STATE LAYS 110 MILES OF ROAD IN SIX MONTHS

Semi-Annual Statement by Highway Commissioner Shows Exceptionally High Total.

More than 110 miles of highway construction and reconstruction was completed in Connecticut during the first six months of 1928, according to a semi-annual statement made today by Highway Commissioner John A. Macdonald. The mileage completed during the half year period is one of the largest totals on the records of the Connecticut Highway Department. In addition to the work of highway building, the department also completed seven bridges during the six month period.

The largest single piece of work finished between January and June was the laying of 7.3 miles of eight-inch reinforced concrete on the Trumbull - Monroe - Newtown road, one of the two main routes leading out of Bridgeport toward Danbury and Litchfield County. There were four jobs aggregating between 5.5 and 6 miles in length. These were on the New Haven-Middletown highway in Durham and North Branford, reinforced concrete; the Manchester-Somers highway in Ellington, bituminous macadam; the Hartford-Norwich road between Marlborough and Hebron, waterbound macadam; and on the Meriden - Middletown highway through Middlefield, reinforced concrete. Other large jobs, between three and five miles in length, were on the Middletown-Haddam road, reinforced concrete; the New Britain-Newington road, bituminous macadam; the Stratford-Shelton road, reinforced concrete; and the Williamantic-Plainfield road in Scotland and Canterbury, waterbound macadam.

In addition to the road building work done by the highway department, 53 Connecticut towns undertook the construction of new town roads, not part of the state trunk-line system. This work, being done by the towns themselves under the state aid appropriation act of 1927, totals 87 miles. State aid was accepted by 162 towns, but only 58 have yet begun the work of construction.

With the total mileage completed on trunkline highways during the first six months of the year added to the tremendous mileage under construction during the summer the total figure for the year of 1928 will undoubtedly exceed the 205 miles total of last year. There were 97 individual pieces of Connecticut highway under construction during July.

In all of the concrete paving work done during the first six months of the year, the new calcium chloride cement formula invented at the highway department's laboratory at Portland was used. By means of this formula, the concrete is hardened and made ready for travel nearly a week sooner than when other formulas are used. It has been a means of eliminating much of the one way traffic and the use of detours.

Beautification of Connecticut highways by the department's landscaping bureau reached its highest peak during the spring months this year and is now progressing rapidly. Roadside parking places and picnic spots have been constructed. Many new views have been opened up to motorists by cutting away brush and pruning trees which formerly blocked the views. Hundreds of trees have been set out along the highways and flowering shrubs and bushes have been planted.

OSAGE INDIANS NAME CHIEF IN QUIET ELECTION

Pawhuska, Okla.—With none of the strident ballyhoo which marks the presidential campaigns of their white brothers, the richest "nation" on earth, very quietly elected a new chief executive here recently. The election was by tribal vote.

The "nation" is that of the oil rich Osage Indians, where the income of "Lo, the poor Indian" resembles the salary of a Wall street financier. The new head is Chief Fred Lookout, who succeeds retiring Chief Bacon Rind, one of the most picturesque figures among America's colorful and fast vanishing aborigines.

In an interview granted immediately after his selection as Chief of the Osages, the blanketed executive made it evident that there were others besides the Republican campaign leaders, who were concerned about the farm problem.

Farm Issue Up

In agriculture, Chief Fred Lookout places the hope for the perpetuation of his tribe.

"Too many" of my people intermarry with other people," laments Chief Lookout. "I want Osages to marry one another and keep the tribe from dying out. I want my people to show white brothers that we can live on homesteads and run our farms well. I think my people will be happier if they get out and work on the land. I want them to raise chickens and grow fruit and corn and cows and hogs.

"Then I know Osages will be better off if there is no oil.

"Some day oil will go," said the serious voiced chief raising his arm in a sweeping gesture that took in the surrounding derrick studded fields. "Maybe not in my time—perhaps in my son's. Then what of his children. There will be no fat checks every few months from the Great White Father, no fine motor cars and new clothes."

Practical Farmer

The serious faced Chief is in a position to advise on agricultural problems as he is a practical farmer himself. He lives on a farm four miles out of Pawhuska, owns a home that few farmers could afford and goes in for blooded stock. Too modest to call himself the "model" farmer he has lately turned the running of his farm over to his sons and now will be free to give all his time to business of state.

That the title richest "nation" in the world, so often applied to the Osages, is not a misnomer is apparent from the purusal of a few Oklahoma records. There are 2,287 Osage headrights, each paying from $10,000 a year up. In addition to the headrights the great majority of the Osages have three or four times that much for oil royalties. Headrights are transferable only by inheritance, and some Indians own as many as twelve or fourteen headrights.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Aug. 22—Inasmuch as the Constitution gives Congress alone the power to declare war, does the president have the right to send marines to Nicaragua, China and Haiti?

Where is the line to be drawn between the kind of war a president can legally wage and the kind which can only be declared by Congress?

These questions were raised in Congress this year and are sure to be brought up again. The matter of fact, it is an ancient question, and our presidents have generally solved it for the time being by doing as they saw fit. Congress has even held that though the executive might have been wrong, he ought to be upheld.

A study of the powers of the president in this connection has been made by the Foreign Policy Association, which finds that the power of the president to use our armed forces abroad without a declaration of war is limited—but that it is difficult to decide just what the limits are.

Congress can exert an ultimate limit of control, though it never has. If the executive wants a declaration of war he can have it, by acting so as to make war inevitable or by ordering the armed forces to acts of war which are bound to bring to a state of war. Impeachment would be about the only sure means of control left to Congress, and no president is likely to be so unheeding of public sentiment as to risk that.

Our history shows that presidents have led the country to war, with Congress ratifying their decisions.

But how about our little undeclared war in small countries? Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton once fought out this controversy as concerned the use of force against the Barbary States; revivals of the question have been numerous, until the method has been bulkwarked by precedent and practice.

The presidential power of intervention is seated in the constitutional provision making him commander-in-chief of the army and navy. The supreme court has held that the Constitution guarantees American citizens the right of protection abroad. (The reader will have a hard time finding any such guarantee, but the court's decision has seldom been questioned.)

The president is charged with seeing that all laws are faithfully executed and the customary duty is that he is constitutionally obligated to protect citizens abroad, using his powers as commander-in-chief if necessary. President James Buchanan contended that the president could not lawfully use armed forces abroad even to protect American lives and property, but no other executive has been so modest. A lower federal court has held that it is his duty.

The judicial branch of government has always refused to pass on the legality of decisions of the president taken in his political capacity, the Foreign Policy Association points out, holding that the executive branch's decisions as to sovereignty are conclusive. It is not concerned whether the executive is right or wrong; otherwise, the supreme court has pointed out, one part of the government might insist we were at peace while another held we were at war.

Edward S. Corwin, professor of jurisprudence at Princeton, has pointed out that the supreme court's refusal to touch diplomatic decisions explains the lack of definite legal criteria for determining the scope of the president's powers in the field of international relations.

Congress has the right to direct the president to do or not to do certain things—the senate last year voted for arbitration of our Mexican dispute. But the president may ignore such directions, and sometimes does.

Again, Congress may use its power of appropriation to control the use of armed forces abroad. Attempts have been made to do so thus far vainly. The Blaine amendment to the naval appropriation bill, designed to remove the marines from Nicaragua, but refusing appropriations for them, was the last instance of such an attempt. It was defeated, 52 to 22.

Chairman Borah of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and Senator Swanson, ranking minority member, were among the amendment's strongest opponents. But both admitted the belief that the policy that sent the marines to Nicaragua was a mistaken one. The question simmered down to one of whether, right or wrong, the president's foreign policy should be upheld.

The senate did not vote on the question whether the president had violated the Constitution in landing troops in Nicaragua, in making the election agreement or in undertaking a de facto war against Sandino.

The conclusion to be drawn from the Foreign Policy Association is that the president, in handling foreign relations, can do as he likes—and does!

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot pat away. And you always ready for the dreaded "range of colic, or constipation, or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

week-end near accident. He was driving from Hebron Center to Amston in the evening when a pedestrian walking towards the car threw the rays of a strong flash light directly into the driver's eyes. Partially blinded by the light and unable to see how to avoid running into those in the road the driver turned sharply to one side, splintering the guard railing and receiving some cuts and bruises himself. Other occupants of the car were also slightly injured.

METER GOLF

A SPORTY GOLF COURSE In almost every SPORT there are a good many PLAYS, in letter golf there are just seven. At least, that's par on today's hole. You may be able to beat the solution on another page.

Letter golf grid with letters S, P, O, R, T and P, L, A, Y, S.

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word in another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You can change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed. Off on the Wrong Foot "I'm not the CAKE EATER I used to be," said grandpa as he refused the fifth slice.

THE TINYMITES

The Tinymites all laughed, "Ho, ho!" and Clowdy loudly shouted, "Oh, please pull this duck away from me. I fear that he will bite." Then Clowdy tried to shake it loose, but shortly found it was no use. The trained duck of the circus flapped its wings and held on tight. It was a very funny sight to see poor Clowdy Tinymite run wildly over the circus grounds with Mister Duck in tow. The trainer of the duck then came and said "Oh, my, this is a shame." He spanked the little duck and promptly made the bird let go. Of course Clowdy thanked him for his act. The duck stood near and quacked and quacked. "Why did he bite me?" Clowdy asked. "That's what I wish I knew." The man replied, "That's plain to see. My trained duck thought that you were me. When we put on our act I wear a clown suit just like you."

SENSE and NONSENSE

A tourist saw a colored lady sitting on her doorstep, wringing her hands and sobbing in a heart-breaking manner. Thinking that disaster had befallen her, he went to inquire the cause of her distress. "My good woman, is some one dead?" "Oh, no sah, it's wus'n that. That no count man o' mine done went an' left de henhouse doah open. Booh-booh-oo!" "Pshaw! Don't cry. They'll all come home to roost tonight."

The Negro was old, a relic of the past, but he was very fond of horses and, although the few hours' work that he was able to get at rough labor was hardly sufficient to keep him alive, he, nevertheless, kept a trotter. "That horse," he said, "is the best 2-year-old in the district. That horse can do."

The commuter interrupted him. "That horse," he said, "looks to me to be nearer 10 years old." "Well, why not," retorted the Negro, "I've had him eight years and he was 2 years old when I got him. But he's as good a 2-year-old as he was the day I bought him."

"How's collections at your church, Brudder Jackson?" "We ain't nebbber had to stop in the middle of a collection to go and empty the box."

Sambo: "Say, Snowball, why do they call dat town in Michigan, Battle Creek?" "Snowball: "Dunno, 'less it's 'cause dey start so many breakfast feuds up dar."

Rastus-Ah done lost mah, biggest creditor today. Rufus-Did he die? Rastus-No, I was forced to pay him.

"Some one sick at yo' house, Mis' Carter?" inquired Lila. "Ah seed de doctah's kyah dar yestidy." "It was my brother, Lila." "Sho! Whut's he got de matter of him?" "Nobody seems to know what the disease is. He can eat and sleep as well as ever. He stays out all day on the porch in the sun and seems as well as anyone. But he can't do any work at all."

"He can't- 'yo' say he can't work? Law, Mis' Carter, dat ain't no disease. Dat's a git!" Rastus-We cotched one of de boys with loaded dice. Boss-You should ostracize him. Rastus-Dat's wot I wanted to do, but I didn't hab my razor wif me.

"Rastus, I understand that you have become the father of twins. Have you named them yet?" "Yessuh, Ah done call the fust one Adagio Allegro, and Ah's go'n t' call the second one Encore." "Musical names, all right. But why do you call the second one Encore?" "Well, suh, you see, he wasn't on the program at all."

PERSSON-LARSON

Miss Margaret Louise Larson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Larson of 102 Starkweather street and Ralph O. Persson, son of Mr. and Mrs. John P. Persson of Brockton, Mass., were married this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Marvin S. Stocking, pastor of the North Methodist church, the double ring service being used.

The maid of honor was Miss Marion A. Tyler and the best man Helge Persson of Brockton, Mass., a close friend of the bridegroom. Ellen, small daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Starkweather, and a niece of the bride was flower girl. She wore a frock of shell pink voile trimmed with lace and carried a basket of white rose petals, which she scattered in the path of the bridal party as they took their places beneath an arch of pink and white gladioli, cut roses and greenery.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white tulle with tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor was attired in pink georgette with silver trimmings and carried an arm bouquet of Briarcliff roses. The reception following the ceremony was attended only by the members of the immediate families and close friends. The wedding gifts were numerous and beautiful, the bride having been honor guest at a number of showers. The bride's gift to her maid of honor was a white gold wrist watch and the bridegroom's gift to his best man was a five dollar gold piece.

Mr. and Mrs. Persson left later in the afternoon for a wedding trip to Maine the bride wearing a green ensemble costume. On their return they will make their home in Meriden. The bride was graduated from the Manchester High school, is a member of the North Methodist church and has been active in dramatic and social activities of the church. She is also a member of the M. X. club and a former employee of the Travelers Insurance Company.

Mr. Persson is a member of the Order of Vasa of Brockton, Mass., and a member of the North Methodist church here and has frequently assisted in its musical programs. He is employed by the Loose-Wiles Biscuit Company of Boston.

HOT WEATHER ONLY COMPLAINT OF TOURISTS

Lydall Family Returns From Europe; Thermometer Registers 98 Most of Time.

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin A. Lydall, who have just returned to their home on Main street after a European trip, tell the same story as other visitors to the continent this summer, that the extreme heat detracted somewhat from the enjoyment of their tour. In the earlier part of the summer they visited Scotland and England where Mr. Lydall's ancestors lived. They crossed the channel to France and traveled through that country, Switzerland and Italy. Day after day the thermometer hovered around 98 in the southern European countries. It has been unusually dry, while here we have had an abundance of rain along with the heat. Their tour of the British Isles and Switzerland impressed the local party more favorably than the other countries they visited.

Miss Eleanor Lydall who planned to remain after her parents had sailed for a tour of northern Europe with a school friend, changed her mind and returned with them.

PHONES Pinehurst 'GOOD THINGS TO EAT' NOVELTY A reader of Pinehurst ads sent us a letter the other day inquiring why we devoted so much space and time to accentuating the factor of service. 'Why don't you give us something more novel?' the correspondent inquired. Ever since then we've been wondering if there is anything more novel, in the food business, than cheerful, interested, diligent personal service. Up to yet we haven't been able to think of anything to fill that order. If ever there was a time when the factor of personal interest—of bona fide friendly concern that the individual desires and needs of each particular customer be completely filled—was a rarity in this line it is right now. Syndicated food selling has become about as human as a stone crusher. The customer is an element, not a personality. The service is rendered by the purchaser, who by every right is entitled to receive it instead. Pinehurst long ago established its reputation for quality foods. All Manchester knows that nothing but the best comes out of this store. So if we talk a lot about service it's because we believe it's a factor especially deserving, under the circumstances, of discussion. We could do business much more cheaply and make more profit, no doubt, if we threw the stuff at our customers, hit-or-miss, good, bad or indifferent as happened—for a while. But we're building Pinehurst into an institution with a view to permanence. And we have a suspicion that the best of good will is the keystone of any such edifice. That's why we talk so much about service—and why we go to every length to give it.
