STORM SEWERS

About the last thing Nature thought of, apparently, when arranging the topography of the world, was any provision for the gathering together of human beings into cities and big towns.

As a consequence Chicago has built concrete boxes for cellars and Manchester has to build storm-water sewers. In both instances the expense is annoying, for it is easy to imagine Nature making it needless if she had only had a bit of forethought, and hardly anybody likes to spend hard earned money on a hole in the ground.

For Manchester to have to spend a hundred thousand dollars on storm sewers seems like a hardship. And in a sense it is. But just the same the employment of the money in this way will redeem conditions that now cut values in the affected areas to a far greater extent than a hundred thousand dollars.

Here, then, is a real investment. You take a thousand nice crisp one dollar bills and invest them in a government bond—and you can't see your money any more; all you have to show for it is a scrap of paper. You can't see the money that you invest in storm sewers, and you don't even get a scrap of paper. But you get value—value, in the present instances, far in excess of the money involved.

WEATHER BUREAU

In 1891, thirty-seven years ago, the United States Weather Bureau was organized in the Agricultural Department of the national government. It took over the weather forecasting work which up to that time had been done by the Signal Service of the Army.

Now for a non-technician to ridicule the work of a technician is always unfair and generally nonsensical. But nevertheless the weather service gets far more ridicule than anything else at the hands of the country.

So far as the ordinary citizen can observe there hasn't been a particle of progress in the art of weather forecasting since the Weather Bureau was organized. Considerable success is attained in the prediction of big storms of sharply outlined direction, and in sweeping waves of temperature change.

It is highly improbable that in thirty-seven years, there has not been a sufficient advance in science to make possible a better national forecasting service. The invention of radio communication alone, by giving access to information from the sea areas, which used to be huge blind spots in the ken of the prognosticators, alone ought to have improved the accuracy of forecasting to a tremendous extent.

The conclusion is, then, that the Weather Bureau is suffering from neglect. It hasn't stations enough, observers enough, instruments enough, scientists enough, or something else enough to be one half the account that it should be. Probably it hasn't one-tenth enough money and ten times too many things to do.

We are not at all sure but the national political party which would sponsor a wholesale modernization of the Weather Bureau, and guarantee the people of the country dependable weather reports twenty-four hours in advance, could win a Presidential election on that issue. Certainly elections have been won on issues not half so important.

NOT ALL THE BURDEN

It has seemed to us from the beginning and still seems that there is an unnecessary amount of hard feeling and what one might call of extremism in the rapidly growing ruckus within the Daughters of the American Revolution over the much discussed blacklists.

The insurrectionary faction headed by Mrs. Helen Tufts Bailie becomes perilously near ridiculous when it charges that the blacklists are engaged in a violent assault on the constitutional guarantee of freedom of speech. It is the most arrant nonsense to assume that the dislike of the Daughters of the American Revolution for any set of ideas could, by any stretch of imagination, be translated into danger that advocacy of those ideas might be suppressed.

We have the most profound respect for the original purposes of the D. A. R. and for the lofty national pride which distinguishes that body. And because of it we do really hope that presently the Daughters will get over the idea that they and they alone are responsible for the preservation of America and of constitutional liberties.

A HINT TO IGNORE

King Fuad of Egypt is without doubt a sovereign of more than the usual amount of learning and culture—in fact it is an educator and as the founder of a university that he shines, rather than as a ruler. But if he comes to the United States next fall, as it is now intimated he may, it isn't easy to see why it must be at the invitation of this government.

Leaving William Hale Thompson and his George the Third phobia out of the question, the United States has a traditional commitment to a no-king credo. It need not be offensive; is not offensive save when exploited by blathers like Thompson; but it is nevertheless real.

Once there came to these shores, by invitation, a king. And he was something more than a king; he was a singularly brave and manly man. Albert of Belgium has been the only reigning sovereign to visit this country at the request of the nation—and that invitation was in recognition of his being our gallant and active ally in the great war.

If Fuad wants to come to America of his own initiative doubtless a proper amount of fuss will be made over him. But we should dislike very much to see this government assume that responsibility for the success of the visit that would be unavoidable if it should give him the invitation at which he is hinting.

VENGEANCE

Though the State Police have, quite wisely, kept the method of their operations to themselves while hunting for the murderers of Trooper Irving H. Nelson last week, the arrest and positive identification of two Worcester jailbirds as occupants of the car from which the policeman was shot down would seem to indicate that some exceptionally good police work has been done in this case.

is earnestly to be hoped that if these suspects are indeed the pair who, without rhyme or reason, shot Nelson to death no loopholes shall appear through which they may crawl out from under the shadow of the gallows. Obviously the murder was done in that callous spirit of bravado which makes it the supreme ambition of the gangster to "kill a cop." And if there is any form of criminalism that needs to be met with stern and ruthless repression, almost more than any other, it is this one.

The Worcester suspects belong to Connecticut. And upon Connecticut devolves the duty of avenging the cruelly casual killing of Trooper Nelson.

POOR BILL

William Hale Thompson must have been the most surprised and shocked man in the world when he discovered that right in his own ward there were so many bootlickers of King George the Third that they could boost him out of his own ward committee by a majority of more than a thousand votes.

Cleveland. — Rigid dreadnaught dirigibles, with a flying radius of 10,000 miles will be traveling across oceans and continents with passengers, was the prediction of V. R. Jacobs, Akron dirigible expert, in describing two giant airships which are to be constructed for the United States navy.

"The dirigibles will be the major means of transportation, with airplanes feeding airliners, as buses now feed the railway lines. "The two dirigibles are wanted by the navy," Jacobs explained, "to take the place of cruisers and destroyers in scouting the seas. An airship with two airplanes, which may be carried on the dirigible, can scan 700,000 square miles in 24 hours, doing the work of half a dozen cruisers and destroyers. The new navy dirigibles will dwarf the Los Angeles. Each will be two and one-half times as large as the biggest airship now in existence.

"They will carry in addition to two or three airplanes, 28,000 pounds of water, 9,000 pounds of oil, 152,000 gallons of gasoline and a crew of 35 men and ten officers. "The dirigibles will have a cruising capacity of from 8,500 to 10,000 miles and will be equipped with every safety device known to science. "The United States has a monopoly on helium gas. Contrary to popular belief, there is in this country sufficient helium gas to supply all the dirigibles that will be built in this country for many years."

British women members of the House of Commons demand they be accorded the same privileges as the men members. Can't they find any place to loaf?

Washington LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, April 12.—Senator George W. Norris of Nebraska has gone out home to help renominate and elect his colleague, Senator R. Beecher Howell.

Both are independent Republicans. Nebraska, the state of the late William Jennings Bryan, apparently doesn't take party labels too seriously. Her six representatives in the House include three Democrats, two Republicans and one "Free Democrat" is Edgar B. Howard.

Perhaps the reason Howell, the engineer, can't easily engineer his re-election is that he has to spend his time in Washington.

Hoover, the engineer, is now trying to show that a good engineer-engineer a presidential nomination. One observes that Hoover is wisely refraining from roaring his own praises from the platform up and down the countryside. He just sits here in Washington and delegates—with what success may be judged by the number of delegates he now has under his belt.

Lately the word has crept out that the manager of the Hoover campaign was none other than Hoover, the engineer—Hoover, the organizer.

STEPHENSON TELLS OBERHOLZER STORY

Klan Leader Says He Was Framed By Kluxers For Death of Girl.

Editor's Note:—This is the fifth of a series of the deposition of D. C. Stephenson, former Indiana Klan leader, in which he describes the alleged operations of the Ku Klux Klan.

Chicago, April 12.—In previous installments of his deposition, now part of the court records of Pennsylvania, David C. Stephenson, former Grand Dragon of the Ku Klux Klan in Indiana, has revealed the origin of the Klan and its methods of operating.

In the installment today he tells of his own trial for the murder of Madge Oberholzer of Noblesville, Ind., for whose murder he is serving a life term.

Stephenson was asked if he felt any hatred or bitterness. He said he did not. Asked if members of the Klan had anything to do with his present incarceration and with preventing him from aiding the processes of law, Stephenson says in his deposition:

"Yes, they had everything to do with my imprisonment. They are not only guilty of framing me but also of poisoning the minds of the people in Noblesville county against me."

"I am in a position to know that a man from Nebraska wrote the so-called dying declaration of Madge Oberholzer some four or five days after she was a corpse."

Dying Confession (?)

"As a matter of fact everybody knows that no woman sick or dying would attach her name to the hideous document that was read to the Hamilton Circuit Court as the dying declaration of that girl."

"The whole thing is that the introduction of that statement to the jury as a dying declaration did not only send me to prison for life but it placed the black stamp of shame upon the dead woman."

"In addition I will say this. That Miss Oberholzer never went to Hammond, Ind., on the day the alleged wild party took place in which I was alleged to have participated and none of the facts leading to the original cause of death are true. It is my definite information that she did not die from the cause attributed to her, but from the effects of another and deadly poison."

"This was given to her fully fifteen days after the date I was supposed to have accompanied her to Hammond. I am in a position to prove these facts."

"I can also prove that one of the talesmen was approached by a member of a woman's organization who told him to vote constantly against me."

"I am also in receipt of information that a sum of money was paid to a newspaperman who operated a small paper to print wrong things about me that would damage my character."

"Also there was distributed anonymous literature in that county attacking me with the basest of insinuations which damaged my reputation."

"I did not take the witness stand during the trial because I was informed by letter and telephone that if I did, I would be instantly killed."

HOSPITAL HEADS GIVE OUT MORAN IMPLICATIONS

for using, in the presence of witnesses, language which was derogatory to the hospital.

Two Days Notice

On November 20, 1927, Dr. Moran was notified that the executive committee of the hospital would meet on Nov. 22, at 4:30 p. m., for the purpose of giving him a hearing relative to his suspension.

On November 22 the matter was again called to the attention of Mrs. Moran, in the absence of the doctor from his office. The committee met on November 22 at 4:30 p. m., but Dr. Moran failed to attend the meeting, nor did he notify the committee that he would not be present at the meeting.

On November 25, through his attorney, Dr. Moran requested a hearing before the executive committee but made his appearance before the committee conditioned on the following: That he should receive two days' notice of the hearing; that he be permitted to have counsel present in his behalf; that the trustees request certain doctors to be present at the hearing; that the trustees assure him that the superintendent would arrange for the presence of such employees of the hospital as, in Dr. Moran's judgment, the development of the hearing required; that such employees receive no promise of reward for withholding facts; and that no such employee should receive any threat of dismissal for answering any question propounded to them by Dr. Moran or his counsel.

Request Denied

The executive committee decided not to grant a hearing upon the terms imposed by Dr. Moran and so notified him on December 5.

Dr. Moran has never been denied a hearing by the trustees. The executive committee has refused to grant a hearing upon conditions imposed by Dr. Moran, which impugn the good faith of the hospital authorities.

The above statement is made because of the misleading statements which have been made verbally and by letters in the local newspaper as to the attitude of the trustees of the hospital.

WADSWORTHS HAD BIG THRILL AT SEA

Chateau Thierry Clergyman Tells of Experience as Great Wave Hit Leviathan

Dr. Julian S. Wadsworth and Mrs. Wadsworth of Chateau Thierry, France, who have been absent from Manchester since a visit here six years ago, said today that it is good to be home again. They left this morning for Providence and will return on Saturday. They are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Crowell, Highland Park.

Speaking of the trip from France on the S. S. Leviathan, Dr. Wadsworth remarked that it was exceedingly rough and that he was seasick. He said that a monster wave struck the vessel, almost putting her out of commission.

"I was a little bit frightened," Dr. Wadsworth said, "more so because Mrs. Wadsworth, who is a bad sailor, had been unable to leave her stateroom since the start of the voyage. I went up on deck to see what had happened when the wave struck and found that the ship was drifting. I had been planning how I would get Mrs. Wadsworth up on deck, but when I went below again I found that although she was very ill, she had made an effort to dress."

"The ship was brought under control in a short time and the journey was resumed. Part of the superstructure of the vessel had been carried away by the wave, and some of the water had flowed through open hatches into the second-class staterooms. I learned later that more than 500 tons of water had descended on the ship when the wave struck."

"I was really scared," Dr. Wadsworth said, "because on previous voyages to France I had witnessed other sea disasters. The first time I went across with a number of troops and one ship containing several thousand soldiers was torpedoed and burned to the water's edge. I watched that ship as it sank but we were unable to go to her assistance for there were subma-

TRADE SCHOOL HERE TO FIGURE IN EXHIBIT

Will Demonstrate at Eastern Arts Show in Hartford Armory Next Week.

Manchester State Trade School, among other Connecticut schools of its kind, will have an important part in the big exhibition to be held at the Hartford State Armory during the nineteenth convention of the Eastern Arts Association, April 18, 19, 20 and 21. Illustrating the importance of vocational education in Connecticut, the Vocational Division of the State Board of Education has reserved more than 3,000 square feet of floor space at the armory for the unique exposition.

A great many phases of achievements in education trade and industry will be strikingly presented in this exposition, which represents the largest of its kind ever given in New England as well as the most extensive ever sponsored by the association. No admission will be charged. The Connecticut vocational exhibit will be divided among thirteen booths, each representative of a special trade where products will be shown and the manner in which they are made. In many instances, actually demonstrated.

Manchester's part in the exhibit will be as important, if not more so, as that of any of the other state trade schools. The local school will exhibit in machine, textile, carpentry and electric course work. Silk textile work will be demonstrated together with demonstration by students from Putnam working on cotton textiles and Middletown students on woven narrow fabrics. Looms will be in operation. Boys from the local carpentry department will take part in work representative of that done in state trade schools. They will complete the erection of a staircase and a china closet on a French door during the four days. The exhibit starts on Wednesday afternoon.

All electric power work done by the students of the local school will be illustrated, including the installation of electric motors and wiring for booth lighting. A power plant will be taken to the exposition from the local school.

Director A. A. Warren of the local school is one of a committee of three working on the arrangements for the trade schools exhibits. The others are A. S. Bonnet of Middletown and H. S. Hall of New Britain.

UNUSUAL PROGRAM AT SACRED CONCERT

Fine Musical to Be Presented at South Methodist Church Sunday Evening.

Announcement was made today of some of the musical compositions and the musicians who will have a part in the regular monthly sacred concert at the South Methodist church Sunday evening at 7:30, which would seem to indicate a particularly interesting program.

The guest artists will be Mrs. Laura Wheeler Ross, violinist, and Mrs. Mildred Godfrey Hall, harpist. They will be heard in solo numbers and with the chorus choir.

Miss Eleanor Willard, soprano soloist of the choir will sing Liszt's setting of the Twenty-third Psalm, accompanied by the harp. This is an unusually beautiful work and rarely given in this country.

Robert Gordon will sing with the choir "Go Forth Upon Thy Journey," from Elgar's Dream of Gerontius. There will also be selections from the works of Italian, Russian and American composers sung by the choir, and trios by violin, harp and organ.

EXPECT MANY TO HEAR INTERSCHOLASTIC "SING"

A large number of persons are expected to go to the High School Assembly hall tomorrow afternoon to listen to the first Central Connecticut High School Interscholastic Glee club singing championship contest ever held in Manchester. More than 400 voices will be heard during the two hour program which will start at 3 o'clock. Admission will be twenty-five cents, to go toward defraying expenses.

Six schools will compete for the honors for boys and girls respectively. They are Bristol, East Hartford, West Hartford, Meriden, Middletown and Manchester. Out of town judges will give the decision on a point basis without knowing the identity of the club rendering each selection. The contest number for the boys' glee clubs will be "Song of the Western Men" while the girls will sing "A Dream Boat Passes By." Each will also sing a selected number.

The Prince turned a complete somersault in the air, but was not injured.

SHOOTS GIRL; KILLS SELF

New York, April 12.—Because his advances were repulsed by Miss Anna Lustig, 28, Charles F. Pater, no. 32, shot and wounded her and then killed himself. The girl, whose jaw was fractured by the first bullet, will recover, it was said by physicians at Coney Island hospital today.

The shooting occurred in a parked car in "Lovers' Lane," Brooklyn.

"He tried to kiss me and I left the car," Miss Lustig told police. "Then he said he was going to end it all."

Request Denied

The executive committee decided not to grant a hearing upon the terms imposed by Dr. Moran and so notified him on December 5.

Campaign Portraits—The Story of Herbert Hoover

"Plain" Mr. Hoover

Mystery Stories, Fishing His Hobbies—Has Host of Jobs to Do and Does Them Well.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This, the first of four articles describing Secretary of Commerce Herbert Hoover, is the fourth in a series of Presidential Campaign Portraits written for The Herald and NEA Service by Robert Talley. The second article on Mr. Hoover will appear tomorrow.

By ROBERT TALLEY, NEA Service Writer.

Washington, April 12.—The world knows Secretary of Commerce Hoover, Food Administrator Hoover, Belgian Relief Commissioner Hoover, Flood Relief Director Hoover and a lot of other official Hoovers, but this story introduces plain Mr. Hoover.

Mr. Hoover, now out in the front as a presidential candidate, lives in a big house a few doors from the S street mansion of Woodrow Wilson, who was his neighbor for several years. He is 54, muscular, does not play golf, has two sons—Allen, a junior at Leland Stanford, and Herbert Hoover, Jr., taking a postgraduate course in business administration at Harvard. He has recently become a grandfather. Herbert Hoover III having arrived on the scene only a few months ago. His one hobby is fishing.

His wife, Mrs. Lou Henry Hoover, is also a Leland Stanford graduate and an accomplished linguist. She speaks a number of languages, including Chinese. They were college sweethearts and each is the only one the other ever had.

By day, Secretary Hoover sits behind a big, flat-topped, old-fashioned desk at the Department of Commerce Building, puffing on a pipe that has seen better days. By night, Mr. Hoover entertains intimate friends at his home (he codes formal social events whenever he can) or lies awake until past midnight reading detective stories.

George Akerson, Hoover's secretary, reveals that Hoover's favorite detective story author is S. S. Van Dine, whose famous serials, "The Benson Murder Case" and "The Canary Murder Case," appeared serially in his paper. Hoover also likes biography. He has read Emil Ludwig's works, and when Ludwig was in Washington recently they talked for a long time in Hoover's office.

As an organizer, a do-er and a go-getter, Hoover is a genius, but as a politician he is a poor success. It is hard to imagine him as a campaigner. He shakes hands limply, usually talks with his eyes on the floor or while marking tally on a pad, looks sullen but is merry by shy. If he ever slapped anybody on the back or laughed real loud, half his office force probably would die of the shock.

Hoover approaches every question with the analytical mind of an engineer. Statistics, facts and problems are his meat. Perhaps that is why he complains that most detective stories are dull because their so-called "mystery" plots are too easily fathomed by the reader.

Perhaps that is why, in addressing the Isaac Walton League, he said that there are caught in this country each year: "500,000-000 fish, divided amongst 120,000,000 people, which is not so much as you might think at first, and it includes the little ones as well, and each of us eat 1095 times a year."

Hoover is the busiest man in Washington and probably holds more important positions than any other man in the world. In addition to being secretary of commerce, he is president of the American Child Health Association; chairman of the American Relief Association Children's Fund; chairman of the Commission for Relief of Belgium, chairman of the St. Lawrence Waterway Commission; chairman of Better Homes in America; honorary president of the Isaac Walton League; member of the central committee of the American Red Cross and a trustee of Carnegie Institute and Stanford University.

In the past he has been president of the American Institute of Mining Engineers and has held dozens of other high positions, including that of chairman of the European Food Control and a member of the Allies' Supreme Economic Council and the World War Debt Commission.

down by the railroad bridge, of coasting down Cook's hill on sleds in icy winter, of catching rabbits in a figure-four trap and how, when fishing with a butcher string line and hooks that cost 10 for a dime, the boys used to spit on the bait for "good luck."

"And there never was a better cook than Aunt Millie," Hoover says. "I have since eaten presumably the very best food in the world as well as the worst, but I am able to say now that if all the cooks of Iowa are up to Aunt Millie's standard—she's a dear old lady now, far along in years—then the gourmets of the world should leave Paris for Iowa, at least for Cedar county."

Fishing is today Hoover's greatest hobby. Lots of week-ends he camps down on Chesapeake bay, a short drive from Washington. When the orphaned boy was 10, another uncle took him to Oregon by ship. It was a Quaker colony. A land boom later attracted the uncle to Salem and young Hoover worked in his real estate office there.

In Salem, young Hoover joined the Quaker church, and even today he still holds his "bright" (as the Quakers call it) and pays his dues there, although he attends a Quaker church in Washington.

Into the real estate office one day chanced a roving mining engineer—a sort of a Trader Horn, with an alluring story. Hoover listened and immediately he decided to become a mining engineer.

He had saved $200 and with this he set out for Leland Stanford University, then recently opened, to work his way through.

It has been said that at Stanford Hoover earned extra money by waiting on tables and taking care of babies of various professors, but he did neither of these things—although he did nearly every other kind of job that could be imagined.

He organized a system of collecting and delivering the students' laundry. He became an impresario in hiring lecturers and musicians to come from San Francisco and give concerts. He did clerical work in the college office as a third means of gaining revenue.

Once, it is recorded, Hoover and a student partner engaged Paderewski to give a concert. Paderewski's fee was $2,000. As the concert was drawing to a close, the two boys discovered to their horror that they had just $400 less than that amount in the box office. Neither could borrow a cent. They went to Paderewski and laid their predicament before him.

The great pianist was generous and probably amused. He told them to cut his commission, so that after all expenses had been paid the boys were able to realize a slight profit for themselves. It is said that gratitude for this kindly act was one of the reasons for Hoover's unusually energetic food relief work in Poland in the dark days right after the World War.

MIRALONE BY ANNE AUSTIN

THIS HAS HAPPENED SALLY FORD is "famed out" to CLEM CARSON the summer she is 16 and leaves the state...

since I am intrigued with the music of your voice—a very young and un-Turkish voice, if I may be permitted to say so—I shall be delighted to cross your little brown palm with silver, provided you will guarantee that your make-up does not rub off. I'm deplorably fluky.

ble, you know, child! But ah, at last you will find him—the man from whom you will not run away! Now, shall I read the future for you?

does himself rather well in cars, at the expense of the state—and a continuation of my extremely accurate reading of your future.

As they sit there, they are startled to hear Nita's voice in the darkness near them, addressing a man whom she calls Gus. Once in Capital City, Sally forgets her fear of detection and runs boldly about under the charming disguise of the crystal gazer.

When he spoke again, in his humorous drawl, with his bold black eyes twinkling and challenging her, his words could not have been heard by anyone 10 feet away.

Gus eyed him menacingly, suspiciously, but beamed when the easterner pressed a bill into his hands and withdrew to the outskirts of the crowd, where he evidently intended to listen to the speller's introduction of Princess Lalla.

But he did dare. He was a nonchalant, smiling, insolent figure, leaning on his gun as she went through the next performance. She pretended not to see him, but never for a moment, as she well knew, did his cold black eyes waver from their ironic but admiring contemplation of her enchanting little figure in purple satin trousers and green jacket.

Now GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV "Quite delicious, really!" the man with the cultured, eastern accent drawled, leaning more nonchalantly on his cane and twinkling his too wide, too bold black eyes at "Princess Lalla."

"But really now, I wouldn't say you're a freak, your highness. In fact, you're quite the most delicious little morsel I've seen since I left New York. If I were a Ziegfeld scout I assure you I'd be burbling your praises in a radio-gram or telephone, and the devil take the expense. Would you mind lifting that scrap of black lace that is tantalizing me most provokingly? I am tormented with the hope that your big eyes are really the purple pansies they appear to be through your veil."

"No!" He shook his head with humorous resignation as Sally shook her head in violent negation. "Well, well! One can't have everything, and really your arms and your adorable little hands and those Tanagra figurine body should be quite enough—as an appetizer. You don't happen to 'spell' the Hula dancer—the ancient but still hopeful lady who has just been exercising her hips for my benefit—do you? But I suppose that is too much to ask of Providence. Life is full of these bitter disappointments, these nagging, unsatisfied desires."

"Please!" Sally gasped, forgetting her carefully acquired accent which had been bequeathed her, by way of Mrs. Bybee, by the erstwhile "Princess Lalla," now in a hospital, minus her appendix, but still too weak to jeopardize Sally's job. "I—I'm not permitted to talk to the audience!" the New Yorker protested, raising a beautifully kept hand admonishingly. "Spare me! I'm always being met with signs like that in New York—in elevators, buses, whatnots—

But she told him nervously, making no effort to receive the blasé New Yorker by a tardy assumption of her "Turkish" accent. "But—oh, please go away! Don't tease me! You'll spoil the show if you make Smart-Aleck remarks on everything I say and do."

"Smart-Aleck?" The easterner raised his silky black brows, while his humorous but cruel mouth beneath a small, exact black mustache, twitched a rather rueful smile. "Child, that is the unkindest cut of all! If I had been reared west of Fifth Avenue or a little farther downtown I would undoubtedly phrase it as a nasty crack! But we'll let it pass."

"Please go away!" Sally pleaded breathlessly. "Why do you want to make fun of me? I have to earn my living somehow—"

"Do you?" he smiled, his brows going higher, while deep laugh wrinkles appeared suddenly in the clear olive of his lean cheeks. "Now I'm sure you should let me read the crystal for you, for it is obvious that you have not looked into the future at all!"

He cupped his slim, beautiful hands about the crystal, his back bending in an arch as graceful as the cat's back. The posture brought his face very near to hers, so that she saw the fine grain of his skin, caught a faint, indefinable but enchanting odor from his sleek dark hair, almost as dark as her own.

"Marvelous!" His voice became mockingly hushed and mysterious, as he pretended to gaze into the very heart of the crystal. "I see your whole past boiling away in this magic crystal—slightly flawed, though it is!"

"My past?" she shivered, forgetting that he was faking just as she did. "You've run away from home, from poverty," he went on in that mocking, too beautiful voice, his black eyes shining from the crystal. "Do girls in the middle west really say that still? I wouldn't have believed it! 'I'm not that kind of girl!' he repeated, laughing delightedly. "Of course you aren't, darling! No girl ever is! And heaven forbid that I should be the sort of man—follow, you say out here—that you evidently believe I am! Now that we understand each other, I again suggest supper, a long, cooling drive in the governor's choicest limousine—the old boy high as with strength or with speed and it may be below normal when the exercise is over. Breathing Rate The breathing rate tends to decrease after training by suitable exercises. Persons who have been in training as well as those not athletic increase the breathing rate when exercising but the trained group returns to the normal rate much sooner than those not trained.

All these effects of exercise are related to the development of the condition in athletes called "stale." The athlete who has "gone stale" is drowsy and without ambition when he wakes up in the morning even though he has had eight or nine hours of sleep. He loses his appetite, and his ability falls off rapidly. His face appears pinched and he is nervous and distrustful. Little things irritate him as they have not done previously.

Usually the cynic is the person who never lifts a finger to help anybody, who scolds a waiter if the rolls are hard and who scolds him if they're soft, blames the Pullman porter for a flat wheel, and bites his wife's head off for everything.

Now the professional cynic is no respecter of persons and he is a respecter of groups either. The chief objects of his scorn are the social club, the uplift society, and the fraternal organizations.

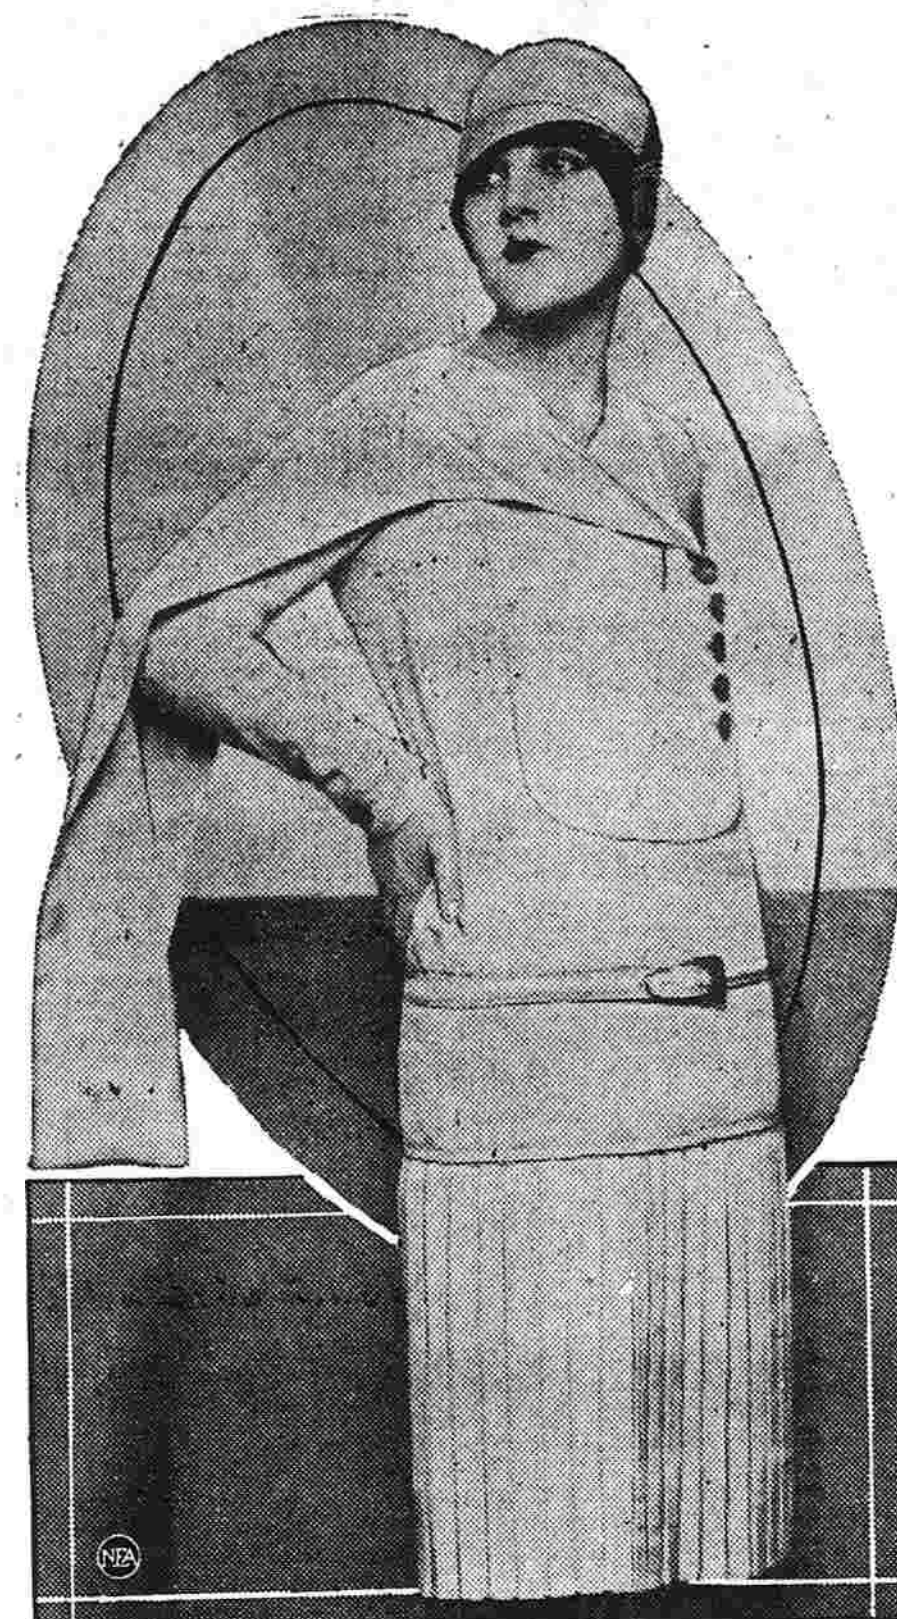

Doctors indicate that the third step involves four major divisions. These are the development of the large muscles of the body, the development of the special senses of the body, changes in habits leading to character building, and proper expression of the emotions. As has been emphasized previously in these columns the effects of exercise are to increase the working efficiency of the heart. Exercises of strength raise the blood pressure but it falls rapidly after the exercise is over. In exercises of speed the blood pressure rises less rapidly and returns to normal more slowly. In exercises of endurance the blood pressure does not rise as ringing speeches don't always ring the bell.

Some fraternal organizations take care of their sick and pay insurance after death. Women's organizations are looking after the sick, homeless, and suffering everywhere. The Children's Aid Society are doing their good deeds daily and other handsome things too numerous to mention. The Girl Scouts are not idle. The Salvation Army is bravely working without hope or desire for reward. Aid societies are doing more than their bit. They were the first to start homes for orphans and homeless girls! All these and more are doing their bit—a big bit. All except Mr. Cynic!

A NEW SPORTS SUIT

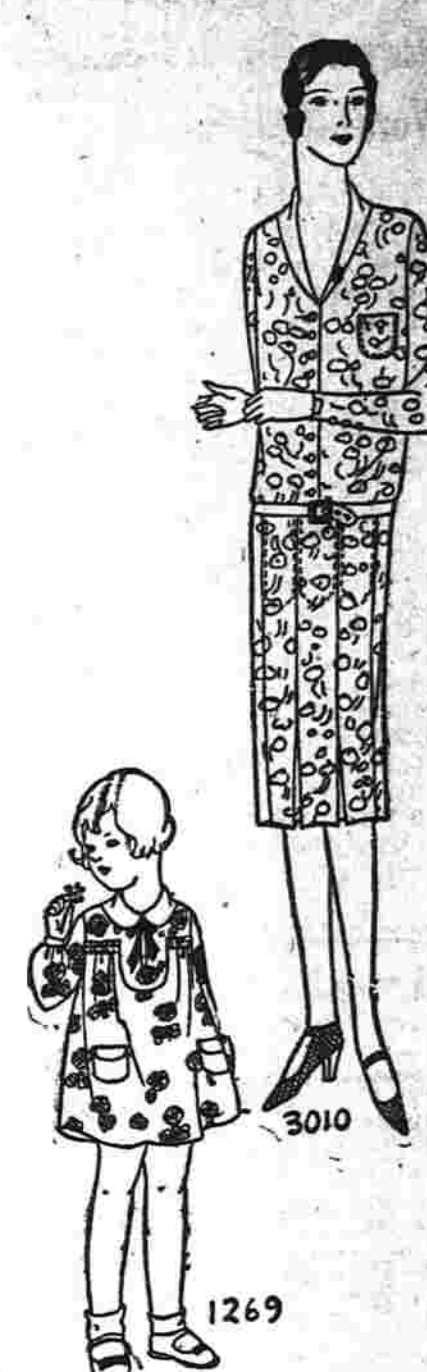

The jumper is of angora wool in lavender, with a tricky vestee in flat crepe that is cut in one piece to fashion a scarf that can be wound around the neck or tossed off the shoulder jauntily.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

Booth Tarkington despises short hair and believes that if women only knew how much they sacrificed in looks and feminine charm and general appeal to men by shearing their tresses, they would desert at once as I grow long and better looks sit on wife says so. Her hair is not bobbed. So many things could be said. First of all, no man, even a Booth Tarkington whose imagination makes his living, can ever know what women escaped when they cut their hair. He cannot know the agony of hairpins digging into the scalp, hats to be tried on, hats, hats, shampooing, that hairdressing which took more time than all the rest of one's toilet and which, when done, was often all wrong. Weighing these things, what woman gives a hoot whether she has lost "size" (to men) or not? We don't need that as badly as we once did.

"Ideal Fashions"

3010—Frocks of tailored genre introduce pleats at the front, sides or all around on the skirt, giving a subtle expression of width. This idea of indicating fullness has been expressed by three wide box-pleats in the front of the skirt on the frock of simple lines pictured here. It is designed for 36 and misses in sizes 14 to 18 years, 38 to 42 inches bust. Size 38 requires 3 1/2 yards 39-inch material. Price of pattern 15 cents.

MARYE and MOM Their Letters BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

Darling Mom: Please don't say anything to Mother Meredith about making Florence return home. We're having the time of our lives and there isn't anything to worry about because Florence realizes that Mickey is not for any individual woman. He belongs to the ladies en masse. But what if she did take a little flier in romance? A girl has to fall in love some time and I think it would be marvelous for her to have him in her memory when she's married to some earnest man whose greatest thrill in life is making the nineteen holes in par, to taking his boss to dinner, to love! It's simply impossible to be romantic with your husband. He'd think you were silly or wanted a new dress. And gosh what a shock it is to your esthetic feelings when the thrifter you married does it on Sunday mornings occasionally. Says constant shaving is painful. Every time I see Alan with a young beard I think of Norman—he was always so beautifully shaven. Of course I know that should he marry, his wife will suffer, no doubt, the same as I do but at least I can always remember him with a skin I loved to touch. If Florence gets a crush on Michello she'll be glad of it some day. It's really the chance of a lifetime if she can interest him because he's so different from other men. Think of the kick she'll get out of telling about "when I was mad over Michello." And from what Florence said of the evening she spent with him I don't wonder. She hardly knows what they ate; her mind was on her food he was so fascinating. He has a South Sea Islander servan and the food was brought in just one thing at a time. No bread or butter or water. She thinks they had some kind of small white fowl. Even the vegetables came in one by one. Michello told Florence it spoils the flavor of any food to eat it with another. The idea may be all right if you're making an evening of the dinner as they were. It took three hours to eat it, but Florence says she doesn't know where the time went. Any man who can fill three solid hours with fascination is worth falling in love with even if it is hopeless from the start. Don't you think so, Mom? Heaps of love, MARYE.

NERVE-MUSCLES CARRY MOST OF LOAD TODAY By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine. "Modern civilization has increased the use of the neuro-muscular system and minimized the use of the big muscles." The statement by a prominent doctor expresses the change in attitude of modern medicine toward the effects of exercise on health. Nowadays the three steps most emphasized for the prolongation of life are first, the detection and removal of any remediable defects; second, the correction of errors in hygiene and third, the promotion of good working of the various parts of the human body, including the mind. Home Page Editorial A Word in Babbitt's Favor By Olive Roberts Barton

We are becoming a nation of cynics. We stand by and smile mockingly at almost every decent, honest endeavor of other people who are trying to do something for the benefit of mankind. Usually the cynic is the person who never lifts a finger to help anybody, who scolds a waiter if the rolls are hard and who scolds him if they're soft, blames the Pullman porter for a flat wheel, and bites his wife's head off for everything. Now the professional cynic is no respecter of persons and he is a respecter of groups either. The chief objects of his scorn are the social club, the uplift society, and the fraternal organizations. How it delights him to call them Babbitts! very well. While this cynical gentleman is sitting at home smoking his selfish cigar or making grand slams at bridge, let us see what his Babbitts are doing. It is perhaps their weekly dinner night, the night on which each man would rather be at home with his wife and children, but which he sacrifices in order to cooperate with his fellow workers in some charitable or benevolent work. There is the clinic for crippled children to be discussed, the prize for a scholarship to be awarded, a poor family to be helped, a fellow member in distress. Each meeting brings up its own question. Some fraternal organizations take care of their sick and pay insurance after death. Women's organizations are looking after

By HENRY L. FARRELL. Sabin Carr's remarkable performance in setting a new world's record of 14 feet 1 inch for the pole vault and Lloyd Hahn's sensational half-mile in 1:51 2-5 were two of the outstanding features of an interesting season of winter sports.

PEPPY DANCERS TO ENTERTAIN PINSTERS AT BANQUET TONIGHT

Three Classy Vaudeville Acts Lasting 45 Minutes to Feature Herald League Celebration at Hotel Sheridan; Cups and $126 in Cash Prizes.

Three dandy vaudeville acts secured yesterday afternoon promises to make the Herald Bowling League banquet at the Hotel Sheridan tonight a most gay affair.

While many are looking forward to the cash prize they will receive for their efforts during the two round session of Manchester's most successful bowling league, the entertainment is expected to prove the evening's highlight.

It is expected that among other things, "Hammie" will call upon Howard Murphy to explain why he as town bowling champion failed to place among the first five men in the Herald league and also why he registered the "magnificent" score of 78 in his match with Bert Humphries.

The Warriors will read his report as treasurer of the league and then Tom Stowe, league secretary will present the prizes. A total of $126 dollars is to be given away in cash and also three loving cups.

The first act on the program will be supplied by "Billie" Miller, a popular cabaret artist with a decided sparkle. Her songs are said to be the embodiment of punch, pep and personality.

Next will be Dr. Gideon B. Scaries who impersonates the character of a country doctor in a most excruciatingly humorous manner. Last, but not least, is the act of the comedy duo, the "Two of a Kind" who have been entertaining at several leading New York cabarets.

London and are doubling here because of the early hour. The league officials feel they have been exceedingly fortunate to obtain their services.

BIRDIE THIS ONE! Birds have a way of getting to their nests quickly, especially when there are little birds to take care of.

THE RULES 1.—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par a given number of strokes.

Nice thing about spring is you are too lazy to worry about spring.

Put some money in the bank each week.

There's nothing equal to self-respect.

SENSE and NONSENSE

Puzzling, indeed! Ah, well do I remember Those happy days when we added a brand new member To our small family.

"He looks just like his father," Said one right off the bat; I laughed and said, "Oh bother, Are you real sure of that?"

And then I met another Who blithely said to me: "The picture of his mother, How proud you ought to be!"

'Twas really quite amusing How baby's looks would strike The folks, but quite confusing For we don't look alike.

Some men are so brave they will go and get married right while women are buying spring clothes.

Pop: Really I think you're foolish to become engaged. I was thirty-five when I thought of taking a wife.

Son: Say, Pop, that's different. I'm not thinking of taking anybody's wife.

Nothing is as good or bad as first reported.

"Come, come, my man, you have been looking around a long time without buying. What do you want?"

"Guess I want another floor-walker," said the gentleman addressed.

"I'm the owner of this outfit."

Mrs. Brown, ma says will you lend her a dozen eggs for a hen to sit on?"

"I didn't know you had a hen."

"We haven't, but we're borrowing one to sit on your eggs, and then, ma says, we'll have poultry of our own."

 Has it ever occurred to you that a good part of the indomitable energy and mental alertness of the American people, and their illimitable capacity for hard work and hard play, comes off their dining table?
 Medical science has long recognized that an utterly varied diet is the ideal diet and leads to the highest physical and mental development. Perhaps the best proof of this is the effect, on populations, of the opposite kind of diet—the restricted one.

Take for instance the rice eaters. An admirable food, rice—too little used in this country, perhaps. But in those countries where it has to bear the burden, almost exclusively, of sustaining the life of the masses of the people those masses get nowhere. They are merely pawns in the hands of classes and castes which live more diversely. They are pettified, anemic, ambitious.

Take the banana eaters of the Central and South American tropic—people who live well and exclusively on that fruit. Slack, puny boned, indifferent and inefficient dawdlers. Or exclusive fish eaters, like some of the Japanese islanders, with their scurvy and leprosy. And so on. Even parts of Europe, with too much cabbage and soup and not enough animal food, produce dull and phlegmatic peoples.

No where on earth are there so many good things to eat as in the United States. What we don't raise we import. The best of the world's food is at the door, for practically everybody. We build our systems on it, and we develop our nervous energy on it. So we are what we are. Good things to eat are infinitely important. That's why Pinehurst is so deeply interested in the absorbing business of providing them.
