LITTLE MONEY, LOTS OF WORK BOTHERS BOARD

Selectmen Get Plenty of Advice But Funds Are Low; Regular Meeting Last Night.

Storm water and bumpy roads gave the Board of Selectmen something to worry about last night when residents from different sections of the town complained about places they believed should be corrected.

The Selectmen face a lean year as far as revenue is concerned and a fat year in work that should be done. They are trying to keep ever item of expense at a minimum, and throughout the town complaints are bobbing up about road conditions, many residents are asking for sidewalks and others are urging the construction of storm water sewers.

The biggest kick in sight was registered by residents of the east side who want to have the so-called dry brook cleaned up. Domenic Belletti of Eldridge street representing his mother's interests spoke for the group and said that the property owners were of the opinion that an appropriation had once been made to take care of the condition. He made it plain that he was not there to criticize, but merely wanted to bring the subject before the board to see if something could be done.

Chairman of the board, Hyde explained that the Selectmen are contemplating doing all the storm sewer work in town over a period of years. The total cost will be $100,000 and unless the town meetings appropriate more than $10,000 each year it will take 10 years to complete the work. Mr. Hyde said that the town is taking care of the most urgent cases first.

The appropriation which was made several years ago for $50,000, and is now a lost appropriation. This does not mean that the money was spent for other things. It was not used simply because the Selectmen serving at the time could not arrive at an agreeable method of charging off the cost. Some thought the town should pay the whole cost, and others thought the cost should be assessed directly to the properties benefited.

Original Appropriation made several years ago for $50,000, and is now a lost appropriation. This does not mean that the money was spent for other things. It was not used simply because the Selectmen serving at the time could not arrive at an agreeable method of charging off the cost.

None of the property owners on Phelps Road which runs from Woodbridge street to Green Road in the north end were interested in a building line. None were present at the hearing and the lines proposed were adopted. They are 30 foot building and 20 foot veranda. A 10 foot line was established on the Woodbridge street corners. Michael Galvosa appeared in the interests of Elizabeth T. Galvosa of 43 Bissell street at the building and veranda line hearing for Emerson street which runs from West Center street to Summer street. He preferred a 10 foot line on the corner property. It was granted.

Louis Radding appeared before the board and asked for sidewalks in front of his property on Wadsworth street. Walks are already on the rest of the street and an extension is requested. The highway committee will investigate. Thomas Prentice, Garfield Keeney and Aime DeMars all of Keeney street complained about the road surface. They maintained that the street has not been cared for in a long time. They were of the belief that most of the property owners favored the re-establishment of the highway lines. A hearing will be called and then the street can be put in proper condition.

PEACHES AGAIN IN LIMELIGHT

Wife of Booking Agent Names Her as Co-respondent in a Divorce Suit.

New York, May 9.—Torpedoes today began exploding all down the divorce battlefront upon which are aligned that veteran of the courts, "Peaches" Heenan Brownling, the bewitching, wealthy Mrs. Katherine Allen, and Edgar F. Allen, theatrical booking agent.

In answer to the divorce suit, Mrs. Allen has begun against him, naming "Peaches" co-respondent. Allen, through counsel, announced he would bring a counter action within a day or so.

And from Philadelphia where she is appearing in the divorce suit, Mrs. Allen has begun to sue Mrs. Allen for slander.

Her suit accuses Mr. Allen and myself of misconduct at divers times from April 1, 1927, to the same date this year she said over the telephone. "The first time I ever met Mr. Allen was early in February this year. So far as I know, he and I never were in Chicago on the same date."

GOVERNMENT IN RUMANIA WINS OVER PEASANTS

Premier Defies Them and Rejects Demand That Cabinet Resign—March on Bucharest Fizzles Out.

Berlin, May 9.—Premier Bratianu's government in Rumania stood victorious today in the first test of strength with the Peasant Party which tried to force the cabinet's resignation. Advice from Bucharest said that the government press is openly proclaiming a "government victory."

Premier Bratianu is defying the Peasants and flatly rejected the demand that he and his ministers quit.

The Peasant march upon Bucharest from Alba Julia has failed. Rumanian government officials claim that the Peasant "Army" is disgruntled and without a leader. Many of the Peasants are said to be stranded near Alba Julia, where the National-Peasant convention was held Sunday.

Juliu Maniu, chief leader of the Peasant Party in Bucharest tried to negotiate with the government.

Refused Hearing. Advice from the Rumanian capital said the regents refused to give Maniu a hearing, but that he gave Maniu in private audience by Queen Marie.

Many arrests have been made in connection with the attempted march upon Bucharest by the Peasants.

The Bucharest government announced that drastic measures would be taken to prevent another anti-government mass meeting by Peasants. It announced that the press would be controlled to prevent the circulation of false reports.

Peasants' Plans. However, the Peasants are said to be planning to continue their fight against the Bratianu Cabinet through passive resistance. They may refuse to pay taxes as one part of the passive campaign.

Transylvania, the stronghold of the Peasants, is filled with troops and military police. The railroads are closely guarded. There are small groups of Peasants and workers marching along all the highways on their way to their homes.

SEE INSIDE JOB IN LOOTING SAFE OF TRUCK FIRM

Perrett & Glenney's Safe Opened and Robbed of $300; Believed Thief Was Familiar With Methods.

Three hundred dollars in currency was stolen from a safe in Perrett & Glenney's garage on Perrett Place, off Summit street, some time late Saturday night or early Sunday morning, it was learned today. Manchester police are working on the case and have clues which they think will lead to the ultimate arrest of the thief.

In the opinion of the police and both members of the trucking firm, William A. Perrett and Christopher Glenney, the crime was committed by someone very familiar with the garage. They term it "inside stuff". Although the robbery was committed some time during Saturday night, it was not discovered until Monday morning. The police were immediately notified and Lieutenant William Barron was assigned to the case.

Largely Collections. The money was put into the safe about 5 o'clock Saturday afternoon in two sacks. It included the returns which one of the firm's drivers, Herbert Wright of Charter Oak street, had collected on deliveries during the day for the National Biscuit Company of Hartford, for which Perrett & Glenney do considerable trucking. Sunday morning, Mr. Glenney found a sack containing some change on the floor in front of the safe.

Not realizing what had happened and thinking merely that some one had carelessly dropped the bag of change there, Mr. Glenney opened the safe which was locked and tossed the bag inside. It was not until the following morning that the robbery was discovered. What makes Mr. Glenney and Mr. Perrett believe that the money was stolen by some one well acquainted with the business habits of the concern, is the fact that, often as much as a thousand dollars had been kept in the safe on Saturday nights.

When the loss was discovered Monday morning, both money sacks were in the safe. One contained a bunch of checks in the middle of which was a twenty dollar bill. The other sack, containing a considerable sum in silver, was the one Mr. Glenney had found on the floor on Sunday. The total amount taken was slightly over $300. This is the first time in twenty years that any money has been taken from the safe, a member of the firm said today.

New Sewage Tank Here, and Inventor

Local Man Perfects Unique Sewer Tank

Charles R. Griffiths Invents Plan for Clean Disposal.

A sewage disposal system that returns water to rivers free from solid matters without the use of chemicals, that does its work with a minimum of odor and produces a possibly valuable fertilizing product has been perfected for the South Manchester Sanitary and Sewer district by Charles R. Griffiths, foreman of the outside labor department for Cheney Brothers.

The idea and first working model of the system are Mr. Griffiths. The details of construction are the work of the engineering department of Cheney Brothers. The expense of experiment has been born by the South Manchester Sanitary and Sewer district.

The new plant is located just east of the 12 filter beds which have been used as a disposal system by the district for a long period of years. The common sand and gravel filter proved unsatisfactorily in cleansing the product of the south end sewers, because they very rapidly became clogged with deposits of solid matter. Cheney Brothers and the sewer district combined to find another method of preventing the pollution of Hop Brook and consequently the Hockanum and Connecticut rivers.

Many sewage disposal systems can be purchased. However, they are all costly and involve in addition to the expense of installation considerable upkeep cost in that they require the constant application of chemical solutions. The smaller cities can little afford to install these costly tanks and have invariably depended upon common filter beds. These are being frowned upon by health authorities and the

CHINESE MAY COMBINE TO WAR AGAINST JAPS

Find Bottle Message Signed By "Princess"

Westerly, R. I., May 9.—Findings by a clam digger of a message in a wine bottle signed "Princess Lowenstein," caused much speculation today as to whether the trans-Atlantic airplane St. Raphael took a plunge into Long Island Sound last August 31st-Sept. 1.

Communication was being made with Great Britain to learn whether the 62-year-old English sports-woman and her flying companions, Lieut. Col. Frederick F. Minchin and Captain Leslie Hamilton carried a wine bottle in their plane. Struck water and sinking fast. Can see lights in distance. Think of Block Island. Good luck to Old Glory. Everything out of order now. Ship good for a few seconds yet.

(Signed) "Princess Lowenstein." Although the handwriting was that of an elderly person, the signature omitted the word "Arthur."

Service despatch book, although authorities who viewed it stated that it was possible that the note was the work of some "distorted practical joker."

The note read: "Captain Hamilton and Minchin had a quarrel over the course. Struck water and sinking fast. Can see lights in distance. Think of Block Island. Good luck to Old Glory. Everything out of order now. Ship good for a few seconds yet."

As Marshal Chang has been receiving support from Japan his sudden gesture of peace towards the Nationalists—the avowed foe of Japan—foreshadows developments of the utmost importance.

There are indications that the sudden outbreak of warfare between Japanese troops and the Nationalist army at Tsinan, Shantung, may have figured strongly in forcing Chang's decision. It is possible that, fearing aggressive military intervention in China by Japan, Chang is paying the way for war against Japan by the very Chinese people.

Denounced Nationalists. Until today Chang has consistently denounced the Nationalist movement, declaring it was fostered and supported by Communists. He openly proclaimed himself the unalterable foe of Communism and claimed he would drive all Communists—native and foreign—out of China.

Desultory fighting was still in progress today between Japanese and Nationalists at Tsinan.

The main body of Nationalist troops in the Shantung province, however, is moving northward to resume their drive towards Peking.

Northern troops north of Shantung, who have been barring the way to the capital, have been badly disorganized since their decisive defeat by the southerners at Shantung.

Japan has nearly 10,000 troops in Shantung and is preparing to send between 15,000 and 20,000 reinforcements.

WASHINGTON'S VIEWS. Washington, May 9.—Only a technicality of international law stands today between the military reality of war and the diplomatic fiction of peace in the Orient.

Neither China nor Japan has formally declared war, but 70,000 troops of the two powers are in and enroute to the Tsinan zone which has already reported casualties on both sides.

Rival Armies Asked to Forget Differences to Fight Common Foe—Virtual State of War Exists Now; Situation Critical—Japan Ready to Send 20,000 More Troops Into Action; Washington's Views.

A development in the Chinese situation, ranking in importance above the outbreak of warfare between the Japanese and the Chinese Nationalists, took place at Peking today when Marshal Chang, Tsu Lin, dictator of the Peking government and generalissimo of the northern armies, issued a manifesto announcing cessation of hostilities against the south.

Marshal Chang asked the Chinese people to unite to save the state. This is the first move towards a union of the warring factions since hostilities between the south and the north split the Chinese nation several years ago.

Instant Move. As Marshal Chang has been receiving support from Japan his sudden gesture of peace towards the Nationalists—the avowed foe of Japan—foreshadows developments of the utmost importance.

GORMAN ESTATE IS FINALLY SETTLED

Property in Court For Four Years Goes to Heirs in Three Parcels.

After four years in court, the estate of Patrick Gorman is to be distributed. Because of the interest that Judge William S. Hyde of the local probate court, has had in the case by representing the late Judge H. O. Bowers, who had been retained by one set of heirs, it was deemed necessary to call in J. White Summer of Bolton, judge of probate of the Andover district.

Judge Summer sat last Saturday to hear the final summary. There was no appearance indicating that there would be no objections.

On Saturday morning at 9 o'clock there will be a meeting of the distributors of the estate. E. J. Holl, R. J. Smith and Arthur Knoffa, who will make their distribution.

Three different groups will share in the estate which has been divided into three parts.

One parcel includes the property that faces on Main street, which includes the home of Mr. Gorman, the four-family white house that also stands on Main street, the bakery in the rear and also a house and two building lots, the latter facing on Linden street, and barns.

The second parcel takes in property on Oak street, starting on the west side of the driveway between Oak and Maple streets and extending to the corner of Oak and Cottage street, including frame buildings and also the block containing the quarters of the City Club and the houses on the corner.

The third parcel consists of houses on Cottage and Maple street and the land between.

The estate is valued at about $160,000. Contestants for part of the estate have, for a consideration, withdrawn their claims. The largest individual shares in the division will be Thomas Gorman and his sister, Etta, who now live in Atlantic City.

BURNED IN BRUSH FIRE

Willimantic, Conn., May 9.—James H. Aiken, 80, was lying in the point of death in St. Joseph's hospital here today as a result of burns he sustained while cutting brush on his farm in Chaplin late yesterday when he passed too close to a brush fire and his clothes ignited. Aiken died in terror and was caught by Albert Singleton, working nearby. Singleton beat out the fire in the man's clothes and brought him here.

As a result of the accident the brush fire spread and swept thirty acres of land before villagers working in the night could extinguish it.

"DEAD" GRAND-DADDY MEETS HIS FAMILY

Ramsey, N. H., May 9.—A "dead" grand-daddy was enjoying his return to life today at his home here, with his wife, children and grandchildren.

Lemuel H. Millbury was reported dead several weeks ago but yesterday he met his wife at the railroad station. He was getting off the train on his way home from Nicaragua; she was going to the office of her lawyer who was to settle up his estate. Mrs. Millbury fainted.

Mr. Millbury had been working at a mine in Nicaragua for some years. It was reported that he had been killed in a Sandino raid upon the mine.

JURY DISAGREES IN KNAPP CASE

Justice at Once Sets Date For Second Trial—To Be Held May 21.

Albany, N. Y., May 9.—Faced with a second trial on May 21 on the charge that she stole census money, former Secretary of State Florence E. S. Knapp New York's first woman official, today was reported in a state bordering on collapse.

After deliberating eight hours, the Supreme Court Jury before whom Mrs. Knapp had been on trial for a solid week, filed into the jury box just a few minutes past midnight last night and reported a disagreement.

Supreme Court Justice Stephen Callaghan set the second trial for May 21.

The woman, who at the height of her political power a few years ago had sought the Republican gubernatorial nomination, sank back into her chair, and for a moment it appeared she might faint. Her face turned ashen and her hands gripped the arms of her chair.

Comforted by Lawyers. P. C. Dugan and John J. Conway, her lawyers, leaned over, and whispered to her but she paid no attention. She stared at Justice Callaghan as if she could not believe the words she had just heard him utter.

Mrs. Knapp was not the only one shocked by Justice Callaghan's announcement that she would have to stand trial a second time on the charge that she stole a $2,876 census check issued in the name of her step-daughter, Clara Blanche Knapp, middle-aged Vermont college instructor. The defense lawyers as well as George Z. Medaille, who as special deputy attorney general prosecuted Mrs. Knapp, appeared greatly surprised.

"Nothing To Say." The woman who once filled one of the highest offices in the state government, today was reported in a state bordering on collapse.

Lieutenant Thomas Killed When His Airplane Crashes

Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., May 9.—Lieutenant Royal V. Thomas, U. S. Army reserve, who recently established a solo record for endurance flying, was killed today when his Bellanca monoplane, the Reliance, crashed at Teterboro Airport here.

A second man whose identity was not immediately determined was with Lieut. Thomas in the plane, and also was killed, it was said at the airport. The Reliance crashed on the grounds of the Teterboro Golf Club, which are across the flying field. At Teterboro Airport it was said Lieut. Thomas was flying a speed test with the plane, which was the same one in which he recently remained aloft alone more than 46 hours.

According to employees of Teterboro Airport, difficulty was being experienced in extricating the two bodies from the wreckage of the plane.

Police Purifying Paris Before Americans Arrive

Paris, May 9.—Prefect Chiappe of the Paris police department had a vigorous campaign under way today to purify Paris before the summer invasion of American tourists sets under way.

While the police cannot stop the sale of alcoholic drinks they have begun to purge the theater. A performance by Mile. Colette Andrieux, one of the most beautiful actresses on the Paris stage, was stopped by the police because they thought the actress did not wear enough clothing. Men and women who are held to be undesirable are being questioned by the police. Many have been warned to leave the city.

Unofficial Returns Give Watson Lead of 8,000—Results in Alabama.

Indianaapolis, Ind., May 9.—Unofficial returns received today from 2,040 of the state's 3,610 precincts in yesterday's primary election.

Reports received early today from 2,040 precincts gave Senator Watson a lead of about 8,000 votes over the secretary of commerce. The totals were: Watson, 103,466; Hoover, 95,446.

M. Burt Thurman, Watson manager, today claimed the state by 25,000 majority.

U. S. Senator Arthur R. Robinson this morning was running two to one over the total vote of his two opponents, Attorney General Arthur L. Gilho and former Judge Solon J. Carter, and probably was assured of reappointment.

Heavy early returns from the urban districts gave Hoover a comfortable lead over Watson, but shortly after midnight the senator's strength in the rural precincts began to be heard from sending him into the lead. Hoover swept the industrial district of northern Indiana, but was halted as he reached the agricultural plains of central and southern Indiana.

HOOVER GAINING. Indianapolis, May 9.—Oscar G. Foellinger, Indiana manager of Herbert Hoover's candidacy for the Republican nomination for president today refused to concede that United States Senator James E. Watson had defeated Hoover in the GYM EXHIBIT FINELY DONE Recreation Center Show Interests Large Audience; The Program.

Before an highly interested audience, the Recreation Center's gymnastic and dancing classes presented their annual exhibition last night at the School Street Rec. The program, which started at 8:15, lasted nearly two hours and during that course of time those present were treated to a most interesting and entertaining exhibition.

The work was demonstrative of that which has been done in the various classes during the winter months. Because of irregular attendance, of course, it is impossible to form a class that functions without a single error, but all things considered, they did remarkably well and the audience went home well pleased. The exhibition was in charge of Director Lewis Lloyd, Associate Director Miss Ruth M. Calhoun and Miss Dorothy W. Hardy. They received many compliments after the exhibition for their efforts.

The program opened with a pretty dance by three members of Miss Hardy's rhythmic class entitled, "Bouncing Betty." The trio were Jean Clarke, Jean Tournard and Marjorie Mosher. They wore pretty yellow dresses and carried vari-colored umbrellas. Eight girls from the intermediate class followed with the Highland Fling in typical Scottish manner and dress. They were Betty Werner, Phyllis McNiff, Rose Barabee, Dorothy Schrieber, Erna Suchy, Lillian Wirt, Ruth Martin and Mae Griswold.

Next came twenty well-trained members of Director Lloyd's regular gym class in a dumb-bell drill. The instructor put the class through its regular weekly program which was executed in splendid rhythm. The drill included a varied program of calisthenics. Those taking part were Roy Norris, Bill Brennan, Tude Vince, Harold Madden, Walter Harrison, Albert Dowd, Richard McLean, Everett Strange, Leonard Kingman, Bernard Sheridan, Patrick Fallon, William Roscoe, James Reardon, Anderson, Earl Rogers, Russell Crawford, Norbert House and Robert Sturgeon.

The Argentine Tango was very gracefully exhibited by four members of the women's dancing class. They were garbed in native costume. Doris Langdon had Mrs. M. Hale for her partner and Elizabeth Norton was the other "man". Her partner was Henrietta Kanehl.

The men's apparatus class gave an interesting exhibition on the horizontal bar under Director Lloyd's supervision. They were Tude Vince, Bernard Sheridan, James Reardon, Leonard Kingman, Everett Strange, Albert Dowd, Frank Busch and William Roscoe. This same group later gave exhibitions on the parallel bars and the side horse that were both interesting and entertaining.

The pyramid and tumbling exhibition by a group of twelve young girls from the women's gym class was one of the features of the program. They were dressed in clown costumes of various colors and performed remarkably well. Their best effort was an opening of a rose bud. The class went through a program of several numbers without any commands save a whistle blown by Miss Calhoun.

The tumblers were Eugenia Bycholski, Henrietta Clulow, Marjorie Finnegan, Olive Finnegan, Anne Scanton, Viola Shearer, Martha Blatter, Anna Wolfrom, Beatrice Sweeney, Elizabeth Norton, Lois Wilcox and Henrietta Kanehl. The parade of the wooden soldiers was cleverly executed by four members of the advanced girls dancing class, Ruth Bissell, Laura Bissell, Zita Brennan and Bernice Campbell. They wore red uniforms with black military caps and carried swords. Six members of the women's dancing class gave an interesting dance number, "Reuben Taps" in appropriate costumes. They were Mrs. W. R. Martin, Mrs. M. Hale, Henrietta Kanehl, Beatrice Sweeney, Elizabeth Norton and Doris Langdon.

The program was brought to a conclusion by a wand drill by twenty members of the women's gym class under the direction of Miss Calhoun. Without a single command, the group went through a large number of stunts with scarcely a miss. They were headed bands on their heads to give a light effect to the exhibition which was performed with most of the lights out. Those taking part were Eugenia Bycholski, Henrietta Clulow, Marjorie Finnegan, Olive Finnegan, Mrs. Alfred Grezel, Mrs. Hugo Kohls, Mrs. Anna Mallon, Mrs. Herbert Martin, Flora Nelson, Anne Scanton, Viola Shearer, Lillian Sippano, Martha Blatter, Lillian Sippano, Mrs. A. W. Hayes, Olive Irons, Mary Litter, Mary Hillery and Mrs. Louis Rohan.

Mrs. Dorothy Keeney and Miss Henrietta Kanehl furnished the piano accompaniment for the dance and drill numbers. Many persons viewed the exhibition of handcraft work in the ladies' room on the main floor after the exhibition. This work was done by women members of the West Side Rec.

ENTERTAINS PUPILS

Mrs. Carrie Taylor entertained her older class of piano pupils at her home on Woodbridge street yesterday from 5 to 9 o'clock, in the form of a grandmother's tea. The table was laden with good things such as grandmother used to make, with a centerpiece of pink roses. Mrs. Taylor was gowned in dark blue satin. Reminiscences of bygone days and old songs and musical selections passed the time pleasantly and quickly. The pupils bade their teacher good-by with many expressions of appreciation of the party.

AGAINST NAVAL BILL

Kansas City, Mo., May 9.—The general conference of the Methodist church in session today adopted a resolution presented by their committee on the state of the President to withhold their support of the naval bill now pending before the Senate looking toward the laying down of core cruisers being the fiscal year ending June, 1928.

The conference instructed that a copy of the resolution be forwarded to the President and Senate. It was read by Dr. Daniel L. Marsh, president of Boston University.

The resolution was adopted only after considerable debate.

CAR SKIDS, MAN HURT

Norwalk, Conn., May 9.—Mrs. Thomas Cooke, of 15 Culvert street, New London, threw on her brakes while going through Greens Farms today, her car skidded 130 feet and hit a car driven by Raymond Lavale, of 2715 Main street, Bridgeport. Then Mrs. Cooke's car turned over twice, struck a tree and was demolished.

Her husband was seriously hurt and taken to Norwalk hospital. Mrs. Cooke was taken there also but was not seriously injured. Lieut. Frank Wirtell, of the Westport state police barracks, investigated and announced he would secure a warrant for Mrs. Cooke's arrest for reckless driving.

TWO BIG FEATURES AT STATE TOMORROW

"Streets of Shanghai" and "Bachelor's Paradise" Scheduled—"Old Ironsides" Tonight. Another splendid double feature program is due to arrive at the State Theatre tomorrow for a two-day engagement. Both attractions are of exceptional value in the way of entertainment, and promise unusual thrills and comedy. "Streets of Shanghai," a dramatic and thrilling story of the mystic city of the Orient, will be the first feature. Kenneth Harlan is seen in the stellar role. It is a picture production that will keep an audience on the qui vive from the very start to the fast-moving and dramatic finish. The story involves a pretty American Mission Teacher and a handsome young Marine. Their many hair-raising adventures in the dark underground passages of the ancient Chinese city are among the most outstanding that have ever reached the screen. "Streets of Shanghai," adapted from the well-known story by John Francis Natford. Pauline Starke, Margaret Livingston and Eddie Gribbon are seen in the big supporting cast. The companion-feature is "Bachelor's Paradise," a sparkling comedy-drama of domestic problems. Tonight marks the final opportunity for Manchester movie fans to see "Old Ironsides," the big film triumph of the year. Since its opening at the State, this gigantic production has created a wide interest and another capacity audience is expected next tonight. OUR TREES

ELM A VALUABLE WOOD According to Norse mythology, Odin, the god of heaven, made the first woman from a branch of the elm tree. With branches spreading sometimes 150 feet the elm makes a particularly good shade tree. The American or common elm has the widest range, excels all others in height and beauty. Slippery elm, beloved by country children for its fragrant bark which they chew, and the rock elm are also important species. Elm is a valuable wood because of its strength, fine bending qualities and ability to stand rough usage. The principal use of elm in the past has been in the manufacture of slack cooperage and baskets. It is also extensively used in the vehicle industry, being well fitted for the frames of bodies and for top bows of both automobiles and wagons. Although elm is becoming scarcer, a fairly constant, although probably diminishing supply, is assured for a long time because of the wide range of the different species and the fact that they form an appreciable percentage of the mixed hardwood stands in the eastern United States. The elms as a whole grow rather rapidly. William Penn made his famous treaty with the Indians beneath the shade of a beautiful elm in Philadelphia. Washington took command of the American army at Cambridge, Mass., under an elm. The Burgoyne Elm at Albany, N. Y., was planted the day Burgoyne was brought to Albany a prisoner.

Picking Prince For Belgian Princess Hard Job For Royal Match Makers

Brussels.—Who is going to win the hand of Belgium's Crown Princess? This is the question that is bothering many of the royal heads these days.

Princess Marie Jose herself, who will be twenty-two years old next August forth, does not seem to be in a great hurry to change her single state of royal happiness. There has been some little talk of marrying her to Olaf, Crown Prince of Norway, but there is the same serious religious problem which arose in the case of her elder brother, Leopold, when he married the Protestant Princess Astrid, much against the wishes of the church.

Prince Umberto, son of the king of Italy, seems to be a more favorable party, and their betrothal has been announced and then denied as many times as the fair princess has golden hair on her head. They walked together last autumn at the marriage ceremony of Princess Anne de France with the Duc de Poulles, and made a handsome looking couple both of them very tall.

Speaks Italian. Moreover, Marie Jose speaks Italian as well as Umberto, himself. At an early age she spent several years in a Catholic convent at Milan, frequented by the daughters of the gentry of Milan and the North of Italy. Among them was the eldest daughter of Mussolini. Later, from time to time, the princess spent long summer holidays in Italy, continuing to perfect herself in pure Tuscan for which she may some day have great need.

But Prince Umberto appears to be in no great rush to settle down. And it is very difficult to know just how Marie Jose feels about the matter. Rarely does she express her sentiments, even to her immediate family and her face never betrays her heart. One is inclined, however, to feel that her silence means consent, for she has a very strong mind of her own and members of the inner Court circles affirm that, if ever, unfortunately, she should fall in love with a plain young man, bearing no relation to royalty, she would be capable of going against all prejudice and marrying the choice of her own heart.

The youngest of three children, she has always had two elder brothers, Prince Leopold and Prince Charles, to cater to her wishes. She is also the "enfant cherie" of her father, King Albert, who has never ceased to pet her and is utterly incapable of refusing what she desires. He calls her his "little rogue" and, as a matter of fact, from her earliest childhood, she has shown great delight in playing pranks on the members of her family, particularly with her brother, Prince Charles.

A Little Tyrant. Before the world, however, Marie

New York, May 9.—Manhattan snap-shots... The sad-faced young Israelite who spends his noon hour and after-work leisure parading City Hall Square wearing a sandwich man's sign which calls upon the world to halt war. When his parade is ended and his circulars have been distributed he returns to the little haberdashery store where he earns his livelihood. In the Wall Street belt they call him "the Wandering Jew." It seems he got a taste of warfare during the "big war." One day he "felt a call" however one does that—which bade him spread to the world the peace message of the simple man of Nazareth. And so he goes daily among the bums and the lunchers on the park benches, taking his message. Ironically enough, he passes within a stone's toss of a street corner army recruiting station... there's a five-year-old youngster they call the "singing kid".... His repertoire of selections is headed by "Show Me the Way to Go Home."... He has found that when he warbles them pennies and nickles come his way. This discovery causes him to play return engagements. He's quite a pet of the street crowds, thanks to his red hair and little blue denim overalls.... And there's the lane of cherry blossoms that now nod their fragrant boughs over the Central Park driveway. The countryside may have its apple blossomed open fields, but Manhattan boasts once a year of its great rural stretch between 70th and 79th streets on Fifth avenue.... Clive Weed, the artist, shooting pool at the Players' Club.... And Francine Larrimore, the actress, in a smart new brown outfit at the Colony Club.... The Colony Club, by the way, is where they have the best French cooking in the world, including France.... But it costs you $2 just to sit down.... And after getting the check, scribbles like a madman to be supported when they stand up.... But still, all the "important people" go there.... Bertha M. Clay is still a best seller in a Fifth Avenue 5 and 10 cent store.... And "juice harp" are displayed in a Broadway window. Fritz Scheff playing the role of a program seller at the Lamb's Club show.... And the circus has left town.... Saw Courtney Riley Cooper, who writes tales about the "big tops," standing sadly by as they packed up.... This was a six cirque year in Manhattan, they out his "St. Louis Blues" number for a couple of hundred dollars. Someone has probably made a fortune from it—but not Handy. Oh yes, and the college boys from Yale, Harvard and way colleges have been cutting up in the Broadway resorts the past week.... And they smash nearly a hundred gutters a week in a comedy act of a Broadway musical comedy.... The drama critics are starting for Europe, thus sounding the knell of the drama season.... And our guess is that "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" will get the Pulitzer prize.... Which will be the first time this committee ever gave the award to a book that everybody had read already, anyway.

HEBRON

Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Robinson, W. C. Robinson, and Miss Helen H. Robinson were present at the semi-annual convention of the Willimantic Christian Endeavor Union, held in Willimantic. Services at the Center Congregational Church will begin at 11 o'clock, daylight saving time (11 o'clock standard time) through the daylight saving season, beginning with next Sunday. There has so far been no change decided upon in the Christian Endeavor service held Sunday evenings. H. Clinton Porter was leader at the Sunday evening Christian Endeavor service, at the center Congregational church. The Bible class taught by the pastor, the Rev. John Deeter, followed. Sunday was a fine day and brought much motoring over the federal and state roads. No road signs, regulating speed through the center, have been placed on the roads and the cars speed through the village at an alarming rate in many instances. It is said that these signs will soon be put in place but in the meantime lives of children and others using the roads to walk on are seriously endangered. Miss C. E. Kellogg has returned from a few days spent in Hartford where she attended the 80th birthday celebration of F. Clarence Bissell, a former resident of this place and a former organist at St. Peter's church. The party was also attended by Mrs. Charlotte Phelps, and Mr. and Mrs. William J. Vane of Hartford, also former Hebronites. A steel pole has been put in place at the Center School on Hebron Green, as a flag staff. Charles A. Pondston and daughter, Miss Marie Pondston of Norwich, also Miss Rose Whately of Hartford, a teacher at the Seymour school, spent a day here recently fishing in Fawn Brook, as guests of Miss Florence E. Smith. They caught a good supply of trout and enjoyed a dinner cooked out of doors in picnic style. Miss Marjorie Martin of Dalton, Mass., spent the week-end at the home of her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. T. D. Martin, who are spending a week's vacation at their home. Mr. and Mrs. Shelton Hubbard motored from New Rochelle, N. Y., Sunday and spent the week-end with his mother Mrs. Bertha Hubbard. Miss Doris Hutchinson of Manchester is visiting her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Hutchinson. Ralph Carpenter of Hartford and Byron Lord of Marlborough visited Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Lyman Sunday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Post and J. Banks Jones attended the funeral of Mrs. A. H. Fish at her late home in Manchester, Tuesday afternoon. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Dennison of Westerly, R. I., were Sunday visitors at Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Foote's. The Ladies' Aid society will meet with Mrs. J. B. Jones Wednesday afternoon. At that time a box of clothing will be packed to be sent to Atlanta, Ga., for the poor people. The Hebron branch of the W. C. T. U. will hold a meeting at Mrs. C. Daniel Way's Thursday afternoon. Mrs. A. H. Foote of Colchester was a recent visitor at Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Foote's. Fred Howard who has been employed at the Prentiss farm for several years is leaving and a Mr. Owen of Glastonbury is to have charge of the farm. Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Foote and Edward Smith attended a meeting of the State Board of Education, regarding state aid for the smaller towns, in Willimantic Monday morning. Messrs. Foote and Smith representing the Hebron school board. Mrs. Clara Hamner of Wethersfield recently came to the Wells-Way homestead for the summer. William Zelensky from Willimantic visited his sister Mrs. A. C. Foote and family Sunday afternoon. There will be a Well Child Conference under the auspices of the State Board of Health at the local hall Wednesday afternoon. There was a good attendance at the Christian Endeavor service Sunday evening; Robert E. Foote was the leader. The topic for discussion was "How to choose a life work." Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hills plans to go, this week, to her cottage at the Willimantic Camp Grounds for the summer. Norman Lyman of Hartford spent the week-end with his parents Mr. and Mrs. John Lyman.

16 YEAR OLD BOY MAY COMPETE FOR THE DAVIS TROPHY

Wilbur Coen, Jr., of Kansas City Has Beaten All But Tilden in Preliminaries.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, May 9.—It is barely possible that a high school boy, not yet sixteen and just out of half-plum pants will be one of three Americans to be sent out on a hostile foreign court to play for the Davis Cup in Europe. It was admitted today at the headquarters of the United States Lawn Tennis Association. All it appeared, that will be necessary for Wilbur Coen, Jr., of Kansas City, to achieve this distinction—without parallel in the long history of tennis—is for America to survive its intervening matches and for Coen to beat Johnny Hennessey or George M. Gott, Jr., or both in the impending team trials at St. Louis.

In other words, there will be no runaround this time if Coen repeats his record of the original team trials at Augusta, Ga., just before the first round match with Mexico. His performance on that occasion was second only to Tilden's, yet the committee took perhaps undue account of his extreme youth and failed to name him for the team.

His Record

The record in question included defeat of Johnny Doeg, Arnold Jones and Ed Chandler and the loss of a tempestuous five-set match to Tilden himself. Hennessey, of course, was playing great tennis on his own account at the time and his wider experience won him the odd singles position, although it is questionable whether the choice ever really narrowed down to an issue between Hennessey and Coen.

Perhaps, however, the St. Louis trials will be so arranged as to bring about a meeting between the pair and, in this way, definitely remove from the committee's conscience any lingering doubt as to whether it might be giving a worthy candidate the Humpty Dumpty just because he didn't happen to be born soon enough.

If He Repeats

"If Coen repeats his Augusta performances in facing men like Hennessey and Gott, I don't see how he can be kept out of the singles," was the summation of a tennis official, who, however, made the point clear that he wouldn't and couldn't speak for the entire Davis Cup committee. "Coen has everything, except experience, and it is a question in my mind whether this is worth anything in comparison with results. What we want to do, primarily, is win back the Davis Cup if we can. The best way to do this is to play the men who show to advantage, regardless of age."

WEATHER DELAYS HOP

Seville, Spain, May 9.—Unfavorable weather today again prevented Captain Jimenez and Captain Iglesias, Spanish aviators, from starting on their attempt to set a new long distance flying record. The hop-off was tentatively set for five p. m. Because of government opposition to a flight across the Atlantic, the flyers have given their word not to attempt to fly to Havana as they originally planned. It is believed they will attempt to fly to Karachi, India.

In Oregon is a man who can chew fifty sticks of gum at one time and play a cornet. Pshaw! We'll bet he can't even sit on a soapbox while swimming in the English channel and eat fifty flapjacks and drink 100 cups of coffee on the way!

CAMP WOODSTOCK IS BOYS' PARADISE

Real Back to Nature Movement Enacted When Youngsters Attend Y Camp.

An important new educational policy of Camp Woodstock, the boys camp of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A., is contained in an announcement being sent out by L. Edwin Hill, director of the camp, to all previous and prospective campers and their parents.

"Several years ago Dr. G. Stanley Hall, the eminent authority on adolescence, penned this thought: 'The ideal of life for a boy is not in the city. He should know of animals, rivers, plants, and that great out-of-door life that lays for him the foundation of later years.'"

Angelo Patri writes that "Summer camp life is a bit of life in the open where children are in direct touch with nature; a place where they may listen to the silence of the stars, or see the trace of God's hand in a flower's petal."

We believe that Camp Woodstock is an ideal camp as judged by the standards of Dr. Hall and Professor Angelo Patri. Camp Woodstock has been described as "a veritable paradise" for at Camp Woodstock there are thousands of natural objects unspoiled by the hands of man—trees, flowers, birds, streams, animals, rocks.

And because we know that Camp Woodstock is one of Nature's undefiled treasure houses, we have allotted the best hours of the daily program to direct observation of the wonders of Nature. Each morning from nine to ten-thirty every boy in camp will be associated with an outdoor group actively engaged in examining the natural objects which abound at Camp Woodstock.

While the aims and objectives of the nature groups have been carefully worked out from an educational standpoint, we have been most concerned in making the learning activities as far removed from ordinary formal classroom procedures as day is from night. No special equipment or text of any kind is required excepting a pocket knife, a magnifying glass, and Camp Woodstock's own nature outline, which has been painstakingly prepared for Camp Woodstock by John C. Huden, an experienced teacher of natural science in both high school and college. Mr. Huden was ably assisted in preparing the outline by the Messrs. Donald Eddy and Plummer Wiley, veteran campers. All three of these men were last years, to take charge of nature groups. In passing it might be of interest to state that the entire program has been developed by Mr. Huden with the advice and guidance of Professor Clyde M. Hill of Yale University.

Boys who are interested in journalism will have a fine opportunity to get valuable editorial experience in connection with the Camp newspaper. It is also planned to develop and print our own snapshots at Camp this summer. The usual hobby activities, such as leather work, sheet metal work, copper work, and toymaking will be augmented by the development of a real camp museum in which the best pictures, rocks, toys, and other specimens will be displayed. Camp Woodstock is conducted for boys from June 27th to July 25th, and is open to any boy in Hartford, Tolland, and Windham counties.

YALE'S BAN ON AUTOS MUST BE SUPPORTED

College Paper Says Students Are Breaking Rule—Hard to Enforce It.

New Haven, Conn., May 9.—Use of forbidden automobiles by Yale students other than seniors who are permitted to have cars while in the university has reached such a point that Yale News today warned the student body that the rule must be supported "if the university authorities and city officials are not to abolish use of automobiles altogether."

The News points out that the enforcement of the rule against autos by lower class members has been made difficult when "a junior keeps his Packard in a small garage out on Whalley avenue, a sophomore leases his Buick in a coal shed down by the railroad tracks, and a freshman keeps his Ford half-way out to Hamden." Then the News says "It is difficult to enforce the ban even on those who keep their cars in the large garages down town."

It was announced this morning that Frank Walleto, well-known local baseball catcher, has been obtained to coach baseball among the girls at Cheney Brothers.

It is planned to form an inter-department league and to pick a representative team for Cheney Brothers from this circuit.

L. T. Wood, who sells ice and wood, gets Manchester people coming and going, this unsettled weather.

Several years ago Mr. Wood purchased considerable woodland in various parts of Bolton and Glastonbury. Much of the wood has been cut into saw logs and poles. The limbs and upper parts of the trees were cut into cord wood. The ice crop this year was not sufficient to keep his winter organization busy and has been utilized in drawing, sawing and piling the wood in the rear of his place of business on Bissell street. HOOVER IN INDIANA

Whether Herbert Hoover gets the 33 delegates of Indiana to the Republican national convention, or loses them by a narrow margin to Senator James E. Watson, as at this writing seems somewhat probable, the outcome of the Indiana primaries yesterday can be written down as a substantial victory for the secretary of commerce.

Attacking an enormously powerful machine, entrenched behind the most curious combination of Kluxism, Anti-Socialism and political gangism existing in the politics of any American state, Hoover has at least given the chieftain of this amalgamation a terrific battle and has demonstrated that among the unbossed and unmanaged people he is extraordinarily strong.

Even on the Watson group of politicians the Hoover strength cannot fail to have had a sobering effect. The candidacy of Senator Watson is, of course, a mere obstructionist device. No man in the country has less chance of becoming the Republican candidate for President than he. His contest was solely in the interest of a deadlock. Yet even politicians of the Watson school cannot afford to ignore the enthusiasms of very nearly half of their own party. And the vote in the primaries yesterday must serve as a warning that opposition to the obvious will of the party throughout the country must not be carried too far, even by an entrenched local leadership.

If the Indiana senator wishes to remain in the driver's seat in Indiana politics—and he assuredly does—he will probably go into communion with his better judgment on the question of using his narrow majority in the primaries to keep up the fight against Hoover, or climbing onto the band wagon. We should not be in the least surprised, in view of the surprisingly close primary results in the Hoosier state, if Indiana's 33 were to go to Hoover on the second ballot at Kansas City. Watson can read political signs even if not as quickly as some folks.

SHANTUNG

If a great conflict, with wide-spread consequences to the rest of the world, develops between China and Japan over the recent fighting in Shantung, the seeds of that disaster are to be found in the history of German aggressions far back before the World War.

Because two German missionaries were murdered in Shantung in 1897 the militant German empire demanded reparations. And so disproportionate were the demands to the international nature of the private crime that China was bullied at last into granting to Germany a substantially perpetual lease of the port of Kiaochow, with many mining and railroad rights in the entire district of Shantung—which is a vast country with a population approximately that of France, or almost a third of the United States.

Sedulously the Germans cultivated their opportunities—until the whole of Shantung was, to all intents and purposes, a mere protectorate of the German empire. Thirty millions of persons were practically deprived of their right of self-government and their national resources exploited by foreign profiteers, in payment for the lives of two individual intruders.

When the World War broke Japan, a nominal ally of the enemies of Germany, seized upon the opportunity to feather her own nest. She contributed little to the allies' side of the war, almost her only activity consisting of seizing Germany's possessions in Shantung and establishing herself there as that empire's successor.

One of the earliest features of the treaty of Versailles was the failure of the victorious powers to see that justice was done to China by restoring to her the full possession of her own Shantung territory. But there had been secret understandings entered into between Japan and the Western European powers in 1917 that Nippon should be supported in the retention of the violated province. A pretense of decency was set up by Japan's promising to make her stay in Shantung only temporary, and the treaty failed to create any more specific condition, though the protests of the Chinese were bitter.

Later, however, Japan, upon payment of 56,000,000 yen—about half that number of American dollars—by China, agreed to hand back to the latter country the whole of Shantung, including the Shantung railroad and various public buildings erected by Germans and Japanese. That was one of the achievements of the Washington conference in 1922 and was largely brought about by Charles Evans Hughes.

But Japan never has withdrawn from Shantung. Through one or another quibble she has always maintained troops there and plumed that the Province was her own special "sphere of influence."

Shantung is not only a populous region, it is a rich one—one of the richest in China. It lies on the road between Shanghai and Peking. It is sacred soil, having been the birthplace of Confucius. Its occupation by foreigners is, to the Chinese, like the occupation by foreigners of western New York, Ohio and Indiana would be to us.

The measure of justice which China has received at the hands of foreign powers is to be found in the balancing off of Shantung's cities, fields, mines and forests, to say nothing of her teeming millions, against the lives of two Germans.

No matter what the immediate circumstances that led to the shooting between Chinese and Japanese troops, and that threaten now to lead to a disastrous war, there, back in 1898, and continuing ever since, lies the nub of the trouble.

BLOODLESS REVOLT

The extraordinary political proceedings of the Rumanian peasants, which constitute something less than a revolution and something more than a protest, are likely soon to attract the close attention of the entire world. Two hundred thousand of them met in an enormous convention held in five parts in as many different Rumanian cities and demanded the retirement of the cabinet headed by Vintila Bratianu, member of a family which for fifty years has been the real ruler of the country. The first Jon Bratianu held the reins over the country for thirty years. The second Jon, his son, maintained the same iron sway for twenty more. When he died last November his son, Vintila, in turn took over the control of Rumania's destinies. Since the third Bratianu's succession to the premiership the country has been in a political turmoil.

The peasants want one of their own party, one Dr. Julio Maniu, as premier, and it is generally understood that it is part of the leaders' plan to restore the exiled Prince Carol to the throne in place of the little boy king, Michael. Demand for certain agrarian reforms lie back of the whole proceeding.

There is no talk of violence. But if the Bratianu government succeeds in maintaining itself in the face of the peasant opposition, it is likely to be confronted with a new kind of insurrection, with substantially the whole rural population—and that is in the great majority in Rumania—refusing to pay taxes.

Government cannot continue without income and it is impossible to fall an entire population. The outcome of the bloodless revolt will be watched with the closest interest.

LOWENSTEIN MESSAGE

The finding of a note in a bottle, apparently a message written by the Princess Lowenstein just before she went to her death somewhere in the Atlantic at the beginning of September last, when her plane disappeared while on a transatlantic flight, bears every mark of genuineness. If it is a hoax the person who perpetrated it is not fit to live among decent people; but it is doubtful if any mind so warped as to conceive of such a "joke" would be intelligent enough to carry it out so convincingly.

The letter, found by a fisherman on the beach at Watch Hill, would indicate that the princess and her two male companions, Hamilton and Minchin, came within a pitifully few miles of achieving their destination, as it expresses the belief that a light, in sight at the moment of the tragic fall of the plane, was off Block Island—a presumption supported by the locality where the bottle-borne message came ashore.

If the scrawled note shall later be identified as in the handwriting of PRINCESS Lowenstein, one at least of the sad mysteries of transatlantic flight will have been pretty well solved. "Captain Hamilton and Minchin had a quarrel over the course; struck water and sinking

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT Compiled by the CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(122) State Reformatory and Women's Farm.

In addition to the State prison at Wethersfield, the state maintains the Connecticut Reformatory at Cheshire and the Connecticut State Farm for Women at Niantic for criminals and misdemeanants.

The Connecticut Reformatory was opened for the reception of inmates in June, 1913. It is located on an elevated plateau two miles north from the center of Cheshire, the property containing about 500 acres of farm and woodland. The buildings of fireproof construction include an administration building, guard-house, cell-block containing 400 cells, hospital and several other buildings.

Last year there was a daily average of 275 inmates at the institution. The average number of officers and employes was 67. The average cost per inmate per week was $13.77. Expenditures for the institution amounted to $313,510, $213,035 being for maintenance, $12,792 for new construction and $87,683 for the industrial fund. Receipts from sales of products turned out by the inmates amounted to $132,922. The buildings and grounds of the institution are valued at $1,388,723.

The State Farm for Women was opened for the reception of inmates in July, 1918. About 700 acres of land are included in the property which with buildings is valued at $367,732. The daily average number of inmates last year was 120, while the average number of officers was 23. The average per capita cost was $14.69. Expenditures last year totaled $145,623, including $32,435 for new construction. Receipts from sales totaled $2,218.

fast"—the few words speak volumes. Where, of all positions into which human beings can get, could there be less room for quarrelling than in an airplane bound on such a desperate errand as this? Single-mindedness, absolute authority, unquestioning obedience to discipline are needed there if anywhere. Perhaps the prime secret of Lindbergh's marvelous success has lain in his playing a lone hand. There has never been any disputation in his plane.

KNAPP CASE

Disagreement of the jury in the case of Mrs. Florence Knapp, one-time New York secretary of state, who is charged with wastage of public funds and diversion of money to her own use and that of members of her family in connection with the taking of the state census in 1905, is about as near to a conviction as it seems possible to bring an unfaithful public official in the present state of the public morals.

There is not the remotest room for doubt that Mrs. Knapp's ideas as to her responsibility for proper use of the public money were utterly lax. If the testimony of her own stepdaughter is to be believed, there is no doubt that the laxity was criminal. But the jury, as has become the habit of juries in cases of malfeasance in office, could not in its entirety be brought to believe that testimony, or else some of its members were afflicted with the too common inability to regard an offense against a public treasury as an offense at all.

Our American juries can be quite stern in cases of ordinary burglars and stickup men. But when a case of public funds looting comes up they become smilingly tolerant. They are going to try Mrs. Knapp over again. The bookmakers would probably give better than even money. Acquittal against the field, next time.

WASHINGTON LETTER

What has become of our 1,800,000,000 acres of public lands? This is the third article in a series of six that helps to answer the question.

By RODNEY DUTCHER Washington, May 9.—In 1841 Congress passed the first general pre-emption law affecting the public lands. Only 160 acres, according to the law, could be pre-empted by one person. This was another attempt to give the average citizen a chance to establish a home or a farm.

But the system of using "dummy" settlers was worked harder and more large holdings were obtained by individuals and corporations. The same thing followed the Homestead Act of 1862, which gave away land to homesteaders, but that law actually benefited hundreds of thousands of bona fide settlers.

Meanwhile a new and unprecedented era of grab and corruption had sprung up in the administration of the public domain through the demands first of canal companies and later of the railroad promoters.

Congress gave millions of acres in land grants for canals, and money as well, much of which went into and remained in private pockets. Many of the grantee companies never bothered to build any canals once they had the land and the money.

Where swamp lands were given, as especially adapted for canal building, the canal companies frequently surveyed and seized rich mineral, timber and farm lands to which they had no legal right. This "swamp lands" game was played many times afterward, sometimes with the connivance of land office or other officials.

Sometimes a company might have nowhere near enough to start a railroad with, but yet enough to bribe a legislature into providing all the wherewithal to construct one.

Bribery was the order of the day. Standards of honor were low. In 1840 the Pennsylvania legislature discovered that the United States Bank had paid out $130,000 in bribes. Senator Daniel Webster, the great orator, one of the bank's staunchest defenders, had been receiving a regular retainer from the bank—and squawked when it was late in arriving!

Gustavus Myers, author of a "History of the Great American Fortunes," after an investigation, cited what he termed a few "of the many instances of the debauching of every legislature in the United States."

Between 1850 and 1872 Congress gave away 155,000,000 acres to railroad corporations, much of it under the pressure of persistent lobbying. This area is more than three-fourths as much land as the government has for sale today, and the acreage was infinitely more valuable.

In 1835 Commissioner Sparks of the general land office declared that railroad corporations had obtained land by fraud under cover of law and had overdrawn their legal quota by about 10,000,000 acres. Millions of acres were being held for speculation without payment of taxes. Piratical days, those! The cattlemen entered the picture with the passage of the Desert Land Laws which, because they failed to require land, enabled cattle syndicates to obtain enormous new areas. Often the cattlemen grabbed land without title, fenced it in and hired gunmen to chase intruders. In 1884 the acting commissioner of the general land office estimated that at least 1,000,000 acres had been illegally seized in the Arkansas Valley of Colorado.

Meanwhile the lumber companies were going after timber. The Stone and Timber Act of 1876 allowed sale of forest and mineral land at $2.50 an acre with a 160-acre limit per purchaser. The land was said to have been worth $100 an acre. Trainloads of "dummy" purchasers were rushed to the front and more great acres passed under syndicate control.

In 1908 Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock of Nebraska, then a representative, charged that $57,000,000 had been "stolen" in the preceding seven years under the Stone and Timber Act. He cited facts and figures to prove it.

In 1876 Congress had ordered certain lands sold in any amount to all comers for cash at $1.25 an acre. The government was getting from $10 to $20 an acre for coal lands at the time in some sections, but millions of acres of coal, iron and timber lands went under this sale. Eight million acres were sold in Alabama, Louisiana, Florida, Arkansas and Mississippi.

A congressional investigating committee appointed in 1883 reported:

"The present system of laws seems to invite fraud. You cannot turn to a single state paper where the subject is mentioned prior to 1883, from the message of the president to the report of the commissioner of the land office, but what is more, the 'fraud' in connection with the disposition of public lands is found."

NATIONAL MUSIC WEEK—MAY 6 to 12th

Give Your Boy His Chance to Learn

YOUR boy depends on you to equip him to meet the tasks that come with manhood. Of all musical instruments none is so closely allied with his material, social and moral progress as is the piano.

Above all, it will help your boy to become the man you want him to be, and some day he will look back and thank you.

The bonds of home life, now and in the years to come, are all important to your boy. The piano strengthens these ties because it is the heart-instrument of the American home. Look about you. Those homes where the making of music is a part of each day are the homes that are happiest.

Boys and girls are quick to learn to play the piano under the new and pleasant methods of study. Your boy will enjoy learning to play this way.

Come in during National Music Week and learn how to enjoy a piano in your home while you pay for it.

"Being a mother I know so well what the piano means to children. Every child should be brought in contact with music through the piano. The ability to play the piano is something that can never be taken away—with it go character, charm and all those things that a mother wants to see most in her children." Ernestine Schumann-Heink

Send your boy out into the world with the gift of music—music played by himself upon the most wonderful of all musical instruments, the piano. Open wide this portal that leads to character, clean-living and leadership. Give him a piano and let him learn to play it.

Through his teens, through his college years, through early manhood, in fact, throughout life, a knowledge of the piano will be an unflinching inspiration.

NEW INVENTIONS AID NAVIGATION BY AIR OR SEA

Indianapolis.—Two improvements that may revolutionize the science of navigation and make it possible for airplane or ship pilots to determine their exact positions in thirty seconds, regardless of the visibility of the horizon, have been worked out by Professor W. A. Cogshall, of the astronomy department of Indiana University.

Both of the devices have been patented, and one of them is already in course of production at the Gaertner Scientific Company of Chicago. Professor Cogshall is doing further experimental work with the second device.

Seeing The Horizon.
Since the sextant was first invented, centuries ago, it has always been necessary to see the horizon before the altitude of a sun or star could be determined and the exact position of the navigator located on a chart, according to Professor Cogshall.

Finding of this altitude is absolutely essential in determining any fixed position on the earth and Cogshall's invention makes the finding scientifically accurate and much more simple than the present methods. The horizon from the air and on the sea is very indefinite, even when the visibility is good, consequently the improvements will materially aid all navigators.

Mechanical Computing.
The instrument with which Professor Cogshall is still experimenting is for the mechanical selection of a spherical triangle which must be made to determine an exact position. After an observation has been made it is now necessary to consult a table of logarithms, which requires ten to twelve minutes by an expert mathematician, and requires extreme care while being done.

It is almost impossible to do in a speeding airplane. With the new inventions it will be possible to make the computations mechanically and with absolute accuracy in thirty seconds, Cogshall said.

STATE STUDENTS HONORED.
New Haven, Conn., May 9.—Three Connecticut students were today announced as having been elected to honor societies in Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University. Flappers Preferred In Business; Few Jobs Seek "Sedate Efficiency"

Chicago.—The average Mr. Business Man when he sets out to hire a stenographer, filing clerk or woman switchboard operator, wants "young and good-looking."
"No one over 25 need apply."
That short sentence has created a panic regarded of serious proportions among women of middle age in Chicago who must earn their own living.

Mrs. Minnie M. Chapman, general superintendent of the Woman's Church Federation Protective, addressing a large group of women at a recent session here, made the charge that the city's shrewdest irresponsibility of youth to the sedate efficiency of middle age in hiring women employees.

Charge Is Sustained.
A canvass of leading employment agencies and interviews with job-hunters corroborated Mrs. Chapman's charge. At a large agency conducted here by one of the largest makers of typewriters the woman in charge, middle-aged, said that all the women she sent out for prospective positions those "under 25" were the ones most readily accepted.

Coming in contact with thousands of women, old, middle-aged and young, the head of the employment bureau had an excellent opportunity to judge the needs of the modern business men and the women who apply for positions.

"Nine times out of ten I will send some silly little flapper with an ounce of brains in her head to a firm that I know from experience would not employ a capable woman and the flapper lands the job."

In Law Offices.
"Lawyers, as a rule, hire middle-aged women for their stenographers more than any other type of men. I have found. Contractors are not quite so particular. Business men past 50 years of age, if they are not silly and in their second childhood, usually wish capable women over 30 or 35 years of age."

"It's the young men, about 27 or so, recently promoted to a position where their boss lets them hire a stenographer that bother the life out of me for young and pretty girls."

"I have found that when a man has really complicated work to be done, such as in a law office with its difficult phraseology of words, he wants a good stenographer regardless of height, size, weight age or nationality."
"These days a stenographer truly must have 'it' to get a job."

LATIN AMERICA IS DESTINED FOR NEW DISTINCTION

Washington.—Latin America appears destined for a new distinction, that of providing the dean of the diplomatic corps in Washington, before the year is out.

Cable dispatches from London have revived the report current here from time to time in recent months of the prospective early retirement of Sir Esme Howard as British Ambassador to the United States. Heretofore these reports have suggested the transfer of Sir Esme to one of Britain's major diplomatic assignments in Europe, but the most recent hint is that he is to retire to private life when he leaves Washington.

On September 15, Sir Esme will become 65 years of age, the established age for retirement in the British diplomatic service. With such a brief interval until he would be eligible for retirement it is not within the realm of probability that he would be given a new assignment.

In Poor Health.
Ambassador Howard has not enjoyed the best of health the last year, although at the present time he appears to be in excellent physical condition, capable of actively carrying on for some time to come. It will be recalled, however, that he was ill for several weeks last summer while at the summer embassy on the Massachusetts North Shore. Sir Esme became dean of the diplomatic corps last summer, by virtue of the seniority of his tenure here as a major diplomat. He succeeded to the ranking position through retirement of Baron de Cartier, the former Belgian ambassador.

But for the fact that he resigned his post a few days ago as Ambassador from Argentina, because of differences with his government over policies promulgated at the Pan American Congress in Havana, Honorio Pueyrredon would be next in line as dean of the diplomats here.

With Pueyrredon's self-elimination, the next in order of seniority is Dr. Hernan Velarde, Ambassador from Peru. Dr. Velarde is now rounding out his fourth year here, having been accredited to the Washington government on March 24, 1924. With 14 nations maintaining missions here of embassy rank, this indicates how rapidly the diplomatic personnel is changing in striking contrast to the long tenure that marked the pre-war era.

Mexico Next.
If for any reason Dr. Velarde should not remain here long enough to inherit the post of dean, it still would go to a Latin American in all probability, the next in line being Senor Manuel G. Teles, the American Ambassador of Mexico, who assumed office February 24, 1925 after having served for some time as charge d'affaires.

During most of the 30 years since Mexico's elevation, Jules Jusserand, the former French Ambassador who spent 25 years in Washington as the corps dean. Since his retirement three years ago, three European ambassadors have successively headed the corps, Riano of Spain having followed Jusserand and preceded de Cartier and Howard. None of the early Latin American ambassadors remained long enough to establish the seniority to entitle them to the ranking honor, though de Cartier dued back as an ambassador only to 1919.

The elevation of a Latin American to this coveted rank cannot fail to have a salutary effect on diplomatic relations between the United States and its neighbors to the south.

Chicago is found to be in acute financial straits, with $13,300 in the treasury and more than $1,000,000 in obligations outstanding. It looks as if Mr. Thompson had better let his history go for a while and take up arithmetic.

What Dr. Caldwell Learned in 47 Years Practice

Dr. Caldwell watched the results of constipation for 47 years, and believed that no matter how careful people are of their health, diet and exercise, constipation will occur from time to time regardless of how much one tries to avoid it.

Of next importance, then, is how to treat it when it comes. Dr. Caldwell always was in favor of getting as close to nature as possible, hence his remedy for constipation, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is a mild vegetable compound. It can not harm the most delicate system and is not a habit forming preparation. Syrup Pepsin is pleasant-tasting, and youngsters love it. It does not gripe. Thousands of mothers have written us to that effect.

Dr. Caldwell did not approve of drastic physics and purges. He did not believe they were good for human beings to put into their system. In a practice of 47 years he never saw any reason for their use when a medicine like Syrup Pepsin will empty the bowels just as promptly, more cleanly and gently, without gripping and harm to the system.

Keep free from constipation! It robs your strength, hardens your arteries and brings on premature old age. Do not let a day go by without a bowel movement. Do not sit and hope, but go to a druggist and get one of the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Take the proper dose that night and by morning you will feel like a different person. Use Syrup Pepsin for yourself and members of the family in constipation, biliousness, sour and crampy stomach, bad breath, no appetite, headaches, and to break up fevers and colds. Always have a bottle in the house, and observe these three rules of health: Keep the head cool, the feet warm, the bowels open.

We would be glad to have you prove at our expense how much Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin can mean to you and yours. Just write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, and we will send you prepaid a FREE SAMPLE BOTTLE.—adv.

When A Girl Loves

© 1928 by NEA Service

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
NATHANIEL DANN, a struggling artist, gives a party at his Greenwich Village studio in honor of his fiancée, VIRGINIA, beautiful daughter and heiress of RICHARD BREWSTER, Wall Street financier.

NIEL's model, CHIRI, is jealous of VIRGINIA and tells him that he will spoil his career if he marries the wealthy girl who cannot appreciate his art. He tests VIRGINIA by showing her his studies in nude and then introduces her to the model, but her reaction is so wholesomely sweet that he is more in love than ever.

While the party is in progress, NIEL receives a phone message that VIRGINIA's father is found dead of heart failure. Her father's home, where she is prostrated with grief. At sight of the peculiarly tortured expression on the dead man's face, NIEL involuntarily asks the doctor, "Was your patient a natural death?"

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER II

DR. MEYERLING regarded Nathaniel with grave thoughtfulness before replying to his question.

Then he said quietly, "Why do you ask me that?"

Nathaniel hesitated just a second. "That look on his face," he began uncertainly, "sort of fearful and . . ."

"You are engaged to Miss Brewster, I believe?" Dr. Meyerling broke in. "Yes? Well, then I'll tell you that Mr. Brewster worried himself to death. I warned him often that it would come to this."

"What in the world did he have to worry about?" Nathaniel asked unbelievably.

"Money, young man; the thing that is at the bottom of most men's worries."

"I can't imagine Mr. Brewster in financial difficulties," Nathaniel remarked frankly, "but if it was as you say, could that have made him look as though he saw an assassin before him?"

"He did see an assassin. He saw Death, and this time he must have known that Death would be victorious."

"Still, I can't see why facing death could have marked him like that. Surely it must have been something more. I don't believe Mr. Brewster could have feared so greatly to die."

"He did not fear for himself, no, but he wanted to live so that the day when his daughter must learn that for years his fortune had been rapidly dwindling away would be postponed."

"His only relieving thought was that his daughter was going to marry a man he believed in," he told Nathaniel warmly and put a friendly hand on his shoulder.

"I think it would be advisable to have Mrs. Pike communicated with some of Miss Brewster's friends and get someone here as soon as possible," he went on, not waiting for Nathaniel to speak.

"I'll send in a nurse, but Miss Brewster will sleep for several hours. You'd better go home and get some rest. She will need you tomorrow."

Nathaniel remained until a friend of Virginia's appeared. He thought the girl looked incapable of comforting her; Mrs. Pike assured him that she was Virginia's closest friend.

Strange he hadn't met her before, Miss Dean? Then he remembered. She had been in Europe for two years, but Virginia often had talked about her. She wondered why Virginia cared for her. The attraction of opposites, perhaps, he told himself.

As he walked home, the many "Good night," Nathaniel muttered, and Chiri understood she could go to Fell Harkness or anywhere else she liked.

blocks uncounted, his heart ached with pity for Virginia. In his studio he took a stiff drink from a bottle that he found on a side table. The guests were gone, the butler, too.

When he put down the glass Nathaniel seemed to view his surroundings with a new meaning. The table was somewhat disordered and the once temptingly garnished patties and jellies were messy looking now. The orchids drooped and in the hollow stems of champagne glasses a pale liquid had lost its effervescent power. It seemed to symbolize the joy that had blossomed here, and died.

"My God," he cried sharply, and sank down with his head on the table. He felt for the moment that he and his guests had danced on a grave.

"Have a cigaret?" Nathaniel lifted his head.

"Why didn't you go with the others?" he demanded of the girl who stood there, proffering a package of cigarets.

"Guess you'd get into a funk. What was it, Niel? Is her heart dead?"

Nathaniel nodded. "Heart trouble."

"That's too bad for you. Now you'll have a rich wife instead of merely an heiress."

"No. Though it's going to be rough on Virginia, I won't have to play that role, Chiri. Mr. Brewster did not leave a fortune."

Chiri gasped. "Well, you found that out soon enough. She must be sure of your love to tell you."

"She—if you mean Virginia—didn't tell me. In fact, she doesn't know it yet; at least I believe she doesn't."

"Ah," Chiri breathed the word as though with its utterance she experienced an exhilarating emotion.

Quickly, through her scheming little head, had passed a new idea.

grief over what's happened to Miss Brewster?"

Nathaniel glanced at his watch. "It's almost morning now."

"Then I'll make the coffee before I go."

"Never mind . . ." Nathaniel feared she would want to stay to drink with him. But she surprised him by leaving as soon as she had the percolator going and sugar at his elbow.

As early as he dared he was at her apartment that morning and for the next few days he remained at her side as much as he was permitted to. She had not been told about the lawyer's financial troubles. He learned this from Dr. Meyerling, who had talked with Mr. Brewster's lawyer. The physician had advised against telling her until after her father's funeral.

Nathaniel dreaded the hour of discourse for her. Its coming so close on the shock of her great bereavement made him wonder if she could stand up under it. She was so pitifully near collapse as it was.

But he was to see a new side of Virginia's character when Mr. Gardner, the lawyer, informed her of the news in an excessively grave voice. Nathaniel had been rather astounded at her abandonment to grief as one expects only from less tortured persons. He had expected more self-control from her, but then, he reminded himself, her love for her father was not of the ordinary flimsy kind. They had been truly devoted to each other.

Nathaniel sensed the fact that Virginia's loss had terrified her. It was different now, however, when she learned that she had lost a fortune as well. It seemed rather to bewilder than to hurt her.

"But I can't understand," she murmured; "how can you say there is nothing left? We still have the house at Glen Cove and . . . daddy . . . never curtailed our expenses."

"He ruined himself to keep up appearances," Mr. Gardner explained bluntly. "All the property he inherited was heavily mortgaged long ago. Somehow he managed to keep the estate from being cleared until about three months ago. What he did with the money he obtained on it at that time I have not been able to discover. There are no receipts bills of any recent date. I fear, Miss Brewster, that there is an appalling number of accounts yet to be paid, and foreclosures on your property are sure to be immediate."

The man all but droned the words, doing his duty. He found it difficult, of course, but Virginia's attitude deceived him. She seemed so indifferent, except to Nathaniel, who sat close enough to watch her reactions coming and going in her grief-filled eyes.

Mr. Gardner suspected it was possible she possessed some means unknown to him. . . . ah, yes, the money her father had raised on the estate at Glen Cove. . . . But he thought that would not be like them.

Richard Brewster hadn't known how to brake the toboggan of habit on which he was riding to financial doom, but his lawyer knew that he would not have planned to cheat anyone to whom he owed money.

Nathaniel felt that his voice could have been softer, his manner more gentle, and he was infinitely glad when it was all over and he was alone with Virginia. He had something he considered very important to say to her before he left her this time. But he did not get to say it. They were interrupted by an unexpected caller whom Virginia would not refuse to see.

demand for an inexpensive efficient disposal system has become accentuated during the past decade.

It rather seems as though the Griffiths idea almost answers this demand. It is not as costly as most other plans. It requires but two men to take it up to a sewage disposal of four millions of gallons a day. No chemicals are used, and the water is cleaned to such an extent that the health authorities in this state have endorsed it, as a partial solution of their problem.

Visitors at Plant
 Sanitary engineers from cities and towns throughout Connecticut have inspected the new local plant and have expressed their approval of it. It is possible that many of them will recommend its installation in their respective communities. All of them who have visited the plant signed a guests' book provided for that purpose by the sewer district officials. Some of those who have signed the book are: Gerald Knight, sanitary engineer, of Passaic, N. J. who has been engaged to install the new Rockville system; B. P. Floyd, of the A. B. Thaw Construction Company, Boston, Mass.; John W. Raymond, of Metcalf and Eddy, engineers, of Boston, Mass.; Stuart Coburn, consulting engineer with Metcalf and Eddy; J. D. Colby, sanitary engineer of Cambridge, Mass.; Willis J. Snow of the Connecticut State Water Commission; William R. Copeland, engineer of the State Water Commission of Connecticut; C. D. Curtis, engineer of Naugatuck, Conn.; V. B. Clarke, consulting engineer of the city of Ansonia, Conn.; and Howard Dunbar of the State Department of Health of Connecticut; and Warren J. Scott, director of the bureau of sanitary engineering of the Connecticut State Department of Health.

Mr. Griffiths has received invitations to bid on construction jobs in cities as far west as Texas. Many of them have heard of his experiments through trade journals and are eager to install just such a plant because of the minimum of cost involved. The cities whose populations run from 25,000 to 50,000 seem most interested in such a plant.

The Theory
 Mr. Griffiths told a Herald representative who inspected the plant that he just "hit upon the idea and lay awake nights thinking it out." The theory upon which the operation of the cleansing tank is based is that the matter to be disposed must be kept from the sun so that it does not become septic. Suspended solids are allowed to drop to the bottom of the tank while the matter is quiet. Then the solution is quietly strained. The liquid which is discharged contains solid matter. It is colored, of course this being almost impossible to overcome because of the large amount of soluble dyestuff which gets into the water at the Cheney Brothers silk plant.

With the idea lurking in the back of his head that sewage must not be allowed to become septic, Mr. Griffiths went about drawing up plans for a tank that would assist of Stephen Hall, LaBerge, Geer and Hayden Griswold, of the Cheney engineering department plans were drawn up from the sketches Mr. Griffiths presented.

Frank Cheney, Jr., president of the South Manchester Sanitary and Sewer district, was shown a working model of the plant and he told Mr. Griffiths to go ahead and experiment further.

In Operation
 A larger experimental tank was constructed and it, too, convinced the engineer and sewer district officials that the Griffiths plan would work. Then the sewer district gave permission to construct the first tank of what would be a series should the plan prove practicable. The plans were drawn and the first tank is now operating on a ten-hour schedule cleansing but part of the matter to be disposed of daily. It is yet in the experimental stage as far as the sewer district is concerned, but chemical analyses conducted regularly at this tank comparative efficiency.

And now for a description of the tank itself and how it performs its duty. Herewith is a photograph of the tank. From the outside it looks like an ordinary swimming tank of concrete. A roof is now being constructed over it. Sewage enters the tank at one end and an incline at a rapid rate. Gates at the other end are closed and the huge rectangular suspended solids begin to drop to the bottom. The whole solution remains perfectly quiet. It is covered over so that neither the wind, sun, nor rain disturb it. After standing between an hour and a half and three hours, depending entirely upon the type of sewage to be cleansed, the gates are opened and the sewage gradually discharged. Here again Mr. Griffiths has overcome a great difficulty. None of the floating solids are allowed to touch the tank changes. The baffle plates, by keeping solids away from the screens, prevent the latter from being broken and also from being clogged with matter. Mr. Griffiths believes that this feature is the most important in obtaining the good results he does.

Is Filtered
 As the sewage matter has been standing in the tanks the heavier deposits have dropped to a basin whose bottom is considerably below the lower level of the straining screens. As the water flows out of the tank it passes over the deposit of sludge, going through an 80 mesh copper screen. Then it is pumped free of organic solids to the sand filter beds for a final cleansing before being deposited in the nearby stream.

The sludge which remains in the tank is not removed after each filling. It remains there and is washed out once in four or five days, depending upon the amount that has collected. Since this sludge is below the screens it interferes in no way with the flow of water from the tank. When ready to wash out the sludge the tank is completely emptied of water. Then the entering sewers are opened wide and the liquid flows rapidly in.

Cleaning Walls
 Gates below the sludge are opened and the solid matter is washed out by the sewage water through a separate pipe to a bed nearby. Thus all the solids are cleaned out without the use of additional water pressure. At regular intervals some of the cleansed water is pumped back to the tank and the walls are then washed free of any solid matter that has not been washed out with the sludge.

Thus the solids in the sewage are sent out of the tank by a different route than the liquids. The sludge, after being deposited in a gravel bed, is allowed to remain for a period of days. When it has thoroughly dried it is removed and deposited on ground near at hand for fertilizing purposes. Incidentally Mr. Griffiths is experimenting with this sludge in an effort to learn what will grow best when it has been used for fertilizer.

Filters Not Clogged
 The liquid which passes through the copper screens then passes into a long channel leading to the motor pumps. These pumps force the water to the series of filter beds which formerly cared for the district's sewage. Mr. Griffiths finds that the water pumped into these filter beds carries no solids whatsoever and the filter beds never become clogged as they did formerly. The water which leaves the beds for the river is not entirely free of coloring matter, this being impossible because of the dyes it contains.

Some material does gather on the screens as the water is filtering through. When the tank is empty one of the workmen at the plant washes the screens with a piece of apparatus Mr. Griffiths designed just for the purpose. It is a rectangular water pipe with fine holes punched on one side. The pipe affair is dropped along the screens and they are thoroughly washed. This prevents the clogging of the copper screens by any chance solid matter that might get by the floating baffle plates.

If the present tank is proved to be successful during other seasons and under all conditions it is the plan of South Manchester Sanitary Sewer district to bring forward proposals for the construction of enough tanks to take care of all their sewage. This will require five or six tanks it is estimated; at the present rate of flow and will involve a total expenditure of possibly $80,000.

District Capacity
 In inspecting the new sewage system some interesting figures are learned regarding disposal in the south end district. In 24 hours 4,000,000 gallons are deposited at the beds about a half mile northwest of the old Bunce schoolhouse on Olcott Street. Of this amount about 2,000,000 gallons come from the Cheney mills. The rest of the district, including the Rogers Paper Mills, produces about two million gallons daily. The pipe which conducts the sewage to the filtration plant is 30 inches in diameter. As a means of comparison the pipe which leads to the Eight district septic tank is but eight inches in diameter.

The new tank which has been used in the experiments holds 176,000 gallons of sewage. It is filled three times a day, thus taking care of 500,000 gallons in ten hours. When the plant is completed the tanks will be operated 24 hours daily and it is expected that two attendants will be able to handle the whole system easily. The sewage meter readings are made regularly in order to help the laboratories keep a close check on the plant.

Each automobile worker produces more than three times as much now as he did before the war.

BUSINESS REPORTS SHOW IMPROVEMENT

Auto, Steel and Building Industries Prosperous; Living Costs Are Lower.

New York, May 9.—Business conditions in the United States have shown improvement since the first of the year, particularly in the automobile, steel and building industries, according to monthly reports received by the National Industrial Conference Board from 2,000 manufacturers throughout the country.

Living costs are gradually declining, wages remain comparatively high, unemployment is disappearing and the purchasing power of the dollar is higher today than it has been for nearly five years, the board reports. The board is maintained by fifty national and state organizations for the purpose of exchanging information and experience and to provide a forum for discussion of matters of economic significance.

Food Cheaper
 Food, rent and clothing are cheaper. The people are living better; they have more luxuries than ever. Savings banks are doing a prosperous business. Savings in banks, building and loan association assets and life insurance premiums paid showed an increase in 1927 of 223 per cent per capita of population over 1914.

Measured by average living costs for the American wage earner, the dollar is worth, on the basis of living costs in March, this year, 62.1 cents in comparison with the pre-war dollar of July, 1914. It was lowest in July, 1920, when its buying power was 48.9 in comparison with the pre-war buying power.

Cost of Living
 The cost of living, according to the board's figures, is today at the lowest point since June, 1923. There has been a net decline in living costs of 21.2 per cent since July 1920, the peak of the post-war inflation period.

Rent and food have come down appreciably. Retail food prices were 21.1 per cent lower in March, this year than in July, 1920, and about 5.1-2 per cent lower than in March, 1926. Rents, for the country as a whole, averages 11.3 per cent lower than their 1924 peak and 6.8 per cent lower than in March last year.

Clothing prices today average a net decline of about 40 per cent from their peak in April, 1920. Coal prices averaged last winter 20 per cent less than at their peak in November, 1920. Gas and electricity have decreased 21 per cent since 1921, when those two items were at their peak.

Senator Fess, Republican keynote, was asked the other day what the issues in this election might be. The senator couldn't answer. He probably has been too busy working on his keynote speech to think about issues.

GIRL ALONE

BY ANNE AUSTIN "SAINT AND SINNER"

CHAPTER XLVIII
SALLY, crouching on the floor of her room, spread the crackling sheets of The Capital City Press, her eyes devouring the two-column picture of David Nash. Two lines of type above the photograph leaped out at her:

"Honored graduate of A. & M. inherits grandfather's farm."
He hadn't been injured or killed in an accident, he wasn't married! In a frenzy of relief and gratitude to the God she had just been accusing of deserting her, Sally Barr, who had been Sally Ford, bent her head until her lips rested on the lips of the photograph. And it was rather a pity that Arthur Van Horne, "connoisseur of kissing," was not there to see the passionate fervor of the kisses which the girl whom he had dismissed contemptuously was raining upon an unresponsive newspaper picture.

When at last she was calmer she read the short item through. It was the last paragraph that brought her to her feet, her slight body electric with sudden determination:

"Young Nash is living alone in the fine old farmhouse, and apparently is as capable in the kitchen as on the seat of a cultivator. He says his whole heart is in scientific farming, and that his only sweetheart is 'Sally,' a blue-ribbon better which he is grooming to break the world's butter-fat production record."

"David! Darling David!" She was laughing and crying at the same time. "He hasn't changed! He hasn't forgotten that we're half-married!"

Jerking open a drawer of her dressing table she caught sight of her face in the mirror, and her eyes widened with delight and surprise. Gone was the pinched, white, shame-stricken face, and in its place was beauty such as she had never dreamed she possessed. She turned away from the mirror, tremulous and abashed, for what she had to do would be easy. Her eyes tried to avoid the exquisite photograph of her mother that stood in its blue leather frame on the dressing table, but at last she snatched it up and carried it against her breast as she ran to her desk.

She felt that she was talking to End as she wrote, pleading for forgiveness from those dreaming, misty, cornflower-blue eyes:

"Mother, darling: I'm running away, to go to David. Please don't try to stop me or bring me back. For I'll have to run away again if you do. I'm going to marry David because I love him with all my heart and because he is the only man I could ever marry without causing you shame. He already knows the truth, and it made no difference in his love for me. You know how it was with Grant Proctor. You said yourself that if I told him, he would not want to marry me. And I could never marry a man without first telling him the truth. Arthur Van Vorne knew and wanted me to be his mistress. He told me today. He did not think I was good enough to be his wife. It would always be the same. And so I am going to David, who knows and loves me anyway.

"Oh, Mother, forgive me for hurting you like this! But don't you see that I would hurt you more by staying? After a while you would be ashamed of me because I could not marry. I would humiliate you in the eyes of your friends. And I could not be happy ever, away from David. I wanted to die after Arthur Van Horne told me today what he really wanted of me, but now I know I want to live—with David. Please, Mother, don't think my love for you—"

She could write no more just then. Laying her hot cheek against the cold glass of the framed photograph of her mother she sobbed so loudly, so heart-brokenly that she did not hear a knock upon the door. She did not know her grief was being witnessed until she felt a hand upon her shoulder.

"Sally, darling! What in the world is the matter?" It was End Barr's tender, throaty contralto.

Sally sprang to her feet, her eyes wild with fear, her mother's picture still tightly clutched in her hands. "I— I was writing you a letter!" she gasped. "I—"

"Perhaps I'd better read it now," End said in an odd voice, and reached for the scattered sheets of pale gray newspaper on the desk.

Sally wavered to a chair and slumped into it, too dazed with despair to think coherently. She could not bear to look at her mother, for she knew now how cowardly she had been, how abysmally selfish.

Her flaming face was hidden by her hands when, after what seemed many long minutes, she heard her mother's voice again.

"Poor Sally! You couldn't trust me? You'd have run away—like that? Without giving me a chance to prove my love for you?"

Sally dropped her hands and stared stupidly at her mother. Enter was coming toward her, the newspaper with David's picture in it rustling against the crisp taffeta of her bouffant skirt. And on End's face was an expression of such sorrowful but loving reproach that Sally burst into wild weeping.

"Enter it! It's darling!" End dropped to her knees beside Sally's chair and took the girl's cold, shaking hands in hers. "We all make mistakes, Sally. I've made more than my share. Maybe I'm getting old enough now to have a little wisdom. And I want to keep you from making a mistake that would cause both of us—and Court—untold sorrow."

"But I love David and I shan't love anyone else," Sally sobbed, though she knew her resistance was broken.

"I'm forced to believe that now, darling," End said gently. "And I shall not stand in the way of your happiness with him. That is not the mistake I meant."

"You mean that you'll let me marry him?" Sally cried incredulously. "Oh, Mother! I love you so!"

"And I love you, Sally," End's voice broke and she cuddled Sally's cold hands against the velvety warmth of her own throat. "Your mistake would have been to run away to marry David. You have a mother and a father now, Sally. You're no longer a girl alone, as David called you. You have a place in society as our daughter, whether you want it or not. If David wants to marry you, he must come here to do so, must marry you with our consent and our blessing."

"But— Sally's joy suddenly turned to despair again. "He wouldn't marry a girl with a fortune. He told me so when he was here."

"That was when he was penniless himself," End pointed out. "I've just read this newspaper story about his inheriting his grandfather's farm. It's a small fortune in itself, and since there's no immediate danger of your inheriting either my money or Court's, I don't believe he will let your prospective wealth stand in the way—if he loves you."

"Oh, he does!" Sally laughed through her tears. "Look! She snatched the newspaper from the floor and pointed to the last paragraph of the story about David. "He named his prize beifer after me! It says here his only sweetheart is 'Sally'! Oh, Mother, I didn't know anyone could love me! I was just a nobody! I wanted to kill myself after Van—Oh!"

"Tell me just exactly what he said to you!" End commanded, her lovely voice sharpened with anger and fear.

When Sally had repeated the contemptuous, sneering speech as accurately as possible, her mother's face, which had been almost ugly with anger and disgust, cleared miraculously.

"The man is an unspeakable cad, darling, but I am almost glad it happened, since you escaped unscathed. He won't bother us again. I'm sure of it! He's not quite low enough to gossip about me to my friends. It is evident that he planned all along to use his knowledge as a club to force you to submit to his desires. And now that he doesn't want you any more, he will lose interest in the whole subject. I've known Van nearly all my life and I've never known him to act the cad before. He's probably despising himself now that his fever has cooled. If you marry I'll be with our consent, he'll probably turn up at your wedding and offer sincere congratulations with a whispered reassurance as to his ability to keep our secret."

"When I marry David, not I!" Sally cried exultantly, flinging her arms about her mother's neck. "Oh, I'm so glad I have a mother!"

"Don't strangle me!" End laughed. "Leave me strength to write a proposal of marriage to this cocksure young farmer who brags that he is as capable in the kitchen as on the seat of a cultivator!"

"He can't cook half as well as I can!" Sally scoffed. "You ought to taste one of my apple pies! He can play nurse to his blue-ribbon stock all he wants to, but he's got to let me do the cooking! And, Mother, you'll tell him how much I love him, won't you? And—and you might remind him that we only need half a marriage ceremony—the last half! Wouldn't it be fun if we could go back to Canfield and let 'the marrying parson' finish the job?"

"Don't be too confident!" End warned her. "He may refuse you!"

But at sight of Sally's dismay she relented. "I know he loves you, darling. Don't worry. If I were you I'd get busy immediately on a trousseau."

"One dozen kitchen aprons will top the list," Sally laughed.

Four days later the second telegram that Sally had received from David arrived. "Catching next train East, darling. Happiest man in the world. Can we be married day I arrive? Am wiring your blessed mother also. I'll be loving you always, David."

"Of course you can't be married the day he arrives!" End exclaimed indignantly when Sally showed her the telegram. "I'm going to give you a real wedding."

"I think the children are right, End," Courtney Barr unexpectedly championed Sally in her protest. "A quiet, impromptu wedding, by all means. Our announcement to the papers will insure the propriety of the thing, and since the boy is unknown in New York and Sally has only just been introduced, I think the less fuss the better."

Sally kissed him impulsively, aware, though the knowledge did not hurt her, that he liked her better now that she was to leave his home, than he had ever liked her.

David arrived on Monday, and was great of honor that night at a small party of End's and Sally's most intimate friends, at which the announcement of the forthcoming marriage was made. They remembered having seen him briefly at Sally's coming-out party and so handsome he was, so much at ease, now that he was to be married to the girl he loved, that he occurred to some of End's guests to question his eligibility. Sally, sitting proudly beside him, looked happily from her mother to David, knowing that in gaining a husband she was not losing a mother, as she would have done if End had not interrupted the writing of that terrible letter.

On Tuesday Sally and David, accompanied by End and Courtney Barr, went to the municipal building for the marriage license, and the afternoon papers carried the news on the front pages, under headlines as follows: "Popular Deb to Marry Rich Farmer." But in all the stories there was no hint of scandal, no reportorial prying into the "past" of the adopted daughter of the rich and prominent Courtney Barrs.

The wedding took place on Wednesday, in the drawing-room of the Barrs' Fifth Avenue mansion, and the next morning, in the account of the "very quiet" wedding, a society editor commented: "The ceremony was read by the Reverend Horace Greep, of Canfield, and the chief of celebrants being dictated by unexplained sentiment."

What the society editor did not know was that "the marrying parson" of Canfield spoke only the last half of the marriage service, beginning where he had been interrupted nearly three years before.

Sally and David were no longer "half married."

THE END

In Homes, as Well as Fashions, It's Accessories That Count.

Accessories add the smart and individual touch that transforms any house into a home with personality.

In the spring a woman's fancy seriously turns to thoughts of clothes. Likewise, if she is a home woman, she gives several of those precious thoughts to the house.

New pillows here, a new rug there, other household accessories changed about a bit or augmented and the place looks like new.

But many women who have charming interiors to their homes entirely forget those outside accessories to a house that make or mar the appearance.

That Well-Groomed Look.
Screens, door-knobs, foot scrapers, window boxes, gutters, downspouts, hooks for blinds, the door mat and the things that lights the hospitable way. These are the little gadgets that, shiny and cared for, give a home a self-respecting and well-groomed look. Neglected, they are precisely like the run-down heels and tarnished black hat of a poorly dressed woman.

Screens should have been brushed and gone over in the fall when they were put away. If dingy looking, they most certainly deserve a new coat of color to match the sash and other house trims.

Screens that cover windows one doesn't want neighbors looking in may be painted. That prevents

Marye, my dear:
I, too, hope that Norman's aunt won't hear of his street brawl, for she would be sure to write it home if she did. And that would be about the last straw.

Men fighting over you! It's too bad you didn't get some pepper in your own eyes. What can Norman be thinking of to run in to see you as soon as he gets to the city? I only wish it had been Alan who gave him the black eye.

I told Frank he had to have a talk with him when he returns. But Frank said you were old enough to know what you were doing and that he wouldn't interfere. I think he feels that way because Genevieve flew off the handle when he broke up a petting party out at the lake the other night.

He didn't like the way some of the boys and girls were acting, and as it was a crowd that had driven out from her house, Genevieve said he was criticizing her friends. Just as though they weren't his friends as much as hers. Frank said she would either let it up and come on home or he'd drive off and leave her to come back with another couple.

That, I'm surmised, wouldn't have pleased the other couple, and rather than be where she wasn't wanted, Genevieve came with Frank. But she was pretty angry about it.

How Much Water Should Baby Get?

A Famous Authority's Rule
By Ruth Perlin

Baby specialists agree nowadays, that during the first six months, babies must have three ounces of fluid per pound of body weight daily. An eight pound baby, for instance, needs twenty-four ounces of fluid. Later on the rule is two ounces of fluid per pound of body weight. The amount of fluid absorbed by a breast fed baby is best determined by weighing him before and after feeding for the whole day, and it is easily calculated for the bottle fed one. Then make up any deficiency with water.

Giving baby sufficient water often relieves his feverish, crying, upset, and restless spells. If it doesn't, give him a few drops of Fletcher's Castoria. For these and other ills of babies and children such as colic, cholera, diarrhea, gas on stomach and bowels, constipation, sour stomach, loss of sleep, underweight, etc., leading physicians say there's nothing so effective. It is purely vegetable—the recipe is on the wrapper—and millions of mothers have depended on it in over thirty years of ever increasing use. It regulates baby's bowels, makes him sleep and eat right, enables him to get full nourishment from his food, so he increases in weight as he should. With each package you get a book on Motherhood worth its weight in gold.

Just a word of caution: Look for the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the package so you'll be sure to get the genuine. The forty cent bottles contain thirty-five doses.—Adv.

TRAIN YOUR BRAIN

Urges Fannie Hurst, Who Believes Best Minds Work on Schedule

"Waiting for inspiration" is no valid alibi for not accomplishing things, according to Fannie Hurst, famous author of many novels.

"There may be such a thing as inspiration which floods a person's being and causes wonderful results without much effort," Miss Hurst says. "There may be 'born writers' who work only under its influence. But I have never met this magic thing. Nor do I know persons who have met it either."

"It seems to me an amateurish attack for men or women to wait for inspiration before starting to work."

"Men and women go in for gymnastics. They train their arm muscles, their legs, their schedule so they can acquire skill in this or that and make their bodies behave a certain way."

"Why not try training the mind so? Why not wait on schedule too? Practically every writer I know does this very thing."

"It is the systematized mind and a regular schedule that accomplishes things. If anyone asked my advice, I'd say: 'Don't wait for inspiration. Get to work. Train your brain!'"

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

A certain man gave his blood in a transfusion to save a woman's life. The woman recovered and the two fell in love. When the publicity of their romance and approaching marriage broke forth science reared upon its hind legs. "Serena," the chief of celebrants, the co-mingling of blood would make such a marriage positively incestuous, and asking for a new law including this case in other "thou shalt nots" of marriage.

It will be only a matter of time, of course, before a new school of science cries "taint so at all," and acts to repeal any such law. The most discouraging phase of this modern world is split viewpoint even in the world of supposed facts. Go to any trial, for instance, and watch one psychiatrist declare that the accused is insane and another of equally good standing declare that the accused is not insane.

Anyway, here's hoping that the two lovers manage to get married with the full approval of science!

"OH, MY POLLS!"

One is supposed to feel very sorry for the poor lady of Gotham who went off on a shopping spree the other afternoon, bought herself an $18,000 pearl necklace with a diamond clasp, told the clerk not to bother to wrap it, put around her neck with two other strands of pearls, only to discover within half an hour that the clasp hadn't been good—and the pearls were gone.

Somehow I just can't feel nearly so sorry for a woman who buys so casually as I do for the $25 a week stenographer who loses her $195 pearls. Nobody needs three strings of pearls, anyway, and what's the difference?

THESE "WOMEN'S FIGHTS"

The resignation of eleven prominent women from the D. A. R. because of the famous "Black List" is only the first leak in the dyke. Here's warning that at least 110 will follow. Is it traitorous to my sex to suggest that some of the resigning matrons will do so not so much because of the principle at stake as because if there's one thing we girls like, it's a club fight and a taking of sides.

JUDGE WAS SCARED

A woman attorney appeared in New York's criminal courts building the other day to defend two brothers charged with murder. Miss Frieda Henlock was said to be the first woman to so serve in this court. The judge was uneasy and resentful. He warned the young woman "not to inject your sex into this case."

This admonition makes one wonder just where the judge has been all these years to seem so ignorant of the fact that thousands of women have been handling this very job and many others as important without "injecting their sex."

After all, the admonition would have been more useful, it seems, if given to the males about the

RULES TO PREVENT SPREAD OF INFECTION IN POOLS

EDITORS NOTE: This is the fourth of a series of six articles on healthful swimming conditions. Tomorrow: Control of Pools.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The American Medical Association through its section on diseases of the nose and throat, drew up a report governing a control of swimming pools which is beginning to have a definite effect on swimming pool sanitation throughout the country.

The conditions most frequently spread through swimming pools include infections of the ear, sinuses and throat which are, of course, due to the pouring of contaminated water into these cavities.

Eye and Skin Infection

Infections of the eye have been frequent through the passing of germs affecting the eyes from one person to another, infections of rather infrequently infections of the intestines with typhoid and dysentery. It has even been suggested that polio-myelitis or infantile paralysis has been passed from one person to another from contacts in swimming pools.

The committee of the American Medical Association suggested that the following notice be posted in every swimming pool:

1—All bathers shall use shower baths, including soap, if necessary, before entering the plunge.

2—Bathers who have been outside the bath house or plunge enclosure shall not re-enter without passing through a foot bath and using a shower.

3—Bathers shall be forbidden to wear bathing suits not properly laundered; light colored or undyed wool is suggested.

4—Women shall wear caps while in plunge.

5—Persons not dressed for bathing shall not be allowed on walks surrounding plunge, and bathers shall not be allowed in places provided for spectators.

6—No person suffering from a fever, cold cough or inflamed eyes shall be allowed the use of the plunge. (These disorders may be transmitted to others.)

7—No person with sores or other evidence of skin disease, or who is wearing a bandage of any kind, shall be allowed the use of the plunge. (A bandage may conceal a source of infection.)

8—Spitting in, or in any other way contaminating, the plunge and spitting on floors, runways, aisles or dressing rooms shall be prohibited.

9—Public combs or brushes shall not be furnished, and such articles left by bathers shall be permanently removed.

10—Eating within the plunge enclosure shall be prohibited.

11—Bringing or throwing into the plunge any objects that may in any way carry contamination, endanger safety of bathers, or produce unsightliness, shall be prohibited.

She was fifty and she had "raised" nine children, but she still had the keen zest for life of a girl of 18.

Her sister walked in one day when she was tying covers on card tables, two in the tiny living room, one in the dining room, and one in the hall.

"Looks like your bridge day," said her sister acidly. "When will you ever grow up? Or rather, when will you settle down? With all you've gone through, the struggle you've had and everything, I should think you'd have learned a lesson by this time. But you always were different from the rest of us. All you thought of was parties, and you still do."

Her sister finished tying on the last cover and turned around indignantly. "I'm sorry to be such a disgrace to the family," she said, "but I've never let any good time interfere with my work."

"I've had nine children and I'm proud of every one of them. You've had two. It is still like a party now and then, surely no one can be disgraced by that. But there is one thing you may not believe—I'm not so crazy for a good time as you think I am. It gets harder each time to get the house and other things ready. But I won't give up,

STATUE OF ST. GENEVIEVE TO BE BUILT IN PARIS

Paris—A new statue is soon to add to the already large number in Paris. It will be of Saint Genevieve and will dominate the new bridge de la Tournelle which connects the Ile de la Daine with the Left Bank.

The architect intends it to serve two purposes—make for the symmetry of two different banks, and perpetuate the memory of the patron saint of the French capital. It is also fitting that the statue should be placed on this part of the city which is intimately linked with her history.

The sculptor is M. Landowski.

TOO ILL TO APPEAR AGAINST HUSBAND

Mrs. Burke, Laid Up After Alleged Beating With Which Husband Is Charged.

The case of Steve Burke of Kerry street, charged with intoxication and assault, was again continued in Manchester Police Court this morning by Deputy Judge Thomas Ferguson until next Thursday morning because of the inability of Mrs. Olive Burke to appear to testify against her husband.

Mrs. Burke is ill in bed as the result of injuries she suffered when her husband is alleged to have struck her while under the influence of liquor. The attending physician reported that her condition, while not critical, was serious enough so that it was entirely inadvisable for her to leave her home for fully a week. Burke was taken to jail to await his trial.

GERMANS AMERICANIZE

Chicago—Ten of Germany's leading stylists visited this country to catch some of America's styles and method of selling clothes. The art of fire sales and sales in general is not practiced in Germany as freely as in this country. According to H. B. Ober, president of the clothing organization, police stop a sale in Germany if it runs for more than two weeks and only two such sales are allowed yearly.

In England the law governing adoptions provides that the adopter must be at least 25, and 21 while older than the adopted; a man is not permitted to adopt a girl unless he satisfies the court that there are special advantages for her.

SOCIAL HONORS FOR AMERICANS

London, May 9.—The second of the five royal courts at Buckingham Palace this month will be held tonight when a number of Americans will be presented to King George and Queen Mary.

The Americans gaining this supreme social distinction include Mrs. John B. Stetson, Jr., wife of the American minister to Poland; Miss Virginia Booth, of Detroit, Mich.; Mrs. Alfred J. Brossaue, of Washington, D. C.; Miss Bullock, of Denver, Colo.; Miss Evelyn Clark, of New York, and Miss Diana Rockwood, of Indianapolis, Ind.

The same brilliant ceremonies that marked the first court last night will attend the presentations in the throne room.

Opens Social Season

The royal courts mark the opening of the spring social season in London and the great mansions in Mayfair and Belgrave, that were closed during the winter have been opened.

From now on the gayety and glitter will not wear off until the middle of August. London believes it will be the social hub of the world this spring and summer and the most brilliant social season since the war is in prospect. Ocean liners have brought Americans and other foreigners in increasing numbers. In one hotel alone there are guests of 23 different nationalities.

BIGGEST MAN

Dudley, Eng.—George Lovatt is so fat that he couldn't ride in a street car or taxicab, so he ordered a hansom cab and confidently stepped in. The bottom fell out and how Lovatt is having a special float built. He weighs 504 pounds. One of his nephews has a suit made from one of his waistcoats.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (284) What Salt Is

Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

Dancing will be the attraction at the Buckland school assembly hall this evening, with Wehr's Orchestra to furnish music and a mixer to call off the old-time numbers. The dance is under the auspices of the Ways and Means committee of the Parent-Teacher Association.

C. W. King, of 296 Main street, Manchester, who is the secretary of the Connecticut Brick Manufacturers Association with offices at 226 Pearl street, Hartford, has bought a nine acre parcel of land on the east side of Mountain Road in West Hartford. By this purchase he becomes owner of a strip of land uniform in size of 350 feet on all sides. It is understood he is to build a home there. Mr. King was formerly in business in Manchester, having purchased on coming to Manchester the coal-business conducted by George H. Allen, which later became the W. G. Glenney Lumber Company.

The members of Cheney Brothers Girls Athletic Association are planning a breakfast hike to Clifford D. Cheney's cabin on Mt. Mansfield in Glastonbury, next Sunday.

The annual meeting of the Manchester Memorial Hospital Corporation will be held in High school hall Monday evening, when officers will be elected and reports received.

There will be a dance at the Manchester Country Club Saturday night. It was stated today by a member of the committee.

There will be a regular meeting of Linne Lodge, No. 72, Knights of Pythias at 8 o'clock tonight at Orange Hall.

Rev. Alfred Clark of St. Mary's Episcopal church will instruct the adult confirmation class at 7:30 this evening.

GAS BUGGIES—Conflicting Plans

MAYBE I DIDN'T HAVE A TOUGH TIME STUFFING THEM WITH THAT STUPID RUSTY STEALING THE REAL GAS PILLS AND SUBSTITUTING PHONES. AND ALEC WILL GET AN EARFUL FOR WALKING OUT WITH THAT DIZZY BLOND, AND LEAVING ME TO DO THE DIRTY WORK.

WE'RE GOING TO HAVE AN UNDERSTANDING ABOUT THAT PEROXIDE PIPPIN. SHE'LL MAKE A BUM OUT OF THE MASTER AND SHE'LL BE WRECKING OUR SHIP HERE, JUST AS WE'RE GETTING SET TO BRING IT IN.

WELL, SHEIK, THAT WAS A SWELL DEAL YOU MADE. ME, GOING OFF TO HOLD HANDS, WHILE I BATTLED WITH HEM.

WHAT A QUEEN! THOSE EYES! OH, LOOKS! OH, VIOLA, VIOLA, VIOLA.

THE ONLY WAY I FINALLY HUMORED HEM WAS BY PROMISING TO SPEED UP THAT NEW DEAL WE DISCUSSED, FOR HOOKING THE LOCAL GAPS AND GETTING HIM SOME DOUGH.

I'VE DECIDED TO STICK AROUND HERE AWHILE, SO THAT DEAL IS OUT FOR THE PRESENT.

Salt is made up of two elements—chlorine and sodium. Chlorine is a colored gas which causes certain death to any kind of living creature if breathed in a large quantity. It was the first of the poisonous gases used with such deadly effect in the World War, and some of the biggest makers of the gas were the salt manufacturers.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-25.

Salt, so necessary for life, also interferes with life. Salt is used to preserve things from the action of germs which would spoil them.

Wherever salt is made hot, it gives forth a kind of yellow light. Turning our attention to the sun and the stars, we find that the stuff which is in our bodies, which fills the sea, which even forms a sort of rock upon the earth, is also abundant in the sun and many of the stars. When we pass the light through a prism, the bright yellow lines mark the presence of sodium in the salt.

If you want to get a good slant on house painting, do it from the roof.

SENSE and NONSENSE

Edward, a colored boy, had recommended his mother for the position of cook, but when she came the farmer's wife asked doubtfully: "Do you suppose you will be able to do the work? You don't look very healthy."

One morning at breakfast Maria asked her mistress if she might get off next Sunday to attend her brother's funeral. Of course, even if special company had been invited, brother's funeral had to be attended, and permission was reluctantly granted.

After Maria's mistress got upstairs, however, she remembered that it was Tuesday and wondered what Maria was trying to put over on her. So she went down to the kitchen to find out.

"See here, Maria," she said, "you say your brother isn't to be buried until Sunday, and today's Tuesday."

"Yes'm," said Marie mournfully, "but dey ain't gwine to hang him till Friday!"

Mose—Do you think you kin support my daughter?
Rastus—Ah suah do.
Mose—Eyah see her eat?
Rastus—Ah suah has.
Mose—Ever see her eat when no one was lookin'?

A scene in the dining room of a little Arkansas hotel. The actors are a fussy Chicago salesman and a ducky waiter. After ushering the guest to a seat, the waiter inquired:

"Will you-all have pig tails and sauerkraut?"

"No, I never eat 'em," the guest replied.

"In that case," said the waiter, "dinner is over."

An attorney who advertised for a chauffeur, when questioning a negro applicant, said: "How about you, George, are you married?"

"Naw, sir, boss, naw sir. Ah makes mah own livin'."

An insurance man called one day and said:

"Your accident policy runs out next month, Mr. White. You're going to renew, of course?"

"No, Ah ain't gwine ter renew," said Wash White. "Ah been insured in your company fo'teen years, sah, and Ah ain't had one single blessed ax'dent. So natcherly Ah's gwine ter change to a better company now."

The local church was making a drive for funds, and two colored sisters were tearing down hard on Uncle Rastus.

"I can't give nothin'," exclaimed the old Negro. "I owe nearly everybody in this here old town already."

"But," said one of the collectors, "don't you think you owe the Lord something, too?"

"I does, sister, indeed," said the old man. "but He ain't pushin' me like the other creditors is."

First Colored Lady—Is you' husband in town?
Second Colored Lady—Well, yes and no. He's in town, but he's not in circulation. He's been in jail fo' de last month.

LETTER GOLF

Here's something a little different—go from WORM to TURN in three and then continue on for four more to BACK. One solution is on another page.

Letter Golf grid with words WORM, TURN, and BACK.

THE RULES.

- 1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in part, a given number of strokes. Thus to change Cow to Hen in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

Fliver petting seems to have driven the "shady dell" out of popular songs.

THE TINYMITES

READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.

The milk had turned to butter quick. "Oh, look," cried Scouty, "this is slick. It's nice and rich and yellow, and it's good enough to eat. Come on now, lads, let's scoop it up and give some to each buttercup." And, as they filled the buttercups, the flowers said, "What a treat!"

 "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

SPICE OF VARIETY.
 Of course we don't eat enough fish. No inland community in America eats as much fish as it should. Neither does many a community right on the coast.
 Any physician will tell you that we don't eat enough fish. It isn't that fish contains any magical health giving properties, though it does contain necessary elements that we don't get in quite such profusion in most other foods. The point is that it adds variety to the diet, while at the same time supplying sound nutriment—and variety in diet is nowadays recognized as highly important. Fish is easily digestible and, properly cooked, extremely palatable to most people. Yet few of us have ever eaten enough of it.
 The reason is easy enough to trace. It's a matter of habit, and we formed the habit, so to speak, of not eating much fish, years ago when we couldn't get it fresh enough to make it attractive, or even wholesome.
 Nowadays it's very different. Fish comes to you as sweet and fresh as in the hour of its capture. Here at Pinehurst, for instance, we can give you the Forty Fathom products—filet of haddock, filet of sole, dressed haddock or flounder—which couldn't be better if you flipped them out of the ocean straight onto the galley stove of the fishing smack. Or halibut, mackerel and steak cod, right now, and butterfish and salmon when they come along.
 We ought all to be eating more fish, for the sake of our tummies and our palates and that variety which is the spice of life. No reason, any more, for ignoring the food of the sea.

NATIVE ASPARAGUS

You can't imagine until you use one...

Correct ironing temperature always

YOU can't imagine what it's like to have a Westinghouse Automatic Iron until you actually use one. You can't imagine the difference there is. It looks so much like ordinary irons—but there's something inside it that keeps it always at exactly the right heat for good ironing. Plug it in and it quickly heats up to good ironing temperature. Before it gets too hot, the control inside turns the current off. Before it gets too cool, it turns itself on again. You can leave the plug in all the time you're ironing, or when you have to answer the door or the telephone.

Get a Westinghouse Automatic Iron and you can forget half the worry and trouble of the day after washday.
