

MUSCLE SHOALS PLAN RECEIVES O. K. OF HOOVER

Favors Governmental Ownership of Big Project; Surplus of Power Should Be Sold to the Public.

Washington, Oct. 9.—Herbert Hoover stood committed today to governmental operation of the $100,000,000 Muscle Shoals project for agricultural research purposes and the manufacture of fertilizer.

Hoover specifically declared he approved the Coolidge administration's recommendation that the project be dedicated to agriculture. He declared the power developed at the project, over and above that necessary for manufacturing fertilizer, should be "disposed of on such terms and conditions as will safeguard and protect all public interest."

The Republican nominee made his position on Muscle Shoals clear after an hour's conference with members of his "board of strategy." He declared he stood for governmental ownership and operation of Muscle Shoals. In effect, Hoover approved the so-called Jardine plan, which dedicated the project to agriculture, but which was rejected by Congress last spring.

The Norris Bill
By stating he favored use of the project "for research purposes and development of fertilizers," Hoover left much doubt as to whether he approved the Norris bill, which Congress enacted at the last session but which was killed by President Coolidge's pocket veto.

One member of his board of advisers indicated Hoover did not approve the Norris plan, which would have given the government authority to operate the project as a "power plant" but turning over all proceeds from the same of power to be used in fertilizer experiments there and elsewhere throughout the country.

Senator George W. Norris, of Nebraska, lead of the Senate's insurgent bloc, sponsored this plan, which was adopted by both House and Senate, when experts testified that the nitrate necessary for manufactured fertilizers, could be produced cheaper through a coal process than by use of water power. The Norris bill would have provided for experiments both at Muscle Shoals, with the use of water power, and in the coal fields of West Virginia, with the use of coal.

Norris wrote this feature into the bill after inspecting a huge nitrate plant, operated by the Dupont de Nemours Powder Co., in West Virginia.

Repeats Declaration
In his statement, Hoover first repeated the declaration he made at Elizabethton last Saturday, when he said: "I do not favor any general extension of the federal government into the operation of business in competition with its citizens."

REPORTER IS HELD BY PARIS POLICE

American Told to Leave France for Making Known Diplomatic Secrets.

Paris, Oct. 9.—The story of the seven-hour incommunicado detention of Harold J. T. Horan, Universal Service Paris Correspondent, by the Police was given much attention by the morning papers here today.

Horan was arrested in a spectacular fashion in the Rue de la Paix by agents of the Secret Service investigating the diplomatic "leak" leading to the publication by Universal Service under Horan's name of the text of secret memorandum of instructions sent to the French embassy at Washington in connection with the Anglo-French naval accord.

Must Leave France
Horan stated today that after his arrest he was not allowed to communicate with any one, not even his lawyer and was not released until he had signed a paper in which he agreed to leave France on Thursday. Horan also asserted that he was told he faced a possible five years sentence in prison unless he signed the paper.

SMITH STARTS ON HIS TRIP TO THE SOUTH

But Only One Speech Scheduled and That at Louisville, Ky., on Saturday Night.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 9.—Four weeks from today the greatest electoral army the country ever saw will march to the polls to make the big decision.

With these four active weeks ahead of him and much travelling and speaking still to do, Gov. Alfred E. Smith sets out from Albany today on the second of his major campaign tours.

He has made his bid for the west. This time he faces south—into Virginia, North Carolina, Tennessee, territory that Democratic presidential candidates of other years have not considered it necessary to both about. In so doing he has yielded somewhat to the importunities of Democratic sectional leaders who have been pouring their fears and their doubts into the ears of the party strategists in national headquarters in New York.

Demand Speeches
They have been clamoring for speeches from the Democratic standard bearer in the border states and even in the South. He this, however, the governor has been adamant. He will make a personal appearance in Dixie to fulfill the demands of the local leaders, but his only speech of the week has been reserved for Louisville, Ky., next Saturday night.

There, on the border line between north and south, and in state that is known for the closeness and turbulence of its political battles, Gov. Smith will speak his tariff views on Saturday night, the whole south-land, the border country and, in fact, the entire nation will be in his audience, via the radio.

The Louisville speech is to be preceded by a two-day tour of the country in back—Virginia, North Carolina and Tennessee. All are normally Democratic states.

Always Democratic
Virginia and North Carolina have never given their electoral votes to a Republican presidential candidate since 1820, when Harri-son carried it by a narrow margin. Because of conditions peculiar to this year, the Democratic strategists want the governor to exhibit them with the voters of these states and the governor has somewhat reluctantly consented.

Gov. Smith will leave New York tomorrow night in the same eleven-car special train that hauled him 6,000 miles through the middle and north west.

His first bow in Dixie will be at Louisville, Ky., on Saturday night.

ROOSEVELT STARTS HIS CAMPAIGNING

New York Candidate Says His Health Will Not Interfere With Duties.

New York, Oct. 9.—Declaring that he stood unequivocally with Gov. Smith on prohibition, Franklin D. Roosevelt, opening his headquarters here today for the gubernatorial campaign, declared bluntly that he would not countenance an attempt to re-enact a state prohibition enforcement law under his administration.

Following a conference with other members of the state ticket, and Chairman John J. Raskob of the national committee, at his home here last night, Roosevelt awaited the arrival of Gov. Smith late this afternoon from Albany. The tentative program for the state campaign as outlined last night and today, will be presented to the governor for his approval.

Looks Healthy
Looking hale and in the best of spirits, Roosevelt declared he faced his campaign with enthusiasm. He "nailed" vigorously an underground rumor which had it that his health was such as to preclude his serving as governor in the event of his election and that he planned consequently to resign in favor of Herbert H. Lehman, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-governor.

THE SOUTH LESS "SOLID"? HERE'S REASON WHY

When Herbert Hoover invaded the south to deliver a speech at Elizabethton, Tenn., this was the reception that awaited him. The photo, looking down from a crowded hillside, shows how 50,000 persons surrounded the nominee's platform.

DEMPSEY PICKS THE BEST HEAVYWEIGHTS OF TODAY

Sharkey, Hansen, Uzcudum and Stribling Are His Choice—Tells Why He Names Them.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second of three stories based on an exclusive interview with Jack Dempsey, one of the most glamorous personalities the ring has known.

By JAMES L. KILGALLEY

New York, Oct. 9.—"Who are the best heavyweights in the ring today?"

Jack Dempsey paused for a moment. "I don't believe any of them have real championship class," he replied, "but I would name them, in the order named, as follows:

1. Jack Sharkey.
2. Knute Hansen.
3. Paulino Uzcudum.
4. Young Stribling.

Dempsey said he was not listing George Godfrey, the giant negro, because he does not believe that a white man and negro should fight for the heavyweight title because of the race animosity such an encounter would engender.

"I'm not figuring my own status because I will never fight again," said Dempsey. "I am through. I'm not counting on Gene Tunney, either, for he has retired.

"Sharkey is the best of the lot right now. He can hit and he can box and his only weakness is that he is an 'in and out.' He is big enough and fast enough to whip any man. I think he's got the heart, too. He's not been handled just right, in my opinion. He's been hooked up in the wrong match more than once. He may right himself yet.

"I pick Hansen as second best because he is the hardest puncher of the lot. He has a real kick in either glove.

"Paulino is tougher than any of them. That's why I pick him next. He has a world of endurance and can 'take it' better than any heavyweight in the rig today. He's got a heart of steel."

BROCKTON WOMAN DIES AFTER BEING BEATEN

New York Police Probe Story of Assault in Noted Night Club.

New York, Oct. 9.—An autopsy was ordered today on the body of Bessie Poole, 33, of Brockton, Mass., whose death, according to police, followed a beating she received in a night club last Saturday night.

WATKINS ON TRIAL TODAY IN HARTFORD

Famous Case Opens in Superior Court With Judge Brown Presiding; Wife and Brothers Tried Also.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 9.—The case of Roger W. Watkins in the eastern part of the United States in 1926 and 1927 was charted by witnesses called today in the trial of Watkins, his wife, and her brothers, Guy and Maynard Tressler, on charges of embezzlement and conspiracy to defraud. Judge Allyn L. Brown presided over the Superior Court session for the trial, with Hugh M. Alcorn, state's attorney, presenting the case against the four while William E. Egan and Frank E. Healy, former attorney-general, handled the defense alone. The quartet had elected a trial without jury.

Watkins was recorded as renting a furnished house in West Hartford in the summer of 1927; as seeking a job as stock salesman with Callahan & Co., brokers, here about the time he rented the house; as selling stock in Pittsburgh in 1925 under the name of "E. H. Tressler," as selling securities in Schenectady, N. Y., in 1923 under the name of "Jay E. Watkins," and as working for a candy company in Memphis, Tenn., in 1926 as "Roger Williams Watkins."

Five witnesses traced the man from Hartford back through a few years and around again to the time he came to Hartford.

The four defendants entered pleas of not guilty when Judge Brown opened court this morning. The pleas were filed through counsel. The four had, previously, pleaded Not Guilty.

While the case was proceeding Lt. Gov. J. Edward Brainard, of Branford, entered the court room and took his place among the witnesses. There were more than thirty to be called by the state in addition to a long table was occupied by numerous expert accountants who are to produce books and figures for the state.

Mrs. Helen Merrill, of West Hartford, opened as the state's first witness. She testified that she and Watkins were married in 1912. She said she had no experience in such work. At this time, the witness testified, Guy Tressler was an assistant in the firm's mailing room where a dozen girls were working sending out circulars. Maynard Tressler came along later and found a job as salesman in the same concern. Gradually, Mrs. Welch chided, Maynard assumed the entire control of the firm that he had started with as a salesman.

Charles Trask, a Pittsfield automobile dealer and automobile racing promoter, followed. Mr. Trask to show that Watkins really had experience as a salesman of securities before he sought the job with Callahan & Co. Mr. Trask said he had no experience in such work. At this time, the witness testified, Guy Tressler was an assistant in the firm's mailing room where a dozen girls were working sending out circulars. Maynard Tressler came along later and found a job as salesman in the same concern. Gradually, Mrs. Welch chided, Maynard assumed the entire control of the firm that he had started with as a salesman.

William E. Abbott of Newport, N. C., followed. He told of once living in Schenectady, N. Y., where Watkins was.

POISON BOOZE TOLL NOW STANDS AT 32

City Officials Ask Government Aid to Stop Flow of Liquor At Its Source.

New York, Oct. 9.—Death toll from alleged poison liquor today stood at 32 lives claimed since Saturday while police and city officials enlisted government aid to stop the flow of deadly stuff at its source. Autopsies revealed wood alcohol as the cause of death.

Dr. Charles G. Norris, medical examiner, called the deaths suicides. "Accidental, of course, but the government could do a lot to prevent them by eliminating these poisons from industrial alcohol," said Dr. Norris.

"This is technical homicide," said Dr. Alexander O. Goettler, toxicologist at Bellevue hospital, "and there is a criminal responsibility for these deaths."

Six persons have been arrested in the police drive to close the places along the lower east side waterfront of selling the bad liquor, while undercover agents are understood to have been rushed here from Washington to find the source of the stuff.

BOTH TEAMS TIED BY SCORE OF 0-0 IN SECOND INNING

Cardinals Lead in Batting in Early Stanzas; Hoyt and Sherdel Opposing Pitchers as Fourth Game of Series Begins.

St. Louis, Oct. 9.—"It's worth thirty dollars, but you can have it for three."

Thus spoke a ticket scalper in a St. Louis hotel lobby this morning as he strove desperately to unload a cargo of 15 tickets for the fourth game of the World's Series here this afternoon. Here and there a faint-hearted scalper offered a ducat for $2.50, and even $2.00 tickets for the third game here netted the scalpers as much as thirty dollars a throw.

The bottom has fallen out of the ticket market due to the general apathy of the fans following the Cardinals' three defeats and because of the departure of many fans from home as a result of yesterday's rain.

AGED PAIR AIR 16 YEAR FEUD IN COURT HERE

Dauplaise, 75, Arrested on Complaint of Wife, 74, for Non-Support After His Divorce Is Denied.

Being unable to get a divorce, a hearing on which was held last week in Hartford, Dauplaise being charged, George Dauplaise, aged 75, of 635 Center street, was this morning brought before the town court here on complaint of his wife, age 74, to whom he was married in 1888 and from whom he has been separated for sixteen years.

The separation and Dauplaise's failure to pay toward the support of his wife, date from May 6, 1912, according to the complaint. As the aged couple told their stories each had the backing of his or her own children.

Each had been married before and each had five children by the previous marriage. The eldest was twelve years old in each case while the youngest on the mother's side was three and a half years and Dauplaise's youngest child was five.

Three-Way Family
Of their marriage were born two more children, a boy and girl. All are now married, and Mrs. Dauplaise has been making her home for sixteen years with a daughter by her first marriage, while Mr. Dauplaise for many years boarded in Hilliardville, but of late has been living with his son, Edmund, on Center street.

Attorney John Foley represented the accused and Mrs. Dauplaise was the first called to the stand. She told the story of her former marriage and of her marriage, 40 years ago, to Dauplaise, which took place in Meriden, where they were living. They later moved to Wallingford, back to Meriden and then to Somerville, Mass.

From the latter place they moved to Manchester and were living on Hilliard street when one night when her husband came home, she told him that a peddler, to whom they owed a bill of $10, had been at the house that day, that he had called on several different occasions and that she had paid the bill.

AGED PAIR'S FEUD IS AIRED IN COURT

This made Dauplaise so angry, she told the court, that she packed his grip, shook hands and said she was going away. That was sixteen years ago last May. Later Mrs. Dauplaise went to Thompsonville to live with her daughter and with the daughter moved back to Manchester where they have lived in Manchester Green for fourteen years.

Family on Her Hands In reply to a question by Attorney Foley she said that four of her children by her first marriage and two of the children of the marriage with Dauplaise were with her when her husband left home. Not once, she said, had he contributed to her support. He did not come back the next day, she said in reply to a question by Attorney Foley, nor did she know anything about an attempt to "make up" that was planned by the children in a meeting that took place in Somersville.

When asked if she had tried to return to him she answered: "She deserted me and I was not going to run after him after he had been gone ten years."

She did not recall a meeting on Eldridge street five years ago or any attempt to bring her and Dauplaise together at some of a relative on Spruce street, she said.

When asked by Attorney Foley if she was willing to return to him now if he made a good home for her she replied: "I don't say yes and I don't say no. I'll have to think it over. You see he ran away from me three different times before that. It would take a long time, yes six months, to tell all the things he did to me while we were living together."

Her daughter, Mrs. Alfred Goring, told about her mother living with her and that nothing in the way of support had been provided for her mother by her stepfather. The daughter's husband gave like testimony.

Tells His Story Dauplaise, taking the stand, assured the court that he was a "good home man," that he never cursed in his life, never took a drink of liquor nor did he ever smoke. The reason he left, he said, was because he was turning over all of his money and did not know what his wife was doing with it. He said he had kept his pay envelope in his pocket one day and she had asked him for it. He had an opportunity to return to Somersville, where he could get a job for $2.50 a day, whereas he was only getting $1.75 where he was working. He said that he had refused to go with him and he was willing to support her, but not her children. He had tried to "make up" and one time in Somersville when he learned she was there, had gone to that place and kissed her. She ran away, he said, and went up stairs. The next morning she got him his breakfast and he gave her $5, but she would not talk to him.

His son, Edmund, by his first marriage, told of trying to bring the couple together when he learned that Mrs. Dauplaise was living in Thompsonville, but knew nothing about their going to Somersville. He said that he was living home, all the children by his father's first marriage having left home when they were very young. Judge Johnson, after listening to arguments by the attorney for the defense and the state said that he had certain fixed ideas about the case but there were complications and he wished to continue the case for further thought. He set the date for the continuation as October 18.

There was one other case in court this morning. Martin Koshen, picked off a trolley car at 8:55 last night by Officer Arthur Seymour, was charged with intoxication. He pleaded guilty and was fined $10 and costs. He paid.

Louis XIII often prepared his own food in order to thwart the attempts of enemies to poison him. Less homework and more physical exercise is to be the keynote of a new educational system in the State Schools of France.

He knew Watkins in Memphis as "Roger William Watkins" an officer of the Colonial Maid Candy Corporation. Guy Tresslar was there also, he said, and he was known as "Clarence Miermont." He knew the two in Memphis until April, 1927. Sometime before Watkins left he offered to make Miermont an officer in the candy company but nothing ever came of the offer.

GUILD OF SURGEONS HONORS CALDWELL

ary, membership in which does not in any way constitute membership in the College itself, but even the candidates for this group are scrutinized with much particularity.

Practically all the most noted surgeons in the United States and Canada, besides many in Latin America, are fellows of the College. One of its earliest presidents was the famous Dr. William J. Mayo of Rochester, Minn., and his equally famous brother, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, president of the present Board of Regents.

The American College of Surgeons, to quote the statement of its year book, "is a society of surgeons of North and South America which aims to include within its membership all who are of worthy character and who possess a practical knowledge of the science and art of surgery. It is concerned fundamentally with matters of character and training, with the betterment of hospitals and of teaching facilities in medical schools and hospitals, with laws which relate to medical practice and privileges and with an unselfish protection of the public from incompetent medical service."

The College was organized in 1913 at Washington, by 450 of the leading surgical operators of the western hemisphere.

Fellowship Pledge Under the fellowship pledge of the American College of Surgeons each fellow obligates himself "to place the welfare of his patients above all else, to advance constantly in knowledge by the study of surgical literature * * * to render willing help to my colleagues and to give freely my services (if selfless); to shun unwarranted publicity, dishonest money-making and commercialism as disgraceful to our profession; to refuse utterly all money trades with consultants, practitioners or others; * * * to avoid discrediting my associates by taking unwarranted compensation."

The authorities of Manchester Memorial Hospital and Dr. Caldwell's friends feel that his attainment to fellowship in the American College of Surgeons at such a relatively early age is a matter for congratulation not only to the surgeon but to the hospital which has command of his services.

WOMEN OF COLORADO UNVEIL MONUMENT TO VICTIMS OF CANNIBALS Lake City, Colo.—Five men, victims of hideous cannibalism during the winter of 1873-74, were honored here recently when the Ladies' Union Aid Society of this city sponsored the unveiling of a monument at the head of their graves. A party of 21 men was organized in Salt Lake City to start on a prospecting tour into the mountains of Colorado. When they reached a point where Montrose now stands, they met Chief Ouray, who warned them that snow had been heavy in the mountains and that all game had made its way to the lowlands. Six men refused to heed this warning and headed for Dead Man's Gulch, near here. The next spring, Alfred Packard, one of the six, appeared in civilization, but nothing was seen of the other five. Officers, acting on the theory that Packard might have murdered and eaten the other men, arrested him and after much grilling obtained a confession. Packard was convicted and sentenced to hang for the crime, but obtained a new trial, during which he was sentenced to 50 years in the penitentiary. The prison population of England and Wales has decreased from 20,000 to 10,000 since 1878.

MANY FOREIGNERS NOW TILLING SOIL ON FRENCH FARMS Paris.—Measures must be taken to keep Frenchmen down on the farm or most of the soil of France will be tilled by foreigners. This warning was sounded by M. Marcel Paon, chief of the labor service in the immigration department, in a paper with detailed statistics on the farm labor question, submitted to the Academy of Agriculture. During the years 1918-26 1,453,000 aliens entered France to take the places in factory and field left by men killed during the war, 600,000 being employed on the farm. Thrifty immigrants, according to M. Paon, have acquired 218,000 acres of productive ground, while a total of 1,017,395 acres yield crops through the work of non-French labor.

PROHIBITION IS MAKING STRIDES WITH EUROPEANS

Washington.—Europe is fast going dry, in the opinion of Dees Pickett, prohibition chief of the Methodist Church in the United States.

Pickett, just returned from the anti-alcoholism congress at Antwerp, Belgium, declared temperance sentiment is growing rapidly abroad, and that developments may be expected, particularly in Germany and England, in the very near future.

He is research secretary for the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and regarded as leader of the excessively dry element of that group.

Startling Changes "There has been a startling change in the attitude of both officials and people toward the prohibition issue in Europe," he said. "Germany is almost certainly on the verge of local option, with eventual prohibition in sight, and in Great Britain restrictions upon liquor are almost strangleholds."

Travelers to the capital are so anxious that people should not consider it with favor are now beginning to prepare people for consideration of more drastic repressive measures.

The dry churchman commented on the sentiment abroad now as compared with five years ago. "When I was in Europe then," he said, "the papers were full of sneers at American prohibition. Political leaders, both in Great Britain and on the continent seemed anxious to create an unfavorable sentiment towards the policy. But economists and statesmen of every European country have been profoundly impressed by the onrush of prosperity of the United States, of which they believe prohibition to be a causative factor."

Pickett predicted the League of Nations would appoint a commission to study international aspects of the liquor problem, and urged the United States to lend aid in this "humanitarian and social investigation."

U. S. Aid Helps Pickett declared the action of this government in sending Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran to the conference at Antwerp would have far reaching results, not only in promoting the suppression of smuggling, but in pointing the way to cooperative effort on the part of the United States with European governments in handling other phases of the international problem.

"We must face the fact that European nations of whom, at frequent intervals we must ask cooperation, are increasingly insistent that the United States lend its cooperation to investigations and discussions of the various commitments established by the League of Nations' assembly," he said.

"We cannot with grace ask help in handling our smuggling problem of governments which are at present engaged in discussing these very problems and in which discussions we refuse to have a part."

LETTERS CARRY REMINDER OF MASSACHUSETTS BAY'S 300TH ANNIVERSARY. Boston, Mass.—To call attention to the preparations now going forward for the celebration of the 300th anniversary of the founding of Massachusetts Bay Colony, half million slips, usable as "envelope stuffers" in the mail, are being circulated by the Massachusetts Bay Tercentenary Council. The slips are being circulated both within and without New England by 70 cooperating organizations as well as by members of the General Committee in personal and business correspondence.

DEATH IN KNIFE SLIP London.—A knife, which slipped while he was carving a piece of meat, caused the death of a butcher's assistant at Southend. The point of the blade pierced an artery in his thigh and he bled to death before medical aid could be summoned.

OVER 25,000 MARCH IN LEGION PARADE

Sixty Bands and Many Distinguished Visitors at Big Convention. San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 9.—Today the citizens of the Alamo City were primed to see one of the most colorful military spectacles it has ever been privileged to see as some 25,000 members of the American Legion, mustering early this morning for its annual parade.

Every state in the union and the District of Columbia had its quota of war veterans in line. So, too, did the territories, and several foreign countries even were represented.

Approximately sixty legion bands, five and drum and bugle corps will enliven the line of march with martial airs. Almost every state has its quota of music making organizations, many of whom are strong supporters of the national championship offered by the legion every year.

In the main reviewing stand on Alamo plaza were Secretary of War Dwight Davis and other distinguished guests.

Advertising billboards have spread along the highways as weevil infests cotton crops. They are prevalent throughout the country except in sections where state or community restrictions prevent their erection.

The Washington Boulevard from Baltimore, a section of the popular Lincoln Highway, winds through picturesque countryside and townships. Laurel, located halfway between Baltimore and the capital, is noted for its cleanliness and beauty. The well-kept lawns and terraces, the costly cottages and bungalows of various architecture, are pleasing to the eye. Such sights have travelled from distant points and excited upon knowing their proximity, to "the place where the president lives."

Atlantic City is advertised as the "nation's playground." Washington is surely the country's sight-seeing center. Many are the places to be seen here but little is seen upon the highways leading here.

The New Defense Highway, running from Baltimore to Washington, has much to offer the tourist in scenic beauty. Few townships dot this highway and the majority of its mileage was cut through woodlands.

Northmers probably get their first glimpse of tobacco green in the field. Just when the tourist starts to survey a tobacco field and search for the usual drying-barn, a lengthy sign, informing all the location of Washington's "best hotel," obliterates the view.

On turns in the road, usually upon plateaus where motorists could get a glimpse of miles of countryside, huge signs give locations of cafes, Cafes in Washington are restaurants, not dispensaries if illegal beverages.

The Montgomery county officials are the first in this section to denounce road signs and refreshment shacks. They plan to rid their section of the nuisances by imposing legal restrictions and taxes. One official said: "The restrictions will keep all beauty spots free of signs and the owners of the remaining pests will have to pay dearly for their presence along our roads."

ZEP'S START DELAYED Friedrichshafen, Oct. 9.—Because of bad weather over the Atlantic the departure of the super dirigible Graf Zeppelin was postponed today. It may take off on Thursday, Dr. Hugo Eckener, director of the flight had hoped to get away tomorrow morning. The flight will end at Lakehurst, N. J., but it has not yet been determined whether to follow the north or southern Atlantic course.

GARLICKS DIVORCED Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 9.—Mrs. Eloise Tait Stringer Garlick was today granted a divorce and alimony of $3,000 by Judge E. C. They were married in Southport in 1919 and the desertion dated from March, 1925.

REGISTRARS RECEIVE 2,800 APPLICATIONS

Huge Batch of Prospective Voters-to-Be-Made Turned In Last Day.

Registrars of Voters Robert N. Veitch and Louis T. Broen, in session today to receive applications of voters-to-be-made this fall had received 2,801 applications at two o'clock this afternoon. The registrars will be in session until five o'clock this afternoon and no applications will be received after that time. Today is positively the last time a voter can apply to be made so that he can vote in the November Presidential election.

A veritable flood of applications reached the registrars from different sources. Some party leaders had been at work rounding up new voters and both the Republican and Democratic town committees had systematically sought applications. The League of Women Voters conducted a very thorough canvass among women and turned in a large number of applications.

Those voters-to-be who become of age between now and November 6 must have filed their applications before 5 p. m. today. There will be some duplications in the applications filed today, but the number far exceeded the highest estimates.

BATTLE OPENED ON BILLBOARDS AROUND CAPITAL

Washington.—Motor tourists to the nation's capital will get a "eyeful" of Southern landscape during at least a part of their journey.

Nearby Montgomery County in Maryland has started a war against highway billboards, obnoxious hot-dog stands and ugly gasoline filling stations. This Maryland action is destined to become a part of Greater Washington in days to come. The county commissioners realize this and they are attempting to enact laws to rid their jurisdiction of all such eyesores.

Travelers to the capital are on a pleasure jaunt and they want to see and enjoy the landscape as they want to be carried to the top of Washington's Monument, see the great Lincoln Memorial and the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier in Arlington National Cemetery across the river in Virginia.

NEW ENGLAND AIDED IN MANUFACTURE OF BYRD'S EQUIPMENT

Boston.—Virtually all of New England aided in the manufacture of equipment for the Antarctic Expedition of Commander Richard E. Byrd.

Maine supplied its share when a Yarmouth shoe company completed the order for a large number of hand made boots for the storm. A great deal of care was necessary in the manufacture of this important item, as Commander Byrd specified that the shoes be water-proof, cold proof and snow proof.

At Wonalago, New Hampshire, Arthur T. Wald, famous dog trainer and dog-sled racer, prepared all the dogs for the dash to the South Pole. Thousands of visitors made their way to the small town in the White Mountains for the express purpose of viewing the animals and equipment.

Batteries which are adapted for efficient operation at a temperature of 20 degrees below zero were manufactured for the Byrd expedition by a Waterbury, Conn., company. The batteries can be used either for the radio or telephone equipment. The company announced that the batteries could be used in temperatures as low as 80 degrees below zero.

STORMS ON ATLANTIC New York, Oct. 9.—A badly bruised and battered contingent of ocean voyagers arrived today aboard the liner Albert Ballin, after experiencing the most terrific Atlantic storm of the season.

Nearly everyone of the 3,100 passengers had a souvenir of the passing in the form of a cut or a bruise. An S. O. S. from the Dutch freighter Celsaeno halted the Albert Ballin last week and Captain Wiehr altered his course and headed straight into the fury of the storm. Before another message came, telling him that the Baltic was standing by and that the Ballin was not needed, the pounding seas had smashed in the port side of the bridge and had the gyro-compass and the magnetic compass needles oscillating like weathervanes.

CHALLENGES RULING. Washington, Oct. 9.—The civil service commission's order banning political activity by government clerks was defied today by L. H. Wittner, an employe of the Navy Department. Wittner challenged the order as unconstitutional, and declared he would seek a public hearing before the commission. He announced his support of Gov. Al Smith, Democratic candidate. In event he loses his job, which he regards as likely, Wittner indicated he might ask Clarence Darrow, Chicago attorney, to come to his defense.

TOO MANY LEAVES ON TREES, SAY GUNNERS. Just the Same a Good Many Birds Come to Bag on Opening Day. Manchester hunters had an average run of luck on the opening day, yesterday, of the hunting season for ruffed grouse, male pheasants and gray squirrels. Many brought home limit bags, while others reported they didn't have occasion to fire a shot. Reports of a lively trade in hunting paraphernalia at The Manchester Plumbing and Supply Company, The Bish Hardware Company and Barrett and Robbins' store, together with the number of licenses issued, indicate that there is a larger number of hunters in Manchester this year than last. Gunners found the weather fine for opening day tramping, but that there are still so many leaves on the trees that they screen birds once they were flushed. Among those who reported finding and getting birds were John Bausola, Eddie Lynch, Walter Luettings, Walter Lynch and Eddie McManus, but there were numerous others. Few, if any, partridges were mentioned by gunners as among their bags. There seems to be a disposition to lay off these birds as requested by the State Game Board. According to an authority, there still seems to be some misapprehension regarding the season for woodcock. This, under the state law, is the same as gray squirrels, partridge and pheasants but the state law is superseded by the federal game law and this year the legal season on woodcock does not open until October 20 and lasts only until November 19. The daily limit is four and 36 may be taken during the season. The season for squirrels, partridge and pheasants runs from October 8 to November 23 and the bag limit for each variety both daily and for the season follows: Gray squirrels, 5 and 30; partridge, 3 and 21; pheasants, 2 and 15. The season for varying hares and rabbits opens November 1 and lasts until December 15 with the bag limit of three per day and 30 for the season. European hares, Belgian hares and jack rabbits are not protected. REPORTER IS HELD BY PARIS POLICE. (Continued from page 1) tained by such front page headlines as "A far west kidnapping scheme on the rue de la paix." "The return of the Inquisition," and "Seven hours incommunicado." "HEARST'S STATEMENT New York, Oct. 9.—William Randolph Hearst today issued the following statement in connection with the detention in Paris of Harold J. T. Horan, Universal Service staff correspondent. "I do not see why the French government should make such a ridiculous fuss over the publication of its secret agreement with Great Britain unless there is something in the agreement which they are ashamed of and do not want the people of the United States to know. "I think the people of the United States are already fully aware of the attitude of France toward this country and the disposition of France to make any combination of it can in opposition to the welfare and prosperity of this country. "In fact, I think the publication of this document in the Hearst papers tended to clear the atmosphere and to relieve France of a suspicion in the minds of the American people that the contents of the document were worse than they actually are. "The American people are opposed to secret diplomacy. They realize that secret diplomacy was largely responsible for the recent Great War and they feel that it will be responsible, if persisted in, for another great war. "I think it might be wise for France to realize that if her machinations and her secret diplomacy should involve the world in another great war, as they are very likely to do, she need not again count on the assistance of the United States to rescue her from disaster." PLAINES MUST KEEP AWAY. Washington, Oct. 9.—An order was issued by the aeronautic section of the commerce department today that no civil aircraft would be permitted to fly closer than 1,000 feet to the new German Zeppelin which that ship tours the United States. This restriction was taken to guard against possible accident, either to the big balloon or civil aircraft. The order does not apply to military and naval escorts which will accompany the craft on its cruise in the country.

FORMER PASTOR IS FETED HERE. Rev. and Mrs. Cooper of Norwich Given Party by Men's Friendship Club.

A crowd of three hundred ladies and gentlemen filled the chapel at the South Methodist church last evening, the occasion being the first meeting since spring of "The Men's Friendship Club." The gathering was also a tribute of greeting to the former pastor of the church and his wife, the Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Cooper, of Norwich, who have recently returned from a trip abroad, a fine account of which was given by Mr. Cooper, as mentioned below.

Rev. Joseph Cooper

Prior to the address there was a business meeting held by the men in the chapel. George O. Nichols, president of the club, occupied the chair. The report of the last meeting was read by the secretary, Ray Hunt, and Clarence Taylor reported as treasurer. These reports were accepted. On motion of George E. Keith it was voted that the club assume $500 of the indebtedness of the church building fund. He also moved and the club voted that a committee be appointed to obtain a list of the voters of the town and to see that as far as possible every voter in the church be at the voting booths November 6. A vote was also passed that at the November meeting the constitution should be changed that the number of meetings be reduced to four or five for the season. Rev. Mr. Colpitts advocated the smaller number rather than the present plan of monthly meetings as likely to be conducted to a larger attendance than has been wont of late. The pastor and others introduced several men who were in attendance for the first time as "prospects."

After the adjournment of the business meeting the doors were opened and a large number of ladies and gentlemen quickly filled the seats to listen to the former pastor's animated and interesting description of the trip he and Mrs. Cooper took abroad during their summer vacation. He stated that they enjoyed pleasant weather both ways on the steamer, that he was able to be present at each meal during the two voyages. They first went over to the continent, and visited another former pastor and wife of the South Methodist church, Rev. and Mrs. Julian Wadsworth, at Chateau Thierry. Here is a fine memorial put there through the centenary movement of the Methodist Episcopal church to aid in the care of French children orphaned by the World War. The speaker told of climbing the walls of the old castle where was obtained a magnificent view of the valley of the Marne. From Chateau Thierry the couple went to Paris, concerning which say city, the speaker said was a "women's city." He related things both lively and severe. He was almost scared to ride in the taxis, the chauffeurs drove so like Jehu. He attended English speaking churches, and enjoyed much visiting the Louvre and other public buildings. From Paris the travellers went to London, which Mr. Cooper characterized as a "men's city." He described interesting visits to the great Congregational church on Holborn Viaduct, which was made famous for a quarter of a century by the ministry of that great preacher, the late Dr. Joseph Parker, who also was a great author; to the greater Westminster Abbey, and to Methodist churches. He especially emphasized the fact that wherever they went to church in England, they found them packed to the doors. At the close of the travelogue Pastor Colpitts felicitously expressed pleasure in having the former pastor present, and stated that whatever church he served it was his custom during the first year to invite the previous pastor to return and greet friends. He called Mrs. Cooper to the platform where she made a brief response to his words of greeting. Then came a surprise to many of the audience when A. L. Crowell came forward and called from the rear some twenty members of the Manchester Choral Club, who, under the leadership of their leader at the piano, Archibald Sessions, rendered three beautiful selections which were much appreciated by all present. The large company then by invitation went to the dining room in the basement where they partook of light refreshments of cheese sandwiches with doughnuts and coffee. President Nichols and all members of the club were greatly cheered by this auspicious beginning of the season's gatherings.

Richmond, Va., Thursday morning; he arrives there at 9:15 a. m., for a short stay before proceeding on into North Carolina. He will visit Raleigh at 3 p. m., Greensboro at 7 p. m., Salisbury at 8:30 p. m., and Charlotte at 9:50 p. m. His stay in each place will be short and the activity probably will be confined to hand shaking and doffing the familiar brown derby. Into Tennessee He will pass out of North Carolina Thursday night and cross over into Tennessee. He is due to arrive at Chattanooga at 11 a. m., and spend three hours there, leaving at two p. m., for Nashville, where there will be a stop of similar duration. The schedule calls for his arrival in Louisville at 10 a. m., Saturday. In neither North Carolina or Tennessee is Gov. Smith scheduled to speak and those who observed the firmness with which he turned down crowds of thousands in the west who clamored for rear platform talks do not doubt that he will adhere to his resolve. Gov. Smith's itinerary for next week still was undecided today. He is to make two speeches after leaving Louisville next Sunday, one at Sedalia, Mo., and another in Chicago, enroute back east. It is likely that the interim will be filled by having the governor make non-stop speech-making visits to Indiana, southern Illinois and probably Ohio on the way back east. Several tentative itineraries now are under consideration. Back to Albany Gov. Smith plans to be back in Albany by the last of next week to get a few days rest before engaging in the final whirlwind week of the campaign along the Atlantic seaboard where he probably will be speaking nearly every night. Gov. Smith always has been a believer in a fast finish to a campaign. In his state campaigns he always has done most of the work in the final month and he believes the same policy can be followed with success in national campaigns. He has observed on several occasions that August and September speeches usually are forgotten by the first week in November. Plans for the second week of the border states' tour and for the final ten days along the Atlantic seaboard will be discussed by the governor and the national committee strategists in New York tomorrow. A full day of conferences is planned. Gov. Smith will be accompanied into the south by three Democratic notables, who were not with him in the west, Representative Joseph W. Byrns, of Tennessee, ranking Democratic member of the appropriate committee of Congress; Norman H. Davis, under-secretary of State in the Wilson administration, and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson, one of the famous Langhorne sisters of Virginia, who knows the south and southern women. Mrs. Smith and their daughter, Mrs. Emily Warner, will comprise the other women members of the party.

EMERGENCY DOCTORS. Dr. LeVerene Holmes and Dr. M. M. Moriarty will be on duty to answer emergency calls tomorrow afternoon. TALCOTTVILLE MAN HEADS GARDEN CLUB. C. W. Blankenburg Succeeds First President, Miss Mary O. Chapman; Other Officers.

C. W. Blankenburg of Talcottville was elected president of the Manchester Garden club at the monthly business session held last night at the School street Recreation Center, succeeding Miss Mary O. Chapman, who has held the office since the organization of the club two years ago. The slate of officers presented by the nominating committee, Miss Grace Robertson, Miss Mary Palmer and George E. Rix, was unanimously elected. They are, in addition to Mr. Blankenburg, Mrs. Harold Belcher, secretary; Mrs. Fred Norton, treasurer; and Mrs. William J. Taylor, vice-president. It was proposed to create the office of librarian to have charge of the club's growing library on horticulture, but no definite action was taken. A rising vote of thanks, with hearty applause, was tendered the retiring officers. President Blankenburg appointed as program committee for the next quarter, George E. Rix, Miss Mary Palmer, Mrs. C. E. Wilson and Professor W. E. Buckley. The reading of the slips from the "Question Box" followed and this brought out helpful suggestions on a great many garden problems.

ABOUT TOWN

Alexander "Scotty" Stevenson Manchester baseball fan who captured the ball which Lou Gehrig whaled for a home run in the second game of the World Series in New York last Friday, plans to have the ball forwarded to the Yankee first sacker to be autographed.

As a result of the severe wind storm which swept Manchester last night, the inhabitants awoke this morning to find the town in real fall attire. The wind caused the first heavy fall of autumn leaves of the year.

During the month of September Tax Collector G. H. Howe turned over to the town treasurer tax receipts to the amount of $3,991.88. This money was from taxes collected on the property list from 1917 to 1927, and also included $238 collected during the month in personal taxes. This means 119 persons paid their personal taxes, as the town gets only the regular $2, the penalty of $1 being paid to the constable together with other fees in collecting the personal tax. While the town got $238 the 119 persons who paid this amount might have paid a total of $695 if the constable in every instance had collected his full fee.

A lot of that thing you newspaper fellows call color, too. "I listed Stribling because you can't count any man out who has scored 26 straight knockouts. Some of those who hit the floor may have been Aubs but just the same young Stribling has something." Dempsey said he did not know much regarding the other division but expressed the opinion that Jackie Fields is the best fighter in the welterweight class in which Joe Dundee holds the title. Dempsey remarked that Sammy Mandell is unquestionably the best lightweight champion and that it will be hard for the other good boys in that division to topple him from his throne. Outstanding Personalities "Who are the three outstanding personalities who have met in your career before the public?" Dempsey was asked. After much thought, the champion named them as follows: 1. Tex Rickard. 2. William Muldoon. 3. Bat Masterson. "I've met a lot of folks, but nobody like Rickard. He's the greatest gambler that ever staked his all on one roll of the dice. He has run a saloon frequented by real two-gun men, he's handled dog fights and he's handled prize fights. He was a great gambler in his day, and still is. He's gone broke more than once and today he's a millionaire. He has seen life. "Muldoon is another great character. He made boxing. But for his high ideals there is no telling what might have happened to the game. He was a great athlete in his day and now at 80 years old is a fine specimen of a man. And through physical culture he is doing things for other people. "Bat Masterson was a two-gun sheriff of Dodge City, Kansas, years ago. He was marshal of Crede, Colo., when I lived there as a kid. I never saw anyone even bluff him. They just didn't come too tough for him to handle." Dempsey admitted it was difficult for him to select outstanding personalities when in his mind's eye he saw the King of England, Babe Ruth, Mary Pickford, Red Grange, Big Bill Thompson, Peggy Hopkins Joyce, Jimmy Walker and a grand parade of other notables he had met on his climb to fame and fortune.

(Tomorrow, in the final article, Dempsey will discuss his attitude toward life, touch on his ring earnings and relate a few high spots of his career.)

LEAPS TO DEATH

New York, Oct. 9.—Despondent over the death of her millionaire husband two weeks ago, Mrs. Arthur E. Stillwell, 68, leaped to her death from her fashionable 12th-story apartment on West End avenue today. Her body landed on the roof of an adjoining four-story building. She had been married 49 years. A sealed farewell note written by Mrs. Stillwell was turned over to police authorities.

MONTGOMERY WARD

The coming of the Montgomery Ward Company to Manchester, establishing here a regional distributing and direct sales branch of the great mail order business, is, naturally, viewed with conflicting emotions by Manchester's already established retailers. Some of them take a gloomy view of what they regard as a new and difficult kind of competition. Others are inclined to accept as largely valid the theory, maintained by the mail order people themselves, that they added competition for local trade growing out of one of these big agencies is more than compensated by the mass of outside trade brought into town.

We are inclined to believe that the latter view will be sustained by experience. The effect, as we see it, is likely to be somewhat comparable to that of the old time "market day" in many of the earlier American towns. Such market days brought in many vendors from the outside, but they also brought in the customers; and local merchants who spent most of their week dozing in the sun in front of their stores did the bulk of their business and made all their money on the market days. Medieval towns that else would have been dry-rotted, grew rich through the great fairs which distinguished the most prosperous of them. Tons of goods and hundreds of sellers came from outside territory, but so did thousands of purchasers; and the town shops and guilds profited.

It seems to us that something of the same principle enters into the establishing, in a place like Manchester, of a branch of a great mail order house. Montgomery Ward is not coming to this town, of a certainty, just to sell goods to Manchester people, but to the people of a large and populous area.

We wonder how many Manchester merchants there are, if any, who would have preferred to have the big store locate in Rockville?

AN EARLIER CONVERSION

The "Happy Warrior," who has been complaining that his opponent wouldn't "stand up and give him a fight" is covering up. Instead of ceasing to do the slashing leads which his admirers expected would characterize his style of political boxing, Governor Smith is nursing his chin behind his shoulder and crossing both guards, on the tariff issue. He is planning to devote his speech at Louisville next Saturday, so his adherents say, to "making clear his view on the subject of the tariff." Which means that he is going to tell the country that his party is just as good a protectionist party as the Republican party, and that anybody who says it isn't engaged in malignant, unfair whispering.

Governor Smith and Eastern Congressional candidates like Mr. Loneragan and Mr. Koppelman may call themselves protectionists and quote the tariff clause of the Houston platform, till the cows come home, without affecting the vital fact in the case—that for forty years the Democratic party maintained itself by persistent adherence to a single economic theory which could be supported by any amount of logic—but which always failed to work when it was tried. And the whole life impulse of a great political party for nearly half a century is not abandoned, in this case or any other, without discussion, debate and long consideration within that party.

Not until the party platform was read at Houston did any part of the Democrats of the nation have the slightest suspicion that their party had undergone a magic metamorphosis with relation to its basic principle. The tariff plank was engineered by a handful of expediency servers, all in a minute. Is there the slightest reason to believe that that handful of vote-bidders, with a stroke of a wand, had converted the body of Democratic thought to a complete reversal of the tariff convictions of a life time?

In 1852 the Democratic party presented Franklin Pierce as its candidate for the Presidency. Both Pierce and the party claimed the support of the people of the North on the ground that they accepted as a finality the compromise of 1850 under which the spread of slavery in this country was stopped by definite limitations. On that basis Pierce was elected. He was elected because the country was made to believe that his party was no longer the party of slavery. It had been converted.

Four years later Pierce was kicked out of the Presidency by an indignant people who found that they had elected the same old brand of pro-slavery Democrat, who promptly used his office to further the interests of the slavery party in Kansas.

The sudden conversion of Northern Democrats to anti-slavery in 1852, just before election, should not be forgotten by those who are puzzled at the party's sudden conversion to protective tariff principle just before election in 1928.

NOT G. O. P.'S CHILD

A stock argument of the Democrats in this campaign, employed as much in the East as in the West, is the collapse of inflated farm values and the distress of agriculture resulting therefrom. Nine times out of ten Republicans, arguing their side, make the point that the inflation of farm values in the West was the fault of the farmers and the Western banks themselves, through the orgy of speculation in which they indulged.

This is perfectly true but for the sake of campaign argument it is quite beside the case. The answer to be made is that the Republican party had nothing in the world to do with the post-war deflation.

The collapse of the land bubble followed immediately the action of the Federal Reserve Board in ordering a severe restriction of credits.

And this was in the early part of 1920, before the Republicans had even nominated their candidates and while a Democratic administration was in power.

Before the Republican administration was inaugurated corn fell from $1.53 to 60 cents; cattle from $15.38 to $8.09; wheat from $2.80 to $1.43.

What on earth had the Republican party to do with that?

What it did, when it did come into power, was to pass the Farmers' Emergency Tariff and then the Fordney-McCumber Tariff, which protects more agricultural products than any other in history, bringing prices of farm products back to an upward trend and making the present average far above that at which the Democrats left them.

It is difficult for a busy people to remember the minutiae of these matters. But the one salient thing to be borne in mind is that every particle of the farmers' woes came about under a Democratic administration.

FOOLISH CLAIMS

We can remember no Presidential campaign in which so many extravagant claims of local victory "in the enemies' country" were made by persons in a position not only to know better but to behave better, in both parties.

For Republicans to assert that Virginia is "sure" to go for Hoover and for Democrats to declare that Nebraska is "sure" to go for Smith is the sheerest twaddle, of course, and everybody knows it. If the Republicans have a fighting chance to carry Virginia the situation is extraordinary enough and encouraging enough. And if Smith has a ghost of a show of winning in Nebraska then the extraordinariness of the Virginia situation is repeated.

To be sure it is not likely that the making of such assertions will do harm to the cause of either candidate, for they are too amateurish and silly to command the serious attention even of the new voters, at whom, of course, they are directed—it is a muddled idea of certain rule-of-thumb politicians that new voters are more anxious to be on the winning side than they are to vote intelligently. But such bragging certainly does tend to lower the level of American politics and make the whole business of legitimate, studious forecasting appear absurd.

The independent voter and the voter of tenuous party ties is numerous enough, as a matter of fact, to swing a Presidential election. But he is not numerous enough to turn three-to-one majorities in one-sided states into minorities. And in 1928, as in every other Presidential year, it will be found, in all human probability, that the confirmed Republican and the confirmed Democrat will vote their respective tickets as usual, in all parts of the country. Such states as depart from their habitual decisions, on November 6, will be states where the convertible voters exist in numbers sufficient to overset the normal party majorities.

NERVOUS TIME

The residents of lower Manhattan got a queer sort of a scare on Sunday when for several hours the whole southern part of the island was pervaded by an unaccountable and unaccounted-for odor of gasoline or benzine. Four emergency crews of the Consolidated Gas Co. hustled about the territory for hours trying to find the source of the smell but they never did find it.

Everybody knows enough about gasoline nowadays to know that wherever there is a very strong odor of it there is likely to be sufficient density of the fumes to produce an explosion through contact with open flame. Drench a whole city—or the equivalent of a whole city—in a reek of petroleum gas and it is a phlegmatic soul among its inhabitants who won't have unpleasant visions of the whole works going off with one huge bang.

This is about the only kind of a catastrophe that hasn't yet happened in New York. So Manhattanites couldn't be blamed for half expecting it to happen yesterday.

THE BEST FLIERS

There are to be half a dozen passengers aboard the dirigible Graf Zeppelin on its voyage from Germany to the United States who will have an edge on the rest of the ship's company in the event of any untoward happening. They are canary birds, which are to be taken along for their musical talents but which, provided they are not cooped up in cages, won't need parachutes in case of a crack-up high in air.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 9.—Of all the articles of grandma's era that have gone by the boards, it seems to me that the napkin ring has disappeared as completely as any—at least in Manhattan.

Not even the petticoat is quite so rare. Napkin rings, if you please, have joined the ranks of antiques. I heard, the other day, of a collector, who has begun to save them as one saves old coins or postage stamps. He is reported to have a collection of several hundred which he hopes some day will be very valuable. Antique shops, I am told now sell this grand old standby of the country table as they see early American furniture, which has been scouted by agents who have all but denuded the living rooms of Connecticut and the New England states.

Yet, passing the door maistons of lower Fifth avenue, which exude a perfume of lavender and old lace, it is hard to believe that the occupants sit down to their table without first "saying grace" and then taking a napkin out of its venerable container. "Saying grace," by the way, is another custom almost out of vogue in the big city. I was informed that several waiters and a few hundred diners all but toppled over when some automobile guests from the south bowed their heads and whispered their words of thanks in the dining room of a Fifth avenue hotel the other day.

A raid on a mid-town "cutting" plant the other day revealed thousands of non-refillable liquor bottles, all of which were being filled despite the fact that this process is said by the bootleggers to be all but impossible. Just how $50 and $60 clerks and salesmen manage to pay the $90 rentals they are charged has always been a mystery to me. Yet scores of poorly paid white-collar men live in apartments that cost from $90 to $125 a month. They sport cafes on Sunday and seem well supplied with dinner clothes. I am told that most of them are generally "in hock." Their radios, their cars and clothes are paid for on the "dollar day" plan. There are presumes, to be more persons dealing in credit in New York than in any place in the world. Granting the size of the population, the index wage remains higher than in smaller towns. The business of putting on "the dog" is carried to a ridiculous length.

Actors, particularly those who come under the heading of "ham," are the worst offenders where "the dog" is concerned. It is not altogether their fault. They feel they have to put on a front whether or not their board bills are paid and whether or not their stomachs are empty. In the office of the agencies they receive the usual verbal plaudits, but once out on the street they go to work on the "dime" of a dime's worth of coffee and potatoes. Frequently they have to borrow the dime. But their shoes are shined, even when the heels are well run over and the soles are scuffed. Their gaiters of spirit often becomes their state of economics and mind. They are ready to wise-crack with the next one and blow dream bubbles all over Broadway. Their last comment, however, is likely to be cagey: "Say, you couldn't let me have a dollar until I get that contract with Belasco, could you?"

A STUDY OF DIABETES MELLITUS

Patients suffering from this insidious disease have enormous appetites and thirst, a progressive loss of weight and strength, and a gradual emaciation. They will notice that sores and bruises resist healing. As the disease progresses, there is a faulty metabolism of sugar which appears in excessive quantities in the blood and urine, giving a peculiar ether-like sweetish odor to the breath and to the urine.

As the disease progresses, the patient may have to void several times the normal quantity of urine which constantly maintains a large amount of sugar. There is a mild form where the withdrawal of carbohydrates causes a disappearance of the sugar, but in the severe type even complete fasting causes no appreciable change. Apparently, the tissues of the body break down to furnish the sugar which is discharged.

Diabetes, contrary to popular belief, is not necessarily a disease of the kidneys. In fact it seems possible that the kidneys in many cases actually save the life of the sufferer by removing the excessive quantities of sugar that are present in the blood.

Diabetes is supposed to be caused by a disease of the pancreas that interferes with the manufacture of the pancreatic secretion which influences the action of the liver upon sugar. However, there may be other causes which will produce symptoms similar to this disease, as emaciation of the nervous system, or an injury to the medulla of the spinal cord which may so weaken the kidneys that they are unable to retain the normal amount of sugar in the blood but allow it to escape.

The pancreatic cells produce an internal secretion which prevents the liver from changing the insoluble animal starch which is stored in the tissues into soluble glucose. Another disorder similar to diabetes is produced by hardening of the liver. A fourth form seems to be produced by a clogging of the tissues by some colloid or glue-like material which prevents the free passage of sugar from the blood to the cells of the body, and a passage of carbon-dioxid from the cells to the blood. This last theory is supported by the fact that in diabetes the blood is less alkaline than normal, and it retains an excess of solid material. It is deficient in sodium, calcium, silicon and iron.

Diabetes is usually more serious in children than adults, and is twice as common with males as females.

The majority of cases occur between the ages of thirty and sixty, but one may have a considerable amount of sugar showing in the urine, and still live for a good many years without any kind of treatment.

It is a well known fact that operations are dangerous to diabetics because of the danger of gangrene. The inability of wounds to heal and gangrene are both indicative of a blood over-charged with waste products.

Questions and Answers

Question: Charles H. writes: "Kindly tell me through your question and answer column what you think causes my right arm to shake when I am taking a drink of water or shaving. In fact, it does so in anything I do. Being a professional violin player it is a great handicap in my work."

Answer: You may be suffering from occupational neurosis. In your case this may be from the effect of playing the violin. A general dietetic treatment should be helpful, together with rest from your work for some time. You should also take massage treatments on the arm and upper back. Chiropractic or osteopathic treatments will also be helpful in restoring better nerve tone to your arm.

Question: J. S. writes: "I wish to have your opinion about raw beef for man. I have heard it claimed that it causes cancer and tapeworm."

Answer: In my opinion it is better to have the meat well-cooked as this will kill any beef tapeworm eggs and make the meat more easily digestible. There is no evidence that any one particular kind of food causes cancer.

Question: M. A. writes: "My trouble is an abscess near the liver, and I wish to take a week's fast. Will you please tell me what proportion of orange juice to use to two quarts of water a day? In the hospital they use six oranges, six lemons, and some grapejuice to two quarts of water for a three-day fast, whatever the case may be. Should I follow this regime?"

Answer: The amount of orange, lemon or grapefruit juice required depends entirely upon the case, but it is usually all right to use as much as two quarts a day of the fruit juice in addition to an equal amount of water.

A THOUGHT

AMERICA TO BE CENTER FOR WORLD MUSIC, SAYS FAMOUS BOSTON DIRECTOR

Paris.—America will be the future great center of music, according to Serge Koussevitzky, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, who has recently given a series of concerts in Paris.

Mr. Koussevitzky surprised the French musical leaders when he told them that a large number of Americans are now writing the music of the future and that there is no country in the world where good music is better appreciated.

"One doesn't want music, but bread, when one is hungry," said the director, "and of course every one knows that America isn't starving these days—only starving for beauty in all its forms. She is now ready for the inner culture, having acquired the outer with prosperity. It is almost phenomenal, the great interest that is shown in music. And it is not only the rich and the highly educated that are crowding the concert-halls, but the ordinary large masses. Even twenty large, fine symphony orchestras cannot satisfy them. It is wonderful."

BOY SEES DAD KILLED

London.—Daniel O'Neill, 88, was instantly killed during a blasting operation at Carnough (Co. Antrim). The 12-year-old son of the victim witnessed the tragedy, caused by stones blown up from a quarry.

A good way to kill time is to work it to death.

Just a Song at Twilight

Washington, Oct. 9.—Senator J. Boomboom McWhorter, whose principal worrying in life for several years has been the grave question whether his meat and potatoes would come out even, is now beset by trials and tribulations calculated to make most of his private speeches unfit for publication. The senator's campaign for reelection is not going so well. The fact that McWhorter is himself no longer certain of victory was demonstrated the other day when, after his opponent had claimed the election by a majority of 80,000, the senator himself only claimed it by 75,000. McWhorter's managers, of course, hastened to cover up his gesture of defeat by asserting that the senator hadn't seen his opponent's claim or he would have raised him 5,000 or 10,000.

When the national committee heard of Senator McWhorter's troubles they advised him that if he would avoid all national issues in his campaign and say nothing about the presidential candidates, he could have anyone he wanted to go on a stumping tour with him. Senator McWhorter agreed and wrote back suggesting Clara Bow, but has had no reply. Of course, the McWhorter misfortunes aren't all his fault. Some one should have told him when he addressed an audience of Italian-Americans two weeks ago that the bulk of them were anti-Fascists. Then McWhorter wouldn't have launched into such fulsome praise of Mussolini and the meeting would have been concluded without the aid of the entire local police force. It was McWhorter's campaign managers who suggested in advance of a great mass-meeting a few days later that it would be a graceful tribute if everybody should bring a flower or two to cast at Senator McWhorter as he strode down the aisle to the rostrum. The idea proved quite popular; quite a few brought cauliflowers.

Perhaps the most painful feature of the campaign for McWhorter, however, has been the fact that he has been unable to attack his opponent's record. The man who aspires to his seat in the Senate happens to be the present state treasurer, who took that important job when Senator McWhorter left it to go to Washington. Of course, McWhorter knows a great deal about the other candidate, but the treasurer knows even more about McWhorter. He has the books and McWhorter hasn't. Thus the senator has had to put in considerable valuable time heading off volunteers who want to ask his rival embarrassing questions, which is a sad position for any candidate.

But even in spite of such handicaps and his various other missteps, McWhorter's campaign slogan—"Promises, Not Bunk!"—might have carried him through had it not been for the tragic occurrence at Hoogeburg the other night when the senator undertook to speak over the radio for the first time in any campaign. The senator, who had composed a special new speech which he hadn't used for several years, was introduced to the microphone with a few well chosen words and proceeded to speak. Very shortly some unconventional persons in the rear of the hall began to yell "Louder!" The senator raised his voice into a roar and went on. The yells continued, puzzling the senator for a few minutes. But McWhorter knows his hardware and suddenly he picked up the

FACTS ABOUT CONNECTICUT

(186) State Highways Take $100,000,000. Connecticut's highway system is one of the best in the United States, the highway department has spent more than $100,000,000 since 1895. During the past four years more than $10,000,000 has been spent annually by the department. The first fiscal year that the expenditures exceeded $1,000,000 was during 1909-10 when the total disbursements amounted to $1,209,945. During 1925, when the department was organized with three commissioners, the disbursements totaled $45,530. During 1926-27, expenditures totaled $12,783,792. The total for the 32 years ending June 30, 1927, was $95,331,792. A third of the $95,331,792—$33,115,453 to be exact—was spent for trunk line repairs. Reconstruction required a total expenditure of $16,996,114, while state aid construction cost $10,332,107. microphone. His worst fears were realized on close inspection, for the microphone turned out to be what is known in the underworld as a cuspidor. Thereupon Senator McWhorter let out a terrible roar and flung the respectable man indiscriminately and promiscuously. The speech became definitely off as the doctors spent the next 10 minutes trying to bring McWhorter's most generous campaign contributor back to consciousness. Since that nearly fatal occasion, every time the gentleman rubs the large bump with which the evening's festivities left him he is inspired to write out a check for Senator McWhorter's opponent.

UNDERSTANDING. Hoover Gets the Other Man's Point of View
Born and brought up on a Western farm, Hoover knows first hand the problems of the farmer. Self-supporting from the age of thirteen, earning his way through college by all kinds of odd jobs, working after graduation, a mine laborer, pushing a cart, shoveling ore, and pushing a cart, Hoover knows first hand the laborer's point of view. For many years a business man, responsible for mines representing millions of dollars, making these mines pay dividends for his stockholders, and at the same time providing adequately for the thousands of men in his employ, Hoover knows at first hand the anxieties of the business man. The diversity of Hoover's own experiences and services has given him an extraordinary breadth of view. The President of the United States should have just such a sympathetic insight into the various kind of people he must govern. (To Be Continued)

SKYSCRAPER TO REPLACE FAMED BOWERY SALOON

New York.—The Atlantic Garden, on the Bowery, which for more than half a century enjoyed an international reputation as the largest garden in this country, is soon to be torn down and in its place erected a modern ten-story office building and newspaper plant.

It was a great place, the Atlantic Garden, known the world over. It was the rendezvous of famous men—actors, managers, politicians, business and professional men—as well as the rank and file of the populace.

The place had "atmosphere"—typical, old-country German atmosphere. The garden was decorated with real trees, the last to be found on the Bowery. In between the shrubbery and hanging vines were rows upon rows of tables and chairs which could seat as many as 4,000 persons at one time.

Walters dashed to and fro with trays loaded with foaming steins of old-time lager. Other liquor was sold, too, but most everybody came to the garden for the beer. Beer, conversation and good fellowship.

Underneath the balconies were bowling alleys, a billiard parlor and a shooting gallery. There was, of course, the lunch counter near the big bar up front. The lunch was free.

Three immigrant youths from Germany were the founders of this famous establishment. They transformed a coal yard adjoining the Bowery Theater into a beer garden and made it resemble an old beer garden of Germany to the last detail.

Since 1912, however, the widely known garden has not smelled of lager—no steins have been clanked upon the oaken tables. It has been, successively, a boxing club, the home of a Hebrew theatrical company, a movie house and a cheap Bowery restaurant.

THINK SEVENTEEN DEAD IN OHIO JAIL BLAZE

Junction City, Ohio, Oct. 9.—"Every guard was at his proper post and each did all in his power to get the prisoners to safety when the fire broke out."

With this statement, Deputy Warden H. C. Glosser, in charge of the brick plant here, today dismissed rumors that an inside guard on duty in the dormitory which was gutted in the disastrous fire yesterday morning with the resultant loss of 17 to 20 convicts, had made his way to the steel door, rushed outside and then slammed and barred the door against the cursing, fighting men trying to escape the flames.

With men toiling to bring out the charred remains of victims fifteen bodies had been recovered to day. Three of them are believed to have been those of John Duncan negro, Toledo; Moses Broncho, negro, Franklin county, and Ray Cooper, Fairfield county. Seventeen others are either dead or missing and it is believed that a final checkup will reveal that none escaped and that the 17 met death in the fire.

Don't Risk Neglect! When Kidneys Slow Up Give Help Promptly. MANY folks sacrifice health by waiting to heed early danger signals.

This is particularly true of kidney disorders. A drowsy listless feeling, lameness and stiffness, constant backache and bladder irregularities are often timely warnings.

Use Doan's Pills. Doan's, a stimulant diuretic, increases the activity of the kidneys and thus aids in carrying off waste impurities. Recommended by thousands.

50,000 Users Endorse Doan's! I. J. Clark, 47 N. Oakley Ave., Columbus, Ohio, writes: "I had a steady pain across my kidneys and stooping was almost impossible. My kidneys were affected so that I had to get up often at night to pass the secretions. A tired feeling stopped my strength and had headaches and dizzy spells. Doan's Pills drove away the trouble."

DOUBLE FEATURES TODAY AT THE STATE

"Jazz Mad" and "Big Killing" Here Two Days—Gift Night Tonight. A composer of a brilliant symphony—out of luck in an age of jazz—night club life tears his soul to tatters—love's young dream is shattered—genius triumphs—and jazz is lost in the strains of the wedding march!

These are the ingredients that form the colorful background to "Jazz Mad," Universal's sensational production starring that famous character actor, Jean Hersholt, which is now being shown at the State theater.

"Jazz Mad" is not just simply a picture that was created for entertainment value alone. True, it has all the elements required to be an entertaining photoplay, but that was not the point Director F. Harmon Weight had in mind when he produced it. The theme itself, is the one big factor, for it lays bare the common problems of yesterday and today's youth.

As the age's musician who still believes in the classics, Hersholt is seen in the most impressive characterization of his film career. He is given able support by a superlative team in one of the general office athletic association's leagues of bowlers, and will roll under the captaincy of Don Neiswander, his boss in the offices of the New Haven railroad here. The league that includes John Coolidge's team is called the vegetable League and the team that he has joined is known as the Radishes.

WHIRLWIND

by ELEANOR EARLY

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

SYBIL THORNE, Boston society girl, is the drawing card in a sensational divorce case that has the whole town talking. Sybil has petitioned for divorce from RICHARD EUSTIS, whom she married secretly, and with whom she lived only two weeks. She asks also for custody for her child, TEDDY, whom Eustis has never seen—and the right to resume her maiden name.

Her husband, philanthropist and adventurer, counters by filing suit for $100,000 against CRAIG NEWHALL, alleging alienation of Sybil's affections. Newhall, who has always loved Sybil, is altogether glibly able to charge, but the suit makes a tremendous story for the newspapers, and sets society gossiping anew.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XL

The photographer grinned good-naturedly.

"It's all in the day's work, Mr. Newhall. It's my bread and butter, popping off celebrities and criminals and such. But the job's not worth the chance in a case like this. I should have taken you from across the street, and asked question afterward. I'm John Dumb for sure."

He shifted his camera to the other hand, and he sat pleasantly, and took himself off. Then he skirted around back ways, approached the house from the side, and succeeded in getting a picture that was subsequently captioned: "Thorne Home Where Lovely Bride Remains Virtual Prisoner."

Tad brought home more papers when he came to dinner, and the family council that evening was divided between wrath and moans. Sybil put her mother to bed with a sedative and Craig mixed cocktails for medicinal purposes.

"You shouldn't have started it, Sib," complained Tad.

"She's been right all through," defended Valerie, stoutly.

And Craig, his face flushed darkly, was ominously silent.

In the nursery, when she crept in to kiss Teddy good night, Sybil found her mother, crying softly.

"Thank God, she's sobbing peacefully, your poor father didn't live to see this day."

The injustice of it hurt Sybil more than any of them knew. Bitterly resentful, she scorned defense.

"If they weren't blind as bats," she told herself fiercely, "if they weren't too selfish to think of anyone but themselves, they couldn't blame me so. Infatuation, isn't a sin. It isn't wrong to MARRY a man. I didn't do anything wicked, and you'd think I was a moral leper."

Fiercely she crushed and tore the newspapers and ground them on the floor beneath her heels.

"Oh, it isn't fair. It isn't fair!"

Next morning there were more stories, and the entire page in the Boston Telegraph devoted to pictures. . . . Sybil in a swimming suit. Sybil in a ball gown. Sybil at the Horse Show in a riding habit. . . . And old photograph of Craig from the Harvard Year Book.

Richard Eustis especially posed for the Boston Morning Telegraph. . . . And a picture of Valerie, sweet and lovely in her wedding gown. . . . There were photographs of the "palatial home of the Thornes," and their summer place at Wanno.

"Oh, my God!" groaned Tad.

Valerie surveyed the heap of papers distastefully.

"I wouldn't look at them," she said, and pushed them away.

Then the Gazette's red headlines caught her eye.

"Crandon!" she cried. "Oh, Sib, look!"

Across the top in glaring headlines was meat for Gazette readers "Sybil Thorne Psycho Analyzed," screamed the crimson type.

And below in smaller letters, "PRIMITIVE EGO MAKES TROUBLE FOR BOSTON GIRL."

"Science Explains Emotional Unrest Of Society Women Searching Analysis of Mental Conflict"

Then followed the story:

"Claude Crandon, Boston's foremost psycho-analyst, interviewed last evening by a reporter for the Gazette, threw new light on the sensational Eustis divorce case. Dr. Crandon, well versed in phsyco, discussed at length the so-called 'Primitive Ego' of Mrs. Richard Eustis, better known as Sybil Thorne. Mrs. Eustis, according to the doctor, is the victim of her own ego.

"In order to put the case plainly before the lay mind, Dr. Crandon has prepared the following statement exclusively for readers of the Gazette: . . .

Valerie held the paper in both her trembling hands, and read aloud in a high pitched voice. Shril words tumbled, one over another, from her horrified lips.

With an oath Tad clutched the paper from her shaking fingers.

"Here, let me see it. The old-my God, I'll kill him for this, Sybil! The obscene old trout. . . ."

Mrs. Thorne, before the great silver coffee service, covered like a frightened thing.

"Did he say," she quavered pitifully, "anything—anything about—the—about—Sybil's love life?"

Tad scanned the column.

"Love life—well, I'll be—He certainly did. Say, Ma, how much of this stuff did you spill?"

Tad turned furiously on his mother.

"Oh, Tad!" she faltered, and her little hands fluttered helplessly. "Oh, Sybil! Children, I'm so sorry, I—"

Then the little hands were still. And the dim blue eyes, veiled in tears, were glazed and dreadful looking.

"Tad! Mother's ill."

Sybil flung her arms about her mother. "There, there, darling. It doesn't make a bit of difference. It's simply comical! Honestly, dear, I think it's funny. I don't mind what Tad says. Carry mother into the drawing-room. . . . The big red chair, Tad. . . . and you'll be all right in a minute."

Tad lifted her as though she were a child, and Valerie brought pillows and a foot stool, and when a photograph of her comfortable, they tried to make her comfortable.

"Can't you see what a joke it is?" demanded Sybil. "The man never saw me in his life. He doesn't know a thing about me, really. Let me read it to you, dear. It's simply a scream!"

But Mrs. Thorne waved away the lurid sheet with her little fluttering, blue-veined hands.

"Oh, please," she begged, "please. . . . That dreadful, dreadful man! What can I do?"

Tad stood on the hearth rug with his feet wide apart, and his hands plunged in his pockets.

"I guess, Ma," he predicted gloomily, "you'll have to take up church-going. Ministers are a good, safe lot—though they may be a bit dull. But these quacks—gosh, Ma, you'll simply have to stay off."

Valerie drew the purple afghan closed about her mother-in-law's narrow shoulders.

"Poor Mother Thorne!" she whispered, and kissed the soft gray hair where the part lay pink and broadest.

"Tad's joking, dearest."

Sybil glanced at the watch on her wrist.

"Eight-thirty!" she cried. "And Craig begins at nine. We'll have to hurry. Do you feel up to it, mother—or had you rather stay right here, and rest?"

"Up to it!" Mrs. Thorne put a hand on each arm of the big red chair. "My dear, I feel like a new woman. Do you know what I'm going to do?"

She raised herself to her feet and surveyed her children with quiet dignity.

"I'm going to see that man. I don't know exactly how it can be done, but I'll see a lawyer today. There must be some law for the protection of a client or patient in confidential consultation. Maybe he is practicing illegally. There will be some way of getting at him. I'll see him for $100,000—and attach everything he's got! He thinks I'm nothing but a neurotic, silly old woman. I'll show him, children!"

Laughing, they crowded about her, to pat her shoulders and kiss her faded cheeks.

"Get my hat, Val," she commanded briskly. "It's up on my bed-der. And hurry or we'll all be late!"

Everybody, it seemed, was in court when they reached there. Dolly Weston rushed up and kissed Sybil effusively. The Moores came to shake hands—Jack and Mabel—quietly confident.

Mrs. West garrulous and excited, patted her arms about Sybil and asked Mrs. Thorne, Groups of specially-dressed women bowed when they passed. Girls with whom Sybil had gone to school reached over the backs of the courtroom benches to clasp her hand. Mrs. Grayson bowed serenely from across the room.

There were a great many strangers and a number of intimates. Most of their casual friends had the good breeding to stay away, but there were a number of women with whom Sybil had a bowing acquaintance.

They seemed engrossed with remote objects when Sybil glanced their way. Some of them craned to look out the windows. Others were absorbed in contemplation of the throngs that crowded through the corridors to the court room door, where a court officer in a blue uniform with brass buttons refused further admittance.

Reporters at the press table asked questions of one another eagerly.

"Who's that shaking hands with her now? Mrs. Grayson? Did you see the dame with the lorgnette high-hating her? Those are Vincent Club girls talking with her now. . . . Say, this looks like a mass meeting of the Four Hundred. . . . There's Newhall coming in. . . . This may hurt him politically. . . . That's her brother. . . . Well, they're all giving her the gland head. . . . Oh, no, they're not. She's been getting a flock of my staves. Plant 'em up, Pa. I say. . . . Pretty tough, isn't it?"

Waiting. Waiting. What was the delay? Where was the defendant? The judge, stern in his black gown, frowned and fidgeted. That was a court officer he had beckoned to the bench. There was a whispered conversation.

The judge—like an old woman digging a handkerchief out of her petticoat pocket—flashed in the folds of his robe. Glared belligerently at his watch. Restored it to his pocket and settled his heavy skirts modestly about him.

Where was Richard? Mr. Peterson leaned toward Sybil.

"Neither your husband nor his attorney are here. The judge may dismiss the case."

Commotion in the corridor. Excited whispers. Something had happened. One felt it in the air of the stuffy courtroom when the door swung open and a court officer, fumbling at his brass buttons, hurried to the judge's bench.

The judge leaned forward, cupping his ear with his hand. Nodded gravely and sat for a moment silent.

"Mr. Peterson."

Mr. Peterson approached the bench.

Mrs. Eustis, will you come here, please?"

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

We seem to be running to statistics in divorce. Every day we are confronted by a new set of figures and an old set of reasons for dissolving the marital tie.

Has it occurred to us seriously that the same things that are accountable for failure in marriage may be responsible for failure in children?

If a woman nags her husband, is it not possible that she will nag at her children, and if a husband is ugly and unreasonable with his wife, is it not likely that his children will come in for their share of the same kind of treatment?

Speaking of divorces, 70 per cent of the men applying for separation in one court blamed their unhappiness on the "dispositions" of their wives.

One man said that the minute he sat down to read, his wife thought of a dozen things for him to do, and she would make him stop his reading to do them, although he may have been idle for an hour before.

If that isn't a complex, I should like to know what it is. And it is very common in most of us. We can't bear to see someone else indulging himself if we ourselves are busy, even our children.

Take a boy who dawdles a bit on his way from school, or who bawls up the stairs, "I'm home, Mom," and shoots out the door before anyone can stop him and beats it for the practice field as fast as his two legs can carry him.

He's filled the bill—he has "reported" that he is safe after school. Now he's off to satisfy his own natural craving for excitement and society. All day long he has been diligent with the demands of home and state. Now he's going to have a blissful hour of his own in which to do as he pleases.

But instantly there crops up in his mother's mind that "truthy" slant. She had previous planned to fill that precious hour of his errands to run, leaves to rake.

There may be a scolding or a whipping waiting him when he comes back and one more brick is added to the wall that is going to separate her from her boy someday.

The first thing we parents must learn is a neat little maxim that seldom goes wrong. "Live and let live."

Homes built on it will be happier. And if the male parent thinks this advice applicable only to mothers, I am here to say that it is not.

When Words Are Indistinct, Song Is Only a Melody

BY ROSA PONSILLE

Even if you have a lovely voice, you may feel that your songs do not receive the right appreciation. People with voices not nearly as good as yours are more enthusiastically received. Then a little self-questioning is due as to why your songs, to use a professional term, do not go across better.

Your trouble may come from several sources. First of all, enunciation of the words you sing may not be clear; second, those words may not be rung with expression; third, you may not put emphasis on words where it properly belongs.

At these things or any one of them will keep your listeners from fully enjoying a song, because they do not know what it is all about.

The first named of these troubles, indistinct enunciation, can be overcome if you recite slowly the words you are to sing, uttering every one of them distinctly, and being always careful to pronounce the final syllables.

A common fault with many singers is that they drop the voice on final syllables or, so to speak, swallow them. This fault leaves many words to be guessed by the listener. Again, a singer may be so busy trying to give lovely tones that the pronunciation of the words is sacrificed, it consequently the song is nothing but a melody, and might as well be played on a violin as far as words are concerned. As we all know, certain letters are hard to give distinctly on certain tones, but by taking them as a separate study they can be pronounced and the tone still remain beautiful.

As to the matter of singing the words with expression: Take the case of two people telling the same anecdote; one will catch general attention while the other will fall flat. In singing a song it is exactly the same. To arouse interest the words of a song must be alive with meaning. You would not say carelessly, "I love you." You would say it as if you meant it.

As to giving important words emphasis in a sentence, words which must be emphasized to bring out the full meaning, take that same sentence, "I love you." The two words demanding special emphasis are LOVE and YOU. They would lose their entire value if sung, for instance, this way, "I LOVE you." Every sentence should be studied by the singer to put emphasis where it belongs.

TO PICK FAKES IN 'OLD MASTER' ART IN AMERICA

Paris.—America shortly will be able to learn what percentage of the "old masters" she has taken from Europe are fakes, according to Colonel Cellerier, chief of the newly-organized identification service of the Louvre Museum.

With the consent of the Ministry of Beaux Arts Colonel Cellerier will sail for the United States in a few weeks to give a series of lectures on the official French method of "expertising" paintings.

Louvre As Guide

"The pictures of the Louvre will serve as a standard for the identification of works of art," said Colonel Cellerier to "Comœdia." The museum contains a large number of masterpieces whose authenticity is indisputable.

"We already have begun the identification of the great masters down from the Sixteenth Century. A picture is photographed in different positions under different lights and finally it is put under an X-Ray.

"Exhaustive data on the peculiarities of each painter naturally is at our disposal, and it enables us to study the X-Rays and other photographs in such a way that the most clever fraud would be detected.

"The new archives of identification at the Louvre will, I believe, undisputed reference for paintings the world over.

Easy To See

"By the method now employed it is easy to perceive whether a picture has been retouched, either by the master himself or another. This scientific verification should show whether pictures bear the

HOOVER RETTES

By Anna Steese Richardson

The most surprising feature of the Hoover-Curtis campaign is the type of men and women who have been drawn into the political work by personal devotion to the standard bearer, Herbert Hoover.

Men and women who have never participated actively in politics are coming to National Headquarters in Washington, offering to serve in the humblest capacities. Women, whose closest contact with Mr. Hoover during the war was the wearing of Hoover aprons and carrying out his food conservation plans, are giving up their vacations and sitting behind desks in the mid-summer heat, doing routine tasks.

Sometimes I study these people and wonder, "What is the hold which Mr. Hoover has on any man or woman who has ever worked with him?" The other day I met a man who I knew must have left an important post to his subordinates. I learned that he was spending four days of each week in Washington and five in New York, often working in his home office on Sunday to get up loose ends. And in Washington he is working unobtrusively, without title, without any particular credit.

Quite frankly I asked him why he roped with equal frankness: "I don't know that you will understand, but it is this way. When the United States jumped into the World War, I was caught in London, milling around with what seemed to be a million other Americans. My letter of credit was of no earthly use to me. Some one told me that the only man who could help me to get passage home was a chap named Herbert Hoover. I went to see him. A quiet, efficient looking fellow who listened in silence while you presented your case. Usually he cut right through red tape. But not for me.

"Think you ought to go home?" he asked.

"Sure, My firm's got the chance to do a smashing business. I can take them some first hand information. I ought to get something big out of it."

"For a few seconds he made no comment, then—

"Couldn't you make up your mind to stay here? We're going to need men like you. You're strong and you seem to have no family responsibilities. Your firm has other men on the ground. Here there are bigger things for you to do. Service you will never forget or regret. Belgian relief. Human lives to be saved. Bigger than dollars."

"I worked with Hoover in Belgium and on the Food Administration. That was over ten years ago, but it did something for me. I don't say I owe my present business success to that experience, though working with Mr. Hoover was a liberal education, but it certainly injected the human element into my business relations. Made my whole life richer.

"So I am back, working for Hoover because he will make the best and most human President we have had since Abraham Lincoln."

The daily paper that lies before me at this moment contains, on its front page, an account of a state convention of a men's luncheon club. But accompanying the story, is a sizable picture of a group of women—wives of the club members, attending the convention with them.

There isn't anything especially noteworthy about that, of course; yet, when you stop to think about it, it is rather significant.

Not long ago the convention of a men's lodge or club was looked upon as a sort of escape. The members went "stag"; a wife who would have volunteered to go along would have been looked upon as a bit of an upstart. The men, quite frankly, wanted to get away for a while.

But nowadays—well, it's just sort of taken for granted, in most cases, that friend wife will go along. No entertainment committee handling such a function, for instance, would dare fail to provide for shopping tours for the women in the party; nor would it think of arranging a program that would not appeal to women as well as to men.

The fact of the matter is that the modern wife has learned how to be a pal to her husband. John Doe is actually discovering that he can have a better time if Mrs. Doe goes along than if she stays at home. And right there is something encouraging enough to offset all the tales about a rise in the divorce rates.

A family where husband and wife are pals isn't going to go on the rocks of martial discord.

Of the 12,000 persons who have been calling New York's new time bureau every day of the past week, the great majority make calls between 5 and 6 o'clock in the evening, telephone officials say.

This smacks suspiciously of friend wife casting a reflective eye at the clock and wondering if it isn't time to be putting the chops or stew on the stove. Which hardly sounds as if all the wives were strotting home from delicatessen stores about that time, vaudeville comedians would have us believe.

Oh, well, maybe it might mean "most anything!"

By the way, I hear that centerpieces of fruit and vegetables have become quite the vogue in our smartest homes. I wonder if the vogue doesn't spring from the fact that Mrs. Herbert Hoover's squash and plum and apple and berry and pumpkin and tassel corn centerpieces have featured her tea and dinner tables ever since she began hosting it in Washington?

Miss Grace Lyon, of Long Beach, Long Island, has purchased three 10-passenger amphibian airplanes, with which she will start an air service between New York and Havana, via Miami.

We have much to say about employment problems for both men and women, but facts like this remind us that even while the old way of employment is being killed by changing conditions, progress is, by the next breath, offering a new way!

Cards To Stake All On Their Game Today

Make More! That's Probably What Colonel Ruppert is Telling His Yankees.

Colonel Jake Ruppert, who owns the New York Yankees, is one of those fellows who begins to suspect a game is won when the score is about 40-0 in favor of your side and it is the last inning and two are out. Anyway, here's the colonel enjoying (and that's questionable), the world series. He probably would have enjoyed both games much better if the Yankees had won by larger scores.

SPORT CHATTER

Jack Dwyer, who punched the typewriter during our absence at the World Series in New York last week, informs us that the North Ends are going to be good enough to meet either the Cubs or the Cloverleaves for the town title. As fall, what's more he's going to demand recognition from them, he says.

They say that a woman tires of eating food she cooks herself and in the same respect, the writer enjoyed reading the sport pages prepared by Jack Dwyer during his four-day stay in New York. Bob Carney chipped in a few good articles too.

The West Side Rec basketball team will hold a meeting at 7:30 tonight at the Y. Plans for the coming season will be discussed.

Bill McKee hopes that someone will take steps toward having a shelter house built at the Center Spring Woods and Earl Judas that Manchester skating lovers will have the comforts they deserve.

There is quite some talk of the North Ends representing Manchester Green on the gridiron this fall. If they do, home games will probably be played at Woodbridge Field.

Progress in the doubles tennis tournament is slow. Only one match was played over the week-end. Try Holland and Earl Judas defeated Albert deNerville and his son, Robert deNerville, Saturday at 6-0 and 6-4. Other matches remaining to be played are Mac Macdonald and Mac McCann vs John Cheney and Ross Shirer with the winner meeting the Dexter brothers; Hissel and the Hollands; Judas and Stevens in emphasizing this department is a further postponement of the finals set for Saturday.

Fans Expect Miracle to Happen But Experts Say Yankees Will Make It Four Straight.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 9.—Playing out their string, like the inevitable gambler who is down to his ultimate chip, the St. Louis Cardinals will stake their all on the turn of the wheel this afternoon in the fourth game of the World Series. Three times the wheel has turned to the black markers but the Cards' bets were riding on the red. Three times have the New York Yankees raked in the pot. One more today and the Cards will be cleaned out and the series no longer a contest, if, indeed, it ever was. Only twice before in World Series history has a club won four consecutive games and, if the Yankees win today, they will show just how silly the competition has become. They will have won successive World Series in successive games.

Two men, Ruth and Gehrig, have made this situation possible by their hitting; no other man on the ball club, barring the pitchers, has contributed more than his official presence, yet the Yankees, as a club, have outclassed the Cardinals and it is possible that they have done so because their conviction is that they will win. The Cards apparently are just as thoroughly convinced that they will lose and, in the course of time, it seems possible that this notion will be sustained in toto.

Hope for Miracle
The populace, however, is not altogether open to suggestion on this point. It is hoping to the last that a miracle will be achieved and the Cards, getting away with a belated victory this afternoon, will start winning and forget to stop. They die very hard in this town and do not readily admit defeat. The Cards may lose but you never beat a St. Louis ball fan.

It might seem that such devotion to a losing cause must be rewarded some time and perhaps that time will come before night-fall. They are going to pitch Willie Sherdel, who can still pitch the Yankees war clubs but can't beat the Yankees team. But here again the good, old law of averages will be working for the Cards. If it didn't seem plausible that the Yankees could win eight straight ball games from successive National League champions, neither did it seem possible that a pitcher like Eberge is to continue taking it on the countenance from one ball club indefinitely.

Sherdel should be absolutely correct, or right if you prefer, for this emergency, since yesterday's blon of an extra day of rest, however, that situation is cut down the middle by the fact that Waite Hoyt, probable nominee for the other guys, has had as much rest and is the kind of an egg who never needed a lot of it.

Even Betting
Still, the lads who make book have made the game today an even thing. That is, they have quoted odds of 4 to 5, meanwhile letting the player take his choice. These price brokers never permit sentiment to interfere with judgment. In fact, they are about as sentimental as the average junk dealer. If their quotations say the Cards figure to be an equal shot for this particular game, then it can be written in the social register that this probably is quite as it should be.

At that, Huggins may hold Hoyt back another day and shoot with Henry Johnson, just because he can afford to gamble. The local hotel men would like this; as a matter of fact, if Huggins is in any doubt as to what to be done, they think they have the logical solution. They are in favor of Huggins pitching the game himself.

A victory for the Yankees, even under these circumstances, might be taken for granted by the many who have come to believe that the Yankees can't go wrong anywhere in this series.

Just what a victory for the Cards this afternoon will do for this town can only be surmised. Fifteen thousand people forfeited a Saturday half-day to acclaim a loser upon its return from its reverses on the eastern front. A record crowd of more than 42,000 watched it lose in disorganized ineptitude on Sunday. Yesterday they stood in the rain waiting for a game that would not be played, a game that seemed likely to end it all anyway.

The same situation existed this morning but St. Louis, game to the end, promised to turn up present odds of the number of about $5,000. There will be no justice today in this world if the local populace doesn't get at least one throeb out of a series, which to date has had all the sensational characteristics of a bill of lading.

HOTEL MEN GLAD OVER THE DELAY

Get an Extra Day Because of Rain--Some World's Series Sidelights.

By LES CONKLIN
St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 9.—The Yankees got the first break of the series when Wilson dropped and throw to the plate on Sunday and the St. Louis hotel proprietors got the second break when it rained yesterday. The bed and board moguls will not enjoy the pleasure of soaking tourists double rates for an extra night's lodging.

Due to the corner on the mattress market, late comers were forced to invade the outlying suburbs to obtain quarters. These commuters get back to their rooming houses from the park just in time to start back for the next game. The extra day almost ruined Sam Breadon, who is providing free grub and gingerale for visiting newspaper men. The scribes are eating up the profits like an absconding cashier.

The owner of the St. Louis club runs an automobile agency here, but as yet his expert mechanics have been unable to get the carbon out of the Cardinals' valves. It is learned that reporters, clad in St. Louis uniforms, have been sitting on the Cardinal bench with the regular players. A possible alibi for the sad showing of the Red Birds is that by mistake the scribes have been out there playing instead of the regulars.

After winning three straight, the Yankees were stopped by Jupiter Pluvius. Why not put Jupiter in there instead of the Cards?

With three teeth missing Lou Gehrig has rolled up a batting average of .556 for the first three games. The "toothless terror" is thinking of having all his molars extracted.

"When is the New York pitching staff going to crack?" queries a sport writer. Answer that one and we'll tell you how many eggs there are in a boarding house omelet.

Jess Haines was merely living up to his reputation when he took French leave in a rage after Wilson's errors had gunned up the works in Sunday's game. The leather-faced Ohio mechanic gets angrier than any other pitcher in the major leagues at the mistakes of his team mates. Flint Rhem is almost as touchy as Big Jess in this respect. Once this season he hurled a bag of resin at Thevenow when the latter committed an atrocious bobble. Maybe it's just as well for Wilson that no bats were within Haines' reach when Jimmy made his double error.

Ruth, sliding into Wilson, looked like Herb Jostling cracking a line. The Babe will make a pro football player yet.

Bengough isn't overly fond of fast ball pitching. Against Haines he looked like a pedestrian enroute to a collision with an automobile.

The bull-pen situation at Sportsman's Park isn't calculated to quiet the nerves of a pitcher who finds himself a hole. Relief twirlers came along the first base line, and the plunk of the ball into the mitt of the bull-pen catcher must sound like the crack of doom to the hurler laboring out there in the box.

Seen at the dining table—Flint Rhem drinking Alexander's coffee so that Old Pete won't get overstimulated.

The night life on most of this city's streets consists of one policeman and three night watchmen. All the noise is saved for the ball games.

HOW THEY GOT BEAT

YANKS WEREN'T SO BAD

The more thought that is given to the victory of the New York Yankees in the American League pennant race, the more credit must be given to the team and its manager.

There never was a gamer ball club than the one which staggered in lame and disabled ahead of the Philadelphia Athletics.

The Yanks of 1927, after running away with the league championship and drubbing the Pittsburgh Pirates in the world series, were regarded as one of the greatest teams of all times. The Yanks of 1928, because of the challenge offered them in the last quarter of the race, were not regarded so highly.

Should Have Won More
But the Yanks won 110 games in 1927 and they won 100 games this season. Herb Pennock was out of the game for six weeks and if he had been in service he might have won six more games.

Even with all their bad luck in the late season, the Yankees, with their great fighting heart, remained almost as good a ball club as they were last year.

Green Nine Recovering From "Stiff Neckitis"

Members of the Manchester Green baseball team who were taken "seriously" ill with Stiff Neckitis from gazing at the skyscrapers while in New York were reported much improved today according to Dr. John E. Dwyer.

"Mayor Sam Prentice is the only still one on the 'danger' list now," said Dr. Dwyer this morning after he had visited all of his patients at the Woodbridge Memorial hospital, "but I think he'll recover."

Incidentally, Mayor Prentice's condition was a bit aggravated by the poor showing of the Cardinals. Sam was mad because Miller Huggins wouldn't let the Green team take the place of St. Louis. However somebody had evidently whispered in the Yankee pilot's ear, for he answered, "Beat the Community Club first."

"Woody" Walllett and Jack Linnell were the hard luck finders of the trip. The first inconvenience came when they were awakened about three o'clock in the morning by two room-mates and told that it was time for break 'ast. Linnell and Walllett both dressed and went out, only to have the door locked behind them and forced to wait for the keys when they discovered their error.

Hal Chase and Tom Stowe were blamed for this trick, but both paid the penalty. The boys say that it was the latter who paid $5.00 for a Metropolitan shave and violet ray massage, but the latter refused to confirm the rumor when they discovered their error.

Walllett and Linnell got both second tough break when Bobly Boyce and Joe Prentice, sleeping champions of the gang, forgot to wake up and meet them at the stipulated time for the start of the home journey. As a result, Walllett and Linnell waited at Grand Central Terminal from 1:30 Sunday morning until noon and would have been well on their way. Mayor Prentice had not telegraphed them a bit of carefare.

They say that boys from the "sticks" have big appetites and the Green players no exceptions, especially Jerry Sullivan, Joe Picaut and Herby Stevenson. The gang was continually in a restaurant. Stevenson even brought along a cracker box of sandwiches. Mayor Prentice was also a conspicuous restaurant frequenter. His favorite was "a cup of tay."

Many of the fans who sat about the Manchester Green team were also out of town persons and had not been for some time. Truman Cowles they would not have known who half of the Yanks and Cards were until they read about the game the next day in the papers. Truman kept telling them who this one and that one was as they came to the plate, watching a world series is nothing new for the Green's veteran mascot.

Your correspondent had the pleasure of meeting Davis J. Walsh, sports editor of the International News of which the Herald is a client. Walsh asked the writer how he was fixed a pass and when he told that he had none, Walsh called the writer to one side and slipped him a Western Union operator's pass. "Flash this at the press gate, but don't wear it in the press section unless you want to be a messenger boy," advised Walsh with a laugh.

Many of the Green party took in the shows along the great white way, but Walllett and Linnell spent their idle time (there was little of it) showing the natives a few points about fancy skating at Iceland, New York's famous skating palace. Lefty St. John failed to make the trip with the team, pulling another one of his already too well known last minute stunts. It is understood that the rest of the gang is seriously contemplating giving Lefty a non-to-mild initiation one of these nights. A ducking in Gould's Pond when night becomes Pretty Wife of Yankee Star Sees Cards Go Down in Defeat.

One of the most interested spectators at the two world series games between Yankees and Cards at New York was Mrs. Tony Lazzeri, wife of the star second baseman of the Yankees. Of course, she was rooting for the Yankees and probably praying at the same time that her Tony wouldn't hurt that shoulder of his and be forced out of the championship battles.

REC FIVE STARTS PRACTICE TONIGHT

Stavitsky Not to Join Team; Shirer, McCann, Dowd, Boggini Newcomers.

The doors to the 1928-29 basketball season will be opened for practice tonight when the Rec Five, winners of the town championship last season, will workout at the Rec gym. It was announced last night by Manager Ben Cluse.

Plans call for opening the home season on Thanksgiving night with an opponent to be announced later. Manager Cluse also stated that George Stavitsky had decided not to cast his lot with the Rec this season, notwithstanding. Among the new men out for the team are "Hank" McCann, former local high school and St. Thomas Seminary star, Billy Dowd, captain of the high school team last season, Nino Boggini, another member of the school team and Tom Shirer, former Lafayette college star.

Veterans back are Harold Madden, Roy Norris, Ty Holland, Cap Bissett, Everett Strange and Carroll Barrett. Tommy Faulkner, another member of last year's machine, is recovering from a serious illness and may get into town later in the season. Anyone in town is welcome to tryout. Practice starts at seven o'clock.

DON'T NEED ANY OUTFIELDERS

The Pittsburgh Pirates are not in the market for outfielders. They think the two Waners are good for years, and they have enough players around for the third outfield berth.

Yanks Two Man Team Insists Sports Editor

Stowe Says Bambino Twins Have Caused Nearly Every Yankee Run Directly or Indirectly; Sherdel Deserves Victory.

By TOM STOWE

Say what you will, the Yankees are a two-man ball team! Irrespective of the masterful pitching performances of Waite Hoyt, George Pipgras and Tom Zachary, it has been the punching power of the Bambino Twins, Babe Ruth and Lou Gehrig, that has been the propelling factor in carrying them over the top in the first three engagements. Without baseball's two foremost surety, it hasn't been the individual efforts of Lazzeri, Dugan, Koenig, Robertson, Paschal and Durst that has enabled the Hugginites to up-set the dope bucket when the Cardinals entered the series odds-on favorite!

As this writer sikes up the argument in a nutshell, the Yankees in full strength are the greatest baseball team the world has ever known but as it is, crippled and grimed with sheer grit, confidence and grim determination that has enabled the Yanks to cover themselves with glory when the going seemed the darkest. And the spark plug in these factors has been Ruth & Gehrig Company. Without them, we repeat, the Yankees would probably be at the oblivion level now held by the Red Birds.

This eulogy of the Bambino Twins is not offered as a knock against the ability of the other members of the Yankee team, but rather as a personal opinion as to the main reason for New York's somewhat unexpected showing. One can't help wondering, however, the real reason for the Yankees losing their 13 1/2 game lead over the Athletics; whether it was unavoidable or intentional. Perhaps the truth of the matter is that the American League is faster than the National. At any rate, the Yankees surely are superior to the older circuit.

For some time there has been talk of disapproval of Bill McKee as manager of the Cardinals and it would not be at all surprising to see a new man at the helm when the 1929 campaign rolls around. However, in justice to McKee, it is not to be taken for granted how he is to blame for his showing to a superior outfit. The Cards have been in a fog since they came to New York and haven't hit the size of their hats not to mention falling to perform in expected fashion afield.

Surely Sherdel deserves to win a game from the Yankees. He has pitched three heart-breaking contests against them, to include the 1926 series, and in each case might have won had his team given him real support. But if Sherdel does win, it looks next to impossible to pick three more winning pitchers from his tattered and torn tribe. Yes, it seems all over but the shouting, but time alone will tell. The Cardinals have a chance to win unlimited fame and praise by taking the next four games, but the chance is a mighty remote one.

MAJORS TO PRACTICE AT 7:30 TONIGHT

The Majors football team will practice tonight at the Hilliard street grounds. Those wishing to try out for the team must be on the field no later than 7:30 p. m. Coach Custer is giving the team some very strenuous workouts and they appear to be a very promising team.

POTATO FIELD DAY
 IN ELLINGTON, OCT. 17

The annual Hartford County potato field day will be held at Berman's Farm, Ellington, Oct. 17, 10:00 a. m., announces Chas. D. Lewis, County Agricultural Agent for the Hartford County Farm Bureau.

Hartford County has joined with Tolland for the 1928 potato field day," says Mr. Lewis, "and we expect that potato growers, dealers, and supply men will gather from all over New England, New York and New Jersey to witness the large machinery demonstration that has been arranged by several local machinery dealers and see the potato field on Mr. Berman's farm."

New London County's champion potato picker has challenged the whole territory to beat him picking up the tubers and a contest has been arranged to decide who can pick up the most potatoes in a given length of time. Suitable prizes are offered.

The usual guessing contest will be held when everyone present will write his estimate of the yield on a given area and then a group of judges will weigh the potatoes and determine the correct yield.

A. W. Manchester, Farm Management Specialist, Storrs, will make a short talk immediately following luncheon on the potato outlook.

The local potato committee composed of Thomas Burgess, Wapping, J. B. Lewis, Southington, Louis L. Grant, Buckland and Fred V. Williams, Buckland have charge of the arrangements for the field day and instructed the county farm bureau to send out 1000 circular letters announcing the occasion.

DEMOCRATS PICK HEALEY
 FOR BOARD OF RELIEF

Select Buckland Man When Asked by Selectmen to Name a Candidate.

The Democratic town committee met last night and at the request of the selectmen selected a nominee to fill the vacancy on the Board of Relief caused by the expiration of the term of Edward D. Lynch. While the selectmen have the appointment of the Board of Relief and there is nothing to prevent them from appointing a Republican, making all three members of the board of that persuasion, it has been the custom since the offices were made appointive to have the board composed of two Republicans and one Democrat.

Lynch was the Democratic member of the board for many years. He was the senior member of the board, but did not desire the appointment for another three year term.

The Democratic town committee last night named Andrew Healey of Buckland as the place of Lynch. He is a member of the Buckland School District Committee and is superintendent of the large tobacco plantation of the Connecticut Sumatra Tobacco Company and with his special knowledge of tobacco land values it is claimed in his behalf that he would be a valuable addition to the board.

Having a beautiful complexion doesn't leave much time for cleaning up the house.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE:
 (411) Our Presidents
 Sketches by Kessey; Synopsis by Braucher

Claes van Roosevelt, destined to be the grandfather of one of America's greatest presidents, came to America from the Netherlands in the middle of the seventeenth century. One of his sons, Theodore, married Martha Bullock of Georgia. Theodore Roosevelt, future president, was born in the house sketched above in East Twentieth street, New York City, Oct. 27, 1858.

SWIMMING CLASSES

Classes in senior life saving swimming instruction for men start at the East Side Recreation Center tomorrow night, from 7 to 8 o'clock. Frank C. Busch will be in charge. Mr. Busch says it is important for persons to have at least some knowledge of resuscitation work.

The adults' boxing class at the West Side Rec starts at 7 o'clock tonight and has another hour session Thursday night. Adult beginner's swimming lessons at the East Side Rec starts tonight, 8 to 8:45. Mr. Busch will be in charge of both.

Theodore Roosevelt entered Harvard College in 1876 and was graduated with honors four years later. While in college he continued exercises to build up his body and was always fond of hunting, horseback riding and other outdoor sports. Soon after leaving college he married Miss Alice Lee of Boston and began the study of law.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

SENSE and NONSENSE

When one wants the radio the most is when there is the most blash on it.

At Home Many a Manchester man often turns into a static-tician after dinner.

Still, the radio announcer who says "good night" so sweetly may go home and tell his own kids to shut up and go to sleep.

Radio will never take the place of newspapers. You can't swat flies or paper the pantry shelves with a radio set.

All is not lost. It is still possible to find communities where the game of billiards is considered wicked.

The Answers is Always the Same

We want all our readers to try this out and see if everyone will get the same total: In what year were you born?.... What is your age? In what year did you take your present position?.... How many years have you worked at this job? Total 3856

Groom (showing his new home to a friend, with great pride): This bedroom suite goes back to Louis XIV. Friend (who has been married five years): Humph! That's nothing! My whole dining room suite goes back to the installment house next week.

A friend who claims he had just secured a job, tried to borrow a dollar the other day. He said: "You can't fool me. I know what the job is. You are learning the touch system."

First Clerk: "Tom, what is the difference between vision and sight?"

Second Clerk: "When my sister goes out in the evening she's a vision; but when she gets up in the morning she's a sight."

"Pa," said Clarence, "what is a super-human?"

"He's one, my son," replied his dad, "who still can think of it as a pleasure car while changing a tire in a pouring rain."

Wormsley bought a new shirt, and on a slip of paper inside he found the name and address of a girl with the words, "Please write and send photograph." Think he had a romance, he sent his picture and wrote a note. In due time the answer came. It was: "I was curious to see what sort of a gink would wear such a cheap shirt."

When a girl is chummy with her mother, she can always get along pretty well without a chaperone.

Boss: "Here it is Monday. Tomorrow will be Tuesday, and the next day Wednesday. The whole week half gone and nothing done yet!"

When suspicion comes in at the door love flies out the window.

LETTER GOLF

NOT POPULAR IN GOLF

LOUD TALK isn't very popular on the tee or green, but there is no reason why it should be barred from letter golf. It makes a tricky par six and one solution is on another page.

Grid for Letter Golf with words LOUD and TALK.

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You can change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Single words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

She reminds me of a girl on a magazine cover because I only see her once a month.

It is said a woman can do most everything with a man except do without him.

THE TINYMITES STORY BY HAL COCHRAN - PICTURES BY KNICK

The bird house, slow but sure took form. One bird said, "That will keep us warm. It's going to be a big one, and there's room enough for all. My, what a dandy place to hide. I've never seen a place so wide, and from the floor up to the roof, it's surely nice and tall!" "Of course it is! It's bound to be," said Scouty Tynmite. "You see we never do a job half way. It's best to do it right. With everybody taking part we've made good progress from the start. If we keep on this way I'm sure we'll finish it by night!" Then Clowzy broke right in. Said he, "You're optimistic as can be. You think we ever get tired out. I've no more strength to lose. The rest of you can work away, but I am finished for today." And then he flopped down on the ground to take a little snooze. The other Tynites laughed at him. "He never seems to keep in trim," said Copy, "his ambition's

GALILEE LECTURER
TO BE HERE OCT. 19

Stephen A. Haboush, "Shepherd Boy From Galilee" to Speak at Swedish Church.

Members of the Swedish Lutheran church, their friends, as well as the public in general will have an unusual opportunity to hear and personally meet a native shepherd boy from the far distant shores of Galilee when Stephen A. Haboush speaks at the Swedish Lutheran church next Sunday afternoon, October 14. On Friday evening of next week, October 19th, this "Shepherd Boy From Galilee," as Mr. Haboush is known, will give his famous lecture and travelogue of Jerusalem.

Stephen A. Haboush

The Friday evening program will consist of true stories of Jerusalem and the Far East, illustrated with native costumes and motion pictures of the Holy Land. In addition to this there will be a musical program provided by Madam Haboush, famed as an accompanist of great talent. During this part of the program, there will be several selections on the shepherds' pipes by Mr. Haboush.

Admission tickets are being distributed by the boys and girls of the Swedish Lutheran Sunday school. Both the Sunday afternoon program and the lecture and travelogue on the following Friday will be open to the public.

WAPPING'S PASTOR
GETS NEW CHURCH

Accepts Call of East Hartford Cong'l Church; Leaves Nov. 1.

Rev. Truman H. Woodward, pastor of the Federated Church of Wapping, was last night extended a call from the East Hartford Congregational church, the edifice at "Church Corner," Main street, East Hartford. Rev. Woodward will read his resignation to the Federated Church in Wapping on Sunday.

Mr. Woodward is the son of Rev. and Mrs. W. D. Woodward of Hollister street, this town. He is but 32 years of age, but has gained a remarkably fine reputation in Methodist and Congregational churches throughout Connecticut. He is a lecturer, humorist and preacher of considerable repute.

Mr. Woodward is a Methodist by confirmation, but in accepting the call from the East Hartford church he severs all connection with the Methodists to join the Congregational church. The East Hartford church, though not considered the largest in this section, is a commanding one and a call to its pulpit is a distinct honor. The pulpit has been unoccupied since the death of the pastor, Rev. Dr. P. Miles Snyder.

Mr. Woodward expects to be able to occupy his new pulpit by November 1.

K. OF C. BUILDING BODY
TO WIND UP AFFAIRS

The Board of Directors of Campbell Council Knights of Columbus Building Association has called a meeting of the stockholders for Friday evening, Nov. 2, to dissolve and wind up the affairs of the corporation. The K. of C. building and which constituted its only holding, owned by the corporation, having been sold to The Herald, there is no further need of the corporation. The Council will occupy new quarters in the State Theater building, part of which will be ready by the latter part of this week. A special effort is being made to have the social room ready by Friday, Oct. 12, Columbus Day.

Although a majority of the stockholders have already voted in favor of the sale, Campbell Council, K. of C., at a meeting last night authorized its newly elected grand knight, Willbrod Messier, to vote the stock that was held by the council.

"GOOD THINGS TO EAT"
BOW-WOW! MEOW!
 High meat costs are a bit tough on Tige and the Kitty-cat. Most folks are pretty cagey, nowadays, about their purchases of meat. They don't buy as they did when beefsteak was half its present price. Which puts the family cat and dog out of luck. So far.
 But that's only a part of the way. There didn't use to be such perfectly fascinating prepared dog and cat foods as there are nowadays. Take the Old Trusty line of dog foods, for instance. There's the Old Trusty All-Territor food. Any dog can thrive on it, even puppies, and it's especially effective when mixed with carrots or spinach or anything like that. There are special Old Trusty Puppy biscuits, too, as well as Old Trusty Dog Biscuits. And here's the point the Old Trusty people make. They insist that their dog foods can be eaten by human beings without any ill effects. Of course folks don't usually eat up their dog's chow, but it's good enough so that they could.
 Then there's the Ken-J-Ration, which comes in cans and looks and smells like a particularly delicious meat and vegetable hash. They put something in it—maybe it's catnip—that makes cats go to it with all sorts of happy noises. Lately, since the price of liver went up so high, we're selling simply loads of it at Pinehurst.
 But the dogs and cats aren't the whole family, no matter how great pets. The humans have to eat, also. And we're offering, for them, a particularly attractive special on LAMB CHOPS—both RIB CHOPS, at 49 cents, and LOIN CHOPS at 59 cents.
 Some of the nicest, whitest, firmest FRESH PORK that ever came to town—all cuts.
 Some specially fine BRISKETS of CORNED BEEF.
