

TALL CEDARS INSTITUTE TWO FORESTS HERE

Manchester and Moosup Get Charters Together—Rain Interferes But Affair Is Big Success.

A unique institution and ceremonial program, the first of its kind in history, was enacted in the Masonic Temple here last night when two new forests of the Tall Cedars of Lebanon were given authority to convene. Nutmeg Forest, No. 116 of Manchester, and Quincebaug Valley Forest, No. 117, of Moosup, Conn., were instituted and groups of candidates from each of the new forests and two men from Meriden, Conn., were initiated.

Rainy weather somewhat interfered with the program outlined for the institution and ceremonial. The exhibition drills and the band concert out of doors had to be eliminated. The parade was cut short because of the threatened rain.

Marshal John McLoughlin held the parade until it appeared certain that the matches could go to the South Methodist church and back without being drenched. Several of the organizations in line wore costly uniforms and they did not care to take a chance on getting wet.

Dinner was served to about 450 guests and local men in the Masonic temple between 5:30 and 7 o'clock. The menu consists of cold meats, baked beans, salads, Boston cream pie and coffee. Members of the Tall Cedars catered and enough food was provided to give the guests a luncheon before leaving town shortly after midnight.

At 6:30 the Western band proceeded to the Hotel Sheridan where it received the supreme officers and escorted them to the temple.

Between 250 and 300 were in the line of march when the parade started from the Temple shortly after 7 o'clock. Motorcycle police headed the procession followed by the bands, the color guard, carried by the drummers who were in the World War uniforms and the drum corps followed and then the Supreme officers.

In the line that followed were the local officers, the local general committee, the Providence, Westerly and Manchester bands and the Providence, East Providence and Westerly degree teams and patrols. At the end of the line were the Quincebaug Valley and Nutmeg capings, the candidates for initiation. The degree teams and bands and patrols were brilliantly outfitted. The Western men wore brand new uniforms consisting of red and blue military hats, red coats, blue trousers, black leather putts and white Sam Brown belts. The Providence men wore green coats and cream colored trousers. During the line of march the teams gave exhibition drills.

HOOVER BURIES THE HATCHET IN HIS HOME STATE

Invites Political Foes to Meet Him—Working Hard to Promote Harmony Among G. O. P. Leaders

Palo Alto, Calif., July 21.—Taking a lesson from a previous Republican nominee for president, as his first political move since being here, Herbert Hoover has issued invitations to Gov. C. C. Young, Senator Hiram W. Johnson and Senator Samuel M. Shortridge to visit him at his home. The trio of California Republican leaders all having separate following, have given their support to Hoover but the nominee apparently planned to win their personal good will as well.

This was in sharp contrast to the attitude of Charles Evans Hughes, the Republican nominee in 1916, who stopped at the Senate hotel with Johnson during that campaign without communicating with the then governor of California. This political oversight aroused Johnson's enmity and when California went Democratic that fall giving Woodrow Wilson his margin of victory, many political seers blame the Republican defeat on Hughes' "faux pas."

Hoover, noted for his ability as an organizer, made no such mistake.

First Day in California
Before a famous western sunset had faded into twilight on this first day on California soil as the Republican nominee, Hoover had arranged to invite Johnson, Shortridge and Young to his home for conferences on ways and means of keeping the state safely in the Republican column. All three, it was said, will take the stump for him as a result of the conference.

Gov. Young will be a guest in the Hoover home today, he will call to pay his respects and to express in person his condolences to the Republican nominee and Mrs. Hoover of the loss of her father, Charles C. Henry. There may be no discussion of politics but the invitation to Young and his acceptance will bring the nominee and governor into intimate and personal contact. It was said Young will go upon the stump to boom the Hoover cause here and in adjoining states.

Senator Johnson
Senator Johnson sometimes termed a Hoover foe in Washington last winter will be invited to call early next week. These arrangements were going forward today.

Shortridge will follow Johnson. The burying of the political "hatchet" between Hoover and Johnson will mark but another step in the nominee's national plan of conciliation and consolidation. Since his nomination, Hoover has chosen as his opponent, Senator Charles Curtis, as his running mate while winning from the deposed vice-president, Charles G. Dawes, a promise to take the stump for him.

Before leaving Washington, Hoover had advised of his political intentions to Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, another opponent, with the result that the Hoosier Czar will take the stump too. Then he declared Charles D. Hillegas, who held the Kansas City, the Republican boss of New York thus conciliating another foe. Now Johnson is within the fold.

RASKOB COMPLETES HIS ORGANIZATION

Selects Men to Manage Regional Headquarters and Advisory Committee.

New York, July 21.—With the selection of St. Louis and Salt Lake City as regional headquarters and the appointment of advisory and executive committees the Democratic organization which will have charge of Gov. Alfred E. Smith's campaign for the presidency was complete today.

Chairman John J. Raskob of the national committee announced the committee appointments, which made it clear that most of the administrative work of the campaign will be handled by men and women who have long been associated with Gov. Smith.

In addition to Chairman Raskob the executive committee includes Senator Peter Golet Gerry, of Rhode Island, Franklin D. Roosevelt, George A. Van Namee, Gov. Smith's pre-convention manager, Col. Herbert H. Lehman, chairman of the finance committee, James J. Hoesy of New York and Mrs. Henry Moscowitz, director of publicity.

Advisory Committee
The advisory committee consists of Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, former representative Jovett

AL TO ANNOUNCE ACCEPTANCE DATE

Favors Either Aug. 16 or 23; To Broadcast Speech All Over Nation.

Albany, N. Y., July 21.—Governor Al Smith today was expected to announce the date for the ceremony at which he will be formally notified that he has been nominated for the presidency by the Democratic Party.

The notification will be held at night on the steps of the state capitol and the governor is reported to favor either August 16 or August 23. Much will depend, however, on when a nationwide radio hookup can be secured to broadcast the governor's address.

Some of the governor's advisers tried to persuade him to have the notification precede that of his Republican opponent, Herbert Hoover, which is scheduled for August 23. He is said to have pointed out that it would be good politics for him to fire the first gun in the campaign.

His Telegrams
After listening to their advice the governor is said to have pointed to the telegram which he sent the Democratic convention at Houston in which he declared he had not changed his views that the Volstead law should be modified. He also is said to have called their attention to the telegram he sent to William H. Settle, president of the Indiana Farm Federation, in which he promised speedy relief for the farmers in the event of his election.

"How about those two telegrams for the opening gun in the campaign?" the governor is reported to have said to one of his friends who urged him to have his notification before that of the Republicans.

Draft Ready
The governor is understood to have already completed a rough draft of his notification speech. He has made it plain he intends to deal extensively with every issue of major importance in his speech, particularly prohibition and farm relief.

Before he puts the final touches on his speech he is expected to confer with a number of prominent Democratic leaders from all parts of the country. One of these will be Gov. Alfred C. Ritchie, of Maryland.

After the notification the governor is expected to go to Sen. C. J. W. for a rest of a week or ten days before plunging actively into the campaign. At that time the governor is expected to definitely decide where he will formally open his campaign. It is understood that George E. Brennan, Democratic leader of Illinois, has been trying to induce the governor to come to Chicago for his opening speech.

PAULINO COMING
Valladolid, Spain, July 21.—Paulino Ucedun, Spanish heavyweight, said today he would sail for New York early in August. He hopes to fight either Sharkey or Risko and later get a match with the winner of the Tunney-Heenev championship bout.

Manchester Three-Year-Old Prefers A Cigar To Candy

Little Carl H. Reimer Puffs A Perfecto Like Veteran

Carl Herbert Reimer, three-year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reimer of 192 School street, is a puzzle for Manchester physicians, being a confirmed baby addict to tobacco and apparently unharmed by a persistent and steady devotion to the Lady Nicotine in any of her vaporous forms. To him they are all alike, pipe, cigarettes, cigars—except that he has the discriminating taste to prefer a high grade perfecto to anything less ambitious in the way of a smoke.

Many medical authorities for years have held to the theory that the assimilation of nicotine through the smoking of tobacco at an early age weakened the heart, stunted growth, dulled the mind, weakened the child physically and created a terrific strain on the nervous system.

A short time ago a four year old child was discovered in New York who smoked cigars without any of these ill effects. This case was considered so unusual that the news syndicates broadcast items on it and the news reel exchanges took pictures of the boy.

Younger by a Year
Now it comes to light that in Manchester we have a boy a year younger than the New York prodigy who smokes as a regular habit, despite all efforts on the part of his parents to stop it, and he is a very bright, little fellow. He has bright, blue eyes and blond hair, is of a slender but wiry build and as healthy as they make them, with a mind developed well in advance of his years. Unafraid of meeting strangers and inclined to talk rather sedately on any subject within the range of a seven-year-old, he gives one an impression of a development in advance of his years.

How the taste for tobacco developed in a child of his age no one seems to be able to explain. When he was only ten months old Carl used to get hold of his grandfather's pipe and suck on it. His parents say they believe the craving for tobacco in his young system might have been first developed from this. He was first found smoking when scarcely a year old. Since then no forms of reasonable punishment by his parents could break him of the habit.

A nickel in the hand of the majority of youngsters that age would mean only one of two things, ice cream or candy. But with Carl it is different. A nickel means out of two different things, smoking tobacco or a cigar. As other kiddies sometimes visit neighbors' homes and ask for cake or cookies, Carl petitions the neighbors for tobacco. If all other sources of supply fail Carl when he craves a "smoke" will hike the street near his home until he finds a cigar or cigarette butt. When his folks see him coming with his hands behind him that is a sure indication that Carl has gotten tobacco somewhere and is smoking again.

Leads Elder Astray
Easter Sunday r. and Mrs. Reimer went to church and left Carl and his eleven year old brother at home. Returning they found the older boy very, very sick. Carl was sitting sedately in the middle of the kitchen floor with a peculiar sophisticated smile on his face puffing away with all the satisfaction in the world on his big stogie. How or where the youngster got the cigar is unknown but it is known that Carl was the leader in the affair and it was he who induced his older brother to try the game.

Carl's dearest possession is a pipe which, strictly against parental commands, he is sometimes able to get filled with tobacco.

Three years old on January 19 he handles a cigar, pipe or cigarette like a veteran, blowing the smoke through nostrils or mouth like any tried and true veteran addict.

How to combat this abnormal appetite in the child is a problem that to date has been unable to cope with. They fear that it will injure his health, yet thus far he has escaped all harm. Despite all efforts to switch his desire for tobacco to something else, he still prefers a pipe full of tobacco, a cigar or a cigarette to ice cream, candy, soda, or toys.

HOME RUN KING TO QUIT GAME

Babe Ruth to Retire At End of Next Year, He Announces Today.

New York, July 21.—Babe Ruth, home run king of the major leagues, declares he will retire from baseball at the end of the 1929 season—no fooling!

While most of the Babe's teammates on the New York Yankees received his announcement skeptically, the big gun of the world's champions insisted today that the sure of spanking a new white baseball into distant bleachers would hold no charms for him after next season.

"Next year will be my last year," the Bambino declared, apparently in all seriousness. "I've had a great time in baseball and the game has been good to me. I'm well fixed and independent, and I'm going to quit before I get kicked out."

Ruth's contract expires at the end of the 1929 season. He pointed out that by that time, he probably will have realized his ambition to hit 500 home runs during his big league career.

"For 15 years I've wanted to take a summer vacation," Ruth continued. "By the end of next year I will have saved enough money to be independent."

169TH BREAKS CAMP AT NIANTIC SUNDAY

Local Companies Hope to Reach Manchester About Noon Tomorrow.

(By Staff Correspondent)
Camp Trumbull, Niantic, July 21.—The 1928 encampment of the 169th Infantry, C. N. G., came to a close with formal inspection and muster for pay this morning. Tomorrow morning, the soldiers will entrain for their homes. Manchester's contingent, Company G and the Howitzer Company, will probably reach home sometime about noon, although it may be an hour or so later.

The Howitzer Company will go on guard duty at 4 o'clock this afternoon and will guard Camp Trumbull until the 169th moves out from the Niantic railroad station at about 8 o'clock tomorrow morning. Due to the fact that there usually is much more rowdiness the final night of an encampment, a detail of soldiers from another company, was assigned to work with the Manchester soldiers. Lieutenant John De Lorenzo of Company H of New Britain was commander of the guard.

Noted Local Prohibitionist to Give Personal Support to G. O. P. Presidential Candidate.

Emil L. G. Hohenthal, Manchester's leading prohibitionist and for a long period of years a worker for national and world-wide prohibition, returned today from the national convention of the Sons of Temperance in Boston, Mass., and declared himself to be personally in favor of the candidacy of Herbert Hoover and Charles Curtis for the presidency. The Sons of Temperance is not a political body and therefore did not endorse a candidate for the presidency. Resolutions were passed by the convention, however, condemning the stand of Alfred E. Smith on the liquor question.

Mr. Hohenthal was re-elected to the office of Most Worthy Scribe by the convention. He has held this position for a great many years. One Connecticut woman, Mrs. Anna R. Bador of Hartford, was elected to an office in the National division. Mrs. Bador becomes Past Most Worthy Patriarch.

Celebrities Present
The next convention of the order will be held in Charlottesville, Prince Edward Island. Mr. Hohenthal attended the banquet of the convention at which Captain Edward H. Gaston of London, England, honorary secretary and founder of the World Prohibition Federation, was present. Past Grand Worthy Patriarch and Grand Trustee Thomas Worthington of Eccles, England, was also present and installed the newly elected officers.

A feature of the convention was the presentation to Col. Fred M. Dow of Portland, son of Neal Dow, who offered the motion tabled by Nicholas Murray Butler's wet

FAMOUS ACTRESS DIES IN LONDON

Ellen Terry, Greatest of All Shakespearean Players, Dies at Age of 80.

London, July 21.—Dame Ellen Terry, famous English actress, died today at her home at Small Hythe, near Tenterden in Kent, after an illness of several days.

Dame Terry was taken seriously ill Tuesday. Later she became semi-conscious and last night her breathing became difficult. Her daughter and son were at her bedside when she died.

The celebration of her 80th birthday on February 27 was the occasion for an outpouring of tributes from all over the world. The long list of congratulatory messages was headed by felicitations from the King and Queen of England, who formed of the actress's condition since her illness began.

Greatest Actress
Famed as the greatest of all Shakespearean actresses, Ellen Terry, first won recognition in her early twenties when she appeared in "The Taming of the Shrew" at the Queen's theatre, London.

Winning a quick success in London, she later appeared in America and was renowned all over the world.

Suffering from a cold on her 80th birthday, she was forced to set aside a special room for the overwhelming tribute of flowers, most of them her favorite daffodils, which came from the leaders of all nations.

MEXICAN SLAYER TO BE ACCORDED A PUBLIC TRIAL

STATE POLITICAL POT IS BUBBLING

All Sorts of Booms Launch- ed During Past Few Days; The Candidates.

Hartford, Conn., July 21.—A political perigee tide developed in Connecticut during the midst of the summer's middle week and launched the candidacies of Governor John H. Trumbull for the Republican nomination for governor; of William E. Thoms, of Waterbury, and Charles G. Morris, of New Haven, for the Democratic nomination for governor; of Augustine Lonergan, of Hartford, for the Democratic nomination for United States senator; and of William M. Clinton, of Middletown, for the Democratic nomination for congressman from the Second District.

Statements emanating from each of the five men have been issued in the past few days, with the latest of them all being that of Mr. Lonergan who today said:

"Representative Democrats from the eight counties of Connecticut have asked me to become a candidate for the United States Senate in the next Democratic state convention, offering among their reasons my six years of experience in Congress; my official record as a member of that body; the votes I received during the years I was a nominee, and when I was nominee for the Senate in 1920; and my state wide acquaintance."

Would Accept
"I would regard it as an honor to be nominated by my party for this high office of my native state to represent them in the United States Senate. If it is the desire of the majority of the Democrats of Connecticut that I be the party nominee for the United States Senate in the next Democratic state convention, I would accept the high honor if nominated by the convention."

Between Messrs Thoms and Morris, the race for the Democratic nomination for governor promises to be keen, with both men expected to go in to the convention in September with many adherents and both expected to poll large numbers on early ballots.

"An autocratic Republican machine which for many years has been in power in the state of Connecticut" seems to have been adopted as the keynote of the Democratic campaign this year.

Smith Supporters
All candidates of the Democratic party have made support of Gov. Al Smith, of New York, for the presidency the high point in their personal platforms, and all look to the New York governor as the leader who will carry the party to victory.

On the Republican side, Governor Trumbull has expressed the opinion that while he is not particularly anxious to be a candidate for election for a third time, he is anxious that the fiscal policies which he has advanced for the benefit of the state be carried over. To continue to guide these policies the governor is willing to campaign once more.

The Republican nomination for the office of United States Senator may form the high point of that

OBREGON'S FUNERAL

General Obregon's body was expected to reach Huatabampo, Sonora, the town of his birth, today. The funeral train was delayed because a tunnel through which it had to pass had been destroyed several months ago. The body was carried over the mountain to the other end of the tunnel where another special train was waiting.

The late leader probably will be buried tomorrow at Huatabampo, Mexico's traditional tribute to her honored dead, a crown of porcelain, will mark his grave.

Bowed down by grief, Senora Obregon, the late president elect's widow and their seven young children, are awaiting the arrival of the funeral train.

OBREGON'S FUNERAL
Nogales, Sonora, Mexico, July 21.—Silent and grief stricken, Mexican political leaders and officials, peons and members of the Yaqui and Mayo Indian tribes were gathered here today for the funeral services of Gen. Alvaro Obregon, killed by an assassin's bullet.

In accordance with Obregon's will, his body will be buried beside his mother's grave at Huatabampo, 22 miles southwest of here.

The will, which was brief, said in part:

"I wish my funeral to be held without ostentation and that my debts be paid first of all, with all I possess, using it necessary the small patrimony left to my children."

General Obregon's estate is generally believed to be small, although definite figures regarding its size were not available.

Senora Maria Tapia Obregon, widow of the dead Mexican leader, arrived here yesterday from Cajeme with her family. She is still under a physician's care.

MANCHESTER MILK SAFE, SAYS MOORE

Head of Health Board As- serts Raw Milk Here Is Not Dangerous.

There having arisen an unwarranted fear of the use of milk, as a result of discovery that the germs of the septic sore throat epidemic at Lee, Mass., were carried by milk that had not been pasteurized, Dr. D. C. Y. Moore, chairman of the Manchester Board of Health, today issued the following statement re-assuring the public against any such apprehension.

The statement follows:

"Apparently a misunderstanding has been created by the letter from the Board of Health dated July 17 in which it was stated that the epidemic at Lee, Mass., was caused from milk not having been pasteurized."

It seems to have been inferred from that by some that raw milk is unsafe.

"The Board of Health wish to make clear that all milk coming into Manchester is safe as far as it is humanly possible to make it. In the opinion of the Board of Health all milk, raw or pasteurized, produced and handled under sanitary conditions, is safe milk."

PUGILISTS' BROTHERS IN A FATAL BRAWL

Dundee's Brother Killed—De- laney's Brother and Five Others Under Arrest.

Bridgeport, Conn., July 21.—Abraham Babcock, of 23 Ann Street, was today held criminally responsible for the death of Antonio V. Corrio, 26, of 9 Edwards street, Providence, in a finding issued by Coroner Joseph J. Phelan. Corrio died at St. Vincent's hospital on Monday from peritonitis from a ruptured intestine caused by a kick in the stomach during a brawl that occurred last Sunday morning.

Police already had arrested Babcock and five other local men for the affair. The other prisoners are William Chappelaine, Walter Runkel, John Nicosa, Aleck J. Bakus and Ernest T. Bayer.

The coroner finds that the trouble started because Corrio boasted of being the brother of "Johnnie Dundee," prize fighter. The men battled in a vacant lot on East Main street, and Corrio was put out. "All were under influence of liquor to a greater or less degree," says the coroner.

Cases of the six men involved are expected to come up in police court next Monday.

More Arrests Made But Of- ficials Refuse to Divulge Names—President-Elect's Body Nears Town of His Birth; Funeral to Be Held Tomorrow.

Mexico City, July 21.—With all Mexico still speculating today as to who would be the country's next president, Jose De Leon Toral, the youth who slew President-Elect Alvaro Obregon, enjoyed a 72-hour respite. The respite was granted him in a court order known as the Amparo, which restrains both police and military officials from summarily executing him.

The youth will be given a regular civil trial which will be public, an official announcement stated. Several arrests will have been made during the last 24 hours, but the police refused to reveal the names of those arrested. However, it is believed none of them were politically important.

MOVE TO STOP THROWING OF GLASS ON HIGHWAY

State Motor Vehicle Department to Arrest All Violators of Road Law.

The state motor vehicle department and the state police are investigating numerous complaints against persons accused of throwing and breaking glass bottles on the highway. In several recent cases the offenders have been traced through car registration numbers and prosecution has resulted.

A fine of $50 may be imposed, under the state law, for this violation, and subsequent offenses makes the violator liable to imprisonment. The state statute dealing with this offense says that it is illegal to "throw any object in or on a motor vehicle, or on any highway, which may cause injury to such vehicle or the driver thereon to any person therein."

One of the most flagrant cases of this type yet reported was that of a Wethersfield man driving through New Haven, who, according to a witness, deliberately threw and broke two milk bottles in the road. Much trouble, it is reported, has also been caused by discarded soda water bottles and glassware lost or thrown away by picnickers.

Another recent cause for complaint to the motor vehicle department comes from gasoline filling station operators. They say that many motorists, particularly those from other states, refuse to turn off motors while the tanks are being filled with fuel. Under a state law "no gasoline or other fuel shall be placed in the tank of any motor vehicle when the engine of such vehicle is running."

What the Kiddie Stars Say

Yesterday's rehearsal of the Kiddie Revue was constantly interrupted by one youngster who would not keep still. Manager Sanson rebuked him. He was "sassy" and Jack put him out of the revue and the theater. This morning he was back. "Mr. Sanson, I didn't feel good yesterday," he mourned. "I don't just mean 'feel good.' I mean—aw, what is it all good actors catch?" "Yeah, that's it. But I'm alright today. Can I go back?"

So one temperamental star has been restored to good standing. These kiddie actors and actresses that have temperamental spells and everything will appear in the annual Kiddie Revue at the State Theater, July 26, 27 and 28.

ABOUT TOWN

The annual Sunday school picnic of Concordia Lutheran church was held at Elizabeth Park, Hartford, today. Those who attended were conveyed to the park in private automobiles.

A group of friends of Miss Norma Peterson who is to be married this afternoon to James Dickson gave her a surprise miscellaneous shower at the home of Miss Evelyn Friche of Middle Turnpike East, Thursday night. Many of the guests were fellow employees of Miss Peterson at the Aetna Insurance offices in Hartford. Gifts of silver, glassware and linen were tendered the bride-elect.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Jordan and family of 447 Main street left today on a two week vacation trip through Canada. While enroute they will visit relatives in Montreal and Quebec.

Three hundred children and young people, members of St. Mary's Episcopal church Sunday school, left at 9 o'clock this morning in special trolleys chartered for their annual picnic, which was held this year at Lake Compounce, Bristol. Contrary to the usual plans for picnic entertainment the committee in charge has not scheduled any athletic events, believing that the bathing and numerous "rides" at Lake Compounce would be preferred by the children. John Hyde, Albert Dewey and Howard Briggs are in charge of the picnic.

Mrs. John A. Sandholm and children of 55 Elm street, accompanied by Miss Jennie Johnson of South Coventry have left for Saybrook, where they will spend a week.

Paul Johnson and Francis Volker left this afternoon for a week's vacation. The first few days will be spent at Walnut Beach. Then they will go to New Jersey to visit a friend, Eric Sperber.

POLICE COURT

Frank Civitello of East Hartford paid a fine of $10 and costs in the Manchester police court for driving an automobile without a license. The young man is 21 years old and on May 31 he had an accident in Manchester when his car struck one driven by Michael J. O'Connor of Jefferson street, Hartford. When the report was made to the state motor vehicle department it was learned that young Civitello did not have a license. As a result he was placed under arrest by a state policeman and brought to Manchester for a hearing.

CHAMBER WARNS OF ANOTHER SOLICITATION

State Firemen's Letterhead Used for New Haven Affair by Advertising Concern.

Word has been received by the Manchester Chamber of Commerce that an appeal has been sent out to businessmen throughout the state on the letterhead of the Connecticut Firemen's Association, signed by Elmer H. Proctor, asking for funds in connection with an annual state field day of the New Haven Fire Department.

Like the recent appeal made in the name of the Connecticut State Police Association, this is an enterprise promoted by an advertising agency and has not the merit of sanction by the State Firemen's Association. It is to be regretted, said Secretary Rix of the Chamber of Commerce, that so many Manchester business concerns forgot their advertising agreement and signed contracts for advertising in the State Police Souvenir Program. None of the merchants in the agreement consulted the Chamber of Commerce before signing the agreement. It is said, cost Manchester merchants close to a thousand dollars.

WAPPING

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nevers and three daughters, the Misses Ruth, Dorothy and Elsie, Mrs. Charlie J. Dewey and Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Dewey and two sons, Junior and John, of Springfield, Mass., all left today by automobile for Camp Bethel, Tylerville, where they will spend a few days.

Mrs. Mary Nichols received word last Wednesday of the sudden death of her brother-in-law, Friend Nichols of Waterbury. The funeral will be held from his late home on next Sunday.

Miss Anna Colbert of South Windsor is spending a few days with her friend, Miss Harriett Sharp. The Misses Dorothy and Helen Frink have as their guest for a week or ten days their cousin Miss Mildred Slater, of Preston City, Norwich.

Miss Marlon Hills is spending this week with her friend Miss Esther Holmes, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Holmes of Manchester at Twin Lakes.

Rev. Truman H. Woodward will return from Camp Woodstock on Saturday and occupy his pulpit on Sunday as usual. He will give an illustrated lecture in the evening, "Winning of the West" with about sixty slides.

The following committee for the dinner of the Sunday school picnic which is to be held at Forest Park, on Thursday, July 26, held a meeting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edward P. Collins last Tuesday evening. Mrs. E. P. Collins, Albert E. Stiles, Mrs. Paul Sheidick, Mrs. Truman H. Woodward, Mrs. Marion F. Pierce and Wesley Smith.

PLAN BIG CHANGE IN BOLTON ROAD

State Considering Sweeping Alterations in Layout of Highway.

If a survey that is now being made by the state highway department is carried through and the new road between Manchester and Bolton is built along the route now being planned, it will make many changes not to the liking of those who live along the present road, for houses now abutting the present highway would be left on side roads.

The proposed survey starts at a point just about at the present intersection of Horan street and Middle turnpike and would take a straight line cutting behind the house now occupied by Michael Bolan at the junction of Middle turnpike and Lake street, follow straight through to the north of the Lafayette Robinson property and, still traveling in a straight line, cross the foot of the present road at so called Nigger Hill.

Toward Bolton. From Bolton down there is contemplated another big change as a straight line cutting behind the north of the home of Samuel Woodward and would then come out about at the point of the icehouse on the west bank of the small pond at Bolton notch, crossing the present pond north of the bridge over the Notch.

This would also necessitate the cutting away of part of the ledge at Bolton Notch and the road would become straightened out near the former home of Dr. M. M. Maine. Such a change would leave about all the houses on the Manchester-Bolton road off the proposed highway and such as face the road from the north side would find the road running through their back yards.

All this would entail the necessity of purchasing considerable land and in addition to new roadways would involve heavy expenses for bridges and making fills. When the state surveyors were in Bolton.

1928 KIDDIES REVUE

A "TALKING" SHOW

Manager Jack Sanson's annual Kiddie Revue at the State Theater is a much more ambitious affair than in previous years. The revue, which has been in rehearsal for a month and is to be presented next Thursday, Friday and Saturday, is based on a definite plot—the story of an East Side New York little girl who became an actress and was accepted by society (in her original incarnation) as a girl who has many speaking lines this year, besides their songs and dances, the dialogue carrying the story.

A hundred and twenty children are rehearsing and will constitute the Revue personnel. Many of the numbers are especially clever and the whole performance is being staged and directed by Manager Sanson who in the past has displayed a remarkable aptitude for making finished stage performers out of children.

BODENHEIM TELLS HIS SIDE OF CASE (Continued from Page 1.) my apartment is. The next day the clerk told me a man had called, flashed a card and said he was a brother of Miss Drew and hinted at suicide. "I packed up and got out of town to avoid publicity. I had nothing to do with her death. Unfortunately she took my criticism to heart. She's the last I'll ever befriend." According to word from New York, Carolyn Novotny, close friend of the dead girl, Miss Drew had completed two manuscripts on rheology and reincarnation. These had been sent to a publisher and returned, unaccepted, but in telling of these failures the girl told her friends: "I've met a literary light and he has promised to help me. I am so happy because I'm having some good luck at last." Then several days later, Virginia is said to have telephoned Carolyn again to say, "We've entered into a suicide pact." Virginia had told her parents of her "literary light" and had given her mother his name only last Sunday. That was the day she was last at home. Her father searched hospitals for three days before her body was found in the Hudson river and identified by him.

UNION SERVICES.
 South Methodist and Center Congregational Churches.

The third in the series of Union Services of the South Methodist and the Center Congregational churches will be held at the Center church Sunday morning at 10:45. Rev. R. A. Colpitts of the South church will be the preacher, and will have for his subject "Crown or Cup." The quartet will render the two following anthems:
 "The Lost Sheep," Jordan.
 "Then Shall the King Say," Allen.

These services last but one hour and are being very largely attended.

The Sunday school of the South church will meet as usual at 9:30. Evening Service.

At the 7:30 twilight service on the lawn of the South Methodist church, a very unique program will be given. A sextette of instrumentalists with Thomas Maxwell as leader, will render several numbers, and the Rev. L. T. French, the minister of music in the First Methodist church of Topeka, Kansas, will bring a sermon in hymn and hymn stories. These simple services coming just at sunset in the natural amphitheater on the south side of the church, are creating no little interest as the large attendance indicates.

GET LITTLE BUILDING OUT OF WRECKERS' WAY

The old freight station of the Connecticut Company is now being torn down by the crew of the New York and Hartford House Wrecking Company, which has the contract to raze the car barns.

The smallest building is now being given attention in order to allow the pulling over of the west half of the front of the car barn. The freight station stood close to the larger barn and to pull over the latter would mean that it would fall in part upon the freight station, probably damaging the salvagable timbers.

The work of removing the roof covering was started yesterday afternoon and this morning the roofing boards were being taken off. When this small building is out of the way the work of pulling over the main barn will again get underway.

As fast as timbers, and planks are sorted out from the wrecked debris they are being loaded onto trucks and taken away. Often the loads do not go to the yards of the wrecking company, but are taken direct to some building job, having been sold.

INTO THE DESERT SOLITUDES WENT LEADER TO MAKE READY

The International Sunday School Lesson for July 22 is, "Paul's Early Ministry"—Acts 9:19-30; 11:19-30; 12:25; Galatians 1:15-18.

Everybody who has ever been to Petra, the mysterious and marvelous cliff-carved city in the mountains of Arabia, between the Sinai Peninsula and the great desert, the "rose-red city, half as old as time", which was lost for a thousand years, delights to dwell upon the many theories concerning its past. Dean Stanley erroneously located Kadesh-Barnea there. Another conjecture is that Paul spent his Arabian sojourn there; for Aretas, King of Nabatea, of which country Petra seems to have been the capital, was in Paul's day the ruler of Damascus. Nobody knows. I hardly think the idea is tenable, for it was to the desert, and not to such a busy metropolis as Petra then was that the great apostle fled in order to find himself, after his sensational conversion by a vision on the Damascus Road. Himself simply says that he went to Arabia; and the period of seclusion and meditation and study may have been anywhere from one to three years.

Since the great scholar, Paul, with his marvelous personality and gifts of Jesus, needed this protracted quiet time apart from men in order to prepare for his mission; and since the Saviour Himself retired again and again to the desert for the renewal of His spiritual power, we certainly have a mighty message for our own day and its leadership.

After a short ministry at Damascus and a visit to Jerusalem, Paul had a further period of quiet preparation, which lasted from five to ten years, in his old home at Tarsus. As we enter upon six months of study of his matchless mission and achievements, let us keep in the background of our thought this prolonged training in the desert and its obscurity.

Our Jazzed Generation

This turbulent era in which we live needs something else besides what it has. Our world is overstocked with radios and autos and motion pictures and amusements and newspapers and books and adventures and conventions. There are too many things doing for human spirits to have a chance at real life. All of us are too busy to think. The day's favorite diversion is to try to get away from ourselves. Man's spirit is breaking beneath the load of machinery which he has taken upon his back. Our new phrase, "jazzed up," expresses modern existence.

Whereas, real happiness, and real power, may be found only in the serene processes of thought and of normal human relationship. "Conversation is a lost art," is the common complaint. Sturdy independent thinking has quite gone out of the fashion; "mass psychology" has taken its place.

Along mechanical lines, and in the direction of organization and "efficiency," remarkable skill is being shown in our time. But of profound thought concerning life and duty and God there really is little. We nowadays have droves of officials, who are continually herding in conventions and conferences; but of real leaders almost none, and still fewer prophets. The absence of great voices from pulpits and classrooms and editorial columns and books and public offices is a tragedy of our times that is graver than the extravagances of the younger generation. If only we could send our potential personal-greatest member was Paul, the prepared pioneer.

THE SON OF GOD
 By GEORGE HENRY DOE.

International Sunday School Lesson Text, July 22.

Straightway he preached Christ in the synagogue, that He is the Son of God.—Acts 9:20.

Why did the disciples so fervently preach that Christ is the Son of God? Why does every book in the New Testament, excepting James, call Jesus the Son of God? Why does the Old Testament claim the same?

Why is there such heated discussion as to whether Jesus was the Son of God, or the son of Joseph? Is not such a belief a non-essential, a mere legend? It is acknowledged that Jesus is the most perfect man that ever lived, and that if all lived a life like His, the world would be saved from its hateful afflictions. Is not this sufficient? Good as it may be, there is something further, deeper, holier, and viter, that we need.

There is a sufficient reason for Jesus declaring that He would build His church upon the confession that He was the Son of God.

With infinite ardor God yearned to reveal Himself, as the loving heavenly Father. If Jesus were the son of Joseph, he would have had a personality distinct from God. His soul would not have been "God with us," the "Word made flesh," the "Imcarnate Father," but a separate being. If He were the Son of God, His soul was God, speaking through the body the words that Jesus uttered, and doing the works, as Jesus declared.

One says, God is like Jesus. True; but who and where is God? Is He off somewhere? Is the idea of Him still indefinite, beclouded? It was the Father's purpose to bring man into direct contact with Himself. That He might do this, that the indefinite Father might come to His own, He came to us as the very soul of Jesus, the Son of God.

This is the fundamental and greatest truth of the Christian faith. As Paul declared to the gentiles worshipping the unknown God, "Him whom ye ignorantly worship, declare I unto you." "In Jesus Christ dwelleth the fullness of the Godhead bodily." The perception of the heavenly Father in Christ brings the mind in contact with God Himself. That perception is the point into which light from God flows and endlessly intensifies, even until the clouds of obscurity are dispersed. God Himself thus comes most closely present and conjoins the soul more fully to Him. Love for Him becomes more personal and most real, and He Himself comes the satisfaction of the soul's quest. "Look unto me and be ye saved, for I am God, and there is none else."

TAMMANY

Understandable and consistent to the Southern Democracy to oppose Governor Smith as a wet; it is understandable and consistent for a considerable part of the Southern Democracy to oppose him as a Catholic. It is understandable for the Southern Democracy to oppose him as a Tammany man—but it isn't consistent.

To be sure, Tammany has slaughtered the national Democratic ticket on so many occasions that they have been lost track of, trading Presidential votes for votes for city officials openly and by wholesale; and in this the Southern Democrats have a sound grievance.

But Tammany at a crucial point in the history of this nation contributed liberally to the efforts of the Southern Democracy to disrupt the Union. It permitted and fostered the notorious draft riots which cost hundreds of lives, turned the metropolises of the country into a bloody bedlam and were only suppressed when the federal authorities marched an army into the city.

While its effect of aiding the Southern Confederacy to successful secession failed, it was a gesture of no trifling intent, the memory of which the South should cherish. So the Southern antagonism to Governor Smith on the ground of his Tammanyism savors just a little of ingratitude. If Tammany's performance had equaled its will the Lost Cause would have been a Triumphant Cause and the Union split in twain.

That, of course, is a long time ago. But Tammany is an institution of such ancient establishment that a few decades are but as a yesterday; through many more decades than those since the Civil War it has been the same old Tammany, unchanging, immutable.

Founded in 1789 by one William Mooney, the Society of St. Tammany or Columbian Order was organized as a non-political benevolent association, adopting American Indian nomenclature and a ritual supposedly following Indian customs. Its name, incidentally, was that of a Delaware sachem and translates as "the affable," which is just now relevant. Despite the early intent it very soon did get into politics, and under the leadership of no less subtle and unscrupulous a politician than Aaron Burr.

And from that day to this it has been a dominating force in the politics of New York city and, latterly of the state. It has taken more than a century and a quarter, however, for Burr's old machine to grow evilly to the point where it aspires to control the country.

Doing things than in the days of Tweed. It was Tammany's way for Mayor Walker to have four or five expensive cars bought for him with city money within a few months, and two or three city-paid chauffeurs. It is Tammany's way that thousands upon thousands should be stolen in padded payrolls in the street cleaning department. It is Tammany's way that millions should be stolen in sewer graft. It is Tammany's way to know nothing or care nothing about the nation's politics or the nation's business or the nation's need—but to play the game of politics for gain and graft and loot, morning, noon and night, three hundred and sixty-five days in every year—and an extra day every Presidential year.

It is a positively sad thing that a man, so personally admirable and capable as Governor Smith, should be, by inheritance, life training and every association, bound hard and fast to an organization like Tammany Hall, a machine designed for pillage and dripping with the slime of more than a hundred and twenty-five years of the habit of graft and unprincipledness.

It makes him, in the view of any voter who puts citizenship ahead of partisanship, ineligible for the office of President of the United States.

HOOVER AND FARMS

Aside from the paid claque that cackled around the Kansas City convention, pretending to represent the farmers of the West and making inordinate demands on the platform makers so that they might peddle the refusal back to the Democrat, the most ostentatious farm relief advocate in the corn belt has been Governor McMullen of Nebraska. McMullen has been ready to go to any lengths for a McNary-Haugen solution of the farmers' difficulties. He has been entirely ready to bolt. He has been one of those who saw in the nomination of Hoover not only neglect of the agricultural interests but a positive affront and danger to them.

Well, Governor McMullen has had a talk with Candidate Hoover. And all the excitement and mad has gone out of him. "If you mean by keen understanding and knowledge of the farm situation that Mr. Hoover is sympathetic with the farmers," now says the governor, "I should say he is. You may add to that my belief that he has a thorough knowledge of the surplus problem which is the basis of farm troubles."

There you are! Somebody told the farmers that Hoover kept them from all getting rich in the war. Wherefore they were ready to rend him. Somebody told them that Hoover was no friend of theirs now. So they were ready to bolt him. Now they are just beginning to find out something of the truth about Hoover. There is a lot more for them to find out. Somebody will explain, one of these days, to the Western farmers, that it was Herbert Hoover and nobody else that kept them all from going to eternal smash immediately after the armistice, when he fought all Europe, single-handed, to keep the allies from breaking their contracts with the American food raisers and so prevented an utter collapse of the food market on this continent.

Oh, there's no fear but that the farmers will, long before election, know the truth about Hoover—and support him with cheers and balloons.

STRANGE SCHOOL

Under official supervision of the Soviet Department of Education an anti-theological seminary is to be started in Moscow, the first of its kind, the dispatches say. Likely enough it will also be the last. It is sponsored by the League of the Godless and will train crusaders against the church and religion.

Every graduate, it is said, will get a job as an anti-religion preacher to combat an active revivalist movement which it appears has been started by the Orthodox Church.

A pleasant lot, these Communists! Willing to destroy the only spiritual anchor of millions of simple peasant folks who, without their religion, would be adrift on a sea of utter bewilderment and beaten on the rocks of lunacy—if only they may live without work. The Marxian theory that everybody should contribute to his toll to the common good of the race, upon which the Russian Soviets were supposed to have been founded, has come to a strange perversion when a man or a woman can be found to live by such a calling as that of destroyer of faith.

AMATEURISM

It will not make a scrap of difference a hundred years from now that Big Bill Tilden was fired out of the Davis cup competition for violation of the writer-player rule. It will make not a trifling amount of difference to anybody, even in the present, save the comparative handful who take this so-called amateur tennis seriously. But to the outsider looking in it appears like the rankest hypocrisy to have any such rule as that which Tilden has spent so much of his time dodging in the last several years. Who runs the United States Lawn Tennis Association—and why? Isn't that association a sort of close corporation, bossed and operated by people who in some way or another make money out of it? Who runs any of these national and international amateur athletic leagues, associations, etc.? Aren't they conducted either directly or indirectly, in a majority of cases, by people who get their living either by the sale of the appliances or the game, or by publishing books about them, or by editing magazines devoted to them?

Not in one case in a hundred does a man or a woman devote to any sport so much time that he or she has no time to earn a living, without in some hidden way getting his or her support out of the game itself.

The most abused word in the English language is "amateur." The "amateur" boxers who knock about Connecticut, fighting for their living as certainly as any admitted professional, are as good amateurs as the vast majority of champions in half a dozen namable lines of "amateur" sport.

New York, July 21.—Manhattan is going through its annual motions of being shocked.

Having winged for 360 days at what goes on before its eyes, New York generally spends five days being surprised when a reform organization makes a report about it. The tabloids screech, the parties of the first, second and third party grow indignant and make statements to the newspapers; hardened ladies suddenly appear with "old mothers" over their heads to borrow them; indignation spouts from the accused and the accusers; yellow journals take the opportunity to go "moral" by dragging out the last suggestive detail that can be printed under the present laws. And so it goes week after week, and the city sits back and wonders what will be next.

One year it's the theater that gets cleaned out and another year it's the naughty books. This season it happens to be a certain sort of dance, a certain sort of dance-hall speakeasy and night club that is under fire. Generally speaking, it's the resort that combines all three—a little drinking, a little dancing and a little night-clubbing.

An organization, termed the "Committee of Fourteen," has stirred up the present state of affairs by showing how wicked a wicked city can be when it goes about being wicked. It manages to locate a large number of drinking resorts—there are 20,000, it is said by a New York State Congressman—and it gives a great deal of attention to the fate of girls who are called upon to be so-called "hostesses" in public dance-halls and pseudo-brothels.

It was the use of the word "hostess" that brought quickest clamor. For there are, amidst the city's most popular play-places, a number of supper-clubs which boast of hostesses what are hostesses. What harsh words being directed toward hostesses, "up sprung the mighty Texas Guinan, followed by a great entourage, to assert that there were "hostesses" and "hostesses" and that one should learn to discriminate, to be less loose with the language. If, for instance, a hostess happened to be something less than

A SUCCESSFUL LIFE (Concluded)

It is a good plan to walk home after work or to at least cover from three to five miles every day, even though you may have been walking during your working hours. In addition, use some callisthenics or exercises, trying to work up a good sweat through the exercising and taking a cold shower afterwards. Next, lie in bed and relax for about a half hour and then change into fresh clothes for dinner. You will feel an abundance of health and vitality after following this regime for a few weeks.

Your dinner should consist of one of the good proteins such as beef, mutton, rabbit, chicken, fish or fowl, using one-fourth to a half pound and the choice of one or more of the cooked non-starchy vegetables which are listed for your luncheon, and a choice of any of the raw salad vegetables. You may also have a dish of Jello, stewed fruit or ice cream for dessert.

Your evening should be spent in some type of recreation, such as reading, conversation, or attending the theater. You owe it to both yourself and your family to take in a good show once or twice weekly. Do not work during the evenings. You will have better success with your business if you relax and save your strength to concentrate during your working hours.

Try these suggestions which I have given you and I am sure that you will notice an improvement both physically and mentally. Many of my patients tell me that after they have gained their health they were able to do five or six times as much as they were capable of previously, and in many instances their incomes and salaries have increased in a like proportion.

Even though you came to my office for personal advice, unless you are suffering from some chronic disease, I doubt if I could give better advice than the regime which I have just outlined, and although this advice has not been very costly to you, you can make it just as valuable as you wish if you are willing to follow strictly the rules which I have outlined.

A strong body, free from pain, is the natural right and heritage of every living being. Even though you have lived haphazardly up to the present time, you can probably develop a stronger and more efficient body than you have now.

Physical and mental improvement are not accidental. They are a result of scientific laws which you can learn as well as any one else. While health should be a lady, it seemed but fitting and proper to Texas that you should call a jade a jade. Tehre was, too, Helen Morgan, whose songs from a perch on a grand piano are to New York what Raquel Mellers may or may not be to Spain, and Paris. And, as they say in the society columns, "others too numerous to mention."

The aftermath of the Committee of Fourteen's report carries an amusing note. In an appeal for money, it is noted that investigating night clubs runs into money. Prohibition authorities have run against the same snag. Recently I read that prohibition activities on Broadway might have to be curtailed because it cost too much. This followed the recent proceedings against 20 night resorts.

If an endowed committee and the U. S. government cannot stop the Broadway strain, what, then, of the sugar papa? GILBERT SWAN.

EUROPEAN SHIP OWNERS ACCUSE UNITED STATES OF AIDING DESERTERS

London.—British and Continental shipowners are accusing the United States of aiding the ship deserter. They say they intend to make a protest through diplomatic channels against the new American shipping law.

It is also stated that the United States, because of increasing difficulty of getting sailors to man American ships, is making efforts through the new law to persuade foreign seamen to transfer to the Stars and Stripes.

Besides, as they say, putting a premium on desertion, British shipowners avow that a British seaman, under the terms of the new law, when transferring to another ship may not only draw all his back pay, but may claim that his advance pay should be paid all over again.

A Waiter For Kings Tells His Experience

Local Man, for Years Employed in Ritz Hotels, Here and Abroad, Gives His Impressions of the Crowned Heads of Europe—How They Dine, What They Eat and How They Act at Formal Banquets.

"RITZY!" If you are up in modern slang you must know what that means. But do you know its origin? If you don't know, this bit of information may aid you to use the word more intelligently hereafter. The name comes from Ritz, the name of the Swiss hotel keeper who has a world wide reputation for conducting the very best hotels. So now, when you hear the word "ritzy" used, you know it means the superlative degree as applied to persons or things.

Ritz, the founder of these elegant hostilities is dead but members of his family have formed a huge corporation which builds and conducts hotels all over the civilized world.

Since the best of food and the finest of furnishings goes into these hotels, by the same token, the personnel must be of the best so it was with considerable surprise that it was learned this week that a waiter who has been employed in these Ritz hotels in Europe and America, lives in Manchester.

Near the Boundary. It is not exactly correct to say this waiter lives in Manchester although his name is listed under Manchester in the telephone directory, but it is so near the town that it is not stretching the point much by saying he is a resident of this town.

Take a little trip to the south end and continue on the road to Glastonbury until, after passing the town boundaries, you run almost plump into a fence. The Glastonbury road takes a sharp turn to the right but you ignore the highway and turn to the left. And then your real trip begins.

Here is a real country road and a steep one. You shift your gears to low and start to climb until you begin to think your half way to heaven. As you continue and look toward the north, you catch glimpses of the spires of Manchester's churches but when you get to the top of the hill you see Manchester not at all. Where the town is situated all you can see is a lot of tree tops.

Water is Found. It was at the top of this hill that the Ritz waiter was found. His name is Comforto Bellotti and he has located himself and his family on a little farm. Broken arches by being so many years on his feet, has driven him into business.

Mr. Bellotti is a smallish man of slight build. He is 40 years of age and his hair is just beginning to grey at the temples. He was dressed in working clothes when he granted the interview.

"How did you ever find me?" "I thought that I was buried from the world. I've been away from the business some years but I'll do my best to tell you of some of the persons I've waited upon in my work in the Ritz and other first class hotels here and in Europe."

HIS FIRST MEETING WITH EUROPEAN KINGS

Mr. Bellotti has been in the United States since 1909. Before that he worked as a waiter in the Ritz hotels in Paris, London and Berlin and, of course, speaks the languages of those countries fairly well. Italian is his mother tongue.

It was in Genoa that the local man had his first experience with the crowned heads of Europe. Here is how he tells it:

"I believe it was in 1902 when an informal banquet was arranged at the Hotel Iozzi in Genoa at which most of the crowned heads of Europe attended. Kaiser Wilhelm, King Edward, the President of France, the King of Montenegro, the kings of Spain and Italy and a host of others, besides the members of the nobility, were dining that

Democratic "Prosperity" Cut Down Tips at New York's Swell Hotels

With the country seething with politics; with spokesmen from both the major parties ranting about what makes for prosperity, it is interesting to hear just what one man, not a politician, has to say about the Republicans and the Democrats.

Comforto Bellotti, who tells a little about his experiences with kings and European royalties on this page today, digressed for a moment while telling his story, to talk about these United States. Said he:

"I am no student of politics; nor do I know very much about economics, but this I do know. I was working in the best hotel in New York City, the Ritz-Carlton, when the Democrats won the election. At my station and, I suppose, at all of the other stations in the main dining room, the standard tip was one dollar per person.

"The day the Democrats assumed power—the very day—my tips went down to fifty cents per person and remained there all the time President Wilson was in the chair at Washington.

"Whether that has anything to do with prosperity I do not know, but I am telling you this for what it is worth."

President of France, they seemed all cast in the same mould. They were all well bred, thorough gentlemen of the same type as hundreds of well dressed men in all walks of life that I served in the Ritz hotels here and abroad.

The local man said that he had been working around hotels for over 20 years. He was born in Milan, Italy, and at the age of 10 got his first job in a hotel in that city. The training he said, that he received in that city, was very strict as the hotels there are anxious to turn out the best waiters in the world. In this respect, he remarked that in all his experience he had found that three-quarters of the waiters in the best hotels, especially in Europe, are Italians.

French, Best Chefs. "The French are supreme in the kitchen," he said, "but in the dining halls the Italians are found in the majority. The only way I can explain this is the strict training in the better grade of Italian hotels. One must know the game from the beginning and know it from every angle. It is far different than in New York, for instance, where there is greater latitude given to the waiter in serving food and drink. They are not so particular because the diners are not so particular.

"In Europe, a plate must be placed just so. The knives, forks and spoons must be placed exactly in the right place and at the correct angle. The food must be served just so. There are rigid rules and they must be obeyed for the head waiter is everywhere, watching, watching. The finger bowl must be brought on at the right second. The covers from the hot dishes must be whipped off at the right time and in a certain way. I specialized in salads which are made at the diner's table and every implement must be handled in a certain way. In the New York hotels I believe a bit careless but was never reminded of it because neither the head waiter nor the diner knew the difference. And that is bad for you become careless you are slipping in your business."

SOME FUNNY THINGS IN A WAITER'S LIFE

ASKED if the things the waiters do in the movie comedies, such as pouring soup down a diner's back, ever happen in real life, Mr. Bellotti laughed and said: "The movies haven't begun to show the funny things that sometimes happen. The soup spilling incident happens often. It has happened to me. Balancing a plate of soup and about to serve it, a diner often bumps into a waiter and the very best places, and the soup is spilled on costly tablecloths and more costly costumes. Humorous incidents without number happen in the dining rooms. The best one I remember happened in Paris but it had nothing to do with soup spilling.

"The principal figure was a newly rich American. The menus, of course, were printed in French. This man, not knowing the language, could easily have called for an English speaking waiter to explain the menu but he was with a party of friends and wanted to impress them with his knowledge of the French language. As the diner is always in the right at the swell hotels, one does as he is told and there is no argument no matter how foolish the request.

Picks Out Item

"Well, this American, pointed to an item on the menu and said in poor French that he wanted that served immediately and plenty of it. In fact, he wanted five big dishes of it.

"The waiter bowed and went into the kitchen and returned with five big dishes filled to the brim with toothpicks. Years ago they were on the menus in Paris because Americans wanted them."

After serving in London hotels he was sent to America for the opening of the Ritz-Carlton in New York City. It was a part of the system in all Ritz hotels that as soon as a new hotel was opened the best men in their respective lines were sent there to train the new men. As Mr. Bellotti was an expert in salads he was sent to each of the new hotels "as they were opened.

In New York he had the pleasure of serving many of this country's millionaires for the Ritz-Carlton is THE hotel.

Some Class of Patrons

"There was little difference in the patrons," he said. "The same class of men and women patronize the Ritz-Carlton in New York as the Ritz hotels in Paris, Berlin and London. In fact I met the same persons in all of the hotels as they travel from one country to another.

Next after the Ritz in New York Mr. Bellotti went to Pittsburgh to work in the Chantilly, the Ritz hotel there. It was there that his arches fell and he was obliged to give up the work. Advised to go to the country he picked Manchester and came here in 1915 and has lived here ever since. He has been on his little farm a little over a year. He has a wife and two children, a boy 13 and a girl of 11 years.

In concluding the interview he was asked his views on prohibition as relating to the high grade hotels. He said:

"Believe it or not, but they are serving drinks secretly even in the best of them but prohibition has hurt the hotels. Speakeasies and night clubs in New York are drawing the crowds away from the hotels."

WASHINGTON LETTER

By ROONEY DUTCHER

Washington, July 21.—The question in this campaign is whether or not Smith can beat Hoover. The Republicans start with the advantage. The country is regarded as normally Republican. It's an abnormal campaign, but who will get the benefit of its abnormalities?

The only possible way to guess at the outcome is on the basis of electoral votes, of which there are 531. In 1924 Coolidge had 332 of those, Davis only 136 and La Follette 13. In 1920 Harding had 404 and Cox 127. Smith must, virtually double the Davis electoral vote in order to win; he must take 130 away from the Republicans, as 266 elects.

Obviously then, Smith faces great odds. If he does win, it can hardly be said that he has a bare majority. At the moment, any effort to show how he can win must be helped on by a great many assumptions. We must assume, and this seems fairly safe, that the solid south will again cast its 114 votes for the Democratic ticket.

It is also all-important that Smith carry his own state of New York with 45. It's not certain that he will, but if he can't this story might as well be ended right here. Anyway, New York and the south would give him 159. He ought to get the three-vote states of Arizona, Nevada and New Mexico along with Rhode Island's five, making 173.

But let's look at Hoover. If we start with the south's 114 as a reasonable certainty for Smith, we must line up some regularly republican states for Hoover and consider them pretty sure to be his. Let's give him California, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Michigan, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wyoming. One or two of these states might conceivably go for Smith, but probably won't. Their total electoral vote is 184.

(Don't take all this dope too seriously!)

Hoover also confidently expects to hold these: Illinois 29, Minnesota 12, Nebraska 8, North Dakota 5. Total 64. Grand total one Hoover's probable electoral votes, according to our figuring—238.

That would leave Hoover only 28 votes short of election. We left Smith with 173, which was 93 short of election.

The states we haven't yet assigned to anyone are: East: Connecticut 7, Delaware 3, Maryland 8, Massachusetts 18, New Jersey 14.

Border: Kentucky 13, Oklahoma 10, Tennessee 12.

West: Missouri 18, Wisconsin 13, Montana 4.

That leaves us with 120 "doubtful" electoral votes on our hands. Democrats in the border states say they can hold them in the Democratic column. If we assume they know what they're talking about, we can give Smith 35 more electoral votes and bring him up to 208, leaving us 85 votes still undistributed.

Hoover still has 238 and needs only 28. He might get them from Missouri and Wisconsin and let the east go hang. Nearly all Democratic calculations count Missouri inside the Smith stockade.

The Republican managers recently assembled in Washington had no difficulty in deciding that the really important battle ground of the campaign lay in the east. Eastern national committeemen claimed to be perturbed over the fact that this was wet territory and that their party's platform and candidate were dry while the other party's man was wet. The New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut committeemen who were the backbone of the "draft Coolidge" movement in the pre-convention campaign were all afraid of Smith for that reason. They felt Coolidge would have a much better chance to beat him in their states than Hoover.

Anyway, getting back to our calculations and remembering that we're trying to prove how Smith might be elected—those eastern states which we haven't awarded yet may be regarded as wet. On the other hand they are normally

Republican in presidential years. Hence we're up in the air as to how they're going to vote. If Smith carried them all he would still need eight electoral votes. He would be more likely to get them from Missouri than from Wisconsin, but he might never get them at all. The reader is at liberty to shuffle these figures as much as he likes.

Painting and Staining of Shingles

By A. S. KELLY
(Courtesy "Building Age")

The creosote oil of commerce, or so-called dead oil, consists of residual oil, creosote, and pitch in solution. This crude oil is not suitable for shingle staining, although it is sometimes used by thinning it down with some cheap thinner, like benzine. But such a thinner destroys the creosote for wood staining, making it less preservative. On the other hand, the creosote will kill almost any pigment used with it, unless reduced with considerable colorless thinner. It is naturally so strong that for almost any purpose it must be reduced or modified. But if it has been made thin with benzine to an extent whereby the benzine may be detected by its odor, its preservative qualities are lost. Creosote shingle stain should be transparent. It should contain no water, nor poisonous matter, such as those pigments of a poisonous nature. It should be a real preservative of wood.

Next in importance comes the matter of color. The color should be ground butter-fine. The siennas, umbers and oxides give very satisfying colors and tints, but are hard to grind and hence may be found too coarse for shingle stains. Of the greens the only ones suitable are the chemical pigments of the utmost purity. But chrome green, Prussian blue and drop black are also useful pigments for wood-stains.

All this is in the way of information concerning the nature and qualities of wood stains, for such stains are in the market and it does not prove economical for the contractor to make his own. By buying the certified brands one is quite sure to get the best that can be made. Inferior brands are seldom or never advertised extensively.

Shingles should be perfectly dry before staining them. If the stain proves to be too heavy it may be thinned out with raw linseed oil. But thinning will seldom be required, though if the stain is left too long exposed to the air it will lose some of its volatile thinner. If the shingles are in bundles when you are ready to stain them, open them out and let them have ample time for drying.

If the stain is too thin the work will have a faded appearance, fading out soon after application. A shingle stain that will dry hard over metal is probably doped with kerosene oil. A painter may thin it up with this oil. Pure creosote shingle stain contains more linseed oil than does exterior lead paint. Hence it needs much free air to cause its drying. This applies particularly to inside staining.

In dipping shingles, allow about two-thirds of their length to have the stain, so that the stain may show on all visible parts after having been laid. To make a very good job, brush-coat after laying.

Having a barrel of stain to use, open up the top, and then tack a narrow strip of wood across it, near the edge next to you work, thus being used for removing surplus stain from the shingle. When dipped throw into a loose pile, that they may get plenty of free air. Stir the stain occasionally.

Creosote being a good wood preservative, the dipping insures a good coating as far as it goes, which means that it has covered all exposed parts. The stain also prevents warping to a great extent, much depending on the way the carpenter nails the shingles. One particular advantage of brush-coating lies in the fact that it touches up all raw places the carpenter has made by cutting around corners, etc.

A gallon of creosote stain will cover 100 sq. ft. of shingles with two coats. When dipped, 2 1/2 to 3 gallons will cover a thousand 4x16 in. shingles.

A stain of lighter color than desired for the finished work should be applied to old shingles and, in order to obtain the best results, two or even three coats should be applied.

Painting shingle roofs does not mean shingle staining. Such paint should be made from good mineral pigment mixed only with pure raw linseed oil, adding sufficient drier. The first coat should be mixed quite thin, as it is the primer. This paint will be less apt to make dams of the cracks, which hold water and help rot the shingles by getting behind the paint. Dry pigment may be used for cheap work, but pigment ground in oil is better in all cases. Mix your paint and stain through a fine sieve, thus removing all foreign particles, for the finer and smoother the paint the better the job. Mix by adding a little of the oil to the pigment and working it with a paddle until smooth, gradually adding the oil until the mass is soft and ready for thinning when needed. Too much drier will injure the life of the paint, so be careful here. The paint on shingled roofs is subject to greater wear than that on a vertical surface, and hence should be of the best weather-resisting quality and be carefully prepared by mixing. There are times when no driers will be required, as in summer. But when wet weather threatens, the quantity may be much increased.

Shingles may be dipped in paint as they are in stains, but the paint must be thinned out well, using some benzine for the purpose. Benzine will leave the paint after application, so that no harm is done, while it facilitates the application. Such staining with paint may be done as direct for creosote staining, with a vessel having a strip tacked across its top, for removing surplus paint.

The objection against painted shingle work is that paint tends to form dams to catch and hold rain water, to the detriment of the shingles. But this does not occur in any serious extent. In its favor is the fact that it resists fire well, such burning leaves or sparks from the chimney.

PLUMBING IS AN ADVANCING ART

Graceful Fixture Designing and Bathroom Decoration Recent Improvements.

When Anthelme Brillat-Savarin, French epicurean, visited America in the early decades of the nineteenth century, he complained bitterly because New York did not contain even one fix.

Charles Dickens, touring the United States later in the same century, roused a storm of protest from Americans by his strictures on the crudity of American life, and went home to write a novel depicting the lack of comforts.

Now, critical foreigners are impressed by the other side of the shield and comment upon the material comforts of all classes in America. Almost invariably the visitors mention the remarkable development of plumbing in the United States.

The bathroom has come to be a symbol of American life in the twentieth century. American sanitation experts and public health officials are pointing out the benefits of "a bath a day"; while the General Federation of Women's Clubs, with the slogan, "Running Water in Every American Home" has launched a campaign to extend the labor-saving conveniences of plumbing to poorer city districts, small towns and rural districts.

With the advancing demand for good plumbing, the manufacturers of fixtures, valves, fittings, and appliances, have kept pace. But progress in this field has by no means ceased. Among recent advances have been the discarding of clumsy, ungraceful fixtures and substitution of charming color decoration in the bathroom for the monotonous white of the past.

In auxiliary appliances such as water heaters and water softeners, progress has also been great. The latest types of water heaters are fully automatic, needing no relighting and virtually no attention. The domestic water softener has been developed to a point where, for very little cost, plenty of clean, absolutely soft water can be had for the kitchen, laundry, bath, and all cleaning purposes.

CARE OF HOOKED RUGS
In the nursery the hooked rugs of animals, birds and flowers are suitable but must be placed where they will not slip or kick up in play. In other rooms, painted floors, possibly of soft, grayish green or dull red, may show them off to advantage.

ADVISES OWNERS TO MAKE A WILL

Law Tangle Frequently Follows in Event of Death; Should Be Avoided.

Excellent advice to any owner of real estate is:—"Make a will!" This is of vital importance, advises John J. Mackey, counsel and secretary of the E. A. White, Organization.

"Failure of a realty owner to make a will often results in tragedy. The man may have endeavored all his life to build an estate for certain persons in the circle of his affections, but if he neglects to make a will the net income distribution of the estate according to the Decedent Estate Law, which may be in a manner entirely contrary to his ante mortem desires.
"In my experience, it is usually wives and mothers who suffer most in the absence of a will.
"If lots are fully paid for and title taken by the husband, a wife would have her dower right, which entitles her to one-third of the income derived from her husband's real property. But the property in the children's interest cannot be sold without a costly infancy proceeding. A will properly drafted eliminates all these difficulties.

"Must Have Children's Consent
"If a wife takes title to property during her marriage, and dies without leaving a will, title to the property goes to her children, share and share alike. The husband has a right of courtesy which entitles him to the net income from the property for the extent of his life. But, as in the previous case, the property cannot be sold without the joint consent of all the children.

COSTS REDUCED BY MACHINERY

Mechanical Power in Developing Results in Big Savings.

E. A. White, president of the E. A. White Organization, finds that new machinery is supplanting hundreds of laborers in the subdividing field.

"While population has been increasing and production gaining substantially since the last depression in 1921, employment has been declining in almost every division of industry," said Mr. White. "As a reason for this paradox of increasing production and declining employment, more and more the finger of suspicion points to the machine.

What the Machine Has Done
"In the building industry especially have labor-saving devices made spectacular advances. The trenching machine, the gasoline crane, the bucket conveyor, and other devices have gone far to make construction a machine industry instead of a collection of hand trades.

"One gasoline crane takes the place of from ten to fifty laborers. The hod carrier has disappeared before the invasion of the material hoist. In concrete construction, building materials are mixed, like dough, in a machine and literally poured into place without the touch of a human hand. A survey in Ohio recorded these results:

"With 15 per cent fewer men employed, contractors put up 11 per cent more square feet of finished buildings last year than in 1923.

"In subdividing, newly improved machinery has disposed of an innumerable amount of laborers. The tractor, for instance, used for hauling and moving materials, grading, and for numerous other purposes, replaces the labor of twenty men and does the work required in one-fifth of the time. The ten-ton caterpillar type of tractor does the work of fifty men. The gasoline shovel's scope of utility is so wide that it does the work of from ten to 1,000 men. The cement mixer replaces from five to fifty men. The new cut-away disks for digging up the roots of trees have probably 100-man power. Road hoes and graders replace thousands of laborers. Plows for cutting through the roots of trees replace an incalculable number of men, and the scarifier machine, used to rip up old roads, is also a labor and time saving device in a large degree.

Public Shares Benefit
"Of course, machines have introduced a new era in building and subdividing, mainly because of the time they save and the precision they make possible. Because of modern machinery locations which were swampy, rocky, unkept spaces of land are reclaimed and put on the market with evenly graded streets, sidewalks, and the general layout well groomed.

"In another way, machines have resulted in lower building and subdividing costs, and quicker turnover on the part of operators. The general public draws the benefits by paying diminished prices for property space."

NEW ORIENTAL RUGS
Nunmah rugs, Hindoo saddle-cloths, now appearing on our markets, "feel" with things Colonial just as well as the other more commonly known Orientals. Their shaggy, fine Angora goat hair when embrodered in wools of Oriental colors with the long "Tree of Life" or pomegranate design suggest the Jacobean crewel work. They are seamless rugs, six feet by four.

THE BEST BUILDING METHODS

MANY SUGGESTIONS FOR BASEMENT USE

Can Be Converted Into Extra Room at Small Expense Now.

You have probably seen various advertisements illustrating the possibilities of the basement in your home and perhaps you have given it a bit of thought and perhaps have passed it by as being a visionary idea as adopted by few. To give the matter serious consideration, there are really a large number of potential possibilities in the basement for every modern house which has concrete walls and a well troweled concrete floor, which makes it dense and hard.

These same houses as a rule have large basement windows that afford plenty of light and with the advent of the oil burner, the old coal furnace can be done away with and there will be no more soot, ashes or dirt and at the small expense of wall board or plaster board of some type, the underside of the first floor can be sealed up and the walls cleaned up and painted, the boiler cut off from the remainder of the basement in a little boiler room of itself and you have the entire remainder of the space free for other purposes. This basement then can be converted into a children's playroom, either winter or summer, for it can be easily heated, or for older folks, it can be converted into a sporting den, or perhaps for the mechanically inclined man, he can have a first class work shop and an experimental room. In fact there are numerous things that your basement can be devoted to that heretofore were unheard of.

There is also a large number of modern houses that have the laundry located in the basement with set tubs and a sink, connections for the electric washer and ironing machine, and in more recent years, a gas clothes dryer, which is ideal in the winter months, in which it is hard to get a day when clothes will dry outside.

The basement garage idea has also come into vogue and has met with the approval of the Insurance companies who now say that it is O. K. to have a basement garage of two car capacity and you pay no higher premium on your house. At your own option you may have this garage cut off from the rest of the basement by fire resisting walls or by ordinary partitions.

For basement windows there are now on the market various types of steel casements that are far superior to the old wood framing. They take up less space, therefore affording larger panes of glass and are much trimmer in appearance and will last a good deal longer than wood frames.

There is also a new feature of basement construction that is reviving an old time idea of old fashioned houses, namely, the cold cellar. Many modern houses have a sun porch with the cellar under it. It is becoming a practice to put one window in this part and have it divided from the remainder of the basement by an ordinary concrete wall and leaving the floor unexcemented with a tight wooden door separating it from the main cellar. This provides a very fine cold cellar for the storing of vegetables during the winter. It can be secured at no additional expense and once one has become accustomed to a cold cellar they will certainly want it in their house. The space under the average sun porch provides just the right amount of space for a cold cellar.

CONSIDERATION IN FLOORS.

The time when a floor was just something to walk on has passed. It is generally recognized today that the beauty of any room depends very largely on its floor and the wood that it is made of, and its color and finish are studied as carefully as are the walls and furniture. In considering this important question the average homeowner finds herself bewildered by the variety of materials, finishes and colors that are offered her.

FINDS A PAINLESS WAY OF SAVING

I am a lawyer, and my income varies greatly. Some months I earn barely enough to pay office rent and my stenographer; other months I will be fortunate, and take in enough money to last me for several months together.

My wife and I tried several plans of saving money before we hit on the one that seems ideal for our case. We call it the "percentage system." It consists simply in saving a certain percentage of our income each month.

We started out with the resolve to save 5 per cent of our income. That's a low figure, but we did not want to make the mistake of trying to save too much. The first month under our plan, I earned just $100, so we placed 5 per cent of it, or $5, in a savings account. The second month I made $150—$7.50 of it went into the new account. At the end of six months we found we had saved $45 without missing the money at all.

So we decided to raise our percentage to 8 per cent. By the end of a year, we had $150. We were very jubilant over it. It wasn't a large amount, but we had found a system that worked, and worked without any hardship to us.

Beginning our second year under this plan, we increased our percentage to 10 per cent, and we have kept it there ever since. Every month when I close my books and determine what my income has been, I immediately transfer 10 per cent of the amount to our savings account.

After ten years of this system, we have $3,000 in the bank. My income is about $5,000 a year, which means we are saving at the rate of $500 annually.

I am thirty-five years old. Interest tables tell me that, if I continue to save at that rate and get 6 per cent on my savings, I will have something over $25,000 by the time I am fifty-five.

When we want to save up to buy furniture, or a radio, we establish special savings accounts. We never disturb what we consider our "old-age fund" on any account.

Our system is painless. Months when our income is small, our savings are also small. When I have a good month, we do not miss the large amount that goes into the bank.

The percentage is, of course, optional. Some people could save 15 per cent or 20 per cent very easily. Other people, could adopt 5 per cent as their basis, and still accumulate considerable money over a period of years.

METAL LATH BIG AID TO TILE WORK IN BATH

The decorative wonders of modern tile work are made possible at moderate cost today by the strength and workability of metal lath, which give a secure base for the cement tile bed in any type of construction. Corners, arches and the soffits of dormers may be lined with tile by this means, as metal lath will conform itself to any interior surface, no matter how involved its angles and curves.

Built-in bath accessories are easily installed in the wall backed with metal lath, the cement bed holding them securely in place.

A new note in bathroom decoration, the placing of tub and lavatory partly or wholly in recesses of the correct size, is made much more easy of accomplishment with metal lath, since the recesses may easily be formed with great economy of space. Left-over space may be given to small closets for cabinets for bath, linen and other accessories.

House Plans That May Interest You NO. 6. "THE ELON"

"The maximum of luxury in the minimum of space" might be the slogan of "The Elon," a pleasant, brown-shingled home with light trimmings.

For "The Elon" seems to put into practice the belief that the man and woman of moderate means is deserving of all sorts of luxuries—spacious rooms that give a sense of peace, ample storage space and a living room at once noticeably long and well-planned.

Built-in book-cases from the fireplace to the end of the living room insure a cozy reading corner impregnable to outside disturbances. Each of the three bedrooms has a luxury all its own—a private dressing room is a roomy closet, which takes care of keeping clothes put away.

A double linen closet, spacious bath, a breakfast nook downstairs and two very attractive porches all enhance "The Elon's" appeal. And it costs only $4,500 to $5,500.

SOLID OAK PLANK MADE PROOF AGAINST CUPPING.

True Colonial floors of solid oak planks that will not cup or shrink, and that can be laid and finished as easily and as economically as strip flooring, have recently been made possible by means of a chemical treatment which prevents distortion by moisture. Wide boards are especially susceptible to moisture. It has been necessary heretofore to undertake expensive laminating or veneering to avoid the cupping usual in plank floors.

COPPER ON SURFACE MAKES SHINGLE ENDURE

In this progressive age, when home owners throughout the country are developing an acute "roof consciousness," it is not enough to cover your house with merely a roof to "keep out the rain." Nowadays the vision is more toward the future than ever before, and roofs, like houses, are built for permanence. There is no need to re-roof every ten or fifteen years, as formerly. Present-day roofing science has made attractive shingles which will last a lifetime, and naturally, when one buys a roof which is to become a fixture for so long, he desires not only a roof that will endure, but one that will be beautiful and pleasing as well.

With so many types of roofings in the market, most of us find ourselves in a maze when we try to pick the right roofing for our house, our individual taste and our pocketbook. One of the most interesting developments of the new roofing science is that of the copper-plated shingle, in which a deposit of pure copper is formed upon the surface by a process resembling electro plating to provide a wearing surface having the endurance and attractiveness of copper.

This wearing surface takes on all the changing hues and the patina which forms upon copper with the passage of the years. The base is a substantial composition having good insulating qualities which aid in maintaining pleasant temperatures within the house economically.

BRICK GOOD BACKGROUND IN CELLAR DECORATIONS

Decorative qualities of brickwork are rarely better emphasized than in the basement, where the varied, colorful surface of common brick gives an excellent background for the informal decorations most often used. Foundations of common brick are sturdy and easy to build and have the further recommendation that they require an excavation only slightly larger than the house itself. Well burned common brick is hard and practically impervious to moisture, aiding the establishment of the first requisite in home building, that of a dry basement. In decorating the interior walls they may be painted, white-washed or left unfinished. In combination with steel basement windows and heavy timbering an excellent effect is gained, entirely suitable for billiard room, den, gymnasium or cardroom.

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BERTIE LOU WARD marries ROD BRYER, who had previously been engaged to LILA MARSH. They spend an ideal honeymoon and the only shadow on the bride's happiness is Lila's persistency in broadcasting to their friends that she was Rod's first love.

A splendid position is offered Rod by TOM FRASER of New York and Rod accepts. Anxious to make a good impression, they go to an expensive hotel until they can find an apartment. This seems to antagonize MOLLY FRASER, who urges Bertie Lou to buy more than she can afford. Rod wins some money from Tom at poker and, feeling under obligation to them, he recklessly invites the crowd to a night club. Lila arrives to visit Molly, who includes her in the party and manages to enjoy Bertie Lou's discomfort.

Bertie Lou upbraids Rod for the extravagance, and they have their first quarrel. Strained relations continue until they receive money from home for their old furniture, and then they are busy moving into and furnishing the new apartment.

Lila surprises them by announcing her engagement to a rich MR. LOREE, and she asks Bertie Lou to forget the things she has done to her and be friends. They go shopping for the trousseau which, Lila informs her, to be paid for by Mr. Loree.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XIX

Bertie Lou awoke one winter morning with a headache. It was not unusual for her these days. She opened her eyes when the alarm clock sounded its dreaded call and closed them quickly on a flash of pain.

She was very tired. Rod had offered to get his own breakfasts, or to go out for a cup of coffee at a restaurant, but Bertie Lou was sticking to her bargain. She had said, when they moved into an apartment with higher rent than they could afford, that she would be very thrifty.

Time and again Rod had urged her to have a clean woman come in at least once a week and scrub her for her. But that would be four dollars and the woman's cartage and lunch. And four dollars would buy tea for Lila and Molly.

Bertie Lou grimaced with pain as she lifted her head from the pillow. Rod was still asleep. She left the bed quietly and stole into the bathroom for an icy shower.

She seldom had this chance before breakfast as the usual order of their little household was for Rod to jump hurriedly into his slippers and dash for the bathroom while Bertie Lou dived into a morning dress and contented herself with a face bath.

Of late Rod had overslept a few times, and Bertie Lou had not a moment under the shower before she called him. It annoyed her a little, and dispelled her lassitude, at least for a while. But the morning's household brought 't back. And by afternoon, when she went to a matinee, or tea, or bridge, she was often almost faint with fatigue.

She had been with waiting staff, if anyone had told her that she needed more nourishing food. Rest, she recognized, would have been a blessing, but she was satisfied to go from an orange at breakfast time until dinner on the refreshments that were served her when she attended. And, more often than not, her dinner was too frugal to be properly nourishing.

For Rod and Bertie Lou had come to a queer pass. Living in a nice apartment, charmingly furnished, and hobnobbing with waiting staff people, nevertheless they were dirt poor. Bertie Lou was cutting and cutting on her household expenses. Darning and mending, pressing Rod's clothes, washing all but the heaviest pieces of laundry, mending and cleaning until she actually despised the sight of her sewing basket.

Rod said it was insane. Bertie Lou said she didn't see what else they could do. Surely Tom would give him an increase in salary soon. He ought to be able to see how badly they needed it.

"But he doesn't see," Rod argued. "You always look like a million dollars, Bertie Lou. I can't go to him and ask for more money when you give him the impression of having spent my entire salary on clothes. And don't forget that we throw him and Molly a swell dinner here now and then which makes my salary seem like a sweet sufficiency to him. You've sure turned out to be a good cook, honey, when there's anything to cook," he added with a wry smile.

And Bertie Lou had replied that they must keep on. It would be a waste of all their sacrifices to give up now and admit that they couldn't make the grade.

"What grade?" Rod had wanted to know. Then Bertie Lou would go over it again, patiently and hopefully. Some day something would come from associating with the right people, she declared. And anyhow, he knew to repay the hospitality she insisted upon extending to her friend. For Bertie Lou and Lila were friends.

So Bertie Lou occasionally gave luncheons and bridge parties in her own small home, and worked doggedly for two or three days in advance to prepare dainties and make favors that could not be sneered at. Not that Lila, or even Molly, was sneering. But Bertie Lou was of an independent nature. She must give if she received. Her entertaining was always successful.

Bertie Lou and Rod Bryer. Bertie Lou is on the left, and Rod Bryer is on the right. They are both smiling slightly.

"Anything for your thoughts," she said, a pained infinity of tenderness in her low-pitched voice.

She was popular with the people Lila introduced her to, the set Lila had fallen in with after her marriage to Cyrus Loree. It amused and delighted them to go to Bertie Lou's apartment, once in a while just to show her that they would even condescend to go to that length to have her come to them. They were not unpleasantly patronizing. Bertie Lou had no cause to complain of their attitude toward her.

What Rod deplored most was the night parties. He lost sleep. And spent too much money. No more wild flourishes in such places as the Arabesque, naturally, but poker parties in which he neither lost nor won much. And he was able to prove to Bertie Lou after a few sittings, and bridge.

The real parties he tried to side-step entirely, but he found it as difficult as Bertie Lou did to refuse Lila or Molly. They could keep a party going until the sun was up, and because Rod flatly refused to oblige himself.

But it was different with the Lorees and the Frasers who appeared to consider themselves more than repaid for the entertainment they had offered. Bertie Lou, when they were invited to dine with them.

For Molly was so unfortunate as to possess a very mediocre cook, while Lila was openly frank in her enjoyment of Bertie Lou's exquisite dishes as a welcome change from the culinary excellence of her own French chef.

Bertie Lou forced herself to the utmost of her skill and strength on these occasions. She took pride in the compliments of her guests. On the other hand, Rod was not so smilingly courteous. He was full of the ultimate benefits to be derived from living beyond their means, of beggaring the present for the sake of the future.

He grew dark-browed and quiet. Lines about his eyes, a network about his eyes, anyone would see that he was deeply worried. Bertie Lou, brushing her hair with a few quick strokes, thought of it, and hesitated to arouse him. If she failed to do so he would be late. To her he had been late at the office made him irritable. He said it showed a fellow was slipping.

She didn't want him to be cross this morning and start the day with a frown. Lila was having a party tonight, an important affair, to which they were invited. But Bertie Lou insisted. Wanted him to meet some of the people Lila had said would be new contacts. Perhaps he could make new contacts.

Bertie Lou was beginning to realize that Rod had no future with money. Tom after all, Tom's firm was small one—nothing to be compared with those immense organizations that take possession of colossal buildings in which to do business. Perhaps Rod would go on faster if he made a change, took a step forward.

Bertie Lou was not alone in noting Rod's worried state and depression. Lila, too, observed it—observed that it was deepening. She guessed, easily enough, what was at the bottom of it. The days of her own limited resources lay not so far back that she had forgotten how painfully annoying it was to feel the money pinch.

And Bertie Lou, in an impulsive moment, had confessed. In her that Rod had borrowed money from his father. She did not volunteer to state that he had been forced to resort to this step to pay off some of their most pressing debts—the account at Stately's and the lapsed payments on the furniture.

But Lila could read between the lines. Not so with Molly. She did not even bother to wonder how Bertie Lou and Rod managed on his salary. Perhaps she, like Tom, assumed the young couple had other resources. Lila, on the other hand,

THE STROKE

Learn Slowly—But Right

Bernice Zitenfeld photographed in the crawl stroke. On the back-ward stroke of her left arm, her head is turned to the right.

By THE ZITENFIELD TWINS

We have said that your count for the crawl is three-six. This means that putting your left arm forward, down, back and your right arm back up, forward, you kick six times.

This complete revolution of the arms to six kicks gives about the most perfectly co-ordinated rhythm for the average person. There is one place in this rhythm when your arms are exactly opposite each other. It is when your forward arm goes down and your backward arm comes up. During this part of the stroke, your head still is turned slightly from the side where you have just been breathing.

One Arm Rests

While both of your arms look in about the same position when pictured, there is a great difference in the feel of them to the swimmer. One is up and the other is down, being brought up to strike out on the next stroke. It's fingers are easy, even loosely apart. It is the moment of rest for that arm.

The other one is poised for action. Fingers are close together, prepared to scoop the water and force the body forward. The arm is gathering force for pushing. It should not be strained, but nevertheless ready for that drive that will send the body towards its goal.

During this part of the stroke, one should watch the line of the body in the water, arch your back. In fact, the easy and good swimmer keeps his back arched all the time. This brings the water up to about the bridge of your nose if you hold your head naturally. Keep your eyes out of the water but get used to having the rest of your face in until you turn to breathe again.

Keep Stroke Slow

You may have a hard time keeping your stroke slow because of your lack of wind, until you learn to breathe properly. But it is far better to learn carefully and correctly and try to go very, very slowly until you can sense by the windmill revolutions of your arms and the paddling motion of your feet that your extremities are in accord. Keep your kick steady. Never let it lag.

Dearest Mom:

It's all the bunk that the sea, and the moon, and the silent places make for romance. They don't. I think an attic, or a cellar, or an arched tea room with candles dripping all over your clothes is infinitely more romantic than murmuring pines and hemlocks.

You see, here everything is so set for romance, and nothing happens. At least, any little flutters you have here are so out of scale with the extraordinary beauty of the setting, that it all falls flat—particularly when there are so few men.

But you take an ugly place, like a city all built up with brick and stone, where you have no beauty to live up to and practically any emotional experience promises a little color and an escape.

My moonlight sail with Mr. Shelton was utterly ruined because of the duplicity of my friend Helen. Now that she is having the time of her young life with Alan—and I must admit her vamping is a fair sort of a job—she is the complete feline if I ever met one.

You know, I'm not deceitful, and I don't lie—much—and nothing riles me more than to be put in a position where I seem to be that sort of a person. I'd ten times rather stand on my feet and take the consequences than have anything on my conscience.

As I wrote to you, I never told Alan anything about having met

Mr. Shelton before I came out here. It just never happened to come up casually, and I never thought it was important enough to call attention to. Besides, I really liked him, and I realized he was not just flirting with me. I probably realized that he was a sentimentalist, and that his interest in me would be short lived.

But I did tell Helen—certainly, if I had thought it was very important. I would not have done so. And so she told Alan—I suppose in some way that made it seem like a deep secret in my life.

At any rate, last night after dinner, I told Alan I was going out sailing with Mr. Shelton and I really hoped he might show a jealous pang or so—but instead he said very calmly, "That ought to be very pleasant for you, since he is an old flame, I understand. Tell me and I am driving over to Beech lawn to dance."

With that he departed, leaving me too furious to speak. I was in no mood for any of Mr. Shelton's poetic effusions, and he brought me home a pair of shoes that I hated and ragged. He was remarkably considerate and nice.

It is now after one, and Alan hasn't returned. I think I'll just be the devoted little spouse, and wait for him. A few witty remarks may bring him back to earth after his pleasant ride.

Am I a fool?

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL

by World-Famed Authority

INFANTILE PARALYSIS IS HORROR TO MOTHERS

Editor's Note: This is the second of three articles on infections of the nervous system. Tomorrow: Encephalitis.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Of the three great epidemic diseases that attack the central nervous system, infantile paralysis is perhaps most dreaded by the mothers of growing children.

One of the first pandemics of this disease that swept the world was that which appeared in Norway and Sweden about 1906, spread over the nations of the world rapidly, and then appeared in epidemic form in the United States.

It attacked first on the eastern coast of this country and then in Minnesota and in adjoining states which are the western homeland of the Scandinavian immigrants.

Recent Outbreaks

In his Kohler lecture, Dr. Simon Flexner points out that this epidemic has not yet run its course, and that considerable outbreaks of infantile paralysis have occurred in 1927 in California, Massachusetts and New York State, in Germany and Russia.

In the epidemic that swept New York in 1916, 20,000 cases were reported and many more may have occurred. Thus the pandemic has lasted 20 years, and it is not possible to predict when it will wear itself out. By "wearing itself out" one means that the disease will have attacked those it can reach and who have no resistance against it.

It is known today that there are some cases of infantile paralysis which pass through phases of fever and the other symptoms, but without paralysis, so that it is not possible to say definitely exactly how many cases really occur and are diagnosed. In fact, how much the disease spreads.

Cause Undetermined

The cause of this disease has not been determined. Many investigations have been made which indicate that there is an infectious substance, either a germ or a virus, the latter being infectious material so small that it cannot be seen even with the most high powered microscope.

It has been proved definitely that it is possible to pass the disease to monkeys by transmitting the infectious material. Dr. Flexner is convinced that the disease is passed from one person to another by the way of secretions of the nose and throat; from the nose, it is carried to the spine, and there it affects the anterior side of the spine so that another name for the disease is "acute anterior poliomyelitis," an inflammation of the material in the front of the spine. From the front of the spine pass the nerves that control motion.

Therefore, severe inflammation and crippling of these nerves result in the condition of paralysis, that is the chief mark of the disease.

The Fight Within

It has been found that persons who are recovering from the disease develop in their blood material which fights the disease.

Hence it is becoming customary to treat the condition by obtaining the blood of persons who have recently recovered and injecting this into persons who are suffering with infantile paralysis.

The suggestion is also made that such blood may have the power of preventing the disease, and in the presence of an epidemic, attempts are already being made to control the disease by injecting the blood serum that has been mentioned.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

But it seems that there are a few, maybe more than a few women Democrats who aren't dry and who are not embarrassing the party right now by rearing up a la Mrs. Chem Shaver and denouncing Al Smith and insisting they'll work against him rather than for him. Just about as many Democratic women are embarrassing their W. C. T. U. and other dry affiliations by insisting that they will vote for Al Smith and that his prohibition nibs are sound. Just another of saying that women are people, and that the much-named "woman's viewpoint" is rather silly. Not all women are "dry" any more than all men are "wet."

Cannibal Skeeters

A man might call the importation of cannibal mosquitoes to gobble up less exotic "skeeters plain tomfoolishness. So it's a woman, Mrs. Charles Williams of Flushing, Queens, who is importing the cannibals from France to take care of the fearful skeeter problem of Flushing. What's more, it may work. Some of these man-beleaved "follies" of women do, you know.

Tiger and Sea

Here's another piece of grit for the mill of those who dote on lurid tales of "the younger generation." The girl friend of young Merton Hoyt of Washington, D. C., brother of Authores Nancy Hoyt, who has had a few public entertaining exploits of her own, dared him to jump overboard. He did. When they picked him up he was rather exhausted. Human nature hasn't changed much despite our practice about the changed relationship twin men and women. Centuries ago ladies dared their swains to jump into the lions' den after a little game, and the gentlemen jumped.

Unwed Mothers

Some unwed mother facts found by a June graduate of a Social Science school in a big city may be of interest. The student followed up 53 illegitimate cases which were closed in social records with the notation, "Child placed with mother." She found that 21 of the 58 married men were not the fathers of their babies. Only 5 of these marriages were successful. Of the 8 women who married the fathers of their children, only 3 found any success in the marriage. Two of the 21 who married other men were deserted, two deserted the men, making their babies with them. 3 have started divorce action. 5 are still in the first year of marriage. The 24 unmarried mothers seem happiest by the simple process of parking their children with the old folks, stepping out and getting a job, and proceeding to have a good time again. Once more, the parents pay and pay and pay. But it's their own fault—they raise children to expect it!

"Lady Derbies"

"Lady Derbies" are the latest craze of jaded European society, we learn. Beautiful countesses and baronesses and princesses in smart Berlin dress in bathing suits, wear jockey caps and colored armlets with numbers, and hootfoot it down a stretch in a secluded wooded part of the city. There is impartial betting, husbands and lovers of favorite staking huge sums on their particular ladies.

I suppose one should be shocked at this manifestation of these perilsome times. But, after all, why? The exercise must be as good as that from golf or tennis, and it must be a pretty sight as well.

Marie Dressler, famous comedian, blames Mr. Modern Man for what's wrong with America today. She says:

"The chief trouble with the women of today can be found in the men who surround them. We shall have better women when we have better men."

"There are, sad to relate, very few He-Men today. That's rather tough on the women. I suppose they are getting a bad break."

"I believe women really miss the Cave Man, whose methods we so loudly derided as vulgar and brutal. But I am old enough and still young enough to believe that the man who lets his girl know he might beat her is the man who really loves her."

"In America the chief offender of social decency today is the wealthy wife with too much leisure. She has a man taking care of her every need and a protected home. Yet she openly flouts this confidence to go her merry, jazzy way. The modern man is as selfish of his own interests as his beautiful but dumb partner. He is so soft he makes things soft for her, too."

"The modern woman has too much cake. She is nauseated with her diet of sweets and hasn't seen yet that the world has no permanent place for wasters. Wealth has suffocated the average woman high up on the social ladder and her example of recklessness is being felt all down the line. What she really needs is an old-fashioned He-Man with an iron hand, to steady her."

This And That In Feminine Lore

Since Permanent Waves are not changeable at will, choose yours with care. May we suggest that you consult Mrs. Robinson of the Lily Beauty shop in the House & Hale building, who gives the Nestle Circuline. Her ring is 1671.

Since the automatic refrigerator has become an accepted part of modern kitchen equipment in thousands of homes, housewives have been busy experimenting with frozen desserts, chilled salads and cold drinks so desirable when the mercury has been climbing higher and higher these July days. "Cooking with cold" is just the opposite of baking, but in both cases the mixture or dish expands to nearly twice its original volume. If it is first cooked it must be well chilled before putting into the automatic refrigerator.

A clever ad writer once summed up the modern woman's point of view on lingerie in exactly eleven words: "One wears as little as possible now, one wants that little smart!" Margalo Gillmore one of the successful younger actresses, believes the perfect foundation for the modern woman's clothes, is a smooth fitting vest, yoke-top panties, a little brassiere and a scalloped, yoke-top petticoat. She likes them French and hand-made of soft crepe de chine in pale peach color. She has no fancy for the chemise which she says looks like a pillow slip with straps, or the costume slip that doesn't fit as snugly as the yoke-top petticoat. Well, everyone to their taste.

Banana Ice Cream

1 cup bananas (sliced)
1-2 cup sugar
1 cup cream (whipped)

Put bananas through colander with sugar. Whip cream and fold in with bananas and sugar. Put in tray of mechanical refrigerator and freeze until solid. Take tray out. Add two or three tablespoons plain cream and beat mixture with spoon until it is soft and mushy. Return tray to freezing chamber and freeze until solid. Makes four to six portions.

"When packing for a journey of any sort, you should include with all other accessories that are needed, a package of good manners."

The reason many of the dishes served to us in hotels and tea rooms are so appealing to the eye and to the palate is because of the crisp, fresh garnishings which decorate to the queen's taste the more substantial servings of meat, fish, salad, and arouse our appetite for the latter no matter how hot the weather. Beyond lettuce or occasionally cress or parsley and lemon, the housewife has not the time or the devices at hand to make the elaborate garnishings.

Waffle desserts are justly popular during the hot months, and almost any cake batter can be baked in waffle form, thus saving heating the oven. They are nice for breakfast, luncheon or supper, with raspberries, peaches or any fruit in season.

New salad combinations are shrimp and spaghetti, peach halves filled with raspberries, lamb salad made in the proportion of 2 cups cold chopped lamb to one cup drained, crushed pineapple and 1-2 cup chopped celery.

Very lovely luncheon or refreshment sets are being made of colored linen, the edges plain or Italian hemstitched or blanket stitched. In one corner of each napkin is an applied flower motif and the same is repeated in a larger design in the corners or center of the lunch cloth.

Kabobs, which are often cooked over the campfire by the Girl and Boy Scouts, give a distinct picnic atmosphere to the outdoor affair and with a vegetable salad and fruit little else is needed. Beef or lamb is cut in pieces an inch square an done half inch thick and run on to a pointed stick with a piece of onion and bacon, allowing space between to allow for proper cooking.

If cucumbers are to be used in a salad, they should be peeled and sliced and allowed to lie in salted water at least an hour before serving. If you want a slice with a fancy edge, draw a fork down the sides of the cucumber lengthwise before slicing. This will give each slice a lace edge.

There is no shortage under the sun that can possibly come up to strawberry, but peach can at least run it a close second and peaches from the south are coming into the market quite freshly now. Don't slice them until just before serving and when serving use whipped cream rather than plain cream. It works better on cake. Use the luscious yellow peaches that are so juicy and sweet.

A happy touch to the dress that will allow of it, is a crisp looking little dicker of embroidered or plain organza, especially is this true on a wedding day.

Madame Jenny's creations in dresses won first and second honors in the Parisian style show, in which 50 stage and film stars competed, parading between great ropes of flowers for this outstanding fashion event held during the last week of the Paris season. The prize money goes to the work room where the prize dresses were made. The first prize winning dress was in beige and gold. A slip of beige lace had its figures re-embroidered in gold and veiled with tulle. The dress was long with form-fitting bodice and very full skirt. The other dress was of creamy beige satin, draped.

PEGGY DOESN'T DESIRE TO FLY THE ATLANTIC

Paris, July 21—Peggy Hopkins Jones, who is noted for her beauty, her jewels and her numerous admirers, is one woman who is decidedly without any ambition to fly over the Atlantic ocean in an airplane. Miss Joyce, who announced that she will marry young Lord Northesk, of London as soon as his present wife obtains her divorce in the Scottish courts, left no doubt of her minimum interest in trans-ocean flying.

"I am one woman who is not in the trans-Atlantic flight business," she said.

Not so with Mabel Boll, whose collection of jewels almost rivals Peggy's and who is known as "The Queen of Diamonds." Miss Boll is making preparations for a flight and has opened "The Boll Air Headquarters" in a palatial apartment.

Mabel lost to Amelia Earhart in the race for trans-Atlantic air honors, but she scored one on Peggy in the scramble for a Paris apartment in view of the housing shortage. This is no hollow victory. She and Peggy arrived on the same ship. They established themselves at a hotel, but each wanted an apartment for "headquarters."

WILL CHARGE FEE AT GLOBE HOLLOW

All Swimmers 18 Years Old and Over Must Pay Toward Upkeep.

Starting on Sunday a charge will be made for all who use the Globe Hollow swimming pool providing the person using the pool is over 18 years of age. No charge will be made for the youngsters or boys and girls under eighteen.

There will be two different charges. Those who go to the swimming pool either on foot or in automobiles and wearing their bathing suits all ready to "jump in" will be charged 10 cents for using the pool and those who wish to use one of the lockers can do so and will be charged 15 cents. With the charge that is made for the locker room there also goes the use of a towel.

The charge is being made in order to help meet the expenses of the pool and to allow for further improvements. To all who use it will be given a tag which they will carry as a person would who engages a bathhouse at the sea shore and only those in the adult class who are wearing such a badge will be allowed in the pool.

Up until this time there has been no charge made for those using the swimming pool, unless the lockers were used, but there has been an increased number who have come to Globe Hollow in automobiles and have not paid for its upkeep in any way. Not only do the people come from the Ninth District, which district supports the pool by an appropriation, but from all over Manchester and from places ten to fifteen miles from Manchester and with the increased number coming, it is pointed out, there is need for further expansion and to meet the cost the charge is necessary.

Swimming Instructions Starting on Wednesday July 25 Miss Mollie Oldham, who is swimming instructor at the Bee, will give swimming instructions at Globe Hollow each Wednesday, Thursday and Friday morning from 10:30 to 11:30. Miss Oldham is a member of the Red Cross Corps and parents need have no fear for the safety of their children.

Starting Tuesday, July 24 and for the remainder of the season Frank Busch, life guard at Globe Hollow, will give swimming instructions for boys each Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday morning from 10:30 to 11:30.

With two classes going on nearly every morning in the week, both for boys and girls, the young people of Manchester are given an opportunity to learn to swim under safe conditions.

169TH BREAKS CAMP AT NIANTIC SUNDAY

five officers and one non-commissioned officer were awarded medals ten years for military service in the state of Connecticut. Among them was First Lieutenant Thomas J. Quish of Company G of Manchester. Lieutenant Quish enlisted in the old State Guard, April 16, 1928 serving with that unit until April 6, 1921. He was then called to active service in the Connecticut National Guard.

The medals were presented by His Excellency, Governor John H. Trumbull who made a short but appropriate speech in each case. The regiment stood at parade rest during the presentations. The others who were suitably recognized were, Colonel Orville A. Petty, Captain William Litke, Captain Fred Reincke, Lieutenant I. Ramsey, Lieutenant Harold F. Dyer and Supply Sergeant Thompson. The officers and non-com were given the command, "Front and center" for the presentation. Incidentally, Lieutenant Quish will remain here two weeks longer. During that time, he will have charge of instructing the automatic riflemen in the 102nd Infantry, C. N. G., which comes here tomorrow morning for a two weeks' period of training. Lieutenant Quish had charge of similar work with the 169th regiment and, according to army officers and high officials of the regiment, did a mighty good job.

Baseball Tomorrow Company G and Company D were scheduled to play the finals of the baseball tournament for the regiment.

THIS IS ROMANTIC If you have to wait too long from one FULL MOON to the next, console yourself with today's puzzle—it makes 'em to order! Far is six and one solution you may be able to beat is on another page.

THE RULES 1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in pairs, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2—You can change only one letter at a time. 3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

THE TNYMITES STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KNICK

"Tis well the shore is fairly near," said Clowdy, "cause I sady fear that we could never reach it, if 'twas very far away. I love to swim, but, mercy me, just now I'm tired as I can be. This surely's not one of the times when swimming's merely play." Then Scouty said, "That hippo's slick. He pulled a very clever trick. When we were riding on his back, he seemed to be all right. Now, tell me, who would ever dream that he would toss us in this stream? But, that's just what he did, and now he's traveled out of sight." Just then wee Copy's foot touched sand. "Hurray!" he shouted, "we've reached land." And then the Tnymites swam ashore and all sat down to dry. "Oh, gee, but we are soaking wet," said one, "but there's no need to fret. We'll soon be dry. We're lucky that the sun's up in the sky." "We'll hide right in those weeds, nearby and hang our clothes all up. Look, I have found a little winding limb that's dandy as a line." So, all the Tnymites shed their clothes and hung them up. "Well, goodness knows," cried Scouty, in a little while, "that plan has worked out fine." They took their clothes all down and then the bunch was shortly dressed again. Soon Scouty ran down near the stream and loudly cried, "I wish that we had lots of food to eat. Say, here's a plan you cannot beat. I have a little hook and line. Come on, we'll catch a fish." They found a worm to bait the hook, and shortly Scouty cried, "Oh, look! I have a bite. Come help me. I'm afraid 'twill get away." So, all the bunch pulled on the line. The fish came out. My it looked fine. "Ho, ho! That's lucky," Copy cried. "We'll eat fine fish today!" (The Tnymites have a fish dinner in the next story.)

PHONE'S Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"
DAINTINESS
 Times come when daintiness, like cleanliness, is well, almost akin to godliness. Not everybody can—and not everybody, wisely, cares to dine on the rarities and the ultra-delicacies every day. But most of us, on occasion, like to break the more or less routine customs of the table with a little flair into the unusual. Pinehurst, because it has so many customers who enjoy these little gastronomic adventures, is enabled to stock many delicious edibles that are not usually found outside the most exclusive great city food shops.

Perdrel spiced cantaloupe, for instance. Plenty of folks have never tasted spiced cantaloupe—but they've missed something. Not a cheap product, we must admit—not one that many folks would care to buy too often, but, offered just occasionally, a joy.

Or once in a while, just by way of a special treat, a salad of creme de menthe pineapple. Oooh! Gorgeous? More than that. Yes, it's rather costly—but it's for just now and then, you know.

And did you ever eat a skinned and boned sardine—a Portuguese skinned and boneless sardine? Sort of fancy, for just a wee little fish, to be sure. But SUCH a sardine!

And now to come down to earth—here's something that's not only delicious but cheap. We are featuring for the next few days—starting this afternoon—Royal Scarlet raspberry and strawberry jam, perfectly pure, at 23 cents for a sixteen ounce jar.

How's that?

Mr. Wanamaker's foresight.
PROBABLY the most heavily insured man in the world was the late Rodman Wanamaker—Philadelphia and New York merchant.
 He directed in his will that the proceeds of his policies—seven and a half million dollars—be placed in a single Trust Fund for the benefit of his three children.
 By means of this far-sighted arrangement the principal sum will be kept intact, his heirs will have no investment problems to worry them, and they will receive a steady flow of income as long as they live.
 Few men can hope to leave an estate of Wanamaker dimensions; but the establishment of a Life Insurance Trust is open to everyone.
