His football days over, Polwell Scull, Penn's great sprinter, is now devoting his time to track and the making of the United States Olympic team.

In this ambition Scull is backed by Lawson Robertson, who thinks Scull is an excellent prospect for the sprint college championships and the Olympic team.

Although he has been troubled last year by a bad leg, Scull managed to place in several important meets. His running form is very similar to that of George Hill, who starred for Penn a few seasons back.

This injured leg did not handicap him in football. As a result, Robertson is firm in his belief that Scull will pan out as a sprinter.

Time will tell if Robertson's dope is right.

CLEVELAND TO START SEASON WITH OLD TEAM

Cleveland—Despite efforts of Alva Bradley and Billy Evans, president and vice president respectively of the Cleveland American League baseball club, to obtain new material for the 1928 Indians, it is now apparent that the tribe will start the season with practically the same outfit as of 1927.

Last year the club finished in sixth place, but with predictions that "Big George" Uhle will "pitch winning ball again," the Cleveland team are hoping to land in the first division the coming season. Uhle, "ace of the American League" in 1926, was in poor

NORTH END YOUNGSTERS

FISHED OUT OF POND

Charlie Gooche, However, Says Nobody Had to Lend Him Any Hand.

Two north end youngsters had a narrow escape from possible drowning late yesterday afternoon when they broke through thin ice at the Community club playground summer pool. They are Charlie Gooche, 9, of Hilliard street and Matthew Plocarsky of North street.

The cries of the boys were heard by Joseph Mitchell, 15, of North School street, who was passing through the playgrounds. He waded out into the chilly water and broken ice and assisted the boys to shore.

Gooche, who is a well known north end juvenile character of immense self-confidence, insisted that he got out of the pond without aid. The other boy did not deny, however, that Mitchell picked him up after he had sank below the surface.

As a result of the affair, the water was to be drained from the pond today. Ripples caused by the flow of the brook that runs through the little pond make the ice useless for skating.

MEN WANT BIG CROWD

AT BUCKLAND MEETING

Male Members of P. T. A. to Conduct Whist For Mrs. Horton's Benefit.

The men of the Seventh District who are managing the benefit whist under the Parent-Teacher association at the Buckland school Monday evening are anticipating the largest crowd of the season, judging from the advance sale of tickets.

They are offering a prize of $2.50 each to the lady and gentleman player having the highest score. They have asked a number of the housewives to help them out by making cakes, and as the men of this neighborhood have the reputation of doing things up brown, a good time is assured all who go to the Buckland school Monday evening at the same time the whist fans will have the satisfaction of lending a helping hand to the widow of Mrs. Horton, who was killed this month in the grade crossing accident at Buckland.

PUBLIC RECORDS

The following papers were filed for public record in the office of the town clerk today:

ATTACHMENTS

Property of Stephen D. Pearl on Woodland, two pieces, attached by Egbert A. Mahon of Howich Station, Quebec, who alleges that before January 23 he leased S. D. Pearl the sum of $196. He asks for $400 damages.

Property of Herbert Carlson, administrator of the estate of Charles A. Carlson, late of Manchester, has been made the subject of a further attachment in the suit of Theresa Liehl. Carlson's car was attached in Hartford some time ago but it has been claimed by the plaintiff that the attachment was not sufficient to cover the amount of damages asked for. The further attachment is in the sum of $4,800 and involves property on the corner of Cedar and Ridge streets, measuring 90 by 124 feet.

SNOWING IN CAPITAL

Washington, Jan. 23.—The capital was blanketed today under the first real snow of the winter.

Snow fell steadily during the night and this morning averaged six inches on the level and was drifted in many places to a depth of several feet.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

The making of pottery is one of the oldest arts known to man. It is so ancient that no one knows when people first learned to make vessels of clay. In our great museums we may find well-shaped bowls and vases which were buried in tombs of the Egyptians 6000 years ago. Ancient Cretons and Greeks made beautiful jars thousands of years ago.

Knowledge gained during centuries by ancient peoples was almost swept away when barbarians from the north overwhelmed Rome.

These people knew little of pottery and the European potter's work of mediaeval times was very crude.

Moors invading Spain, however, brought with them skilled workers in various crafts, among whom were potters. Knowledge of the art of these Moorish potters spread throughout Europe and many beautiful things were made, especially in Italy, but they were of heavy clay and seemed coarse under the splendid decorations.

SENSE and NONSENSE

Here is a sentence that contains all the letters of the alphabet: "Pack my box with five dozen liquor jugs." The sentence also contains a term in the county jail.

Jes' Be What You Is. Don't be what you ain't Jes' be what you is. If you is not what you am, Then you am not what you is; If you is jes' a little tadpole, Don't try to be a frog. If you's jes' a common tall, Don't try to wag the dog. If you's jes' a little pebble, Don't try to be the beach. You can always pass the plate— If you can't exhort and preach. Don't be what you ain't, Jes' be what you is; For the man who plays it square, Sure's a-goin' to get "his."

Real Estate Agent: Well, what do you think of our little city? Prospect: I'll tell you, brother, this is the first cemetery I ever saw with lights.

A girl's idea of warmer stockings for cold weather is a slightly darker shade.

"What have you been doing all summer?" "I had a position in my father's office—and you?" "I wasn't working, either."

Everything has its place, but that doesn't relieve the man with a boil on his nose.

Embryo Sheik (on phone): You want to go with another couple? All right. You get another girl and I'll get another good looking fellow.

Wife: That Mrs. Brown next door is certainly getting on my nerves! Husband (off stage): When did she get this new dress?

Trouble with most killers is that they do not discover they are crazy until after they have killed someone.

Pat was arrested for being intoxicated. On being brought before the Judge he was asked by the Court what he was there for.

Pat: Your Honor, I was arrested for being intoxicated.

Judge: Pat, where did you buy the liquor?

Pat: Your Honor, I did not buy it. A Scotchman gave it to me.

Judge: Thirty days for perjury.

You may get a large amount of truth into a brief space.

"Petting" Larceny

Clarence: Would you-er-be very angry if I stole a small kiss, dear?

Winnie: That all depends on how long it would take you to return it!

People have no business kissing; that is a pleasure.

VETER GOLF

TIME TO ARISE

From DOZE to WAKE is four strokes, but it's easier with a night stick, they say. The puzzle editor's guess, which you may prove to be bad, is printed on another page.

DOZE

THE RULES

- 1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
- 2—You can change only one letter at a time.
- 3—You must have a complete word of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
- 4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

THE TINYMITES

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE

The TiniMites sang and worked away. To build a mud house was like play. Wee Scouty said, "Just see my hands. They're black as black can be. But I know what we all can do. We'll wash up clean when we are through. And for a towel we'll use big leaves from off a nearby tree." And then the slim man jumped and cried, "Say, I need food in my inside. We'd better rest and wash up now. Then I'll prepare a meal." "Oh, fine!" cried Carpy. "Come on, bunch. Our friend suggests a dandy lunch. He says that he is hungry. That's exactly how I feel." They found a stream not far away, and shortly Coppy shouted, "Hey! Quit splashing water on me. I will catch my death of cold." Then Clowzy snapped, "Don't be so cross at us. I'm real tired at a loss to know why you find fault so much and always have to scold." They finished washing very soon, and then the slim man said, "It's noon, and just the proper time to eat. I have a treat in store. Now watch this clever trick I'll do." He brought a basket into view, and said, "How's that? It's full of food. Just what we're craving for." The TiniMites ate like all lads would, and found the food was very good. And then they all returned to work upon their barn again. It wasn't long till it was done, and Scouty said, "Well that was fun. I guess it does a person good to labor now and then." "And now," the funny slim man cried, "We'll drive the animals all inside. And then we all can rest. It's been a very tiresome day." But when the whole bunch looked around, the animals could not be found. While everyone was busy they had turned and run away. (The TiniMites meet a woodsman in the next story.)

SCHOOL STREET DUMP STARTS WINTER BLAZE

The School street dump, which has been on its good behavior since last July, broke out again with a blaze yesterday afternoon and the fire department was called on a still alarm.

Hose Company No. 3 responded to the alarm and spent from 5:30 until 6:30 in subduing the blaze. No damage was done and the firemen kept the flames from spreading.
