

BOULDER DAM PLAN FAVORED BY CANDIDATE

Hoover Comes Out Definitely for Project as He Visits Grand Canyon of the Colorado; Is Now in Arizona.

Enroute With Hoover to Williams, Ariz., Aug. 18.—Definitely committed in favor of the Boulder Dam project, Herbert Hoover, diverted from his return trip to Washington today to visit the Grand Canyon of the Colorado in Arizona.

The Republican nominee left California behind certain to return again before election day in order to cast his ballot at home.

Under the circumstances, Hoover will close his campaign on the west coast.

His advisers today were considering a program of three major speeches in the last week of the campaign. One would be made in Chicago as Hoover sped westward to his Palo Alto home. The second would be made at Kansas City, and the third, closing the campaign would be made over the radio, either from San Francisco or from his Palo Alto home on the night before the election.

Reluctant Campaigner.

Hoover, however, will have to be won over to this plan as he is a reluctant campaigner. He personally expressed the wish to make but four speeches after his Iowa farm address next Tuesday and it is his personal plan to make only many speeches as are necessary to explain the Republican campaign issues. Some of his closest friends believe he will veto all requests for speeches on his final trip west.

Among members of his party, it was feared eastern leaders would protest against taking the Republican nominee to the Pacific coast for the close of the campaign. Hoover already has agreed with them that the big battle of the campaign must be fought to win the Atlantic seaboard states and it has been a traditional policy of presidential candidates, to close the campaign in the east. On the other hand, the nominee must vote and under present conditions, he only can vote if he goes home—the California law will not allow him to send in a ballot by mail.

Has Great Day

Hoover had a great day, leaving California he visited a half dozen cities in the lower half of the state and was given hearty welcomes in each instance. At Long Beach, he met a host of former Iowans, who like himself had emigrated to California. He told them that both Iowa and California had been honored when he was chosen to lead the Republican party.

"I hope I may carry that leadership to its proper destination," he said. "I hope I will be able to confer distinction on Iowa as well as on California."

Throughout the day, the nominee showed he is developing into a campaigner. He put sentiment into each of his speeches at Pasadena and San Bernardino, where he spoke extemporaneously, he pledged himself to carry out the highest traditions of both states, if elected to the presidency.

NEW HAMPSHIRE GIRL ROLLING PIN CHAMPION

Hurls Comedy Weapon 90 Feet and 8 Inches in a Contest.

Durham, N. H., Aug. 18.—A 22-year-old girl is being hailed here today as the national rolling pin throwing champion as a result of her victory over a field of married women in the star event of the farm and home week celebration at the University of New Hampshire.

Miss Helen Bernaby of North Danville, hurled a rolling pin ninety feet and eight inches for the distance record. Mrs. Florence Perle of Goffstown scored two strikes out of a possible three on a life size male dummy from a distance of 25 feet. Honors went to Miss Bernaby, however, when it was pointed out that a live target probably would not remain stationary.

ORDERS SPECIAL ELECTION

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 18.—Governor Trumbull today issued a writ directing the sheriff of Hartford county to call a special election in the town of Simsbury to fill the vacancy in the office of judge of probate caused by the death of Jeffrey O. Phelps.

The special election is to be held on Monday, October 1, the day when the "little town" elections are held. The judge of probate then elected will serve until January 9, 1929. When the regular state election is held in November, a judge of probate will be elected for the regular term that starts on January 9, 1929. Ever since the death of Judge Phelps the Avon probate judge has been acting in Simsbury. When his duties proved too great a burden the special election was asked.

FUTURE TIRES WILL BE MADE OUT OF WEEDS

Henry Ford Says Edison Has Substitute—Autos to Be Run by Alcohol, He Also Predicts.

Sudbury, Mass., Aug. 18.—Automobile tires made out of common roadside weeds and motor cars fueled with alcohol will be the prediction of Henry Ford, made before leaving to spend this week-end with his son, Edsel, at Bar Harbor, Maine.

Thomas Edison, the automobile magnate said, had discovered that a sort of rubber can be made from every weed that grows. Even the milkweed contains some rubber. Most success has been obtained with cleander.

"There seems to be no question," said Mr. Ford, "that Mr. Edison will soon discover a substitute which will make the United States entirely independent of foreign rubber plantations."

The Detroit manufacturer let it be known that he was not worried about the supply of fuel for motors. "Alcohol," he said, "will run cars as well as gasoline, and alcohol can be produced from grains."

For Hoover

Mr. Ford expressed the belief that the best thing that could happen to this country would be to step backward in our fight against liquor. "He was sure that Herbert Hoover stood for keeping the 18th Amendment as it is and that was the reason he was for him. Everything is keyed up to the law now, he added. Product has been speeded up by conditions. Prosperity and production go hand in hand. If men were slowed up by alcohol production would slow up, and prosperity would cease. That was the Ford view. He would turn the army and Navy out to enforce prohibition, if necessary.

The whole airplane must be reinvented before flying can become as common as automobiles, he declared.

Incidentally, he said he had adopted a new system of eating. His new system is to keep all classes of food separate, and eat them separately.

Mr. Ford denied that he had said that "history was bunk." He meant, he said, that written history was colored by writers in spite of themselves in a desire to bring out a point.

Russians Give Up Hope Of Locating Amundsen

Moscow, Aug. 18.—"Captain Raold Amundsen and his three French companions in the Latham plane almost certainly crashed to their doom in the icy waters of Berents Sea. The chance that they are alive is less than one in a thousand."

This statement of the probable fate of the famous Norwegian explorer who started out in search of Gen. Noble was made today by Prof. Vladimir Pizar, one of the foremost Russian Polar explorers who was in charge of the scientific staff aboard the Soviet Arctic ship Malgin, which was forced to abandon the search and return to Archangel.

SEEKING FIRMER BONDS OF EMPIRE

Here are three of the Indian princes now in London negotiating for a closer relationship with the British government. Above, at the left, is the Nawab of Bhopal, photographed at the time of his installation on his throne. Below is the Maharajah of Patiala, and at the right are the Maharajah of Nawanagar and Sir Leslie Scott, British lawyer who is representing the princes in their negotiations.

India Independence? Rajahs Want Stronger British Rule

London, Aug. 18.—The numberless semi-independent princes of India, whose dominant emotion during the last century has been a smoldering jealousy of their British overlords, are beginning to feel that rule by them is part of the British empire, after all.

They haven't acquired any sudden love for England. But they are beginning to be afraid of the native agitation for independence and self-government that is sweeping India. So a commission of respectful, turbaned maharajahs is now in London seeking to strengthen the relationship between his majesty's government and the native thrones of India.

This happens to suit the British too, since native unrest has been a perplexing problem of late. So the present conferences are proceeding with much concord and enthusiasm on both sides.

India is full of small native states ruled by princes. Approximately a fifth of India's vast population, and a third of its area, lies in these states. The princes that rule them are nearly independent. They collect their own taxes, run their domains to suit themselves, keep their own armies and pay little or no attention to the rest of India. Only two restrictions are placed on them; they cannot have foreign relations with any other states or powers, and they cannot go to war. In addition, the British government maintains at most of these courts a sort of unofficial advisor, who makes tactful suggestions that prevent friction.

"These native princes have sent four of their number to London to discuss new and stronger relationships between the small states and the British government. These delegates are the well-known Sir Harry Singh, maharajah of Kashmir; the maharajah of Patiala; the maharajah of Nawanagar, better known as Ranji, a cricket player of note; and the nawab of Bhopal.

Specifically, they want these three measures:

1—An Indian states council composed of the viceroy, two Englishmen, the head of the political department of India and three native princes.

2—A Union council, which should be the supreme executive council for all of India and should

WEDDING ANNULLED
BUT NO MARRIAGE

Queer Mixup Over Capt. Lyon Who Flew Plane Across the Pacific.

Portland, Me., Aug. 18.—"It's all a mystery to me," Capt. Harry W. Lyon said today when told of reports from San Francisco that a woman had been granted an annulment from him there.

"How could there be an annulment when there wasn't any marriage? And how could there have been a marriage in San Francisco in 1920 when I was in China most of that year? Captain Lyon asked. "I am going to the coast within three weeks and straighten the whole thing out. I shall fly to San Francisco from Detroit by a plane which is being completed there for Jack Maddox of the Maddox Airplane in Los Angeles."

Captain Lyon was here today enroute to Paris Hill where a celebration was being held in his honor and to do him honor for his flight across the Pacific as navigator of the British-American plane Southern Cross.

Charles Ray, president of the Rogers Paper Manufacturing Company, last night made application for a marriage license to wed Miss Ellen Celia Murphy, who is employed in a clerical position with the company of which he is manager.

Miss Murphy, whom Mr. Ray is to marry, was named in Mrs. Lena Ray's suit for divorce, which she recently won, being granted a decree on August 2, with $47,500 alimony and $2,500 counsel fees.

The order gave thirty days in which to make the full payment.

Mr. Ray and Miss Murphy are to be married Wednesday, August 22. The law requires five days' notice. It is understood Mr. Ray has leased a home in the Pine Forest tract here.

STAR WEDS AUTHOR

New York, Aug. 18.—Helen Hayes, star of "Coquette," and Charles MacArthur, co-author of "The Front Page," were being congratulated along Broadway today on their marriage, which occurred without previous announcement yesterday. The actress and the playwright had been engaged for some two years but no intimation was given that they intended to be married soon.

The new Mrs. MacArthur played her role in "Coquette" last night as usual.

UNEARHT FOREST BURIED IN 1278

Paris, Aug. 18.—Well diggers operating near Corenc, in the department of Isere, lead scientists on an investigation which proved they had unearthed a huge forest which was wiped out by a landslide from Mount St. Eynard in 1278.

Gases bubbling up through the water of a new well aroused the curiosity of workmen, who investigated and found immense tree trunks, roots and branches of oak. Decay of the wood was responsible for the gases.

Scientists who checked in on the discovery, reported records which told of forest lands being buried there by an avalanche in 1278.

20 TON ANIMALS LIVED AGES AGO

Paris, Aug. 18.—While the Roy Chapman Andrews expedition into the Gobi desert of Mongolia failed to find evidence that human life, as symbolized by the first pre-drawn man, originated in that region, it did make astounding discoveries of new forms of prehistoric animal life which will astonish the world, according to members of the expedition here today.

Men and women of the stone age 150,000 years ago, thrived in the Mongolian desert, although it was not a desert at that time. It was a fertile region of lakes, rivers and abundant vegetation. Stone implements used in hunting and in every day life were discovered by the explorers.

Gigantic Animal

One of the most interesting discoveries was the fossil remains of an animal that dwarfed anything of the Dinosaur Age. This monster, which thrived in the then fertile jungles of Mongolia, was probably 20 tons in weight and lived on vegetable matter. Single bones of this ancient monster were as big as a full grown man. It probably stood 30 feet high. The theory of the scientists of the expedition was that the beast grew so enormous that it eventually succumbed to its own weight.

Fossils dug from the clay of hill sides indicated that there was animal life in Mongolia more than 6,000,000 years ago.

SMITH READY WITH ANSWER TO DR. STRATON

Statement Will Be Made Public Within Next 48 Hours—To Reply to Editor White Also.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 18.—In a statement which he is expected to make public within 48 hours, Gov. Al Smith will vigorously denounce Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, New York, and William Allen White, Kansas editor, for picturing him as a deadly foe of moral progress and a friend of the saloon, gambling and vice.

There are indications that the statement may become an important campaign document, according to the governor's confidants.

Almost on the eve of the ceremony at which he will be formally notified of the presidential nomination, the governor will tell the voters of America that his two major critics, Dr. Straton and William Allen White, have gotten things completely changed about, and that he is a friend and not a foe of moral progress.

His Record

The governor, according to his friends, will point to a number of laws which he has approved during the eight years he has occupied the chair of chief executive of New York to prove that he is a friend and not a foe of moral progress.

He will challenge his critics, his confidants assert, to point to one law that has been placed on the statute books while he has been governor which by any stretch of imagination, would indicate that he is a foe of moral progress.

Because he expects that charges similar to those made by Dr. Straton and White will be hurled at him in the coming campaign, the governor, his friends assert, welcomes this opportunity to throw down the gauntlet of battle to his critics.

For the last two weeks the governor has been delving into his 20-year-old legislative record upon which White said he based the charges that he always voted to protect the saloon, gambling and vice. In his forthcoming statement, the governor will tell White that he is proud and not ashamed of his legislative record and that he always voted in the Assembly according to the dictates of his conscience.

Walsh to Help

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, an overnight guest at the executive mansion, declared that while he differed with Smith on some questions widely considered, he would support the presidential nominee "to the limit."

It was generally believed that Senator Walsh referred to Gov. Smith's stand on prohibition when he said:

"We do not agree on some questions widely considered. But it is vain to look for a candidate with convictions representing millions of voters who likewise have convictions, and agreeing with them on all questions. The most that can be hoped for is that he shall be with them on fundamentals—that on the whole he shall be found

MAN KILLS DAUGHTER AND SHOOTS HIS WIFE

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Enraged because his wife had refused his advances, Leo Willock, 35, shot and killed his 15-year-old daughter, Sarah, early today, then shot and probably fatally wounded his wife, Mrs. Stella Willock, 32.

The little girl was killed when she threw herself in front of her mother to shield her from the bullets. Her sacrifice was in vain, however. The first bullet killed the girl; Willock then fired again at his wife.

Willock, in a stupor from drink, was arrested shortly after the shooting.

Rush for Steamships to Dodge Subpoenas for Liquor Law Violations.

New York, Aug. 18.—Scared stiff by the sharpest fangs prohibition has yet bared, numerous Park avenue fashionables who like their cocktails today were fleeing service of subpoenas that would bring them before the Federal Grand Jury Monday. One hundred and twenty-five subpoenas already have been served on ritz folk from the radio and the city hall.

This is the first time Uncle Sam had gone after patrons of damp night clubs along Broadway.

Government men are trying to round up guests of the thirty-odd cabarets that were raided along the White Way the night that Gov. Smith was named Democratic presidential candidate.

The first stage of that drive was completed when managers, waiters, owners and employees in the clubs were indicted.

What can be done to those who merely drink in the joy palace. Not much—merely a two-year jail sentence.

Rush to Escape

Thus it was that steamship lines reported a rush of orders for reservations.

Rich and socially prominent night club habitués professed a desire to start at once for Europe, Australia, Asia, New Zealand or any far climate—any distant port in a dry storm.

It was learned that federal men are trying to search papers on 500 more men and women.

Simultaneously with this new departure in the prohibition campaign came an innovation in customs service procedure.

The French liner Ile de France sailed from Manchester at the exit gate of the pier, slapping the pockets of the 4,000 males who bade bon voyage to departing friends.

Not a single bottle was said to have been discovered.

Never before have customs men subjected ship's visitors to search.

more satisfactory to them than his opponents.

His Prediction Walsh predicted that Montana would go Democratic. When asked if he believed Smith would be elected, he replied: "I have no facts or reports to base a statement on."

The prosecutor in the oil scandals declared that the election of Smith "would introduce into our national councils something of the human element, sadly lacking under the regime of Coolidge and Mellon."

The heated controversy between Smith and Senator Charles J. Hewitt, and Assemblyman Eberly Hutchinson, chairman of the finance committee of the two Houses of the Legislature, over state park funds raged on today.

In his latest statement, the governor charged the G. O. P. leaders with "playing cheap politics." He said that Secretary of State Robert Moses, who also serves as chairman of the state committee on the park, had attempted to show that Hutchinson had attempted to block the park program on Long Island.

PAUL WRESTS TROAS FROM HOMER AND PHILIPPI FROM ALEXANDER

The International Sunday School Lesson for August 19 is, "Paul Carries the Gospel Into EUROPE"—Acts 15:36-16:15.

Thanks to the stupidity of our educational system, few students ever learn to link secular history with Bible history, much less secular geography with Bible geography. So it will be news to most readers of these lines that Troas, the famous port of Paul's departure from what we now call the continent of Asia into our Europe, was a part of the Troad, the seat of Homer's Troy. Had it not been for Paul's laying a possessive hand upon this domain of the blind poet, the world's interest in this heap of ruins along the shore of the Aegean would be wholly classical, instead of biblical. What teacher of ancient history or literature ever linked the name of the tentmaker of Tarsus with that of the blind bard? Because he was a scholar, as well as an artisan and a missionary, Paul could not keep away from the scenes of Homer's story. Like every other educated man of his time, he had been trained in the Iliad and Odyssey. He had the same zest for visiting Homer's sites as I have had in visiting Bible sites. Probably the books and parchments that he left at Troas, along with his cloak, were his copies of Homer's poems. Little did he dream that he was supplanting his literary master as the world's chief figure of interest at Troas.

Elbowing Out Alexander
More than that, when Paul had crossed the Aegean Sea and reached Philippi, he unconsciously emulated the practice of Pharaoh Rameses II. He aggressively thrust his own name upon earlier monuments. For Philippi was the capital of Philip of Macedon, the birthplace and boyhood home of Alexander the Great. Yet now for every person who knows it as such, there are a hundred who associate it only with the name and work of St. Paul. The tentmaker has elbowed the greatest of world conquerors out of his fame as Philippi's foremost name.

Such dramatic touches as these illustrate the fuller significance of the Emperor Julian's despairing confession, "Thou hast conquered, O pale Galilean!" The many-sided conquests of Christ's gospel have fixed His flag where once other famous standards flew. This is a good lesson to start thoughts of Christian imperialism.

An Old Mission; a Modern Mistake
All of these unpremeditated triumphs befell in the course of the day's work; as true greatness usually comes, unexpectedly, in the course of duty done without self-consciousness. After the Jerusalem Council, which settled forever that Christianity should be broad-gauge and not narrow-gauge, Paul and Barnabas decided to retrace their first missionary journey, and to hearten the converts.

Barnabas wanted to take along again his nephew, John Mark, who had proved a slacker on the earlier trip. Paul would have none of him, so the two comrades separated, and Barnabas drops out of the story.

After visiting the churches that had been founded on his first journey, Paul pressed on to the Aegean Sea, through the heart of what is now Turkey. The present capital of Turkey, Angora, was then the chief city of Galatia, the province which gives its name to one of the New Testament epistles. So, with Silas and Timothy and Luke for companions, Paul came to Troas, the port of Troy; and there had his famous vision calling him over into Macedonia.

Preachers and writers have had great times with this voyage of Paul, perhaps inspired by Dean Farrar's famous discourse, which pictures this as one of the decisive steps of history. Many parallels are drawn, showing how all history was changed when Christianity, in the person of Paul and his party, crossed over from Asia to Europe, from the East to the West.

Now this is interesting, and even thrilling—except that it has no foundation in fact! There was no political division between Europe and Asia, in Paul's day. The only Asia which his world knew was the Roman province of that title, now called Asia Minor, after which the largest continent later took its name. The simple fact is that both Asia and Macedonia were provinces of the Roman Empire. None of the emotions that stirred Dean Farrar, and countless other commentators, could have been in Paul's mind.

As to Macedonia
All possible changes have been rung upon "the Macedonia call;" and the western church has assumed that the figure represents the modern pagan world, calling for the Gospel. As a matter of sober record, most heathen lands have not wanted the Gospel. It was only a vision that Paul saw; the figure was in the apostle's own consciousness; there was no real man in Macedonia actually pleading for the Good News. Then, as now, the non-Christian world needs the Gospel, but it does not at first know enough to want it. Paul answered a need, and not a summons.

As one familiar with these waters, Luke describes the voyage to Macedonia, and, like a typical Greek, he exaggerates the real status of Philippi, which was not at the time the chief city of the province. Neapolis, where the party landed, is the modern Kavalla, the chief city of export of Greek, or "Turkish" tobacco to America. This trade has given the port a phenomenal modern prosperity.

Macedonia continues to be one at the world's unsolved problems. The land itself has been absorbed into Greece and Jugoslavina, and the Macedonians are still seeking independence by terrorist policies. Within Macedonia, the irrepressible "Macedonian Question" has flared up by way of spectacular assassinations.

There is talk of reclaiming the marsh land at Philippi, where the river has spread into a swamp. The old stone river wall, where Paul found Lydia and her women friends at the place of prayer, is known to the hunters who wade the marsh for game. Of Philippi's ruins there will be something to say next week.

Macedonia continues to be one at the world's unsolved problems. The land itself has been absorbed into Greece and Jugoslavina, and the Macedonians are still seeking independence by terrorist policies. Within Macedonia, the irrepressible "Macedonian Question" has flared up by way of spectacular assassinations.

It is beyond dispute that neither the university nor the unity of human personality, its two most obviously essential features, were adequately understood in pre-Christian ages.—Illingworth.

If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.—I John 1:9.

Writer Tells Of Changes War Made In Youth

The war, prohibition, the movies, automobiles—each has been blamed for the changes in conventions that have come with in the last decade. Authorities on social problems differ in their reasons for the present-day lack of Victorian modesty.

Eleanor Early, in "Whirlwind,"
The Herald's powerful new serial which begins Thursday, Aug.
23, presents a vivid picture of the changes that took place following the war. This extract from the first chapter of the story illustrates also the ability of the author to write forcibly:

"The Eighteenth Amendment had been passed, and drinking was becoming lamentably smart.
Flasks had come in; and a really daring present for a man to give a girl was an enameled flaskette for her bag. Girls had begun to smoke, too. Men were saying you never knew whether a girl would be insulted if you offered her a cigarette or offended if you didn't."
"Soldiers everywhere had been mustered out of service, and women were still feeling their. Dough-boys walked where angels feared to tread, and gobs were household pets. It was eminently respectable for 'nice' girls to accept a cigarette with men in uniform.
The marines had become social lions. Everywhere the ex-service man was sitting pretty. Unless, of course, he happened to be incapacitated, or looking for a job."
"Club women were beginning to get excited, and talk reforms. For a crime wave hit the country. . . .
And even the girls were going crazy. They rolled their stockings, and checked their corsets when they went to dances. Eventually they discarded them all together, but that was not until later."
"Cosmetics spring into favor, and women began to make up like Jezebels."
"The evils of the war" became a sort of slogan. People talked despairingly of "the youth of the land," and wondered what they were going to do about it. Important persons were interviewed on what they thought of the Modern Girl. Desiring to be broad-minded, they eulogized her, not knowing what it was all about.
And, meantime, she went from bad to worse."

QUALITY AT LOW COST

CO-OPERATION

By GEORGE HENRY DOLE

International Sunday School Lesson Text, August 19:
Come over into Macedonia, and help us.—Acts 16:9.

No one is sufficient unto himself. The development of science and the increasing complexity of civil relations make dependence upon others continually more evident. Some of us can remember when on the farm there were the forge, carpenter shop, and weaving machine. The men sheared the sheep, and the women spun and wove. Most of the provisions were raised on the place, and few things were purchased. Surprising has been the change. The greater number of what are regarded necessaries are now purchased.

One part of the country is dependent upon another for its productions. More and more this dependence is becoming international, making the world a unit, like the human body with its many organs. Thereby the life-blood of knowledge, thought, and affection flows through the veins of commerce eventually to make mankind one in God, the Father of all.

The unscientific nation needs the help of the scientific. The modern commercially can be advanced by the more spiritual. The humble have a vital lesson for the proud and arrogant. Each nation by contributing its offering, makes a more perfect whole.

The specializing of industries does not destroy true individualism. The musician is not to become a lawyer; nor a lawyer, a physician; nor a mechanic, an astronomer. Development does not tend that way. Advance is through each gaining the mastery of his own occupation. The real advance is not merely through increased efficiency and production, but in the growing love of more extended uses.

Think not that either use or life is less because inventions make one's use as but a cog on a wheel of a complex machine. A cog is as essential as any other part of a mechanism. If it breaks, the machine is repaired. Already many industries are resolved into what some call monotonous repetition, and it is only the beginning of what is to come. That knowledge and life are necessary that one may meet the inevitable with gratitude and joy. The love of use and multiplied service can make any occupation a "most happy" opportunity. This life is a means, and not an end. All paths of usefulness, duly loved, lead alike into the holy city.

London Streets "Paved With Gold" For Beggars With Stage Ability

London.—For the beggar with sufficient theatrical ability to exhibit his trade thoroughly, London's pavements are paved with gold.
Periodically cases are heard in court which reveal that the seedy, be-grimmed individuals who stand on the curb imploring passersby to purchase a box of matches for a penny, are often persons of comfortable means.

One case that attracted wide attention was that of Ernest D'Enton, describing himself as an ex-service man, who at his arraignment was charged with driving daily from Portsmouth to his place in London in a high-priced automobile.
D'Enton, shabbily dressed and presenting a woeful appearance, was in the habit of stationing himself before a department store or other busy place, displaying a few boxes of matches in a battered suitcase. He carried a card on which was written: "My last hopes —wife and five children. Puffs given."

The sympathetic public gladly bought his wares, and so engaging was the beggar's ways when he was brought into conversation, that he received many handsome gifts from passersby.

On more than one occasion, the police revealed, some kind-hearted stranger set D'Enton up in business, but he failed to keep his appointments and always found his way back to the gutter. He often wrote letters to wealthy individuals begging them to aid in his "heartbreaking struggle to obtain a mere existence in this so-called Christian country."

WHY SWITCH?

The Republican voter who cast his ballot next November for Governor Smith because Smith is wet and because the Voter believed that Herbert Hoover is dry would be so lacking in a sense of proportion that we refuse to believe there is such a person anywhere. The voter in a Presidential election arrives at his choice of candidates after long consideration. He may think that he knows, the day of the nomination, how he is going to vote, but as a matter of fact he doesn't. Consciously or unconsciously his determination is subjected, before election day, to a lot of battering. If it remains unchanged it cannot be for lack of considerable thought. And the more the wet voter thinks of over the less reason he will find for seeing any profit in quitting Hoover for Smith.

The influence of the Presidential office on the future of the liquor question can be only very secondary at best. Whatever is done through legislation must be done by Congress. The President can only figure in it as a proposer or through the exercise of the veto power.

Consider this fact: If Governor Smith should become President and if he should propose a modification of the Volstead act he would with absolute certainty be opposed by the majority of his own party in Congress, that majority consisting of Southerners who, for social and economic reasons having to do with the Negro question, must vote dry whatever their personal habits may be. And since Smith's favorite theory of prohibition reform is to permit each state to write its own enforcement law and make whiskey "non-intoxicating" if it so chooses, he would certainly get very little support from the Republican side. Wherefore, any Smith proposition would be doomed to failure and we should be left right where we are. What would the wet voter gain by such a proceeding?

On the other hand, if Mr. Hoover were elected he would undoubtedly have a Republican majority in Congress. He would not be dependent on dry-shackled Southern Democrats to pass any legislation he might recommend, but would have the support of a great majority of his own party in Congress, most of them members elected from populous Northern states which are not tied to the dry chariot of wheat.

And we know from Mr. Hoover's own declarations that he does not hold a fanatic point of view with regard to what constitutes "intoxicating beverages." We know that he has said "it is very difficult for a person to get drunk on two and three-quarters per cent beer." We know that he is opposed to nullifying the Eighteenth amendment by permitting New York and New Jersey to make its own spurious enforcement law legalizing whiskey, but we have no slightest reason for believing that he would oppose a sane modification of the federal enforcement act. In fact there is every reason to believe that he would do just that thing, for he has the courage of his convictions in this matter of liquor. Else why did he, in direct defiance of the W. C. T. U. and other extremist organizations, specifically declare that every citizen had a perfect right to seek the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, when those organizations have over and over again declared all such attempts to be treasonable?

If a Dinwiddie or another Wayne B. Wheeler had been nominated by the Republican party there would have been some reason in a wet Republican switching to Smith, because there would have been reason to fear illegal extensions of fanatic repression. But Mr. Hoover is a liberal and a highly responsible citizen. He would never, as President, scrap the rest of the constitution in order to enforce one amendment to it. And he would never in the world use the veto power to kill a perfectly legal modification of the Volstead act if it should be made by Congress.

There is, as a matter of fact, much more chance of liberal, sane legislation under the Eighteenth amendment, with Hoover, than with Smith. Mr. Hoover will never be the bond-slave of Volsteadism, he is assured. He simply assures the nation that he will defend the constitution, not against change but against nullification. And Smith, if he were President, would have to do the same thing or violate his oath.

FARM BOODLE

Several days ago there appeared a rumor to the effect that a number of wealthy supporters of Candidate Al Smith were arranging to form a pool for "immediate relief" of the western agriculturalist by making loans at very low rate of interest, if any interest at all. The sum mentioned was ten million dollars. The purpose of the movement was entirely obvious—to convince the supposedly discontented farmers of Republican agricultural states that the Democratic party was just filled to overflowing not only with loving kindness toward the distressed son of the soil but with the power to look after him as well as eagerness to do it.

So obvious, indeed, that hardly anybody believed the story. It didn't seem possible that people experienced enough to be in control of ten million dollars would resort to a device so foolishly transparent, and at the same time so utterly devoid of any service to the farmer. Time and time again the farmers have cried out against relief through loans. "We don't want to get any deeper into debt," they protest; "what we want is a chance to earn our way out of debt."

Yet the project took very definite and greatly enlarged form yesterday in the acceptance by Wall Street of the astonishing report that John J. Raskob, William F. Kenney and a number of other rich Smithites plan to organize at once a brand new bank with no less than fifty millions of capital whose business shall be the extension of easy credit to the agriculturalist for the marketing of this year's crops.

It seems almost ridiculous to describe any fifty million dollar thing as "cheap." Just the same this would be the cheapest and most flagrant device for wholesale bribery, in effect, that ever was put over in politics—it is were to go through. "Vote for Smith and get your loan." If anybody can see any other purpose in the proposed plan he must have good eyes and a deal of simple faith.

Unless we are very much mistaken the project will meet with nothing but condemnation in the agricultural states. What the farmers want is some scientific remedy for a distressing economic condition, not loans in return for votes.

The Tammany conception of the farm problem is the fruit of Tammany's experiences at home. It never had a letter demonstration than in the big-bank plan. Tammany has no more idea than the man in the moon of what the farm problem is all about. But it has faith in a panacea for all discontented voters' ills and the name of the cure-all is boodle.

HANDS ACROSS RHINE

Count Storza, former Italian foreign minister, tells the Williamson Institute that, despite occasional sabre rattling by militarists, the people of Germany and France are being steadily drawn together by economic pressure.

Why not? Why should not the people of these two neighbor countries realize that the strength of the situation of either lies in the complete accord of both. That, in fact, these two nations possess between them, the greatest potential power for world peace that exists anywhere.

Strangely enough, there has never been any sound material reason for the suspicion and hatred that has existed between France and Germany. Every particle of their antagonism is traceable to dynastic ambitions. Economically each is a complement, rather than a rival, of the other. Working together their capacity for material development is unlimited. Together they would constitute a potential military power absolutely invulnerable.

Moreover, though each nation has demonstrated, each in its own way, its genius for the arts of war, it is entirely true that neither the Germans nor the French are inherently warlike people.

On the day when the world is finally and fully assured that there can never for economic and social reasons, be another war between Germany and France, and that attack on either would involve attack on both, a European war of any importance can be set down as an impossibility for all time.

There can be no doubt that great business interests in both countries are working toward such an end, either consciously or partly consciously. And politics is coming more and more to be ruled by economic and business considerations all over the world.

TUNNEY

Gene Tunney may have gotten his fortune of a million or two or less with much rapidity and, relatively little effort. But he is earning it now in the sweat of his soul, so to speak.

The yellowness of the yellow press in America was never quite so deeply saffron in any previous relationship, with the possible exception of one or two abominably exploited murder trials, as it has been in its jackal pursuit of Tunney since it was first reported that he was engaged to be married.

When Tunney retired from the public position of a champion pugilist he did so, as every one must know, at sacrifice of great future earnings. That was the price he paid for the right to live as a private citizen. But the yelping tabloids and yellows, lacking the faintest sense of actual news values and untrammelled by a scintilla of good taste or decency, have persistently yapped at his heels every moment ever since.

We will say that a young man who packed a wallop "such as he possesses and who has been able to refrain from planting it successively on the noses of a dozen of the pests who dog his steps and those of his fiancée has given a display of self-control worthy of a saint.

Every self-respecting newspaper and newspaperman in the United States will utterly disavow the rotten ethics involved in this shameless hectoring of a man and a girl who have done nothing to deserve anything but fair treatment.

MENTAL BARNACLES.

The road to progress is uphill and unpared. It is much easier for us to stroll along the well trodden trails of the past than to forge our way into the unknown.

We always try to avoid new problems of thinking. Every new thing has been condemned in its day and generation by those who did not wish to make the effort to understand its meaning.

When railroads were first introduced, many objected because they said that human beings would be killed if they traveled over twenty miles an hour. Today we have airplanes traveling at almost two hundred miles per hour. When automobiles were first introduced, the pessimists cried, "Alas, the farmers will be ruined, for there will no longer be a demand for horses."

Fifty years ago, because it was so difficult to obtain fuel in the city, many lazy authorities claimed it was unhealthy—that one would catch a cold through too much bathing. The daily bath is now recognized as one of our best health habits.

When the first cold storage meat was shipped from Brazil to France seventy-five years ago, the French would not let it land, claiming that the meat would be dangerous to health. It was finally landed in England, and no doubt this broad-minded attitude of the English has contributed much to the eminence of their nation. It is well known that the English are extremely fond of their roast beef.

The arguments that you hear today against meat eating are remnants of the same reasoning used at that time—that flesh would spoil soon after it was killed, and become poisonous if kept too long. Those who have dared to investigate have found that properly killed meat is actually more wholesome after being refrigerated for several months.

Many people still believe that acids and milk make a bad combination. I recently read an article by one health expert who said he had proved there was nothing to good or bad combinations because he had found that patients could eat fruit and drink milk at the same time without any bad consequences. He did not know it, but he was simply stating a discovery made by practical dietitians many years ago that milk combined perfectly with acids, being more easily digested in this combination than alone. He apparently did not know that if bread were added to this otherwise good mixture, excessive fermentation is set up, often producing very serious consequences.

Even today many physicians teach that athletes die young because of taking too much violent exercise. The truth is that violent deaths are not caused by continuing to exercise as often as dis-

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Aug. 18.—When the Seventy-first Congress convenes, it appears probable that Robert M. LaFollette will still be the youngest man in the Senate.

Reports from Wisconsin indicate that the regular Republicans, or "stalwarts," have little hope of defeating him for renomination in the primary on Sept. 4.

LaFollette is only 33 years old and his political enemies have undertaken to use the fact against him. It's a man's job, they say, and now that the state has paid him the compliment of allowing him to serve out his late father's term, it ought to remember that Young Bob is just a boy and hasn't really cut any figure in Congress.

But Young Bob's friends are predicting that he will win three to one.

His opponent for the nomination is George W. Mead, millionaire mayor of Wisconsin Rapids and president of a water power company and a paper company. LaFollette appears to be so assured of his own renomination that he is devoting most of his time toward the nomination of Congressman Joseph D. Beck, one of the old LaFollette progressives, for governor.

The LaFollette ticket is engaged in the bitterest sort of struggle with the electric power interests, which are reported to be spending a wad of money for their candidates. Sam Insull's companies own about 80 per cent of the public utilities and water power in Wisconsin. The fight between the power interests and their allies and the progressives has come to center on the subterranean fight. The former believe that it is more important for them to win this than to defeat Young Bob.

Beck is opposed by Governor Fred R. Zimmerman and by Walter J. Kohler, the millionaire manufacturer of bathroom fixtures of Kohler, Wis., who is supported by National Committeeman George Vits.

The LaFollette believe the division of the opposition is an advantage to Beck. They expect Zimmerman, who was elected on a LaFollette progressive platform but was inimical to the group now led by LaFollette and Beck, to run third.

continuing to exercise, or by exercising too violently after they had been overeating.

Some doctors are still advising weak patients to stay in bed and eat plenty of rich, nourishing food. The advanced idea is to encourage the weak patient to exercise to gain strength and, at the same time, to select food of a better quality, and reduce the quantity.

Only a short time ago it was considered very dangerous to breathe night air. Now we know that this is the purest air, and every one is advised to sleep out of doors, winter and summer.

There is a science of life for you to study just as surely as there are rules of chemistry or mathematics, and if you do not study it, you will not learn by study and experimentation, and your experiences with pain should be lessons to assist you in understanding the problems of life.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question: K. L. asks: "What would cause one to have to take a deep breath every minute? If I don't, I feel like choking. I am healthy otherwise and gaining weight, and have no pain whatever in my chest."

Answer: If you would take deep-breathing exercises two or three times a day, I am sure you would lose the desire to take the deep breath every minute. It might be well for you to stop whatever you are doing several times during the day and inhale and exhale several times to the extreme. Your lungs, no doubt want more air, and the deep breathing supplies this.

Question: Mrs. R. B. asks: "Does milk form a solid food in the stomach?"

Answer: If milk is taken in large swallows it will form large curds in the stomach and is then not easily digestible. However, if small amounts of lemon juice are taken with the milk, or if the milk is taken very slowly, the curds will be smaller, in which case the digestive juices can have a better effect in digesting these curds.

Question: G. H. writes: "Please answer these questions through the column: 'Parasit' does 'parasis' mean? (2) What was the cause of a pain around the heart when I carried a heavy load up a flight of stairs? Every time I tried to breathe or bend over I felt a pain. It lasted about two hours."

Answer: "Parasit" means a form of brain degeneration. It is a very serious and usually fatal disorder. The pain you tell me about may have been due to heart strain, or to the less serious but painful symptoms which come from an injury to the cartilages between the ribs. If you could feel the source of the pain with your fingers on your ribs, it was due to the latter cause and not to any heart injury.

SCOTCH MUSIC FESTIVAL AT BANFF ON AUG. 31 HAS PRINCE'S PATRONAGE

Banff, Alberta.—The Prince of Wales has again given his patronage to the Highland Gathering and Scottish Music Festival in the Canadian Rockies, running here from August 31 to September 3. Initiated a year ago, this living pageant of Scotland's games, dances and folk-songs had from the start the support of the prince, and quickly established itself as an institution in the Canadian West.

Through the courtesy of the Colonel the Hon. J. L. Raiston, Canada's Minister of National Defence, who is Honorary Patron of this gathering, the Highland Regiment of the Dominion will be represented by delegate pipers, and there will be additional pipers from other units of the Canadian Militia and from other pipe bands.

CAUGHT BY THE EARS

Paris.—Parisian police are working out an elaborate system of identifying criminals by their ears. While the fingerprint system is admittedly good, it is said, there is some uncertainty about it. With ears, however, no two sets of which are alike, police hope to construct a better system of criminal tracing.

Interesting Interviews With Local Folks Talks with Manchester Business and Professional Men and Women-Intimate Word Pictures of Persons You See Day After Day.

EDITOR'S NOTE-This is the second of a new series of local Saturday features. Each week another person will be interviewed. In this sketch an unusual angle is the fact that the person interviewed said but two words-"Good Evening."

"the plucker." A "plucker" is generally a broken down musician who takes this job as a last resort. It is his duty to play over and over again for ten to twelve hours a day.

Splendid Store The local store visited this week was anything but tiny. It is anything but dingy-anything but dim. It is a big store, furnished with simple elegance.

An attempt was made to interview Samuel Kemp but this was made impossible because Mr. Kemp was so busy explaining the good qualities of a player piano that no progress was made during the entire evening.

As he stood talking to the customer, Mr. Kemp appeared to be a man of about 35 years of age. He is above medium height. Black hair, smoothly shaven. His face, heavily tanned, as if just returned from a vacation spent outdoors.

Samuel Kemp was born in Lewiston, Maine, one of a family of six. After graduating from high school in his native city he showed such an aptitude for music that his parents sent him to the Boston Conservatory of Music.

Following he came to Manchester to take charge of the musical department of a local concern and after seven years there decided to go into business for himself.

He opened the pioneer music house of Manchester in 1922 in the old Johnson block Main street and then later moved to his present location between Bissell and Birch streets.

The chime at the Home Bank started to sound the curfew for business on Manchester's Main street. As the first note was heard, Mr. Kemp who had just concluded his piano sale, turned and noticed the reporter.

"Good evening" he remarked with a smile. And thus began and ended this novel interview with him.

WATCH THE MODEL HOME FOR

ADEQUATE WIRING AID TO FIRST IMPRESSION IN ENTRANCE OF HOME

First impressions of the home are usually gained in the entrance vestibule and front hall, so that the owner who takes pride in his house does well to care for their planning and equipment in a fashion which reflects the thought given to the rest of the house.

Proper appointments in the hall and vestibule are in large degree dependent upon adequacy of electrical installation. When you enter your home at night your first need is light. It has been authoritatively estimated that an average home installation for vestibule and hall requires seven tumbler switches, one twin convenience outlet and two ceiling outlets, for modern convenience and comfort.

The tumbler switch by the front door should be ready at hand when you enter. Just a touch of your finger—or even of your elbow—and the vestibule is flooded with light. Beside it is another tumbler switch that controls the entrance lights.

Two of the three switches just inside the entrance to the hall repeat the function of the two in the vestibule; the third operates the hall center light, which is also separately controlled through the switch in the hall, next to the living room door.

CONCRETE FLOORS CUT FIRE HAZARDS

According to data compiled by insurance underwriters, fires originating in basements are responsible for at least one out of every three serious house fires. The sources of such fires are varied; the heating plant, with its piles of fuel and ashes, is considered the most dangerous. Other fire hazards, however, lurk in basement laundry stoves, piles of oily rags and in the odds-and-ends which are often found in the basements of American homes.

Repeated tests have shown that a fire-safe first floor, which not only cannot catch and transmit fire but which stops fire from reaching the walls, cuts down the fire liability of a house by ten per cent. or more.

With nothing to feed on, a basement fire soon burns itself out, with a minimum of danger. A type of concrete floor which is meeting with considerable favor at present is known as the "tile-and-joint" floor. In building this floor, ordinary hollow concrete building tiles are incorporated, serving in the dual capacity of forms and integral units. The tiles are laid side by side, in rows about five inches apart, on a wooden falsework which also serves as the bottom form for the concrete joists. Concrete, reinforced with steel bars, is placed between the rows and to the depth of several inches over the tile. When the concrete has hardened, the falsework is removed. The result is a smooth, even basement ceiling which may be plastered direct, and a first floor which may be finished in any one of several ways to produce unusual beauty.

The experience of many buildings has shown that a concrete first floor for small homes increases the initial cost of construction only about 2 per cent. In other words, it adds about $15 to the cost of a $750 house. The savings in upkeep and repair made possible by the extra expenditure soon compensates for the $150. The security from fire is worth much more than that, from the outset.

The practice of building garage space in the basements of modern homes has introduced another fire hazard making it necessary that fire walls and floors be used to secure adequate protection.

FIREPLACES SHOULD HAVE INDIVIDUALITY

The fireplace is always the center of attraction in any room in which it is placed. Its mantel determines the whole character of the room, for decoration of the room begins with the hearth. Given a fireplace worthy of the home, you may do what you will to the rest of the room and it will retain its livability.

Modern methods of quantity production and scientific manufacture have made available artistically designed mantels of all periods at low cost. Where the individual design and manufacture of such mantels would be prohibitive the resources of the larger millwork concerns make possible the employment of trained artists and craftsmen in design and construction.

Colonial, English and other mantels of all types and periods provide a wide range of choice, giving a style individually appropriate for each room. It has become increasingly in favor among architects within recent years to revert to the old practice of placing mantels and hearths in one or more bedrooms. The drying radiance of a wood or coal fire has been many times declared to be the most effective of aids to composure and sleep, while a cheerful wood blaze removes the rigor of dressing on wintry mornings. By the same token breakfast in a small room with a fireplace becomes a pleasurable event.

SCIENCE HAS MADE COPPER ROOFS AVAILABLE TO ALL

By means of a new form of shingle one may have a roof which gives all the lasting protection of pure copper against wear, weather and fire—plus a charm that grows more lovely through the years. Once only expensive, homes could have the advantage of a copper roof. Now science has made it available in copperclad at half the cost of copper roofing in its oldtime form and only slightly more than high-grade wooden shingles.

John J. Flavell PLUMBING AND HEATING CONTRACTOR

173 Woodbridge St., Tel. 511-5 How often we are routed out at most any old time like this: "Hello, yes, this is Mr. Flavell. What's that? Oh yes; bad leak, eh? Well I'll be over right away."

And that bad leak as a rule results from old rusted out pipes. Use brass or wrought iron for permanence.

Herald-Elizabeth Park Model Home In Beautiful Location

The above illustration gives one a very clear picture of what is going on at Elizabeth Park in addition to the Model Home located on Henry Street Extension. The house shown in the left foreground of the picture has been built by Mr. Smith to be sold and it is now very near completion. As one can see, the exterior finish is done and the grading is nearly complete. Further on up the street on the left side, excavation work is under way for a new home for Carl Anderson, plumbing and heating contractor, and just beyond it on the next lot is the new home of William McDonald of Rockville.

One can also see that the sidewalk work is progressing rapidly. These walks are being laid by Paul Brandt, concrete contractor. They serve more than anything to give definite shape and line to a new street and you can now begin to definitely picture what Henry Street Extension is going to be like with the establishment of sidewalks, curb and gutter. Lawns can be graded and approach walks put in from the sidewalks to the various houses as they are completed.

A stately oak tree is also prominent in this section of the tract as shown in the picture. Fortunately the tree falls just within the sidewalk line and can be saved. Of all the New England trees the oak is the most sturdy and seems to be free from the blights and pests that have destroyed many of our other trees.

This week the Herald Elizabeth Park Model Home is ready for the plasterer. Emil Scherwitzky lathing contractor has finished his work, the Johnson Electric Company have the rough wiring installed and Carl Anderson has all the rough plumbing in. Work is well up to schedule, if not ahead. Plastering will be started at once and will be completed just as fast as it is possible to do so. John Mahoney holds the contract for this work. The exterior sidewalk shingle finish is very nearly completed, and the basement will be finished off in a few days. The handsome Glastonbury granite front door step furnished by W. A. Strickland from his quarries has been set.

As the work has progressed from week to week, visitors can see more of the layout of the house and how the rooms will be and look, but they do not get the final impression until after the lath has been placed. That closes in each room enough so that you cannot see through partitions in each direction and how each room will look.

and how much light there is going to be. The plastering does not change this effect because when it is dry and white it serves to reflect the light and make the rooms even lighter than they now appear. The value of a Model Home in Manchester has already been demonstrated and the home itself is not yet finished. Robert J. Smith, owner of the Herald Elizabeth Park Model Home and Elizabeth Park, his newest development, reports that he has had numerous personal contacts with Manchester people who have followed its progress from the very start and who have been influenced to build as the result of it. Every attempt has been made to embody in the Model Home the best arrangement of rooms and space and the best allocation of windows, in fact everything that will make it a model for others to work by. Of course it is granted that the taste of hardly any two individuals is alike in such matters and they would make changes here and there to suit their own ideas, but aside from that, if this Model Home is serving to stimulate interest in home construction, it is accomplishing the purpose for which it was started.

LASTING AND BEAUTIFUL STAIRWAYS LOW IN COST
How long your stairway will withstand the constant and heavy duty to which it is subjected depends to a large extent upon how it is made. Whether it becomes a rickety thing with dust-filled cracks that "gives" and creaks beneath your step, or remains sturdy and beautiful through the years, depends upon the care taken in such small details as the joining of treads to risers and of balusters to treads.

Hundreds of small pieces must be cut and put together so that the whole is neat and durable and beautiful. Treads and risers, newels, volutes, easings, goosenecks, balusters, wedges, stringers, moldings and other parts must all be fitted together into a single unit more rigid than if cut from a solid block of wood. Whether stairs are purchased in complete units or as parts to be assembled on the job, good construction and material should be insisted upon.

LIME GIVES VARIETY IN INTERIOR FINISH

Lime plaster is one of the building materials which time has treated kindly. The inroads of new materials have left lime plaster unaffected as the most popular of interior finishes; the modern home, in fact, using proportionately more of it than did the houses of earlier times. Placed on a strong and enduring base of metal lath the interesting textural and color possibilities of lime plaster may now be utilized on more than 80 per cent of the interior wall space of the house.

The history of lime plaster is substantially that of the times and nations whose history it now largely portrays in ancient masterpieces painted on its surface.

In Europe, Asia and Africa, in Peru and Mexico there are remains of work in lime plaster—mute testimony of not only its enduring qualities, but also of the skill which its users developed as civilization made progress.

In Egypt the Pyramids contain plaster work applied 4,000 years ago, which still exists in perfect condition where undisturbed by wilful violence.

Apparently, even in these early days the health value of lime plaster was appreciated, for we have no good authority that it was used not only because of its beauty and comfort, but hygienic value as well.

To the Greeks is given great credit for the perfection they attained in the use of lime plaster. It was used as stucco for the ornamentation of houses and was of excellent quality and for whiteness, hardness and polish is said to have rivaled Parian marble.

This was during the time of Pericles and Plato and the art of plastering was developed to a point beyond which little advancement has been made even to this day. It was from the Greeks that the Etruscans of middle Italy and, later, the Romans, learned the art. Many notable monuments of these races today remain preserved and bonded by mortar made from lime. Likewise, innumerable examples of fresco and mural paintings still exist because of the integrity of lime plaster.

Development of new manufacturing processes and improved distribution now makes possible the use of lime plaster in every home. All the recent developments of period finishes may now be translated in the plastic, moldable qualities of the plaster made with scientifically manufactured hydrated lime.

INVENTS NEW DEVICE FOR CLOSING WINDOW
Years ago no one ever slept with a window open, for the "night air" was supposed to be very dangerous to health. Today we have learned that plenty of fresh air, day or night is necessary to good health and few, if any, of us sleep with windows closed. There are times, in cold, winter weather, when we hesitate to open the window before going to bed as we picture the discomfort of getting out of a warm bed in the morning into the chill of the room.

There has been perfected a little device which can be attached to any bedroom window in ten or fifteen minutes' time, which will permit us to open the window seven, ten or fourteen inches, as preferred, and will, at a definite time in the morning, close the window while we sleep, permitting the room to warm up and become comfortable before the alarm clock calls us out of bed.

This device is a simple and reliable one containing no wires or gears, merely a small, noiseless and reliable clock, and is entirely self-contained. It is small, measuring only four and a quarter by four inches, inconspicuous and neatly finished in enamel. It is fastened in what is an alarm clock.

ACOUSTIC FELT ABSORBS SOUND
One of the most recent building material products, developed by scientific research, is that of acoustic felt, which absorbs annoying sounds in building interiors. Acoustic felt is unique among sound-absorbing materials in that it may be manipulated through varying the density and thickness of the material and the type of finished surface to produce almost any degree of sound absorption at any pitch. Its surface permits economical cleaning or redecorating without material reduction in its sound-absorbing qualities.

House Plans That May Interest You NO. 10. "THE STONELEIGH"

(Copyright, Standard Homes Bureau, Washington, D. C.)

Conservative, stately and substantial looking, The Stoneleigh is the type of home that commands the respect of the whole community for its owner.

Stone, stucco and natural colored boards build this home. Its large chimney of stone has a decorative bit of porcelain in it and the windows all have many panes as a further concession to vogue.

Inside, one has the same feeling of it being a home built not just for today, but for one's children's children. Roominess and pleasant livableness are its twin attributes. An extremely sizable living room, with a cheery fireplace gives on a sun parlor, thus increasing its size.

An old-fashioned but ever-needed pantry facilitates serving and storing dishes. A windowed breakfast nook obviates using the dining room of a morning.

The bedrooms upstairs are of a good size, each with two exposures of its windows. But one bedroom has all the comforts of a suite, with a cozy window nook under dormer windows at one end, an alcove with its own dormer windows at the other, and two large closets. The cost of the Stoneleigh is from $8,000 to $9,000.

HOME REFLECTS WOMAN'S TASTE Mixed Styles of Interior Require Rare Taste to Be In Good Form.

(Courtesy of "Arts and Decoration.")

America is recognized today as possessing the greatest number and the greatest variety of beautiful homes in the world. Even our medium-sized homes, and often our small houses, are luxurious in building, fittings and furnishings. Luxury has become a necessity in modern American homemaking. Of course, we also demand good architecture and the finest kind of building construction, but, over and above these things, the interiors of our homes must be elaborately convenient, elegantly comfortable—that is, every detail in the finishing of our houses and the equipment and the furnishings must be appropriate, decorative and quietly luxurious.

And we go even further than this. In addition to being richly comfortable and convenient our homes are showing an increasing knowledge of art and its relation to decoration, color wisely selected and combined is recognized as not only important to one's aesthetic enjoyment but actually to one's health. The home-makers of this country have also become deeply interested in the history and traditions of decoration and furniture with the result that the interiors of our homes today are usually most charmingly related to the architecture. The Spanish house demands the Spanish type of equipment and furniture, and so on through Tudor styles, Norman, early French, late Italian and our own most popular Colonial.

Furnishings Reproduced. Fortunate for us in this country, in addition to the fine antiques that occasionally find their way to American homes, there are beautifully made reproductions of many of the best known period furniture, period rugs, period fabrics and actual constructional fittings and accessories.

Occasionally, we accept the association of different periods in one house or in one room, but this must be done with genuine knowledge and rare taste. We may accept as a Spanish chair for a Jacobean interior, but not for an Adam room; a bit of fine Sheraton will adjust itself to the 18th Century New England Colonial room, but will be utterly out of place in a Spanish interior; a console table from Malmaison does not displease us in a Georgian drawing room but would be far too delicate for a Jacobean hall way, and not lavish enough for the Italian Renaissance. So where we choose to break up a definite period style, we must do it with thought and appreciation of the value of each style, and to accomplish this, we must either have facts at first hand or we must seek them through the channels of authoritative advice.

There are many problems involved in developing the modern home, those of construction for instance. And although these problems are very practical ones, they extend into beautiful decorative fittings which must be appropriate to the style of the room, and considered as a part of the luxurious equipment.

But after all, the part of homeing that most delights most women is the final furnishing and decorating of the house, deciding upon the woodwork for the windows, trim and floors; planning the type of ceiling and walls and their decoration; and most effective floor covering; relating the draperies for the windows and floors to rugs and tapestries; and most significant of all selecting the actual furniture which, in a way, is the very heart of the house. And to accomplish these things satisfactorily requires a cultural background, an instinctive taste or the ability to rely upon the experience and training of other people.

Women Study Decoration. And women are so interested in their homes today that many of them, in addition to the knowledge gained by travel abroad and in the surroundings of their own brings up, are actually taking courses in interior decoration, and are purchasing little libraries about architecture and the construction of homes and building materials and all the different kinds of beautiful home-making in all the different lands of the world.

The change that has taken place in the attitude of Americans about owning their own homes is amazing. It seems to have become an essential of happy living, whether the house is a palace or a cottage or anywhere between the two. Men and women have grown to want a more permanent background for their lives and their children's and they insist that this permanent background shall have a genuine beauty, expressing their own attitude toward life, have the quality that will educate their children and become something of value in their growth and development.

In other words, the house of today has become, more or less, an ideal of American living, and must in its finished form show an understanding and appreciation of decorative beauty. Hence the various elements which go to make a luxurious and convincing ensemble must be brought together with wisdom and good taste.

Besides, our rates are no higher for this class of stock and preferred service than others charge for stock delivered completely defoliated in the late fall.

If your perennial garden needs renewing don't wait until October or November. Simply Telephone 1100 for immediate action.

All the flowering shrubs planted on the grounds of The Hartford Times Model Home (opened for inspection, last Wednesday) were planted in full leaf and bloom, the last week of June without the loss of a single leaf.

PERFECT NEW CODE IN BRICK MASONRY

Although brick dwellings of the past have reached a hale and hearty old age of usefulness, a decided increase in their longevity is expected as the result of work on a national code of good practice for brick masonry construction to be undertaken shortly under the auspices of the American Engineering Standards committee.

Improvement in the moisture resisting and heat insulating qualities of brick walls wherever they may be built in the future is also to be looked for as a result of the proposed code of good practice.

Announcement that codification of good practice will soon be started follows the unanimous recommendation of a general conference of brick manufacturers, architects, contractors, engineers, craftsmen and building officials held by the Standards committee.

The code will include, as a result of the decision of the conference, factors affecting everything from the design of walls by the architect to the placing of brick by the bricklayers. The code will cover provisions for methods of laying and bonding, mortars, standards of craftsmanship, prevention of moisture penetration, parapet walls, copings and flashings, prevention of efflorescence, thermal conductivity, the design and protection of spandrel beams, methods of inspection, transverse types of wall and reinforcements. It was the intention of the conference that the code serve as a guide for industry.

Of the two factors, materials and workmanship, entering into brick masonry construction, it was the general opinion of the conference that workmanship is the more important. While occasional requirements of speed and economy have interfered with good workmanship, it was the feeling that a national code would help eliminate such a departure from good practice and that the general level of workmanship would be raised.

The committee to be charged with the task of drawing up the code will have available results of the research work conducted by J. W. McBurney at the United States Bureau of Standards. The American Society of Civil Engineers will be asked to take the leadership in the preparation of the code under the auspices of the Standards committee.

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 by NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BERTIE LOU AND ROD BRYER
 are happily married, until LILA LOREE plots to separate them. For months she works to arouse Rod's interest in her while she plants seeds of doubt in his mind about Bertie Lou. When Bertie Lou discovers that she sees each other secretly she is heartbroken and flirts with young MARCO PALMER to retaliate.

Rod will not commit himself to Lila, although he and Bertie Lou have drifted far apart. Tired of her waiting game, Lila tells Rod she loves him and wants him to go away with her. He repudiates her disloyalty to her husband, and she taunts him by saying that his wife is out with Marco.

Rod drives to the Palmer estate where he sees Marco and Bertie Lou in lounging attire and departs without learning that they were merely coming upstairs from the swimming pool.

Rod leaves Bertie Lou with no explanation, resigns his position and drifts from one thing to another trying to amuse himself. Both women try to find him without success.

Bertie Lou obtains a position, expecting Rod to get a divorce. The suspense and greediness of her lot cause her to seek forgetfulness in Marco's gay crowd. She has a nervous breakdown and, while convalescing, decides to buy a "dream home" with the money Rod had sent her when he left.

Marco begs her to marry him, but she tells him she still loves Rod. She finishes her house and advertises it for sale. She is surprised when Rod answers the ad and conceals herself while he looks at the house.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIII

Bertie Lou could not forgive Rod, she decided, yet she did pity him. Pityed him so that she could not endure the thought of letting him walk out of her door and perhaps out of her life forever. At least she called it pity.

This impulse, mood or longing whatever it was, that had brought him out to Moonfields might be but a passing phase of his adjustment to his new existence. Bertie Lou told herself that he might never come again.

But what could she do? Rush out and confront him? Banish all thought of his return? That was what it would mean, to reveal her presence now, she believed. Besides, she did not wish to talk to him. Her mind was still in a daze. She wanted time to think. But how could she hold Rod until she knew what to do?

There must be some way!

Yet she was utterly unable to reach a solution. Rod went on while Bertie Lou frantically searched for a means to delay his inevitable departure. He did not seem to be in a great hurry to go. She was thankful for that.

The obvious thing, of course, would have been to attract Bertie Lou's attention and ask her to her side for a moment and going to obtain Rod's address. But Bertie Lou was too excited, too bewildered to think rationally. She did, however, manage to motion Bertie Lou to her without being seen by Rod. A perfectly crazy idea, as she characterized it, had come into her mind.

Bessie excused herself and left Rod alone. He could hear an animated conversation going on in low tones in the kitchen while he waited.

In a few minutes Bertie Lou returned to his room. She pointed to the blank if he looked at her. "I said yes, but that she ought to apologize for having taken up so much of her time inasmuch as she feared the purchase of it would be quite beyond his means."

Bessie did not appear to be disappointed.

"How would you like to live here?" she blurted out, and Bertie Lou, in the kitchen, groaned silently.

Rod looked startled. "Why... is the house for rent?" he evaded.

"No, it's not," Bertie Lou informed him, "and the owner doesn't want to sell it, either. It was built to rent at first and then she... er... he decided to sell it. But something has happened and it's going to be taken off the market."

Much of this was true. Bertie Lou had changed her mind about renting the place. It was after a visit to it, when she had gone away feeling that it would be her too much to the unhappiness of the past to go on with her plans for renting the property. Every time she came to Moonfields she was thrown deeper into painful regret.

Instead of erecting a house wherein she could relive, in her memory, the fleeting joy of her honeymoon, she discovered that she had built a prison. In it she could not escape from thoughts of Rod that were so close she could almost feel his presence in the little cottage.

Marco, who sometimes insisted upon coming out with her in spite of her protests, noticed that she was always greatly agitated over the visits, especially when the house was nearing completion and the furniture was arriving.

When it was fully furnished at last and every piece was in its proper place, Bertie Lou herself saw that she had built a heart-breaking memorial.

On the way home from her last trip out with Marco she told him she was going to dispose of the house. It was a sudden decision. She regretted it later, after she had inserted the advertisement placing it on the market, but she overrode her loathing to part with it and if Rod had been a bona fide purchaser she would have gone through with the deal.

But it was impossible to think of letting it go now that it had brought Rod to her door. Unless of course, her fantastic plan failed to work. "If only Bessie doesn't fumble it!"

"The owner is looking for a caretaker," Bertie Lou agonized over her ability to handle the situation.

"Yes?" Rod said politely. He could not see what that had to do with him.

"You... you wouldn't like the position, would you?" she went on, and Bertie Lou fopped helplessly into a blue chair.

Bessie might as well have held up a signpost to Rod, she thought. Offering a stranger a job like that! But Bessie had a surprise in store for her.

"Of course we'd have to know that you're a respectable man," she hurried along, before Rod could formulate an answer. Bertie Lou picked up her ears. That wasn't so bad—maybe Bessie wasn't so dumb after all.

"What makes you think I need a job?" Rod asked. He wondered if he looked hungry and someone had taken pity on him.

Bessie was equal to the occasion. "I didn't think about it," she said, undisturbed, "but you said you liked the house and I just thought maybe, if you were all right and wanted to live here, you might get the job."

Rod laughed. "Well, I've never been a caretaker," he told her, thinking how little indeed he had taken care of the most precious thing in life. "What would I have to do?"

"Oh, I don't know yet. I'll have to see the owner."

"How about my seeing him?" Rod inquired.

Bessie suppressed a giggle. "He isn't here," she said quickly. "Anyway, I'm his agent. And I know what he'll pay you. It isn't very much, in fact you get your rent as most of it."

"I suppose that's reasonable for a little place like this," Rod agreed. "Why doesn't the owner live in it?"

"He has another home, and he only wants someone here until he decides what to do with the place," Bessie added the last bit of information on her own account. It was her private opinion that Bertie Lou was going "nutty." Making her ask a perfect stranger to live here! She expected anything now and was preparing a way out for Bertie Lou.

"I don't know but I'd like the job," Rod said musingly. "That is if I can qualify."

"I can let you know more about it in an hour," Bessie said. "Suppose you come back to the office. An hour would give him time to think it over."

When he was gone Bertie Lou stormed out to the kitchen and demanded to know what Bertie Lou had on her mind. "Say, what is this?" she asked heatedly. "That bimbo's going and what am I going to tell him? This isn't my idea of a joke at all."

"It isn't a joke," Bertie Lou assured her.

"Sweet spirits of nitre! You aren't really going to hire him are you? A perfect stranger?"

Bertie Lou smiled. "He isn't a stranger," she explained. "I'm sorry I can't tell you all about it. Bessie, but he's a young man I used to know."

Bessie's eyes were popped wide open. She sensed a mystery. "Well, I thought you were cracked," she declared. "I'm sure he and I was going to tell your friend about it. She meant Marco."

"Don't worry, I haven't felt better for a long time," Bertie Lou avowed.

"Then tell me everything I've got to know," Bessie besought her. "So you'll make a fool of myself."

"The man," she explained, "is my scrawny little friend who used to live in a humble little place like that cottage. Still it was furnished, and a caretaker was more dependable than a tenant. And a tenant could not be put out at a moment's notice."

Bessie was more agog than ever. "Is it safe to have him here?" she asked.

"He isn't a fugitive, if that's what you're thinking," Bertie Lou smiled. "I'm not after a reward." Bessie subsided. "Well, if he doesn't guess there's something phony about this he's dumber than he looks," she stated.

Rod was inclined to question, for it did seem strange to him that anyone should want a caretaker to live in a humble little place like that cottage. Still it was furnished, and a caretaker was more dependable than a tenant. And a tenant could not be put out at a moment's notice.

As for Bessie's claim to being the owner's agent—she was a perfectly proper, acting in that capacity. And too zealous in her duties to allow him to deal directly with the owner.

And the work itself. Why shouldn't he take it? Perhaps if he got away from accounts and ledgers and balances for a while he would be able to hold the next position that came his way. But hadn't he been away from them? Oh, that was different—being out of a job. He worried.

There was a lot to do around a new place too. He wouldn't have to sit around much. The lawn was in, but it wasn't doing very well, and there was room for a vegetable garden and he could build a rose arch—do a lot of things—the things he'd do if he owned the place. If it only paid him enough to buy his food.

Promptly at the end of the hour he was back on Bertie Lou's front porch. This time when Bessie admitted him there was an indication of anyone else being in the house.

She led him to the kitchen. Rod sat on the same blue chair Bertie Lou had occupied a few minutes before.

"The owner was here but he couldn't wait to see you," Bessie lied. "He told me everything you want to know. I guess. All you have to do is protect the place. You mustn't go away at night—all night, I mean—and of course you will want to take care of your own room."

"I'll come out once a week and clean it for you, and if you eat your meals in the house you will have to wash the dishes yourself." She was very certain about that.

"What's the pay?" Rod asked.

"Well, as I said before," Bessie hesitated, "the pay is small—only a dollar a week, but if you have other work there's no objection to your being away in the daytime."

"I think I'll take it," Rod declared, "on one condition."

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton ©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

Paradoxically enough the greatest happiness of children cannot be attained by giving them everything they want.

Like adults, they soon lose that fine sense of appreciation that lies under all real enjoyment, and when we lose appreciation we lose real happiness. However, I do not like to see children disappointed and I think most mothers are alike. They will do almost anything in their power to keep their promise to a child rather than have him bear disappointment.

In this we are right, too, for a promise to a child should be kept if it is humanly possible. But speaking of promises, they never should be given without the idea of keeping them. The thing to do is not to get into the promise-making habit. No promise-making, no promise-breaking. If a promise is made and there is a doubt that it can be kept, the child should be told so. "We'll go to Grandma's if it doesn't rain." "I think Daddy may bring you the boat, if he has time to stop at the store." "I'll see about allowing you to go to Billy's to play. Perhaps you can if Billy's mother has no company."

And yet the picture of the little old Dutch farmhouse in Greenwich, Conn., where the famous newweds will live doesn't look as if it would demand very much of that $10,000 a month for running purposes. Just what do people do with money like that, anyway?

COULDN'T FACE LIFE
 Dr. Arthur Woolsey, a dentist of Elizabeth, N. J., murdered his wife and two children and then committed suicide because, as he explained in a farewell note, it was impossible in these complex modern days for a man to get along in his profession and he could see no future for himself or family.

The tragedy of it all is that the man was right—even men of specialized training and men of above the average ability do find life horribly complex these days and the economic strain almost too much. Sometimes one thinks that his is the real challenge of the day—not a challenge to the world of science demanding the production of radio movies and talking movies and television and telephoto and this and that, so much as a challenge to make human beings who can fit into the modern scheme of things.

PUBLIC WEDDINGS
 Two strange and picturesque public weddings were staged not so long ago. One was the marriage of Percy Grainger, noted American composer, in the great Hollywood bowl where this new opera, "To a Nordic Princess" was being produced. The other public wedding was that of Prin-

CO-EDUCATION IS BEST PLAN
 "A co-educational college is the ideal institution for both men and women, if the students are well-bred and keenly interested in their work," declared Mrs. Frances Bradshaw Blansard, dean of women at Swarthmore College.

"In enthusiastic, strenuous study, each group of young men and women finds the difference between their minds not a distraction but a stimulus.

"Students in a co-educational college are more sensitive to 'human relations,' more mature, less likely to be unconventional than the undergraduates in separate colleges for men and women.

"They understand each other, take each other for granted and leave college prepared to fit naturally into the conditions of business and the professions where successful men and women must work together harmoniously."

It may interest you to realize that Mr. and Mrs. Gene Tunney will have $10,000 to spend every month of their lives, rain or shine, sleep or well, work or loaf, if Gene merely invests his $2,000,000 at 5 per cent and if all goes well with his investments. This doesn't include the several million dollars which his bride will bring as dowry.

NANCY AGAIN
 The former Nancy Miller of Seattle, who married the ex-Maharajah of Indore and turned Hindu with him, expects a child, according to report. Now will come for Nancy the real test of her renunciation of native land, religion and everything for the strange romance. It's one thing to make a choice for oneself. It's another to find those choices foisted upon one's child.

OPENING PARTNER'S SUIT
 When your partner has declared suit, as a general guide, your opening lead against a no trump declaration should be as follows:

- 1—Holding any four or more cards in partner's suit, lead fourth from top.
- 2—Holding any two cards in partner's suit, lead the higher one.
- 3—Holding any three cards without an honor in partner's suit, lead the highest.
- 4—Holding any three cards with an honor as good as J X X in partner's suit, lead the lowest.

These leads conform to orthodox play and by following this convention you will avoid misleading your partner and at the same time assist him in establishing his longest and strongest suit.

If, however, you hold a solid suit or only a singleton in the suit named by your partner, it may be more advisable to lead from your strongest suit for it may be more readily established.

New Herald patterns are coming in now for fall but I am rather disappointed to find so few for children. I had been led to believe that during the month of August, in time for the school opening there would be a whole new line. The women's styles are very attractive and still cling to the tailored models. New hip yokes appear on some and a new neckline in the rest of cutting is deep V-neck on a rounded yoke with the fullness of the bodice is gathered. A bow finishes the point of the V and hangs with shaped ends almost to the waist line.

A new leather for autumn shoes is sharkskin which has the shininess of patent leather with the grain of lizard.

Hemstitching has always been an attractive finish for linens but it represents the weakest place in the article and often the center of embroidery or drawn work will remain in good condition when the threads holding the hem to the body of the linen have given away entirely and little can be done to repair it. On Sheets and pillow cases hemstitching is not to be recommended for constant wear, a plain hem is much more economical.

Many people like to make their own bed linen when they have the time to do it. A saving on wear is to make the hems of even length at the top and bottom. The common practice of placing a wide hem at the top of the sheet results in more wear on the top and shorter life all round. A movement is on foot to have the manufacturers and distributors of sheets simplify the different sizes in use to three or four, including those for hospitals, which are usually 108 inches, torn length before the hems are made. This allows for tucking in smoothly and amply protecting the mattress. The

CURE OF HEREDITARY DISEASES ADT TO BE VERY DIFFICULT

By DR. MORRIS FISHER
 In a recent lecture before the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, Sir Humphrey Rolleston of the University of Cambridge, England, outlined current views regarding hereditary diseases. He stated that one of the most peculiar of these diseases is hemophilia. It is the disease which is said to have afflicted the family of the czar of Russia and which is also reported to be in the family of the king of Spain. The people who have this disease are called "bleeders." When they are wounded in any manner, the blood does not coagulate and they bleed for a long time.

This disease is transmitted to the sons of the family by the mothers, who themselves do not suffer from the disease. It is the only condition of this type of heredity that is known.

Color blindness and a certain form of degeneration of the eye are likewise transmitted by unaffected females to males, but cases have been reported in which the women have suffered with the disease.

Another blood condition has been described in which the red blood cells are elliptical or sickle shaped. The condition is sometimes called sickle cell anemia. Many authorities who have studied the condition have suggested that there is an hereditary factor involved. Cases are not infrequent. This far most of them have occurred in negroes, although one case has been described in an Arab and another in a Cuban.

The question of heredity in the cause of any disease is always a difficult one for the physician. Since the changes obviously involve the body structure, correction or cure is far more difficult than in the infectious diseases which are acquired.

Webber Blanks Meriden Allows Only Five Hits

Community Club 4-0 Winner After Long Lay-off; Score Three Runs in First, Another in Fifth.

Walter Webber of Rockville pitched the Community Club to a 4 to 0 victory over Meriden in a state league baseball game played at Hickey's Grove last night before less than fifty fans. The Community has no games scheduled for today or tomorrow.

Manchester got away to a three run lead in the opening stanza, and this proved much too much for the Silver City outfit to overcome. The other side came home when Curly missed Sipples' fast grounder to second. Pelton's single and Edgar's double chased in two runs which proved more than sufficient to settle the issue. Wright singled in the fifth, stole second and scored on Sipples' single.

Webber pitched good ball, allowing only five hits. His support was perfect. The visitors were popping up throughout the contest, no less than 15 outs being recorded in this manner. Wright, Pelton and Buckley were the best hitters. The box score:

N. Y. HAS CHANCE TO LEAD LEAGUE

If Giants Defeat Cardinals Today and Tomorrow They Go Up.

New York, Aug. 18.—By beating the Cardinals in St. Louis today and tomorrow, the Giants can take the lead in the National League race.

Yesterday the Giants vanquished Clarence Mitchell, 3 to 2, for the first time since he joined the St. Louis club two months ago.

Larry Benton, New York mound ace, relieved the firing Fitzsimmons and saved the game by retiring five successive batters.

The Pirates scuttled the Phillies, twice, 10 to 3, and 9 to 1, wallowing 30 hits. Traynor got seven bingles and P. Waner 6.

Hits by Flowers and Bressler in the ninth game Buzz McWeeny of Brooklyn a 1 to 0 victory over Blake of the Cubs.

Old Ed Rixey held Boston to three hits and pitched Cincinnati to a neat 2 to 1 win over Greenfield.

may hit some of them on the same course he happens to be playing will add to the general uncertainty and piquancy.

In spite of his wildness, however, Ruth plays in the low 30's, for his chip shots are deadly and he puts like Travis himself.

Babe Ruth and Johnny Farrell, greatest of professional golfers, are planning to go on a tour of the country's links immediately after the World Series.

His man of business now is putting out feelers to see what he can do about booking the dual attraction back and forth across the country this fall and early winter.

The writer played with Ruth in the south last spring and 300 yard drives from his left handed stance were far from a rarity.

It now appears that the Babe will do not officially beat the Heights Thursday night in the twilight league. True, they finished on the long end of the count, 4 to 1, but the fact is there was quite a shortage of eligible players and it was agreed by mutual consent of both managers that the teams play a practice game. As usual, this information was not reported.

ARMSTRONG'S WORK FEATURES VICTORY

Manchester Man Pitches Collecting Company to Baseball Championship of Medical Regiment at Natick.

Natick, Conn., Aug. 18.—George Armstrong, not only pitched the Collecting Company of Hartford to a 4 to 2 triumph over the Veterinary Company for the championship of the 118th Medical Regiment here yesterday afternoon, but also hit a home run in the first inning with two runners on base.

The victory was the third straight the Collecting Company, composed almost entirely of Manchester men, has won and it gave them the title. Armstrong allowed only one hit, a double. He whiffed nine batters on strikes. His homer was a long smash to deep left.

After the game, the members of the winning team and their rooters formed a parade and staged a victory march down the various streets and about their camp.

TWO GAMES TOMORROW AT BULKELEY STADIUM

Hartford and Pittsfield in Double Bill—First Game Starts at 2:15 p. m.

Hartford and Pittsfield will play a double header at Bulkeley Stadium, Hartford, Sunday afternoon, the first game to be called at 2:15 o'clock.

The following men are requested to report at the West Side playgrounds Monday night at 6:00 sharp, for the postponed game between the Hudsons and Cadillacs.

John Nabors, who pitched for the Athletics several years ago, was beaten 19 successive times during the 1916 season.

Stanley Golas was unable to play in the finals because of an injured finger he received while on bivouac. However, he seems quite content with the letters he gets from home.

The men had a fine time on their bivouac this year. They camped over night at Old Lyme and established their position a few miles from Lyme for their part in the imaginary war campaign.

The Collecting Company put on a fine entertainment at the regimental camp the afternoon following the maneuvers. Other companies assisted briefly. The regimental band furnished music. The biggest act was Joe Smith's demonstration of how to get out of a wooden box after the box had been nailed with him inside.

TRIP TO NEW YORK JUST A SIDE LINE

George Pero Sandwiches It In Between His Daily Trips to Hartford.

George E. Pero, of South Windsor, a large peach grower, well known in Manchester, went to market in Hartford this morning with a load of peaches.

He was able to sandwich a trip to New York, where he met his mother and his sister-in-law and was back in Manchester last evening at 8:30.

Receiving word while in Hartford yesterday morning that the liner Conte Biancamano, on which his mother and his sister-in-law was returning to this country, was to dock in New York yesterday noon.

The trip yesterday was not the first that George Pero has taken, as last year when he returned to New York from a trip to Europe he found that he would have to wait for train connections so instead he called on a few friends and arranged an aeroplane to take him to Hartford, where he was met by automobile and taken to the farm in Wapping.

His mother, Mrs. Louis Pero, has been absent from home for the past sixteen months. She was visiting her husband, who returned to Italy eight years ago. He has decided to make his home there.

As this is his busy season in the peach business Pero was anxious to welcome his mother, but had the peach business to look after, so he decided to use the air. In this way he was able to take care of his business yesterday morning, make the trip to New York, welcome his mother and get back in time to look after the sorting and loading of the peaches that had to be in Hartford early this morning.

GRETA GARBO RUSSIAN SPY IN NEW ROMANCE

"The Mysterious Lady" Which Plays at the State Tomorrow An Exciting Love Story.

Hidden factors of the great wars of Europe, the net of spy systems which fought silent, but deadly battles in the supposedly quiet times of peace form the background for stirring drama in the new picture at the State Theater, "The Mysterious Lady," a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer starring vehicle for Greta Garbo, beginning tomorrow.

The plot is laid in the rival countries, Russia and Austria, in the days preceding the World War, and a thrilling romance is woven into the gripping drama of nations warring with the bloodless but deadly tools of espionage and intrigue.

Greta Garbo, as a beautiful Russian spy who falls in love with an Austrian officer whom she has discredited, plays with feeling and distinction, making a true heroine of a character which in the hands of a less competent actress might have been despicable.

In her support, Conrad Nagel, gives a splendidly romantic touch to his difficult part. This is the first time Nagel has appeared with Greta Garbo, and his performance entirely justifies his recognition as one of the screen's greatest lovers.

Fred Niblo, who also directed Miss Garbo in "The Temptress," one of the Swedish star's first American successes, has made the most of this fine story from the pen of Ludwig Wolff, noted German novelist. His direction, following an adaptation for the screen by Benjamen Mervyn, is virile, strong and pregnant with dramatic power.

The highly charged story on the screen proceeds without a hitch. An innocent victim of the espionage system, Nagel, an Austrian officer, discredited by the machinations of a Russian spy, Greta Garbo, is shown escaping from an Austrian prison to inflict vengeance on the woman who caused his downfall. He is recognized in enemy territory, but his life is spared when Greta Garbo slays the chief of the Russian spy service to obtain documents with which to clear Nagel.

There are many spectacular scenes in the film version of this continental story and the intimate love scenes are enacted with striking passion and pathos.

Edward Connelly, Gustav von Seyffertitz and other players in the supporting cast do their part well to make this picture one of the best cinema entertainments of the year.

The feature will be followed with a snappy mirth provoking comedy, also, novelty reel and the latest news events of the world.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: (369) Making An Odd Table

Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

With a discarded cheese-box—the large kind of cheese-box that holds the biggest cheese made—we can with very little trouble make a convenient low table that will do well to stand in the hall or living room. The table, shown above, is just the size children might like to use at play.

By NEA, Through Special Permission of the Publishers of The Book of Knowledge, Copyright, 1923-26.

The paper design.

After the design has been cut out with a fret-saw we may strengthen the sides by placing six strips one inch broad and half an inch thick on the outside.

After the strips have been screwed on (use three-quarter-inch, round-headed screws) we put on the top, which is composed of planed pieces of wood or 2 1/2 one piece, cut to overlap on all sides. Fasten the top with screws from the inside. Plane and sandpaper and then your table is ready for whatever finish you care to use. (Next: A Child's Blackboard)

EMBLEM CLUB OUTING PRONOUNCED SUCCESS

The Emblem Clubs' first outing, held Thursday afternoon and evening at Sandy Beach, Crystal lake was a pronounced success and attracted a large gathering of the members here and in Rockville and Stafford Springs. Mrs. Stephen Connors opened her cottage for the occasion and the ladies thoroughly appreciated her hospitality. Although they came well provided with eatables, she had a supply of good things sufficient for the whole crowd.

Bride engrossed the attention of all during the early afternoon. It seemed to be officers' day for they captured all the prizes. Mrs. Catherine Williams of this town, the president, won first prize; Mrs. Helen Garvin of Rockville, the vice president, came out second and Mrs. Mary Keeney of Rockville, one of the trustees won consolation.

The hostess, Mrs. Stephen Connors, led in the fat woman's race; potato and peanut races were also run off and more than 25 of the members enjoyed the bathing. In the evening a dog and marshmallow roast was held outdoors, and a number remained for the dancing at Rau's pavilion.

"OH, I'LL PAY FOR THE TAG FINE!" IT COST SIX BUCKS

It cost Francis McCarthy, well known north end young man, six dollars for being a bit too generous the other afternoon. He, Frank Waller and Arthur St. John went to Hartford to do some errands. McCarthy suggested to St. John to park his car on a certain street near the store. Fifteen minute parking is the rule in this area, but McCarthy said it would be alright as they would be back in that time; anyway, he'd take the chance and pay the fine if St. John's car was tagged. It took a little over an hour to do the errands and the car was tagged when they came out. McCarthy paid the fine and costs yesterday morning in Hartford police court.

Some ten prizes are offered. MRS. McILDUFF LOSES COMPENSATION CLAIM

Compensation Commissioner Leo Noonan yesterday denied the claim of Lena McILDuff of Hilliard street for compensation from the E. E. Hilliard Company because of the death of her husband, John McILDuff. It was claimed that Mr. McILDuff, who had been employed by the Hilliard Company, had died as the result of a hernia, brought on while at work at the company's mill.

This was contested by the American Mutual Insurance Company, which carried the compensation insurance, and for lack of proof of the claim that the hernia resulted from employment at the Hilliard plant the claim was dismissed.

Since the crime, the building, which was formerly a Chinese laundry, has been completely remodeled.

How to anchor the money you leave. A well-known New Yorker states in his will: "I earnestly desire that my children should not gamble in any way for money, as their father has had experience sufficient to serve for all posterity." YET, strangely enough, the same man deliberately put temptation in his children's way by bequeathing outright to them large sums instead of setting up a Trust Fund for their protection. By means of a Trust Fund you can assure the sound investment of the money you leave, the payment of regular income to your heirs and the distribution of the principal at such times and in such amount as you may specify in your will. When the members of a family have fixed incomes to live on they are not likely to indulge in much plain or fancy speculation. If you wish your wife and children to inherit the fruits of your labor in the form of income, let us tell you how a Trust Fund can be made to suit your purposes. Please ask for the Trust Officer when you come in. THE MANCHESTER TRUST COMPANY, South Manchester, Conn.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT" "HEAVY BEEF" Roy Chapman Andrews, the man who found the dinosaurs' eggs in the Gobi desert, is back again from another expedition to that interesting spot and has brought some bones of a prehistoric beast which he says was at least twice as big as Jumbo, the biggest of elephants. He says it was a vegetarian and grew so huge from generation to generation of overeating that it finally couldn't travel far enough and fast enough to keep up with its food supply and so perished. These were the days, for the meat eating prehistoric man—that? Twenty tons of perfectly good colossus beef walking around, waiting for the cave man to start a banquet—free, gratis, for nothing. Only, the cave man had to first catch and butcher the colossus. And we suspect it must have been, sometimes, quite a while between banquets. Perhaps a year or two. After all, though beef isn't as plenty as it was in the Gobi some two or three or four million years ago, it's really a little less trouble to get. Imagine a Manchester family depending on the luck to snare and skin and dress of a twenty ton animal, if it was to eat meat at all. You couldn't exactly get one of those birds by putting salt on his tail. It's a little easier, at that, to call up Pinehurst on the phone and have just the cut or just the supplementary article you want, rushed over in the bum-wagon—eh? We'll say so. Phone two thousand.
