

RESCUE SHIPS ARE HEMMED IN BY ICE FLOES

Message From Nobile Says He is Drifting Westward; Ships Awaiting Arrival of Aviators.

London, June 16.—The steamer Braganza, which is attempting to bring aid to General Umberto Nobile and his stranded crew, radioed that it was ice-bound near Brandy Bay, Spitzbergen, a Central News dispatch from King's Bay stated today.

The Braganza's operator stated that the relief steamer Hobby was also hemmed in by the ice-floes between Wahlen Bay and Lommen Bay. Dog teams which have been dispatched from both vessels are expected to meet at Cape Platen tonight.

A wireless message from Nobile received at King's Bay added that his party was now drifting slowly westward, the dispatch added. It is now believed that Nobile is near Charles the Twelfth Land.

The arrival of Major Maddeleine, the Italian aviator, flying the Savoia 55, is being eagerly awaited at King's Bay. This plane has a wide cruising range and as the approximate position of the Italia's crew is not known, it is believed he will have no trouble in locating them.

To Rescue Injured.

He will attempt to land at the spot and take aboard the injured members of the crew and as many others as possible. If he finds it impossible to make a landing he will, at least, be able to drop medicines and other supplies.

The powerful Russian ice-breaker Malgina is now steaming slowly towards Foyne Island. When it arrives there, the seaplane aboard the ship will attempt to locate the stranded men and either make a landing or drop supplies.

No Confirmation.

There is still no confirmation of the report that the Swedish Prof. Malgren and the Italian navy Commanders Zappi and Marigno, who left the others of the Italia's crew to trek across the ice for aid, have been saved by a dog-team sent out by the Hobby.

The Russian ice-breaker Krassin is now also steaming northward to the aid of the Italia's crew.

French man Hoops.

Paris, June 16.—Commander Gullbaud, a French aviator, hopped off at Caudebec at 9:10 a. m., today for Bergen, enroute for the Arctic to join the international relief expedition searching for Gen. Nobile and his stranded flier explorers.

Commander Gullbaud was accompanied by Lieut. De Cuverville, Radio Operator Vallette and Mechanic Bracy. He expects to stop up Capt. Roald Amundsen, noted Norwegian Polar explorer, at Bergen to aid in directing the relief work.

If a stretch of open water can be found near the ice field where the Nobile party took refuge, Gullbaud will try to pick up the refugees and carry them back to King's Bay. Gullbaud is flying a hydroplane of the Latham type powered with two 500 horsepower motors.

WEATHER HOLDS UP BOTH GIRL FLYERS

Lady Lindy May Stop at Azores if She Has to Lighten Load.

St. John's, N. F., June 16.—Storms over the Atlantic held out small hope that Miss Amelia Earhart and Miss Mabel Boll would be able to start on their respective flights to Europe today.

Miss Earhart and her companions, Wilmer Stultz and Lou Gordon, have not yet decided whether they will attempt to fly to the Azores or to Ireland. They will test the tri-motored Friendship today with sufficient fuel aboard to take them safely to Ireland. If the plane will rise under the heavy burden they probably will fly there.

Miss Boll and her crew, Captains Oliver Le Boullenger and Arthur Argles, paid a visit to this place yesterday and received a great welcome. They announced they will start their flight in the Columbia as soon as the weather permitted.

SMALL BOYS PLACE STONES ON RAILROAD

Traffic Manager James Rowland of the South Manchester Railroad Company this morning made complaint to the police that the railroad company was being troubled by small children placing stones on the tracks in the vicinity of the Middle Turnpike crossing. The practice has been going on for several days and now, he said, with the coming of the summer vacation there is likely to be more, as boys have the experience in past years.

Problem Of The Talking Movies Is Rocking The Film World

New York, June 16.—Along Broadway, in those heavily mahoganyed council chambers of film-doms' magnates, the kings of the cinema and their courts have gone into feverish huddles.

Every eastbound train brings another expert or executive from Hollywood. In and out of the doors is labeled "President" slip production managers, acoustic specialists, playwrights, engineers, inventors and what not.

The "talkies," in revolutionizing the whole movie industry, have presented the greatest assortment of problems this industry has faced since it leaped from a scenic to a super-production level. Every sundown sees Broadway teeming with a new set of rumors concerning the talking pictures. Underneath these saucy statements of the domos may be found a most chaotic state of affairs. A careful survey indicates that no one is certain what will happen next.

The Major Problems.

The outstanding problems of the situation, insofar as they may be charted at this moment, are somewhat as follows:

1.—If the movies are to talk, what are they going to say? In reply to this question, up step dramatists, novelists, sketch writers, gag-writers and lyricists. Daily it becomes more obvious that a scenario writer no longer will be sufficient. Someone is going to have to write dialogue that will stand new tests.

TROLLEYMEN VOTES ARE BEING COUNTED

Report Says Those in This District Are in Favor of a Strike.

Following a referendum vote among the employees of the Connecticut Company, taken yesterday, the Connecticut Conference Board of the Union of Street and Electric Railway Employees is meeting at New Haven today to ca-vote the result of the balloting which is to decide whether or not the company's employees shall go on strike with a view to enforcing arbitration on working conditions. The question of wages, it is said, does not enter into the controversy.

Local Men Vote

Manchester trolley men voted at Hartford yesterday, when some 500 votes were recorded in this trolley district and it is reported that a majority of the district employees balloted in favor of a strike.

The Connecticut Company, it is claimed by the men, has refused to consider the continuance of any kind of a standard working day, but has reserved the right to require where the exigencies of the traffic require, without guarantees as to hours.

General Manager Punderford, so the trolley men assert, has refused to enter into any sort of arbitration on working conditions.

FANNIE WARD ROBBED

London, June 16.—Fannie Ward, the eternally youthful stage star, lost a $50,000 diamond necklace while enroute from New York aboard the liner Berengaria, she revealed upon her arrival here from Southampton.

The necklace, she said, disappeared from her jewel case under mysterious circumstances. Cunard officials are investigating.

TOTS BURNED TO DEATH.

Philadelphia, June 16.—Two tots were burned to death in their beds when fire destroyed their home here early today and their parents and infant brother narrowly escaped with their lives by dropping from a second floor window.

The dead children were Herbert Seltzer, 8, and Sidney, 5. Their charred bodies burned beyond recognition were found by firemen after they had brought the flames under control.

TO HONOR LINDY.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., June 16.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh took off from Roosevelt Field, Long Island today on his way to receive another honorary degree.

This time it will be at the University of Wisconsin, where Lindbergh once was a student. President Glenn Frank will make the presentation Monday, when Lindbergh is due to land at Madison, Wis., after a single stop over in Buffalo.

RESULTS!

Edward Montie of 69 New street lost his brand new gold watch and fob last Saturday evening. Mr. Montie placed great sentimental value on his watch and fob and trusted to Herald classified advertising to locate it.

He inserted his "Lost" adv. three times. He thought his watch was gone forever when no answer to the advertisement was received after the first and second insertion. But the third adv. brought results and gave Mr. Montie his watch.

30 KILLED, 127 HURT AS UNEMPLOYED RIOT

100,000 Russians Stage Demonstration and Police Fire on Them.

Warsaw, June 16.—One hundred thousand unemployed workers staged a huge demonstration in Moscow during which they clashed with the police and thirty persons were killed and 127 wounded, dispatches from unofficial sources stated today.

The clashes occurred when government soldiers attempted to disperse the demonstrators. The latter put up stubborn opposition and attempted to overcome the soldiers.

In the melee, many were trampled upon by the horses of the soldiers. Twelve of those who were killed were soldiers.

KANSAS CITY IS NOW BACK TO NORMALCY

Delegates Make Rush for Home—Decorations Pulled Down; Reporters Start For Houston.

Kansas City, June 16.—This busy metropolis of the plains returned to normalcy today.

The shouting and tumult have died. The bunting, the flags, the placards, the candidatorial pictures are coming down. The snappy looking crossing policemen, who won the praise of the delegates for their courtesy, are enforcing again the rules against "jaywalking."

The milling, perspiring, whispering throngs have vanished from the hotel lobbies. The button-holing is over. The "midnight conferences in smoke-filled rooms" are history. The lusty-lunged Hoover bandmen have parked their instruments until the Fourth of July festivities.

The Hoover bandwagon, which looked as if it might have come straight from the circus grounds, has gone back to its regular bus route.

Hoover and Curtis!

It was no fault of the city that the Republican convention failed to arouse those frenzied outbursts which usually accompany such gatherings. Kansas City, if the delegates did not, put on a good show.

Perfect Weather

There was not a hitch. Even the weather was perfect. Those who had misgivings last winter when the Republican committee selected Kansas City over San Francisco found nothing about which to complain. They said it was too small. But there was room to spare. They said the delegates and visitors would walk under the blazing prairie sun. Unlike some conventions of the past, the delegates were comfortable in a convention hall without removing their coats.

They called this a "ratification meeting. Hoover was "in" long in advance of the balloting. Everybody knew that the quadrennial presidential nominee hours before the final session opened. The platform was approved substantially as it was written weeks ago by Senator Smoot of Utah and a handful of Hoover leaders.

The tragedy took place in the kitchen of a lunch room where Mrs. Davis had gone to upbraid her husband for drinking and not giving her money. Lyle Davis, the husband, was the chef at the lunch room.

PROMINENT MEN TO BE INDICTED

Chicago, June 16.—True bills against twelve men, several of them said to be prominent politically, have been voted by the Special Grand Jury investigating crime and election frauds in Chicago, it was reported today.

The true bills were 14 in number and charge the twelve men with kidnaping, assault with intent to commit murder and with robbery with a gun.

To Draw Indictments

Indictments based on the true bills will be drawn and made ready for presentation in the court at Chief Justice William V. Broderick, probably late Monday, it was said.

Frank J. Loesch, head of the Chicago Crime Commission, and his staff of special prosecutors were well pleased with the progress of the investigation to date. Loesch promises to rush through many more indictments before the Grand Jury disbands.

NOMINATION OF CURTIS PLEASES ALL FACTIONS

Thousands Homeless As Big Dam Bursts

Harmony Reigns as Republican Delegates Leave Convention City—Bitterness Forgotten—Lowden and Others Who Opposed Planks and Candidates Are Regulars and Will Stick to the Party.

Popular Bluff, Mo., June 16.—Approximately 1,000 families were made homeless when the levee of the St. Francis river broke at Kennett, Mo., 35 miles southwest of here today.

The breaking of the levee caused the swollen St. Francis river to spread over a five mile area, and threatened devastation to 25,000 acres of fertile land in southwest Missouri.

Red Cross headquarters were being established at Kennett for relief of the flood sufferers. Approximately 150 families were reported in immediate need of assistance.

Five companies of National Guardsmen have been patrolling the river during the last week. Hundreds of citizens of Kennett fought a terrific battle all day yesterday and last night until the levee gave way.

The rise of the St. Francis was the second this week, and a third rise is expected by Tuesday.

It was believed here the river would go a foot and a half higher at the third crest, inundating other thousands of acres of land in the territory.

A special attraction will be the opening of the home later in the summer season announcements of which will be made through The Herald when all arrangements are completed.

COOLIDGE SETTLES DOWN TO BUSINESS

Official Mail Arrives at Houses of Summer White

Superior, Wis., June 16.—With President and Mrs. Coolidge at home in the pretentious Cedar Island estate, surrounded by the Brule river amid the northern wilds, attention was turned today to administration of affairs of the United States government from the nation's temporary executive headquarters.

Already the President's administrative offices—which have been established in the central high school in the town of Superior—are in shape to function with clock-like precision. Pouches containing official mail have been hauled in in preparation for the first visit of the President to his headquarters.

Business Offices

The administrative offices are 38 miles away from the Summer White House—and attaches anticipate that the nation's chief will make daily early morning visits for the purposes of transacting the government's business just as he was wont to do in Washington—and last summer in the Black Hills.

Visitors will also be received in the executive offices at Superior by the President, it was understood.

G. O. P. CAMPAIGN IS MAPPED OUT

Hoover and Leaders in Conference Today to Discuss Plans.

Washington, June 16.—Many of the big details of the Republican campaign will be mapped out here in a series of conferences between Herbert Hoover and G. O. P. leaders which start Monday.

James W. Good of Iowa, Hoover's convention manager is expected to arrive Sunday. A delegation selected from the Republican national committee will confer with Hoover Tuesday, when the national chairman will be named.

Good is spokesman for chairman of the national committee. Accumulation of work that piled up during the days of the convention, the secretary succeeded in making up a lot of lost sleep last night and is beginning once more to "settle down" to normal after the nerve-racking drive for the nomination.

A large crowd was gathered in front of the commerce department for Hoover's arrival and he got a small ovation. His appearance in public is calling for frequent demonstrations around the capital.

Whether or not Hoover will resign from the Cabinet before he goes to Palo Alto, Calif., for a month's rest prior to opening of the campaign has not been determined. This probably will be worked out at the political parleys here next week.

Apparently Hoover will remain in Washington for two weeks or a month, according to his secretaries. It must be determined before he leaves what character of campaign will be conducted—an old fashioned stump speaking drive—front-porch affair—a radio campaign.

DEMOCRAT PLEASED HOOVER IS NAMED

Jesse H. Jones Says He is the Easiest Man to Beat at Election.

Houston, Texas, June 16.—Jesse H. Jones, Houston publisher and capitalist and a prominent Democrat, believes that if the Democrats could have dictated the Republican nominee for presidency at Kansas City, they would have chosen Herbert Hoover "as the man easiest to defeat."

"Mr. Hoover is the heir apparent to the last two administrations," Jones said today, and in addition to his own extreme unpopularity with the farmers by reason of his unfair treatment of them during the World War, he will be saddled with all the liabilities of the Harding and Coolidge administration, having had a very prominent part in both of them.

"If the Democrats could have dictated the Republican nomination, I have no doubt but that Mr. Hoover would have been selected as the man most easily to defeat."

THE BARKERS CAN READ.

Washington, June 16.—The sight seeing bus barkers registered the results of the Kansas City convention today.

"On the right is the home of Herbert Hoover who may be next president," was what the tourists from the provinces heard when they passed the S street home of the secretary of commerce.

A few blocks away is the home of Chief Justice William Howard Taft and a few doors away that of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson.

There are a number of versions and opinions. Most of the coalition leaders, in private conversations, blame Lowden. One of the coalition leaders, who requested his name not be used, said to the writer:

"We could have beaten Hoover had it not been for Frank Lowden. He announced himself a candidate, proceeded to go out and sit down in the middle of the road, and so blocked it that no one could get around him. There he sat. He wouldn't conduct a vigorous fighting campaign for himself, and he eventually backed out from doing so by the very fact that he was in the way."

That is just one version. There are others. And there probably will be more as the true history of this convention continues to be written and told.

"But the important thing is that the Republican leaders were departing from Kansas City today more happy and more confident than they thought they ever could be a few days ago. The first week in November will tell whether they are right or wrong."

KINDNESS WEEK

IN PARIS FINDS WEAK RESPONSE

Paris.—Paris has been celebrating "la Semaine de Bonte," a week of good deeds, or a week of kindness, a week set aside every year during which everyone is supposed to be kinder than usual and really put into practice the Golden Rule.

No one seems to know exactly who started the idea. Some people blame it on America but certain chroniclers have discovered that in Paris of lower Burgundy, as far back as the fifteenth century, there were such weeks, even months, usually in the spring, in which husbands were forbidden to beat their wives. Those who disobeyed the rule, were obliged to ride about the village all day on a donkey turned the wrong way, and to be the butt of the jokes of the townspeople.

It is doubtful however, about the real amount of good that is reaped during this week. Parisians are not easily put into the straight and narrow as slow as ever to open their eyes to the fact that the good ladies certainly continued to take their baskets of provision to the poor, perhaps adding a few extra delicacies. Others made visits to the prisons, a really difficult task in France. Others even gathered together the stray cats and dogs and gave them a good feast before trying to find owners for them. But the large majority of people remained as skeptical and hard-hearted as ever, the concierge remained as slow as ever to open the door at night and the chauffeurs complained of the low tips they received. The Week of Kindness will never be a huge success in France.

One of the largest French newspapers has instituted "English Week" and "Spanish Week." One Saturday there will be a section devoted to English readers and of special interest to tourists, giving them all kinds of information to enable them to spend their time in Paris in the most agreeable and profitable manner.

Every other week Spanish visitors and readers will be taken care of and the paper will print one section in the language of Cervantes.

Porters and station attendants at the big Gare du Nord will soon be able to "parley-vous anglais?" with the large number of incoming travelers who speak nothing but English. They are now taking a course of lessons which will help them with a short time to answer all the ordinary questions such as directions, hotel accommodations, railroad connections, etc.

Claiming to be a special envoy of the Messiah, a Frenchman strode up and down the boulevards with a tray of vegetable seeds to transplant into which she had filled her apron. When a good-natured gendarme asked for an explanation, she said she had been sent on a Messianic mission to transform the city streets and sidewalks into vegetable gardens to save the Parisians from starvation.

School children in the Oise department will soon be able to boast that their most besetial teeth in France. Dr. Magnier has arranged with the City Councils in each village and town to see that the teachers oblige the scholars to brush their teeth before them once every day. Free tooth-brushes and paste have been provided.

Although a stroke of good luck made him a millionaire in France overnight, a little tailor of Roubaix says he will keep right on with his shears and needle.

Mr. Leclercq won the first prize in the huge lottery held by the tailor when he was told of his good luck, "but I shan't retire yet."

NO MINNESOTA LYNCHINGS FOR THE PAST FIVE YEARS

Minneapolis, Minn.—Minnesota is on the honor roll of states as one of nine that have had no lynching during the past five years.

Ten of the 16 lynchings which occurred during the year took place in two states, both in the southern section of the Mississippi valley.

With Minnesota on the "five-year" honor roll were California, Colorado, Kansas, Nebraska, North Carolina, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming.

Delegates, She's from Houston

Philaedelpia, June 16.—After a series of hearings which began in the Federal Building, and wound up in the Central Police Court, Mrs. Edith Watson, thirty-two, choir singer and mother of three children, and Reginald W. Erskine, choir-master, and married bond salesman, who were arrested after they eloped from their homes in Rockville Center, L. I., were freed.

Erskine returned to his home with his wife, who forgave him, while Mrs. Watson, scorned by her husband from whom she had fled, hurried to her mother's home.

The hearing in City Hall was almost concluded with a flat fight between an attorney and a deputy sheriff from Mineola, N. Y. Chester D. Evans, the deputy, engaged in a heated verbal battle with Roberts V. Bolger, former Assistant United States Attorney, counsel for Erskine and Mrs. Watson, when Evans accused another attorney, a friend of Bolger, of having induced the principal witness in the case to disappear.

The Evening Herald Sunday School Lessons

by William F. Ellis.
For Every Age, Creed and Nationality.

A WORLD-WANDERER'S MEMORIES OF SIGNS OF THE SWAY OF CROSS

The International Sunday School Lesson for June 17 is "The Crucifixion."—Mark 15: 14-47.

When a person grows up to the point of having formed the habit of thinking things over, he is pretty sure to give thought to the way human beings have grouped themselves under some allegiance or other. This means that he ponders the big social question, which concerns classes. He sees small clusters who call themselves "Society," or the aristocracy. He sees others who are themselves "the working classes," and these are greatly subdivided. Another major classification is by races and by nationalities. Religions also create sharply defined groups.

Thinking further into this theme, a man may find himself looking for the master alibi. What is the tie which binds together the greatest number of people? Straightway the answer comes to mind. It is the wall of an ancient oriental city, on which stand three crosses; with curious and contemptuous crowds gathered about, to witness the execution of three condemned criminals. Interest centers in the middle figure, for he is a Personality whose fame has been long upon the lips of the nation.

Every bystander, and even the callous Roman legionnaires, to whom the work of crucifying criminals is merely a part of the day's routine, know that this Nazarene named Jesus, was no thief or murderer or disturber of the peace; and that He is being done to death because of the jealousy of the priests and Pharisees, who had rabble and riot against Him that the slack-backed Roman governor, Pilate, thought it easier to send an innocent man to death than to withstand an ecclesiastical and jingoistic intrigue which might hamper his career. Party and priestly "politics" nailed the central Victim to His cross.

Once Forsaken, Now Followed

Still thinking through this question of group and united mankind, your average person confronts this paradox of the ages. That lonely central cross, with two thieves for companions, and a few weeping women and one fearsome man the only friends in sight, holds the figure who today has the greatest following on earth. Forsaken, shamed, despised, maltreated.—His death a mere item of the daily programme of Roman "justice" in an outlying province of the empire, the crucified One has become the greatest of all leaders of human hearts. No king or emperor or conqueror ever had so many adherents as that Victim of Jewish hate and of Roman prudence.

Here is the master anomaly of time. The shameful cross itself, once uttermost badge of ignominy, is today the world's dearest symbol. It is the emblem of organized international benevolence. Beautiful women wear it jewelled upon their bosoms. It marks millions of graves as a token of hope. Upon myriads of steeples and domes it catches the light of the sun. Above modern cities it flashes at night in electric lights. Armies have followed it to battle. Martyrs have pressed it to sound of mighty waters, in every where singing

"In the Cross of Christ I glory."

After all the classes and groups and orders and allegiances of mankind have been considered, this marvel remains true, that the Crucified Christ has the greatest following of all; and the fellowship of His friends is the largest and most potent body in existence. He, lifted up, is drawing all men unto Him. That the supreme loyalty of hundreds of millions of men, women and children, who are to be found in all the other lesser classifications of life, is to the slain Saviour abides as the most meaningful fact of all time.

Diadems of Devotion

We spell Science with a big S nowadays; but its claims do not disturb the fidelity of humanity to the Christ who was crucified, whose love is beyond the compass of science, and who is Himself life's only satisfactory explainer and incentive and reward. Machinery and invention are creating a new material civilization; but the friends of Jesus simply say, "He hath put all things under His feet." Life has become intricate and crowded and rapid in our day; nevertheless, myriads of hearts can murmur, "It is our peace."

Let us make no mistake here. Jesus Christ is still Lord of life. We have but to look about us to see the diadems of devotion that are offered to Him. Memory pictures, far more a group of ecclesiastical Roman Catholic nuns, in the Church of the Holy Sepulchre in Jerusalem, waiting in rapt expectancy for the Good Friday services to begin. A strong, intellectual woman in a Seattle mission seemed to be sent her beloved face to face, Dwight L. Moody, standing on Little Round Top, Northfield, opening his heart about Jesus to a group of friends, wore a radiance such as Moses carried down from the Mount. A rugged Quaker, in the Fourth Day Meeting for Worship at the Philadelphia Yearly Meeting, looked as one who was holding Communion with Christ. A saintly Episcopal bishop in Little Rock, Arkansas; Pandita Rambhai, in India; Pastor Kim, in Korea—

the trail of the triumphs of the Cross leads far, and into realms high and low.

The magnetism of the Cross-upto- lifted Redeemer is the marvel of human experience. The rood rules all realms. The symbol of defeat has become the sign of sovereignty. History's greatest reversal is here. The Cross is now the one throne of universal empire. Christ is today alluring and holding the devotion of countless human hearts in every land and clime.

In this sovereignty of the Saviour is surest hope for our day's despondency. Laws and learning may fall to make right what is wrong with our times; but obedience to Christ can do it. For His dear sake men and women will do what they will not do from fear of force or prospect of pleasure. The shortest, surest way out of the morass into which society has stumbled is to lift up the light of the Cross. In following Christ, the world comes to righteousness and peace. The way home leads over Calvary's crest, where once the Son of God died that man might live.

"Lord Jesus, make Thyself to me, A living, bright reality."

On The Cross-Throne

This quiet contemplation of the present dominion of Christ over human hearts, as contrasted with the shameful spectacle of the crucifixion—when the sacrifice of Jesus was so lightly regarded as to be made the occasion for patching up political differences between Pilate and Herod, and between Pilate and the Pharisees—leads into many fields of thought.

REPUBLIC OF ANDORRA TO RUN POST OFFICE PRINTING OWN STAMPS

Perpignan, France—The Republic of Andorra wants to run their own Postal Service and print their own stamps—and what's more they are going to do it.

Senator Don Roig Pallares, the General Syndic of Andorra, which corresponds to President in any other Republic, accompanied by the Secretary of the General Council Don Joseph Areny, presented himself before Monsieur Bodeman, the French representative, and protested against what he claims to be an attempt on the part of the Spanish Government to gain the monopoly of the postal service in his country.

"We have no stamps," complained Don Roig, "and so we can't run our own mail department, but with your permission we are going to get out some nice pink and blue and orange ones and conduct our own postal service."

M. Bodeman gladly gave his consent and the stamps are now at the printers almost ready for delivery.

FRANCE HOLDS RECORD FOR RADIO PICTURES PARIS PAPER INSISTS

Paris.—France now holds the speed record for taking radio photographs, according to the "Quotidien."

This paper reports that a French radiologist took two photographs at an interval of 3-4 seconds, or 2 1-4 seconds better than an American, Lester Leonard.

Science benefits by racing with the X-ray; but the pictures can be projected as stereoscopic views whose reproduction of the anatomy in full relief permit a surgeon to operate without probing, said the paper. The shorter the interval between two exposures, the clearer the stereoscopic view.

HOOVER PLATFORM

Political platforms in this and probably in all other democratic countries are taken, as a rule, with numerous grains of salt. The temptation to yield to expediency is simply overwhelming, because after all the platform of a party is never a binding force upon its representatives but rather an argument to be presented to the citizen whose vote is desired.

We have never been at all sure that the political platform, as it is the custom of American parties to draw it, is a good thing. Habitually it is adopted before the candidate is selected and the person who becomes the nominee may quite possibly have had little or nothing to do with framing it. In these circumstances it is possible to expect that the candidate will always be in exact accord with all planks in the platform, though he must, of course, be a supporter of the major principles of the party which sets him up for election. In fact, if he were to prove an enthusiastic apostle of every platform declaration he would be a colorless individual indeed, a mere yes-man to other folks' ideas.

It would be a far better system, perhaps, if the parties were to nominate their candidates and then let the candidates frame their own platforms, because in such event the platform could be and usually would be an honest and meaningful declaration of exactly what the nominee stood for.

But long custom has established the present method—and long custom, by the same token, has permitted the nominee to exercise a large degree of freedom, both during the campaign and during his tenure of office, if elected, in the seriousness of his acceptance of some of the platform provisions.

We do not, for example, believe that Herbert Hoover, on his own responsibility, would have written exactly the same plank on prohibition as is incorporated in the Republican national platform of 1928. "The Republican party pledges itself and its nominees to the observance and vigorous enforcement of this provision of the constitution," reads the platform. Mr. Hoover, by his own declaration, regards prohibition as a noble experiment. He is not the sort of man who would blindly pledge himself to make a success of an experiment which may yet prove to be beyond the possibility of success. Yet it is to be apprehended that Mr. Hoover will do everything humanly possible in a President to make a success of prohibition. Perhaps, with his immense administrative inventiveness, he will find a way of making it far more successful than it ever has been. But we doubt if he would have made so definite a promise as has been made by his party.

On the other hand, there are certain provisions in the platform which take on infinitely more meaning with Hoover at the head of the ticket than they would have possessed had some other candidate been named. Take, for instance, the short plank on national defense: "We believe that in time of war the nation should draft for its defense not only its citizens but also every resource which may contribute to success. The country demands that the United States ever again be called on to defend itself by arms, the President be empowered to draft such material resources and such services and essential commodities, whether utilized in actual warfare or private activity."

Should unkind faith make Herbert Hoover a war president is there a doubt in any mind that the affirmed policy of his party would be forgotten? A war under Hoover would be a sorry thing indeed for the profiteers.

Then there is the usual waterways plank, which has heretofore been honored after the election, principally by neglect. If Hoover, assuming his election, does not impart to this matter of waterways development more significance than it has ever before possessed, a dozen times over, then we shall miss a guess.

And does anyone doubt that there would be, with Hoover in the Presidency, extraordinarily skillful and determined leadership in such matters as development of the merchant marine, solution of the railroad problem, conservation of national resources, solution of the agricultural difficulties, maintenance of peace between labor and capital, care of disabled veterans, desert reclamation, naval party and flood control—all platform subjects which with certain candidates might mean little but with this one take on high importance?

So far as the Republican platform is a document of economic promise it gains infinitely from the character of the candidate who will stand on it. So far as it partakes of the smugness and unctiousness of any political platform Mr. Hoover will probably forget all about it. Anyhow, he could have run without any platform at all—for he is platform enough, all by himself.

CURTIS

In naming Senator Charles Curtis of Kansas as its candidate for the Vice-Presidency, the Republican party made what may be fairly termed a perfect nomination. In the circumstances it was a bit of golden fortune that there was exactly such a person as Senator Curtis to nominate, and to have thrown over the opportunity would have been to slight the gifts of fate.

In the first place Senator Curtis is a very exceptionally able man. He has had a world of experience in public life and as part of the federal government. His judgment has been proven again and again to be profoundly good. His energy and capacity for work match his ability. He is conscientious and public-minded in the fullest degree—a man, in short, of the highest type.

In addition to that he occupies the peculiar position of being a Western man of the Western people—Ideally so. He never attended college, but received his education in the common schools and a lawyer's office. He is intimately familiar with every detail of the life of the Western agriculturalist. He is in the deepest sympathy with the wheat and corn belt farmers and with their difficulties—and yet he has the mental poise and breadth that render him immune to the crazes for panacea-bunting which afflict those people periodically. He is one of the very few men at Washington who can see all of both sides of the farm question—a conservative who understands the why and wherefore of agricultural radicalism. And as scarcely any other conservative does he enjoys the absolute confidence of the radical West.

By nominating Curtis in second place the convention wiped out nine-tenths of the feeling of injury among the Westerners which had resulted from the defeat of their Presidential candidates. And so far as the East is concerned no nomination could have been more completely pleasing.

No more powerful combination could possibly have been evolved than by the coupling of the names of Hoover and Curtis. It puts the election "in the bag."

TILSON'S DECENCY

There is a quiet decency about John Q. Tilson that is one of his most attractive qualities and which has perhaps had more to do with his political success than even his suspects. It was manifested at Kansas City when, though having every reason to believe that he would be heavily supported for the vice-presidential nomination in the balloting, he withdrew his name in favor of the obviously better strategy of nominating Senator Curtis. Colonel Tilson is of far larger calibre than many a candidate for the vice-presidency in the past and would have been entirely worthy of a place on the ticket with Hoover. But the exigencies of the occasion demanded the selection of a Western man and Tilson promptly and gracefully eliminated himself. He has lost nothing in the respect of his fellow citizens in this state by his action.

MARINES AND LANGUAGE A thousand more Marines are to be sent to Nicaragua to replace a considerable smaller number of men whose enlistments are up or who are to be invalided out of the tropics. A net increase to something like 4,500 men is likely to be the result.

There is, however, nothing in this movement to indicate that the military situation is growing worse down there. The United States lies under the obligation to supervise the October election in Nicaragua and obviously that supervision must not be rendered ineffectual through any insufficiency of the supervising force. It is for this reason that the Marines now in Nicaragua are being reinforced.

A further step toward efficiency in the control of the election is the determination of the Marine Corps to establish schools of Spanish in Nicaragua for the instruction of the Marines in the language of the country. This is an extremely wise course. Perhaps it would have helped materially in the pacification of the Nicaraguan rebels if it had been adopted earlier.

Moreover, it might not do any particular harm if this policy of familiarizing the fighting men with the language and customs of the people of neighbor countries were to be more generally extended to the State Department itself. If that department had been able to meet the Nicaraguans on the same basis of familiarity and understanding that enlisted men of the Marine Corps will occupy by next October, perhaps it would not have been necessary to send the Marines down there at all.

development more significance than it has ever before possessed, a dozen times over, then we shall miss a guess.

And does anyone doubt that there would be, with Hoover in the Presidency, extraordinarily skillful and determined leadership in such matters as development of the merchant marine, solution of the railroad problem, conservation of national resources, solution of the agricultural difficulties, maintenance of peace between labor and capital, care of disabled veterans, desert reclamation, naval party and flood control—all platform subjects which with certain candidates might mean little but with this one take on high importance?

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 16.—The whole world gathers on the Coney Island sands on a June Sunday. And this phase of "the world's playground" has always interested more than the latest thing in steeple chases or the newest wrinkle in carousels.

For when all is said and done here is gathered the real New York. Not the New York of Broadway or of Fifth Avenue or of any single section or street. It is the whole great city, chattering in a score of strange tongues. Chinese, Russians, Irish, Africans, French, Italians, Broadwayites and Harlemites, Fifth Avenueites and East Siders, Bronxites and Hell's kitchenites.

Basically, fundamentally, Coney Island is the playground of the masses. It is the turgid, odoriferous, play-hungry, boisterous, escaping herd. It is "the crowd"—the folk who make up the side street population of a great city. And a great percentage of these are foreign born. Turned loose upon the Coney sands they converse, shout and sing in a Babel of languages.

It is a sight which every distinguished foreigner has asked to look upon, and looking has marveled. And I have long contended that no one can truly claim to have seen New York until he has milled through the vast Sunday throng.

What strikes one about this international holiday is the manner in which all nations manufacture their gaiety out of the simplest of materials. Give a Russian, an Italian or a Britisher a pretty girl, a ukulele, or a harmonica, a bottle of pop and some ice cream, and within a few minutes a one-ring circus will be under way. Minstrelsy knows no geography and "mucking" seems to have its synonym in every language.

Then there are those off-stage pictures of tenement family life. The fat mama and her brood exchange cuffs, caresses and cat-calls. Those lusty bursts of temper associated with fire escapes and East Side pavements are carried over to the surf side. Their expenses are limited to the five-cent car fare, the lunch box contents and a few dimes' worth of the goodies to silence the youngsters. If they roam from the sand to the carnival parks, it is generally in the role of window shopper.

Perhaps, with much sputtering and fuming, little Antonio or Becky may achieve a ride on the merry-go-round. These family arguments can be heard at every hand—some in German, some in French, some in Yiddish.

For this is indeed the melting pot, and those who would see the New York that dwells within that other New York must come to Coney to see it in its fullest operation.

HOW WE THINK

The human brain is the most complex organ that physiologists have to study. It is the ruler of the body and, together with the nervous system is in intimate contact with all growing and functioning parts. The brain is most interesting because it is the seat of that elusive something, "the mind."

The brain is such a very delicate organ that it is protected with a bony covering all for itself in the skull cavity. It is composed of nerve cells and conducting fibres which are intensely complicated and connect the various cells together in such a manner that one stimulating impulse will bring an almost endless chain of associated activities. Some new stimulation attracts our attention.

Most of our conscious thinking is performed with the frontal and upper division called the cerebrum. Our muscular movements are coordinated and made smooth principally by the lower back division of the brain known as the cerebellum or "little brain." Beneath this is still smaller part known as the medulla oblongata, which tapers into the spinal cord.

The brain has often been compared to a complicated telephone switchboard. But it has the additional faculty of solving the problems presented to it by the nerves, and issuing orders that seem most correct to it when it compares the problem to similar ones that have occurred in the past. If the problem is a new one, the brain at least makes an attempt at trying to find a solution. This is the way we learn, first by trying one method after another until we find the correct solution.

Next time you have a difficult problem to solve, just try to keep track of your thinking processes to find out the way the brain continually brings up new ideas and rejects them until at last it finds a solution that it deems satisfactory. Only actual experiment, however, will prove the value of the decision. From this you can see the value of observing carefully, and learning as much as you can, so that the brain will have plenty of information to base its decisions upon. You will not then be likely to make so many mistakes.

You have undoubtedly noticed that all of your conscious thinking is done in word forms. This type of thinking is very handy because it enables us to frame out words before they are spoken. Many people think out loud, and from this you can see the intimate connection between the brain and the organs of speech. Even when you do not make a sound you can feel the vocal cords tighten and relax during word thinking.

When we reach a conclusion without the word process, it is called a year to get over from Paris. . . . As usual the collegians started it. . . . Chain-store beauty parlors. . . . TEACHERS FIGHT IN COUNTRY FOR RIGHT TO MARRY

Chicago.—If teachers marry, it's nobody's business but their own. The American Federation of Teachers is going to support that contention, because in a dozen states wedding bells are interpreted by boards of education as a signal for resignation of a teacher.

Why, the federation, wants to know, should orange blossoms be the end of a teacher's usefulness? Men teachers, it points out, are permitted to marry, and it is considered their own business, but when women teachers marry, they are thrown into the discard in many states, and many individual cities and communities.

Mrs. Alice Hansen, president of the federation, has laid plans to fight test cases in several cities, to establish the right of the women teachers to marry and retain their position.

At Coming Convention Mrs. Helen Taft Manning, daughter of the former president, and dean of Bryn Mawr College, is one of the leading advocates of the women teachers in their fight to hold their jobs after marriage, according to Mrs. Hansen, and the two women will wage the battle together.

The matter will be taken up vigorously at the coming convention of the national federation in Chicago. Mrs. Hansen said. "Protests against discharge of teachers who marry has come from all sections of the country. "Men teachers may marry, and no one thinks anything of it. But when a woman teacher marries it seems to become a matter of public concern. This discrimination should be eliminated."

In other branches in which women workers are engaged, it is pointed out, marriage has nothing to do with their jobs, or their advancement. Stenographers, bookkeepers, or women in a number of other vocations marry without suffering any financial loss through losing their jobs.

Experienced Teachers Experience in teaching increases the value to the public of a feminine teacher, Mrs. Manning maintains, and those teachers are married only after several years of service. Consequently, when a woman teacher marries the public loses an experienced servant in cities where marriage is considered a bar.

Question: Mrs. V. C. asks: "Will you kindly publish your method of making Melba toast?" Answer: Melba toast is made by cutting the crust from white bread and slicing the bread a quarter of an inch thick. Dry these slices over night and toast in a slow oven at least twenty minutes to brown the toast all the way through. It is not sufficient to simply dry the toast, but it must be turned into a golden brown color before it is completely dextrinized. This browning turns the starch into dextrin.

Question: J. P. M. asks: "Will you please say what the final results will be if a person who has been used to an outdoor life, such as farming, is shut off for months from the exercise that such a life gives?" Answer: Of course, the results will be bad if a person who is used to outdoor exercise does not substitute some other kind of exercise such as that which may be taken in a gymnasium. A half hour of vigorous handball, volley ball, or regulated callisthenics will give anyone during sedentary work all of the exercise needed to keep the muscles in good condition.

It's Not All Smooth Sailing When Your're On The Stage

Local Man for Fourteen Years on the Stage Gives Bits of Experience—Will Not Grant Straight Interview But the Reporter Got Stray Pieces in Some Way—The Inside of an Actor's Life.

Did you know... that is just to attract your attention. Did it?

In 1916 Dramatic person—An actor. A reporter. The place—New York City.

The reporter: I represent The New York American and I—

Excuse, please Mr. Andy. Are you comfortable? Boy, telephone for a taxi so this gentleman can get to his office in a hurry.

In 1928 Dramatic person: An actor. A reporter. The place: Manchester, (One of the 57).

Do you believe it? Hard to do, but with these television and telephoto and North and South Pole expeditions and rocket cars and planes going to the moon, seems as if the days of miracles have not passed.

THINK OF AN ACTOR WHO DOES NOT WANT HIS PHOTOGRAPH PUBLISHED NOR HAVE THE STORY OF HIS ACCOMPLISHMENTS IN THE PAPERS.

There is such a person right in Manchester and television difficulties is not as hard a problem as getting a story from this gentleman.

The same reporter figured in both incidents mentioned above. But what difference? Is it that the actors nowadays are shunning the limelight?

At any rate a man who played opposite Frankie Williams, the Polli player who is turning Manchester stage fans upside down these days when they see her acting in Hartford, lives in this little town. And he didn't give out that information either. It came about in a roundabout way.

NO STORY DIRECT FROM THIS ACTOR

IT APPEARS that a local amateur actor was talking on one of the corners in the south end this week and mentioned that he had been to Hartford to see the Polli Players recently in a Broadway success. He said that he had met Frankie Williams after the performance and that she had, in the course of the conversation, asked him if he lived in Hartford. He answered that he lived in Manchester and then came the tip for this story.

"Do you know Bill Ennis?" The amateur confessed that he did not and few do, but Billy Ennis was identified in the local directory as "Ennis, William T. (Helen E.), mgr 603 Main St. h 8 Newman St." A trip to 8 Newman street brought no result as nobody was home. Then a trip to 603 Main St. And it ever there is an advocate of visible and known house numbers for Manchester it is this writer (As our sports department refers to it).

At the Center, a clerk in a south end department store was asked where the number was located. He scratched his head—and admitted his ignorance. He said he was born and brought up here. The next man was a store keeper. He reckoned it was somewhere near the terminus. Three storekeepers in succession were asked until the pool parlor in the Sheridan hotel was entered. This man said that the number was the hotel's itself. Several storekeepers, in solemn conclave, finally got a directory and lo! it was found, that the address was in the hotel building but not the hotel. It was the Phillips store, a chain organization. If merchants on our Main street, in broad daylight, do not know the numbers in their own neighborhood, think what

You Think You're Making Up Young? Then Girls Read This and Weep.

Now here is something that should interest the Manchester girls. It concerns one of the most important phases of her earthly existence—make up. An experienced actor and a make-up artist who worked years in stock companies should know how to use rouge and powder and listen girls here is what he says: "An actor never talks about residents of a town in which he is playing. It would not be diplomacy. But, among themselves they talk shop and a part of the shop talk is make up. "The girl off the stage hasn't the vaguest idea how to paint and powder. The make-up they use is the make-up a character uses to depict a Comanche Indian. That is no exaggeration. The girls I see in the streets use the same colors and use their powder just the same as we make up for an Indian character. "The colors the girls use and the places on which they daub the colors on their faces are used by actresses to denote AGE."

It is to try to find a house number at night in the outskirts of our town.

A Brief Interview "Mr. Ennis?" "Yes."

"I would like to get something about your days as an actor. I have read in the newspaper and the editor thought it would be interesting to hear about some of your experiences."

"My friend, there was a time when I stood for 24 sheet stands but that time is passed. I do not believe anyone is interested now in what I ever did. I'd rather not speak about it."

And that was his little speech but there are ways and ways to get a story when a reporter is desperate and the following was obtained somehow. (How, deponeth, sayeth not.)

A WORD PICTURE OF W. T. ENNIS

WILLIAM T. ENNIS must be a man in the early forties. His hair is just beginning to gray about the temples. He is of splendid build and has a well modulated voice—the trained voice of the actor. His gestures also suggest the profession. He wears horn rimmed glasses. A neat business suit, a modest tie and a turban down collar. That was the picture gained in the few seconds of the interview. Now for a few scattered bits culled from his experience that he did not tell the reporter. If quotation marks are used the reader must be a bit charitable.

Mr. Ennis has been living in Manchester for about four years. He is married. He came here from Hartford. He is the little knock outside of his clientele at the store. His leisure time is spent in Hartford looking at shows, a habit that he can not break. He has been out of the show business since 1915.

12 Years An Actor

For twelve years the local man has toured the country in vaudeville, in stock and with repertory companies. How he got into the game might be interesting. He was born in Wallingford and during his boyhood days took unusual interest in amateur theatricals. Every chance he got he would go to New Haven to see the shows presented there. One day a stock company was playing "The Girl of the Golden West" and Lawrence McGill was the director. Young Ennis went to see the manager. He asked for a chance to show what he could do and—wonder of wonders—he was given one. He made good almost immediately and stayed with the show for the whole season. In explaining his "lucky break" he said:

"It is most unusual for a youngster to be taken up that way, usually it is weeks and months and maybe years before he is given a chance. Booking agents are hard boiled. They have to be. Every day they see hundreds of actors and so called actors clamoring for a job. To hear the actors tell it, they are the best in the world, so from continually hearing all of this hot air they come to the stage where they believe nothing that an applicant tells them. That's what makes it so hard for the beginner. With no experience his case is lost at the start but some of the old timers got away with that stumbling block. They would tell the bookers they had experience. They would get a job and last a week before they were fired because they were so bad. They'd then go to another booker and maybe this time they'd last two weeks. If the booking agents did not run out they finally had experience enough to get a regular job."

Learned Fast But Ennis was learning fast with the stock company he joined but it was no easy work. Imagine studying in the morning for your next week's show, playing that afternoon and evening and getting home after midnight. Often the whole of Sunday would be devoted to rehearsals. When there were the long railroad jumps of one hundred and two hundred miles. Switching of trains at 3 o'clock in the morning and nights spent in railroad stations in tank towns. Cold dressing rooms. Rube shows and East Lynns. Let's take the liberty of a few quotation marks again. "The trouper now have a wonderful time compared with those of even fifteen years ago or ten," he said. "Now carpets are on the dress-

a performer had to go through. They are patient to a degree seldom seen in any other individual. They will go over a scene a dozen times and just when one would think they were about to collapse from weariness or blow up in anger they'll take a performer to one side and talk to him like a father. I've seen it hundreds of times. Bill Master, one of Belasco's best directors was one of those men."

Forgotten Cues "Cues are forgotten continuously," he answered. "Many performers try to provide for a cue and never give a cue. All one can do is to wait until they stop talking and then chime in. In time you can do that so that nobody notices it. And they forget also, don't forget. I was playing in vaudeville with a man for a solid year. You would imagine that by that time we'd know our lines. Well, one night a baby started to cry in the audience and I kept up. My partner went stone cold on his lines. His mind became a blank he told me afterwards and he had the worst case of stage fright in history. He simply could not say anything the road you would have to finish as best I could alone."

Robert Mantell, the great actor told me that when he started he had but one line to say. It was "The King is Dead. Long Live the King." He rehearsed that for months and when the night of the opening came, he rushed upon the stage and yelled "Long Live the King, he's dead."

Voice Training Mr. Ennis was asked, since his voice strikes one at once, how he trained it. He said he had a good voice at the start and directors taught him how to use it. He said that one can make himself heard without yelling. Actors never shout, he said. They speak a tone or two above their natural voice and it carries, even to the furthest parts of large theaters. As for the best speakers he said that the English actors were better than the Americans as far as speaking voices were concerned. He said their manner of speaking is copied a lot by American performers. The American has an accent although he is the last one to admit it and you can only tell the difference when you hear the American trained and a British trained man on the stage at the same time. The difference is marked then.

Asked if he would go back to the stage again, Mr. Ennis said: "I don't know. It's in the blood you know and I've been tempted countless times. Who knows when this temptation will become too strong for me to overcome."

LONG HOPS ON TRAINS HARD ON THE ACTORS

RAIN jumps from New York to Richmond, Va., were ordinary hops in those days. After days on the roads, the local actor would find himself with stock companies with winter stands in some big city. This was a bit better as far as traveling was concerned but it was a different show every week and this meant much rehearsing. "At least you'd have a looking glass in your dressing room" he commented. "On the road you would have to carry a glass along or be out of luck and your trunk was your dressing table often. They would provide you with a broken down chair for some reason."

Not on the Program "Those funny things happen so often that the old trouper does not remember them. Just at the moment I was playing in "Rebecca of Sunnyside Farm." I was to make an entrance in one of the early acts driving a team. In the first act I had a different part so I looked at the stage hands to watch the team while I made up. This fellow forgot all about the team and left the horses to themselves. The orchestra swung into the overture, the curtain arose and before a person came out on the stage the two horses galloped across with no driver and knocked down all the scenery. The funny part of it was that the set was an interior, a parlor as I remember and it must have been a scream for the audience to see a team of horses come galloping through a door into a parlor. However they forgot all about it by the time the horses came on."

Mr. Ennis worked in stock as a heavy and in straight character roles in stage parlance means the villain of the piece. Straight character might be anything in the character line except comedy roles. In vaudeville he worked on the same bill with the Thorntons and played with those musical comedy stars Eddie Foy, Harry Bulger and the like. On tour he worked as an understudy to Andrew Mack and played his lead weeks on end. He spent two years in vaudeville and it is his impression that stock is the better work.

"In vaudeville the performers are different," he said. They are not in the same class as the stock performers. They are of all sorts. They're not so classish. It is a case of everybody for himself. In stock one knows everybody else. It is like a big happy family, a world all by itself. Hard as stock is it is nothing like the three and four days in vaudeville where you have to stand around a stage with your make up on all day and half the night. Your turn comes around so often that you can't even get out into the fresh air."

Memory Tricks He was asked how he memorized his parts in stock.

"The best way is to write down every line and cue in the script. You will learn it a great deal easier. Mornings are the best times. As soon as you get up and start writing before breakfast or after a cup of coffee. From writing your part you gradually form a clear picture of your character. You'd be surprised how you fall into that after a while. While you are on the stage you are really the person you impersonate. And your memory from constant practice develops wonderfully. I remember one time I was transferred to another company on Thursday from one character to another totally different. My part consisted of 60 sides, as we call pages. I was letter perfect on Monday matinee. That is nothing unusual for stock players. You will find that you'll study late into the night and when you go to bed you can't remember a line but when you awaken they'll all come back to you."

STAGE DIRECTORS AGE PATIENT MEN THE director in a stock company is often pictured as "a slave driver who treats the actors and actresses as if they were puppets. That is not so, according to the local man. "They all have been actors themselves," he said, "and know what

RAMONA AT STATE SUNDAY AND MONDAY

Famous Vehicle With Dolores Del Rio in Title Role Comes Here—Big Program Today.

The screen firmament, like the illuminated heavens, is studded with many stars. Some twinkle faintly; others sparkle brightly; a few shine forth in brilliant splendor.

The screen also has its Milky Way—its thousands of performers who play bits and parts, their luminous rays dimmed by the lustreous halo of the stars.

And the screen has its meteoric and its comets—its brilliant personalities that burst forth into view, sweep with flaming radiance across the film sky, and then go out in darkness.

Dolores Del Rio is a celestial personality that has awakened the hearts of millions of American movie fans. Her rise to popularity has been fleet like the meteor; her personality flaming like the comet; her career fixed and permanent like the sun.

This slender, dark-eyed girl from Mexico, without dramatic training, without a theatrical background, unable even to speak the English language, first gave dramatic promise as Charmaine, the famous heroine of "What Price Glory" in a way that took the entire country by storm. People everywhere recognized her as the great film star of the year.

And now Dolores Del Rio is to appear in "Ramona," bringing to life on the screen the beautiful half-breed Indian girl of early California, that glamorous period when the romantic strains of guitar and song were heard in patios of the Spanish Dons.

In the colorful role of "Ramona," which comes to the State theater on Sunday and Monday, this young artist finds a meter worthy of her versatile talents. She gives a brilliant characterization as the beloved heroine of Helen Hunt Jackson's classic story of romance, tragedy and love. Miss Del Rio is not merely an actress playing the part. She is "Ramona," living, loving, suffering, triumphing. She runs the gamut of human emotions; she feels all the pangs of love, despair and woe; she plays upon the heart strings of humanity.

Sharing honors with her in this picture is Warner Baxter, who plays the part of her Indian husband, Mr. Baxter, long a favorite with film fans, contributes the most striking role of his career before the Kleig lights.

The song hit "Ramona," which is now recognized as one of the most popular waltz ballads of the day, will be vocalized in accompaniment with the picture.

Tickets are now on sale at the box office of the theater for Sunday evening.

For today's continuous show, which runs continuously from 2:15 until 10:30, the State is presenting a splendid double feature program.

The features are Madge Bellamy in "The Play Girl," and Fred Thomson in "The Sunset Legion."

SESSIONS PLAYS ORGAN IN HONOLULU CHURCH

Manchester Musician Writes of Cordial Reception and Inquiry for Woman.

A letter dated June 2, and mailed at Honolulu, has been received here from Archibald Sessions, who is on a tour around the world. He arrived at Honolulu on the day preceding the arrival of the "Southern Cross," trans-Pacific flyers, and refers to the enthusiastic reception which was accorded the flyers on their arrival. He was entertained by the governor of the island.

At the Central Union Church, Honolulu, where Vernon Robinson is organist, Mr. Sessions gave a recital on Friday evening, June 1, on the Joseph Platt Cooke memorial organ. An audience of over 500 persons was present, considered a remarkable attendance in view of the fact that the U. S. Fleet was in the harbor, and the whole city celebrating the arrival of the flyers.

After the recital Mr. Sessions was approached by a woman from the audience who wanted to know if Mr. Sessions knew in Manchester a Mrs. Maytie Case Crowell. Mr. Sessions told her that Mrs. Crowell was on the musical committee of the S. M. E. church, where he was organist and choir director.

Mr. Sessions arrives at Suva, Fiji islands, according to schedule, today.

His next stop will be Auckland, New Zealand, where he is planning to meet friends of a member of the S. M. E. choir. He sends greetings to the "Herald" and also to his many friends in Manchester and vicinity.

ANNOUNCING THE HERALD AND

WORK IS STARTED ON NOVEL PROJECT

House to Be Located in New Robert J. Smith Tract at Henry and North Elm Streets.

The Herald is pleased to announce in conjunction with Robert J. Smith, well known real estate developer, a Model Home will be constructed on Mr. Smith's new development known as the Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home. This is a new project in Manchester and it is believed that it will meet with popular approval and that it will create a great deal of interest among people who are contemplating building a home of their own.

The house which is to be erected and known as the Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home will be of the latest design, with all modern conveniences and will be built to sell at a popular price.

Location of Elizabeth Park Model Home is a name given by Mr. Smith to this newest development bounded by North Elm street on one side and Green road on the other. Mr. Smith's slogan for the tract is "Beautiful As A Rose." It compares quite favorably with Elizabeth Park in Hartford. It is quite an extensive plot, covering about 60 acres and for the most part is cleared land. It has been necessary to do some cutting and filling in order to lay out streets, the principal one of which will be the extension of Henry street eastward. The land rises gradually east from North Elm street and the view from there is most attractive.

Elizabeth Park is essentially suitable for a proposition of this kind as it is centrally located on Henry street, leading to it, is one of the best developed streets in the center of the town, which gives one a favorable impression in approaching the tract.

Gas, sewers, water mains and electric lights are now extended immediately throughout Elizabeth Park. The streets are being laid out and graded. Sidewalks will follow the grading of the streets immediately.

Popular Priced Elizabeth Park offers popular priced home sites to the average man who wants a home of his own. It is a development that now has an abundance of shade and fruit trees. This is always an attraction to home builders because in many instances they have lived in older sections of the town where shade trees are well established.

Location of the Model Home The Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home will be located on the south side of the Henry street extension, as one enters the tract, not far from the junction of that street with North Elm street. It is a pleasant location and offers many possibilities of interesting development. The ground is sloping at this point and makes it possible to have a garage under the house with entrance from the side. This is a very popular plan with home owners of today as it means that the car can be kept where it is warm and dry and heat can be supplied with hardly any additional cost from the house heating system.

Work Has Been Started Plans have been prepared by the State Trade School and work has been started on the project. Workmen with a steam shovel, teams, etc., are now digging the cellar and rough grading the surroundings. Besides the Model Home there will be a group of other new homes in the vicinity. The house is nearing completion. The foundation of another has been poured and framing started and several others staked out and will be started at once.

Much Interest in Project A model home sponsored by the local newspaper has been a very successful proposition for contractors, builders, material supply firms, plumbers, heating contractors, electrical contractors and appliance firms in many other cities and towns. The project is meeting with hearty co-operation from these firms in Manchester.

A detailed story of the progress of the project will be given from week to week, accompanied by pictures also news of the progress of home construction throughout the town. Manchester has always been known for its fine homes and is a city of people who believe in owning their own homes. This is a fine attitude for any city and means a great deal in its development. At the present time building conditions in Manchester are quite good and many new homes are being built and many more are planned.

ELECTRIC COOKING NOTABLE FEATURE

Among the many new developments in home building and furnishing, electric cooking deserves a prominent place. It has practically revolutionized the workshop of the home, the kitchen. One needs only to read the Home Economics pages of the newspapers and household magazines or the teachings of Home Economics experts to realize that the electric way has become the mode.

Electric cooking has many interesting possibilities which have only been half explored. One of the most interesting features of electric cooking is the control of the oven. It has really banished soot and smoke, fumes and gases, and most of the trials and tribulations which our grandmothers took as part of cooking.

One of the most interesting features of electric cooking and one which inevitably places it in the modern home is the automatic control. Electric ranges have, first of all, an automatic temperature control of the oven. All that the housewife needs to do is set the control at whatever temperature the food calls for, and then forget it. The oven works by itself and perfectly. What this means, only a woman who has struggled with old-fashioned guesswork fires can know. There is also a time control, so that an oven dinner can be placed in the oven in the morning, the clock set to turn it on at a certain time, and off at a certain time, and the housewife comes home to find the dinner cooked. Modern methods which save time and labor have entered the home with electric cooking, and now a woman has at her command tools which a factory might envy.

High speed cooking plates also provide quick and easy frying, boiling, stewing, etc. There is an even heat which is confined to the plate and easily regulated by a three heat switch. Much of the cooking can be done on stored heat, and without fear of burning.

REFRIGERATION PROVES BIG HEALTH FACTOR

The proper preservation of foods today becomes an integral part of the job of preserving health. The scientific cold of electric refrigeration kills the bacteria that spoil the food. It keeps meats wholesome, milk sweet and salads crisp. And, in addition, it changes the marketing from an every-day drudgery to a twice-a-week adventure. Buying, too, becomes much more economical, and precious hours of leisure are gained by the housewife.

For these reasons a radiator heating system is recommended to house owners as first choice. It is true that the initial price is higher—necessarily so, because of the nature of the equipment and the work of installation. But the experience of owners shows conclusively that a good steam, vapor or hot water radiator heating system is the cheapest in the end. Its value in terms of genuine human comfort can hardly be evaluated in dollars. Warmth in the house should be clean and healthful; and in this respect radiator warmth is the best known to modern science. Radiators warm the air at comparatively moderate temperatures, preserving its healthful qualities. Nor can soot or dust be carried from the basement upstairs.

Fuel is a matter of growing importance to house owners. Should it be desirable to burn hard coal, soft coal, coke, oil or gas, there is a boiler exactly suited to the need. Various models of the new insulated sectional boilers burn the different fuels with equal efficiency and convenience. The insulation, being protected by an attractive red metal jacket, is thoroughly indestructible and more efficient than the usual cement plastering job.

New type radiators of the thin tube exposed decorative type are designed to most efficiently utilize the heat generated within the boiler.

Although the new boilers and radiators are markedly superior to the old styles in appearance and performance, they compare favorably in price and are well within reach of the average home owner. It is well to strain matters a bit in the provision of a good heating system, sacrificing if necessary some less important feature of the house, which may be added later.

The raccoon is fond of the water-tide and carefully washes all its food.

GOOD HEATING PLANT ADDS TO HOME VALUE

Although it may seem a far cry at this time of the year to the days when one's entire household comfort rests upon the adequacy of the heating plant, it behooves those contemplating building to investigate the merits of the various types of heating systems. It is fairly well established that a good radiator system is the most satisfactory, and of these there are many types, including the steam and hot water plants. It may be absolutely relied upon to warm every room in the house regardless of weather conditions; it is the most healthful, the most economical and the most durable, assuming, of course, installation is proper. It adds more than its cost to the value of the property. Radiator heating is an investment—not an expense—and one that will pay high and lasting dividends in the form of health, comfort and lower fuel bills.

For these reasons a radiator heating system is recommended to house owners as first choice. It is true that the initial price is higher—necessarily so, because of the nature of the equipment and the work of installation. But the experience of owners shows conclusively that a good steam, vapor or hot water radiator heating system is the cheapest in the end. Its value in terms of genuine human comfort can hardly be evaluated in dollars. Warmth in the house should be clean and healthful; and in this respect radiator warmth is the best known to modern science. Radiators warm the air at comparatively moderate temperatures, preserving its healthful qualities. Nor can soot or dust be carried from the basement upstairs.

Fuel is a matter of growing importance to house owners. Should it be desirable to burn hard coal, soft coal, coke, oil or gas, there is a boiler exactly suited to the need. Various models of the new insulated sectional boilers burn the different fuels with equal efficiency and convenience. The insulation, being protected by an attractive red metal jacket, is thoroughly indestructible and more efficient than the usual cement plastering job.

New type radiators of the thin tube exposed decorative type are designed to most efficiently utilize the heat generated within the boiler.

Although the new boilers and radiators are markedly superior to the old styles in appearance and performance, they compare favorably in price and are well within reach of the average home owner. It is well to strain matters a bit in the provision of a good heating system, sacrificing if necessary some less important feature of the house, which may be added later.

GOOD HEATING PLANT ADDS TO HOME VALUE

Although it may seem a far cry at this time of the year to the days when one's entire household comfort rests upon the adequacy of the heating plant, it behooves those contemplating building to investigate the merits of the various types of heating systems. It is fairly well established that a good radiator system is the most satisfactory, and of these there are many types, including the steam and hot water plants. It may be absolutely relied upon to warm every room in the house regardless of weather conditions; it is the most healthful, the most economical and the most durable, assuming, of course, installation is proper. It adds more than its cost to the value of the property. Radiator heating is an investment—not an expense—and one that will pay high and lasting dividends in the form of health, comfort and lower fuel bills.

For these reasons a radiator heating system is recommended to house owners as first choice. It is true that the initial price is higher—necessarily so, because of the nature of the equipment and the work of installation. But the experience of owners shows conclusively that a good steam, vapor or hot water radiator heating system is the cheapest in the end. Its value in terms of genuine human comfort can hardly be evaluated in dollars. STRONG FRAMING NEEDED IN ROOFS

The roof is the first essential of shelter from the elements. Yet like other phases of construction it is too frequently subjected to corner-cutting in both materials and workmanship. This is especially true of the supporting framing, hidden beneath the exterior surface, which, no matter of how high a quality, cannot give satisfactory service if not properly supported.

In determining upon roof framing the pitch should be carefully considered. Insufficient pitch probably causes more troublesome roofs than any other single factor. In climates where snowfall is heavy the pitch should be considerable and simple, straight lines and avoidance of pockets are desirable. Roof rafters must be of sufficient size to support the weight of the roof, to carry snowloads beyond the normal and to resist high wind pressures. If the rafters are undersized or spaced too far apart, they will sag; this will cause splitting and loosening of even the best shingles.

Many types of sheathing are in use today, and wide favor is given roof sheathing which serves as insulation. The roof may also be insulated by lining it on the inside with one of several materials. Of these a new fireproof asbestos wall-board is eminently satisfactory, although almost any type of rigid or flexible insulation may be used. The asbestos board serves as an interior finish, as well as sheathing.

Concrete block, made of suitable materials correctly proportioned by processes that have been proved good practice, possess the desirable qualities of utility, attractiveness and permanence. Like monolithic concrete, concrete block and brick, if well made, grow stronger with age, and concrete brick or block buildings, like those of monolithic concrete, are fireproof, rotproof, ratproof, sanitary and require the minimum of maintenance.

Nearly every one knows that concrete is made by mixing Portland cement, sand, pebbles or crushed stone and water, placing the material in some kind of form and allowing it to remain undisturbed while hardening. Many persons, however, do not appreciate the fact that some concrete varies greatly in quality from other concrete and that for good concrete, whether in the form of block, brick or monolithic, best results are obtained only when suitable materials are correctly proportioned, mixed, placed and cured under proper conditions.

Locks For Every Practical Purpose

ELIZABETH PARK MODEL HOME

NURSERY BUYERS OFTEN MISGUIDED

Trees Outgrow Place Quickly If Not Properly Selected.

Many would-be purchasers go to nurseries to buy evergreens and are delighted with the "cute little" pines, spruces, firs, hemlocks and certain other plants, so they pick up the specimens whose appearance pleases them. They never ask if their selection will be in keeping over a period of years and suited to the spot they have selected for it. Many, you know, are quick growers and attain great size far out of keeping with a location near the house.

They buy it because it appeals to them and plant it close to the house where they can look down upon it from the parlor or the dining room window. But in a few years it will have grown so large that it completely shuts out the view from the first floor window and darkens the room. Shortly after it does the same thing to the bedroom window above.

Finally the owner discovers that mature specimens of the species he has planted naturally reach one hundred to one hundred and fifty or more feet high, spread forty to seventy-five feet and have a trunk diameter of three to five feet.

Becomes Kindling Wood

"Gracious!" he exclaims, "I have planted only three feet from the house. What can I do?"

Unfortunately the only thing to do under the circumstances is to cut it down and then cut it up. It is of no use for lumber but when dry will make good kindling for the fireplace.

To be sure, you may lop off the lower branches, but the tree will both suffer and look out of place—a tuft of foliage on the summit of the naked trunk pockmarked with ghastly wounds. Ugliness personified. Sooner or later you'll cut it down, both a waste of its ugliness and because it will shade the house or "push the house over" as it continues to grow.

The Norway spruce, for instance, should never be planted as an ornamental tree on a suburban lot. Normally it grows one hundred and fifty feet high and spreads fifty to sixty feet.

Christmas Trees

The only reason for planting Norway spruce on a suburban lot should be to supply a home-grown Christmas tree. When planted with ample space in which to grow it will make a finer specimen than any of the cut trees shipped in from the north woods. These are cut a month or six weeks before Christmas, so when delivered they have already lost a large part of their needles and within a day or two drop the remainder. The homegrown tree, freshly cut, should last two or three weeks. If placed outdoors before New Year's day, however, it should continue attractive all winter.

Beautiful and majestic as pines, firs, spruces and hemlocks are in nature, they are elephants among the evergreens, therefore they should be planted only on "estates," large suburban properties and in forests—never on ordinary village lots, except as just noted. Among them are very few small growing species or dwarf varieties. Dwarf evergreens are found mainly among the juniper, yew, arbutus and retinospora groups, each of which also includes some species and varieties that grow too large for the usual fifty-foot lot though, even the largest is small beside the pines, firs, spruces and hemlocks.

Firs, spruces, pines and hemlocks look so much more thrifty in the nursery than the dwarf kinds in adjacent rows that the prospective purchaser who does not know how big they will grow naturally chooses them without telling the nurseryman that he has only a fifty-foot lot on which to plant them.

Nurseryman Not at Fault

In such cases the nurseryman is in no way to blame for making the sale. He cannot be expected, especially during the rush seasons, to ask questions to see whether or not each customer is buying intelligently or blindly. Nevertheless, if the customer would tell the nurseryman the size of his property the character of the soil, the lay of the land and other important facts, and ask for recommendations, he would be given advice that might result in his buying fewer specimens but of different kinds and perhaps in paying a smaller bill even though the prices of some of the trees might be higher than for the larger growing sorts.

Another thing that only too often influences the unposted purchaser to buy large growing kinds is the price. For instance, a dwarf Alberta spruce twenty-four inches high may be priced at $10 and a Norway

Customers Incredulous

It is useless for the salesman to tell this chap that the Alberta spruce and many other dwarfs grow only two or three inches in a year, therefore cost more to grow to salable size and yield a smaller proportion of profit than does the Norway, which requires less than half the time and is easier to grow. It is just as useless for him to say that when full grown the Alberta will be only three or four feet tall and be therefore suitable for planting in a corner close to the porch, whereas the Norway will grow a foot to two feet a year when once established, and keep up this rate for fifty years or longer. The customer won't believe, so he buys.

AUTOMATIC STOKER ELIMINATES WORK

Intended primarily for home use, an automatic electric stoker for the coal-burning furnace is claimed to effect economies in heating with an almost total elimination of all furnace care. It can be installed in any type of domestic warm air furnace, steam or hot water boiler.

The manufacturers state that it has been successfully used for a number of years for heating many residences and domestic hot water tank heaters, where coal consumption averaged between six and twenty-five tons a year. It burns low-priced buckwheat or rice anthracite, resulting in a considerable saving where the larger and more expensive sizes have been used formerly.

The apparatus maintains indefinitely, by thermostat or hand setting, any temperature desired. It consists of a hopper, which holds the coal supply; a screw conveyor, which delivers the coal from the bottom of the hopper to the combustion point; an adjustable clutch, which controls the amount of coal fed; a scientifically constructed underfed fire pot, which replaces the usual grate bars; a screw conveyor which receives the ashes from the fire pot and carries them to a dustproof can outside the furnace; a small motor as the driving power and a small fan to automatically supply the proper amount of air to insure sufficient combustion.

It is intended to eliminate practically all of the fatigue and annoyance of furnace tending. The machine is said to never require attention more than once a day, and usually less often. It completely obviates all shaking of grates and makes the handling of ashes easy.

Attached Garage IS BIG CONVENIENCE

Planning the garage at the time when the design of the house is arranged has many features to recommend it. Of these, the architectural harmony necessary to a well balanced ensemble of house, supplementary buildings, plantings and grounds, is probably most important. Planning house and garage at the same time obviously tends to agreement of design and material.

Incorporation of the modern two car garage within the general plan of the house further tends to enhance the architectural values of both and to increase the size and impressiveness of the house.

Considerable ground space is saved by this arrangement, and the placing of walks and drives is usually simplified. Then, too, wiring and heating service for the garage is much less costly when both are attached. In going from house to garage one never has to face inclement weather, since a kalamain or other type of fireproof door may be made to directly connect the two. The bottom of this door should be a foot or more above the level of the garage floor to prevent inflammable and annoying fumes from penetrating to the house, but this is usually automatically provided for by the differing levels of the floor within the house or cellar and the garage floor.

The complete wiring system of the house may be extended to include adequate light and service facilities for the garage. The jacketed insulated boiler may be made to serve the garage by adding

Automatic Water Heater Simple in Construction

So ornamental in appearance that it can be placed in the kitchen, a new low priced automatic water heater features simplicity of operation and economy of fuel, which may be natural or artificial gas. The valve by which it is operated is without springs or packing, and is said to last indefinitely.

It is equipped with a safety pilot, which automatically shuts off the gas if the pilot light goes out eliminating all danger to occupants of the house should the gas supply fail momentarily and then be turned on again.

As soon as a faucet is turned the force of water running through the automatic valve instantaneously releases a large volume of gas to several burners which heat the water as it passes through a copper coil. The water is thus always fresh and clean and may be used for drinking, according to the manufacturer. The apparatus is said to be entirely safe in operation.

BUILDING RECORD MAY BE HIGHEST

Operations Launched in 37 States is Without Equal in History.

May was the highest record month for building projects started in thirty-seven Eastern states east of the Rocky Mountains, according to compilations made by the F. W. Dodge Corporation. Almost every geographical section in the territory covered by the survey reported exceptional construction volume if not greater activity than ever before in the building history of the district. Down East, as they say, which has been lagging for some time, reports that the month just ended was the most active in the building history of the New England.

$600,000,000 Period

The Dodge figures show that for the thirty-seven states on the dawn side of the Rockies new building and engineering work contracted for in these states (about 91 per cent of the total country) during the past month amounted to $688,097,200.

This tops the previous high record of April, 1923, by about $25,000,000. The increase over May of last year was 21 per cent.

The combined total for new construction started during the first five months of this year is also a record-breaking figure. The total for the first five months of 1926 held the record up until now. This year's figure, amounting to $2,796,301,300 is 9 per cent ahead of the total for the first five months of last year and is 7 per cent over the total for the corresponding period of 1926.

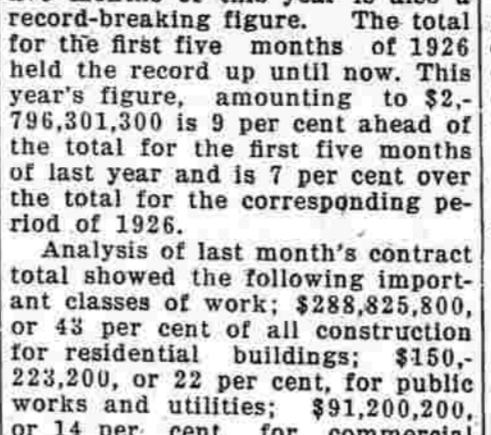

Analysis of last month's contract total showed the following important classes of work: $288,825,800, or 43 per cent of all construction for residential buildings; $150,223,200, or 22 per cent, for public works and utilities; $91,200,200, or 14 per cent, for commercial buildings; and $47,851,000, or 7 per cent, for educational projects.

New work planned in the thirty-seven Eastern states during the past month amounted to $882,244,700. This figure is 4 per cent ahead of the amount reported in the same month of last year and is 6 per cent over the amount reported in the preceding month of this year.

Record Month for New York

New York State and northern New Jersey had $184,555,100 in contracts for new building and engineering work during the past month. The above figure was the largest May ever recorded for this district and it was also the highest

THE CRUCIFIXION

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE.

International Sunday School Lesson Text, June 17.
God commendeth His love toward us, in that, while we were sinners, Christ died for us.—Rom. 5:8.

Mockingly rose the cry, "If thou art the Son of God, come down from the cross;" "He saved others; Himself He cannot save;" "Come down from the cross, and we will believe."

If He had come down from the cross, faith would have been destroyed forever, for then prophecy and His own declarations would have failed. The Word would not have been fulfilled, and its saving power made naught. He who calmed the sea, walked upon the stormy waters, and raised the dead to life, could have come down from the cross; but He chose to keep true to His mission by laying down all things of this world to reveal the measureless love of God, the self-sacrificing nature of it, and in all ways become the perfect Exemplar.

Read that scene on Calvary more deeply than as a story of suffering and dying for us. She unknown soldier and millions have done that gladly, and millions would do it again today. The Lord so suffered and died for us to disclose that God is such a one as to suffer anything for our good. He did not suffer in substitution of our suffering when we violate the laws of creation's order. There is no possible way for him to bear the penalty for stealing as long as one steals, for the penalty is the mental and sole condition of being a thief. Likewise of every evil. The penalty is inherent in evil itself, and is removed only when the evil is put away.

Jesus suffered that man might have the vision of His love, limitless in humility, self-sacrifice, compassion and service, and from understanding the quality of His love get the power to put evil away, and thus be saved from its penalties. Clearly He declares that the same "To give knowledge of salvation unto His people by the remission of sins."

It is written that he "bare our sicknesses." He bares them by our turning to Him, and letting light and power from Him in flow. Thus He meets our infirmities through our co-operating wills, and removes evils as the sun disperses disease and cold.

Anyone can, by power from the Lord, hold his evils in check; then while one from the Lord, he does evil and does good, the Lord removes evils by creating a new heart. That He might draw us to Him through the revelation of His limitless love, while we were sinners.

To each of these students a personal invitation will be sent and it is hoped that they will be honored by the entire group. Our very best wishes are with these young folks from our church—Francis Burr, Wilfred Cresswell, Arlene Cresswell, Alma Eoster, Helen Gardner, Richard Humphreys, Doris Kearney, Florence Lewis, May Moriarty, Irene Mullen.

Because of High school graduation coming on June 21st and other conflicting events, the Strawberry Festival planned for that date has been changed to Thursday, June 28th.

The annual church school outing is being planned for a late July Saturday. It is hoped to make it a church and community picnic, all organizations participating. Lake Pocotopaug is a possibility, and about one o'clock the leaving time, so that all can go.

AMERICA BLAMED BY FRANCE FOR CELLAR CRISIS

Paris.—France may quit drinking wine, and America may be indirectly responsible for it! How come? A little matter of supply and demand, and the local lodging crisis.

America has plenty of cellars but, supposedly no wine. France has plenty of wine but no cellars. America is blamed partly for the cellar crisis. Prohibition cut off one of France's best customers while French vinegrowers, having regained their pre-war stride, produced more than could be consumed at home and sold abroad.

Consequently, the surplus flooded French cellars to the bursting point, a fact which may have caused American tourists to remark: "Give me a room in the cellar."

The argument sounds like sly propaganda from the vinegrowers association which has never ceased to tempt the American thirst since the United States went dry but Noel Peters, boulevard restaurant, has just had to auction 40,000 bottles of "rare vintages" to clear a passage in the cellar. A few years hence the wine would have brought more than twice the amount yielded on the block.

When restaurants begin to hold bargain sales in wine posterily will suffer, according to the connoisseurs. Wine is admittedly at its best between the ages of five and ten years. Liquors continue to improve for a century.

The connoisseurs foresee that lack of cellar space will force restaurants to keep their stock moving rapidly, in other words selling wine before it has properly matured. Then, with only comparatively raw wine available the genealogy of his liquids as a family matter will cease to drink.

Asserting that more "good cellars" have departed than remain, Theophile Renaudour, in the "Petit Bleu" says: "It indeed seems to me to write of our celebrated vintages after having been forced to ask for the 'sommelier' for a bottle of Vichy and a glass of milk."

Lovers in Paris have no cause to worry this spring. In spite of rigorous orders for a thorough cleaning up of the city Monsieur Chappie, Prefect of Police, has not yet put his foot down in public kissing and several gendarmes who recently "kissed" some celebrated couples who were affected by the bright sun, singing birds, etc., have learned to their dismay that Paris still condones outward signs of affection.

There would be another Revolution in France," says one of the handsome gendarmes on duty in the popular parks, "if the authorities followed the example of America and began to forbid kissing in the streets."

A short time ago, certain French newspapers took up the matter, but only in a light spirit. They know that fond affections will be displayed in the parks and streets as long as there is a Frenchman in them.

Almost any street, large or small that leads to the working center can be called a little "lover's lane" early in the morning. Arm in arm, cooing like turtle-doves and perfectly oblivious to all passers-by. One wonders how they all happen to be going in the same direction and if they are all lovers. Not all of them, perhaps. Here is a couple who must part at the subway station.

"A midl, mon cheri, I'll meet you here at lunch-time," says the girl, holding out her hand.

But the young man does not content himself with that. There is long, long kisses—and they part for three hours.

Nearly all of the "cops" say they would close their eyes or else cough hard so the delinquents would know they were there and then run if new orders came suppressing the present pleasant condition of things.

"Que voulez-vous," they say, "we have all done the same thing—more or less!"

In ten years time motorists will be unable to get out of the city-gates on a fine Sunday morning, according to people with a liking for figures and a little observation. When the day dawns bright and sunny, every owner of a car in the city prepares to take a turn. With the growing increase of automobile-owners and the continued narrow thoroughfares, the situation is becoming critical. From the Arc de Triomphe to the Porte Maillot there is always a solid procession of cars which can only proceed at a crawl. Outside the gate, things are not much better and one must drive many a weary kilometer before the line can proceed at any speed.

The name of the Greek god of fire is Hephæstus.

The amazingly greater vitality of women, who not infrequently work harder than Russian men, is baffling the Health Department which has just published astonishing statistics.

There are 800,000 persons over four score years in the Soviet Union. Thirty thousand are more than 100 years old. In every decade of life about 60 there are twice as many women as men. Excessive vodka drinking, war and industrial accidents kill off the male population.

The enormous increase in the birthrate of late is attested to by the fact that 22,000,000 persons are under four years, or 15 per cent of the entire population. On the other hand, only 9.8 per cent of the population has passed the age of 55. The total population of the Soviet Union is given as approximately 147,000,000.

Beautiful, Talented Equestrian Queens To Appear Here With Gentry Bros. Circus.

More than 200 acts representing the best talent obtainable from the five continents of the world are to be seen with the Gentry Bros. Circus this year and chief among these acts are numerous dare-devil and thrilling riding acts. The fair equestrian queen plays no small part in the program as many celebrated riding troops are carried with the big circus and will be seen in Manchester on Thursday, June 21 when the Gentry Bros. Circus will give two performances here.

Above are pictured three of the peerless girl riders of the age, who are appearing among the most celebrated riders with the Gentry Bros. Circus. At top is shown Miss Olga Schütz, and the two below are Miss Nina Davenport and Miss Margaret Cottrell, members of distinguished circus families and among the most remarkable riders ever presented on an American tour.

Among the featured acts with the Gentry Bros. Circus this year are the Cottrell-Powell troupe and the Davenport family of world famous equestrians; the noted Pacheco troupe of intrepid acrobats; the Trebores family of daring Mexican equilibrist; the six Nevaros, unparalleled acrobats; the O'Neill family of sensational gymnasts; the Knight family of daring wire walkers; the Aerial Whites, in unrivaled accomplishments in the flying trapeze; the Sakata-Koban troupe of world-famed acrobats, La Flor and Perez, in a sensational aerial offering from Sunny Spain; Duckley Brothers, Belgium's foremost exponents of physical culture; Arthur Borella, internationally known clown, directing a troupe of 30 famous funsters; Dalbeanne, the Australian wonder; the Rojas Duo in a daring offering at the top of the big tent; and scores upon score of others equally as well known.

A spectacular parade will be staged at 11 o'clock and will appear on the principal downtown streets. Doors to the circus will open at 1 and 7 p. m. and the big show performances will start at 2 and 8 p. m.

The Gentry Brothers are presenting the most unique and gorgeous spectacle ever shown in America at the opening of each performance. The spectacle is entitled "The Circus Follies" and is directed by George L. Myers, widely known for his celebrated musical extravaganza. This immense spectacle is described as a gorgeous, glittering galaxy of graceful girls and gallant gladiators gloriously garbed and grandly grouped, escorting and accompanying the famous fairy tale characters in seemingly endless number, completely filling the huge hippodrome course, rings and stages.

GOV. ZIMMERMAN STUDIES MURDER OF OLSON GIRL

Prairie Du Chien, Wis.—With the order of Governor Fred Zimmerman of Wisconsin demanding a re-investigation into the murder of Clara Dorothy Olson, alleged to have been slain by Erdman Olson, college student, because she was about to become a mother of his child authorities here must search the archives for details of the slaying which occurred in the Fall of 1926.

The parents of Erdman Olson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Olson, appealed to the governor to review the case and either clear the name of their son or to establish his guilt. A murder warrant and large rewards have been issued for the arrest of Olson.

In a quiet, dusty office of a Prairie Du Chien judge, Chris Olson, father of Clara, appeared one day in November 1926 and asked that a murder warrant be issued. In his faltering English he told the judge a weird story that of a dream—that his daughter had been murdered and that her body would be found up on a "hill facing the sun."

Such was the fervor of the old farmer in his convictions that the warrant was issued although there was no corpus delicti. Erdman Olson had disappeared from his college a few weeks before.

The issuing of such a warrant under the circumstances aroused the curiosity of Chicago and Milwaukee newspaper editors who sent reporters to Prairie Du Chien.

Body Is Found

For two days the case presented no new aspects. The warrant had merely been issued. On the third day American Legionnaires organized a hunt for the imagined grave of the girl who had loved unwisely.

One of the men, crossing a stretch of woods to reach the village where the Legionnaires were to assemble tripped over an obstruction in the ground. Cursing, he stooped to examine it and found the heel of a woman's shoe with a leg inside, protruding from the ground a few inches.

Hours later, while Legionnaires and reporters huddled shiveringly around a small bonfire in the woods, the coroner arrived and the exhumation was completed.

An autopsy was performed which proved the popular contention the girl was to become a mother.

Perhaps the most startling development of the inquest was the finding of two notes hidden in the bosom of the dead girl.

The first note was a love letter; the second, authorities believe, was the letter which lured her to her death, both written by Erdman Olson.

The writer always has believed that Clara Olson carried those letters with her, against the strict orders of Erdman to destroy them, because she valued them as the most wonderful possessions she owned—the first, and, ironically, the last love letters of her life.

The second letter urged her to steal from her home at midnight, to meet Erdman at the cross-roads near a woods, and be prepared to flee to Minnesota to marry him and thus give her unborn child a name.

Goes at Midnight

Clara, at midnight, stole from her little farmhouse, walked the mile on the country road to the meeting place.

What happened then police do not know. One month later Clara's body was found in its grave. Erdman has never appeared to refute the horrible charges against him.

Some persons hinted that the dream of Chris Olson that his daughter's body would be found upon a hill—and it was found upon a hill—Rising Sun Hill—was founded upon fact rather than a nocturnal fancy.

When A Girl Loves

THIS HAS HAPPENED VIRGINIA BREWSTER is in love with an artist, NATHANIEL DANN, but she is tricked into marrying FREDERICK DEAN...

ment about her "investments," but he stubbornly refused to go on unless she consented to talk over the deals he went into with her money.

But I don't know when you ought to buy or sell," she expostulated. Patiently Oliver explained the operations of the market.

While it was true that there had been no onslaught upon his position in the financial world and no sign of enemy activity, nevertheless he did not neglect to caution Virginia against becoming careless.

These visits troubled Virginia exceedingly. They savored of clandestine intrigue... the meeting of lovers with guilt on their conscience, and she did not like it.

Moreover the deception she found it necessary to practice on Nathaniel when Oliver required her to meet him troubled her greatly. Yet she would not tell him about Oliver...

Fail. Virginia was grateful for the acquiescence of his love for his art and made no move to distract him. Matters stood thus on a beautiful morning in September when Virginia stopped at the hotel desk for her mail on her way to breakfast in the dining room.

She had a busy day before her and forgot all about the note until that afternoon. The burden of making personal replies to the ever-increasing number of inquiries that came to her had become so heavy she had set herself to making up a set of booklets to answer the questions most often asked.

The clerk on duty greeted her with respectful cheerfulness and handed over a pile of letters. Virginia glanced over them and accepted her decision to drop out as being sincere, as it was.

A sea breeze and a mountain top would never again be just a sea breeze and a mountain top to her. When poets sang of primroses north Virginia would know that a primrose might be to one whom life has touched with understanding.

There was no heat this September morning and Virginia began reading her letter with a sense of pleasure and anticipation and a feeling of physical well being.

The letter was short, just a note, in fact. It stated that the writer was in town for a day or so and asked her to call. There was a peremptory tone in it that brought a little frown to Virginia's face.

quest. But the fact that it was from Oliver's wife caused her to reconsider and decide to think it over. She owed Oliver too much to disregard Jeanie's invitation even though it were couched more in the words of a command.

Many times were, Virginia knew, who "beat the clock," but she was, if not too conscientious to follow their example, at least too grateful for having work that she liked to think of taking advantage of her employers.

It was a little later than 5:30 when she was admitted to Jeanie's attractive drawing room with the plain blue velvet rug and rose-patterned draperies of black silk.

For a moment of tense silence she surveyed Virginia as though her caller were a stranger, whom she wanted to be rude to. Then she waved the long cigarette holder toward a nearby chair and nodded her head.

Virginia felt a tightening in her throat and a wave of warmth in her cheeks. Jeanie Cutter had been her friend. But there was no welcome in her manner or in the words she drewled at Virginia in the voice of one who is both amused and annoyed at the antics of a nuisance.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

Why men commit suicide may not be a pleasant question. But because the consolidated social agencies of a certain city decided recently that an answer must be had to this question, a committee to find out why was appointed.

The committee investigated and made a voluminous report. Boiled down, the report bluntly said that most men committed suicide because of the economic strain of supporting a family.

They said that the suicide wave was especially noticeable in spring and fall because of the seasonal bills—bills for new clothes needs with change of season.

The report said that extravagant money-senseless wives were responsible for 75 per cent of all male suicides.

Now this report may or may not apply to all cities. It may not be accurate; it may be sensational and much exaggerated.

I know personally one suicide case because of this fact. There were three unusually handsome children in the family.

The children not only must be dressed in the best clothes on the market, but the children must have their dancing lessons, their summer camps, their this and that and everything that children of the very well-to-do and rich have for their progeny.

Other people's children sold papers after school, tended babies, ran errands and helped by their school books and clothes with their earnings. But not these children, and if I told you what the father earned, you wouldn't believe it!

At all, the mother howled that he didn't love his children or how could he bear seeing his children not have what other people's children had?

Debt was the only way out and when debt got too much for her, the distraught father sent a bullet through his heart, leaving the widow to weep and moan on the neighbor's shoulders.

Stories like this are exactly why I believe working girls make the best wives. A girl who has known what it means to get and keep a job and earn her own living knows what it means to a man, too.

Women who step into marriage from their fathers' homes where they always have been supported take support as a matter of course; they haven't the slightest idea that money has limits or may not always and eternally be available.

My, but that was a wonderful flower show the Garden club staged the last two days! The memory of it will live with us for a long time.

So many asked if there was to be an admission fee, they couldn't comprehend why any group of people should take so much work upon themselves, and incidentally expense, without some commercial strings attached.

But there is another point to this fireworks question. Is it wise to clamp down the remainder of a war 150 years old in a child's mind upon a specific day each year by a fusillade of explosives? True, only the birth of the nation is meant to be celebrated, but children cannot and do not segregate a joyous dedication from a joyous victory.

The wisdom of war anniversaries is a mooted question. Armistice Day, if looked upon in the light of a memorial, is good. As a joyous end to a terrible war, it is worthy. But it will change character with the years and eventually identify itself in the minds of generations unborn with victory over a hated enemy, and regenerate a hostility that should be buried in a dead past.

Five mothers wrote to the mayor of Pittsburgh asking him to put a ban on fireworks this coming Fourth. Probably every mayor in the United States is finding such letters in his mail these days, but no doubt a custom 150 years old will weigh heavily against any desire on the part of an individual mayor to change it.

If public opinion is aroused to such an extent that the physical welfare of children will come before the demand of the public to have a noisy and unrestrained holiday, then something may be done. The importation, manufacture and sale of dangerous explosives may then be eliminated.

In spite of fond memories of our youth, we feel that these mothers are right. Fireworks are dangerous, that they were 20 or 30 years ago, when a 6-cent pack of firecrackers was as devilish a thing as could be bought. A "cannon cracker" was a curiosity.

Daily Health Service HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

HAY-FEVER AND ASTHMA AFFETED BY SOME FUR. By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

In innumerable cases of hayfever and of asthma or of body reactions similar to that of these diseases, physicians have been able to find definite connection with sensitivity to animal dandruff.

In one series of cases 21 per cent of the children studied were found to be sensitive to the hair of cats, and many others have been found sensitive to dogs, rabbits and guinea pig's dandruff.

It is not always necessary that these pets be around the house for sensitivity to develop or to cause symptoms. Much of the upholstered furniture and some of the mattresses upon which people rest are stuffed with rabbit's hair.

On farms opportunity exists for constant contact with dandruff from horses, mules, cattle, sheep and swine. Moreover, the use of furs of many undomesticated animals is also associated in some cases with hay fever or asthma symptoms.

Cases are recorded in which women have responded with frequent sneezing and running of the nose, with burning, itching and watering of the eyes, and with all of the other unpleasant symptoms whenever they wore the silver fox neckpiece, the ermine or squirrel coat.

MARYE and MOM Their Letters

Dearest Marye: ... she might emulate you in other respects. Be sure to tell me all about the fashion show, and about the clothes. I suppose I never shall be so old that I won't like to hear about new styles. And perhaps you can tell me what sort of a summer coat I ought to have. My spring one is almost too heavy now. What would you suggest? Give my love to cousin Julia, and much for yourself. MOM.

MAN CAN'T BE THOROUGHLY DOMESTICATED Says Married Woman Now Famed For Her Career There is nothing to the so-called fifty-fifty plan whereby the husband and wife share equally the work, according to Mabel G. Reinecke, first woman collector of Internal Revenue, Chicago. (In private life she is Mrs. George W. Reinecke.)

The fifty-fifty plan for getting the housework done is unsatisfactory and unworkable," she asserted. "The unsuccessful attempt to apply this principle long ago rendered it an exploded theory. Since the temperament and inclinations of man and woman remain unchanged what there was before the changed status of women became a fact, a division of duty which projects a man into the domestic sphere of a woman is bound to be a failure.

"The only solution as I see it is for a woman to adjust herself to her actual home and her business, which is entirely possible without her being a paragon. "The most efficient business woman instinctively has a love of home and an inclination to supervise it. The fact that women are capable of what is called a 'double adjustment' is a condition to be reckoned with in the discussion of the so-called 'conflict' between home and business occurs."

LAST MINUTE SWAP HELPS THE GIANTS

McGraw Gets a Pitcher From Boston Braves; Yesterday's Highlights.

New York, June 16.—The St. Louis Cardinals, who have dislodged the not so natty Cincy Reds from the top rung of the National league ladder after a long stern chase, face stronger opposition today from the third place New York Giants.

In a characteristic last-minute trade a few hours before the 25th player limit went into effect last night, Manager John McGraw obtained the veteran pitcher he needed to round out his mound staff. He swapped Catcher Al Spohrer and three twirlers—the veteran Virgil Barnes and two rookies, Ben Cantwell and Bill Clarkson—to the Boston Braves in exchange for Joe Genewich.

The Cardinals eased into first place when Sunny Jim Bottomley's homer with two on base in the fourth staked them to a 5 to 2 win over Brooklyn. Mitchell and Johnson pitched fine ball for the Cards, as did McWeeney and Clark for the Robins.

The tall-end Phillies took an 8 to 7 slugfest from the Reds. Don Hurst walloped his fourth homer in five games.

Vic Aldridge, former Pirate, made a few home runs and two singles in addition to pitching the Giants to a 9 to 1 victory over the Bucs.

The Braves can certainly use those pitchers, they are getting from the Giants. The beaneraters dropped their seventh straight game when the Cub won them out, 5 to 4. Hack Wilson swatted his 12th homer.

Detroit is in the throes of a 5-game losing streak. The Tigers lost out to Washington in the tenth, 5 to 4.

BON AMI BEATS HEIGHTS 11 TO 4

Fire Chief Coleman Leads Soap Makers to One-Sided Victory Over Fast-Stepping Hilltoppers.

The Bon Ami baseball team had little trouble in disposing of the fast-flipping Heights last night in a Community Club twilight league game at the north end playgrounds. The score was 11 to 4.

The soap makers picked up two runs in the first, two more in the third and then put the game on ice by getting four more in the fourth. Godek and Brennan divided the pitching burden for the winners while Gleason and Grimsom were on mound duty for the losers.

The batting and all-around playings of Fire Chief Edward Coleman was an outstanding feature. Hewitt, Brennan and Godek also batted well.

The Talcottville-Depot Square game was postponed. Monday night's pairings are as follows: Bon Ami at Talcottville; Depot Square vs North Ends at Hickey's Grove; Heights at Highland Park and Manchester Green vs Gibson's Garage at the north end playgrounds.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE:

(316) Early Steamers
Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

America claims the honor of sending the first steamship across the Atlantic. The Savannah, shown above, was built as a sailing ship originally, but it was decided later to fit her up with a steam engine. Using sails and engines the Savannah crossed the Atlantic in 25 days in 1819, but used her sails most of the way.

The first crossing of the Atlantic by a ship using only steam power was in 1838 by

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

SENSE and NONSENSE

You are the fellow who has to decide Whether you'll do it or toss it aside; You are the fellow who makes up your mind Whether you'll lead or will linger behind; Whether you'll try for the good that's afar, Or be contented to stay where you are. Take it or leave it. There's something to do! Just think it over: it's all up to you.

"Jack, wake up! I can feel there's a mouse in the room." "Well, feel there's a cat too, and go to sleep."

Teacher—"I shall not keep you after school, Johnnie. You may go home now." Johnnie—"I don't want ter go home. There's a baby just come to our house."

Teacher—"You ought to be glad, Johnnie. A dear little baby—" Johnnie (vehemently)—"I ain't glad; Pa'll blame me—he blames me for everything."

It is bad enough to try to live within an income but it's a blamed sight harder to live without one.

Family Stuff

Husband—I often wonder when I am in heaven how I shall get my coat on over my wings. Wife—You need not worry about that. Your difficulty will be getting on your trousers over your tail.

It's Bedtime

It's bedtime at our house. When Pa begins to stir, It's bedtime at eight o'clock. Then things begin to whirl. It's bedtime at our house. When Pa begins to growl, "Now kids get off to bed, Don't make me harp and howl." It's bedtime at our house. When Pa begins to grumble, Over chairs and up the stairs, All begin to stumble. It's bedtime at our house. When Pa takes the light, Then everybody is in bed, And all have said "Goodnight."

The stormiest time around his house is when his wife reigns.

"There are an awful lot of girls who don't want to get married." "How do you know?" "I've asked them!"

Suitor: Tommy, does a young man call here in the evening to see your sister? Tommy: Not exactly to see her, because there's no light in the room when he's here.

A young woman artist, examining some of her pupil's sketches, remarked to one of the little girls: "And what have you been drawing, Mary?"

Mary replied, "Please, teacher, I tried to draw 'you' but it wasn't right, so I put a little tail to it and made a sheep of it!"

"No one can be as wise as a doctor looks," says one of them.

LETTER GOLF

TRY TO GET IT! From WANT to THAT is easy, but try to get it! Par is four strokes and there's a solution on another page.

WANT grid with letters and THAT grid with letters.

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

Her husband came home a few weeks after the honeymoon and in distressed accents told his wife: "I am terribly discouraged. My salary has been cut down 15 per cent."

Forgetting about the rainy day won't keep it from coming.

THE TINYMITES

"Well, after all, our slide was great, but now we shouldn't hesitate," said Copy, as they gathered round to push their boat from shore. "Let's start right down this stream again. We'll find some new things now and then." "Why, sure," replied the others, "that is what we're on here for."

EVERYONE'S READY, BUT WHERE ARE THEY GOING?

Firemen Name Delegates to Convention But Official Notices Haven't Been Received.

It seems that as far as the election of delegates to the State Firemen's Association convention is concerned that South Manchester firemen are all "dressed up and no place to go."

It is the usual custom to elect delegates to the state convention of the association at the annual election of officers and it is also the usual order of events to have a notice received by the firemen that there is to be a convention.

All of the fire companies in South Manchester have made their selection of delegates and have also named their alternates, but not one company, as far as could be learned this morning, has as yet received the necessary notice that the convention is to be held, nor has there been any call received, nor blanks to be filled out showing the proper qualifications of a person as a delegate.

The convention is not of particular interest to the firemen just at present as they have other things to consider. All are arranging for their annual outings and they feel that is sufficient to worry about for the time being.

LOCAL MAN TO HEAD HARTFORD COMMITTEE

Willard B. Rogers to Head Group in Attempt to Solve Traffic Problem.

Willard B. Rogers, advertising director of the Bond hotels and the Bond interests of Hartford, has been named as chairman of a committee of Hartford merchants, who are to prosecute efforts to bring about changes in the traffic regulations on Asylum street, Hartford.

The one way traffic on that street, it has long been claimed, has not been for the best interests of the business conducted there, especially so of late years. The traffic is allowed to move in but one way, from east to west, from Main street to High street in that city. The merchants are of the opinion that the removal of the trolley cars from the center of the street and the substitution of buses over the line would overcome the present trouble although a wider street should come at some time.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT" FATHER'S DAY

Tomorrow will be Father's Day. It is the day of all the titular "days" at which most everybody grins a grin. There is something delicately sentimental about Mother's Day. Nobody ever knows what to do about Father's Day. If you handed father a rose in the morning he'd probably stuff it in his pipe. If you tried to salute him with a kiss he'd yell for the cops and the lunatic asylum superintendent. It won't do to get sloppy about Father, even on his own special Day. But Pinehurst knows what to do about Father, on Father's Day. Here's the tip. Just come over here and look over the slickest array of table delicacies you ever did see, and pick out the materials for a very special dinner for Father on Father's Day. For once, at least, get up the Sunday menu with special regard to Father's particular dietary whimsies—and let the rest of the family eat the dinner "as is" or go without. That's all Pinehurst has to say about Father's Day.
