

HOW AL SMITH RECEIVED NEWS FROM HOUSTON

His Neighbors Force Him to Come Out on Porch of Albany Home to Make a Little Speech.

Albany, N. Y., June 29.—"There it is."

These were the three words that made political history early this morning when Gov. Al Smith, sitting in the blue room of the executive mansion, heard the secretary of the Democratic national convention at Houston announce over the radio the switch of Ohio votes that assured him his party nomination for president. It was a typical Al Smith expression, characteristic of that quality of humanity which Franklin D. Roosevelt stressed in his nominating speech at Houston.

Seated in his home before his radio set, surrounded only by his friends, the governor grinned like a boy as the news came, punctuating the radio announcements with puns and Smithsque remarks. Then he was cheered by neighbors and greeted by hundreds who called him "Al," in an amazing demonstration which shattered the early morning quiet of this old Dutch city.

His Statement.

"There it is," said Al Smith, the man. Here is what Alfred E. Smith, presidential candidate of the Democratic party, gave out as his official statement:

"My nomination on the first ballot fills me with joy and satisfaction that I know is shared by my family and friends. My heart is where my palate ought to be."

And he had something else to say, too, this was addressed to a milling, shouting, almost delirious crowd of a thousand men and women who swarmed over the lawns of the executive mansion and crowded up to the very front steps of the home of the New York governor.

The impromptu demonstration began with a dozen or more women who walked up under the windows of the executive mansion, before the roll call of the states was even begun, one of them with a guitar in her hands, and serenaded their governor who they were sure was to be their favored presidential candidate.

Crowd Grows.

Gradually the group grew. By the time the roll call of the states was well under way there were two or three hundred swarming outside the mansion. When the states and territories had all responded for the first time, the crowd was shouting and cheering. The first extras were being called. They knew what

NIGHT CLUB RAIDS NET 75 PERSONS

160 Federal Agents Visit
Eleven Resorts in New York—Those Raided.

New York, June 29.—Police today forecast additional arrests of night club operators and employes as the result of the raid conducted by 160 federal agents on eleven clubs in the Roarin' Forties early this morning. The seventy-five persons arrested in the sweeping raid were expected to be arraigned today.

Dressed in evening clothes the agents, some of them young and attractive, working in squads of eight to a dozen entered some of the best known night clubs shortly after midnight and joined in the festivities with the mad, merry-making crowds of pleasure seekers. When alleged evidence was obtained one of each group would step to the center of the dance floor and announce himself. All raids were made within twenty minutes.

Wild Scenes.

The commission is going ahead with its routine labor despite the possibility that the anti-war pact, if universally adopted, may make disarmament unnecessary.

It is expected that the commission will adopt a report for submission to the League Assembly when it meets here in September. But in the meantime the commissioners are discussing the proposed treaty as well as the disarmament issue.

SENATOR REED UNITES PARTY WITH ADDRESS

Old Missouri Campaigner
Holds Audience Spellbound With His Speech
After Midnight.

Houston, Tex., June 29.—Fighting Jim Reed of Missouri under the penetrating Klieg light of Sam Houston Hall at one o'clock in the morning, sounding a clarion call to arms—that is the picture which will remain forever to those who saw it in the Democratic national convention of 1928.

His close clipped snowy hair fairly bristles; it is sleek, irile, years younger than the ruddy warrior's face it crowns. His eyes, fixed by the "title," challenge the blinding power of the high-blue lights focused upon him from every angle.

"United, we face the common enemy!"

That is his battle cry. With that single sentence the most vigorous opponent of Gov. Smith leaps to party leadership in the new dynasty, after Smith's nomination.

In that sentence there is all the fire of Reed of the front row in the Senate.

Never Beaten

These defiant eyes leap from defeat to victory—for Reed was never beaten.

"My fingers have never scratched the name of a Democrat who won the nomination."

It is harmony in the Democratic Party, just as the party planned. It is high oratory to hold a convention at 1 a. m., after it had had almost fourteen solid hours of previous high oratory in the torrid heat of Texas June. It is still higher oratory to hold a convention at 1 a. m., after that convention finally has nominated Al Smith. It has been struggling to nominate for eight long years.

Reed took the convention meekly with the muscle twitchings of his battle-marked face. It was his before he uttered a line. The galleries remembered the last car and left reluctantly. The delegates remembered that this might be the last call to arms from Reed of Missouri and sat it out with roars of applause.

"If there is half as much activity in the Democratic Party in November as there is on the floor now, the ticket selected by this convention is elected."

Reed 69 Years Old

Reed is 69, but his terminology is that of a young man. His language is that of a young man. His language is that of a young man. His language is that of a young man. His language is that of a young man.

"I call upon every Democrat in the United States—" and now comes that smashing apoplectic gesture which brings the listener forward in his hot chair—"I call upon every Democrat in the United States, until the last ballot is counted on the night of the election, to support the nominee of this convention, and by such support, to give protection against what I regard as the greatest menace to free government in my life time."

Consideration of the American anti-war proposals was brought into the foreground by the meeting here of the League Security and Arbitration Commission. Delegates from 26 countries are engaged in secret discussion of the various phases of disarmament and the best method of preventing future conflicts.

The commission is going ahead with its routine labor despite the possibility that the anti-war pact, if universally adopted, may make disarmament unnecessary.

League May Accept
Pact to Outlaw War

Council Now Discussing America's Plan—To Decide It In September.

Geneva, June 29.—The American treaty for outlawing war may be accepted by the powers as supplemental to the League of Nations Covenant as an instrument for preserving world peace, according to opinion held here today. However, there would be no definite link between the two beyond acceptance of the pact by all nations that are members of the League.

Dry Law Enforcement Urged By Democrats

Houston, Texas, June 29.—Democrats' hosts went forth to battle today under a platform standard calling for strict enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, promising agricultural equality with industry and attacking Republican corruption.

These were the major planks in the 1928 platform which was adopted in a virtual love feast on the convention floor after the prohibition row had been smothered over in the resolutions committee.

The prohibition declaration, couched in words somewhat similar to those used by the Republicans at Kansas City, said:

"This convention pledges the party and its nominees to an honest effort to enforce the 18th amendment and all other provisions of the federal constitution and all laws enacted pursuant thereto."

Coupled with the pledge was a denunciation of the Republican Party in these words:

"The Republican Party, for eight years in the complete control of the government at Washington, presents the remarkable spectacle of feeling compelled in its national platform to promise obedience to a provision of the federal constitution which it has flagrantly disregarded."

MARATHON DANCER DROPS IN STREET

City Doctors Watch Others
in New York—May Stop Crazy Contest.

New York, June 29.—Startled by reports that Frank McQuinn, former contestant in the dance Marathon, was critically ill in a Wilkes-Barre, Pa., hospital as a result of over-exertion, officers of the Department of Health kept vigilant watch today at Madison Square Garden.

They carefully scrutinized the condition of the nine remaining couples who are fighting it out for the $5,000 endurance prize in their twentieth day of intermittent dancing.

The city doctors also expressed interest in the rumor that some of the couples are being "doped" by their trainers, in order to keep them on the dance floor after hours.

At the first evidence of the use of narcotics, the Marathon will be stopped, officials said.

McQuinn Disqualified

With his partner Mary Goddess, dance hall hostess, McQuinn was disqualified at the end of the 275th hour, eight days ago. The couple were ruled off the floor for fighting. For sometime after he quit, the youth was unable to sleep more than a few minutes at a time. He left for his home in Wilkes-Barre and collapsed there last Saturday, according to the report. He is under observation at the hospital.

TROLLEYMEN DECIDE AGAINST A STRIKE

Sign Year's Contract to Continue Under Same Pay;
Time Lengthened.

New Haven, Conn., June 29.—Connecticut Company trolley men are again under a one-year contract with the company and receiving the same pay for their work that they have been getting for two years past. Their representatives signed a contract late yesterday after a count of the strike vote taken Wednesday indicated the majority of the men were opposed to a strike.

A concession by the company provides that the men shall be paid for overtime on miscellaneous runs after nine hours instead of after ten hours as in the past two years.

To force a strike among the trolley men a two-thirds vote was needed. New Haven, Bridgeport and Meriden men favored a strike by a very slight margin but the men under divisions at Hartford, Waterbury, Norwalk, Middletown, Stamford and Derby voted the strike down by a considerable majority, according to announcement here today.

The vote as revealed by an official source today was:

City	Strike	No Strike
New Haven	286	157
Hartford	76	460
Waterbury	46	80
Bridgeport	154	121
Meriden	20	18
Stamford	2	35
Norwalk	2	33
Middletown	3	37

SMITH AND ROBINSON ARE CHOSEN TO HEAD DEMOCRATIC TICKET

FARMERS READY TO ORGANIZE FOR CAMPAIGN

Leaders Promise Democrats
They Will Deliver Three Million Votes to Smith Because of G. O. P. Rebuke.

Houston, Texas, June 29.—Leaders of the "On to Houston" movement for farm relief left their homes today declaring that a new alliance between the New York "East Side" and the "Corn Belt" would be carried out in full.

Preparing to assume the offensive in the presidential campaign, the farm chiefs had plans already under way for a meeting to begin mobilization of their forces.

Having promised the Democratic party three million farm votes in hearings before the resolutions committee, the leaders of the "Farm Revolt" declared that they would perfect an organization in every agricultural state to make good the promise.

A tentative call for a meeting of the corn belt conference in Des Moines, Iowa, on July 12 is already out, according to Thomas E. Cashman of Minn., chairman of the Minnesota Council of Agriculture, and a leader in the fight here.

Big Organization

This group, having a membership of 25 farm organizations, is headed by William Hirth of Columbia, Mo., who already has sworn unyielding enmity to Secretary Herbert Hoover.

Despite the hearty endorsement of the 1,400-word plank on farm relief adopted by the convention, some observers expressed the opinion that a controversy over its interpretation would immediately ensue.

"The sentence which was declared by the farm chiefs to bind the party to the equalization fee reads:

"We pledge the party to an earnest endeavor to solve this problem of the distribution of the cost of dealing with crop surpluses over the marketed units of the crop whose producers are benefited by such assistance."

Senator Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the resolutions committee, interpreted the plank to permit adoption of farm relief other than by use of the equalization fee.

"Equalization Fee"

"I think this recognizes the state of facts that called for the equalization fee," he said. "There are two or three other remedies which will accomplish the same result and those who favor the McNary-Haugen bill think this method is the best."

George N. Peck, generalissimo of the farm forces here, was satisfied with the convention action.

"They have endorsed the substance of what we have been contending for," he said.

"There can be no complaint by

OFF ON THE FIRST LEG OF ROUND WORLD TRIP

John Mears Hopes to Break
Own Record of 28 Days by Five Days.

New York, June 29.—John Henry Mears and Captain Charles E. Collier are aboard the White Star liner Olympic at sea today on the first leg of an Odyssey which they hope will take them around the world in 23 days.

Mears, Broadwayite and world traveler, himself established the existing speed record of twenty-eight days by circling the globe. Collier is a noted stunt flyer and sky-writing pilot.

The pair took off from the battery at five o'clock this morning in a powerful seaplane, racing to overtake the Olympic which had been scheduled to sail at midnight but was delayed until 3:45 a. m.

They had abandoned their original plan to take off at Curtis Field in an amphibian plane and overtake the liner of Nantucket. This flight would have saved them many hours in the final reckoning of their race against time.

Senator From Arkansas is Nominated on the First Ballot; Many Favorite Sons Put Up But Delegates Show Little Enthusiasm—Naming of Woman as Running Mate of Smith Finds Little Favor—Weary Delegates, Anx- ious to Start on Homeward Trips.

Sam Houston Hall, Houston, Texas, June 29.—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, was nominated on the first ballot today to serve as a running mate to Gov. A. E. Smith, of New York, on the ticket of the Democratic Party.

CONVENTION ASSEMBLES

Sam Houston Hall, Houston, Texas, June 29.—It looked like Smith and Robinson as the Democrats returned to Sam Houston's big pine tabernacle today to complete the work of their convention by nominating a running mate for the New York governor.

Conferees held in the early morning hours, and canvasses of certain powerful key delegations made it appear certain that the Arkansas Senator who has presided over this convention as permanent chairman would be speedily nominated. As the convention assembled, word was passed around that the influential delegations from New York, Pennsylvania and Illinois would vote for Senator Robinson, and drag enough others along to give the senate leader a first ballot nomination.

The leaders asserted there had been no "word" from Gov. Smith but they also asserted that Robinson's selection would be "entirely acceptable" to the New York governor. With the big delegations from him and his Senatorial colleagues working in his behalf, in a dozen state delegations outside the big ones it looked to be pretty well over.

Delegates Weary

The delegates came wearily and somewhat tardily to the hall, many of them from a night of wild celebration of Smith's selection.

Some of the favorite sons for the vice presidency were dropping off the tree this morning after blooming vigorously throughout the week. The apparent disposition was to let the Smith people finish the job of taking over the party assets and future. With Gov. Smith in the saddle now and having been given the kind of a platform his friends said was satisfactory to him, there didn't appear to be any logic in making a discordant note at the very end of the song.

Nebraskans decided not to put forward ex-Senator Gilbert N. Hitchcock.

The word was going around so fast at 10:05 a. m., that "it's Joe that everybody appeared anxious to get out of his way. The word from the "big fellows" like New York, Illinois, Pennsylvania, Ohio and Indiana was having a devastating effect.

The hall was filling rapidly at 10:10. This being the last act of the quadrennial drama and there being thousands of Texaans who have yet been unable to see a session, the police and doorkeepers were being very charitable to the home folks.

"Got a ticket, Baddy? No, all right, go ahead."

Thousands poured into the hall in this fashion.

At ten o'clock the hour of convening George W. Olvany, the leader of Tammany Hall, told friends who sought his advice "it's Robinson."

The Ohio leaders made a quick count of noses on the floor and said Robinson was agreed to them. Mississippi planned to give her 20 to the Arkansas on the first ballot.

From the way things were going at the outset, it appeared that it would be a first ballot nomination on the vice presidency as well.

Indiana decided not to present the name of Evans Woolen. Tennesseans declared Cordell Hull's name would not go before the convention and if it did would be withdrawn.

Senator Robinson absented himself from the chairmanship of the convention, and it was called to order by Franklin D. Roosevelt, the nominator of Smith and his floor manager, emphasizing that this is a Smith convention.

Session Opens

It was 10:17 when the gavel fell and the ardent-at-arms began herding the delegates into their seats. Conferees were in progress all over the floor. Late comers were anxiously inquiring from the leaders "who is it?" And the answer invariably was "Robinson."

Robinson didn't have much luck at getting them into their seats. The bands added the confusion by playing "The Sidewalks of New York." It was the last day for the bandmasters to do their stuff and they did it.

SMITH JUST MISSED FRIDAY NOMINATION

Houston, Texas, June 29.—Al Smith, by six minutes escaped being nominated on a Friday, the day which many women voters consider unlucky. It was 11:54 p. m. on Thursday that it was announced from the platform that Gov. Smith was the Democratic presidential nominee.

The governor, according to members of Mrs. Smith's party attending the convention, is not superstitious—but plenty of other voters are. This group is so numerous that the Wilson campaign managers in 1912 recognized its prejudices to the extent of sidetracking platform action on a Thursday to have Woodrow Wilson nominated before Friday rolled around.

At 10:30 the "Star Spangled Banner" brought everybody to attention, and order was secured immediately thereafter.

The invocation was pronounced by Rabbi Eli Beckman of Houston, completing the circle of all faiths and sects that have asked divinity's blessing on Democracy's labors here.

Roosevelt then turned over the gavel to Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, and the popular Mississippians got a cheer, as he took it.

"The first thing," said "Pat," grinning broadly, "will be a solo. 'I Can't Do Without You' rendered by Kern Aiyward of New York; one of Irving Berlin's young men, floated out. Then, the side-walks of New York have been extended to Houston and Houston liked it for there were calls for more and the accommodating young man gave them 'Back in Your Own Back Yard.'"

Ready for Getaway

A lot of "frat" announcements followed the singing, emphasizing the thought that now appears uppermost in the convention's mind—to get away. Even as the announcements were made, rains were puffing in the city's railroad yards, ready to start spilling out of Houston within six hours after the adjournment.

The "Sidewalks of New York," of course, had to be followed by "Dixie" and Houston sent up Miss Malvena Passmore, the home town grand opera singer, and she again captivated the crowd.

Then to business. Senator Harrison ordered the roll call for the presentation of names for vice presidency.

Alabama, the first state called, sent up Judge Michael Solite, who proposed the nomination of Major General Henry T. Allen, who commanded the American forces during the Rhine occupation.

While Judge Solite was speaking, the hall was in confusion; and few could hear what he was saying in eulogy of the soldier candidate. In the midst of the speech, a Mississippi delegate rode down one of the main aisles, raised his hat, followed by a boy on a smaller animal. He gravely dismounted beside his delegation and took his seat, while the boy led the animals out.

Most of Solite's speech was a review of Gen. Allen's career.

In addition to being an outstanding record and ability, he said, Gen. Allen "is one of the most gifted and valuable diplomats" ever in the service of the country. It was largely due to Gen. Allen's wise administration of the Rhine area, he said, that Germany and the United States were able to soon forget war hates and war bitterness. It was a diplomatic job of great delicacy, he said, and was "superbly performed."

Friend of Farmer

Gen. Allen is a great friend of the farmer, too, his nominator declared. His words were largely lost, however, as few were paying any attention and those few couldn't hear because of the confusion that was general throughout the hall.

There were even a few cries of "sit down" thrown up at the platform from delegates who resented the speaker's interruption of their own conversations on the floor. Several times the chair tried to get some order for the speaker, but with no luck.

He finally concluded at 11:05 and the roll of states was done. Arizona yielded to New Mexico and Sen. Sam G. Branton, the red-headed junior Senator of the state, took the platform and placed Sena-

"Let us here and now destroy the spirit of sectionalism by declaring that the residence in the southland does not constitute a barrier to political preferment in a Democratic convention."

to New York in 1924, the untried Democracy went back to Houston's big pine tabernacle today to name a running mate for Al Smith and to wind up this historic Democratic convention in a grand chorus of harmony.
The big plunge has been taken. Al Smith is the nominee, the first of his religious faith in the history of American politics to be nominated for the presidency by any major political party.

No Disputes
Veterans of San Francisco and New York could scarcely believe their eyes when they saw a Democratic platform adopted in open convention without a minority report even being offered on the floor within less than two hours after its presentation.

48 votes were switched immediately and this sent Smith across with votes to spare. But the rumble of the band wagon was already crumbling. Half a dozen states, Indiana included, wanted to follow the Ohio example and it took half an hour for them all to get aboard.
Al Smith is in the driver's seat. Where he is going cannot be determined until the first Tuesday after the first Monday of next November.

Chatham, Mass., June 29.—The steamship Evangeline, New York to Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, with about 100 passengers aboard, was in collision in a fog with the freight steamer Green, Boston to Baltimore and Norfolk with a crew of forty officers and men, off Cape Cod today.

FEAR NINE EXPLORERS WILL BE FOUND DEAD

Five More Ships Added to Search for Italia's Crew and Amundsen.

London, June 29.—With five ships, including two warships, searching for the missing members of the Noble expedition and the Virgo Bay relief party, three more are expected to join the hunt within a few days. They are the Norwegian ice breaker Vestekari, the steamship Hobby and the French warcraft Lux-malburg.
Advices from King's Bay and Virgo Bay, South Georgia, said that no trace has been found of the missing men.
Weather conditions have improved off the northern coast of Spitzbergen and Northern Land and it is expected that Major Madelena and Major Penzo will soon hop off in their Italian seaplanes to search for the lost men. General Umberto Noble has been given permission by the Italian government to accompany them and aid the men in their quest.
Fears are growing both here and at King's Bay that the nine missing members of the Noble expedition and the Amundsen party have lost their lives. However, the search for them will continue indefinitely.

HOW AL SMITH RECEIVED NEWS FROM HOUSTON

...And they wanted to see how Al Smith would react. The governor took his time about responding, however. He wasn't going to have any mistake made. He was going to be the nominee of his party certainly and irrevocably before he responded to the cheers of the "neighbors." In fact, he repeated with evident relish, the radioed words of the convention chairman, trying to hold the delegations in order as they sought to switch their votes to Smith: "There is no need for excessive bandwagon rush."

But finally there was no further resisting. He stepped out from behind the podium and crossed in about him and flares and arcs threw a weird light on the throng, as cameras ground reels for history.

"Al, Al, Al!" was the shout from every throat.

Then "Speech, Speech, Speech."

His Speech.

A hush fell as he began: "The returns in the news from Texas indicates that New York state, myself, my family and all my friends are greatly interested in the confidence placed in me by an overwhelming majority of delegates. Here in Albany, as I am now surrounded by friends and neighbors, the only thing I can say is what I am overwhimmed by the news and my heart is up where my palate ought to be."

A wild shout greeted him, as scores pushed forward trying to shake his hand. For several minutes he stood there. Then finally: "I'll bid you all good night. I'll see you tomorrow, the next day and all of the summer."

All through the whole eventful evening was plainly evident to the governor's friends in the room restrained themselves as state after state piled up its votes for him. At last his "there it is" broke the spell. William A. Humphrey, former lawyer, former chief of railroad police, former aid getting campaign, friend and ally of the Republican, rated as a Republican, dashed across the room and was the first one to grasp the governor's hand.

Close behind him was Henry D. Moskowitz, credited by being the governor's closest political adviser.

Mrs. Warner threw her arms around Mrs. Moskowitz's neck and kissed her soundly.

Then every one broke in with extended hand. Through a screened window just back of the low settee on which the governor and his daughter had been sitting, the view of several windows of the room outside darkness.

Cameras Busy

As if by magic a squad of camera men set up their tripods and took flash after flash. These came the operators asked the governor and his daughter to sit side by side, and suggested Emily kiss her father. She did—a "stage" kiss—but it was followed immediately by an impetuous grasping of her father's face and an honest-to-goodness Smith family kiss of affection and pride.

It was 1:20 when the nomination was assumed. A few minutes later the governor gave out his brief formal statement. It was nearly two o'clock when he stepped out on the front porch to speak to the "neighbors" at 2:25 he started upstairs, announcing his intention of going to bed.

During the reading of the party platform the governor listened intently. In the room beside Mrs. Warner, Charles M. Coffey and Mrs. Moskowitz were these few, all dressed as personal friends of members of the family.

Major Warner, his son-in-law; Mrs. J. Foster Warner of Rochester, the mayor's wife; Jack Warner, the mayor's brother; John and Joseph Glynn, nephews; Dr. Moskowitz, accredited biographer of the governor; Charles M. Winchester, another Republican and golfing partner; Representative Parker Corning, who incidentally defeated Winchester for Congress a few weeks ago, and Mrs. Corning; Assistant General Franklin W. Ward; Dr. Matthias Nicoll, Jr., state commissioner of health; Col. Frederick Stuart Greene, state superintendent of public works, and Mrs. Greene, who sat hemstitching by a table lamp; Supreme Court Justice E. W. Griffith, Jr., secretary of the State; Secretary of State Robert Moses; Edward G. Griffin, the governor's counsel and his wife; Max Lindner, brother of Mrs. Moskowitz; George B. Graves, chief secretary to the governor; and James Mahoney, assistant secretary.

Many Reporters

There were at least thirty newspapermen and photographers present from all parts of the state, and other states.

The first typical act of the "Happy Warrior" was when he came trotting into the room wearing the fresh, green-and-white cowboy hat which had been presented to him by Tom Mix on his star.

"Straight from Texas," he said, as everyone laughed. Characteristic of the man were his comments as the roll call of the states progressed.

"When it was announced that Alabama had cast one vote for Gov. Smith, with the famous 'Twenty-Four Votes for Underwood' of the 1924 convention in everyone's mind, he grinned and said:

SENATOR REED UNITES PARTY WITH ADDRESS

—and continue to march until the Republican Party is driven from power. His power is horrible, skillful and unprincipled.

"Every difference we have within the party sinks into insignificance beside the difference of our party and the Republican Party."

And now you have a convention which has been whooping regularly since ten a. m., lashed into a new mania to say the least, which will never did climb on to the Smith bandwagon.

Read called the roll of the sins of the Republican Party from Grant to Coolidge, and then turned his light upon Herbert Hoover.

"I fear for the destinies of our great country should a man of this background be elected to the presidency. If this country is to elect an Englishman from London rather than a resurgence American."

And that, you may be sure, is a large whoop in a Democratic convention which has just nominated the fellow who began in Fulton Fish market.

Raps President

He denounced President Coolidge and all his Cabinet in a blank, indignant charging indifference to the Teapot Dome revelations.

"They were as mum as a bunch of Boston oysters decaying on the beach in the month of August. When Grant discovered graft, he said, 'Let one of the guilty escape.' Has anybody heard anything like that ever since Coolidge or from Mr. Hoover?"

He exhortated the Secretary of the Treasury Mellon or formulating tax policies, "which saved his own corporations nine millions of the ninety millions saved to the country in the first Mellon tax reduction bill after the inauguration of President Harding."

Reverting to the Liberty Bond transactions of the famous Continental Trading Company, part of which were contributed by Harry F. Sinclair to the Republican campaign deficit from 1920, Reed got around in a few sentences to the suggestion:

"I move that the movie industry be required to reinstate Fatty Arbuckle and require him to be W. H. Hays."

As if a swan song if you will, Jim Reed retires from the Senate next March after fifty-five years of political life. He is going back to Kansas City to become a private citizen—to have, as he once told a colleague in the Senate cloakroom, a whitewash front porch campaign all of his own.

But if you saw Jim Reed under the Sam Houston Kleigs, you would call it a battle cry for Reed himself said so with a convincing smash of his open hand upon the speaker's table.

"I am standing today exactly where I stood then—when I was 18 years of age and entered my first campaign. I have never forsaken the great principle of the Democratic Party."

Thirty-Five Years' Toil Produces Camera That Can Picture Bullet

By ISRAEL KLEIN

Thirty-five years ago C. Francis Jenkins, the noted Washington inventor, conceived a camera by which fast objects would appear moving much slower on the screen. He wasn't able to put it to practical use then, so another type of slow motion camera beat his invention to the market. This one which is in use today, takes about ten times as many exposures in one second as the regular movie camera, and therefore is able to have its pictures projected at about one-tenth their original speed.

Now, however, Jenkins has perfected his original invention and produces a camera that can make as many as 10,000 exposures a second, with a normal rate of 3200.

Studied Values

This remarkable camera will make the study of such fast objects as engine valves, speeding bullets, airplane propellers and a host of eye-deceiving phenomena a matter of simple analysis. For a section of a film used by this camera would reduce the speed of the object pictured down to one two-hundredth, and as low as one five-hundredth, its original speed.

Thanks to this camera, there are an engine valve moving ordinarily 3000 times a minute, would appear to be going only about six to 15 times a minute, or once in every four seconds. A rifle bullet speeding to its target at the rate of 2700 feet a second would appear to move only from five to 14 feet in the same time.

Jenkins has built this unique camera, which he calls a "chronotone," on a principle far removed from that in use today. In the modern camera, the film is stopped momentarily behind the lens, while the shutter is opened and a shot is taken. This is done 16 times a second for a foot of film in the ordinary camera, and 160 times a second for ten feet of film in the case of the slow-motion camera now in use.

The chronotone camera, however, is 100 times faster than this way. So Jenkins has his film moving continuously through the camera, with the shutter wide open but the lens moving in unison with the speeding film.

Forty-Eight Lenses

In order to make the lens move with each section of film, Jenkins has designed a disc on which are 48 perfectly matched lenses, all accurately spaced and at exactly the same distance from the rotating shaft.

By doing this, Jenkins not only has succeeded in exposing a section of film for as short an interval as one five-hundredth of a second, but he has produced even sharper reproductions than the regular camera. The moving lenses, in fact, have enabled Jenkins to get more than 25 times as much exposure for his fast film than can be obtained with the film that is moved by jerks.

Such a speedy camera, however, produced one difficulty which took Jenkins 25 years to solve. When he experimented with the camera in his earlier years, he discovered that the enormous friction produced by

MAN BURIED ALIVE AND STILL LIVES!

Famous Oriental Mystery at State Theater Tuesday and Wednesday.

Age old mysteries of the Eastern world will be unfolded before the Manchester theater-goers when Hamid Bey, miracle man and member of the ancient Coptic Cult of Egypt will appear for the first time in this city on the stage of the State Theater. The engagement of this mystic marvel is set for Tuesday and Wednesday, July 3 and 4.

Mr. Bey has been in this country for the past fifteen months, being sent here by the Coptic Cult to engage in a contest with Harry Houdini. Unfortunately, however, Houdini died before the contest could be arranged leaving the Egyptian marvel without a challenger.

During the fifteen months in America, Hamid Bey has simply baffled all medical authorities with his daring feats. His name flew into prominence overnight and became a household word, when nearly every newspaper in the country told of his being buried alive in Englewood, N. J., for three hours under tons of solid earth, and then how he emerged from his deathbed apparently well and alive. This astonishing feat has never been duplicated by any other human person in the entire world.

Hamid Bey will demonstrate how he was buried under tons of earth by allowing them to bury him under dirt on the State theater stage at each performance.

On Tuesday afternoon at 5:10 o'clock, Mr. Bey will hypnotize a young lady in the window of Watson Brothers' Store, and will awake her on the State theater stage at 7:30 the same evening. Hamid Bey does not claim to be a magician or illusionist. He wishes everyone to look upon him as an ordinary human being the same as anyone else. It will pay you to visit the State theater during his engagement here and see how he does all of his clever and mystifying exhibitions. Admission for this attraction: Matinee 25c, children 10c; evening 30c-40c, children 10c.

Pace Of Business Is 25 Times Faster Than It Was 25 Years Ago

Chicago.—Business experience is a handicap to an executive. J. George Frederick, president of the Business Course exchange of New York, a research organization, has outlined a new type of business executive for Chicago industrial leaders, and experience, he says, is not one of the assets of the new business leader.

"Production in the United States now is more than forty per cent greater than in 1903, and the result is that the executive must find new markets, and create a new demand for his product," Frederick said.

"Past experience, as a guide, is worse than useless. It is a handicap."

"In the past business has become set in its ways. It has developed certain systems of marketing, and certain standards of production. Now these standards are out of date. The nation's industry has reached a point where an entirely new system is necessary."

Finding New Outlets

"The new executive is forging ahead, a pioneer. He is finding new outlets for his products, and that calls for a high amount of ingenuity, unhampered by precedents."

Research, according to the New York official, is the key to development for American industry.

"New facts, being discovered daily make old methods antiquated. Axioms that were accepted a week ago may not all be axioms at all today."

"The demand for new outlets for production, it was pointed out, 'The pace of business today is twenty-five times that of twenty-five years ago, and the man who is out of touch with his business for a year is absolutely out of date,' according to Frederick."

"Changes are so rapid that only the most versatile of executives is able to keep on top of the heap. He must be able to change his mind, discard all his old theories and construct new ones, on the spur of the moment."

"As production increases and the range of manufactured products broadens, the head of the business must be constantly finding new markets. He must establish new channels as fast as the business expands."

Prominent business leaders in Chicago, with control of concerns that market in all parts of the country and branch out into foreign trade channels, have endorsed Frederick's view of the 1928 executive.

Examples of Changes

The women's wear industry, the shoe industry and others were cited as examples of the kaleidoscopic changes of the modern business era. Women's shoes changed overnight from something to cover the feet to decorative style touches to dress. In a comparatively short time an entire old system was overturned and a new one set up. Those manufacturers who failed to adjust themselves and their concerns to the change were lost hopelessly, and their markets were usurped by more facile leaders.

Radio became in a few months a life-and-death competitor of pianos, phonographs and cheap automobiles.

Giant industries lock horns in vital struggles to dispose of their products, and old marketing systems are junked without a thought for the rules that once governed production and distribution in those industries.

Research, Frederick pointed out, has become the right hand of the executive. Studies are being carried out not alone into the immediate needs of a particular industry, but into other industries, to discover what their relations are to each other, and into foreign possibilities for sales.

All relevant facts are gathered; a basis of them then the executives often are forced to change their entire business course.

"The executive of the future will be a keen minded opportunist, adapting his business to the latest information," Frederick said. "He will govern his actions by the immediate conditions as a poker player governs his play by his varying hands."

"In the background, the research man and analyst will be ceaselessly gathering that information."

A CURFEW TOWN

Allegan, Mich.—An ordinance is being contemplated here that would close all public places when the curfew rings at 8:45. Not a sandwich or drink of soda would be purchasable if this ordinance goes into effect. Another measure would make it illegal to operate electrical apparatus after 3 p. m. and interfere with radio reception.

COPS WIN AGAIN

San Francisco.—Earl Crenson, 31, was a free thinker. He absolutely refused to go to church. His mother threatened to call the police and went so far as to pick up the receiver and say "Give me police headquarters." Then she hung up the receiver. But a wide-awake operator had heard. She traced the call and notified headquarters. Within a few minutes a patrol wagon, traffic cop and a half dozen beat men pulled up at the Crenson home. Mrs. Crenson explained the situation, after recovering from the shock, and Earl went to church accompanied by a patrolman.

IS IT BEST POLICY.

Detroit.—George Kaneigh, 57, homeless and hungry, found a five-dollar bill on the sidewalk. He took it to police headquarters and requested it be returned to the owner. The department, however, refused to accept the bill until the owner was found and when Kaneigh refused to keep it and insisted that the owner be found he was taken to the hospital for a sanity test.

TOO REALISTIC

Belgrade, Yugoslavia.—Madame Zlata Gaveta, prima donna of the National theater, is in favor of less realistic scenes in opera. Her feelings on this subject were brought to the attention of the audience when a clumsy domestic threw a dagger which pinned the songstress' foot to the floor of the stage. The curtain was dropped before Madame could fully express her opinion of the supporting cast.

By MILTON BRONNER
Sheffield, England.—Cast iron houses—which might prove popular in Chicago, inasmuch as they are bomb-proof and bullet-proof—are being manufactured by a British firm near here.
They can pack a complete cast iron house into freight cars, ship it to destination and have it erected within 30 hours to one week after the material is delivered. Already, the town of Derby has erected 500 such houses and other towns have erected smaller numbers.
But the cast iron houses are not being erected in England for the same reason they might be erected in Chicago. They have been developed as a means of meeting the tremendous housing shortage and combatting the high cost of brick and other building material.
From about $2125, a two-story cast iron house can be purchased. The ground floor contains a big living room, kitchen, larder, coal bin and lavatory. The top floor contains three bedrooms and a bathroom. For an additional $125, a house with larger rooms can be obtained. A purchaser desiring a small bungalow—containing a living room, two bedrooms, reception hall, bathroom, scullery and larder—can get it for $1425.
The outer walls of these homes are constructed of cast iron plates, covered with a special cast of rough cement. A patented method of joining the flanges makes the houses completely weathertight and provides secure fastenings for the inside walls. The inside walls are made of wood, covered with asbestos cement boards. The roofs and porches are covered with red tile. Floors of living rooms and bedrooms are of wood, other floors of concrete.
It is claimed that these houses last longer than the ordinary brick houses and do not require repainting. On account of the excellent insulation, they maintain an equable temperature.

Chicago.—Here is something for the serious consideration of allegedly mistreated husbands.
The Illinois Retail Hardware Association has found out why their friend wife has the uncalled-for habit of meeting you with a red ring pin when you attempt to sneak in late at night. It's because you haven't matched your better half to her surrounding.
They say that if your wife partial to red trimmed in gold it would be suicidal to put her into a kitchen decorated in sky blue trimmed with white. For the sake of marital happiness they recommend that every husband provide the madam with decorations and utensils to suit her color complex.

The material can be obtained quickly, because all the prospective owner has to do is consult a catalogue and specify the type of house he wants. It is then loaded into freight cars and shipped to him.
The "Thorncliffe" houses, as they are called, are cast by an iron foundry at Thorncliffe, near this steel manufacturing center. The molds for the unique plates were made at Cleveland, Ohio.

Compiled by the CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(144) CONNECTICUT LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES
The five life insurance companies of Connecticut today hold more than a billion dollars of resources in trust for the protection and benefit of their policyholders. Twenty years ago Connecticut life insurance companies had assets totaling $240,975,636. The last statements of these companies show that the combined assets of the life departments are $1,052,300,939. This is an increase of 341% in total admitted assets in the twenty years. Three of the companies are stock companies and two are mutuals.
The 1928 income of the companies from premiums and investment earnings has been multiplied many times. The premium income increased 674% in the twenty years, amounting to $224,818,383 last year and $28,934,653 for 1908. The total income increased in about the same proportion in the 20 years, amounting to $293,461,330 last year and $40,955,716 in 1908. Almost $2,000,000,000 has been paid to policyholders or beneficiaries since organization by the Connecticut companies.
The life companies have a "surplus as regard policyholders" of $112,000,000. Included in this figure is the $32,000,000 in paid up capital of the three stock life companies. Last year these stock companies paid cash dividends amounting to $5,120,000. The surplus over all liabilities of the five companies amounts to $76,000,000. The total liabilities (excluding surplus and capital) amounted to $995,600,000 on January 1, 1928, as against $225,011,926 twenty years ago. Last year total disbursements were $183,179,441, while in 1908 disbursements totaled $30,024,252.

Buys his oil at the same places. If ever a motor had the T. B. that poor car has it. He's so choked up he can hardly inhale his gas. His bearings are so worn and loose, it sounds like a milk wagon going over cobbles even when he's idling. Says his cylinders are in terrible shape. When he was new a year ago, he did eighteen to the gallon and only gets about seven now. Ain't it a pity, Boss? There ought to be a law against abusing motors."

THE CONTEST

The contest is to be between Herbert Clark Hoover and Alfred Emanuel Smith. Each candidate was nominated on the first ballot by his party's convention. Each is the strongest nominee his party could possibly have chosen. Each is a man of achievement, each is of the highest personal integrity. Each is a born leader. Each goes to the country on his record.

Between Herbert Hoover and Alfred Smith there are points of wide divergence. One is famous internationally. One is famous in a ball-wick. One has lived his life in the wide world. One has lived his, so to speak, on the sidewalks of New York. In the matter of horizons there is no comparison between the two.

It is just, it is fair, to concede that insofar as it lies within the authority of a President to determine the course of government, the country is assured, in any event, of a wise head and an able hand at the helm of the next administration. That the capacity of one head is greater than that of the other, that the ability of one hand exceeds that of the other, we believe. That the party of which one is the nominee far overshadows the party of which the other is the nominee, in its fitness to determine policies and command legislation, we are utterly convinced.

This newspaper is for Herbert Hoover and the Republican party because it believes in the superior qualifications of both candidate and party. But it shares in the probably universal satisfaction throughout the country that the Presidential contest is to be between two Americans of far more than mediocre attainments and far more than passable character.

DEMOCRATIC PLATFORM

Aside from the fatal blunder of writing a dry plank for a frankly wet candidate to stand on, the Democratic platform builders at Houston did the most skillful job of vote bidding that any similar group in that party has done for many years.

To be sure there was nothing particularly brilliant in substantially copying Claude Bowers' Black Horse Cavalry speech and undertaking to portray the Republican party as an aggregation of scoundrels and thieves; but for the first time the Democrats abandoned their ruinous "tariff reform" policy of ancient tradition; while the plank on farm relief is a clever bit of manipulation, quite capable of being interpreted according to the predispositions of the reader. It contains an endorsement of the equalization fee, so veiled as to satisfy the average Easterner, so implicit as to appeal to the wildest agrarian radical. It makes the most of failure to settle the great water-power question and takes full advantage of events in this connection that have transpired under a Republican administration—of course not mentioning that Boulder Dam legislation was blocked by a Democratic filibuster.

It strikes popular notes on the questions of foreign policy, world peace and disarmament. It throws a sop to the woman vote in the plank of full equal rights for their sex. It has a lame duck plank. It pledges a resonant note for state's rights and enlarged local government.

It was written without any great regard for consistency with past performances, but it was framed by tacticians whose insight is not to be belittled. Especially in its about-face on the time-honored "tariff reform" plank.

America, who died on Wednesday, was not only regarded by critics as a player of rare talent and intelligence but he was a remarkable example of the craftsman whose product continues to improve in quality even in his old age.

The writer happens to have seen Mantell play "Richelleu" while he was in his forties, in the very prime and vigor of life, and again to have seen him portray the same role a few years ago when he was almost seventy. And the Richelleu of Mantell the old man was a better Richelleu in every point than the Richelleu of Mantell the young man.

Even at the time of this later performance—some five or six years since—it was evident that the strapping, stormy Mantell of Monbars days was breaking physically. Yet the spirit, the intellect, the technique, the infinite delicacy of voice shadings, displayed by the veteran were a demonstration of the accumulated knowledge and perfected skill that, on the stage, can come only after the passage of many studious, laborious years.

Mantell was "old school," to be sure, and there are many actors and many critics who smile behind their hands at the flamboyance of the age to which he belonged. Perhaps they are right; perhaps the roarings of a Barrett or a McCullough would be met by titters nowadays; perhaps the exaggerations and artificialities of the old stage were childish and bad art. But at least there is nothing in present day stagecraft to impart the thrill that Mantell, even in his tottering feebleness, sent sweeping through his audiences in the blazing periods of Richelleu.

REGULARITY

It would be needlessly unwise for Republicans to take too much stock in the prediction of Senator Simmons of North Carolina that in the event of Smith's nomination the Democratic Solid South would split. Senator Simmons as a North Carolinian ought to know the temper of his own people better than any Northerner, of course, but he is distinguished for one tremendous lack—he hasn't even the suggestion of a sense of humor. And it is impossible for anybody with any sense of humor at all to view the proposition of any truly Southern state casting its electoral vote for a Republican nominee for President as anything but a very breezy joke.

The only chance for the Democratic candidate to lose the electoral vote of the Solid South has lain in the possibility of a delegate bolt and the nomination of some other sort of a Democrat than Smith on a third party ticket. This looked for a while like a fairly likely event. But Southern Democrats are more prolific of words than of deeds and such energetic action seems to have been beyond them.

So long as the Southern white looks upon the Republican party as the "nigger party, suh," Democrats of Dixie may use bad language and make terrible threats, but they, wet or dry, will vote Democratic just the same.

LOGICAL

The determination of Mr. Hoover to retire from his cabinet position, probably at the middle of July, should occasion neither surprise nor puzzlement. Previous declarations that he intended to stay right along in the commerce secretaryship, appearing in the press immediately after his nomination, seemed at the time to be a strained interpretation of the candidate's intentions. Because Mr. Hoover was not ready, right off the bat, to tell when he would resign, there was a general jumping at the conclusion that he didn't intend to resign at all.

Any correct evaluation of Hoover's qualities would have convinced almost anybody, it would have seemed, that he would not try to run the department of commerce and a Presidential campaign at the same time. He is not that kind of a man. He is an habitual concentrator. When he tackles a job he tackles it in earnest. He doesn't give half of himself to any undertaking. If he did he would not be the Republican party's nominee for the Presidency.

It is the most natural and logical thing in the world for Mr. Hoover to quit just about the time he has indicated—in other words as soon as he can prepare his job for leaving. There is probably not the faintest shading of truth in the published guess that President Coolidge suggested the resignation.

SYNTHETIC MR. HOW

Because James Eads How has appeared in the prints many, many times as the "Millionaire Hobo," the evidence of his wife in her declaration seeking a divorce, bearing on the singular Mr. How's financial status, is worth pinning in the back of one's memory. Between them, said the plaintiff in the divorce action, Mr. and Mrs. How own about twelve thousand dollars' worth of property. How's "millionaire" income of $600 to $800 a month is just gift money from his mother.

Since How is likely to pop up, any time, as a center of interest and as a "millionaire" tramp, the actual extent of his possessions may be worth remembering. Meantime, we wonder how How's hobo friends will take the revelation that he is a mamma's boy to the extent of seventy-five hundred to ten thousand dollars a year.

REVIVAL

Among the many surprising attributes accredited to Big Tim Murphy of Chicago, slain by machine gun gangsters, is that of having been the originator of the term "racket" with relation, not to a noise but to quietly illegal or at least slyly dubious schemes for getting money.

It is a little difficult to understand how Big Tim could have been the first to make such use of the word, since he was only in his early forties, whereas "racket," employed precisely in the same sense as at present, was fixed in the vocabulary of the underworld before he was born.

True, it did disappear from general use for a good many years, but Tim Murphy originated it about as much as he originated the Farmer's Almanac.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Herald. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

There were teeth before there were dentists—but there were also tooth aches. Since a tooth pain is about as agonizing a thing as one can feel, various races in the past have found means of extracting the teeth. Tongs or pliers were used by some of them for this purpose, but the original method was to hammer the tooth loose with a mallet and crude bone man! so that it could be pulled out with the fingers. In some countries, various prayer methods were used in cases of tooth ache, and even yet in Catholic territories, St. Apollonia is the patron Saint of tooth ache.

The Chinese have a very effective method of curing tooth ache by puncturing the gum under the aching tooth and inserting capsicum or some other counter-irritant into the wound. This is still a useful remedy. You should have a small vial of tincture of capsicum in your home, and the next time you have a tooth ache, just dip a small piece of cotton on the end of a toothpick into the capsicum and then place the cotton in the cavity of the tooth. This will usually give immediate relief. Be careful not to get any of the capsicum on the tongue, however, since it is manufactured out of the same kind of hot stuff as Tabasco sauce.

The art of manufacturing false teeth is not a new one, since the Eskimo and a few other primitive races manufactured false teeth by carving them out of tusks, hard bones, and horns of various animals.

Some aborigines have a very painful and useless custom of mutilating the teeth by knocking out or filing down to a point some of their front teeth. This is considered proof of their courage and an enhancement of their beauty. At least there may be some truth in the first statement. There are said to have been several individuals who grew a third set of teeth, but most of us will have to be satisfied with our third set in the way the dentists make them.

The dentists have developed their skill in advancing their profession. It may be interesting to my readers to know that many dentists are referring their patients to my menus for keeping their teeth in good condition. They are realizing that teeth may be destroyed as much by acidosis as by uncleanness, and that the daily use of the toothbrush will not magically brush away the cause of tooth decay when the teeth require special foods containing mineral elements for their nourishment.

In treating pyorrhoea, it is advisable that a patient go on an orange juice fast for a few days to alkalize the blood and then to the dentist for local treatments. If the patient will then follow a correctly combined diet during the course of his dental treatments, he is sure to get more permanent results.

Do not have teeth pulled unless absolutely necessary. Children should be encouraged to chew whole raw vegetables, such as carrots, turnips, cucumbers, beets and celery. The fibers of these vegetables will require enough chewing to strengthen the teeth and keep them clean. And, most important, these vegetables will supply the elements to maintain the teeth's nourishment. The foods that are best suited for tooth development are spinach, lettuce, tomatoes, celery, beets and beat greens, blackberries, figs, asparagus, cucumbers, dandelions, strawberries, watercress, cabbage, turnips, milk, rutabagas, pife nuts and cottage cheese.

Answer: Pernicious anemia and high blood pressure seldom go together but it is quite common to see secondary anemia with arterial hypertension. Diet is the most prominent factor in the treatment of any of these conditions, but I would have to know more about the particular case in question before it would be wise to give any definite advice.

Question: Mother writes: "My baby two years old has 15 teeth, but there are two milk teeth that will not come through. Why is that, and should the gums be lanced?"

Answer: Do not be too quick to lance the gums. The full set of milk teeth, 28 in all, does not come through until the child is about three years of age. If you will give the baby plenty of greens and milk he will be sure to develop a good set of teeth.

Question: Reader asks: "Can a dropped stomach be cured, and how?"

Answer: A prolated stomach can always be raised to its proper position through taking the "setting-up" exercises. If any adhesions exist which are holding the stomach down, these must be broken loose first by manipulative treatment.

Question: Mrs. H. G. writes: "I read your article in which you stated that asthma could be cured by diet. Will you kindly tell me what the diet is?"

You learn, for instance, that a certain Helen Kane, who has been amusing the audience at a "cathedral of the cinema" is being observed with the most scrutinous eyes, and may blaze forth in a musical show next season. And that there's a hooter being looked over down street at the Paramount.

You learn that here's as much excitement over prospective funds in the theater game as there is over the discovery of a new Babe Ruth in baseball or another Red Grange in football.

The Modern Man Is Well Dressed For The Fourth and For The Summer

In the land of rest, recreation and romance, faultless clothes count more than family costs. You have an opportunity to reveal your better self, because people will take you at your own valuation—and many vacation fancies have developed into life long friendships.

The MODERN Man Is Well Dressed
Straw Hats
Turn down the brim of your panama, leghorn or milan—enjoy the same shady, nonchalant style you have seen and admired on others—it's the stylish thing to do.

For those who have worn the stiff brimmed straw we suggest these hats as specially appropriate for July and August.
$2.50 to $6.00

The MODERN Man Is Well Dressed
Golf Clothing
Clothes may not make the game, but Will Rogers says that if you take the costume away from golf the thing wouldn't last twenty-four hours. Whether you prefer to play in a cool Palm Beach suit, linen knickers and blazer, or long flannels and contrasting jacket you'll find them here.
Suits $35, $37.50 and $40
Pants $5 to $10

The MODERN Man Is Well Dressed
SHIRTS
The sparkle and snap of a man's shirt gives zest to the whole outfit—selection should include colors both becoming and remaining. Flat, faded shirts give a man a washed-out appearance.
House's shirts are as colorful or as quiet as you wish—and they keep on as they start.
$1.00 to $6.00

The MODERN Man Is Well Dressed
Bathing Suits
There's one way that the outwardly conservative man can give way to colorful modernism, without being liable to quips or queries—yes, underneath. You can have your colored "shorts" as wild as you like them.
You'll find plaids, stripes, figures and plain weaves here in colors as varied as Joseph's coat.
$4.50 to $6

New York, June 29.—In the midst of the general dialogue as to just what manner of boloney Tom Heenee happens to be, it is interesting to learn today that Jimmie Bronson, Tunney's companionate aide at the Philadelphia and Chicago fights, looks upon the gripping struggle of July 26 with a somewhat dubious eye.

It perhaps would be untrue to say that Bronson fears the worst for Brother Tunney. For one thing at the good brother wants not men around him who are given to fearing for him, even when justified, and James has no wish to talk himself right out of employment.

What he did say, is that only with a "private" fight with regulation gloves, rounds and officials in the intervening month can Brother Tunney hope to be the man he was the night he first licked Dempsey.

Bronson's summing up of the principals takes this course: That Heenee is no march here in speed but he is faster than Dempsey; and that Tunney missed Dempsey all too often in the early stages of the Chicago fight.

That Tunney, in confining his activities of the last three years to the same opponent, was open to the danger of being too completely familiar with this opponent employed.

That the fight may have to go fifteen rounds and Tunney has not gone beyond ten since he met Carpentier and Gibbons in 1924 and 1925 respectively; whereas, Heenee, a distance fighter, if any, has had had fifteen round fights in the last year with Paulino and Delaney and a 12-rounder with Sharkey.

VELODROME BATTLE SCHEDULED TONIGHT

King Tut and Lope Tenorio Ready for 12 Round Clash; Monday's Card Announced.

HARTFORD CARD TONIGHT

Star Bout
King Tut, California, vs. Topo Tenorio, Philippine Islands, 126 pounds, 12 rounds.

Semi-Final
Pinkey Kaufman, Hartford, vs. Frankie Portelle, Hartford, 8 rounds at 140 pounds.

Other Bouts
Kewpie Ledoux, Holyoke, vs. Joe Triano, New Haven, 6 rounds at 118 pounds.

Romeo Roche, Holyoke, vs. Benny Kelly, New York, 6 rounds at 140 pounds.

Mickey Roberts, Hartford, vs. Roland Roche, Holyoke, 4 rounds at 120 pounds.

Two lightweight bouts of prominence will meet in the star bout at the Hartford Velodrome tonight, King Tut of California, and Lope Tenorio of the Philippine Islands.—In case there is no postponement, this is the star bout of the card set for Monday night, but postponed Monday afternoon when there was promise of more rain. It was cloudy this morning.

King Tut and Tenorio met at the Garden a few weeks ago on the all-lightweights card, which was topped by Kaplan and Quintero, and their clash carried off the honors for the night as far as real action was concerned. Tut yesterday won on his training at the Charter Oak gym in Hartford.

Tenorio finished his training at New York whether he went Tuesday after the postponement.

When the boys weighed in Monday Tut tipped the scales at 136 flat and Tenorio at 137 1/4. They were not required to weigh in again this afternoon. This bout promises a lot of real action, Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion, having declared this a scheduled article that they are two of the hardest hitting lightweights he has seen.

The semi-final, too, brings a lot of warfare because it promises a pair of Hartford boys, whose supporters have long talked fight—Pinkey Kaufman, former state welterweight champion in the amateur ranks, and Frankie Portelle.

The show will open up with a four-rounder in which Mickey Roberts of Hartford meets Roland Roche of Holyoke. This is a rematch, these boys having fought a slashing scrap at the Velodrome two weeks ago. Joe Triano of New Haven meets Kewpie Ledoux of Holyoke in a six-rounder and Romeo Roche of Holyoke mixes with Benny Kelly of New York in a bout of like length.

The star bout is set for 8:15, daylight saving time. Ladies will be admitted free, if accompanied by escorts.

Monday's Program
Jimmy Scully of Boston, who defeated Johnny O'Keefe of Hartford at the Hartford Velodrome two weeks ago, will meet Milton Cohen, sensational New York featherweight in the feature bout of the popular-priced boxing show at the Velodrome Monday night. This feature bout of eight rounds will be supported by an under card of eight four-rounders.

Outstanding among the four-round bouts, is the one between Eddie Ely of Springfield, former champion of New England amateur circles, and Joe Hanlon of New York, former national middleweight amateur champion.

Then there is a re-match of Pancho Villa of Hartford and Marino Fasani of Springfield, who fought at the Velodrome two weeks ago with Pagoni getting the verdict after a slashing battle.

In addition to a few professionals of two and three years' experience, the card contains the names of more than a score of boys who have been headliners in the amateur end of the game and who have just (or long ago) turned professionals. The complete card:

Jimmy Scully, Boston, vs. Milton Cohen, New York, 8 rounds; Eddie Ely, Springfield, vs. Joe Hanlon, New York; Pancho Villa, Hartford, vs. Marino Pagoni, Springfield; Henry Bell, Hartford, vs. Harry Blaker, North Adams; Gerald Emard, Holyoke, vs. George Welch, Hartford; Buster Nadeau, Holyoke, vs. Pee Wee Smith, Bridgeport; Ray Sanborn, Hartford, vs. Sunny Smith, Lynn, Mass.; Harry Seche, Hartford, vs. Willie Morgan, Hartford.

LOUGHRAN WINS THE DECISION, BUT VICTORY WAS NO CINCH

Emanuel, Fighting Lawyer From the Coast Gives the Champ a Stiff Go From First Bell to the Last.

New York, June 29.—Tommy Loughran, light heavyweight champion of the world, won a ten-round decision over Armand Emanuel, fighting young Jewish lawyer, of San Francisco, at Madison Square Garden last night.

The Hebrew pugilist hope from the Golden Gate put up a stiff fight all the way through and kept the champion working hard every second of the bout.

At the opening bell Loughran began a body attack. He stung Emanuel throughout the round with a series of right hooks to the jaw region and short smashes under the heart.

Both boxers concentrated on body punching in the fifth and sixth rounds. The champion had the better of the argument at this style of fighting.

Loughran outsped Emanuel in the seventh. The champion switched his attack from the body to the jaw and snatched Armand with several left hooks to the jaw.

The tenth round was fought at a fast pace, with honors quite even. Emanuel tried desperately to get over a winning punch that might have earned him the victory.

Under the main bureau there could be lots of splendid little bureaus to help keep our athletes dumb but honest.

When boys play marbles, ostensibly it is for the sport of getting their knuckles dirty and knocking the other fellow's milks out of the ring.

The bureaus could hire snappers—there could be about 75,000 of these fellows. They would attend all marbles matches, shadow the discs heavers, give suspects the third degree, control all ping pong struggles.

It would be far better to establish a bureau of amateur athletics in Washington. Every time a man wants to hit a tennis ball purely for the thrill and adventure of it, he could apply to the bureau.

Under the main bureau there could be lots of splendid little bureaus to help keep our athletes dumb but honest. There would be the sub-bureau of cribbage, the department of mumbletypeg, the division of jacks. Let's regulate everything.

When boys play marbles, ostensibly it is for the sport of getting their knuckles dirty and knocking the other fellow's milks out of the ring. But, alas! Despite the A. A. U. there have been marbles matches right here in the land of the free and the home of the brave, where little boys were known to keep board, treasure and preserve the spoils they garnered from the skill of their knuckles.

The bureaus of athletic control would work like the prohibition boys go about it. Every amateur athlete would have at least as much respect for the high office of an athletic supervisor, that the bootlegger has for a federal agent.

It's a good idea.—It ought to work out well—in Tibet, where the yaks race playfully with one another, leaping from crag to crag, or in India where the national game is worshipping cows.

When A Girl Loves

THIS HAS HAPPENED VIRGINIA BREWSTER is in love with NATHANIEL DANN...

She pawns her jewelry and OLIVER CUTTER promises to invest the money for her. She seeks work without success...

Her firm requests her to go on a voyage as ship hostess. This separation, together with the cutter affairs on one hand and CHIRI on the other, cause a lovers' quarrel between her and NATHANIEL...

They both suffer, but her work and the hope of getting aid from one of her father's friends, NATHANIEL LEIGH, in Haiti, helps VIRGINIA endure the heartache...

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XLV

TEN minutes after Virginia entered "Oddly" Leigh's sickroom she had lifted her head and sat up. He did not confide directly that he was a ruined man but it was apparent in everything she saw and in what he left unsaid.

He had heard of her father's death. Virginia, sitting in a chair drawn close to his bedside, saw a flicker of pain pass over his face as he mentioned Richard Brewster's name.

Finally he asked Virginia who had come out to the plantation with her. She rather sought to evade answering him.

"I'm afraid our reception of visitors doesn't do us much credit," he said with a smile that wrung Virginia's heart.

Virginia was not taken in by his reference to his illness as a short one. It would have been evident to anyone that he had not been out of his bed for much longer than a few days.

"It was a relief to find you here someone here who can speak English," Virginia replied, smiling back at him.

"Rastus is a godsend," Leigh returned promptly. "I don't know what I'd do without him. He needs a lot of bossing, though. We will have to tell him just what to do about lunch. He's chief cook and bottle washer for the present."

Virginia thought she detected a new note of concern in his voice and concluded that he was troubled himself over her entertainment.

"I'm afraid I can't stay to lunch," she said. "I must get back to the ship."

Leigh did not answer for a moment but Virginia saw a look of disappointment spread over his face. He made a movement to pull himself farther up on his pillow.

"If you'll just be so good as to call Rastus I'll have him get you something," he muttered. "Got drive out. You must be parched."

"Please don't bother," Virginia pleaded. "We'll be going in a few minutes."

One of these was his ability to read through the eyes. It might have been a natural gift but if so it had been developed to a higher degree during the years he had spent as a big game hunter in the jungles.

He had learned to know what a beast meant to do in the same fraction of time required to send the order for action from the mind of the animal to its muscles.

She sat and talked a little longer. Then Virginia said good-by to "Oddly" Leigh.

Somehow she staggered down the dim stairs without mishap and out into the dazzling glare of the sunlight. Miss Webster called to her from the cleared patch under some thickly grown trees.

"Have you seen a ghost?" the stewardess exclaimed when Virginia reached her. She got up and gave the girl the chair.

Had he not once saved her father's life? What was $25,000 compared to that? No, Virginia had to admit, "Old Oddly" owed her nothing.

Virginia did not go again to visit him. For two reasons: her time was too fully taken up and she could not go through such an emotional crisis again without losing control of herself.

The first night after her visit to Leigh it had been necessary for the physician aboard the ship to attend her for an attack of hysteria. He was watching her very closely now, warning her against a repetition of the cause of the attack.

Virginia had told him enough of the visit to explain why it upset her so.

She tried to make up for her neglect by sending out boxes of delicacies, some of which she brought from the ship's stores, books and magazines the passengers had discarded, and little notes of cheer.

In return Mr. Leigh sent her gorgeous flowers, mostly roses, but now and then a potted poinsettia plant, with blooms more than a foot in diameter.

Before the Agena left Port au Prince Virginia received a letter from Nathaniel. It had arrived on a mail boat that had not stopped at long in Havana, but she knew it must have been written within a few days after she left New York.

Time enough, however, for Niel to write calmly, Virginia tore open the envelope with eager, trembling fingers.

MARYE and MOM Their Letters

Dearest Mom: Just when I think you are a modern woman, and that I have you educated to speak my language...

Your last letter reminded me that there is no theory with which I have less sympathy than that which prescribes a baby as a sure remedy for keeping a woman happy and a home intact.

And if we have a difficulty reconciling our temperaments and tastes, certainly a child who might inherit my recklessness and Alan's smugness, and have them both to contend within himself, as well as having parents always pulling in opposite directions, might just as well give up the game entirely.

I have taken no stand against motherhood. But let this be understood—If Alan and I have a child, it will be because we want it, and really believe we can do right by it, and because we are willing to sacrifice for it.

It could not be worth $100,000. And if it could bring that much she could not ask the man who owed her nothing to deprive himself of his last penny to save her or even her father's honor.

Had he not once saved her father's life? What was $25,000 compared to that? No, Virginia had to admit, "Old Oddly" owed her nothing.

And I was a bit surprised that you could change your whole idea of Stella, just because you saw her with a baby and realized she could sterilize bottles as well as drive 50 miles an hour.

Just because she was what you call "wild," meaning she had lots of life and energy, you assumed she could not possibly have any of the gentler and more womanly qualities.

As a matter of fact, Stella always was a brick and a square shooter if I ever met one. Naturally she'd make a good mother, because she's too good a sport not to give everybody a fair deal—even a baby.

Here I've allowed myself to become quite worked up on this subject, and I've ranted on at such length that I can't take time to tell you about the handsome gentleman, mentioned in my previous epistle.

Well, there is nothing like suspense to hold interest and whet the appetite for further developments. So my own personal adventures will have to be continued in our next.

PRE-EMPTIVE BIDS

Although the occasions are few, there are times when pre-emptive bidding is necessary and advisable.

When, then, shall two no trump or two in a suit be bid originally? Should you ever bid two originally? When should three or more be bid originally? What is the necessity of opening a bid of more than one?

The object of pre-emptive is to shut out bidding on the part of the adversaries and prevent them from arriving at their best game-going declaration of interchanging information. It must be done in fear of something, else there is no necessity of pre-empting. The stronger your hand, the less advisable is it to preempt.

All authorities agree that a bid or two in a major or minor suit will not shut out bidding. This being so, what is the necessity of bidding two? Some experts bid two when holding a K Q X X X in a minor or major suit. Those experts who advocate it assert that it will give partner accurate information as to this particular holding. They all agree that you should not bid two except when holding a K Q X X X, and then only when you do not hold material strength in the other suits. Exactly what strength may be held in other suits is not definitely determined.

The disadvantage of bidding two is that it may shut out valuable information from your partner. Partner may hesitate to go to three hearts after your two-spade bid, but game may be made in hearts and not in spades. The expert may, under certain circumstances, bid two spades, recognizing the psychological moment for it. Some authorities recognize the two bid as a convention when holding a suit of six cards including the Ace-King-Queen, but thousands in different localities have not generally accepted it.

WHEN DO WE EAT? Diet for the Baby, Says Olive Roberts Barton, Always Should Be Supervised by a Doctor.

By Olive Roberts Barton

When a baby is under-nourished it generally is evidenced by his failure to gain weight, or other signs of physical distress.

It is important to see that a baby's food is sufficient for his needs in quality as well as quantity. In his food he needs the substances that build up bone, muscle, heart, lungs, brain, and all the other parts of his body.

related to a proper one will fall in building up a child if he does not get enough sleep, or if he continues to be excited or over-stimulated.

Too little fresh air, exercise and sun are contributory causes to malnutrition.

Also it is quite possible for bad tonsils, adenoids, or defective teeth to interfere with proper eating and digestion in children.

Doctors often supplement the feeding of a young baby with cod-liver oil, strained orange juice, or the strained juice of canned tomatoes. A baby 2 months old can take a half teaspoonful of cod liver oil twice a day and at 3 months a whole teaspoonful twice a day.

Orange juice may be started at the end of the second month—half an ounce daily, or the same amount of the juice of canned tomatoes. This may be very slowly increased. Purees or vegetable pulp, strained, often are given toward the end of the first year.

If a baby is getting along well during the hot months it is better to stick to the things that you know are agreeing with him.

It is better not to wear a baby in hot weather.

Cute in a Baby—Awful at Three—and it's Dangerous

Thumb sucking does look sweet in a baby, but it is disgusting in the three-year-old and sometimes it hangs on until fifteen or sixteen!

Another bad habit—irregularity in bowel action—is responsible for weak bowels and constipation in babies. Give the tiny bowels an opportunity to act at regular periods each day.

Castoria is purely vegetable and harmless—the recipe is on the wrapper. Physicians have prescribed it for over 30 years. With each package, you get a valuable book on Motherhood. Look for Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper so you'll get the genuine.

A DOCTOR URGES A BACK-TO-FARM MOVEMENT FOR WORKING WOMEN

It is about time to start a "back to the farm" movement for nervous factory workers and other women in big cities.

"People talk about the loneliness, the dullness, isolation and hard work confronting the farm woman," Dr. Halton said.

"What about the city's loneliness? The poor girl is thrown in contact with luxury, is under continuous temptation to crash the gate; she is a beggar at the feast of life."

"The drudgery and loneliness of farm life is over-sold by pessimistic folks. Automobiles, motor buses, radio, telephone, and the labor-saving devices lighten the day's work and give entertainment for leisure."

From my experience with working women and girls in big cities, I believe that everything should be done to discourage poor country girls from seeking fame and fortune in the city.

Conversely, that city girls should have the advantages of the country pointed out to them.

MOST AMERICANS DON'T DRINK ENOUGH MILK

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

The experts in nutrition have decided that 1 1/2 pints of milk per day is a reasonable average consumption for man.

As pointed out by Dr. C. E. A. Winslow, milk ranks third among the foodstuffs as a source of energy and second in richness in proteins and in fats.

For more than a quarter of a century a vast amount of attention has been given in this country to the obtaining of a pure milk supply, but standards of cleanliness in milking are still low.

Contamination Easy Contamination still, takes place easily from the cow, from the fingers of the milker, from flies and from dirty vessels in which the milk is collected or into which it may be poured after collecting.

Furthermore, under civilized conditions of living, it is necessary to transmit milk over long distances and there are numerous possibilities for contamination in transit.

The WOMAN'S DAY

New York has 25,000 professional shoplifters, the Stores Mutual Protective Association reveals.

It's a startling statement that one Selma Robinson, makes in a current magazine article called "Young America Goes to the Opera," an article concerning grand opera possibilities for American-born boys and girls right here at home.

A famous woman detective once told me that in all her years of work she never caught one shoplifter who had stolen of necessity. It's the beaded bag and jewelry and perfume and evening gown departments that are especially watched in the stores—nobody steals plain underwear or sew pans.

Amelita's Idea Amelita Gall-Curel sounds a rather new note in all the discussion about marriage when she recommends a mental examination as well as physical. The mental inquest would be no attempt to decide which party had the superior intellect, but an attempt to classify the types of minds represented and have a skilled psychiatrist analyze the chance of a happy marriage with the union of two such minds.

The prima donna very fitly asks, it seems to me, why it is any more absurd to have psychiatrists called when one is contemplating entering a certain vocation.

Fair Enough A wife may be carrying on several love affairs with others than her husband, but as long as that husband loves her she is entitled to damages against any other woman who tampers with her husband's affections. This is the rather strange decision handed down by Supreme Court Justice Wm. Mullin of New York in ruling that the $100,000 alienation suit of the Princess Elaine van der Lippe-Lippe against her sister, Mrs. Gertrude Schroeder, which sounds fair enough.

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES AUTHOR OF "WHEN A GIRL LOVES" © 1928 By N.E.A. Service Inc.

CHAPTER I

Bertie Lou stood on the brink of the great adventure. She was thrilled to the core of her youthful body. And no one guessed it.

Her own mother had not been permitted to see behind the mask of sophistication she wore to conceal her shy, dreaming soul. And not even Rod had known how happy she was.

For Bertie Lou would not talk about it. She was afraid of being sappy. So she posed behind an armour of hoots and jibes for the weakness of sentiment. It was the code of her day among her friends.

But tonight she could not jeer at her happiness. It made her feel like a traitor to the other girls—this being so old-fashionedly palpitating and concerned. "Wouldn't they razz me!" she thought.

She knew she ought to be asleep. Marriage was a million years old—nothing to get excited about. And she was excited. No use trying to be blasé for her own benefit. Not on this, her last night as Bertie Lou Ward. Tomorrow she would become Mrs. Rod Bryer.

She let herself dwell upon the event with much the same thoughts that might have filled the mind of any maiden of yore on the eve of her wedding day. The influence of her friends melted away before the wonder in her heart—the thousand questions, the fears and eagerness.

That was only for tonight. The next day she would be modern again—a clear-eyed, know-what-it's-all-about miss. No one would have to know that she had been misty-eyed and hesitantly prayerful the night before—just like any sap who believed in fairy tales.

She thought of the advice one 17-year-old Solon had given her: "Don't let it get you, Bertie Lou. If you don't like it you can chuck it, you know."

"But it does get you—no matter how wise you are," Bertie Lou whispered into the warm darkness of her room. And that was the nearest she ever had come to wisdom.

She lay a little longer, lost in the enchantment of standing on the threshold of a new life, before the heat of the summer night pressed unbearably upon her. The little breeze that had sprung up at sundown had died down again. Her room had grown sultry since she had gone to bed.

Bertie Lou threw back the sheet that covered her and slipped her sun-banned legs over the edge of the bed. She felt around with her toes for her old mules and thrust her feet into them.

She clattered a little as she crossed the bare floor and groped her way down the hall to the stairs. Her mother called to her: "Bertie Lou, is that you?"

Bertie Lou halted in surprise. Her mother was a sound sleeper. But Bertie Lou did not know what it meant to have a little girl getting married on the morrow.

Perhaps her mother was suffering from the heat. "I'm going down for a drink," she answered. "Want a glass of ice water?"

"Don't drink ice water, honey. There's some lemon juice in a bottle in the refrigerator. Let the water run a while."

"The whole water supply is I don't know how much," Bertie Lou replied, and went down the stairs on the banister. She didn't do this for sport—it was no old habit for that—but to save time.

She made a glass of lemonade for her mother after she'd had her own and started back upstairs with it. On the way she passed the door leading into her room and a sudden wish to take a peek at the wedding presents seized her.

She put the lemonade on a stand and opened the door. The light from the hall shone in upon the gift-covered dining table and Bertie Lou stood looking at the array with frank pleasure in the generosity of her friends.

Since the family supper on the screened back porch she had been too busy to view the gifts and she did not know that one had arrived which she had not yet seen.

It was encased in a leather oblong with gold setting. Mrs. Ward had put it down on the edge of the table, with the case open. The light struck softly on a dull bronzo blade and caught Bertie Lou's eyes.

"Eureka! Another one!" she ejaculated and went in to examine it and the card of the sender. "A funny wedding present," she thought, pecking it up. "Sharp as the devil!" Then she looked at the card.

"Miss Lila Marsh." Bertie Lou dropped the paper cutter, quickly into the case. Her face, already flushed with heat and excitement, grew a trifle warmer in color and her eyes darkened. Always the name of Lila Marsh affected her in some way. If others were present she managed somehow to keep a poker face but if, as now she was unobserved, she showed her true feelings toward the girl who had refused to marry Rod.

The rich blood in her cheeks betokened consciousness of Lila's importance and the darkened eyes expressed her will to stand firmly on her own ground.

She was Rod's girl now. Lila belonged to his past. Moderns didn't trouble about a person's past. They didn't acknowledge that they had. But Bertie Lou knew Lila—she had known her for years. Lila was a menace. She'd always played the game of her own rules. She never gave a mother girl a sporting chance.

Bertie Lou wasn't going to be jealous of Rod's past. But his future belonged to her, at least insofar as Lila was concerned. Lila had had her chance. She'd married a poor fellow because he wasn't making enough money. And she couldn't see any chance for a bookkeeper in Wayville to leap into a fortune.

Of course it was all right for Lila to send a present. Bertie Lou conceded that. But why a dagger? From anyone else it would have meant nothing. But coming from Lila it might mean anything.

That was the rub. Bertie Lou didn't know. Lila hadn't gone readily with any boy since Rod. But she wasn't lonely by any means. She was popular. What if she wanted Rod?

Bertie Lou had openly subscribed to that overworked declaration about keeping no strings on anyone. "If he wants to go, he may. If any other girl can take him, she's welcome."

That was before she fell in love with Rod. Now she knew that a possessive, fighting strain ran side by side with her pride.

She would keep Rod if she could. And she couldn't see how any girl could stop loving him. She didn't believe Lila had. Lila had instilled the idea by a pose of sadness and frequent wistful references to a great mistake.

Bertie Lou slammed the door of the dining room with a bang. Lila had offered her lemonade to her mother. Mrs. Ward said: "Your hair is hot, honey; don't you feel well?"

"It's awfully close. Mums; do you think it will rain tomorrow?" Bertie Lou evaded.

"Maybe it will rain before morning and cool things off. Can't you sleep?"

"I'm so excited—that was a slip—I mean there are so many darned things to think about when you have a wedding. I wish Rod and I had eloped. What a lot of trouble it will save when people who want to get married just walk up to a mountain top and shout their union to the four winds."

She had raised her voice. Her father, sleeping beside her mother, stirred restlessly. Bertie Lou became quiet.

"Want me to come and talk to you?" her mother whispered anxiously. It had disappointed her vaguely that Bertie Lou had not come to her with confidences and questions.

"You need your sleep. Mums, I'll read," Bertie Lou replied, and slipped out of the room. Back in her own flowerpapered bower, stripped of rugs and hangings for coolness, she threw her pillows down by the window sill, curlied up upon them. It was more restful than her bed. And the orchestration of myriad summer insects soothed her. She didn't believe she would sleep that night.

At six her mother woke her, scolding. "You'll be stiff as a ramrod. Go and take a hot bath, real hot. Yes, I know it's a hot day, but you do as I say. Cool off with a shower if you like, but don't stand there rubbing your eyes out."

Mothers' feelings hiding behind bustling authority. Bertie Lou had a better idea. She went down and put on a phonograph record and limbered up with the Black Bottom and a stomp. Then she took the hot bath and poured the last quarter bottle of bath salts into the tub. Her mother didn't like them. She might as well luxuriate. Couldn't pack a nearly empty bottle.

She was well soaped in rose perfume by the time she was ready for the cold shower.

Then came breakfast. It was slightly cooler on the shaded porch and Bertie Lou's mother had provided iced honey-dew with lemon.

No one "pawed" her for being laid dressed this morning. Her old in a divorce—Rod, who kissed her as if he'd been hungry all his life for her lips.

She had heard, however, girls talking about the technique of the boys. Their attendance at the movies had not been in vain, it was agreed.

Had Rod ever kissed Lila like that? If he had he could some day kiss a third girl—or would she be the new girl scorned to ask the man she was to marry if he'd ever loved anyone else. She didn't want him to lie to her. Rod had no idea how Bertie Lou felt about Lila. They never talked about her beyond Rod's brief—"she's magnetized."

Bertie Lou swallowed the lump in her throat. What was the use? You couldn't read the future. She closed her eyes a moment and recalled Rod's goodnight to her. It still sent delicious shivers down her spine. He had kissed her eyes, her lips, her hair, her throat.

She was brought to earth by her mother's voice, calling her to some small task in the kitchen. Bertie Lou worked there and all over the house until the bridesmaids appeared. Then she went upstairs with them, not to come down again until the wedding march summoned her.

Most of the things for her trip were packed. One of the girls checked off a list she had made to use as suggestions for Bertie Lou. It saved her overlooking her handkerchiefs. The others put on their own dresses, pale green organdie, and then helped Bertie Lou into her wedding dress.

She could not fail to look beautiful. The white tulle, was like the spirit of her youth. Soft, yet firmly crisp, supple and alive. Her hair, half red, half brown, framed her eager, sparkling countenance like a rich golden wreath of heavy curls.

One of the girls said that her eyes would melt; but when she looked at it—they were so soft. With that peculiar velvety softness that only brown eyes have.

She did not wear a veil, only a small wreath of white tulle, like the bouquet she was to carry in her arms.

The girls heard her mother come up the stairs and go into her room just when they'd finished fastening the wreath. Then she called to Bertie Lou and the girls went to her. The instant she was gone an excited chatter broke out among the bridesmaids.

"Isn't she sweet! Rod's in luck. I wonder how Lila will feel when she sees her! She's coming, isn't she? I guess so. Bertie Lou couldn't refuse to ask her. Darned if I would! Then you'd have everybody saying she had your goat. I should worry my extra weight off about that!"

Bertie Lou was coming back but they did not hear her.

"I don't believe Bertie Lou needs to worry about Lila, Marsh!"

"Oh, yes, but she'll have him eating out of her hand. Bertie Lou's too soft."

Another voice joined in "I wonder if Bertie Lou likes being second love?" Someone turned on this speaker. "For Pete's sake, Marcella, do you want to have to teach a guy how to make love?"

"I don't want the girl he learned on right under my nose!" Marcella retorted. "He might have a relapse, or something."

Outside the door a bride's faltering footsteps paused, hesitated between flight and entry, paused again, and Bertie Lou walked in among them.

"Mother says we must hurry," she said, as though she hadn't heard a word. They were slightly uncomfortable, not being sure about it. But extreme compassion and tenderness still lay ahead of them. It did not trouble them much to hurt a few feelings. Life was like that—brutal—they would tell you.

Amid merry laughter, the final preparation for Bertie Lou's wedding went on. There was a little stir that reached to her room, when Rod arrived. Guests were already taking their seats in the living room—where an electric fan condescended with the heat—or standing around on the lawn.

Bertie Lou's fingers were like ice when someone handed her the bridal bouquet. The minister had come, her mother had been in to say she would go down and leave Miss Eustace, the church organist, to begin the wedding march. Bertie Lou was ready.

But her heart had grown heavy. Words rang in her head. Second love. Second choice, perhaps. And at her wedding there would be a girl, laughing at her maybe, who could have stood in her place had she so desired.

"Bertie Lou, you'll have to put on some rouge," one of the girls cried suddenly. "You're pale as a ghost." Bertie Lou submitted, her eyes closed, while they dabbed her cheeks in their skillful way with artificial color.

Then the strains of "Lohengrin" stole softly up to her and she moved with her attendants toward the door. When she reached the top of the stairs she knew a wild impulse to rush back into her room, to tear the robes from her hair and cry her heart out.

Mechanically she moved down the stairs. "Here comes the bride, second choice, here comes the bride, second choice," kept time in her head to the music.

But when she entered the double doors of the living room a low murmur of admiration rose, to be quickly stifled by people who reminded themselves of where they were.

That murmur was like a benediction to Bertie Lou. It gave her courage. She must be very lovely indeed, as the girls had said, to bring it forth. Even the prettiest girl in town as some people called Lila Marsh, must grant this day to another.

And then she saw Rod, waiting for her. Waiting for HER. Bertie Lou's heart swelled with joy and pride. The pain vanished. The music grew agonizingly slow. She wanted to fly to him, to his arms, to hear him say, "I love you, Bertie Lou."

Oh, he said that, many many times. But never had he said: "I love you more than any thing else in the world."

Bertie Lou wanted him to say it. But Rod wouldn't say much about his love. That would be sappy.

Bertie Lou had a fleeting instant of hating herself for the defeat of her pride. She wanted to be Rod's wife, second choice or third, or the last girl in the world.

She knew that nothing could induce her to turn and run back from him. Let Lila watch. She would see only joy.

Bertie Lou did not look around for her. Her eyes were upon the toes of her small slippers. Remembering, she had torn them away from her bridegroom to assume the demure expression traditionally belonging to brides.

Everyone might be silently speculating, as her bridesmaids had speculated, and she might never again see her pride in full flower, but life wouldn't be endurable without Rod. If pride was the price she must pay for all the love she could wring from life, then so be it.

She might learn some day that Rod had never loved anyone as he loved her—but Bertie Lou would always have to admit that she had married him in doubt—had been willing to be second love, second choice, rather than give him up.

The spin and toss of emotions through which she had passed since her mother called her out of her room was almost too much for an overwired, sensitive girl.

Bertie Lou scarcely heard the minister's words. She responded automatically to the congratulations and good wishes of the relatives and friends who crowded in upon them at the end of the ceremony.

She hardly realized that she was Rod's wife.

Until Lila came up and kissed her, wishing her joy. Then Bertie Lou seemed to come to life again. The daze left her.

Lila was ravishing in a pink frock and lila picture hat. What if her hair was not naturally blond? It was beautiful. She looked like a golden girl out of a dream.

Bertie Lou was surprised that Rod did not seem to notice it. "Lila was saying to him: 'I'll help fix up your place while you're away. I know so well what you like, Rod.'"

George Cosbie, Honky-Tonk Pioneer, Tells His Story

San Francisco.—"Honest George" Cosbie is one of the few remaining pioneer owners of the honky-tonk cafes on the Barbary Coast. For almost 30 years he has managed and owned dance halls and saloons in the district.

Cosbie began cafe life as a boy singer in the Midway Cafe, when that dance hall, saloon and theater of varieties continued to exist through some mysterious civic influence on Market street, in the downtown section for years after other places of its kind were forced to the Barbary Coast.

Cosbie is a stocky-built man of affable speech and unassuming manner, but as he talks of men and life on the Coast his mild dark eyes flash warnings that he could take care of himself in a rough-and-tumble scrap or any other tense situation and that "Honest George" would be preferred as a friend rather than an enemy.

About the Girls. "A lot of girls who worked down here in the honky-tonks were not what people thought they were," says "Honest George." They were in business only for the percentage paid on drinks. One girl who worked in the Theatre was the widow of a mail carrier. He died leaving her with five kids and a home he had been buying in Berkeley. As straight a girl as you ever met.

"A dancing girl in my place forgot her slippers one night. I went to her house to get them. We didn't know much about her then, she wasn't much on the gab. I found her husband and three kids there. He was paralyzed on the left side and couldn't work. All the money she got went to support them."

"Hundreds of girls have gone through college and today are happily married and have families of their own and they don't know that their mothers worked on the Barbary Coast to get money to keep and educate them."

Cosbie was nicknamed "Honest George" by an old-time newspaper editor. He got his name in this wise: The Golden City was started just before the Spanish-American war by an Italian, who for some strange reason attracted the Swedish trade of the Coast. Cosbie bought the place after the war. Swedes used to drink too much and Cosbie, as he explains it in the vernacular, "cleaned them" before somebody could rob them. He would put their money and marine papers in their hats, for identification purposes, and keep it back of the bar until they sobered up and then when they described their hats they got their valuables.

Cosbie still keeps the Golden City open for business, and Swede sailors from foreign ports, who have been told of "Honest George" by their shipmates come in to see him. But best they can get to drink is soda water.

"They like to drop in and gab about the old days, or they are quitting the sea and want my advice about where to look for work," he said.

There are three huge cash registers back of Cosbie's bar and Cosbie rings up dimes alternately on them. Either as a reminder of olden and more prosperous days or to keep them from rusting. The dance hall is in the rear, seen through swinging cane doors. The piano, with well worn keys is there too and ready for action. There hasn't been a dancing foot on the floor for half a dozen years now, he said.

Writers have used "Honest George" as material, and he is said to be one of the principal characters in the recent novel, "The Day of Souls."

"This place ain't very much now," explained Cosbie as he looked about at the photographs of prize fighters, sailors and warships on the walls "but somewhere there comes to end something to do."

ON DISPLAY: Salesgirl: And what kind of slippers would you like to buy, sir? Customer: Like those the girl sitting there is wearing.—Life.

8th Grade Girl Writes Description Of Herald

Barnard Pupils Visit Local Plant and Describe It.

During the last term of the school year eighth grade girls at the Barnard school followed a special course in study in Human Progress. Their studies brought them into discussions of the printing industry and newspaper publication. In groups of students, numbering from 15 to 40, the Barnard school eighth grade girls visited The Herald office on various days during the latter part of the term.

See Press Running
At The Herald office the girls were shown all the steps in the making of a newspaper. The groups of students came to The Herald plant on Hilliard street just before "dead line" which is at three o'clock each afternoon. They saw the front page "put to bed" and saw it go onto the press. Then they watched the papers leave the press and each took one copy home to see the results of the various operations they had watched.

Miss Elizabeth Clark, teacher at the Barnard school, was in charge of the pupils, and upon the completion of the visits to The Herald plant each student wrote a description of the newspaper in process.

A VISIT TO THE HERALD OFFICE
"In our studies of Human Progress we learned how printing was invented and something of how it was done. Thinking that a visit to a place where printing was really done would give us a better idea of that process, we went to The Herald office. While at the printing office we followed the processes of printing from the time the news came over the electric typewriter until the newspapers were folded, ready for delivery.

"The first thing we saw was an electric typewriter, which was in a very small room. All out of town news comes over this wonderful machine. The news which is typewritten on paper is then brought to the linotype machines.

"These machines are very large and are operated by electricity. They are operated almost the same as a typewriter. In a certain part of this machine are little trays which hold letters printed on very thin strips of metal. When a key is touched on the keyboard, these little letters fall from the trays to the lower part of the machine where melted metal comes up against the row of letters and forms an imprint of the letters. When cooled we find a "line o'type." A long iron arm then reaches down and picks up the letters and drops them back into the trays in which they belong. This process continues until a whole column is made and then another is started and so on until there is enough to arrange in a page.

"These columns are inked and pressed against paper. This paper has printing on trays just like the proof reader. She finds all mistakes and marks them in the margin. Then the whole line must be recast by the linotype machine.

"After this the columns of metal are arranged on trays just the size of a sheet in the newspaper. Then the letters on the metal columns are transferred to a thick piece of cardboard. This sheet of cardboard is taken downstairs and the letters on it are transferred to a roll in the press.

"The next thing which we saw was the printing press, located in the basement of the building. It is a very huge machine and it is marvelous the way it works. A huge roll of paper at one end starts its journey over these many inked rolls and when the paper comes up against the letters on the roll the paper is what we call "printed." This machine brings all the papers together from the different rolls at a certain place where it is folded, cut and counted.

These press works very quickly and one can hardly hear himself talk. As we were leaving, each pupil was given a newspaper. The newspaper never seemed so interesting to me as it did that night and I think that a visit to The Herald Office will make anyone feel the same way."

EPISCOPALIANS WILL BUY SCHOOLHOUSE

Old Porter Street Structure to Become an Archdeaconry Mission.

Rev. J. Stuart Neill, rector of St. Mary's Episcopal church, announced today that the Diocesan authorities have given their approval to the establishing of a new Archdeaconry Mission, to function under the Missionary Society of the Diocese, at Highland Park.

The Porter street school has been used by the rector for the past nine years, with the aid and cooperation of the Brotherhood of Saint Andrew, as a mission for the people in that vicinity. The building of the new school however placed the old school building on the market.

Rev. Mr. Neill, feeling that the growing real estate development in that section and the success of the branch mission warranted continuance of work in that district, has obtained sanction and an appropriation of funds to purchase the old school building. At present the rector is looking for a site onto which to move the structure. As soon as it is found the deal will be closed. Rev. Mr. Neill stated that it was very likely the deal might be closed sometime today.

A cat may look at a king but usually trumps the partner's ace in a bridge game.

LAST PHILLIPS STORE IS BEING DISMANTLED

The A. H. Phillips chain grocery store, which has occupied the south store in the Sheridan building was being dismantled today and the store will be vacated by tomorrow. This is the last of three stores that the Phillips Company has had in Manchester. The store is one of a chain that has been operated in this state with headquarters at Springfield, Mass.

DRY-LAW ENFORCEMENT URGED BY DEMOCRATS

and to apologize to the country for its failure to enforce laws enacted by the Congress of the United States."

Both Wet and Dry leaders described the plank as satisfactory and friends of Gov. A. Smith, the party nominee said it would not embarrass the New York's views favoring liberalization of the Volstead Act. Senator Glas of Virginia wrote the plank after a more liberal pronouncement had been rejected by the drafting committee. Gov. Dan Moody, the Texas Dry leader, said he would support it, though he favored a stand against any efforts to repeal the prohibitory laws. In a similar plea for harmony, Gov. Ritchie of Maryland, champion of the Wets, approved the declaration of the party policy.

Bishop Approves
Bishop James Cannon of the Methodist Episcopal church, South, put his stamp of approval on it. So did Senator Wagner of New York, spokesman for Gov. Smith.

On farm relief the platform promised the farmers an earnest endeavor would be made to solve the problem of distribution of the cost of dealing with crop surpluses over the marketed units of the crop whose producers are benefitted by such assistance. Farm leaders said this language embraced the old equalization fee principle of the Mc-Nary-Haugen bill, without closing the doors on a new form of relief legislation.

"The solution of this problem would avoid government subsidy to which the Democratic Party has always been opposed," said the platform. "The solution of this problem will be a prime and immediate concern of a Democratic administration."

Federal Farm Board
A pledge was made to create a federal farm board to assist the farmer and stock raiser in the marketing of their products as the federal reserve board has done for the banker and business man.

President Coolidge was blamed for the Republicans "failure" to offer a constructive program to restore equality to agriculture.

"While he has had no constructive and adequate program to offer in its stead, he has twice vetoed farm relief legislation partly on ground wholly inconsistent with his acts making industrial monopolies the beneficiaries of government favor," it was declared.

"Deception upon the farmer and stock raiser has been practiced by the Republican Party through false and delusive promises for more than 50 years."

The tone of this language served notice the Democrats would make a strong bid for votes in the wheat and corn belts.

"There is no doubt that under the provisions of the platform the farmers will obtain the relief to which they are entitled," declared John Simpson of Oklahoma, who led the farm fight in the resolutions committee. "Millions of tillers of the soil will fervently thank God for this earnest effort to do justice to a great industry."

The Democratic attack on the administration was summed up in the plank entitled "Republican Corruption."

"Unblushing, the Republican party offers as its record agriculture, prestate, industry depressed, American shipping destroyed, workmen without employment; everywhere disgust and suspicion, and corruption unpunished and unafraid."

"Never in the entire history of the country has there occurred in any given period of time, or, indeed, in all time put together, such a spectacle of sordid corruption and unabashed rascality as that which has characterized the administration of federal affairs under eight blighting years of Republican rule."

Other Planks
The high lights of other planks follow:
Economy and Reorganization— "No economy resulted from the Republican party rule."
Finance and Taxation— "We favor a further reduction of the internal taxes of the people."

Tariff—"Duties that will permit effective competition, insure against monopoly and at the same time produce a fair revenue for the support of government."

Mining—"It is the duty of our government to foster this industry and to remove the restrictions that destroy its prosperity."

Foreign Policy—"The Republican administration has no foreign policy; it has drifted without plan. We declare for a constructive foreign policy based on these principles: outlawry of war, freedom from entangling political alliances with foreign nations."

"Interference in the purely internal affairs of Latin-American countries must cease."

Lack of Statesmanship
"We condemn the Republican administration for lack of statesmanship and efficiency in negotiating the 1921 treaty for the limitation of armaments. In consequence, the race between nations in the building of unlimited weapons of destruction still goes on and the peoples of the world are still threatened with war and burdened with taxation for additional armaments."

Water Power, Waterways and Flood Control—"We favor and will promote deep waterways from the Great Lakes to the Gulf and to the Atlantic ocean. We favor expeditious construction of flood relief works on the Mississippi and Colorado rivers and such reclamation and irrigation projects upon the Colorado river as may be found feasible."

Transportation—"Common carriers, whether by land, water or air, must be protected in an equal opportunity to compete so that governmental regulations against exorbitant rates and inefficiency will be aided by competition."

As to Labor
Labor—"Labor is not a commodity. Human rights must be safeguarded. Labor should be exempt from the operations of the anti-trust laws. We recognize the legislative and other investigations have shown the existence of grave abuse in the issuance of injunctions in labor disputes."

Veterans—"Generous appropriations, honest management, the removal of vexatious administration delays and sympathetic assistance for the veterans of all wars, is what the Democratic party demands."

Women and Children—"We declare for equality of women with men in all political and governmental matters."

Immigration—"Laws which limit immigration must be preserved in full force and effect, but the provisions contained in these laws that separate husbands from wives and parents from infant children are inhuman."

Campaign Expenditures—"We condemn the improper and excessive use of money in elections as a danger threatening the very existence of Democratic institutions."

Monopolies and Anti-Trust Laws
—"Honest business, no matter its size, need have no fears of a Democratic administration. The Democratic party will ever oppose illegitimate and dishonest business."

ALONG CAME RUTH
GEORGE: Oh, I say Ruth, I'd no idea when I introduced you to Perce that you'd become engaged to him.

RUTH: That's a queer coincidence, isn't it—neither had Perce. —Bulletin, Sydney.

MORE DISPLACEMENT
"Has your second wife a more even temper than your first?"
"More even? No; even more!" —Birmingham Gazette.

SENSE and NONSENSE

The story of one's life if truly represented would make interesting reading for some of one's friends.

An aspiring dramatist called upon the producer to whom he had sent his first work. Greeted with a curt nod and a few brief words, he addressed the theatrical "big noise."

Solomon was the first and best paragrapher.

Among the things that prepare youngsters for the responsibilities of parenthood are white shoes.

The sting of bees is said to be good for rheumatism but "as for me and my house" we'll take rheumatism.

Waiting for something to turn up is one of the greatest obstacles to success.

If a boy of 12 is too young to work isn't it cruel to let him spend his hours beneath a steering wheel?

She I—Why hasn't Ella been attending our Better Housekeeping League meetings recently?

She II—Oh, Ella got married.

Customer (to head waiter): "Just for a point of information, did the waiter who took your order leave any family?"

Surgeon (to attendant)—"Go and get the name of the accident victim so that we can inform his mother."
