

BUSINESS MEN WANT KLEIN IN HOOVER'S PLACE

Want No Politician at Head of Chamber of Commerce; Ask Backing of President Coolidge.

Washington, Aug. 1.—In an effort to keep the Department of Commerce "out of politics," business men of the United States have started a campaign for the appointment of Dr. Julius Klein, director of foreign and domestic commerce, as a successor to Herbert Hoover, it was learned today.

Taking the stand that the department is exclusively devoted to commercial and industrial activities, businessmen have laid their case before President Coolidge, representing that the selection of a secretary of commerce, based upon political considerations, would be unfortunate.

While it has been supposed generally that Hoover's successor would be from among the political prominent Republicans, there now appears to be grounds for the belief that the President has been impressed by those who hope to keep the commerce department a "Business Bureau."

Klein's Record

Klein has been one of Hoover's chief economic advisors during the last eight years, particularly in matters pertaining to the expansion of foreign trade, which has grown enormously since the war.

Hoover always has taken the attitude that foreign markets, properly promoted, would furnish an outlet for the surplus American production and might be the means of preventing a disastrous slump in industry during periods of sickness in the domestic demand.

Fear was expressed by business men that in the event of the appointment of a secretary of commerce from the ranks of the politicians, there would be many resignations among department executives, who are familiar with Hoover's policies, have been carrying on the campaign to promote foreign and domestic trade.

Klein, among other executives, has received a number of flattering offers from private business corporations.

It also was feared that should the commerce department be put on a political basis, as was the situation prior to the appointment of Hoover, many of the important posts, such as "trade ambassadors" to London, Paris and other foreign capitals might be filled by politicians.

PRESIDENT'S REST IMPROVES HEALTH

Was Not in Good Condition When He Left Capital for His Vacation.

Superior, Wis., Aug. 1.—Tomorrow, Calvin Coolidge will bring to a close his fifth year in the White House. He will spend the day quietly, fishing the Brule river near Cedar Island Lodge, happy in the thought he has but seven months to spend at the exacting job of chief executive of the nation.

Or at least so his confidants say as to the latter. Those members of the executive staff attached to the Summer White House detail who are closest to him say that the final acceptance of his decision not to run again and the subsequent nomination of Herbert Hoover have lifted years from him in action and appearance.

It is certain that the month and a half on the Brule river thus far has worked wonders physically on the President. When he arrived on the fifth of June he seemed underweight. His complexion was pasty and he seemed tired almost to the point of exhaustion. Six weeks of constant fishing and outdoor life on the Pierce estate, however, obviously have put him back on his feet, so to speak. He again tips the scales at his usual 158-160 pounds weight; the sun and wind have tanned his face, and the lines of fatigue are almost wholly disappeared.

His Chose Statement

A year ago tomorrow, Mr. Coolidge electrified a dozen newspapermen, and very shortly thereafter the whole country, by handing out in Rapid City, S. D., a little typewritten slip saying merely: "I do not choose to run in Nineteen Twenty-eight." From that date on, right up to the Republican national convention at Kansas City last June, the thought persisted he was not sincere—that he could be "drafted." Several subsequent

AMERICA EAGER TO ENTER PACT TO OUTLAW WAR

State Department Delighted to Hear Report That France and Britain Have Agreed on Treaty Terms.

Washington, August 1.—The State Department was "delighted" with any compromise reached between Great Britain and France on outlawing war.

The State Department has received from its naval attaches at London and Paris only the barest outline of the negotiations which have been going on between France and Britain, during the past year, and has at hand only the background of events. Officials, deeply interested in Sir Austen Chamberlain's announcement in the British House of Commons that a compromise had been reached, professed to see little importance to the United States at this time.

France's Position

The nature of the agreement is believed to be an actual recession by France of her viewpoint that naval limitations be on a basis of global tonnage, and an acceptance of the British view that definite limitations be made of ship categories. France is credited with having theoretically however, maintained her former position, reconciling the seemingly irreconcilable difference by agreeing to announce what she intended to build in each of the five ship categories.

Of course the chief bone of contention is the submarine question, and France has insisted on her right to build as many submarines as her geographic position required for defense.

Preliminary Report

Whatever the Franco-British agreement is, it was pointed out at the State Department today that it is merely to be submitted to the preparatory committee on disarmament, in turn to be passed on by that body to the League of Nations Assembly at Geneva next month.

SMITH GOES BACK TO HIS DESK AGAIN

Nominee Ends Vacation and Plans to Confer With Ras- kob Today.

Southampton, N. Y., Aug. 1.—Governor Al Smith today was to forget swimming in Long Island waters to get back in the swim of the presidential campaign.

Having enjoyed a five days' rest at Canoe Place Inn, seven miles from here, the governor planned to motor to New York this afternoon where he is expected to have several conferences with John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee, before returning to Albany on Sunday. One of these conferences with Raskob may take place tomorrow aboard the yacht of William H. Todd, one of the governor's millionaire friends.

As soon as he returns to the capital, the governor will dispose of state business that has piled up during his brief absence and then settle down to whip into final shape the address he will deliver on August 22, when he is to be formally notified of the presidential nomination. He hopes to complete work on his acceptance speech by the middle of the month so he will have an opportunity to get another brief vacation, possibly in the Adirondacks before the notification.

Needs the Rest

While the governor never has enjoyed better health than at present, members of his family and his close friends have advised him to get all the rest he can between now

Ape Man Finally Caught In Shack At Athol, Mass.

Athol, Mass., Aug. 1.—Wallace Gary, 25, so-called "Ape Man," arrested by police of Connecticut and Massachusetts on charges of abducting four women and breaking jail twice, today elected to face a 20 year sentence in the former state than receive life imprisonment under the laws of Vermont.

Celebrities Who Saw New Color Movies

Here are some of the celebrities and scientists who gathered at Rochester, N. Y., the other day to witness the Eastman demonstration of motion pictures in the full scale of natural colors. At the left is Thomas A. Edison, famous inventor and friend of George Eastman who took advantage of Eastman's celluloid film to make practical motion pictures. Next, left to right, are: Adolph S. Ochs, New York publisher; General John Pershing; George Eastman; Sir James Irvine, Principal and Vice Chancellor of St. Andrew's University, Scotland.

SPANISH FLYERS START ON AROUND WORLD TRIP

First Stop at Azores; Then to Halifax and New York and Then Westward; Four On Big Plane.

Cadiz, Spain, Aug. 1.—Bound for the Azores in the first leg of a projected round-the-world flight, Commander Raon Franco, famous Spanish aviator, hopped off from here at 7:30 a. m., today (3:30 a. m., Eastern Daylight Time), in a huge Dornier-Superwal hydroplane, the Numancia.

Franco was accompanied by Captains Ruiz de Alcala and Gallarza of the Spanish Royal Flying Force and a civilian mechanic, Pablo Rada.

The start of the flight today follows months of intensive preparation. The hydroplane was assembled here by German mechanics and then put through severe tests. It is fitted with four Napier engines of 500 horsepower each and is said to be capable of maintaining an average speed of 125 miles an hour under ordinary conditions.

Its Wing Spread

The Numancia has a wing-spread of 95 feet and is of all-metal construction. It weighs 13,000 pounds when empty and is capable of carrying a load of 5,000 pounds. Its fuel capacity exceeds 2,000 gallons, giving it a cruising radius of about 2,500 miles.

According to tentative plans announced before the start of the flight, Franco intends to fly to Halifax after reaching the Azores. From Halifax, Franco will fly down the Atlantic coast to Havana, stopping at New York on the way down.

From Havana he will fly to Mexico City, then up the Pacific coast to Alaska, across the Bering sea, to the coast of Siberia and Manchuria to Japan. Thence to the Philippines, Burma, India and Persia in turn and across Europe back to Spain.

Suitable stops will be made en route.

Two years ago, Franco successfully spanned the South Atlantic from Europe to South America to the first time. Ruiz de Alcala and Rada accompanied him on that flight also. Gallarza won fame as an aviator in 1926 when he flew from Spain to Manila.

EXPENSES EXAGGERATED

Washington, Aug. 1.—The Prohibition Bureau's drive to clean up Broadway's night clubs has cost but $9,000 since January 1, Dr. J. M. Doran, prohibition commissioner, declared today.

He scouted reports which have placed the cost at figures ranging from $60,000 to $75,000.

"The money was used by dry agents in the purchase of evidence and for other expenses incident to raids against the night clubs and speakeasies," said Doran.

Major Maurice Campbell, New York prohibition administrator, submitted the report on expenditures to Doran.

Calm at Hearing

Toral has sat through the proceedings impassively, at times seemingly annoyed by the questions.

"It was all very simple; any one could understand it," he repeated several times.

It is the contention of the prosecution that Toral was influenced to commit the crime by a conversation he had with Mother Superior Conception several days before the shooting. Toral stoutly maintains that no one but himself knew of his plan to kill the president elect.

The nun is apparently a woman of superior intellectuality. She is about 45 years old, self possessed and states in appearance. She told newspaper correspondents she faces the future with calmness.

Aside from the preliminary court inquiry General Antonia Zertuche, chief of police for the federal district, accompanied him under threat of violence, she claimed.

Rebels In Jugo-Slavia Have Own Parliament

Vienna, Aug. 1.—Members of the Jugo-Slav Parliament, who have been in stormy opposition against the Belgrade government, have set up an independent parliament at Zagreb (Agram), according to word from that city this afternoon.

Eighty-eight Croatian, Slovene, Montenegrin, Dalmatian, Mohammedan and German deputies constitute the rump Parliament that held its first meeting in the old Diet building at Zagreb with the red, white and blue Croatian flag flying overhead.

The regular Jugo-Slavian Parliament (Skupstina) met in Belgrade with only 140 out of a total of 315 deputies in attendance.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUERS TO WAGE OWN CAMPAIGN

Will Ask No Support of Re- publicans Although Work- ing for Election of Hoo- VER.

Washington, Aug. 1.—The Anti-Saloon League of America, while supporting Herbert Hoover for the presidency, will wage its campaign entirely aloof from the Republican party, General Superintendent F. Scott McBride said on his return here today from a survey of five states.

The Dry League is raising its own campaign fund—with a maximum of $500,000 authorized—and will support proved drys for Congress regardless of party affiliations.

The campaign to defeat Gov. Alfred E. Smith is already under way, but will not reach full tide until early in September.

Coupled with this explanation of the League's plan of operations in the political war zone, Dr. McBride declared that if 90 per cent of the church vote is cast, Hoover will be elected.

"On the other hand," he said, "it is fully realized that the Drys in the churches are inactive and indifferent, the aggressive Wet interests will be able to place Smith in the White House."

McBride declared that during his trip he found Drys aroused in Ohio, Michigan, Pennsylvania, New York and West Virginia.

He offered a prediction that a "Very Dry" Congress will emerge from the November election.

HARTFORD EMBEZZLER IS FINALLY CAUGHT

Roger W. Watkins Arrested in Lorain, Ohio; To Be Brought Back Tomorrow.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 1.—Roger W. Watkins, long sought broker, will be brought back to Hartford tomorrow. It is understood, from Lorain, Ohio, where he was arrested last evening by Deputy Sheriff Harrison K. Hotchkiss, of Granby, State's Attorney Hugh M. Alcorn was out of town for the day today and no one in authority knew anything of the case as it stands today except the mere fact that Watkins has been caught.

Edward J. Hickey, county detective who has been on Watkins' trail for many weeks, also is expected to drop into Hartford some time tomorrow.

To Exhibit Broadway Shows In Nation's Small Towns

New York, Aug. 1.—Broadway, but a reproduction of their performances by the "talkies" will be available to cities, large and small everywhere.

The producers mentioned have obtained control of the Vocalion Corporation of America with offices and studios in New York, and are expected to begin making mechanical reproductions of their current theatrical successes in about six weeks, using the original cast.

Plays may be recorded in the theater in which they are being produced, the time required being about two weeks.

U. S. PUSHES AHEAD IN GAINING POINTS

Olympic Stadium, Amsterdam, Aug. 1.—The score in the Olympic games at the close of today's events follows:

United States	122
Great Britain	35
Canada	28
Germany	24
Finland	23
Sweden	21
South Africa	14
Ireland	10
France	5
Haiti	5
Italy	4
Philippines	3
Norway	2
Japan	2
Holland	1

Olympic Stadium, Amsterdam, Aug. 1.—Bud Houser and Sabin Carr came to the rescue of America's fading supremacy in track and field today when they won the discus throw and pole vault respectively in the Olympic games in progress here. Houser's winning toss in the discus, 155 feet 2.5 inches, coming on his third effort in the preliminary trials when he was about to be eliminated, established his new Olympic record for the event. His victory left him in possession of the title he won at the 1924 games in Paris. Carr's winning vault, 13 feet 9 1/2 inches, established a new Olympic record for the event, the old mark having been held by Frank Foss, the American, at 12 feet 5 inches. Bill Droegekneller, Northwestern University, also bettered Foss' mark in finishing second today, the middle westerner clearing 13 feet 5 1/2 inches.

Neither of the two leading Americans approached within six inches of the world record credited to Lee Barnes, Los Angeles, who also was in the competition today. However, the dank day and the slippery take off impeded the efforts of all the vaulters. In spite of the going, Carr tried twice to clear 14 feet 2.2 inches but was unsuccessful.

Barnes Off Form

Barnes, the 1924 champion and present record holder, could do no better than a tie for third with Charles McGinnis, Chicago, A. A., and Vic Packard, Canada. The three then engaged in a jump off for the place.

The record-breaking victories of Houser and Carr restored in some degree America's faith in its athletic potency, a faith that had been rudely shattered since its two victories of the opening by defeats in the 100 meter dash, 400-meter hurdles, 800-meter run and the hammer throw in the ensuing days. The fact, too, that early this afternoon Jackson Scholz could do no better than a tie for third while Percy Williams, the Canadian schoolboy flash, was winning the 200-meter final in 21.45 for his second sprint victory and the American hurdlers were beaten by Atkinson, South Africa, in the 110-meter final, hardly came as a source of encouragement.

Nor was the elimination of Charley Paddock and Hank Cummings in the semi-finals, leaving Scholz as the only American in the 200-meter finals, anything to cheer about while the successive "resignations" of Lloyd Hahn and Sid Robinson before the finish of their 1,500 meter heats, was just about worthy of tears. Nick Carter, Los Angeles, also was eliminated but finished a fighting third in his heat.

When it was all over, the only American left for the 1,500-meter finals was Ray Conger, who won his heat nicely in 4:02.35.

The victories of Houser and Carr, therefore, were as gratefully welcome as an overcoat on a very cold day. They brought the American wins in this meet up to five—Bob King in the high jump; John Kuck in the shot put with a new world's record; Ed Hamm in the broad jump with a new Olympic record; and Carr and Houser with Olympic records in their specialties today. The really discouraging feature of this "loss" was the fact that not an American victory had been scored on the track, with all too few chances remaining.

However, the Americans took a meed of satisfaction in the fact that Carr and Droegekneller placed one-two in the pole vault and that McGinnis finally took third place, leaving Carr and Packard in position to win the gold medal.

TO SEEK CHANGE IN CHILD LABOR Agents at Work Gathering Material to Present Before Next Legislature.

The death of the three boys, burned when the tobacco truck overturned on the Rockville-Tal-cottville road Thursday night, will be an example that will be pointed to at hearings at the next session of the State Legislature when efforts will be made to change the state law governing the employment of children.

No time is being lost in getting together material to present in support of the claim that the conditions that have existed should not be allowed to continue and the Connecticut Humane Society has its agents in the field inspecting the working conditions, checking up on complaints that are now being received and what they will be able to present will have much, it is expected, bearing on the action taken at the time the proposed changes in the law governing the employment of children is presented.

Conditions Found There was a conference in Hartford yesterday in which the officers of the Connecticut Humane Society met with welfare workers and at the conference it is said that the motor vehicle commissioner was also present. The investigation that is now being conducted will, it is expected, result in some arrests and test cases made.

It is claimed that the conditions under which the children have been made to work is inhuman. One of the reasons that was placed on the children was that they were being gathered from a whole tobacco row before they could leave it to go to even take a drink, that a violation of this rule meant their discharge and if they were discharged there was no method provided for transportation for them to their homes. They would not be paid until the day's work was done in the evening and it would be necessary for them to either walk home, or wait for the truck in the evening.

Kicked in the Stomach One of the cases that is now being investigated is a claim that one of the boys who was employed in the work on tobacco at one of the large plantations in Tolland county was assaulted because of his doing something that did not please one of the owners. It is alleged that he was kicked in the stomach. This has been reported to the Humane Society and investigation is under way. Arrests for this act are expected this week.

Not Law Intent It is pointed out by those who are now working for a change in the law regulating the working hours and children that the intent of the law is being violated.

The law at present does not allow children to work under fourteen years of age under any condition, only on farm work. It is also necessary to secure a working certificate to do this. When the law was enacted there was a big opposition from the farmers, who are in the majority at the sessions of the Connecticut Legislature.

Those who were working for a change in the age limit were unable to get through their measure only by compromising with the farmer, who set up the claim that it would prevent them from employing their children on farms that they owned, which would be a hardship. They also said that it would prevent children of neighbors assisting in the harvesting of crops which was often done.

The work on a farm was considered a healthy occupation and it was claimed that a child would be benefited and not injured by healthy out of door work. Under these conditions the law was passed exempting the children from violation of the law while working on farms. It is now claimed that the intent of the law never was such as to make possible the engaging of hundreds of boys and girls of ages ranging from eight or nine years up to fifteen years nor was it even thought that they would be confined into auto trucks and taken fifteen to twenty miles for the work. All this information is being secured and a visit has already been made to every tobacco plantation in this section. Working conditions are being investigated by the Humane Society and there are sure to be many interesting developments already assuring this effort as one of the outstanding matters that will come before the next session of the Legislature.

DANBURY ROUNDS UP REAL BANDIT GANG

Twelve Now Under Arrest; Members Had Been Operating for Years. Danbury, Conn., Aug. 1.—Police here said today that they had rounded up a real bandit gang that had been operating for years against an alleged bandit gang that the officers say has been operating throughout upper Fairfield county and Putnam county, New York, for years. A twelve-man gang was rounded up today when Louis Saunders, operator of a small hat finishing factory, was charged with buying stolen hats, refinishing them in his plant, and selling them.

SMITH GOES BACK TO HIS DESK AGAIN

(Continued from Page 1.) and the first part of September when he will launch his active campaign. One of the first decisions which the governor is expected to make upon his return to Albany, is whether Senator Key Pittman of Nevada will act in the dual capacity of the notification ceremony of formally notifying the governor of his nomination and also presiding as chairman. It is understood the governor may decide to invite Franklin D. Roosevelt, who placed him in nomination at the Houston convention, to preside at the notification meeting.

On his return to New York today the governor, at the invitation of Secretary of State Robert Moses, will make a brief inspection of Deer Park on the southern shore of Long Island. Moses is chairman of the Long Island Park Commission and also head of the State Council of Parks.

The governor is especially interested in Deer Park because of the long battle he had with the Republican Legislature in his effort to obtain sufficient funds to purchase the park land. While here on his vacation, the governor has refused to comment on the recent attack made on him by William Allen White, Kansas editor, but he has indicated that a reply may be expected in the near future. He smiled when he learned that White had taken the part of his attack which charged him with voting to protect vice and gambling when he was a young Tammany Assemblyman.

G. O. P. EXPENSES

Washington, Aug. 1.—The Republicans will spend approximately $4,000,000 in the Hoover presidential campaign this year. This figure was estimated today by Hubert Work, national chairman, after a conference with J. R. Nutt, Cleveland, national treasurer, Jerome M. Mahan, New York, eastern treasurer, Rex Franklin, Fort, New Jersey, national secretary, and H. L. Gutterston, executive secretary.

PLANE MAKERS GATHER

Bridgeport, Aug. 1.—Four amphibian planes dropped into local waters today bearing airplane manufacturers who were guests of Bridgeport business men seeking to interest new industries in the city. C. B. D. Collier landed at Devon and then took a motor to Black Rock Yacht Club, while Major General James E. Peche, U. S. A., Captain Ira E. Baker, U. S. A., and Douglas Havens landed at Black Rock. Passengers in the three planes included F. Trubee Davidson, assistant secretary of war; F. B. Barlow, Igor Sikorsky and Henry White.

TWO KILLED IN GUN FIGHT

Framenna, Ohio, Aug. 1.—Two men were killed and a third was probably fatally wounded in a gun battle with the sheriff of Portage county today when he sought to arrest the trio as suspected chicken thieves. Answering a call that chicken thieves were operating near here, Sheriff J. P. Ferry and a deputy encountered the three men, who resisted arrest. One of the group knocked the sheriff down and while lying on the ground the latter opened fire.

AMERICA EAGER TO ENTER PACT TO OUTLAW WAR

(Continued from Page 1.) It will contain no figures, and will be in the nature of a principle set up, leaving the actual treaty containing definite limitation on naval construction to be filled in there. The process will be so long, it was believed at the State Department, that there would be no occasion for the United States to become involved before the normal time to consider renewal or revision of the Washington agreement in 1932. The United States was pictured as being more firmly entrenched in the Harding-Hughes policy which resulted in the Washington 5-6-3 agreement, and would go even further with enthusiasm provided a party could be maintained with Great Britain. No one contends, among State Department officials that actual parity exists now. The State Department's unexpected view that what broke up the Geneva disarmament conference a year ago was Britain's unwillingness to accept anything which would deprive her of the actual supremacy she enjoyed under the Washington conference, together with a determination by the United States that nothing would be accepted in this country that "it not at least restore the content of the 5-6-3 agreement. Continued insistence by Great Britain for her interpretation of that instrument may act as a bar to a new agreement in 1931, it was felt in American Diplomatic circles.

CARPENTER INJURED ON CHENEY HOUSE JOB

Harry Kanehl of 189 West Center street, employed by Gustave Schreiber and Sons as a carpenter, suffered a fractured left leg this afternoon while at work in the construction of the remodelled Philip Cheney home on Hartford Road. Kanehl was at work on the interior of the house moving heavy doors when they fell over on him pinning him to the floor and breaking his leg.

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUERS TO WAGE OWN CAMPAIGN

(Continued from Page 1.) out regard to whether it would encourage Democratic Drys to vote for Smith in the belief that a Dry Congress would "handout" him or whether it might convince Republican Wets that it would be a futile thing to desert Hoover in the vain hope of bringing back beer. Senate Statistics At the present time, McBride said, the Senate shows 74 per cent wet among the Republicans and 71 per cent dry among the Democrats, while the House as a whole is 75 per cent dry.

McBride backed up the charges made by William Allen White against Gov. Smith, as revealed by the printed statements of William Allen White, of Kansas, taken directly from the Legislative records and giving page and date, satisfies every one who believes in prohibition that Smith is not a fit man to serve in the White House," said McBride.

"It shows him to have served the liquor and lawless element in subservience for the 20 years he has been in public life, and the falsity of his telegram to the Houston convention in which he stated that he favored the enforcement of law and that he had felt all his life that the saloon should be a defunct institution. "It shows that any promise he (Smith) makes to work for anything short of the return of the saloon is simply an effort to get votes and that he has felt all his life that the saloon should be a defunct institution."

JAPAN PROTESTS

Peking, Aug. 1.—Japan today sent a note to the Nationalist government at Nanking protesting against the Nationalists' cancellation of the old Chinese-Japanese commercial treaty. It is understood Japan questions China's right to cancel the treaty and expresses willingness to continue negotiations for a new pact. The note is also said to express Japan's determination to safeguard Japanese rights under the old treaty.

CHILDREN BURNED

Owosso, Mich., Aug. 1.—Two small children are dead today as the result of a fire on the farm of Lawrence Kilpatrick, near here. The victims were Lenore Jane Kilpatrick, 5, and her 2-year-old brother, Richard, children of Kilpatrick. The tots were playing in a large barn. Suddenly straw in the barn caught fire. The entire interior became a roaring furnace. The children were burned while a threshing crew outside stood by powerlessly.

Bridgeport, Conn., Aug. 1.—Whitless Body Works of Stamford will move their plant here to occupy the former Olderman plant on Howard avenue, according to announcement here today.

LABOR REFUSES TO ENDORSE AL TO OUTLAW WAR

Democrats Give Up Fight to Get A. F. of L. Members Into Line. Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 1.—Advocates of Gov. Alfred E. Smith abandoned their fight for the American Federation of Labor endorsement in the national campaign today when confronted with proceedings of the 1928 federation convention at Detroit relative to the labor policies of General Motors, of which John J. Rasco, chairman of the Democratic national committee, is a vice-president and director.

A second element in the collapse of the Smith offensive in the pre-campaign meetings of the federation's executive council here was the record of the same convention in rejecting the resolution proposed in the name of the New York State Federation endorsing Governor Smith for the presidency. Although a majority of the executive council of twelve has favored Hoover from the outset of the disorganizing campaign, four members who have aggressively favored modification of the Volstead Act in recent labor conventions delayed reaffirmation of the federation's traditional non-partisan policy in the hope of securing a favorable recommendation to the Smith candidacy.

MAN BURNED TO DEATH IN BROOKLYN BLAZE

Twelve Others in House Saved by Firemen—Luna Park Ablaze. New York, Aug. 1.—One man was killed in a fire believed to have been of incendiary origin in Williamsburg early today after a policeman and a civilian had rescued five persons. The victim was John Donbrowsky, of 51 Grand street. His wife was saved.

Donbrowsky was at the window waiting to be rescued by way of a ladder when he suddenly darted back into the burning building, the cause of which had been out of sight. Twenty minutes later firemen discovered his body in a rear room where he had died of suffocation. Coney Island, famous amusement center, was threatened with destruction in another fire that started in Luna Park. A fire broke out in the Luna Park building, which was in the process of being demolished, and the fire spread to the Luna Park building, which was in the process of being demolished.

St. Catherine's, Ontario, Aug. 1.—At least nine men were killed when thirty workmen were precipitated to the bottom of the Welland Canal today when a steel gate at lock number six collapsed, according to advices reaching here this afternoon.

GEN. NOBLE WARMLY RECEIVED IN ITALY

Rome, Aug. 1.—General Umberto Nobile and his ill-fated polar expedition in the dirigible Italia, which arrived here last night from the Arctic, showed grim traces of his sufferings and hardships when he appeared in public today. He had drawn and he walked slowly with bent shoulders. General Nobile and his companions refused to make any announcement until their formal report is in the hands of Premier Mussolini. The warm and cordial welcome given the explorers here more than made up for the coldness of the greeting they got in Scandinavia.

PLAN OCEAN HOP

Paris, Aug. 1.—Polish aviators Major Louis Idzikowski and Major Casimir Kubala will hop off at Le Bourget Field for the United States tomorrow morning at five o'clock, weather permitting.

FLOOD REPORTED

Thorald, Canada, Aug. 1.—Reports were received here this afternoon that the locks at the Welland canal collapsed and that a number of lives had been lost. The report as to casualties could not be immediately verified.

FIRE IN NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Conn., Aug. 1.—Fire of unknown origin today did damage of about $20,000 to the plant of the Reliance Steel Company, 106-108 Water street, and about $5,000 to stock of the Wallingford Lumber company and to a store room of the Merchants National Bank, all housed in a loft building.

MORE BOMBS-TERRORIZE RESIDENTS OF CHICAGO

Three Exploded in Homes and Business Places—No One Injured. Chicago, Aug. 1.—Bombs again shook sections of Chicago today. Windows were broken and other minor damage done when a black powder bomb was exploded in an apartment building owned by Dr. Max Thork. Shortly after another bomb was exploded at a photographer's plant. Small damage was done but investigating officers later discovered three sticks of dynamite in the basement of the building. Police were unable to account for the cause of the bombings. Earlier in the day a bomb wrecked the home of A. D. Bryant, said by police to be a "strike-breaker." Labor "bombers" were responsible for the Bryant home blast, the authorities said.

GEN. NOBLE WARMLY RECEIVED IN ITALY

Rome, Aug. 1.—General Umberto Nobile and his ill-fated polar expedition in the dirigible Italia, which arrived here last night from the Arctic, showed grim traces of his sufferings and hardships when he appeared in public today. He had drawn and he walked slowly with bent shoulders. General Nobile and his companions refused to make any announcement until their formal report is in the hands of Premier Mussolini. The warm and cordial welcome given the explorers here more than made up for the coldness of the greeting they got in Scandinavia.

HOOPER'S VACATION IS NEARING CLOSE To Leave Mountains Tonight for Return to San Francisco.

Shasta Springs, Calif., Aug. 1.—After leading his party across the Shastkiy Range by moonlight, Hoover today went fishing for rainbow trout in the lee of snow capped Mount Shasta. The Republican nominee, after getting a catch of small trout in Beaver Creek, a tributary of the Klamath river, quit his mountain camp near Hornbrook, Calif., and led a cavalcade of motor cars over the Shastkiy mountains. The ride was made by moonlight and on most of the journey the white topped Mount Shasta was in view. The nominee with Dr. Ray Lyman Wilbur, president of the Stanford University, and a newspaperman, caught 35 rainbow trout, most of them small. Hoover kept the fish hidden all afternoon, as he didn't want to display a catch of such small fish. He served them, however, for dinner to prove they really had been caught.

New Headquarters. After reaching this mountain resort, shortly before nine o'clock, Hoover made new headquarters at a hotel within sight of Mount Shasta. A mountain stream called "Shasta Springs" because of its source, ran directly beside the hotel. He rose with the dawn, for the fourth successive day, and left for Pitt river, a tributary of the Sacramento, to try his skill once more on mountain trout. The nominee will leave here tonight on his return journey to Palo Alto where he will remain for the next ten days prior to making his acceptance speech there August 11. His party of forty five friends, newspapermen and photographers, will journey back by special train, reaching San Francisco early tomorrow morning for a brief ride to Palo Alto.

HOLD CABARET GIRL IN GANGSTER MURDER

New York, Aug. 1.—A pretty brunette cabaret girl, whose name was carefully guarded, was questioned today by District Attorney Deodato of Brooklyn, and high police officials who are hot on the trail of new clues in the gang murder of Frankie Yale, Brooklyn racketeer.

This was learned as the Kings county Grand Jury was reported about to indict members of Scarface Al Capone's booze and vice band in the killing, and as the names of three Capone henchmen who came here just before the crime, became known. Yesterday, it was learned, but was kept under guard last night in a Manhattan hotel and taken to Brooklyn before noon for questioning.

"King" Decides To Let Law Take Own Course

Sokoloski Wants to Get His Cow, Pigs and Chickens Back But Believes Court Action Is Better Than Fists.

Gene Tunney as a fighter may re-tire, but Frank Sokoloski, the de-throned "king" of Homestead Park refused to admit that he is not a fighter. Once again he has bobbed up and this time he is asking the assistance of the law to recover for him the right to own a cow, four pigs and twenty-two chickens that were his before his enforced vacation at the Hartford County Jail.

Frank finished his term at the Hartford County Jail early in July and was back in Manchester but a few days when there was trouble brewing in Homestead Park. It was caused by his claim that he was still the owner of a cow, four pigs and the chickens.

When Frank was picked up by the arm of the law his throne was left without a head and in his domain there were chickens, pigs and a cow that had to be attended to. Arrangements were made at that time whereby the stock was taken by a neighbor, Michael Bog-gine of Seymour street, in the Homestead park section.

Michael cared for the stock, looked after the chickens and was awarded the hen fruit for his trou-ble. The pigs, it was natural to suppose, would become fat and the pork that they might be turned into would also be a source of income in the future. For four months as Frank lay in jail he thought of the pigs and the chickens. He could hear, in his dreams, the grunt of the pig, the cackle of the chicken and the mooing of the cow.

All was sweet music for him for he figured, there would be some thing to start with from one of the first things that he did when he was liberated was to start an inventory. He was not pleased with the progress made towards pork by the pigs, the cow looked at him with big soft watery eyes and he knew at once that the cow recognized him and was glad to see him back. The chickens cackled and then Frank made known that he was ready to claim his own.

He was surprised when he was informed that he was not to get them. Bog-gine claimed that they had been given to him and for the trouble that he had in taking care of them he was the owner and that Frank had no claim at all. Frank jumped in the air, threw down his cap and hopped on it, his usual method of announcing that he was angry and was going to start something. But he did not start. Bog-gine did not give him the opportunity as he stole Frank's thunder by getting to the police station and making known that Frank was on the warpath.

A police officer was dispatched to Homestead Park and Frank was notified that it would be bad for him if he "started anything." Frank thought twice and has since come to the conclusion that other methods might be tried. He again called on Bog-gine and tried to reason with him in an effort to get back the stock. Bog-gine had a bill for feed that was high and Frank tried to point out that Bog-gine had had all the eggs produced, but Bog-gine still claimed that it would not meet the expenses of the feed.

Frank is to counter with the claim that the stock was not properly cared for, that they have been neglected and that this has reduced the market value of the pigs and that any charge that might be made for their keep is an unjust one, that the loss to him is greater than the cost of the care and that under the conditions he was willing to give the ownership in Fee Simple, or some such manner.

The courts will decide the question. Frank is not taking any chance in taking the law into his own hands as was his method when he was resigning king at Home-stead Park.

ARREST DRIVER TWICE FOR ONE DAY'S CRASHES

Former Local Man Gets Into Odd Mixup in Middletown and in Cromwell.

James Harrison, formerly of Center street was before the Middle-town City police court this morning as a result of trouble in that city Sunday night when it was charged that he failed to stop at an accident and continued to drive to Cromwell where the driver of the car that was damaged in Middle-town was assaulted.

In the report sent out by the Middletown police on Sunday night it was stated that a Chrysler road-ster carrying the registration No. P8326 had figured in an accident at the underpass in Middletown and that the driver of the car did not stop to investigate the extent of the damage. The driver of the car that was damaged jumped on to the running board of the car that struck him although it did not stop until they reached Cromwell where he was pushed in the face and knocked from the car. Police were asked to try and locate the driver, the car being registered as being owned by Gertrude Nissell of 35 Edwards street, Hartford.

Later on in the evening it was learned that the car had not ar-rived in Hartford due to the fact that the driver had been arrested in Rocky Hill for reckless driving, having crowded, it was said, another automobile off the road and for this was being held in Rocky Hill. The address of the driver, James Harrison, was given as 1654 Main street, Hartford. In the justice court at Rocky Hill last night he was fined $35 and costs on the charge of reckless driving and operating without a license. He was at once taken to Middletown and held for court there this morning.

In the Middletown court this morning he was charged with op-erating without a license and evad-ing responsibility. The troubles are not over for Cromwell authori-ties have also stepped in. They are going to have somebody tried for the assault that was committed there by Harrison through Harri-looked for a time although Harri-son was going to have this laid at his door, too, but yesterday it was learned that it was not he who pushed the man from the car, but Earl Brady of Hartford and Brady has also been arrested.

FORMER SHERIFF FRINK NOW MADE CONSTABLE

Developments in Andover Are Being Watched Closely Because of Personal Feelings.

Adison Frink, former deputy sheriff of Andover, who failed reappointment a year ago last June and who made an effort to be ap-pointed to the state police depart-ment, offering to serve without a salary, has been named as a deputy constable by the selectmen of An-dover and yesterday was given his badge of authority.

Those who are familiar with the conditions leading up to the dropp-ing of Frink as a deputy sheriff are expecting interesting de-velopments to come out of Andover from now on. The chief reason for the failure of Sheriff Fred Vinton to reappoint Frink was claimed to be due to what was considered by some as his actions in the arrest of Judge Edward M. Yeoman's daughter who was operating an automobile with-out a Connecticut driver's license. The case attracted the much attention and Andover was divided on the right of the deputy to act, some claiming that he was acting in a personal way, while others took the stand that he was performing his duty as an officer. The question is still open to de-bate in Andover.

SUES FOR RETURN OF AUTO DEPOSIT

Purchaser Brings Action Against Pickett Company Because of Price Change.

The interesting question of whether or not the purchaser of an automobile at a stipulated price can be forced to pay more money should the factory price increase before time of delivery was present-ed before Judge Raymond A. John-son in a $100 civil suit at the local police court this morning. De-cision was reserved.

Charles H. Small of 363 Keeney street, truckdriver for Cheney Brother, contracted with the Pickett Motor Sales Company of 22 Maple street to buy a motor car automobile April 9 last. A deposit of $100 was made, leaving a bal-ance of $495. It was agreed that the car be delivered by April 14. A few days later, Charles J. Pickett, proprietor of the business, received notice of an increase of $100 in the type of automobile Mr. Small had ordered.

Refuses Car. However, upon being notified of the increase in price, Mr. Small who was going to trade in an old car as part payment, refused to pay the additional money. The car was ready for delivery, Mr. Pickett said, within the specified time and Mr. Small was even offered the car with the salesman's commission deduct-ed. He maintained, however, that the contracted price must stand. Falling to reach an agreement, Mr. Small consulted Attorney William S. Hyde and civil action for the return of $100 deposit. At-torney William J. Shea represented Mr. Pickett.

Clause Question. The crux of the whole matter hinges on a clause below the signa-ture of the parties concerned in the contract. Attorney Hyde contend-ed that a clause of this nature did not have any bearing on the case while the opposing counsel cited a few Connecticut supreme court de-cisions in support of his case. In these cases, clauses below signa-tures were regarded as a part of the contract. Attorney Shea fur-ther contended that had the price of the automobile decreased, Mr. Small would have been entitled, and could have demanded the re-duced price. Mr. Hyde, however, argued that the specified contract price could not be altered. Mr. Shea countered with the statement that the contract fixed the price in the alternative.

The clause in question at the bottom of the contract says in effect that all delivery prices, at which time the revision in the contract was made, Hyde maintained that the clause was included in the contract as a specific benefit for the vendor and not the vendee. He claims that it is absolutely unfair to hold a pur-chaser responsible for any changes in automobile prices from the con-tracted amount.

To Study Case. Judge Johnson said that the case was a matter for further study and consequently reserved his decision. The outcome is awaited with con-siderable interest by local auto-mo-bile dealers and purchasers be-cause of the bearing it may have on future similar matters. It is also somewhat similar to the Ford car case regarding deposits, with failure to deliver as explained in The Herald yesterday.

Rockville

Deputy Coroner Michael D. O'Connell of Stafford Springs an-nounced today that the inquest in the death of the three boys who were hurled to death in a tomato truck accident on the Rockville-Talcottville Road Thursday night, which was to have been held yester-day, has been postponed until Friday morning to enable the State Police to complete their investiga-tions.

The hearing will be held at 9 o'clock in the Memorial Building and a number of children that were in the accident will testify. Joe Radwala, driver of the truck, will be before the Rockville City Court next Monday morning charged with "wilful operation of a motor vehicle, causing death." He is now under bond of $5,000.

The City Council held a regular meeting Tuesday evening with Mayor Forster presiding. Two peti-tions for new houses were received and permits granted. As all bids which were opened a week ago for a new looking building exceed-ed the appropriation, an offer by archi-tect J. Henry McCray to erect the building for $6900. was approved by the council. The building will be erected on City property in the rear of the Town Hall and when completed will be occupied jointly by the Police Department and the Public Works Department. The Fire Committee were authorized to equip the fire apparatus with new tires, purchase of saws and axes, the appropriation was received. The Public Works Committee reported work had been started on Grove street which is to be resurfaced, 2200 feet of new curb has been in-stalled. New storm sewers are be-ing laid on Tolland avenue, prepa-ratory to the rebuilding of that street from East street to the Tol-land line.

Theater Nears Completion The Palace Theater which is be-ing remodeled and modernized will reopen soon. The decorations are nearly completed and the lighting fixtures all installed. The installa-tion of the Kilgen Organ will take place next week. Rockville patrons have been promised a beautiful re-modeled theater.

statements also were turned back as being without validity. The Pres-ident came to the Wisconsin mth-woods for his annual vacation on the eve of the Kansas City conven-tion with the "draft" talk still cir-culating. Noticeably, he was out of sorts and inclined to be snappish with all those about him.

The nomination of Herbert Hoover marked the turning point, both in his attitude and his physical con-dition, those about him say.

In seven months, Mr. Coolidge will retire, regarding the outcome of next November's election. Already there has been much spec-ulation as to the future he will per-sue. It has been rumored persist-ently that he will become chair-man of the Board of United States Steel Corporation, the story being that J. P. Morgan took the job tem-porarily when Judge Elbert Gary died on the condition the President take it over when out of office.

NEW ASSOCIATE SECURED AT REC

Miss Viola Lalonde of New Haven Is to Succeed Miss Calhoun.

Miss Viola Lalonde of 1469 Chapel street, New Haven, a young woman with wide experience in physical culture work, will succeed Miss Ruth Calhoun, who retired recently as associate director of the Recreation Centers here. It was learned today, Miss Lalonde will not begin her new duties until Sep-tember 15. She is coming here with a very satisfactory recommendation.

Miss Lalonde was graduated from Holyoke High school in 1919 and was a member of the Benson-erson Preparatory College in New York state for one year. She studied elocution and dancing at private studios for two years and in 1927 was graduated from Dr. E. H. Arnold's Normal School of Gymnastics at New Haven. While at Arnold's, Miss Lalonde was president of her class for two years; recipient of the Cross of Honor; was a member of the school or-chestra, dramatics; became eligi-ble for Pen Society by writing and a member of the Sword Society by winning the Morris and English Folk dancing contest. In athletics, she received numerals in basket-ball, baseball and hockey. She was a member of the American Red Cross Life Saving Corps.

Following her graduation from Arnold's College, Miss Lalonde was given employment as a member of the faculty of that institu-tion. She gave instruction in gym-nastics, public speaking, swim-ming, tennis, archery, dancing and crafts. She was head-councillor of Arnold's College camp during the fall season. Other similar and val-uable experience was had at Camp Truda in Oxford, Me., and Mam-moth Camp in Yellowstone Park, Wyoming.

Miss Lalonde has also the bene-fit of two years of practice in pub-lic schools and playgrounds at New Haven, coaching and officiating in-door and outdoor sports. While at Arnold's, Miss Lalonde was also editor of the school paper and al-so contributed to the New Haven Register. Previous to entering Ar-nold's she employed by the govern-ment performing clerical and secretarial duties.

SANDY BEACH INCREASES IN POPULARITY RAPIDLY

To say that Sandy Beach Park and Ballroom at Crystal Lake is a typical Joyland is expressing it mildly and both the beach and ball-room are becoming increasingly popular with each succeeding week. A deft and skillful combination of excellent dance music with vaudeville and other special attractions has built up a steady patronage that averages over 500 at each dance and has run as high as 900. Manchester-Rockville Nite drew a crowd of 650 to the ballroom.

This week there has been ar-ranged a more elaborate program than has yet been offered. Thurs-day evening there will be a special attraction of three high class vaudeville acts that are sure to please the crowd that will attend the dance to enjoy the modern and old-fashioned dance program with music by Max Kabrick and his ten piece dance band. Thursday evening is sure to prove one of the big nights of the season at Sandy Beach and the attractions have been booked with the thought in mind that those who visit the park and do not care to dance will begiven a treat that will be worth while. Numerous parties have already made arrangements to attend the affair Thursday evening. Among them will be a group of 125 from the A&P stores of Springfield, Mass., and a party of 150 from the cottages at the lake. TOBACCO FIELD BOYS

In their efforts to reform conditions likely to lead to a repetition of the Rockville road tobacco truck tragedy, numerous well intentioned persons in this part of the state are in danger of precipitating a serious confusion of issues, by which they may do more harm than good. Not content with joining in a worthy and much needed movement for better regulation of the transportation of tobacco plantation workers, these people have begun to enter vigorous protests against the employment of young children in the tobacco fields, and to agitate for legislation that would render such employment illegal.

In the opinion of the Herald any such movement is far more likely to prove injurious to the children concerned than it is to prove beneficial. How far ahead are some of the protestants against child labor in the tobacco plantations is illustrated by a letter written to a Hartford paper the other day by some indignant citizen who demanded that, somehow or other, measures be provided to prevent the employment of children on work that ought by rights to be given to the many unemployed men throughout the region. This sort of argument, if extensively enough aired, is likely to create the impression, in parts of the country where tobacco field conditions are utterly unfamiliar, that Connecticut tobacco growers are actually using little boys and girls to do the work of adults.

Nothing is further from the truth. The small children, ten, eleven or twelve years old, who earn money in the tobacco fields do a kind of work that, if it were required to be done by adults, would compel an entirely different system of planting, with terrific waste of land-room; because it is only small children, with children's little hands, who can to any adequate effect perform the delicate function of removing the "sucker" sprouts from the plants. And it is practically only in this one activity that the little folks are employed.

It is easy to entertain the theory that a long day's work in the tobacco fields is too hard a task to impose, day after day, on a child of tender years; that the labor must necessarily be exhausting and harmful. But any person holding that theory is invited to take up a position at any of several points in Manchester where the plantation trucks pass after the day's work is done, and observe the general aspect of the children on their way home.

These truckloads of children are the best possible evidence that the work does them no harm, either in physical health or in spirits. The observer will see as lively, animated and altogether happy groups of youngsters as he can find anywhere outside a circus tent.

It is precisely this observation of the home-going boys and girls, summer day after summer day, year after year, that has completely convinced the Herald that protests against the employment of children in this branch of agriculture work, during vacation, are fatally mistaken.

This is entirely apart from the economic angle. This newspaper would not support the practice of employing such young children, no matter what the pecuniary benefit to their families, were it not wholly convinced that no slightest harm comes to the little folks. But not only is the occupation healthful, it is profitable to a great many families which would be seriously affected were they deprived of the summer earnings of the children. These earnings are not at all inconsiderable. Their pay is that of an adult laborer of less than a generation ago. In a great many cases it buys the little worker's clothes and shoes for his winter's schooling—and is greatly needed for that purpose.

Agitation to prevent child employment in the tobacco growing industry, were it successful, might deal a very serious blow to that activity, so essential to the prosperity of the Connecticut valley and to this particular neighborhood.

And it has not the slightest connection with the abuse which has grown up in connection with the illy regulated transportation system whose logical outcome was the catastrophe of last week on the Rockville road.

If the reformers who are belatedly interesting themselves in the welfare of the little tobacco workers will confine their efforts to an intelligent drive against reckless crowding of transport vehicles and reckless driving by speed-hungry contractor's employes, something immensely valuable may be accomplished. They will undoubtedly find themselves readily supported by all but a few of the tobacco planters, and by the general public.

It is wholly unnecessary and highly unwise to combine the question of protecting the youngsters' lives with an attempt to prevent them from leading useful and healthful outdoor existences during the summer vacation.

TUNNEY

In un-Shakespearean language, you have to hand it to Tunney. He is not the first heavyweight champion to retire from the ring voluntarily but he is the first to do so while the ice appeared to be thick enough to keep him from falling through. His swan song, too, does him more credit than many of the remarks about the prizefighting game recently attributed to him. It is not so everlastingly important, but it restores a somewhat willied regard for the young man that, in taking his departure from the ring, he did not express the feeling that he had been associating with a lot of birds for whom he had nothing but contempt. It was more fitting in the erudite Mr. Tunney to say that he has a "great affection" for boxing than to convey the impression that he considered it a mug's game and altogether beneath a person of his talents and intellectual attainments.

It is not well to speak harshly of the bridge that has carried one safely over, however bum a bridge it may have been. Though Tunney may indeed be now placed in a position financially and socially and even intellectually superior to the boxing game, it is nevertheless to be suspected that if he hadn't been an uncommonly good fighter in the prize ring he would still be a quite commonly disregarded young man in a shipping clerk's job. We have a serious doubt that Mr. Tunney would have climbed, at this early point in his life, very far from the shipping room on any such ladder as a partly educated young person's determination to find out what Shakespeare was all about.

Just the same Mr. Tunney's frankly high opinion of Mr. Tunney seems to be in many ways justified. Many folks will rejoice that he has sense enough to get out of the precarious business of prize-fighting before somebody came along big enough and smart enough to knock his block off and make a punch-goofy wreck out of a handsome and deserving young citizen.

THIS AUGUST

Introducing the eighth month of the year, which the Roman Emperor Augustus named after himself because it was his lucky month and because he had to have a month carrying his name in order to prove that he was just as big a person as Julius Caesar, who had earlier tacked his own moniker on to a month, calling it July.

Even then Augustus had to smash up an admirable arrangement of the first Caesar in order to have as big a month as his predecessor. Julius had arranged matters so that every alternate month should have thirty-one days, beginning with January, which arrangement would have made it unnecessary for untold millions of subsequent human beings, every time they wanted to know how many days were in a current month, to recite the lyric, "Thirty days hath September," etc.

The Julian deal only put 30 days in the eighth month, and that would never do for Augustus, so he peremptorily commanded that it be given another day, swiped elsewhere. That discommodated the thirty-one day alternation of Julius Caesar, but what did Augustus care? He made sure that throughout the ages everybody would have to write him and speak him for at least a twelfth part of every year. But he couldn't have guessed how many Americans would cuss him. For August has an evil repute. For hot, steamy mugginess and sour skies and too much sweat and laundry bills. This August ought to behave itself better. We had all its cussedness in July. Perhaps the shade of Julius Caesar has been at work to show that it could be just as mean, if it tried, as that of any young whipper-snapper of an Augustus that ever lived. Anyhow, we had all the August we needed in July. Now if we can just have a good, wholesome sunshiny July in August it will be all right with the most of us—what?

COLORED MOVIES

The Eastman company now undertakes to startle the world with a highly ingenious device whereby accurately colored motion pictures may be taken by anyone and shown, in the original colors, in the family living room. So far the world seems to be breathing regularly and running a normal pulse. It takes something more than the invention of a colored movie producer for amateurs to get up a lot of excitement nowadays.

Anyhow, the homemade dramatic movie machine will have a hustle somewhat to lick the automobile and the radio as a source of widespread family entertainment. We suspect it will have to hustle about the extent of sending around demonstrator salesmen with an offer to turn over the whole works, machine, films for a year's service, and the screen to project the pictures on, on a basis of a dollar down and a dollar when you catch 'em.

It is likely to be a year or two, at least, before the fad for making and taking homemade movies develops to the point of being the third major interest of the American people. Still, you never can tell.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Herald. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

BOOSTING FOR HEALTH

The patient who adheres strictly to his doctor's directions usually regains his health quickly. Even though most patients do adhere to their doctor's instructions, it is a noticeable fact that some of them get well more quickly than others. These patients who become well so quickly are enthusiastic, and continue to increase in health and happiness. Every once in a while they bring in a new patient to the doctor who treated them.

This booster type of patient responds more quickly than the average sick person because he not only practices dieting, but he talks about health and getting better. By teaching good habits of living to his friends, he has fixed these in his own mind so that they become a part of him. You can see the point. This veritable teaching of others helps to establish a regular healthful regime deeply rooted in the subconscious memory. The patient may feel justly proud of these accomplishments. By explaining these things to his friends, he has become more and more interested in the necessity of the right diet and exercise, and through careful investigation he has become more fully and intelligently conscious of the advantages which come from living a healthful life.

It has been truthfully said that one only begins to learn a thing thoroughly when he attempts to teach it to others. If you are desirous of being still more benefited from the advice contained in this column, you must not only follow the advice literally, by practicing the proven good rules which I give you, but you should do your best to help others by bringing these facts to their attention.

We get from this world just about as much as we are willing to give, and it is a good policy to point out the right path to others. If you were in the dark yourself, you would appreciate a guiding hand. There is a very close connection between spoken words and memory. Did you ever wonder why you cannot remember events of your childhood that occurred before two or three years of age? The reason is because at that early age you could not talk about what you were doing, and therefore your memory of events was not as thoroughly impressed upon your mind as later when you learned to do things and talk about them at the same time. As you grow older, your memory mind becomes stronger because those things that are spoken about are visualized and remembered.

The one who is sick will only make himself worse if he repeats over and over again the stories of his illness and pain, for disease is fostered by those who develop habits of complaining about their troubles. How much better to develop the health habit of talking about wholesome ideas of diet, fresh air and exercise, and in this way build them into the subconsciousness so that they will become a living part of your personality.

Questions and Answers. Question: Mrs. H. K. writes: "I am troubled with a peeling of the skin on my face, particularly on my nose and on my chin. Could it be that the face powder and cream I use do not agree with it, or is it a condition to be treated internally instead of externally?" Answer: Most skin troubles should be treated internally through dieting and not externally by the application of remedies. I will be glad to send you an article on this subject if you will send a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope the next time you write. Question: J. L. D. asks: "What is 'Pumpernickel' bread?" Answer: Pumpernickel is the

WAPPING

Mrs. Eugene Bentley, of Pleasant Valley, has returned recently from a few days visit with her sister, in New Haven. Mrs. John Matchulat and her daughter, Miss Mildred Matchulat and her brother Gus Notch left last Saturday morning by automobile for a week's stay with friends and relatives at Hyde Park, and Boston, Massachusetts. All who attended the Federated church last Sunday evening felt well repaid for doing so, for there was a sextette of colored singers who came from the Cullman plantation and sang six selections, which were certainly enjoyed by all present. There was also eighty-three lantern slide pictures on the subject of "Following the Axe, the Leins, and the Shovel, and the Plow," which was given by Rev. Truman H. Woodward. Mr. and Mrs. George Nevins of Dickinson street, Springfield, Mass., were the guests of their brother's family, Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Nevins of this village last Sunday.

A THOUGHT

For the children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light.—Luke 16:8. When a man seems to be wise, it is merely that his follies are proportionate to his age and fortune.—Rochefoucauld.

Charlie Curtis Is Dry, But Uncle Noah Declares "Whiskey Made Him"

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Senator Charles Curtis, Republican candidate for vice-president, is a dry, but...

Noah Eli Curtis, 81, uncle with whom Senator Curtis lived when a youth.

"I always did tell Charlie that whiskey made him," insists Noah Eli Curtis, 81-year-old uncle of the Kansas senator.

"It was this way, Charlie, early in his career, had a law partner who liked to drink hard liquor. He would get drunk in the morning and Charlie would have to do all the work alone at the court house.

"Charlie got his big chance that way. Uncle Noah, who lives part of the time with a son near Packington and the rest at the Union Soldiers' Home here, is a brother of O. A. Curtis, the nominee's father. He remembers keenly the early years of Curtis' life when 'Charlie' came to live at his home.

"During the eight years he lived with us the main thing he did was to ride, and he was a good jockey, too," says Uncle Noah, who started riding racers when he was seven years old and he'd stick like a burr.

"He went to New Orleans once and was paid $500 for riding a winner. He had a good jockey, too," says Uncle Noah, who started riding racers when he was seven years old and he'd stick like a burr.

"I can remember lending Charlie a dollar for an apple basket so he could sell apples to pay for his schooling. He sold papers, too, and later on studied law with the biggest lawyer in Topeka, H. B. Case.

"Charlie never would take a

GLACIERS ONCE IN CALIFORNIA, GEOLOGIST VIEW

Los Angeles.—Six glaciers, or perhaps more, at one time existed in the San Gabriel mountains of Southern California, according to William J. Miller, Professor of Geology at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Miller, who previously had advanced the theory that glaciers were at one time common in the mountains only a few miles from the present cities of Los Angeles and Pasadena, recently completed a comprehensive study of the southwestern section of the San Gabriel range.

As a result of his original survey, Miller located the largest glacier as having occupied the Pines Flat Basin at the head of the North Fork of the San Gabriel River. Considerable quantities of moraine material, the detritus deposited by glaciers, may still be seen in this locality.

Points to Evidence Other glaciers, located at that time included a field centering about San Gabriel Peak, particularly in upper Bear Canyon, and at the head of Eaton Canyon, above Altadena. Miller also decided that the evidence tended to point to the possibility that small glaciers also existed both on Mount Wilson and Old Baldy.

"It is probable that the canyon tributary to Big Santa Anita Canyon on the east side of Mount Wilson contained a glacier about one and one-half miles long, as suggested by the cirque-like basin at its head and by what is probably a terminal boulder-marine at Sturtevant Camp," Miller says as a result of his latest studies.

"Echo Rock at Mount Wilson forms part of the rim of the cirque. A cirque-like basin suggests that a small glacier lay on the south flank of Mount Wilson at the head of the west fork of Big Santa Anita Canyon. Possibly one or two other small glaciers occupied the flanks of the mountain, especially on the north side."

Extensive Study The great cliff on the north face of Strawberry Peak, whose altitude is 6,150 feet, shows evidence on its face of having been scoured by glacial action, and this theory is supported by the deposit of boulders and detritus at its base, according to Miller. He also believes that a glacier may have existed in upper San Antonio Canyon, flowing to at least a mile below Camp Baldy.

Miller is the first geologist to make an extensive study of the San Gabriel chain. Until his study appeared it was a matter of comment among scientists that a section of mountainous country 1,200 square miles in extent and so close to a large city should have received so little attention from geologists. Miller's work therefore ranks as a pioneer study of the physiographic history of the southwestern half of the San Gabriel Mountains and the Verdugo and San Rafael ranges.

EXPENSIVE LAZINESS Lancaster, Pa.—The next time Charles Clark wants to fix a window screen he'll make sure of his footing. Recently, because he was too lazy to get out of bed, he just rolled over against the window and tried to adjust the screen. But he lost his balance and fell out on the lawn, 30 feet below.

WORLD WAR REMINDER Lille, France.—A possible catastrophe was averted at Libercourt recently when a section gang disintegrated a nest of German shells, in calibre form 3 to 10 inches, buried under the railway tracks. The shells were connected with electric detonators, but the wires leading to them had apparently been cut by the advancing allied forces ten years ago.

TO QUIT MAKING HALF DOLLAR IN ALL U. S. MINTS

Denver.—Half dollars, like silver dollars, will be unknown within a few years, according to Robert J. Grant, "Boss" of the United States Mints, who was recently on a visit here.

The smaller paper dollar bill, soon to be placed in circulation, will accelerate the exit of the silver dollar, and, according to Grant, people would rather have two quarters than one fifty cent piece.

"No half dollars have been coined in the east in the last six years," said Grant. "The coins of silver dollars has almost stopped."

SPANIEL CORNERS—ANCIENT TURTLE Saranac Lake, N. Y.—Midget, a pet water spaniel, owned by Mrs. A. J. Campbell, is credited with running down a 20-pound snap-turtle. Tracks in the sand indicated that the dog went after the turtle when it ventured into shallow water and drove it onto the beach.

Natives, who ought to know, credit the huge snapper with more than 100 years of existence. He was captured when campers heard the turmoil created by the dog, which was barking most vehemently while retreating about its quarry.

CONGRESS WILL MAKE U. S. 'SAFE' FOR PROSPERITY

Washington.—Congress will be confronted with the task of "making the country safe for prosperity" in its next session.

While similar proposals have been numerous in the past, they have lacked the powerful support necessary to place them in the forefront of legislation. Now, Sen. Wesley Jones (R) of Washington, the chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, has proposed to secure action.

Jones' plan is based upon the idea that it is foolish for the government, whose credit is good at all times, to spend huge sums in internal improvements while the country is in prosperous condition. He would create a huge reserve fund to be used when statistical information reveals a real slack in industry.

Expected Support Other members of Congress who made similar suggestions. It is known, are hopeful of obtaining serious consideration of their measures.

The success of the present federal building program, which really got well under way at a time when many cities were catching up with their building needs in the post-war period, is believed to be responsible for an increasing sentiment for the plan.

With a bill already reported and on the Senate calendar, Sen. Jones believes that business of the short session will be so light that he can have the measure given preferred status.

"Industrial depression seem to come and go in cycles," explained Sen. Jones. "Why, we may not exactly know. Their prevention is most desirable and any action that will retard or prevent their recurrence will be beneficial to everybody and to every industry. One of the greatest evils from these depressions is unemployment."

There are many governmental activities that can employ labor. If they can be so directed as to furnish increased employment when an industrial depression is threatened or is under way the result must be good.

Advance Planning "The principle of advance planning of public works so that expenditures may be made to influence in a good way employment conditions in the country has been accepted by all who have given it serious thought. Its application by the federal government will encourage municipal and state governments to apply it in their case."

Flapperism Is Only Bubbling Nature; Even Its Critics Are Also Victims

Los Angeles.—Let the flapper's critic beware! According to Dr. Samuel D. Price of New York City, associate general secretary of the world's Sunday School Association recently in convention here, everyone is more or less flapperish.

Flapping may be done with a lipstick or rouge. It even may be done with a bouffant.

And—shameful as it sounds—"a man has been known to flap with black-rimmed glasses." Thus defended Dr. Price, her highness the flapper.

"The flapper will continue to flap regardless of the general opinion of critics," declared Dr. Price. Flapperism is an expression of bubbling over, human nature, which is rather large in most people.

"The point is, that practically every individual has his own idiosyncrasies as to the way in which he flaps," he continued. "Some who don't even dream they are flapping are flapping anyway!"

Views of Leaders Many of the leaders of the Sunday school convention paused in the midst of their activities to consider the flapper problem. Here are some of their opinions:

Rev. Kwan Sik Kim, leader of the Korean delegation of 30 persons says: "I do not think the flapper is any worse than the old-fashioned girl. I have great faith in the modern girl, but sometimes, it seems to me, she has forgotten too much in the way of being modest. But I do not think she is going to the bad. There are even flappers in the church and Sunday school, but they are not a harmful influence. Rather, they are receiving a better influence."

Rev. W. H. Brown, pastor of the Plainfield Reformed Church, Pen Argyl, Pa., said: "I think the flapper is an improvement in girlhood, if not so much in custom as in readjustment. I don't think she has impure intentions in dressing as she does."

B. T. Archer, Long Beach Bay delegate and commercial traveler by profession declared: "My definition of a flapper is one who does not regard the home and mother: who takes her life into her own hands and do as she sees fit. I have seen nothing encouraging today of that type of personality. She would be a whole lot better off if she were a lady. I don't look for her in the Sunday school or in the church—if she were there, she wouldn't be defined a flapper."

E. E. Harris, Dayton, Ohio, editor of the Watchdog, a publication for young people of the United Brethren Church said: "The flapper is no worse than the girl of past times. Boldness characterizes this page. It means a spirit of honesty which was not characteristic of the past generation. I think the girl of today is more serious thinking than the girl of 20 years ago."

Rev. S. G. Nickey, pastor of the church of the Brethren, Sterling, Colo., said: "I do not believe in the old-fashioned girl. I don't believe she was superior to the flapper. But the girl of today does need more culture. It seems to me there is a superficial air about her which could be improved with a little more taste and modesty. A false idea of freedom is a barrier in her way. I believe in freedom under the law of grace and purity."

A Foreign View Charles Webster, superintendent of the Morning Sunday School of Christ Church, London said: "I think the flapper is an improvement. Athletics have improved her. Her modesty and morality are finer than that of the girl in the Victorian age. The flapper shocks her elders by her remarks, but she is more honest and outspoken than her predecessor."

Mrs. Charles Webster, a worker with young folk for forty years, said: "The flapper is all right. It doesn't matter how short her dress is—they get more sunshine that way and sunshine is the great thing now."

John Victor, Budapest Hungary, secretary of the Hungarian council of religious education thought: "Some of the Hungarian flappers go too far toward the extreme even in outward appearance. There is a general striving among the girls for more culture. Among the educated girls there is a longing for spiritual work and if it is not nourished some may go astray. But I have great hope for the modern girl or flapper. She has not as much vanity as the old-fashioned girl."

GILEAD The moving picture "Least We Forget" was shown at the church Sunday evening, under the auspices of the Connecticut Temperance Society. All of the Christian Endeavor Societies in the Tri-County Union were well represented.

The Christian Endeavor Tri-County Union plans to give the Rev. and Mrs. Wain of Columbia a farewell reception at Columbia Friday evening as they are about to take up mission work in Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Carpenter of East Hampton were visitors at Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Lyman's Sunday afternoon.

Prof. Fred Dean of Springfield, Mass., is guest at Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Jones'.

Miss Doris Hutchinson of South Manchester spent the week-end with her grandparents Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hutchinson.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hutchinson of South Manchester visited his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Hutchinson, Sunday afternoon.

A New York car overturned at the turn on Gilead street towards Hebron Sunday afternoon. The driver was a guest at Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Barrasso's. The Barrasso children and Mrs. Barrasso's mother were in the car. They all received numerous cuts and bruises. A doctor was called and he found that Mrs. Barrasso's mother had two fractured ribs. The car was considerably damaged.

Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Buel spent Sunday afternoon in New London.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, August 1.—The average man no doubt assumes that the question of equal rights was settled when the women's suffrage amendment was passed.

But Hoover and Smith hadn't better assume that in their acceptance speeches. The National Woman's Party, whose existence and activities are based solely on the fact that inequality between the sexes does exist under bequeathed state laws, is waiting with raised axe.

After the acceptance speeches the Woman's Party will hold a meeting to decide what it will do in the presidential campaign. If one of the candidates says something very definite about obtaining equality for women, he can have the support of the Woman's Party, assuming that the other candidate doesn't do as well or better. And while the Woman's Party is by no means the largest of the national women's organizations, it is certainly the most militant.

For years the active ladies in this organization have been running around in various states to clean up little instances where women are getting a raw deal under the law, but their primary objective is the passage of a constitutional amendment which would say:

"Men and women shall have equal rights throughout the United States and every place subject to its jurisdiction. Congress shall have power to enforce this article by appropriate legislation."

That would bring the states in line.

The party's crusaders were at both national conventions, working to get an endorsement of the amendment in the platform. They didn't get it, but both parties did mention "equality." The Republicans "accepted wholeheartedly equality on the part of the women," but this made the girls a little sore because they say such equality doesn't exist. The Democrats declared for "equality for women with men in all political and governmental matters" and for "an equal wage for equal service," but the candidate's interpretation is nevertheless awaited.

Senator Curtis, the Republican vice presidential candidate, introduced the equal rights amendment in the Senate, describing it as of the greatest importance to American women. Naturally, the women would hate to turn down friend Charlie at this juncture in case Smith should come clean with them, but they can't well declare for Smith and Curtis.

The Woman's Party protests because women don't have equal citizenship rights, equal opportunities in schools and universities, equal pay for equal work, equal control of their property, earnings—and even children, equal inheritance rights, equal opportunities in government service, professions and industries, equal right to make contracts, and so on. It contends that in no state do men and women live "under equal protection of the laws."

It cites, among others, these horrible examples:

Women are barred from holding higher elective offices in Oklahoma.

Texas law is such that when Ma Ferguson took office as governor she petitioned a court to set aside her "legal disabilities as a married woman" so that state contracts she signed wouldn't be questioned.

In many other states the right of women to contract is limited.

In Florida a husband can manage and control his wife's own property. In South Carolina and Michigan even a woman's clothes are held to be her husband's property.

Georgia concedes a husband's rights to his wife's earnings. In Arkansas, West Virginia and other states the father inherits to the exclusion of the mother when a child dies. More than 35 states define prostitution as an "act of the female" and in many states, including New York and Michigan, women are punished while male participants go free.

In Minnesota the husband has a legal right to his wife's chastity; the wife hasn't the same right concerning her husband. A Texas husband may divorce his wife for a single act of infidelity, but a wife can't divorce her husband except after abandonment and continuous infidelity.

In some states, such as Georgia and Maryland, the father can will away custody of children from the mother. Alabama, Rhode Island and others make the father the sole natural guardian of minor children, and Michigan, New York and Massachusetts are among states where father alone is entitled to services and earnings of his children. In many states, including Idaho, Virginia and Texas, there is no law requiring an unmarried father to support his child. Arizona, Colorado, Connecticut, Massachusetts, Missouri, New Hampshire, North Carolina, New York, Wyoming, Oklahoma and other states bar women from juries.

Prominent women more or less active in the Woman's Party include Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Doris Stevens, Alice Paul, Gail Laughlin, Mabel Vernon, Maud Younger, Zona Gale, Alice Roke, Ruth Hale, Ernestine Evans and Edna St. Vincent Millay.

Dr. C. H. Myers of Cornell university says farmers are wrong in trying to produce enormous cabbage, and that the smaller types are more desirable. Judging from the size of the modern apartment, the tenants don't eat anything larger than peas, anyway.

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

Compiled by the CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(158) 9,000 Foreign Born Adults Taught Yearly.

Connecticut, which with two exceptions has more foreign born white population than any other state in the union, has 105 school centers for non-English speaking adults. At these schools centers some 8,000 foreign-language speaking men and women each year seek to overcome the language barrier, the greatest obstacle in assimilation.

Forty-six towns in the state have classes for foreign adults. The combined enrollment is approximately 9,000 with an approximate attendance of 4,000. The majority of the sessions held are two hours in length, 75 of these sessions constituting a school year.

There are 325 teachers employed yearly to teach the English language and civics to Connecticut's foreign born adults. Of this number nearly 300 are women. The average salary of teachers per session is $3.15. Two years ago $76,293 was spent in teachers' salaries and $7,411 was paid to principals. Miscellaneous expenses brought the total to $114,607. To meet these expenses the state contributed $15,950 and town treasuries, $98,558. The remaining $99 came from "other sources."

Of the 329 classes held, 149 were first year classes, 110 second year and 70 advanced. There were 4,177 men and women registered in the first year classes, 2,827 in the second year classes and 2,041 in the advanced classes. The second year classes had an average attendance of 1,291, the first year classes of 1,750 and the advanced, 948.

Mrs. Healy was formerly Miss Dorothy Bishop who made her home with her aunt, Mrs. William Stiles. The Golden Rule Club will meet Friday evening at half past seven in the church parlors. Misses Florence Pinney and Alice Doggart will give interesting reports of the Young Women's Foreign Missionary Conference at East Northfield which they attended as delegates from the club. Refreshments will be served by the hostesses, the Misses Esther Welles and Alma Rice.

John H. Monaghan has purchased a new 1928 model Chevrolet coach.

Kenneth Britton will be an usher at the wedding of Miss Katherine Tomkins, daughter of Mrs. Calvin Tomkins of Park avenue, New York, and Tomkins Cove-on-the-Hudson, and Vincent Serrano Villard son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Garrison Villard of Dobbs Ferry, N. Y., which will take place Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the summer home of the bride's mother, Mr. Villard is a great grandson of the late William Lloyd Garrison of New York.

Word has been received from Mrs. C. O. Britton telling of her recent trip from London to Paris by aeroplane.

Mrs. James McNally had the misfortune to cut her hand severely on Sunday. A prex plate which she was washing broke, inflicting deep gashes in her thumb and forefinger. Dr. Caldwell of Manchester took several stitches in closing the wound.

Miss Elizabeth Douglas and Miss Power of Manchester, Dudley Douglas and Wilbur H. Smith Jr., recently enjoyed a sojourn at Ocean Beach.

Miss Alice Doggart with friends from Bloomfield recently enjoyed an outing at Mt. Tom.

Miss Frances H. Bachelor is spending a vacation at Wellfleet, Cape Cod, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur H. Smith and Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Pitkin were recent guests of Mrs. Smith's sister, Mrs. Lyndon Little at Groton Long Point.

College courses these days seem to include not only Greek, but a little Scotch.

R. DONNELLY
JEWELER
515 Main St., So. Manchester

New York, August 1.—Strange are the casual encounters which make up the endless mixed patterns of Manhattan.

If, for instance, you were to take a seat, shortly after the regulation dinner hour, behind the vine fence that hedges New York's sole sidewalk cafe on Second Avenue, your attention would soon be attracted to the pleas of youngsters, with noses pressed through the grill-work.

If, like myself, you expected them to be begging pennies, you might at first give little heed. Then, suddenly, it might occur to you that the words you heard had nothing to do with pennies.

"Some bread, mister! Pleasee gimme some bread!"

A man can ask for money and you'll pass him by. But the word "bread" is one to make you stop. It flashes upon you that these youngsters, whose thin noses you could touch, are pleading for food. Your table is over-laden. A generous basket overflows with buns and breads. A few narrow strips of fence are all that lie between poverty and plenty.

It's a situation to shock you into a sense of unreality. You look about to make sure you have heard aright. Yes, there are three noses penetrating three openings in the lattice-work. The noses are on three brown faces—the faces of children from Latin lands. Automatically your hand reaches for the bread basket and you slip over the fence all your hands can hold. And you see three little forms go scurrying happily into the night.

New York, Aug. 1.—Louis Meyerson, 49, was shot and killed early today as he lay in bed. His wife, Rebecca, told the police he was killed by one of two intruders who were young and swarthy.

Two straw hats, left by the intruders in their flight, furnished the only clues. Mrs. Meyerson said her husband had no enemies.

The waiter comes up. You tell him what has happened.

"I've served here for 12 years," he tells you. And at first I thought the youngsters were all clever little beggars. I know better now. They never ask for candy or pennies or sodas. They want food. Oh, I found out all about it. They're really hungry. They generally come to me. I never refuse them. Sometimes, I learned, it means their supper. Sometimes it means their breakfast."

You look about. The gay lights of the Second Avenue cafes are blinking. Through an open window come the strains of a Russian balalaika orchestra. There is laughter within the cafe. Automobiles dash past.

The thing, then, has not been a fantastic dream. There are, then, children in Manhattan who must cry on the sidewalks for their daily bread.

Or, if you watch closely in the subways, you will see a tattered, beaten looking man who, in his role of messenger, is taking a "Success" sign to some theater in the Broadway belt. Or you may even encounter the eccentric and slightly mad spinster who approaches the crowd lined up at theater box offices and hands them a little pamphlet telling of the hell fire that awaits those sinners who undertake to amuse themselves by such worldly pleasures as the theater, the dance or the beer mug.

Future Of Twilight League Hinges On Protests

GENE TUNNEY'S RETIREMENT MAY NOT BE PERMANENT ONE

Davis Walsh Thinks It Will Be Possible to See Another Dempsey-Tunney Battle in Near Future.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, Aug. 1.—Gene Tunney was a private citizen today, no longer the man who is, but now the man who was, a state of affairs brought about by the act of his own hand—his public disavowal yesterday of the heavyweight championship. An hour before he made the announcement, that other famous "widower" of the profession, Jack Dempsey, promptly retired from retirement, as he so often averred he wouldn't. And if there is no connection to be seen between these circumstances, then somebody ought to be entitled to the packet of pencils, the tin cup and the dark glasses right away and a trifle sooner.

The writer is not presuming to declare that one man's retirement and the other's return mean beyond doubt that Dempsey and Tunney ultimately will meet in the championship ring for the third time. But there is no evidence on hand to indicate that it won't happen. Dempsey shouted from the house tops that nothing would induce him to come back. He is back. It, therefore, might seem reasonable to suppose that Tunney's representations of yesterday may be almost equally impermanent in their effect.

Won't Fight Tunney

The fact of the matter is that Dempsey never would have signed with Tex Rickard yesterday to meet the winner of the latter's heavyweight tournament next summer if he believed this action would lead to another meeting with Tunney. He wants no more of that young man. But suppose Tunney regains the title, as many will expect him to do. And suppose Tunney decides that he wants to come back, as he very well might after he has won the title had fallen into Dempsey's hands again. Our John could hardly run out on that one, even if he wanted to from a personal standpoint. It would make him look too bad, for one thing, and he would lose him too much money, for another.

Imagine the awful laceration the turnstiles would take if and when they held a heavyweight championship fight between the man who regained the title, a feat never before achieved, and the man who never lost it.

A Small Chance

The majority of experts wouldn't give Dempsey a white man's chance of winning but that would make no difference to John Bananas and his brother-in-law. They want to see in there with Tunney a man who has a chance to level him with one punch. And, besides, there are a lot of souls on this earth who have never got over the idea that Dempsey really is the champion by virtue of the famous long count in the seventh round at Chicago.

Opinion today was pretty equally divided as to whether Tunney's temporary. Those close to the man, however, seem cemented in their notion that, having relinquished the possession he prized most, Tunney is through for all time. This may be, for he is a singular individual if ever there was one and he has the strength of character to stick with a thing even when he believes it to be against his impulses and desires. If I am drawing a picture of a hard-headed man sitting down to give himself a terrible beating on any issue that might arise, I am desolated but not discouraged. In fact, I regard that picture as an excellent likeness.

The ensuing twelve months will tell the story of Tunney's retirement. As read, it must be accepted at face value but not without reservations. One of these would take in the possibility of a stand-out heavyweight being uncovered in the next year—Dempsey, for example, or the man who arises to a point of great disorder by knocking Dempsey out.

For Tunney, even in retirement, is the type of man who will want to be recognized as the greatest there is. If another arises whose fame and ability disputes the point, then every tendency of the retired champion will be tugging at him to go out and re-affirm the supremacy he now enjoys.

But the development in question must arise within the period of time in which Tunney believes his speed will stay with him, even though inactive. For, as I have said before, Tunney may come back to score an expected victory; never to accept an expected defeat. Too much does he enjoy the distinction of being the only heavyweight champion, who retired undefeated, to spoil the illusion.

PADDOCK DEFEATED IN THE OLYMPICS

America's Star Sprinter Finishes Fourth in the 200 Metre Race.

Amsterdam, Aug. 1.—America's star sprinter, Charles Paddock, failed to qualify today for the final in the 200 metre dash of the Olympic Games. He finished fourth in the semi-final.

Those who qualified for the 200 metre final were Williams, of Canada; Rangleley, of Great Britain; and Schuller, of Germany. Williams' time was 22 seconds.

In the second semi-final, Kornig, of Germany, finished first; Jackson V. Scholz, of the New York A. C., second; Fitzpatrick, of Canada, third, and Henry Cummings, Jr., of the Newark, N. J., A. C., fourth. The German's time was 21 4-5 seconds.

Those who qualified for the final in the second preliminary were Kornig, Scholz and Fitzpatrick.

Paddock drew next to the outside lane with Legge, of South Africa on the outside. Legge could not stand the pace and dropped out, after he had gone 75 metres, with an injured ankle. Paddock fell behind and seemed to lack the strength to spur on the final stretch. He was unable to make up the three yards that separated him from Schuller.

In the second semi-final Kornig won by about three yards. Scholz seemed to have plenty of reserve and did not try to catch the leader. From the stand Cummings seemed to be third, but Fitzpatrick outdistanced him at the finish.

A drizzling rain had started to fall before the contests started making the track heavy. Experts said that it would make pole vaulting difficult. When the events began the crowd was smaller than of yesterday.

HILLIARDS DEFEAT WOODLANDS.

The Hilliard A. C. won a hard fought game from the Woodland A. C. last evening. Lagging three to nothing up to the first inning they came through with four runs to win the game. The game was fought hard by both teams and was well played. "Hub" Wright star pitcher for the Woodland A. C. pitched a good game up to the last inning and then weakened. He struck out 12 batters. Fiddler relieved Tanner in the third inning and pitched good ball for the rest of the game. Custer knocked in the winning run. Tanner and Custer both got two hits apiece. The score:

Speaking Of Thrills-

"Curly" Gustafson, Local Athlete, Finds Plenty of Real Sport With His Racing Sloop "Sunshine."

Perhaps this is a lotta fun but it certainly isn't the place to be if you have a weak heart or are scared of the water. Clifford "Curly" Gustafson of Hackmatack street, well known Manchester athlete, is a lover of this sport. He is the owner of the thirty-foot racing sloop "Sunshine" which is moored for the present in the Connecticut river at Hartford. When "Curly" came home for the summer vacation from Sarville, L. I., where he is a director of physical education, he made the trip in his sloop—a distance of 225 miles. Stops were made at Shelter Island, Gardner's Island, Plum Island, Fishers' Island and other points of interest.

GREEN BEATS CHENEYS 18-16; MARY SULLIVAN CRACKS HOMER

Manchester Green's feminine quartet 4 to 3 increasing its final lead to two runs.

Margaret Boyle made two of the Green's five hits allowed by Pearl Hollister who pitched a splendid game. Mary Strong and Ruth Peterson each got two safe blows for Cheneys who made seven hits, six off Ida Cole and one off Eleanor Prentice. Mary Sullivan whaled a home run in the first inning, and judging from the scorebook, three runners were on base at the time.

Following is the box score with the putouts, assists and errors among the missing:

GLENNEY'S

What We Think In Sports

By THOMAS W. STOWE

Needed Stimulant

Although the chances still seem slim that Connie Mack's hustling Athletics will overtake the faltering Yankees, closing the gap between the contenders for the American League title, is furnishing a much-needed stimulant. It was only a few weeks ago that the Yanks were so far ahead that public interest was rapidly fading, except for Babe Ruth's attempt to establish a new home run record.

The Yankees have too strong a team to expect them to keep losing ball games as they have been of late. And the opposite holds for the Athletics. They can't keep winning at their present percentage. On the other hand, it would do baseball a world of good if the Athletics could nose out the Yanks in the final lap of the pennant chase or else give them a real tussle. They are too good an attraction to be broken up. Yet, if they are to continue their work of the past few years, literally mopping the floor with the other clubs; if they can't be defeated sufficiently, they will have to be torn apart for financial reasons and the benefit of the league as a whole sooner or later.

Just As Well

There is some consolation in Big Bill Tilden's overwhelming defeat by the brilliant Henri Cochet and the retaining of the Davis Cup by France, in the fact that if Tilden's tardy reinstatement at the request of Ambassador Herrick had resulted in an American triumph, it would have left a certain taint that is much better to avoid. It would not be at all surprising if Tilden has played his last time in an attempt to regain the coveted honor from France.

Not Permanent

One guess is as good as another as to the inside meaning of Gene Tunney's announcement that he has retired from prizefighting, thus vouching the heavyweight championship. Ours is that he will fight at least once more for the title. It is too uncommon for a champion to quit the ring, regardless of how scarce suitable opponents may be, until he meets defeat. The temptation is, at least always has been, too great to resist. It is too easy a way to make money, even though the latest Battle of the Flattened Kankroll may not have turned out just as Tex Rickard anticipated. Jim Jeffries retired, but later came back only to lose to Jack Johnson. Yes, Tunney may go abroad and forget pugilism for a year or so, but he'll be back in togs again before permanently retiring.

Kensington Plays Here Friday Nite

Meets Community Team in State League Contest; Coach Fay to Show Changed Team From Past Two Games.

The Community Club baseball team will play a state league contest with Kensington here Friday evening. The Kensington team, with Tatville, is the sensation of the second half of the league schedule and two weeks ago gave the local nine a 15 to 0 shellacking, as did Tatville a week later.

Coach Jerry Fay said last night that it would be a changed Community team that will take the field Friday night. Outscored 30-0 in its last two games, he realizes that a continuation of this kind of playing will not be supported by the fans. Both of the wallpings took place out of town, so if the Community shows some of its first round form Friday night, the fans will probably let bygones be bygones.

LAST NIGHT'S FIGHTS

At New York—Maxie Rosenbloom, New York middleweight, won from Ted (Kid) Lewis, former welterweight champion of the world, on foul, 6; Tony Vaccarella, New York, outpointed Tommy Jordan, Brooklyn, 10.

At Boston—Ernie Schaaf, Boston heavyweight, outpointed Harold Mays, of Bayonne, N. J., former sparring partner for Gene Tunney, 10; Bill Hartwell, Kansas City, stopped Lee Anderson, Berlin, N. H., 8.

At Newark, N. J.—Ruby Goldstein, New York lightweight, outpointed Al Bryant, Newark negro, 10.

At Troy, N. Y.—Joe Tripp, Rochester, drew with Mickey Canoro, Staten Island, N. Y., 12; Mike Esposito, Stamford, Conn., outpointed Phil Verdi, Rochester, N. Y., 12.

MANAGER PRENTICE SAYS GREEN WILL QUIT IF IT LOSES FIGHT

Also Bon Ami Is at Verge of Jumping Circuit Over Its Protest With Gibson's Garage; Games Tomorrow.

The future of the Community Club Twilight league is in doubt. It is possible that the circuit may break up as a result of two protested games, it was learned last night.

Sam Prentice, manager of the Manchester Green team which protested the 3 to 1 victory Gibson's Garage scored over it, told The Herald his team would not remain in the league unless a decision was made by the league authorities against Bert Gibson's outfit.

Prentice also stated that he had been informed the Bon Ami team will quit the league if it loses its protested game with the auto repairers. This would leave only the Aces and the Heights to survive the circuit. Highland Park dropped out the night before last because it was unable to get all of its players around for the games.

Just what will actually happen, remains to be seen. A very important meeting of the league managers will be held at 8:30 Friday night at the "White House."

The fate of the whole league hinges on the roster of the garage team. Director Jerry Fay, organizer of the league, submitted the following list of fifteen players to The Herald as composing the garage team: Lamprecht, Burkhardt, Sipples, Brennan, Hanna, Gibson, Wilson, G. Wright, Wilson, Warrack, Kotsch, LaFrances, Griswold, Cervini, McGowan and H. Wright. The list was dated as of July 16 and signed by B. H. Gibson.

No players other than on this list were used against the Green, and Manager Prentice contends that others were used before this list making some of the present players ineligible because of using more than fifteen. Here's hoping the situation blows over without any casualties, because games like those of Monday night are well worth watching.

The balance of the week is open for playing off postponed games and the next regular scheduled contests are set for Monday night. On that night, the Green plays at the Heights and Gibson's Garage meets the Aces at the West Side. The Bon Ami was paired with Highland Park.

The Bon Ami and Green will meet tomorrow night at Hickey's Grove to play off the 4-4 tie they recently battled. Gibson's Garage and the Heights also have a postponed game which may be played either Thursday or Friday, pending a decision of the managers. The Aces won their game from Highland Park Monday night by a forfeit, it was stated.

St. Peter's school closed its regular sessions Saturday morning with the usual matins service at the church, after which lectures were delivered at the library by Dr. Eugene Chase on "Church and State in England Today." Cardinal Newman, by Dr. Benjamin Bissell, and "Modern Poetry," by Dean Austin Warren. Examples of the poetry of T. S. Eliott and others were given. Evensong took place at the church at 5 p. m., and in the evening the members of the school were entertained at the home of Miss Clarissa Lord, a musical and literary program being carried out, and refreshments of cake and ice cream served. Most of the students have now left the town but a few of the leaders are remaining for a longer vacation and rest. Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Chase have gone to Provincetown, Mass., where they will spend the month of August. It is expected that Dr. Chase will return to the school another year, he having accepted a permanent incumbency of the chair of history. Professor Allen of Trinity also has promised to continue his delightful lectures on the drama or kindred subjects. There have been about twenty-five students this summer from several different states of the union and from Canada. The expenses of the school have been met and enthusiastic plans are being made for the future. A school picnic was held Sunday afternoon in a grove and attended by the remaining members.

OPEN FORUM

MISS DEXTER DESCRIBES HER OCEAN JOURNEY Miss Alice Dexter of Talcothville has sent to The Herald the following description of her ocean trip: The S. S. "Tuscania" is an old burning one of 17000 gross tonnage—not a very fast ship, making the trip to Havre in nine days. The start out of New York harbor was full of excitement, the night was beautiful after the rain of the morning. The skyline of lights on both sides, showed off the many high towers and especially the large clock of the Colgate Company. Liberty holding her lighted lamp aloft, with the search light thrown on the statue, added much to the scene. The cheers and hand waving of the friends on the pier was such a new sensation to one who was experiencing it for the first time. The swaying of the ship quite a little, so on Saturday, many of the passengers were suffering in consequence. So far I have proved to be a good sailor. After the first day the sea has been very smooth, and we have sailed along steadily and evenly, with very little motion, making this first experience a delight. At first the weather was very warm especially when passing through the Gulf stream, but later cooled so wraps were acceptable to snuggle into. The tourist quarters are comfortable and pleasant. There are touring under the International Society of Christian Endeavor about fifty, representing sixteen states from Connecticut to Louisiana, California and Washington and states between. Seven in the party have earned their trip to Europe by securing subscriptions to the Endeavor paper, "The C. E. World." The "Students' Travel Club" have a large company of young people aboard, too. Sports of all kinds occupy the time of the tourists, creating much fun. Of course there is the ship to explore and get acquainted with. Evenings have many attractions. One night a radio entertainment from Station D. U. M. B. and another a fancy dress dance and so on. Spouting whales, flying fish, porpoises and the passing ships attract much attention of those aboard. The many gifts and letters found in my stateroom on coming aboard Friday evening and some on Saturday and Sunday were very pleasant surprises, and a delight, especially the flowers from the members of Orford Parish Chapter D. BRENNAN'S CONDITION

Chicago, Aug. 1.—George E. Brennan, Democratic leader and friend of Al Smith, appeared to be staging a winning fight today against death from septic poisoning. Twenty-four hours ago the Democratic chieftain's life was practically despaired of. He had undergone an emergency operation to stem the poison's progress and was so low that life was being sustained by oxygen. He staged a remarkable rally, however, and today his physicians believe he has an even chance to recover. The infection began from two ulcerated teeth. Complications, arising from diabetes and pneumonia, set in.

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

BERTIE LOU WARD marries ROD BRYER, who had previously been engaged to LILA MARSH. The latter amuses herself by telling her friends that she was Rod's first love, and continues to make life miserable for the bride by coming to New York as a guest of MOLLY FRASER, whose husband had given Rod a position.

However, Lila meets a rich MR. LOREE and marries him. Then she asks Bertie Lou to forgive the past and be friends.

Trying to keep up socially with their wealthy friends plunges the Bryers in debt and Rod becomes depressed. Lila sees her chance to persuade him to accept a higher salary from Loree, promising security from financial worry "for Bertie Lou's sake."

Shortly after, Lila asks Rod to put some of her jewels in the office vault during her husband's absence. When the case and the jewels are gone, he wants to notify the police but she demurs, pointing out that suspicion against him might spoil his career. They decide to keep the matter secret—even from Bertie Lou—and Rod promises to pay for the loss as he is able to raise the money.

Bertie Lou finds out that Rod has deceived her twice regarding engagements with Lila and is heartbroken. A telegram calls her to her sick mother and she leaves without seeing Rod.

Lila prevails on him to spend the week-end with them in the country to keep from being lonely, and, under pretense of sympathy, plants seeds of doubt in his mind about Bertie Lou.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXVIII

A surge of hate spread itself over Lila's features, contorting them into a fleeting ugliness. She turned her head quickly away from Rod's stare.

But even in the moonlight her expression had been an unmistakable indication of displeasure. Rod could not see clearly enough to recognize it as anything more than that. But it was sufficient to trouble him.

Thinking it over that night, he concluded that Lila had no love for Cyrus. He had come to believe that she had, but even with that revealing moment on the piazza to enlighten him he had not the faintest idea why she had been so much annoyed at her husband's demonstration of affection.

Lila, boiling with resentment over his intrusion upon her tete-a-tete with Rod, could have told him. She could have explained that Cyrus had spoiled the moment she had been waiting for—the moment when Rod would show her sympathy, the moment he seemed bewildered and doubtful of Bertie Lou's love.

For, despite his loyalty, Lila knew that he must be pondering over Bertie Lou's behavior. She had pondered over it, too, until she received a clue. In a conversation with Rod, on the day the detective she had engaged, she asked him if he had told Bertie Lou anything that could give her a hint of their secret. Rod said no, that he hadn't even told her he was at Lila's the afternoon he had returned the empty car to the garage.

Lila remembered having told Bertie Lou that he had just left her on that occasion. Casually she inquired of Rod how he had explained his lateness in arriving home and he said he believed he had lied about the matter.

Well, the fact is in the fire with Bertie Lou," Lila told herself.

Abandoning all hope of deceiving Bertie Lou any longer, she decided to make the most of her erstwhile friend's absence. When Bertie Lou returned—if she ever did—Lila knew that she would have little or no influence over her, no further opportunity to lead her into extravagance or things that Rod could criticize.

Perhaps Bertie Lou might induce Rod to give up his position with Cyrus. There had been the possibility of losing him altogether, unless she could complete her sorcery before his wife returned.

No need now to consider Bertie Lou's friendship. At last she could speak freely, could start to sow the seeds of discontent in Rod's mind.

She was furious with Cyrus for having interrupted her initial move and for having reminded Rod that she belonged to another man. But to Rod it seemed that he had gazed upon the secret travails of one who had made a ghastly mistake. He pitied Lila. But he admired her tremendously for having kept her secret so well, for having lived so sportingly up to her bargain of exchanging her freedom for money. At least she had not whined. And if he had discovered what she had proudly hidden from the world, it was purely by accident, he felt, and not by reason of any public display of yellow on Lila's part.

He thought of her unfeeling manifestation of affection and consideration for Cyrus, a man whom he knew she did not love, and compared it with Bertie Lou's treatment of him, whom he had believed she loved.

He observed Cyrus closely for the rest of his stay at The Birches. There was nothing in his manner to indicate that he suspected Lila's true feelings toward him. Rod asked himself if it were not possible that he too might be taking his wife's love for granted.

Was there any such a thing as love? Was it love to keep a man calling his home every hour to inquire if there was a letter for him? And was it love that caused Bertie Lou to plunge her head over heels into debt—send him begging his father for a loan? It was a very much like indifference and shallow ambition rather than love. Rod did not want to think so, but Lila had set herself to present Bertie Lou's character and conduct to him in this light. And so, sly, so false in her method of putting her destructive efforts in the guise of friendly advice and sympathy was she that Rod found himself thinking Bertie Lou had revealed herself as selfish and unloving.

It did not come suddenly, his verdict of her; but as the weeks wore on and she made no mention of returning to New York, Rod was compelled to believe that she did not mind being apart from him.

Then there was her cold letter when he had to refuse the money she asked for. Bertie Lou had hated writing for it, but needed funds. . . she had used practically all her immediate cash for her fare home.

She did not want to appeal to her father for a loan since that would cause him to wonder why Rod did not supply her with money.

Rod had replied with half the amount and the statement that he had no more to send. Bertie Lou was amazed. He must be spending money like water! Well, Lila's habits and tastes could account for that. For any man who aspired to an affair with her would soon find himself with a lean pocketbook, Bertie Lou believed.

Rod did not write for a week after receiving her sarcastic letter. During this period of waiting Bertie Lou had assured herself through a hideous night of alternating doubt and still faintly surviving faith that she did not care whether he ever wrote again or not.

For she had received a letter that fairly scorched her heart and scathed her pride. It was a poisonous anonymity. But Bertie Lou thought she knew who had written it. The writing was very much like Molly's despite an apparent effort to disguise it.

It was brief. The writer merely suggested that Bertie Lou should get him out of the clutches of a certain bleached blond over whom he seemed to have lost his head.

As the writer had guessed, Bertie Lou was too proud to take any notice of the communication. She did not return to New York. Her letters to Rod grew ever colder and further apart and when he flatly demanded to know when she intended to return she replied that she thought she might spend the summer with her mother.

The letter had done its work. It kept Bertie Lou away from Rod, as it was designed to do. Not as long, perhaps as Lila—for it was Lila who was the guilty person—hoped that it would. She had painstakingly copied Molly's handwriting with just enough fidelity to the original to make anyone who knew it believe that the letter came from her.

Other factors affected Bertie Lou. Inquisitiveness chiefly. It drove her back to Rod, inquisitiveness plus an aching yearning to see for herself if he really had succumbed to Lila's charms. Her friends in Wayville were beginning to comment upon her prolonged absence from her husband. They would soon be declaring that she had left him, Bertie Lou feared.

And she hadn't left him. There had been no final break, no incontrovertible proof that Rod was unfaithful. Neither had he suggested a permanent separation. She hesitated tentatively to her mother about returning to him and was convinced at once that she had been a cause for worry.

"Yes, I really think you should," her mother said, "though we shall miss you very much."

Bertie Lou smiled over the relief in her mother's voice.

"I'm afraid Rod will be thinking we've kept you too long," Mrs. Ward went on happily. "The dear boy has been so very patient. It must have been terribly lonesome for him without you."

Mother and daughter glanced at each other and then both looked quickly away. Each was wondering how near or how far from the truth those words had been.

Lila's mother never had accepted Lila's explanation with Bertie Lou as genuine, a thing to be trusted, though she had kept her opinion from her daughter lest she worry her needlessly. She could be mistaken, perhaps, she told herself.

Bertie Lou would not let her mother know what she thought of Rod's loneliness, though she suspected that her mother had wondered at her willingness to remain away from him all these weeks and months.

She had surprised her mother's gaze bent upon her in grave meditation on many occasions lately. It was time to return to Rod and settle the thing or to open her heart to her mother and load her burdens on those still frail shoulders.

Bertie Lou returned to New York unannounced. Her hands trembled on the doorknob as she let herself in, but she stubbornly refused to release the tears that smarted her eyes. Inside the front door she put down the small case she had carried and turned to admit the elevator boy with her suitcases.

When he was gone she summoned her maid, but there was no response. She went out to the kitchen and looked around. There was no food in the refrigerator. Rod must be eating out.

Further inspection of the apartment revealed that someone was taking care of it for there was cleanliness and order all around. A woman by the hour, Bertie Lou concluded.

It was too late now to think of preparing dinner in the apartment. Bertie Lou set about removing the marks of travel from her person and getting into a fresh costume. It was nice to be back in her comfortable, well-furnished home. . . but it was purely a physical pleasure.

There was no elation in her heart; merely a half-dread, half-ecstasy feeling. She was excited, but not happy. For some reason, though, she put on a dress that Rod had liked.

She was in the living room when he entered the hall. She heard him open the door and walk toward their bedroom.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton © 1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

Hot weather is the great danger time for babies.

The dreaded second summer is the most trying time of all for both mother and mother.

Some children go through this time without any difficulty, others are not so fortunate. The teeth known as stomach teeth upset the stomach processes and general health of a child often to an alarming degree.

Mothers, tired and worried at this time are apt to be too susceptible to suggestions from neighbors and friends who have done this and did that for their own children and are ready with remedies that may be all right in their own way, but are too likely to be all wrong. Children, like adults, are not alike, and little stomachs have a way of being entirely different.

Don't Experiment

There is one bit of advice that any mother can safely take from anybody. "Don't experiment." — It is difficult to say, "Go to a good doctor" for many cannot afford a doctor. But if there is any time in the course of human events that a doctor is needed it is for a sick baby in his second summer—or a sick baby, indeed, at any time. In case a doctor is out of the question most of the big cities have free clinics for children.

But a few general health rules may help the mother with a sick baby; or the mother with a well one, for that matter.

Keep Baby Cool and Nipples Clean

If the baby is thriving on his present food, don't change it. Perhaps he is not gaining as fast as you would like, but "he is well let him alone. Do not add to his diet nor change it until fall.

A baby should not be weaned in hot weather.

All bottles for all babies must be cleaned out and thoroughly boiled. Much summer sickness is the result of dirty bottles. Each morning the day's supply of bottles should be washed thoroughly in warm suds, inside and out, with a long bottle-brush. These can be bought at the 5-and-10-cent store or a hardware store. Then the bottles should be thoroughly rinsed in clean water and placed in a large kettle of clear clean water and boiled for 20 minutes after the water starts to boil.

All nipples should be scrubbed inside and out and boiled with the bottles. Nipples should be put in water right after using and kept covered. No nipple should be used twice unless boiled. No bottle should be used twice—by using a bottle should be rinsed out at once, filled with water and set aside until ready for its real laundering the next morning.

Keep Baby Cool and Clean

Keep a band of mixed wool and cotton, or wool and silk, on the baby's abdomen all summer, even on hot days. Do not take it off at night. It is changed daily at bath time.

Keep him cool at all times with little clothing on hot days. A band and diaper are often enough, and perhaps a very thin slip of a dress.

Water But No "Hot-Bits"

Be sure he has water to drink in plenty, but not tea-water.

Keep him clean. Change him at once when necessary so that his tender skin does not become sore or scalded. This causes terrible suffering. Bathe him off at each changing with soap and water, and rinse with clean water.

Bathe him thoroughly once a day all over with pure soap and water but be sure the soap is rinsed off. On very hot days he may have an additional "sponge" bath in clear water. Always dry thoroughly with a soft towel. A little pure talcum may be dusted on but not too much or it will clog the pores.

PEPPER RINGS

Half-inch, cross-section slices of the outside of green peppers, make very pretty containers for salads or for creamed hot foods. The former are served on lettuce, of course, and the latter on toast.

A woman can have a convulsion over an evening gown that isn't a good fit.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SCAENER

That most women would stick to an unpleasant marriage for the sake of the children, or that many women would continue a marriage because their husbands would be so miserable without them are two rather common beliefs. Which is why some discoveries made by Dr. G. V. Hamilton, director of the division of psychological research of the Bureau of Social Hygiene, concerning women's attitude towards marriage are rather significant.

THEY TALKED

Dr. Hamilton asked 100 men and 100 women to answer frankly and fully certain questions about their marriage. No limit as to words and time was given. He wrote down the two million words which the 200 men and women gave him. He found them eager to talk under the protection of anonymity.

He found that, after listening serious troubles, more men than women insisted that they would go on with the marriage just the same "for love." He found that many more men than women would continue the marriage because the other spouse would be unhappy without them, and that more fathers would tolerate an unhappy marriage for the sake of the children than would the mothers.

FUNNY WOMEN

He found that many more women were willing to call their marriage a failure than were men. He elaborates this point as follows—"It is because women have a far greater sensitiveness than men. More of them say everything is wrong. They see greater dissatisfactions. They see far more difficulties. They particularize very elaborately.

"And yet, for all this array of sensitiveness—which ought to express itself, the average person would say, in an absorption 'd spiritual values—these women are intent on physical and material troubles, far more than the men. And they are extremely realistic in their ability to recognize and admit matrimonial failure where men assume the pose of a sentimental ostrich."

IS ZAT SO?

"No one woman can be big enough to form the sole interest of any man's life. And conversely, no one man can be big enough to fill the whole life of any one woman."

Spoken, or said to have been spoken, by Miss Lena Madelin Phillips, recently selected president of the National Business and Professional Women's Clubs.

Nobody can quarrel with the first half of her statement, but who of us has not seen any number of women very willing to make one man their whole life? The trouble generally seems to be in the man's reluctance; not in the woman's demand for any more in her life.

AND IS THIS SO?

This is interesting, too, if she is correctly quoted: "Put it up to any man which will make the best wife and mother—the woman whose only interests are in her home, and any home can get pretty after a while, or the woman whose mind is awake and whose axes are open

OILCLOTH DRAPES

Excellent and charming for summer curtains on dressing tables and for window drapes are some of the new little polka dotted or flower sprigged oilcloths. They come in lovely colors and are, of course, washable, without having to remove from their frames.

FOR SUNBURN

A source of expense that goes with the joys of the afternoon swim is medicaments for sunburn. If none of these special lotions are available, cocoa butter could be used and is a splendid protection against sunburn.

SUMMER FERNS

House ferns have a hard time in summer. Put them into the shower bath about once or twice a week, with a light spray of cold water playing on them. This is as effective as outside rain in refreshing them.

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

GRADING FEEBLE-MINDED PROVES A DIFFICULTY

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

One of the greatest difficulties in determining the proper care of those persons who are mentally defective has been the lack of any standard series of terms that describe the various conditions.

In England, as pointed out by Surgeon J. S. Wilson of the United States Public Health Service, there is a national act which distinguishes carefully between the feeble-minded of various grades.

Three Groups

In this country, in most instances, the American classification is followed, which divides persons groups—idiots, imbeciles and morons.

In Texas there is a law which defines a feeble-minded child as one who has such feeble mental or moral processes as to be unable to benefit by the ordinary method of education as employed in the common schools.

A feeble-minded adult is one who is unable under ordinary circumstances to protect and support himself as a law abiding citizen because of lack of mental power.

Doctor Wilson emphasizes the fact that this law does not properly distinguish between an insane or a person with a form of insanity like dementia praecox. The term "feeble-minded" should, of course, be limited to those who have a retarded or restricted development of the brain and who are unable when grown up to adapt themselves to the life of the community.

Those who are concerned with the future of the race recognize that the lack of control over the feeble-minded tends to permit them to propagate and to increase the number of mentally defective people for the future. The various grades of feeble-mindedness must be considered, since there are some persons able to use their brains to any advantage, who nevertheless may earn a living by indulging in definitely restricted activities.

Diagnosis and Care

Hence any mental disturbance calls for a most careful consideration, a proper diagnosis and suitable care. Feeble-minded persons who are a social menace must, of course, be segregated in training schools. Those who are not antisocial in their tendencies should be provided for in special classes in public schools.

Most important of all, however, is education of the public as to the potential danger of marriage when one or more of the ancestors of either one of the persons to be married are feeble-minded or mentally defective, and second the refusal to issue a marriage license to any one who is feeble-minded, insane, or whose blood test is positive for the serious disease that produces such degeneration when it attacks the human brain.

BRIDGE MADE EASY

by W.W. Wentworth

When drawing trumps you should not as a rule indulge in ducking. To do so might unnecessarily permit opponents to ruff with the result that your entire ducking campaign would collapse and your opponents might make tricks that otherwise could never have been made by them. As a rule, draw the outstanding trumps and postpone the ducking.

Used to best advantage when one of the hands is weak in re-entries, ducking may, however, be advisable when you do hold a re-entrant as in the illustration which follows:

Dummy holding spades—5 4 3; hearts—A 2; diamonds—A K 7 6 5 4; clubs—3 2. Declarer, spades—A J 2; hearts—J 10; diamonds—3; clubs—K Q 7 6 5 4.

The only way in which declarer may possibly make game is to establish the diamond suit. This may be accomplished by ducking. As soon as declarer gets the lead he should play heart Queen and overtake with heart Ace in the dummy. Then he plays diamond Ace and diamond King in turn with the likelihood that all of the missing diamonds will drop, enabling him to win tricks with his three remaining cards in that suit with the probability of going game.

RATS! RATS!

And here comes Miss Amy Wren, Federal Commissioner, insisting that women should "break away from traditionally womanly jobs and prove that all jobs are sexless and that they can do anything.

Rubbish! The very nature of us human critters makes it that men can do certain things best and women certain ones best. Why not stick to our own lasts, though, of course, year by year we do prove that our "lasts" are more and varied than we ever expected.

Are You Ready?

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No amount of fussing or crying, no matter how long it lasts, is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug. Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot soothe away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

BACK TAX DRIVE GETS 189 IN JULY

Tax Collector George H. Howe Completes Filing of Releases of Old Liens.

All records in releasing of tax liens were broken in Manchester during the month of July when 189 back taxes on property against which liens were placed were collected.

The drive started to clean up back taxes got under way early in the month and the returns made by the constables who were given warrants to serve resulted in fifty-six old liens being paid up in the first thirteen days of the month. The cleanup continued and so fast were the incoming back taxes arriving that it was not possible for Tax Collector George H. Howe to make out his lien releases each day. Personal taxes had to be taken care of and the checking up and preparation of a list of unpaid taxes on the personal list had to be gone over.

Yesterday he completed the work of making up releases because of taxes paid on old liens and when he had finished there was a list of 133 that had been paid. These are to be given to the town clerk and the necessary entry will be made showing that the property on which they stand has been cleared of the lien.

FUR COAT SALE

Special Showing Thursday, Friday and Saturday
With Mr. Paul Herrmann, Our New York Furrier, In Person
Special 10% Discount On All Fur Coats Purchased During This Sale

IT will interest you to know that we sold ten times as many fur coats last year as the preceding year. One reason was because of our connection with a very prominent manufacturer who personally devoted a great deal of his time in our store. This was Mr. Paul Herrmann, senior partner of one of New York's best fur manufacturers. A man who has devoted his lifetime to the fur business. He represents a concern in whom we have implicit confidence. The fur business is like the diamond business. You must deal with houses in whom you can place confidence if you are to be sure of the value received.

IN addition to the ten per cent saving, the great object in the early selection of furs is the benefit of securing the choicest pelts. Naturally these go into the coats that are shipped early and many times this makes a saving in actual values of from twenty-five to thirty per cent of the price that would be paid when the season opens. JOIN OUR FUR COAT CLUB NOW!

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

WORTH A ROW

The reports from the fisheries this week are so good that Pinehurst is going to have two full fledged fish days—Thursday and Friday, with a wide variety and, as always, prime physical condition a condition of sale in every case.

Wonder if more folks would be interested in offshore fish if they realized that this government of ours scrapped with the governments of New Foundland and Great Britain for just about a hundred years over the right of our New England fishermen to take catches in the neighborhood of British Colonial possession—in other words, off Canada and New Foundland.

Well, it did. And half a dozen times there were those first mutterings that so often lead to war. We had a series of wonderful arguments and chewing matches and all sorts of laws were passed by and for New Foundland, from along about 1905 until finally the Hague Tribunal, in 1910, settled the controversy.

Any article of food that is important enough for the Hague Tribunal to deal with is of some account, don't you think? Come in and look at Pinehurst's layout of sea products tomorrow and see if you don't think it is worth a good row, even a century long. Wouldn't we just like to see anybody keep us from having plenty of fish!

FISH WILL BE IN THURSDAY MORNING

Halibut, Swordfish, Salmon, Mackerel, Cod, Dressed Haddock, Filet of Haddock and Filet of Sole.
