

BUTLER RAPS G. O. P. STAND ON PROHIBITION

President of Columbia College Says 18th Amendment Must Be Wiped Out to Save Constitution.

New York, Aug. 20.—Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University and uncompromising foe of prohibition, today declared his vigorous disapproval of Herbert Hoover's stand for enforcement, reaffirming his belief that the 18th Amendment must be wiped out "if the Constitution itself is to be preserved and protected."

Continuing the fight he began more than a year ago to win the Republican party over to the repeal movement, a fight which he carried personally and lone-handed to the floor of the Kansas City convention after encountering overwhelming defeat in the platform committee. Butler declared that "anyone who is opposed to the repeal of the 18th Amendment x x must then be in favor of the only alternative, which is the continuance of the present reign of lawlessness, debauchery and government-made crime."

Coupled with his denunciation of Hoover's acceptance-speech utterances on the prohibition question, Butler, in an open letter made public at his Southampton, Long Island, summer home, also expressed dissent with the Republican nominee's stand on disarmament and world peace.

Calls Doctrine False
He assailed Hoover's treatment of "the truly remarkable treaty just now being signed by ourselves and all the great powers of the earth pledging renunciation of war." He denounced as false doctrine, overturned by the whole trend of history since the World War, Hoover's statement that adequate preparedness for defense "is a factor contributing to the maintenance of peace."

"Surely," he said, "the repetition of this ancient and discarded doctrine will not be accepted by the masses of the Republican party or by the people."

A life-long Republican, and long interested, as president of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace, in the world movement for disarmament, Butler was himself a presidential candidate before the Chicago convention in 1920. His break with Hoover withdraws from the national ticket in the pivotal New York campaign the support of one

HOOVER PLEADS FOR FREEDOM IN RELIGION

"Every Man Has the Right to Serve God According to His Conscience," He Quotes.

Aboard Hoover Train, Enroute to Kansas City, Aug. 20.—Having founded a new appeal for religious freedom in the heart of the Catholic southwest, Herbert Hoover crossed Kansas today enroute to a series of farm conferences at his birthplace in West Branch, Iowa.

The Republican nominee will reach his birthplace early tomorrow morning, spending the day reviewing scenes familiar to his boyhood and deliver his first prepared farm speech at night. He will spend Wednesday and Thursday at Cedar Rapids, meeting horny-handed sons of toil and farm leaders from all sections of the middle west. He will resume his return trip to Washington late Thursday.

On his journey east through Arizona and New Mexico, Hoover received assurances from Republican leaders that he would carry both states. He spoke to a dozen crowds from the rear platform of his train, including one prepared speaker, Albuquerque. It was in his speech with Catholics predominating in his audience, that Hoover sounded the religious liberty note.

"I like to remember in these days of the occasion of raising the American flag in this state by General Kearney, when he made a statement that is as true today as it was then," said Hoover. "He said: 'We come as friends to make this a part of representative government. In our government all men are equal. Every man has a right to serve God according to his conscience and his heart.'"

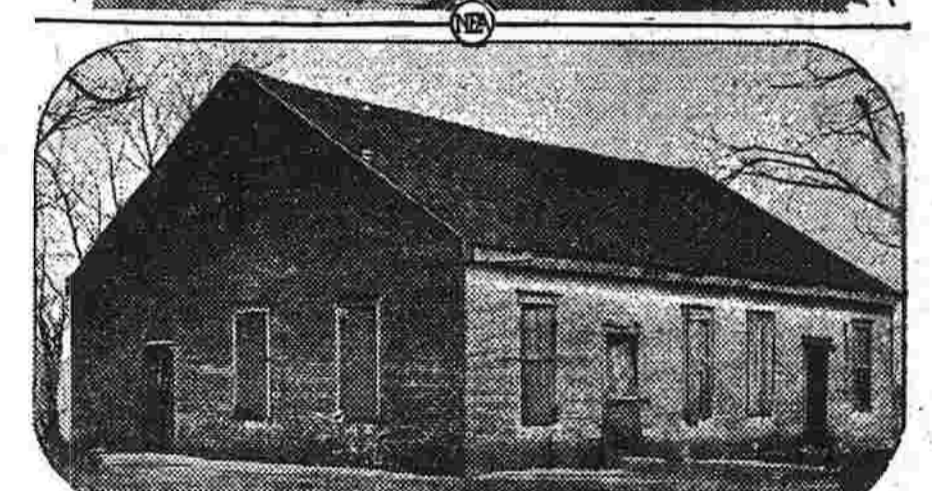

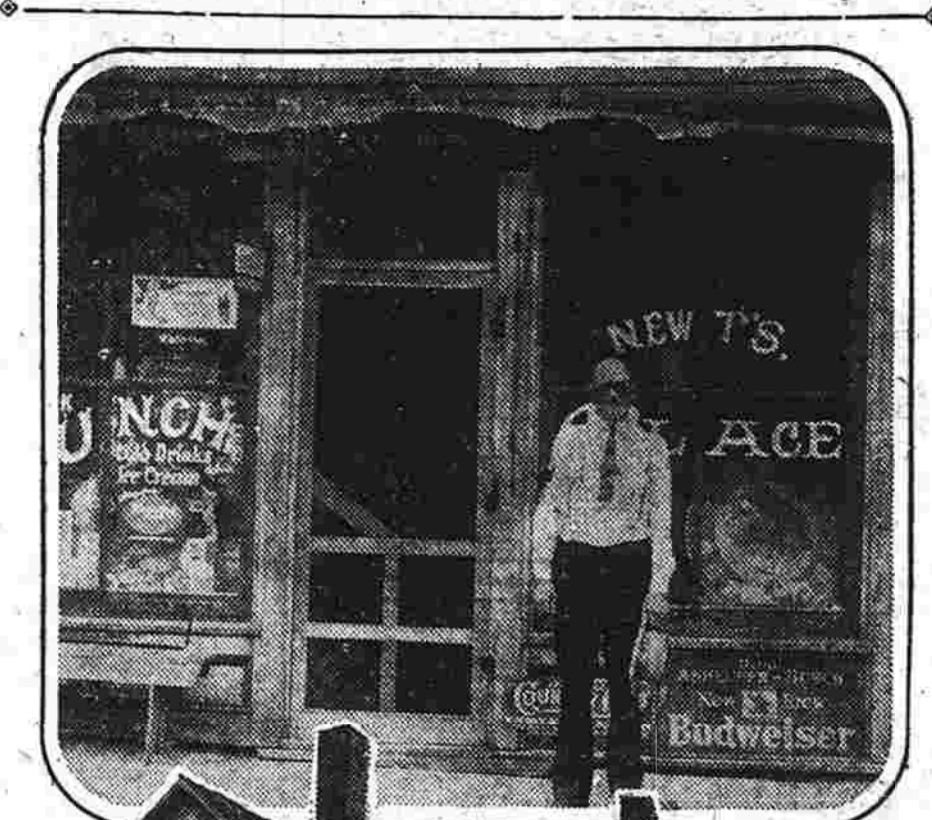

"This was a great charter for a new member of the union. It embodied the true spirit of American liberty."

In each state the Republican leaders boarded his train, the women leaders were entertained by Mrs. Hoover, who is rapidly sharing honors with her husband as a campaigner. The men leaders went into conference with Hoover. This was the rule Saturday in Arizona, it was continued Sunday in New Mexico and again today in Kansas.

Today's Schedule
The scheduled Hoover train carried him into Dodge City at 3:35 Mountain time, for a 15-minute stop. He spoke from the rear platform briefly to a crowd that gathered round the train. At 1:15 Central time he was due in Hutchinson, Kansas, for another brief halt. He was to reach Newton at 2:30; Emporia at 4:30; Topeka at 6:35 and Kansas City, Mo., at 8:40 tonight.

After a 20-minute halt in Kan-

Hoover On Way to Old Home

Back to the scenes of his boyhood in West Branch, Ia., Herbert Hoover, Republican presidential nominee, is returning to meet old friends and revisit familiar places. At the top here is Newt Butler, who "licked" Hoover in a boyhood battle. Below is the old Hoover home, where Herbert was born. At the bottom is the old West Branch Friends' church, where Hoover's grandmother used to preach at the women's sessions.

HUSBAND MADE HER ATTEMPT SUICIDE

Linwood, N. J., Aug. 20.—Lying at the point of death in Somers Point hospital, Mrs. Charlotte Burkhardt, 26, was quoted by state troopers today as saying that her husband attempted to force her to commit suicide with him.

"He made me do it—I couldn't," she told them.

Bleeding from knife wounds, the couple lay on the ground in a wood shed Saturday night and part of Sunday. The woman is dying but physicians stated that her husband, Carl, 33, has a slim chance to recover. Her left hand was nearly severed and her husband's throat was cut in two places.

Burkhardt told police he had lost his fortune in the stock exchange and later had been discharged from his position. What money he had left had been spent on a "second honeymoon" with his wife at Atlantic City last week, he said, and they had decided to go through with the suicide pact when their remaining funds were dissipated.

Burkhardt was placed under arrest at the hospital on a charge of atrocious assault and battery with intent to kill.

The Burkhardts lived in New York and had been married about 18 months. Before her marriage the woman lived in Pittsburgh, where her husband's brother, Adolph, is an attorney.

Mrs. Burkhardt was insured for $1,000, but her husband carried no life insurance. Officials expressed the belief that the husband did not intend to take his own life. He declared that his wife had cut her wrist with a razor.

ROBINSON ARRIVES IN NEW YORK CITY

New York, Aug. 20.—Senator Joseph T. Robinson, Democratic nominee for the vice-presidency, arrived in New York today from his Arkansas home on his way to take part in the notification ceremonies for Gov. Smith.

Accompanying the senator were his wife, her brother, Grady Miller, of Little Rock, Mrs. Vincent L. Miles, of Fort Smith, Ark., national committeeman from Arkansas and Mrs. Miles; C. W. Martin, secretary to Senator Robinson and J. J. Harrison, chairman of the finance committee of the Arkansas state Democratic committee.

A welcoming delegation from Democratic national headquarters met Gov. Smith's running mate and his companions at Grand Central terminal.

Not Recognized
Not one of the hundreds of persons in the congested terminal recognized Senator Robinson as he and his party passed to a side stairway and into the street.

Sensor Robinson was to confer later in the day with John J. Raskob, chairman of the Democratic national committee.

He will motor with Mrs. Robinson tomorrow to Hyde Park, where they will be the guests of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Roosevelt. They will remain there Tuesday night, leaving Wednesday for Albany to be present when Gov. Smith delivers his acceptance speech.

26,000 Chinese Communists Were Executed In A Year

Moscow, Aug. 20.—Twenty-six thousand Chinese Communists were executed by the Nationalists in the past year, according to a report from the Chinese Federation of Labor received today by the Red International of trade unions. The Chinese Laborites asked for assistance in the fight against the Kuomintang.

The report declared that "a total of 218,000 Chinese workers and civilian peasants were slaughtered during the period covered by the report without cause other than that they passively resisted the

AMERICAN MURDERED

Washington, Aug. 20.—Henry C. Schmidt, an American mining engineer, was murdered by two persons Saturday at the Travador mine in Trinidad, Durango, Mexico, William I. Jackson, American consul at Torreon, reported to the State Department today. Jackson has gone to Trinidad to take charge of the body.

Gen. Escobar, chief of the military district, had dispatched a colonel and 16 soldiers to press the search for the murderers. Jackson's wife is reported to be in Alameda, Calif.

DRY QUESTION, MAJOR ISSUE, SMITH ASSERTS

To Define His Position Clearly and Unmistakably In His Acceptance Speech on Wednesday Night.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Governor Al Smith announced today that he would define his position on prohibition "clearly and unmistakably" in the address he will deliver on the east steps of the Capitol Wednesday night in formally accepting the Democratic presidential nomination.

Indirectly the governor indicated that he expected prohibition would become one of the major issues in the coming campaign.

The prohibition question came up for discussion at today's conference between the governor and newspapermen because of the announcement by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, and one of the Republican leaders of the country, that he would not be bound by Herbert Hoover's views on that subject.

When shown a newspaper containing Dr. Butler's criticism of Hoover's prohibition stand, the governor glanced at it and remarked, smiling:

"I'll read that when I get time, business before pleasure."

Asked if he had any comment to make on Dr. Butler's announcement, the governor answered:

"I will define my position on prohibition clearly and unmistakably next Wednesday night. When the campaign starts we will talk it and debate it."

The governor said he would not give any thought to his campaign plans until after the notification ceremony.

ANSWER TO WHITE
Albany, N. Y., Aug. 20.—On the eve of the ceremony at which he will be formally notified of the Democratic presidential nomination, Gov. Al Smith was expected to issue a statement denouncing his critics for picturing him as a foe of good government.

The statement, according to the governor's confidants, will be direct answer to William Allen White, Kansas editor, who charged that the nominee, when a member of the State Legislature twenty years ago, always voted to protect the saloon, gambling and vice.

White's charges may not mention Dr. John Roach Straton, pastor of Calvary Baptist church, New York, by name, friends of the governor predicted that indirectly it would be a complete answer to the charge by the clergyman that the nominee is "the deadliest foe in America today to moral progress."

While the governor has issued many sharp statements in the last eight years in dispute with Republican leaders of the State Legislature, his close friends expect the forthcoming statement will be one of the most bitter that the executive ever has penned. They predict that he will have no difficulty in attempting to bury the charge that his legislative record, as it relates to moral issues, is not what it should be.

Delays Reply
By waiting until a day or so before he formally accepts the presidential nomination, to reply to White's charges, the governor is said to feel that his defense of his legislative record will be given more careful study by the voters of the country. The governor is said to have had his advisers that the confidant he can convince the country that White's charges are not borne out by the facts.

There is every indication that the forthcoming statement will be the last formal defense that Governor Smith will make of his executive record. He is understood to have told his advisers that he does not intend to permit this to become an issue in the coming campaign.

The work of preparing his reply to White was nearly as tedious as the writing of his acceptance speech, the governor indicated to friends. For more than two weeks at odd moments he has been reading the 20-year-old bills mentioned

GOEBEL CROSSES COUNTRY IN LITTLE OVER 19 HOURS

Winner of Pacific Flight Establishes New Record; Old Mark Was 26 Hours and 50 Minutes.

Curtiss Field, N. Y., Aug. 20.—Art Goebel, winner of the Dole flight to Hawaii, arrived here this morning, establishing a new record for a non-stop flight across the continent.

Goebel left Los Angeles at 12:06 p. m., yesterday (Pacific Standard Time) and arrived here at 11:08 a. m. (Eastern Daylight Time), making the long journey in nineteen hours and two minutes.

Goebel was accompanied by Harry Tucker, Santa Monica sportsman, in the plane "Yankee Doodle," a Lockheed Vega with Pratt & Whitney motor capable of 175 miles an hour.

The previous record of 26 hours and 50 minutes was held by Lieutenants Macready and Kelly.

Few Reports
Reports of the plane since its departure from Los Angeles had been few, but no anxiety was felt for Goebel and Tucker by aviation experts, who expressed absolute confidence in the Hawaiian flight winner's ability to succeed.

The flight marked the first time the nation has been spanned from west to east in a non-stop jump, and broke a speed record which had stood for more than five years.

The plane carried 450 gallons of gasoline. The route lay across Arizona, New Mexico, Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas, Missouri, Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Pennsylvania.

Official Time
Frank Titchener, publisher of the Aero Digest, who acted as official timer and was first to greet the flyers when they stepped from the plane, announced the official time as 18 hours and 58 minutes. He gave the official time of arrival as 11:08 a. m., but said he had accepted Tucker's statement that the wheels of the plane had not left the ground at Los Angeles until 12:10 p. m., Pacific time, although reports from Los Angeles gave the

NO WORD OF AVIATORS ON GREENLAND FLIGHT

Southampton's Mayor Near Death On Arrival

New York, Aug. 20.—Near-disaster marked the arrival on the Lehigh today of "His Worship," the Lord Mayor of Southampton, England, Mrs. Lucia Marian Foster-Welch, for an official visit to America.

Death under the whirling blades of the liner's propellers was averted only by a few feet, and the distinguished visitor and her daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Marian Paton, knew nothing of it until the danger was past.

As the municipal tug the Macon, with the welcoming committee aboard, neared the liner, the little craft was carried along the high steel wall of the ship, headed for the propellers.

Captain George Sweeting of the Macon, his face white and tense, reversed his engines in time to avert a tragedy by a matter of seconds. Through the few moments of danger, the band played gaily, with the musicians ignorant that death hovered near.

Governor Whalen accompanied the guests to the Savoy Plaza hotel. Mayor Walker was to greet them officially at City Hall later in the day.

The Lord Mayor was resplendent in scarlet robes trimmed with mink, an ornate gold chain, bearing her keys of office, and the coat of arms of her predecessors on the chain about her neck, with the whole regalia topped with a tri-cornered beaver hat.

ROCKFORD GLOOMY

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 20.—Gloom spread over Rockford today as hope waned for the missing Swedish-bound flyers, Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, who are almost a day overdue at Mt. Evans, Greenland.

"No sign of Hassell yet. Long overdue."

That was the discouraging report radioed from Mount Evans, in the hands of the Chamber of Commerce today. It was signed "Eetes," for Elmer Etes, mechanic, who had gone on ahead to greet the plane in Greenland.

Many Rockford citizens remained all night to await word of the missing plane. The hope prevails that the flyers are safe, and communication with the outside world through the failure of their broadcasting set.

WERE WARNED

Copenhagen, Aug. 18.—Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer started their flight to Greenland against the advice of Danish Polar experts, it was revealed today by Halge Bangsted, who has just returned from Greenland, where he arranged for the landing and retelling of the Hassell airplane.

"I cabled Hassell that he had better wait until spring for the flight as landing and re-starting in Greenland would be very difficult. I am astonished that he started at this time of year."

Bangsted said that he had arranged three landing places at Stromfjord, 1,700, 400 and 1,500 feet long, but only fifty feet wide. They are surrounded with high rocks and sand-banks. A big risk would be encountered in taking off with a heavily-laden airplane from these rugged airfields.

Because they were not perfectly flat and could not be improved until spring.

New Conditions
"Hassell must have been fully aware," Bangsted said, "of these landing and re-starting difficulties since a full report on the arrangements in Greenland had been sent to him at Rockford."

"Even if Hassell and Cramer succeeded in reaching and leaving Greenland, the flight to Reykjavik will also be extremely dangerous, as the airplane must fly at an altitude of 8,000 feet in order to clear the ice and fog."

STILL HAVE HOPES

Copenhagen, Aug. 20.—Daugard Jensen, general director of the Danish State Department, for Greenland, declared today there is Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, no reason yet to abandon hope for missing American airmen who hopped off at Cochrane, Ontario, to fly to Mount Evans, Greenland.

This official pointed out the possibility that Hassell may be able to communicate with civilization from Greenland even if alive and well.

NO NEWS

London, Aug. 20.—Aviators Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, who were attempting a trans-Atlantic flight from Canada to Greenland in the plane Greater Rockford, had not arrived early today, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Juliennehaab. They were due at Mount Evans Sunday afternoon.

DENIES KIDNAPING

SOCIETY EXCITED OVER CLUB RAIDS

125 Leaders With Broadway Celebrities Called to Tell Story to Grand Jury.

New York, Aug. 20.—One hundred and twenty-five society leaders and Broadway celebrities were expected in the Federal building, where they expected to face Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney-general, and Grand Jury to tell what they know of the alleged sale of liquor in Broadway night clubs.

The society man hunt today had reached its climax with federal officers, armed with subpoenas, scurrying hither and yonder over Long Island and Park avenue, dragging into court such society night club habitués as they could lay their hands on. Scores of others already had been summoned.

All Anxious
Those summoned to testify were admittedly in the seats of anxiety today. Disastrous results were possible and the case of Earl Carroll haunted the minds of the prospective witnesses. Mr. Carroll, they recalled, served a year in the Atlanta penitentiary on a perjury charge because he had "lied like a gentleman" in testifying concerning his famous champagne bath party.

The consensus appeared to be that those called upon to testify would have to open up and tell what they knew. It was pointed out, however, that their appearances before the Grand Jury as witnesses automatically gives them personal immunity.

Big Expense Accounts
Huge expense accounts, reported to have been turned in by the elite groups of dry agents who recently turned up 26 Broadway night clubs and brought indictments upon the

EARLY NOMINATION, BLODGETT'S PLEA

State Official Asks Candidates Not to Delay Filing Their Intentions.

Hartford, Conn., Aug. 20.—William H. Blodgett, state tax commissioner, today issued a formal statement urging that candidates for the Republican nomination for United States Senator make their intentions known sufficiently long before the convention to give others a chance to examine their records of public service, and not wait until the convention convenes and "depend on those who are alleged to be leaders of the party to put them across."

"Such methods of nominating candidates are not conducive to good feeling in the party," Mr. Blodgett declared.

Mr. Blodgett's statement was issued in connection with a denial of a story published in New Haven to the effect that he might bolt from the leadership of his party, and that "personal feeling" entered into his opposition to the candidacy of Frederic C. Walcott, of Norfolk, for the Senate nomination.

Mr. Blodgett declared that Mr. Walcott's "conduct is conjectural at this time." "I think that if his friends bring him into the race this should be done sufficiently early so that his record of public service, such as it is, may be examined."

"I am not to be the leader of any fight in the convention. There may be a high-grade and respectable gentleman's contest, lending interest and color to the convention, arising out of the aspirations of Senator Walcott and myself as candidates for the United States Senate."

"Senator Walcott and I are personal friends."

CURTIS TO CAMPAIGN IN EASTERN CITIES

Vice-Presidential Nominee on His Way to Washington to Get Assignments.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 20.—Senator Charles Curtis was on his way to Washington today to open his campaign in the east. The Republican vice-presidential nominee who officially launched his campaign here Saturday with his acceptance speech left for the capital yesterday.

Sensor Curtis will make his first eastern address in Providence, R. I., on Thursday. After this speech the Senator is expected to talk before New York, Connecticut, Maine and Kentucky audiences, but these appointments are all tentative and will be discussed by the national committee when Senator Curtis arrives in Washington Tuesday.

The senator who was born in North Topeka 63 years ago, and who has been a resident here since, has asked the national committee to allow him to close his campaign where he opened it—in his own home state. He expects to spend the latter part of his campaign tour in the middle west, ending it at some part of Kansas and coming to Topeka to vote.

The ladies of the Center Congregational church served a cafeteria supper at the church parlors Wednesday afternoon, following which a musical comedy, "The Ghost of Lolly-pop Bay," was presented at the Town Hall by singers of the Colchester and Westchester choirs, under the direction of Mrs. W. O. Seyms. The comedy was well received and in spite of the broiling weather a good audience was present.

Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Warnock and the Misses Mary and Julia Hull of Meriden visited friends here, the Misses Pendleton and the Rev. and Mrs. T. D. Martin, on Wednesday.

Howard Porter went to Ashford with Lyman's band where he played the cornet with other selected players on Wednesday, at a public picnic.

Mrs. Anna Kennedy, who has spent part of her vacation at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ames W. Sisson at Hopeville, has returned to her home in Westfield, Mass. She was accompanied as far as Stafford Springs by Mrs. Sisson.

Dr. and Mrs. C. J. Douglas visited the annual exhibit given by the Lyme Art Association recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving G. Will and daughter, Miss Marion, all of Herkimer, N. Y., are visiting at the rectory. Miss Marjorie H. Martin of Dalton, Mass., is also spending her vacation with her parents at the rectory.

In letter recently made public, the Rev. John S. Porter, a native of Gilead, Conn., writes of the unveiling, July 4th, of a monument to Woodrow Wilson, in front of the principal railway station of Prague, Czechoslovakia.

TRUCK TAKES SLUMP AS WALK FALLS IN Big Vehicle Drops Three Feet at Masonic Temple—Has Own Rescue Tools.

A shift of the ground under the sidewalk where sewer pipes had been laid for the Masonic building resulted this morning in the sidewalk giving way and dropping a service truck of the Manchester Electric Co. into a hole about three feet deep. The truck was backing into the lot and its rear wheels had run onto the sidewalk so that the weight of the load of concrete gave way and the truck slumped down at a drunken angle. The truck was carrying jacks and timbers and with the aid of these the crew soon worked the vehicle back onto the sidewalk. Foley's express truck then hitched onto it and hauled it back onto the road. The accident is said to have resulted from failure to use a sufficient amount of fill, recent heavy rains being a contributing factor.

SOCIETY EXCITED OVER CLUB RAIDS

The officials at Washington are said to have reasoned that it was silly to spend so much money to spot agents' throats with night club champagne when the habitues of the clubs, if summoned and taken to task, could tell far more than the agents could ever find out.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS MONDAY, AUGUST 27

State, Congressional and Senatorial Delegates to Be Named Then.

Notice was given today by Judge William S. Hyde, chairman of the Republican Town Committee, that the Republican caucus will be held in the Recreation Building, School street, Monday evening, August 27 at eight o'clock. This caucus is called for the purpose of electing delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held in New Haven September 6 and 7, for the nomination of candidates for State Officers and a Senator in Congress of the United States and for the election of delegates to the Congressional and Senatorial District Conventions. Because of the unusual interest in politics this year a large attendance is expected at this caucus although contests seldom ever develop at a caucus.

POST MANCHESTER MAN AS A NAVY DESERTER

New London Base Officers Seek Arrest of George Duplease, Long A. W. O. L.

A general notice has been sent out from the Naval Base at New London asking that George Robert Duplease, of 835 Center street, this place, be picked up as a deserter from the United States Navy. The notice received at police headquarters says that he left the New London Base August 5 and at that time was driving an automobile. Police are asked to arrest and hold him and to notify the New London Base and an officer will be sent for him. He enlisted last March.

RABBIT CLUB MEMBERS LOSING YOUNG STOCK

Members of the Manchester Rabbit Club have been reporting the loss of large numbers of rabbits and are trying to discover the cause. Disease has caused the loss of many young rabbits, one raiser, having lost sixty.

During the past week, however, there has been an improvement and a few rabbits have died. The members of the club will meet at the Community Club, north end, for their monthly meeting on Wednesday evening. Future meetings of the club are to be held at that place.

On Sunday the members will go to Scotland where they will be the guest of Jacob Barts, a former Manchester man, who has met with much success in raising rabbits and is now making weekly shipments to the New York market.

NO DECISION TO REBUILD ANDOVER MILL REACHED

Employees, However, Get Temporary Jobs Cleaning Up Around Burned Plant.

No decision has been reached as yet concerning the rebuilding of the mill owned by the Case family at Andover, which was destroyed by fire last week.

The mill was the only manufacturing plant in Andover and the fire threw about 25 employees of the mill out of work. The men were put to work today cleaning up around the ruins.

The insurance has not been adjusted as yet and until this is done no decision will be reached as to the rebuilding of the plant or its discontinuance, it was said at the office of Case Brothers this morning.

COLUMBIA

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Brown, of New Haven, and Clarence Bissell, of Hartford, were recent guests of Mrs. Julia Little.

Mrs. Anna Dart was called to Providence, R. I. Wednesday by the death of her brother.

Miss Bertha Bell has been spending a week in Rockville.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Isham spent Thursday in Hartford.

The annual fair and supper of the Ladies' Aid society was held Wednesday afternoon and evening. Supper was served to over 350 consisting of cold ham, salads, baked beans, cake and coffee. Uptairs in the hall were various booths. In the evening an auction was held with William Wolf acting as auctioneer. The ladies hope to realize a goodly sum for their treasury although the exact amount is not known yet. Mrs. Natch was chairman in charge of the fair, with Mrs. Mary Hutchins as chairman of the supper committee. A large number of the lake people were present with guests from Springfield, Hartford, Talcottville, Manchester, Gilead, Hebron, Andover and Willimantic.

MANY SALESMEN HERE TO STUDY CRAVAT WORK

Twenty-five from Distant Points Guests of Cheney Bros. for Week of Meetings.

Each phase of the manufacture of a Cheney cravat will be lectured on and then the salesmen, through a conducted tour of the plant, will witness the processes of which they have just heard. The purpose is to give every salesman a sound basic knowledge of the manufacture of the goods he sells.

Two meetings for Monday and Tuesday will cover the following topics and phases of manufacture: Tour of mills, testing laboratory, yarn dyeing, throwing, weaving, execution of orders, scheduling of production, budget control, salesmen's contact with mill, mill's contact with customer, and manufacturing of cravats under the leadership of Mr. Lupin, wires, R. W. Russell, Rowe, Schultz, Robinson, Tedford, Ward Cheney and Austin Cheney.

CURTIS' SPEECH

Speeches of acceptance by Vice-Presidential candidates should be limited by a new and wise custom to the expression of the candidate's appreciation of the honor, etc., and not be permitted to enter into matters of political policy. If this were done it would save the candidate a lot of harassing work and the party a deal of worry.

It is difficult to imagine a less satisfactory task than that of a candidate for Vice-President trying to write a speech of acceptance that will sound like something besides a paraphrase, in every section, of the acceptance speech of his leader. He must watch every step, every word, for potential trouble. He can say nothing that the principal candidate did not say—nothing, that is, of the slightest importance—without risking an adventure into fields which political wisdom has already decreed should be left unexplored.

The acceptance speech of Senator Curtis was, as such speeches are, carefully written to avoid any of the contradictions or conflicts which are otherwise inevitable in these documents. And yet there has crept in something which it would have been far better to have kept out—an unqualified endorsement of the Volstead act. This was utterly unnecessary and unwise.

Probably it will do no harm, either. Few read a Vice-Presidential candidate's speech of acceptance. Fewer still pay any attention to it.

SCHOOL JOBS

The Northwest School District Committee of Hartford is experiencing with especial force a situation which has constantly arisen in public school government in probably every community in America and for a long, long time.

Because there are more and more Hartford girls qualifying as school teachers each year, for whom no positions are open, and because many teaching positions are held either by married women or by residents of other cities and towns, the committee has yielded to pressure and has determined to drop out-of-town teachers and such married ones as are not dependent on their positions for support, replacing them by single women who live in Hartford.

Quite possibly the change may work all right. It will fit in every instance the pupils are given teachers as completely qualified as those who are displaced; otherwise not. The point of the matter is that when such factors as the place of residence or nuptial state of the teacher become major considerations in the employment of instructors for the young the essential element disappears from view—the fitness of the teacher for the job in hand.

No country in the world begins to spend so much money on the schooling of its children as the United States. In return it would seem as if the very best of instruction ought to be insisted on. However, in thousands of cases it is not superlative ability as a teacher that determines the bestowal of a job in the schools, but other and entirely extraneous conditions.

This will be so as long as school authorities and the public think of teaching positions from the viewpoint of the job-holder and the job-seeker, rather than from that of the best service to the children.

And the latter is the only thing that ought to count.

BUS SAFETY

The New Haven Journal-Courier has been worrying a bit recently over the speed of motor buses and the excellent chance that one of these days the long-deferred bus wreck, with an extensive list of dead and injured, may occur in this state. That newspaper points out that there is little difference between the bus and a railroad car, so far as the potentialities of disaster are concerned, except that the railroad train is mechanically held to an undisputed right of way while the bus weaves in and out of traffic, working out its own salvation through the skill of its driver and the beneficence of Divine Providence.

All of which is strictly true. There is certainly an element of risk in bus travel at forty miles an hour on the open highway which is not present in the movement of a railroad train maintaining the same speed.

Yet would the Journal-Courier figure the chance of fatality through a bus accident to be as great as that run every day by the forty-mile driver in a family automobile?

There is a compensating factor by which the bus gains a decided advantage over the small car. It lies in the complete respect yielded by the fresh and reckless road hog to the bigger and heavier vehicle. Also in the fact that if the road hog happens to be drunk and, like the jack rabbit who spits in the bulldog's face, disputes the wrong side of road with the big wagon, his car is extremely likely to be pitched into the trees while the weight of the bus usually protects it and its passengers from serious damage.

In the hedgepodge of speed lunacy, incompetence, brute ignorance and inhuman recklessness which smears the country's highways with blood and wreckage, it is our guess that the individual's life is safer today, in any first class corporation bus than it is in any private car, no matter how carefully driven.

Nor is it the buses that do the killing.

TAIN'T SO

We feel, over some statistics issued by the Women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, much like that celebrated ruralist who, at a circus menagerie, got his first sight of a giraffe. That individual has been widely misquoted as saying, "There ain't no such animal." What he actually said was, "I don't believe it, and there can't nobody make me believe it."

Are we to be blamed for feeling like this when the bureau solemnly declares that between 1910 and 1920 the increase in the number of women employed in gainful pursuits was the smallest—not the biggest, mind, but the smallest—of any decade in half a century?

We don't care if the Bureau does explain that the number of women employed as servants decreased 14 per cent and the number of those who worked in the fields also became vastly fewer, more than compensating for the increase of 140 per cent increase in clerical work and of 39 per cent in the professions.

Somewhere, surely, the Women's Bureau has lost four or five or fourteen or fifteen million cards out of its index system. We just know that the swarms and hordes and infinite myriads of girls and women who stopped mere sitting at home and went to work during the war, and never quit working, make any such figuring impossible. Anyhow, it seems so.

GRISLY GRIST

A seventeen-year-old boy, licensed to drive under the sixteen-year-old law amendment of the last Legislature, tried to pass two cars on a New London county road, yesterday afternoon. He is dead.

A driver of a car with plenty of beer in it hit a pole, wrecked his car and went home and to bed, leaving his companion sitting dead in the car, his neck broken.

A Hartford man crashed into a car parked for tire repairs in Rockville and one of the passengers of the parked car, a Rockville woman, was perhaps fatally hurt.

An old man crossing a street in West Haven was run over and killed by an automobile.

A rather short crop for one day. But perhaps not all the killings were reported. The near-killings and ordinary wrecks and minor injuries over the week-end no longer get into print, except locally; not always then.

Mr. Stoekel's best answer yet to the problem of the murders on the road is that probably by another generation the human race in America will have learned how to drive fast without accident.

There is a growing feeling that the Department of Public Vehicles in Connecticut is far less interested in preventing loss of human life than it is in maintaining the status quo.

AD IS SAFE, ANYHOW

The silence of Hassell and Crager, Europe-Via-Greenland aviators, while disheartening, is no proof in this case that disaster has overtaken their plane. It is entirely possible that they may have reached Greenland and yet be very far away from possibility of communication with the outside world. To be sure, a forced landing on Greenland, far from any of its few settlements, might in itself prove a serious enough matter. But at least the chance of a rescue would remain, provided the landing were close to the coast. If they should have to come down on the interior ice cap such a finish to their adventure might not have much advantage over dropping into the sea.

Meantime the city of Rockford, Ill., is getting the advertising it was after.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Herald. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

THE CAUSE OF ASTHMA.

A peculiar mental condition which the asthmatic patient undergoes is that when he first contracts this disease he is afraid of dying, and after he has had many attacks he is actually afraid of not dying. This is because he literally gasps for breath, and is suffering as much for want of oxygen as a fish would be out of water.

These patients suffer from an inability to draw enough air into the lungs. They can usually exhale air readily, but during the attack struggle to draw in enough air to supply the blood with its indispensable amount of oxygen.

The primary reason for this difficulty in breathing is because the diaphragm cannot be lowered far enough to draw the air into the lungs. Breathing is principally accomplished by the raising and lowering of the diaphragm, which is the muscle separating the lungs from the abdomen. During exhalation, the diaphragm presses upward forcing the air out of the lungs, while during inhalation, the diaphragm lowers, and in this way draws air into the lungs.

If an excess amount of stomach and intestinal gas presses upward against the diaphragm, it is often impossible for the diaphragm to descend low enough to draw in the needed air. The heart is often affected by this pressure, and this form of asthma is then called "Cardiac Asthma" because the lungs and the heart action are both affected.

Bronchial asthma is another condition often present, in which there is a large quantity of mucus which fills up the air passages, and interferes with the free circulation of air through the lungs. This excessive mucus is produced from the patient using too much sugar and starch, and too much of the "fat" foods, or from mixing in bad combination with each other. Foods which are gas-forming in themselves, such as onions, garlic, cabbage, Brussels sprouts, turnips, etc., will also create this excessive gas, and these foods must be entirely eliminated by one who has a tendency toward asthma.

Drugs are entirely useless in the cure of this trouble. Of course, it is possible to struggle along for years using adrenalin or smoking powders which contain opium, but this cannot bring about a cure, and I find that patients who have taken these treatments are always in worse condition than those who have not, and their cases are always more difficult to cure.

Considering that asthma is a symptom and not a disease, it is a coarse very foolish to continue to treat such symptoms with remedies without at least attempting to remove the probable cause.

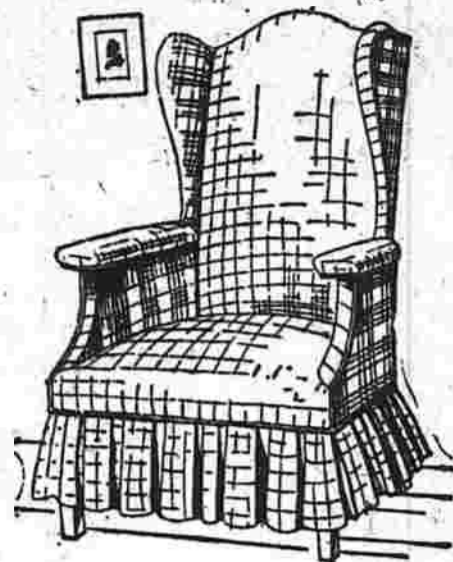

As I have explained, there are only three principal causes of true asthma or bronchial asthma. These are excessive gas pressure against the diaphragm, lack of mobility to the diaphragm, and excessive formations of mucus in the bronchial tubes. The cure then must come from removing these causes, and not fully one hundred per cent. of all cases can be cured through proper regulated diet and exercise.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Question: Mrs. H. J. writes: "When I am walking my hands swell up so much that they pain me terribly, especially when I touch them. At times only one hand will swell and the other will be perfectly all right."

Answer: Swelling of the hands is common when walking rapidly or any great distance. The swinging of the arms forces the blood into the hands, but should not cause any discomfort unless you are suffering from rheumatism. Sometimes an impingement of the nerves which issue from the spine and go to the arms will be the controlling factor in causing one hand to swell and not the other; an osteopath or chiropractor could tell you if this exists.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Aug. 20.—Wayne Bidwell Wheeler probably exerted more authority over governmental affairs than any elected official, according to his first biographer. He took Republican administrations under his wing. If he bullied them, he also protected them from attack. He kept some men in offices and blocked other men both in the prohibition service and in the Anti-Saloon League, to retain his unquestioned control. Other big men in the league grew restive as he walked over them rough-shod and used methods which they considered harmful to the cause. Today Wheeler has no real successor.

"Wayne Wheeler, Dry Boss" is the first biography of the man, written by one of his closest associates, Justin Stewart, his publicity secretary for years. Stewart remolds with the league and one might expect to eulogize in this volume. But Stewart, hot for the cause and boasting Wheeler's greatness, admits that it is "difficult to tabulate the good accomplished and the harm done to the prohibition cause by Wayne B. Wheeler." He insists on awarding rightly to others much credit that Wheeler claimed or received.

As a boy Wheeler was accidental, stabbed in the leg by a pitchfork in the hands of a hay-pitcher who had been drinking. "A sociable, good-natured old scak" came lighered to the Wheeler home one night and recited "Ten Nights in a Barroom" for hours, frightening the women and children. These incidents impressed little Wayne tremendously.

Three elements predominated in him, says Stewart—sincerity, tirelessness and opportunism in the order named. He loved the limelight and grabbed glory belonging to others. He loved "power" or the semblance of it.

His willingness to endorse personal views who agreed to vote dry early brought him in conflict with his own colleagues.

Twice Superintendent P. A. Bakker was on the point of firing him for his aggressiveness on his own behalf while other league leaders waited modestly for honors to be awarded them.

In 21 Ohio years Wheeler introduced the "pressure system" which he was to use successfully on a national scale. He became a national figure in his defense of the Webb-Kenyon liquor act's constitutionality, which Stuart says was doubted by Wheeler himself. Stewart credits Wheeler with authorship of the Volstead act, but denies him credit for the eighteenth amendment.

After that Wheeler rode high, shaping the government's prohibition policy from the start. When Treasury or Justice Department made an interpretation Wheeler forced a reversal if he saw fit. He was one of the few who saw that the amendment's adoption didn't mean a dry nation. While others prepared to disband he leaped into the saddle and became the league's man on horseback.

Wheeler was a Republican and imposed his politics on the league. He asked Harding easier public questions than Cox in 1920, permitting a more equivocal answer, because, as Stuart says, "the league was out to beat Cox." Stewart credits Wheeler with stopping Smith at the 1924 Democratic convention and with blocking Underwood and Ritchie.

He had Bryan taking orders and permitted the Davis nomination because he felt it was "tantamount to a Republican victory." Afterward Wheeler prepared a statement boasting of his personal victory at the convention; Bishop Cannon, a Democrat, angrily blocked its publication.

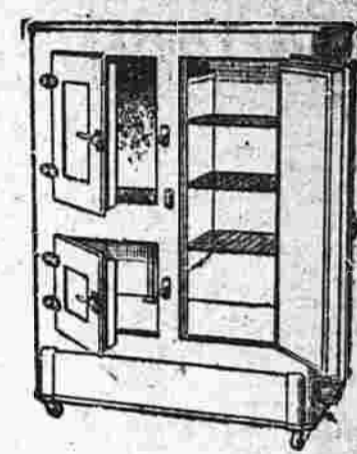

Stewart tells how Wheeler beat Ernest Cerrington out of the league's general superintendency by deception and trickery so that he might have a weaker and more pliable man in the job; how his overlordship of prohibition ended abruptly when Gen. Andrews took charge; how Wheeler exulted as scheming politicians defeated Anderson; how Wheeler stopped the league from publicly exposing Haynes and attacking Coolidge for lax enforcement; of Wheeler's last vain fight to save Haynes, of whom many league men were sick and tired; of Wheeler's gallant struggles for the cause while dying on his feet; how Wheeler was deeply hurt at being cartooned as a poisoner and his grief at being publicly rebuked by his superiors for promising a Democratic bolt. If Smith were nominated, Wheeler had no marked success in obtaining helpful legisla-

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT
Compiled by the
CONNECTICUT CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

(166) Colleges

From every state in the Union and from virtually every country in the world are drawn the students who enroll in Connecticut universities and colleges. Last college year there were close to 10,000 students in the fourteen institutions of higher learning in Connecticut, twice the number enrolled in the eight colleges and universities in this state twenty years ago.

There is one instructor for every seven students enrolled in Connecticut colleges. Twenty years ago there was one for every eight students.

Last year's graduating classes of the fourteen institutions numbered 1,730, double the number graduating in 1908-09. There are approximately 50,000 living alumni of Connecticut colleges and universities.

The total annual expenses of the fourteen institutions amount to approximately $7,000,000. Slightly more than a third of this amount is for salaries of the faculty. Total expenses for 1927-28 amounted to more than four times the total expenses for 1908-09. Properties of the fourteen institutions are valued at approximately $44,231,000, four times the value of college properties in the state twenty years ago. Every college has a large library, all of the institutions having a total of 1,730,000 volumes valued at several million dollars.

Yale University, established in 1701, is the oldest university in the state and one of the oldest in the United States. The Albertus Magnus College and the Connecticut College of Pharmacy, both organized in 1925, are the youngest. The only state-supported institution of college grade in the state is the Connecticut Agricultural College at Storrs.

MRS. WOODWARD HEADS FOR NEW BOLTON RECORD

Likely to Go to Legislature for 3rd Time—Politics Lively in That Town.

Bolton is giving more attention to politics than Manchester and more interest is being shown in the coming caucus next Monday night when delegates to the state, senatorial and congressional conventions are to be held than is noted in this town.

Bolton, which is about an even break in national and state politics, has sent a Republican representative to the Legislature for the past two terms. Mrs. Maude Woodward is not only a Republican, but has a record that has never been made in Bolton before—going to the Legislature from that town twice in succession.

In succession it is likely to be further broken as it is almost an assured fact that Mrs. Woodward will again be a candidate and as she has always drawn votes from both the Republican and Democratic sides her election seems at this early date already assured.

New York, Aug. 20.—Not, perhaps, that it makes a great deal of difference—but, anyway, someone salvaged from a Brooklyn warehouse the statue of Diana, which once perched so gallily atop the Madison Square Garden, and found a place for it on the New York University grounds.

Which reminds me of a tale that waits the pen of the embryo O. Henrys. It was told me the other night at the Players Club by a doctor who writes a bit himself now and then.

"It was a couple of years ago, in this very clubroom," the doctor began. "We were sitting about the round table—some artists, actors and writers. The papers had been carrying stories about the passing of Madison Square Garden. And one of the artists spoke admiringly of the St. Gaudens statue of Diana—which, of course, turned the general conversation in that direction.

"A short time afterward, the artist came up to me and said: 'Doctor, I'd like to send over to you the girl that modeled for that statue. She hasn't been very well lately. And I've seen Koenig an eye on her.' Of course I said I'd be glad to take the case.

"Well—I don't know why we carry around illusions of fountains of youth, and such. But anyone who ever saw Diana up there above the city must have conjured up some image of immortal symmetry. You know, I completely forgot how many years had passed since the statue was modeled.

"And then, one morning there hobbled into my office a rheumatic and crotchety old lady. She was bent from pain and twisted from the twinges of her malady. Her dress indicated that circumstances had been no kinder to her than Time.

"She sat down, and introduced herself with, 'I'm the patient So-and-So sent you.'

"'Oh yes,' I said, pretending unconcern. 'You are Diana?'

"'Yes,' she responded, with a twinge of pain. 'I was Diana.'"

"That's all there is to the story as I heard it. I don't vouch for it, either in entirety or part, since I know the doctor to be fond of his tale-tellings. I merely know that I liked the story. And there seems no reason why it shouldn't be true. Even a slyph must grow old, and growing old must become heir to the infirmities of advancing years.

Heywood Brown, the columnist, once remarked that he never could see the tragedies in such situations as those presented by "Romeo and Juliet," in which the hero and heroine merely die.

His comment was that if he were to write the play to suit his idea of tragedy he would show Romeo and Juliet in their classic balcony love moments. And then, in the last act, he would show them a couple of dozen years later. Romeo would be no longer young and handsome, and Juliet would be getting fat, and her hair would be graying.

Romeo would be making his love plea again, his voice weakening bit. And, in the midst of it, Juliet would yawn.

And that, said Brown, would be tragedy.

In which I am inclined to concur.

TELEPHONE CO. NAMES ADVERTISING MANAGER

Herbert S. Koenig of New Haven Takes Over Work of Judson S. Bradley, Resigned

The appointment of Herbert S. Koenig of 458 Dixwell avenue, New Haven, to be advertising manager of the Southern New England Telephone Company, was announced today by C. E. Rolf, assistant to the vice president.

Mr. Koenig entered the publicity department of the telephone company in February, 1927, as a copy writer, having for some time prior to that date held the position of advertising manager for the Meccano Company, Inc., of New York and Elizabeth, N. J.

Herbert S. Koenig

The telephone company's new advertising manager is a New Haven man and attended Hopkins Grammar school and Hillhouse High school in that city. He is a son of Prof. Otto Koenig of the Rochester Theological Seminary, who for 16 years was pastor of the German Baptist church in George street.

Mr. Koenig is a veteran of the World War, having served with the 7th U. S. Infantry and is well known in advertising circles in this city and New York.

Mr. Koenig takes the position in the Southern New England Company vacated by the transfer of Judson S. Bradley to the American Telephone and Telegraph Company in New York where he will be connected with the commercial department of the parent company in sales promotion work.

LEGISLATORS' REUNION SAME DAY AS CONVENTION

The fact that the date set for the reunion of former members of the Connecticut Legislature on September 6, at the state fair in Hartford, was in conflict with the opening date of the state convention of the Republican party, which will open in New Haven that same evening, has caused a re-arrangement to make it possible for those who wish to attend both to be able to do so.

The reunion of the Legislators will begin at 11 o'clock in the morning of September 6 at the Fair grounds in West Hartford and will come to a close at 5 o'clock, which will, it is felt sure, give ample time for those intending to get to New Haven for the opening of the convention.

REPUBLICAN CAUCUS!

The Republican electors of the Town of Bolton are requested to meet in caucus in the basement of the Congregational Church on Monday, Aug. 27, 1928, at 7 o'clock, p. m., for the purpose of electing delegates to the Republican State Convention to be held in New Haven Sept. 8 and 7, 1928, for the nomination of candidates for the state officers, a Senator in Congress of the United States and for the election of delegates to the Congressional, Senatorial and Probate conventions.

MERCHANTS' NIGHT AT STATE TOMORROW

Loads of Gifts to Be Given Away; "Angel of Broadway" on Screen; Greta Garbo Tonight.

A new policy is to be inaugurated at the State Theater tomorrow night, when local merchants will cooperate with the management in presenting the first of a series of Merchants and State Theater Nights. This delightful and unusual feature has many surprises in store for Manchester film fans. Loads of useful and practical gifts will be given away. This feature is an extra added attraction for tomorrow evening only, in addition to the splendid program of screen subjects. The principal film feature for tomorrow and Wednesday will be "The Angel of Broadway," a glittering drama of romance and adventure featuring Leatrice Joy.

Both sides of Broadway—one concealing the bitterness of false pleasure beneath a brilliant exterior, the other drab and dull, but full of sincerity—these are the contrasting backgrounds in this swift-moving picture. Leatrice Joy, the star, goes from the heights to the depths of material existence, her characterization being of striking contrasts. Miss Joy has a role of tremendous dramatic force—one of the finest she has ever essayed as motion picture star. She is a dancer in a night club in New York, where she syncopates hymns and gibed at religion. Men roared at her merriment, in New York, then bowed their heads in grief. But when remorse tormented her soul, she called herself a fool, but was she? It is at this point that the story suddenly develops a charming and unusual twist that is interspersed with plenty of thrills and drama.

Victor Varconi, well known to local film fans, plays opposite Miss Joy as a burly truck driver who loses his heart to the star. A selected program of State Short Subjects will be shown in conjunction with the feature.

For the final times tonight, at 7:00 and 9:00, the State is presenting Greta Garbo in "The Mysterious Lady." Those who saw this picture last night claim it to be beautiful Greta's finest effort.

It's always cool and comfortable at the State, regardless of the hot weather. This is made possible through the continuous operation of a gigantic Typhoon Cooling System.

Twenty-five people were robbed in a New York restaurant. The fact that it was by four bandits makes it news.

Washed in THE MAYTAG in 2 to 7 minutes!

SUCH remarkable washing speed was unthought of before the Maytag originated the Gyrafoam washing action and the heat-retaining cast-aluminum tub, yet it washes the daintiest garments as carefully as if done by hand—washes by water action alone—a torrent of water passing back and forth through the meshes of the clothes.

This effective but careful method washes the stubborn edge-dirt from collars and cuffs, the ground-in dirt from play-clothes or overalls without hand-rubbing. An average washing takes about an hour.

The New Roller Water Remover
The Maytag Roller Water Remover has large rolls, the top one soft, the bottom one hard. They exert equal pressure on all parts of the garment regardless of folds, lumps and seams. remove both soap and water evenly from all parts of the garment and spare the buttons.

PHONE for a Trial Washing
You may use a Maytag for your next washing without cost or obligation. You will find that it brings washday happiness. You will discover why it won world leadership. If it doesn't sell itself, don't keep it.

The Safety Feed, the automatic tension adjustment, the self-reversing drainboard and the instant safety release remove the last bit of effort from the weekly washing.

Giants Have Been Forging Ahead Since End of July, Other Games.

New York, Aug. 20.—John McGraw's dream of winning his eleventh National League pennant this year took on a rosy hue today as the little Napoleon and his fighting Giants, in first place for the first time since May 13, pulled into Cincinnati for a 3-game series with the Reds.

Forty thousand persons saw this game, while 65,000, a record baseball crowd for any city this season, watched the Yankees divide a double bill with Cleveland in New York. With one man on base in the tenth inning of the opener, Chick Atley, Cleveland catcher and former Yankee, hit a homer which gave the Indians a 3 to 2 verdict.

Lindstrom, Bottomley, Frisch and Wilson Also in Running for Selection in National.

There is no one name that suggests itself immediately when candidates are being considered for the National League's most valuable player prize. As is the case in the American League there are a number of prominent candidates, a number of factors to be considered and the contest is certain to be close.

Both the Cardinals and the Pirates, however, have more spectacular candidates in the contest. The Cardinals have Jim Bottomley and Jimmy Wilson and the Pirates present Burrell Grimes, the greatest pitcher of the year.

The field in the running for the prize probably will be reduced to Bottomley, Wilson, Grimes, Fred Lindstrom and Larry Benton and these five are our favorite is Grimes.

First Round This Week; Best Two Out of Three Sets; Matches Self-Referreed; Players Should Make Arrangements Without Delay.

Thirty-two players will compete in The Herald's second annual elimination tournament for the men's singles tennis championship of Manchester, an increase of eight over last year's field.

Well Paired

A study of the pairings which were made the same way as last year—by drawings—reveals that the players in most instances have been exceptionally well matched. Two of the leading players in the tournament, Ty Holland and Lawrence Paisley, are included. They are Eddie Markley, Aldo Gatti and Bob Smith, Jr. Interesting is the fact that there are three pairs of brothers in the competition—the Bissells, Cheney and Farrs. The dopesters say that Paul Janesis is quite a player. He meets 1 player which is now a public boarding house. He is said to be quite a star at the game. Mac Macdonald, runner-up for the title, drew a classy opponent in Ben Cheney, who is also a player of considerable merit.

Well Paired

A study of the pairings which were made the same way as last year—by drawings—reveals that the players in most instances have been exceptionally well matched. Two of the leading players in the tournament, Ty Holland and Lawrence Paisley, are included. They are Eddie Markley, Aldo Gatti and Bob Smith, Jr. Interesting is the fact that there are three pairs of brothers in the competition—the Bissells, Cheney and Farrs. The dopesters say that Paul Janesis is quite a player. He meets 1 player which is now a public boarding house. He is said to be quite a star at the game. Mac Macdonald, runner-up for the title, drew a classy opponent in Ben Cheney, who is also a player of considerable merit.

production has just been completed and it is claimed that it will present something entirely new to the screen world. Pauline Stark will be seen in an entirely new role—a Viking's daughter—in this film, "Left the Lucky."

Some of the most unusual under water photography ever seen on the silver sheet is promised by Frank Capra when his new film, "Into the Depths," is released. Capra spent many weeks shooting his under water scenes but will not reveal their exact nature.

Film producers don't always have easy sledding even when they release a really good picture. Howard Hughes, Hollywood's young oil millionaire, thought he would "clean up" with Thomas Meighan's latest film, "The Racket." "The Racket," which deals with the crooked politics of almost any large city, is the best picture Meighan has made in several years. And now a number of cities have banned it because of the way it reveals corruption. Hughes has appealed to Will Hays for aid but to date the movie "car" has been unable to offer much assistance.

It doesn't matter who you are, you become a screen star to the public the minute your name appears in electric lights over a motion picture theater, according to Fred Niblo, Niblo, who is one of Hollywood's leading directors, has had dozens of fan letters praising his acting in various films. He has directed merely because his name appeared in the electric lights. Mack Sennett is another man who is a favorite "actor" with many fans—even though he hasn't appeared in one of his comedies for more than ten years.

LOVE FOR TWO

RUTH DEWEY GROVES © 1928 By NEA Service Inc.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BERTIE LOU and ROD BRYER are happily married, until LILA LOREE plots to separate them. For months she works to arouse Rod's interest in her while she plants seeds of doubt in his mind about Bertie Lou.

When Bertie Lou discovers that they see each other secretly she is heartbroken and flirts with young MARCO PALMER to retaliate. Rod will not commit himself to Lila, although Bertie Lou has drifted far apart.

Tired of her waiting game, Lila tells Rod she loves him and wants him to go away with her. He repudiates her disloyalty to her husband by telling her that he is out with her.

Rod drives to the Palmer estate where he sees Marco and Bertie Lou in lounging attire and departs without leaving a word. They were merely coming upstairs from the swimming pool.

Rod leaves Bertie Lou with an explanation, resigns his position and drifts from one thing to another trying to avoid old haunts. Both women try to find him without success.

Bertie Lou secures a position, expecting Rod to get a divorce. The suspense and dreariness of her lot cause her to seek forgetfulness in Marco's gay crowd. She has a breakdown and, while convalescing, decides to buy a "dream home" with the money Rod had sent her when he left.

Marco begs her to marry him, but she tells him she still loves Rod. When the house is finished, she advertises it for sale. She is surprised when Rod answers the ads, and conceals herself while he looks over the house. Rod says he cannot afford it and offered the job of caretaker until the house is sold.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLIV

Well, what is the condition? Bertie said Rod in reply to his statement that he would accept the job at the cottage on one condition.

"Simply that I shall be at liberty to quit whenever I choose," he explained. "And I agree that the owner may discharge me without notice."

Bertie hesitated.

"I haven't the slightest idea whether or not I can endure living here alone," Bertie declared, but he did not add that he was inspired by the fact that the cottage reminded him so much of Bertie Lou.

Bertie had decided that Bertie Lou would want her to meet his terms. "I'm sure that you are right with the owner," she said. "He wants you to leave your address and the name of someone we can ask about you."

She smiled in friendly fashion, but Rod did not return the smile. "I've no references," he said shortly, "but I've lived for several weeks at my present address. You may inquire about me there if you wish."

"Well, of course, it's a funny way to do business," Bertie declared, merely for the sake of appearances. "But if you've just come to town—that was an explanation for his lack of references that she brought out in order to make Rod believe she assured him to be the real one. It wouldn't do to let him suspect they would turn over the house to an unvouched-for stranger.

Rod let it pass. If they wanted to investigate him, let them. It was an absurd thing, anyhow, his taking such a job. He didn't really know why he did it, except that the opportunity for some physical effort appealed to him.

It would be a relief to have a chance to work with his hands, out-doors. But five dollars a week would scarcely maintain him. He had a little money. He'd have to use some of that, and he mustn't wait until it was gone before seeking a position in his own field.

"Here's the address, and the name of the landlady," he said and wrote them down on a piece of paper torn from a notebook. "When will you let me know?"

"Tomorrow night? What's your telephone number? If everything is all right I'll give you a ring."

Rod gave her the number and she jotted it down.

"I'll tell the owner that I'd like to put in a garden," Rod said while he was leaving. "I'm not working just at present and I'd like to be busy around the place."

When Bertie repeated his request to Bertie Lou she smiled and smiled. But the smile was erased when Bertie informed her of Rod's conditional acceptance.

"He's afraid maybe he won't like the simple life," Bertie added, using her own words. Into Bertie Lou's mind flashed an interpretation that killed a little of her pity for Rod. So he still longed for Lila, did he? That was what it meant. The simple life hadn't much attraction for him. Perhaps if he were not down on his luck he would be back with Lila and her friends, in the night clubs.

Bertie Lou thought she could guess pretty well what had happened. Cyrus had discovered that Rod and Lila were in love with each other. Rod had lost his position and Lila had cast him aside when he began to slip down the ladder. He had cost him so much to climb. The cost had been chiefly her own, Bertie Lou reflected.

But could Rod be such a poor fish that he regretted losing Lila? Couldn't he see, since Lila had been turned out by Cyrus, along with him, that she preferred her rich husband to a poor lover? She must somehow have put all the blame on Rod, and managed to convince Cyrus of her own innocence. Bertie Lou despised Rod at the moment she told herself these things. She despised him; but still she "plotted" him. And the next day she telephoned to his landlady, as a matter of form, and made a few inquiries about him. All that she could learn was that he was a satisfactory tenant.

That evening Bertie called him and announced to him that his references were O. K. He could when would he go out? Rod replied that he would be at the cottage the next morning.

"Make it tomorrow evening—at half past eight and I'll be out there," Bertie answered and Rod agreed.

"You can go ahead with the garden," she told him when he arrived at the house promptly on the half hour. "Here's the keys. Be sure you don't go away and leave the doors unlocked. And there's some bacon and eggs in the box for your breakfast, but there isn't any ice. Oh, yes, here's your first week's pay and two dollars to buy seed for the garden."

Rod thanked her and offered to walk to the station with her, but Bertie very decidedly refused. Bertie Lou was at the station.

"What did he say?" she queried excitedly when Bertie came trudging along just a few minutes ahead of her. "Doesn't he think five dollars is too little?"

She was sorry she couldn't afford to pay him more. But even as it was she couldn't continue long to keep him in her employ. There would be no rent to help meet the payments on the house, and her own salary was not sufficient for anything but her own expenses and the five dollars she was paying Rod.

Most of the $500 she had received out of the $2,000—it was reserved out of the $2,000 that had come from Rod but she had saved a little of her salary before she fell ill—was gone. She could carry on for about two months and then she must either rent or sell.

And in the meantime...

Well, it was thrilling to know that Rod was living under their very own roof. Yes, there, for she had decided he should be part owner. For convenience she would keep the title in her own name but she always would consider that Rod shared in its ownership. And if she sold the house she would send his half to him in care of his father.

The other half was legitimately hers. She would not use it unless necessarily compelled her, but after all, even if it was the price of Rod's desertion of her, was she not entitled to half of the money that had been saved through stint in which she had borne an equal part.

Whatever it was that she hoped for from Rod's presence in her house failed to materialize, however she couldn't bring herself to give. She could wait, but she was facing the necessity of having Bertie tell him he would have to go when Bertie returned from a visit to the cottage with the realty agent. Bertie Lou looked at her, speechless with the misery that welled into her throat. Of course Rod didn't know that it was their little house of dreams.

He was at liberty to have callers if he wished... only, from something Bertie said and the way she looked when she said it, Bertie Lou had a sickening impression.

"What makes you so sure that a woman would bring herself to sell to Bertie's question about Rod?"

"Well, I guess Mr. Brown doesn't wear gold hairpins," Bertie answered shortly. Brown was the name Rod had taken at the time she had last change of address. Despite his belief that Lila would not seek him out in a humble abode, she had done so.

Rod had gone to Tom Fraser to ask his permission to give his name as the reference when at last he found it impossible to obtain a position without one. Tom had asked for his address. And Molly had given it to Lila when the latter said she had a personal matter to take up with him.

Molly had a healthy suspicion of the nature of Lila's "personal matter," but she was too desirous of pleasing the wife of an influential man like Cyrus to refuse the address, although she did wish she hadn't mentioned that it was in Tom's possession.

This time Lila had found Rod at home. She looked around his poorly furnished room with an open sneer upon her skillfully colored lips.

"This isn't necessary," she said, ignoring the lack of a welcome and the fact that Rod stood and did not offer her a chair. "Cyrus will take you back," she added after waiting in vain for Rod to answer her remark.

"Don't waste your time," he told her then. Lila moved nearer to him. "Are you going down to the gutter before you decide to take life as you find it?" she asked tensely.

"Perhaps, but not with you," Rod said levelly. Lila drew back a little and the next instant Rod had a feeling that she would need but little prompting to tear him to pieces if she could.

It was just after this visit from Lila that he was served with the papers in Bertie Lou's divorce action, and lost the position Tom's reference had helped him to get. His newborn ambition had died then and he did not seek anyone's help in getting work. He took his name to Brown.

And it was of Brown that Bertie reported, with not the faintest glimmering of suspicion that he was Bertie Lou's husband. She did guess that he was more to her friend than amusement, "a young man I used to know," however, and Bertie wasn't going to see him put anything over on Bertie Lou. So she told what she knew.

He had a woman visitor in Bertie Lou's house.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

I should begin early to fix a child's sense of values.

America is too much inclined to prize possessions, puts too high a rating on amusement and gauges the value of most things by the money they represent. America loves good food, fine clothes, expensive cars, elaborate houses, big clubs, gorgeous hotels, and movies and theaters.

All these things seem to be the goal of the so-called younger generation. When they cannot have them, they are unhappy. Money is verily the root of most evil in the United States, for we have not been trained to be happy without it.

Why is it that other peoples are so content with a little? Because they have been taught to love, from childhood, the things that do not take money to buy.

The sky, the land, the water, meadows, birds, animals, flowers, views, sunsets, mountains, the sea, a green hill, a garden, a church, books, music, religion, an open fire, friendliness, games, swimming, walking, the harvest, the beauty of winter landscapes, cleverness with the hands, alertness of the mind, all these things are the real things of life. If children are taught very early to love and appreciate these things they won't grow up with the idea that to be happy one must have a pocketful of spending money.

These wonderful summer days, I'd certainly find my way to the country with the children if it is only for a Saturday or a Sunday afternoon.

I should find places to walk through the daisy-studded meadows and by quiet brooks. I should wait for a timid squirrel or bird to take a chance on my company. And I should not be too academic. If you are going to tell about a stone or a wild-flower, a yellow hammer, or a ground hog, don't say, "Now, children, I want you to learn—"

Everything in nature has its story and children adore being told things. They have a natural affinity for animals and birds. If flowers and ferns and trees just as interesting. It is a world of fun to hunt for Jack-in-the-pulpits in damp shady spots. If you buy a little book to replenish your own stock of knowledge, do not show it to the children if you think it will make them gun-shy.

Call the attention of the children to every beautiful sunset, and interest them in the clouds. There is beauty in a signpost.

Children should be taught to place little store in fine clothes. They should not judge their friends by the kind of houses they live in. Train them away from that. Teach them the real way to choose friends. Real happiness lies in mental attitude and behavior. Children who cannot be happy unless they are having thrills and spending money. Happiness lies in ourselves.

THE RULE OF ELEVEN

An example showing the application of the rule of eleven from the declarer's point of view:

Dummy—spades A K J 3.
East—
Declarer—spades 9 4.

West leads the 7 of spades. Subtracting seven from eleven, the declarer learns that four cards higher than the 7 of spades are held in the dummy east's hand and his own hand. The dummy holds A K J of spades and the declarer holds 9 of spades. Declarer knows, therefore, that the 9 of spades can take the trick and there is no necessity of sacrificing a higher card in the hand.

He knows that west holds the 4 of spades and by leading the Jack of spades, he can win four tricks in the spade suit!

The foregoing examples of the applicability of the rule of eleven holds in no trump play. The assumption made in each instance is that west leads the fourth card from the top in his longest and strongest suit, unless east has bid the suit. If an honor is led, the rule is not binding.

The player who leads may hold four or five cards in that suit and there are times when the exact number may be determined. If the 2 is led, you know that he holds only four cards. If the 3 is led and the 2 is in the dummy or in your hand you know that west holds only four cards.

At trump play, the rule of eleven may also be of assistance to you. The expert recognizes its application and it gives him an added advantage over the novice. The following example is most interesting.

Dummy—diamonds A K 8 5.
East—
Declarer—diamonds 9 2.

West leads diamonds 7.

Trick seven for diamonds. Subtract seven from eleven, and the result is four. There should be four cards higher than the 7 of diamonds in the dummy, east's hand and the declarer's hand. Dummy and the declarer hold four cards higher than the 7 of diamonds—the 10, among others A K 9 8 of diamonds. But the 7 of diamonds is not the fourth from the top because no player would lead it when holding a series of three touching honors. Therefore the 7 of diamonds must be a singleton or lead from a short suit. Dummy should take with the King of diamonds to prevent ruffing.

One-Minute Interviews

TEMPERAMENT VS. DISCIPLINE

"Handling temperamental writers is not such a problem if you happen to have a streak of temperament yourself," said Wick, author's agent, who has been very successful in managing authors, and making them work while she landed them in the high salary class.

Though her own training was academic and thorough, there is a side of her, she says, that remained rebel and defied rules.

"And this is the side," she said, "that makes me recognize temperament in others. I know how the natural artist hates routine, loathes discipline, can never do a second job just as he did the first, and how hard he finds it to work with ideas for which he has no natural sympathy.

These are all traits common to the creative type. And these very people, when they find the stride, are the ones who can express themselves with originality and freshness, because they did not adjust easily or become standardized."

The business side of Miss Wick occasionally has to be put in the background and the creative side given its inning when she herself writes a novel or collaborates on a play.

HINTS ON HOW TO KEEP WELL by World Famed Authority

CARE OF THE HAIR IS CENTER OF MANY MISTAKE NOTIONS BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

The number of strange notions regarding the hair is infinite. One of them has to do with the idea that the pouring and rubbing of tonics of one sort or another upon the scalp will influence greatly the growth and texture of the hair.

Experienced investigators are inclined to believe that the loss of hair is associated in most instances with heredity, and that in the absence of hereditary factors, the quality of the hair is a reflection to a considerable extent of the circulation of the scalp and the nature of the blood coming to it. Hence, competent advisers suggest improvement of the circulation by suitable massage and manipulation of the scalp and the employing of general hygiene for improving the quality of the blood.

The scalp should be washed as often as is necessary for cleanliness. If the scalp is excessively dry, oil may be added in the form of vaseline or olive oil. There is a strange notion to the effect that repeated shaving makes the hair coarse or will make it grow more rapidly; hence persons are frequently seen in the summer months with the scalp completely shaved. The notion is wholly a notion. There is not the slightest evidence to substantiate this belief.

The average man today shaves himself with facility and cleanliness. Barber shops vary as to their hygiene and cleanliness. Trouble-some skin diseases are occasionally contracted in instances in which damp towels or dirty shaving brushes have carried infection.

There is no evidence that curling of the hair on pins or paper is injurious, as pointed out by Dr. J. Williams, that negroes use a preparation to take out the dandruff and white women spend fortunes to put it in.

The WOMAN'S DAY

Here's a new idea and a bit startling one, to boot. Dr. Henry Dwight Chapin, prominent child welfare worker, says small families among the more intellectual classes are not because of conscious limitation of families as much as that "a high development of the brain and its abundant use tend to inhibit the faculty of procreation."

If this belief becomes popularly known, people will fear to have families, thus providing a "dead give-away" as to their lack of intelligence.

A MALE PEEVE

A man of Brazil, Indiana, thought his wife had deserted him, went home, smashed up all the furniture, stacked it in the front yard, and placarded it "a monument to a dead love." We're glad that the man of Brazil did this, just to prove it isn't only women who throw tantrums and "show off" to the neighbors.

TERRIBLE COOKS

It takes a brave man to stand up in meeting and tell a bunch of women that they represent the race of the worst cooks in the world. That's what Dr. Louis Cassidy of Ireland, told the Women's National Health Association of Ireland. He added that Irish women were not only the worst cooks but the worst housekeepers of any women in the world.

What's more, he got away with it. Instead of tarring and feathering him, the women asked how they could reform, which tolerance and willingness to learn speaks a temperament much more worth while than the mere fact of being good housekeepers. After all, most of the so-called housekeepers and cooks don't seem to know how to live very richly apart from their job.

LAKE ERIE RUM RUNNERS HAVE REGULAR SCHEDULE TO CANADA AND BACK

Lorain, O.—How rum running is carried on despite the vigilance of customs officials along the shores of Lake Erie, was described here recently by a reputed smuggler. The runner, who, it was said, had imbibed somewhat freely of the cup that cheers, on the day he told his story stated that a regular schedule was maintained daily between Canada and a point near Cleveland. He declared a boat, carrying a cargo of 200 cases of beer, shows off each night from Canadian shores for American warehouses, after taking aboard cargo during the day.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

A woman's ideal is often shattered, but more often he's merely broke.

SENSE and NONSENSE

KEEP THIS QUIET: When you come home late at night she's a great wife if she doesn't waken.

You needn't go far to be a success. Consider the bunt!

Little Boy (returning from swim)—Mother, papa certainly is a good swimmer.

Mother—Why, sonny, your papa can't swim a stroke.

Little Boy—Well, anyhow, he can stay under water a long time.

Capriciousness In summer when the weather's hot I'd like to be a Hottentot; In winter when there's lots of snow I'd rather be an Eskimo.

At perihelion you feel one way, and another at aphelion; It truly seems to me, my son, You're changeable as a chameleon.

A young woman who seemed to be having her first experience in a bank approached the window of a paying teller and gave him a large check which she wanted cashed. "How do you wish the money?" the teller inquired.

"Oh," replied the young woman, in some confusion, "I'll just hold out my hand and you can put the money in it."

Manchester girls may not like to be shocked, but anyway they won't go out with anything but live wires.

Two gentlemen by the name of Wood and Stone were standing on the street corner when a beautiful young lady passed by. Stone turned to Wood and Wood turned to Stone, and they both turned to rubber.

What Spice Glory? Ivan was a Moscow pawnbroker, Fritz a German one, and they had often done business together. To their surprise they found themselves facing each other in the trenches during the war.

Next day each got a medal for capturing the enemy flag.

Want Ad We recently ran across an Associated Press despatch about a certain Y. W. C. A., which ran, in part, as follows:

"Every young man who calls on a girl there, is assessed for his visit. He pays 25 cents for an audience in the lounge; if he desires the privacy of the parlor, the tax is 50 cents."

Upon reading the above we immediately betook ourself to the Y. W. C. A. mentioned, handed the most attractive young lady who answered our ring a two dollar bill, pointed to the clippings, and told her to shoot her works.

Any information as to the identity of the A. P. reporter responsible for the notice will be greatly appreciated, and will be acted upon as soon as our present wounds heal up.

POLICE COURT

The continued case of John Salsia and Thomas McCann, charged with transporting liquor, was nolle in the Manchester police court this morning. Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway in recommending this disposition of the case said that after a thorough investigation he was unable to secure sufficient evidence to convict. Judge Raymond A. Johnson accepted the suggestion and ordered a nolle.

Paul Russell of Highland street pleaded guilty to keeping liquor with intent to sell. A fine of $125 and costs was imposed which was paid. Russell was arrested by Lieutenant William Barron Saturday.

Four boys, all under 21, were before the police court this morning charged with crap shooting. They were arrested by Patrolmen Roberts and McGinn at the Spruce street school playgrounds. The boys admitted they were playing the game but denied there was any money passed. The police had received complaints about boys congregating on the grounds and playing Sunday afternoon.

Three of the four boys brought in this morning had records of a similar kind, and the judge warned them that it would be advisable to cut it out or he would deal with them more severely. In this case the evidence was not sufficient to convict. The judge therefore suspended judgment.

A fine of $15 and costs was imposed on James Massey for intoxication. He was arrested by Captain Hinchel Saturday night and detained at the police station until last night until he could secure a bondsman.

Young Massey admitted his guilt and wanted an opportunity to try to make good. The judge in imposing a fine gave him a month in which to pay the fine and costs.

That trouble that has been experienced from cars straddling the lines will be done away with.

SHORT PARKING LINES TO AID IN ACCURACY

Police Figure Out Scheme to Prevent Slovenly Straddling of Stalls.

The white lines, marking the parking stalls have been repainted the full length of Main street on both sides but different and with a new idea in view. This time the lines are much shorter than heretofore. The reason is not to save paint but to insure more accurate parking.

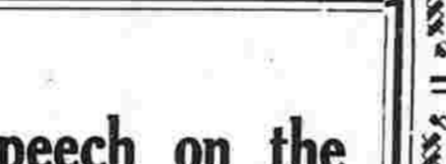

When the lines were drawn out into the street for a distance of about ten feet, drivers of automobiles seemed to think they could park any part of the car anywhere within the lines and still be observing the rules. By drawing the lines only about four feet from the curb, the police figure that the front wheels will have to be placed with much greater care and that this will bring the back part of the car to the proper angle. It is expected.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

NO BLUE MONDAYS Blue Monday—"Shoemaker's Monday" they used to call it—the Monday of half-awake lethargy which even yet is recognized by big industries as the slowest day of the week for "getting started"—is just Monday in Pinehurst. It's just like any other day so far as "ginger" and hustle are concerned. Pinehurst service is as snappy and alert one day as another. And as cheerful.

We folks in this store work when we work and play when we play and rest when we rest. We see no reason for using Sunday as a day in which to get ourselves all worn out in a straining effort to have a good time. We're so busy all the rest of the week, concentrating on the job of taking care of Pinehurst's patrons' slightest needs, that on Sunday we rest and take our recreation with good clean consciences and the satisfaction of having earned the day off. That means that we don't have to break our necks in order to enjoy ourselves in our leisure. And on Monday we're all set and ready for another week of the service game.

There's almost always a reason for everything. If customers find in this store a rather unusual atmosphere of good-feeling and snappy readiness, it's because we none of us are dragged at by a sense of being behind the task. We drive our work instead of letting it drive us. We finish up a week, bang full up to the brim, every Saturday night. Monday it's a good, clean happy fresh start. No grouchy hangovers.
