

SEC. MELLON EXPOSES SMITH ON 'ECONOMY'

In Smashing Reply to Sedalia Speech Treasury Head Shows Governor's Com- plete Ignorance of Na- tion's Financial Affairs.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Within less than twenty-four hours after he had been challenged Secretary of the Treasury Mellon struck back last night at Governor Alfred E. Smith's speech at Sedalia, Mo., in which the Democratic candidate for president attempted to prove that the economy achievements of the Coolidge administration were the outstanding false note in the present Republican presidential campaign.

In language entirely new for the normally diplomatic secretary of the treasury, Mr. Mellon declared the Democratic candidate's whole address exhibited the most superficial knowledge of what has actually taken place, "and in citing figures he has been guilty of what even the most charitably-minded would have to describe as inaccuracies."

Ten-Page Statement

Secretary Mellon's retort, issued in the form of a formal ten-page statement, constituted a direct reply to Governor Smith's speech, in which the Governor challenged the secretary of the treasury, Herbert Hoover, the Republican candidate for president, or any other member of the Coolidge administration to disprove his charge that Coolidge economy was a myth and a fabric of misrepresentations.

Item by item, Mr. Mellon proceeded to answer. He categorically refuted instances of alleged misrepresentation the Democratic candidate cited in his address in support of his charges. He chided the governor for attempting to belittle the smaller economies contributed by officers of this administration whose subordinate positions made large savings possible. All, he declared, were evidences of the example set by President Coolidge at the top.

"Deal in Facts"

In conclusion he asserted: "The business of the United States government is the greatest business enterprise in the world. Knowledge of it is not to be acquired hastily during the course of a few months' campaign. It is no reflection on Governor Smith's ability that he inadequately informed as to the business of the federal government. What might reasonably be asked of him, however, is that he refrain from charging others with misrepresentation and bad faith until he has adequately informed with his subject he has placed himself in a position to deal with it in terms of facts."

REPUBLICANS STOP CAMPAIGN WHISPER

Records Show That Herbert Hoover Always Was An American Citizen.

Washington, Oct. 18.—The long whispering attack on the American citizenship of Herbert Hoover, started during the Republican prevention campaign and continued by Democratic spokesmen since his nomination, was silenced effectively today following a formal announcement by the State Department that "there never has been the slightest question of Mr. Hoover's American citizenship."

"The fact that Hoover spent many years abroad in the employment of British engineering firms was the basis of campaign whispers that Hoover had lost his American citizenship. Only once previously during the campaign had this story been brought into the light of political debate and that was when Hoover's visit to Elizabethton, Tenn. On that occasion, former Governor Alf Taylor, of Tennessee, declared Hoover had been offered a British title to become a British citizen and that his reply was "he preferred to be beloved and his body cremated, rather than to lose his American citizenship."

Report Unfounded

The state Department, in silencing this campaign libel, declared it twice had investigated Hoover's citizenship, once in 1920 and more recently in response to a newspaper inquiry. The department reported that Hoover had registered in 1908 at the American consulate in London as an American citizen, in response to an order by the late President Roosevelt that all American citizens living abroad should be registered by the consular offices. It further stated Hoover had given

WORLD TRADE TO BOOM IN A FEW YEARS

And America Must Get Its Share of It, Herbert Hoover Tells a Group of Ex- porters Today.

Washington, Oct. 18.—World trade will boom enormously in the next few years and the federal government must cooperate with business to secure a fair share of the increase for America, Herbert Hoover declared today in a talk to a group of exporters who called at the headquarters to pledge him their support.

Hoover declared the primary factor in the stability of American business and in the continuation of employment was the extension of foreign trade.

"For the first time in the history of government," said Hoover, "government has been placed on the basis of cooperation rather than on a basis of compulsion. You know the vast number of committees that we have set up in every single export, not formal committees but actual working committees who have developed a coordination of trade activities and expanded the government facilities incidental to their work, thereby developing a strategy and a technique in trade expansion such as the world has never seen. I think the results show in our trade every day."

Great Benefits

Hoover said one of the great benefits of the cooperation between government and business came in educating the public mind to the necessity of trade, he added, has brought an increase of 500,000 employees in the export trade alone.

"In the next few years the world is going to expand in its demand enormously," Hoover added, "and our problem is to get our share of the expansion. We only want a fair share of the world's growth and expansion in trade every day."

"I feel it is going to be and must be one of the most important concerns of the government during the next four years that we maintain the position in world trade which we have already secured."

George W. Wickerson, ex-attorney general, also addressed a conference with Hoover.

"It is no reflection on Smith as governor of New York to say that Hoover is so far better qualified by his national and world wide experience to administer the office of president than Gov. Smith that there should be the difficulty on the part of any citizen to determine his course in this election."

MAN INSTANTLY KILLED WHEN STRUCK BY AUTO

Was About to Open Gate When Hit and Tossed Against a Pole.

New Milford, Conn., Oct. 18.—William Chapin, 68, was almost instantly killed today when struck by a car on the Danbury road, five miles south of the village and tossed against a telephone pole. Valentine, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., was coming south. Chapin, confused, stepped into the path of the car. The car went out of control and crashed within a few feet of where Chapin's body lay.

Boy, Girl To Fight Duel With Typewriters Tonight

New York, Oct. 18.—Madison Square Garden, that modern Roman arena that has witnessed the blood and gore of many a contest, tonight will be the scene of one of the strangest battles of its colorful history—the duel between a sleek haired young man and a pretty, determined young girl. Their instruments of combat will be the clattering keyboards of two typewriters.

ZEPPELIN TO TOUR THROUGH MID-WEST

Starts Next Thursday on Trip to as Far as St. Louis—Then Home.

New York Oct. 18.—The German dirigible Graf Zeppelin will make a 48-hour tour of middle western American cities the end of next week before returning to Friedrichshafen, it was definitely decided today by Dr. Hugo Eckener, commodore of the airship, according to an announcement made by Hugh Allen, representative of the Goodyear-Zeppelin Corporation of America.

Dr. Eckener was swayed in making his decision, it is understood, by the urgent invitation of a number of American cities that he pay them a visit by air with his first trans-Atlantic passenger dirigible rather than by the importunities of German officials who want the Graf Zeppelin back in Berlin as a feature of the Air Congress there.

Present Plans

According to the plans formulated today, subject to weather and other conditions, the Graf Zeppelin will leave Lakehurst at dawn on next Thursday and fly to Detroit, Chicago, St. Louis and as many other cities enroute as possible. The dirigible will return to Lakehurst by sunset on Friday to take on a supply of "blau" gas for the trans-Atlantic flight to Friedrichshafen which will be undertaken as soon as the dirigible is ready, possibly as late as dawn on Monday, October 25.

Meanwhile Dr. Eckener will visit Philadelphia, Washington and Chicago by train. He is reported to be interesting American capital in the formation of a $14,000,000 corporation to maintain a trans-Atlantic passenger and mail service in super-dirigibles. Conferences with unnamed financiers are scheduled to be held at Lakehurst today, in Philadelphia tomorrow and in Chicago next Tuesday in this connection.

It is Dr. Eckener's wish that Captain Hans von Schiller, a grandson of the German poet, pilot the course of the Graf Zeppelin will take inland over several states. This course must remain elastic to be changed as weather reports during progress of the flight dictate and no set itinerary can be made.

Dr. Eckener is anxious to take his big dirigible over as many as possible of the cities which have re-

VON HUENEFELD PLANE IS DOWN IN JAPAN

Berlin, Oct. 18.—The plane in which Baron Von Huenefeld, of the Bremen's crew, and Pilot Lindner are attempting a flight from Berlin to San Francisco, crashed in a thunder storm in a suburb of Tokio at 2:30 o'clock this morning (Japanese Time), and was badly damaged, according to word received here from Tokio. The flyers, who had hopped off at Shanghai at ten o'clock last night (Chinese Time) were unhurt.

HICKMAN IS CALM ON EVE OF DEATH

Says He Is Not Afraid to Die—Thanks Judge for Sentencing Him.

San Quentin Prison, Calif., Oct. 18.—With scarcely 24 hours to live, William Edward Hickman, condemned kidnaper and slayer of 12-year-old Marion Parker today nonchalantly awaited the death drop in his cell opposite the execution chamber in San Quentin prison.

From his cell in the death house the "Fox," who must die at ten o'clock Friday morning, made his last statement to the outside world. "I'm not afraid to die. I'll go quietly to the top of the gallows and take my medicine. I've made it right with God and this business of Friday morning is to me a privilege, it means the end."

Was All Alone

"There's something peculiar about me," Hickman said, "that crime—that Parker crime—I never could 'dope' out why I did it. I did the whole thing myself, too. All this talk about there being somebody else is pure bunk."

Hickman showed anxiety concerning his mother, during his conversations he frequently asked his attorney and Warden Holohan whether or not his mother would come to see him before he dies. He is doomed to disappointment. Mrs. Eva Hickman is in hiding, in the country near Kansas City, he was unable to make the trip west.

The "Fox" today wrote a letter to Judge Trabuco, who sentenced him. According to Warden Holohan the letter was one of thanks to the judge for imposing the death penalty.

PASTOR'S SON DIVORCED

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 18.—Charles Elwood Kramer, son of Rev. Charles Kramer, pastor of the First Universalist church here, was divorced by his wife today. They were married on November 10, 1924 by Kramer's father in the Kramer home here when the son was a student at Yale.

Mrs. Kramer told Judge E. C. Simpson, in Superior Court today that her husband ignored her from the time of their marriage until she was forced to leave him four months afterward. Kramer is a teacher in a New Jersey school while Mrs. Kramer is housekeeper in the College Club here. Judge Simpson's decree included custody of the Kramer's son, and alimony of eight dollars a week.

NO WORD ABOUT MACDONALD SINCE HE STARTED ON HIS HOP

MacDonald is Using Tiny Plane In His Attempt to Span Ocean.

The De Havilland "Moth" plane in which Commander H. C. MacDonald hopped off at Harbor Grace, N. F., yesterday at 1:21 p. m. (11:51 a. m., Eastern Standard Time) is the smallest in which a trans-Atlantic flight was ever attempted.

Weight (empty) 800 pounds.
Wing spread—26 feet.
Engine—85 horse power.
Flying range of plane—about 2,600 miles.
Speed—can make 110 miles hourly.
Equipment—Carries neither wireless nor pontoons.
Distance of attempted flight—2,000 miles.

GOVERNOR BEHIND PROBE OF ROGER WATKINS CASE

Urged Alcorn to Have Grand Jury Probe Matter, State Bank Commissioner Ship- pee Says.

Hartford, Conn., Oct. 18.—When Hugh M. Alcorn, state's attorney for Hartford county, called for a Grand Jury to investigate the doings of Roger W. Watkins as a broker in Connecticut, he was acting on the recommendation of Governor John H. Trumbull.

Such was the outright statement of Lester E. Shippee, state banking commissioner here today. Mr. Shippee declared he was with the governor and the state's attorney when the governor urgently recommended that the Grand Jury be summoned.

Meanwhile Governor Trumbull, just before noon, issued a statement concerning his own connection with the Watkins affair, declaring his friends knew his reputation, that he stood on that reputation, and that he would enter into no controversy with anyone on the matter.

His Statement

The governor's statement follows: "I have lived here all my life. The reputation which I have, the worldly goods which I may possess have been acquired here."

"Anybody who is acquainted with me knows that I would never knowingly allow the use of my name for any questionable financial promotion."

"I propose to enter into no dis-

BOSTON'S CHINATOWN NOW AN ARMED CAMP

Two Dead and One Injured in Latest Tong War—White Girl Arrested.

Boston, Mass., Oct. 18.—The Chinese quarter in this and several other New England cities took on the semblance of armed camps today in an effort to prevent further bloodshed in the war between the rival gangs. Hatred men and gunmen imported from New York here killed and another seriously wounded, others of that trade have barricaded themselves in their shops.

A woman arrested with a Chinese in a raid was said to be Helen Bradshaw, 25, former sweetheart of Stephen J. Hoppe, now serving life sentence for murder. She was charged with being a suspicious person.

Boston's Chinatown was teeming with police and a powerful automobile containing police and Hip Sing lieutenants was patrolling the streets warning laundrymen to beware of attacks.

The toll here in the battle of Tongts today stood at two dead, another wounded, two held on charges of murder, one man charged with murderous attack, and two others charged with being gunmen.

SMITH AT CHICAGO, GETS A BIG HAND

No Parade or Speech But Crowds Pack Streets to Meet Him on Arrival.

Chicago, Oct. 18.—Gov. Al Smith came back to big city sidewalks today after a week spent in rapid traveling through the cotton, corn and tobacco belt.

He is on the trail of the 29 electoral votes of Illinois, and he will stay on it for three days here in Chicago. Moreover, he is confident that he has a good chance to win them three weeks hence, despite the traditional Republicanism of the state.

Has No Radio

The fact that the plane carried no wireless was grasped as one reason why there had been no word about the plane, but when the day passed and no steamship reported sighting the little craft, the apprehension grew that it had been forced down into the ocean.

Mrs. MacDonald remained at her home in Queens Gate, Kensington, hoping for news of her husband. She refused to let her hope nor would she allow herself to believe that he had joined that little band of intrepid souls—both men and women—who dropped from the sky into eternity while pitting their frail will against the dangerous elements of a non-stop trans-Atlantic flight.

On Even Terms

Both Donovan and George N. Peck, Illinois farm leader, who was active in the promotion of the Lowden candidacy at the Kansas City convention, declared that Gov. Smith will come up to the Cook county line in November on even terms with Herbert Hoover, and that Cook county will give him a majority of 150,000 votes.

The Republicans, of course, publicly poo-poo these Democratic claims. But the Democratic leaders who welcomed Gov. Smith to the state stoutly insist upon the correctness of their reports, and asserted that November would prove it. At any rate they are extremely confident and sanguine, and the Republicans are privately a little worried. Some of the G. O. P. leaders are insisting that Herbert Hoover make a speech here enroute to California about Nov. 1.

Big Ovation

Gov. Smith received a tremendous ovation upon his arrival here late last night. Ten thousand people massed about Union station to welcome him, and the police had literally to fight their way out of the station with the governor, in their midst. Without any attempt at parading, the Democratic nominee was whisked to the Congress hotel through streets lined with people and red street flares.

Several thousand people gathered outside the hotel in Michigan boulevard and gave vent to their enthusiasm by making a public bonfire in the street of copies of a local Republican morning paper, which printed a cartoon quoting a Republican elephant as saying it was a good thing for the G. O. P. that all the people who came out to see Smith wouldn't vote for him.

Grandmother Cannot Stop Chaplin's New Film Star

Hollywood, Cal., Oct. 18.—Wild horses couldn't tear the contract with Charlie Chaplin loose from Virginia Cherrill, much less a mere grandmother.

When Mrs. A. M. Cherrill, in Chicago today learned her granddaughter had just secured the much coveted role as Chaplin's leading lady, she emphatically voiced her disapproval, it was reported.

"That's just too bad," declared Virginia, as she boarded a train back to Chicago.

"I'm twenty and able to take care of myself," Virginia is enroute to Carthage, Ill., where she will pick up her mother, Mrs. Blanche W. Cherrill, and return to Hollywood.

ENGLISH FLYER ATTEMPTS FLIGHT IN SMALL PLANE

Twenty-four Hours After Start London Begins to Give Up Hope—Is Hours Overdue at Irish Coast—Had 110 Gallons of Gas Aboard But No Wireless—Planned to Complete Trip in 20 Hours—Fear Grows That He Was Forced Down Over the Atlantic—Wife Refuses to Give Up Hope.

London, Oct. 18.—At five o'clock this afternoon, 24 hours had elapsed since Commander H. C. MacDonald, the young British aviator "who would a Lindbergh be," hopped off at Harbor Grace, N. F., in his little De Havilland Moth plane to attempt a non-stop solo flight to Croydon Air Field, and nothing had been heard of him.

MacDonald had planned to average 10 miles an hour, negotiating the 2,000 miles in about 20 hours. Failure of any ships to report sighting him has begun to cause fears for his safety.

The air ministry announced that it had received no news whatsoever as to the progress or fate of the aviator.

MacDonald carried approximately 110 gallons of gasoline and had expected to get about 20 miles out of each gallon unless held up by strong headwinds. The "Moth" was capable of 110 miles an hour, but it was assumed that the airman would attempt to hold to a steady speed of about 100 miles an hour. It was scheduled to reach the Irish coast early in the morning and Croydon about noon, making the 2,000 miles in approximately 20 hours.

When darkness fell this evening and no word had been received fears became acute.

Has No Radio

The fact that the plane carried no wireless was grasped as one reason why there had been no word about the plane, but when the day passed and no steamship reported sighting the little craft, the apprehension grew that it had been forced down into the ocean.

Mrs. MacDonald remained at her home in Queens Gate, Kensington, hoping for news of her husband. #### Enough Fuel

His plane was fully loaded with fuel. Normally, the moth plane carries about 100 gallons but extra fuel tanks had been installed in MacDonald's plane to give it a flying radius estimated at from 3,000 to 3,500 miles. The small four-cylinder motor consumes only six gallons an hour. The plane weighs only about 800 pounds fully loaded and its wing-spread is only 26 feet.

NO NEWS

Queenstown, Irish Free State, Oct. 18.—Despite wireless inquiries to ships at sea, the Queenstown radio station was without news of the MacDonald trans-Atlantic flight at mid-noon.

The channel storm did not extend this far west. The weather here was clear, bright and sunny and visibility was excellent.

BAD WEATHER

Queenstown, Ireland, Oct. 18.—With weather conditions off the southern coast of Ireland distinctly unfavorable today, it was feared Commander H. C. MacDonald would encounter heavy going in the latter part of his journey across the Atlantic in his tiny Moth plane.

Moderate westerly winds which would slow his plane down somewhat and overcast skies which would hamper him in keeping his course were in evidence today. In the early hours of the morning, a heavy downpour of rain fell in this region.

ENGLAND ANXIOUS

Plymouth, England, Oct. 18.—Up to mid-afternoon the naval air stations were without any news of the progress of Commander H. C. MacDonald, young English aviator, who hopped off at Harbor Grace, N. F., yesterday afternoon to attempt a solo flight to Croydon.

Fears for the safety of the aviator are arising owing to a south-westerly gale which is raging over the English channel and the Irish sea.

A gale warning has been issued for the eastern Atlantic through which region MacDonald would have to pass to reach his goal.

MacDonald is expected to follow the course from Newfoundland to the western coast of Ireland first used by Alcorn and Brown in 1919. He is well known here for his daring. He received the Distinguished Service Cross before retiring from the Navy in 1925. His experience in navigating aided in his trans-Atlantic venture. Last May MacDonald attempted to fly from here to India but was forced down at Bagdad. On the way back he was forced down on a desert and held prisoner by an Arab tribe until rescued by an Italian armored car.

All vessels in the northern shipping lanes have been notified of MacDonald's flight but no reports of his having been sighted have been received here.

Wife Not Worried

The flier's wife learned of the start of her husband's venture through a radio announcement. Although anxious, she said she felt confident he would be successful. She knew when he left England that he intended making the flight.

SEC. MELLON EXPOSES SMITH OF "ECONOMY"

Text of Statement
The text of Mr. Mellon's statement follows:

"Under ordinary circumstances I would not think it worth while to answer a purely political speech. But in the address delivered at Sedalia, Mo., last night by the Democratic candidate for the Presidency, he undertook to challenge my good faith and to accuse me of presenting a false picture to the nation. He included in this charge the director of the Bureau of the Budget and the under-secretary of the treasury.

"In other words, Governor Smith accuses the financial officers of the government of carrying on a deliberate campaign of misrepresentation intended to conceal the true picture of the nation's finances. This will not do. Before a responsible man makes such a charge he should have a thorough and intimate knowledge of all the facts, and be able to support it with clear and convincing proof.

"Now, perhaps the most accurate statement in Governor Smith's entire speech is the one in which he said that the fiscal reports of the federal finances were a Chinese puzzle to him. His whole address exhibits the most superficial knowledge of what has actually taken place, and in citing figures he has been guilty of what even the most charitably-minded would have to describe as 'inaccuracies.'

Wise Spending is Economy
"Let me begin by correcting Governor Smith's conception of what this administration understands by economy in government. Economy is not just saving, but wise spending, the elimination of waste, the promotion of efficiency and businesslike methods, the building up of a sense of responsibility to the taxpayer on the part of all public servants, the careful management of the government's finances, as exemplified, for instance, by a program of steady debt reduction with consequent relief from the heavy burden of interest charges.

"Under such a definition, expenditures might actually increase from year to year and yet the nation receive an economical and businesslike administration of its public affairs.

"If Governor Smith understood the meaning of economy in government in this sense he would not point the finger of scorn and ridicule at the items of minor savings effected by individuals holding subordinate positions in the federal government. For instance, he ridiculed the savings of $14 by the American consul at Curacao. It might have occurred to the governor that the opportunities for saving were probably limited in this small office and that the $14 represented all that that particular individual could save by the proper administration of his office.

"Governor Smith thinks that the savings effected by another officer of the government by turning out lights when they were not needed is fit only for comedy and laughter.

Following President's Example
"Doesn't he realize that only small amounts are appropriated year by year. He is apparently under the impression that this practice was recently inaugurated for political purposes.

System Established in 1887
"Since 1887 the House of Representatives has followed the sound rule of not permitting an appropriation for any given purpose unless that purpose had previously been authorized. Moreover, the Governor by the use of a little diligence could have ascertained that in so far as public buildings are concerned it is not necessary that the amounts authorized specifically for projects be appropriated for in their entirety at once, as the Secretary of the Treasury is given authority to enter into contracts to the full limit of cost in each instance.

Therefore, the estimated submitted to Congress are simply in such amounts as will provide adequate funds to carry each project until the following appropriation can have become a law. It is all simply and readily understandable by those having knowledge of the government business.

MORE MORE
"The governor cites a number of instances in which buildings sites were acquired some years ago on which no building has to date been constructed. The fact is that the last omnibus public building bill, the items for which were made up by the committees of the House and Senate, became a law on March 4, 1913. Work under that bill progressed steadily until the conditions brought about by the World War caused the then Secretary of the Treasury, in the interest of conserving man power, materials and transportation facilities for war purposes, to suspend the letting of contracts for new buildings.

Put House in Order
"When the new administration came into power in 1921 the immediate task to be undertaken was putting the government's own house in order; the restoration of economical and businesslike principles of administration; the reduction of the cost of government necessarily followed by relief from the financial burdens of taxation under which the country was staggering and which formed so serious an impediment to the restoration of the economic prosperity of the nation. Until this vital task had been accomplished, no thought could be given to expanding the physical plant of the government.

Once accomplished, the President recommended to the Congress that the time had come for expanding the physical facilities of the Federal Government, but he was unwilling that we should return to the old pork barrel practices of an omnibus public buildings bill. Accordingly, a law was enacted under the terms of which, for the first time in its history, the physical plant of the government would be constructed on the basis of actual requirements, rather than by virtue of the political needs of Congressional districts.

of the government in 1927 cost $200,000,000 more than they did in 1924. I am afraid Governor Smith has been grossly misinformed.

The total ordinary expenditures of the government, which does not include the expenditure payable from postal revenues, aggregated in 1924, $1,828,000,000 and in 1927, $1,857,000,000, or an increase of $29,000,000 and not $200,000,000. The postal expenditures are not included for the very good reason that they are met from postal receipts, which the law requires shall be kept separate and earmarked for postal expenditures.

Except to the extent that there is a deficiency they do not constitute a drain on the general resources of the government. Postal expenditures necessarily increase from year to year with the growth of the country, but increased postal business is accompanied, of course, by increased postal revenues.

$18,000,000 Decrease in 1927
"Total government expenditures, including public debt items, the postal deficiency and operations in special amounts, amounted to $3,506,000,000, in 1924 and in 1927 $3,493,000,000, or a decrease of $13,000,000 in spite of the fact that in 1927 there was expended $115,000,000 for account of the adjusted service certificate fund, intended for the benefit of our veterans, an expenditure which was not made in 1924, and in spite of the fact that debt retirement from ordinary receipts increased by $62,000,000.

This is the second time that Governor Smith has been guilty of an error of this character. In his speech of acceptance, in charging the Republican Administration with the maintenance of useless offices and commissions merely for the benefit of patronage seekers, he made this statement: 'The appropriations for independent bureaus and offices not responsible to any Cabinet officer increased from $3,400,000 in 1914 to $163,000,000 in 1921, and to $556,000,000 in 1928.'

Increase Due to Veteran's Bureau
Governor Smith stopped there. He did not say that of the $556,000,000 expended in 1928, $500,000,000, or all but $56,000,000, can be accounted for by the United States Veteran's Bureau, which had not come into existence in 1914, and whose expenditures in 1921 were comparatively small because the United States Government had not then begun to meet its obligations to its wounded and mutilated veterans. Governor Smith cannot be ignorant of the fact that the large expenditures on the part of the government are not only justifiable but inevitable and irreducible in amount—and yet he would create the impression that these expenditures were due to the maintenance of jobs for patronage seekers. This is a good example of the use of figures, not to present an accurate and truthful picture, but quite the opposite.

"And now let me turn to the Governor's third charge, that public works have been neglected entirely, postponed or started with grossly inadequate appropriations. The Governor states that there is established in Washington what he calls a trick bookkeeping system under which large amounts are authorized while only small amounts are appropriated year by year. He is apparently under the impression that this practice was recently inaugurated for political purposes.

"Governor Smith sought to establish his case by claiming that the reduction in expenditures effected since 1921 was not due to economy and good administration, but to the automatic demobilization of the war-time machine. The trouble with that contention is that the war had been over for two and one-half years when the Republican Administration took control of the government in March 1921. If these savings were inevitable as Governor Smith would have us believe, why hadn't they already been more largely effected?

Praises Budget Bureau
"The Governor states that the wartime expenditures dropped gradually during 1921, 1922 and 1923. The fact is that in the first year in which it was established the Budget Bureau succeeded in paring and pruning costs that had already actually been appropriated for the fiscal year 1922 to the extent of $755,000,000. There was nothing very gradual, automatic or inevitable about that. Something evidently had taken place other than simply an addition of twelve months to the post-war period.

"What had taken place was that a new Administration had come in since the budget system had been established, and for the first time the government found itself equipped with an agency for carrying out a systematic policy of retrenchment and for attacking the problem of waste.

"I take it from Governor Smith's remarks that he considers a comparison between 1921 and 1928 as an unfair basis of comparison, and he himself suggests the years 1924 and 1927 as offering a fair basis. To be sure, he does not hesitate to use the 1921 basis when the figures happen to be favorable to his contention, as he did in the case of the Executive Department and the District of Columbia.

Governor Misinformed, He Says
"Overlooking, however, this inconsistency, and overlooking minor inaccuracies, let me come to the central point of the Governor's speech, to the statement which he says is a pretty good clean, clear-cut statement made without equivocation from which he has 'got nothing to subtract or deduct,' and made 'with the knowledge that the figures are right.' What is that statement? 'All of the departments of the government in 1927 cost $200,000,000 more than they did in 1924. I am afraid Governor Smith has been grossly misinformed.

The total ordinary expenditures of the government, which does not include the expenditure payable from postal revenues, aggregated in 1924, $1,828,000,000 and in 1927, $1,857,000,000, or an increase of $29,000,000 and not $200,000,000.

Except to the extent that there is a deficiency they do not constitute a drain on the general resources of the government. Postal expenditures necessarily increase from year to year with the growth of the country, but increased postal business is accompanied, of course, by increased postal revenues.

$18,000,000 Decrease in 1927
"Total government expenditures, including public debt items, the postal deficiency and operations in special amounts, amounted to $3,506,000,000, in 1924 and in 1927 $3,493,000,000, or a decrease of $13,000,000 in spite of the fact that in 1927 there was expended $115,000,000 for account of the adjusted service certificate fund, intended for the benefit of our veterans, an expenditure which was not made in 1924, and in spite of the fact that debt retirement from ordinary receipts increased by $62,000,000.

This is the second time that Governor Smith has been guilty of an error of this character. In his speech of acceptance, in charging the Republican Administration with the maintenance of useless offices and commissions merely for the benefit of patronage seekers, he made this statement: 'The appropriations for independent bureaus and offices not responsible to any Cabinet officer increased from $3,400,000 in 1914 to $163,000,000 in 1921, and to $556,000,000 in 1928.'

Increase Due to Veteran's Bureau
Governor Smith stopped there. He did not say that of the $556,000,000 expended in 1928, $500,000,000, or all but $56,000,000, can be accounted for by the United States Veteran's Bureau, which had not come into existence in 1914, and whose expenditures in 1921 were comparatively small because the United States Government had not then begun to meet its obligations to its wounded and mutilated veterans. Governor Smith cannot be ignorant of the fact that the large expenditures on the part of the government are not only justifiable but inevitable and irreducible in amount—and yet he would create the impression that these expenditures were due to the maintenance of jobs for patronage seekers. This is a good example of the use of figures, not to present an accurate and truthful picture, but quite the opposite.

"And now let me turn to the Governor's third charge, that public works have been neglected entirely, postponed or started with grossly inadequate appropriations. The Governor states that there is established in Washington what he calls a trick bookkeeping system under which large amounts are authorized while only small amounts are appropriated year by year. He is apparently under the impression that this practice was recently inaugurated for political purposes.

"Governor Smith sought to establish his case by claiming that the reduction in expenditures effected since 1921 was not due to economy and good administration, but to the automatic demobilization of the war-time machine. The trouble with that contention is that the war had been over for two and one-half years when the Republican Administration took control of the government in March 1921. If these savings were inevitable as Governor Smith would have us believe, why hadn't they already been more largely effected?

Benny Conn and Bellhops at Princess

Announcement that Benny Conn and his Bellhops, one of New England's most popular broadcasting dance bands, will be at the Princess ballroom Friday evening for the second of the series of dances that are being sponsored by the "Two Black Crows" has created a mild sensation among the dance fans of this city and surrounding towns who are familiar with Benny Conn's class of music which was so popular with the dancers at Sandy Beach Ballroom during the summer and a big crowd will be on hand to enjoy this musical treat and to witness the second elimination trial in the $50 gold prize fox trot. Two couples qualified last Saturday evening and the judges will select two more couples Friday evening who will meet the first chosen couple in the final Saturday evening, the 27th, when the $50 in gold will be awarded. The large number, who plan to attend this series of dances for which the largest and best dance bands that can be secured are to furnish the music, would indicate a very successful dance period at the Princess.

Gas Rate Explained
About 125 citizens were present at the hearing held last night in the Superior Court room pertaining to the new gas rate. R. W. Porter, vice-president of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting Company, said that the company found it necessary to make an increase from 50 cents a month to $1.50 a month to conduct the business at a profit. The meeting was held following a petition which had been presented to the Common Council three weeks ago asking that the rate increase be taken up with the Public Utilities Commission. It has not been definitely decided whether this action will be taken.

Film Directors Frown But Flock To Talkies

This is the fourth of a series of articles on the new talking movies. Today, the views of leading Hollywood directors are presented.

By DAN THOMAS
Hollywood, Calif., Oct. 18.—More than half of the cinema directors in Hollywood are strongly opposed to these new-fangled movies with loud speaker attachments. But every single one of them wants to make one just the same.

Josef von Sternberg summed up the opinions of the majority of directors when he said:

"I am strongly opposed to talking pictures. I believe that dialogue detracts from the entertainment value of a film. Furthermore the production methods necessitated by the synchronization of sound place too many limitations upon a director. However, I would like to make one just the same. Who wouldn't with the way they are cleaning up at the box office?"

Fitzmaurice Strong for Them
George Fitzmaurice, who has directed many honestly good pictures, has exactly opposite views.

"I welcome the advent of dialogue and sound in pictures," says this director. "They will enable me to do much that has been impossible to do before in silent drama. The limits that bound us before are now removed. Now almost any kind of story may be told cinematically, any stage drama produced far more effectively than on the stage itself. The advantages of the motion picture and the stage as separate media are combined in this new art."

"For a little while audiences are going to be very enthusiastic and easily pleased because of the novel fact that sound comes out of a picture," declares Cecil B. DeMille. "But after that rather short period has passed, the sound picture will no longer be novel and audiences will insist that they really be entertained. Otherwise they will forsake the talkies as readily as they flock to see it."

"It is my feeling that people on the whole prefer to see and hear living persons speak. Their admiration for pictures is based primarily on the pantomime art."

"However, sound is a tremendous thing. Frankly speaking, none of us has yet learned how to use it. When we do, we have a different outlook upon it."

One of the principal reasons that directors are opposed to the advent of talking films is because it eliminates unique camera shots which have done so much to improve pictures during recent years. When sound is being synchronized with a picture, the camera must be housed in a sound-proof compartment so that the clicking sound they make will not be recorded along with the desired words and sound effects. Consequently directors must go back to the old style of shooting—long shot, medium shot and close-up.

King Vidor's View
"It is unfortunate that the voice should be injected into photoplays just at a time when they are finally beginning to get somewhere and just when the public is beginning to accept and understand them," says King Vidor, who will always be remembered for giving us "The Big Parade."

"Sound as an accompaniment for pictures—great! I can see the splendid effects we'll get with sudden and unexpected noises. But to have the characters on the screen use dialogue—not so good. In fact, I should say very bad."

"Pictures have developed many ways of expressing thought by movement. The most charming feature about them has been their silence, the opportunity they afford to the spectator to see his drama, by pantomime and to write in his own words as far as possible."

When I talked to William Wellman, director of "Wings," he answered my questions in this manner:

"Our Swedish maid told me that she didn't like talking films and that she wouldn't ever go to see another one. When I asked her why, she replied that she wouldn't go."

to a theater and hear the ghosts on the screen talk. She was scared to death of them and I believe there are a lot more like her."

"I am not in favor of dialogue being added to the silent drama," says Victor Fleming. "The average man who takes his family to a movie is tired from a day's work and wants to sleep. How can he do that with a loud speaker going full blast all of the time?"

"Also, the average motion picture audience likes to relax and enjoy the film. It can't do that if it has to be alert to catch every word spoken by the characters."

MONDAY: The actors' side of the talkies. Does your favorite star favor them or not? Wait and see.

WASTE OILS FROM AUTOMOBILE OFFER PROBLEM FOR CITIES

Washington.—Disposal of automobile crankcase oil is a problem confronting authorities of metropolitan cities.

The oil, mixed with gasoline and other fluid waste of garages, is highly inflammable and is regarded as a menace to life and property. Virtually every garage which has stores of the discarded lubricant, is a fire-trap. The refuse is regarded as more dangerous when it finds its way into city sewers. Combined with our underground gases it causes explosion from spontaneous combustion and lighted matches tossed in sewer openings.

District of Columbia officials recognize the hazard used motor fuel presents. They sent questionnaires to various American and European cities to learn the method used to discard the oil. With this information they are trying to perfect a practical plan.

Garage owners in the district are forced to store the oil in metal containers and dispose of it the best they might. A quantity still finds its way into the sewers and the Sewer Division is constantly trying to trace the source of the "contraband."

Experts thought they had solved the problem with a plan that the worthless oil would be effective to oil roads. The monkey-wrench was hurled into this plan with the discovery the oil is too inflammable to be carried and sprinkled from motor tanks. This danger also eliminates it from use in oil-burning plants, local officials found.

Twenty-eight cities in the United States prohibit dumping of discarded oil in sewers and 28 require installation of garage traps. Eleven permit the oil to flow in sewers and ten do not demand oil traps in garages. Three cities collect oil refuse, nineteen have commercial firms that gather the waste oil and eight report none of the oil is collected.

GARBER BROTHERS is a unique furniture store. Unique because of the location (a short block from Main Street). Unique because the store is in an old Colonial Building, which was built in 1853. Unique because neither the beautiful entrance nor the reception room suggests a furniture store... but rather a home. Unique because the show rooms are arranged in an entirely different manner. The vast display of furniture is magnificent. Some say there is no furniture store like it between Boston and New York. Others say that it is even more beautiful than metropolitan stores. And most important of all is the fact that people like to shop at Garber Brothers. They like to buy here. And after they have bought they do not hesitate to recommend their friends. You will also like to shop at Garber Brothers. Won't you pay us a visit?

WHACK! ON THE DERBY

If Governor Smith is to appear, by Secretary Mellon's prompt and devastating reply to his sneers at "Coolidge economy" in his Sedalia speech, he certainly had asked for it. If he is made to appear as amazingly ignorant of the facts of government finances, it is because he rushed into attack on grounds with which he was unfamiliar and of which his snapshot impressions were not only inaccurate but utterly mistaken.

None will suppose that Governor Smith wittingly took the risk of misstatements of facts which could be conclusively exposed in an hour, for he is too good a politician not to understand the ruinous effect of such a method of campaigning. So it is fair to assume that he really believed the bulk of the charges of misrepresentation he made at Sedalia. But the fact that he probably did believe them leaves him in a wretched position as a Presidential candidate, because it shows as nothing else in the campaign has shown, how far over his head is this subject of United States government finance.

Secretary Mellon's statement, which is printed elsewhere, speaks for itself. But a peculiarly effective point in it is his reference to the post office building situation in Governor Smith's own city of New York, concerning which, at least, the latter is supposed to know everything. Governor Smith had cited, as an instance of Republican "inefficiency," the alleged fact that in the Borough of Brooklyn the federal government had purchased a post office site for far back as 1925 and that "not a single dollar has ever been appropriated to put a building on it."

HERE'S OUR OPINION Here is a statement and an inquiry which appeared recently in a Western newspaper: How strict should sentences for gross violations of the traffic law be? A Kansas City motorist got drunk and indulged in a mad joyride across town. In this ride he hit two automobiles in succession, ran over and killed a 76-year-old pedestrian, drove away with a mangled and crashed into still another car.

He was caught, brought to trial on a charge of manslaughter. He pleaded guilty; the judge sentenced him to two years in prison. The man's attorneys contended that was a severe sentence. The prosecutor said he thought it was about right. A Kansas City newspaper cries that it was too light. How about it? Is two years too much or too little for a drunkard who pilots a car he cannot control about the crowded streets of a big city, causing one death, wrecking three cars and falling to take more lives only by the whim of chance?

Being invited to express an opinion, the Herald responds. It is our belief that when two years imprisonment is adequate punishment for a person who stands in a window and empties the six loads of a thirty-eight-five revolver into a packed crowd on a sidewalk, it will become adequate in such cases as that cited above.

It is our belief that when two years is adequate punishment for the holdup man who shoots his victim in order to insure his getaway it will be adequate for people like the Kansas City motorist.

It is our belief that the attitude of the vast majority of prosecuting officers and courts of this country, toward the murder of innocent citizens by self-made lunatics at the wheels of automobiles, is the most shameful and most discouraging fact of our present civilization.

People who commit crimes like that of the Kansas City killer are no more adequately treated in being given a two years' sentence than a mad dog is adequately treated who is tied up for two hours and then turned loose again.

DEAFY DOWD

A New York fettle saw the nimble white fingers of Deafy Dowd intrude themselves into the pocket of a citizen in a City Hall Park crowd and so the fettle nailed Deafy then and there. Deafy grinned lugubriously as he opened the hand and displayed his catch to the cop—a nickel and two cents.

That seven cent drag is likely to send Deafy up for the rest of his life, for he isn't merely a fourth offender, he is a twenty-seven time offender according to his record. But it won't be, probably, such a terribly long stretch that Deafy will have to do—he is 74 years old.

Deafy started going to jail, not so young as a good many crooks, but a good while ago—forty-one years ago, in fact, in 1887. He has been doing it ever since.

His police booking shows him to have no home, no relatives, no friends. Now that's a fine way for a man to spend a seventy-four year life, is it not? Slipping around in crowds, fidgeting whatever he can get his fingers on with monkey-like cunning, scared to death all the time, getting caught every little while and going to prison for a lot more of his years than he is ever free!

And in the end, at 74, instead of having some sort of a place in society, even if it is no more than a decent corner in an old-man's home, to be so situated that the cops have to slate him, "No home, no friends."

Deafy Dowd put himself to about as poor use as anybody, if you ask us.

AS TO RADIO PROGRAMS

The Herald does not guarantee the accuracy of the radio programs printed daily in its columns. Like the great majority of newspapers in the United States it devotes a certain amount of space and a certain amount of effort, and goes to a certain amount of expense, to provide a reasonable radio program service. It does not, however, employ a special radio editor, for it would not be warranted in incurring the salary cost of such an employee in return for which neither the newspaper or its readers would receive any substantial benefit.

Like the major part of the daily newspapers of the country it relies, under a routine arrangement, on the broadcasting stations to provide their own programs and to give timely notice by wire or otherwise of changes in the schedules.

Together with most Connecticut newspapers, the Herald's radio program on the date of Governor Smith's Louisville speech, failed to give adequate notice of the radio period in which the speech would be broadcast, though the fact of the broadcasting was announced in general terms. The reason for that is that neither the Herald nor, probably, these other state papers, were notified of the reconstructed program.

Yesterday the same thing occurred again, an impromptu hook-up being arranged in connection with a Grat Zeppein celebration. Notice of the hook-up was sent out by its sponsors, but the radio stations did not supply their amended programs.

killing of one recognized gangster, the serious wounding of a deputy-sheriff of perfectly clean reputation but now an undoubted beer racketeer, and the quick getaway of an orderly to whom the deputy-sheriff's bankroll of over $900 was handed for momentary safe-keeping when the wounded man was being put to bed in a hospital. The illicit booze money is surely raising hob with a lot of different kinds of folks.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Herald. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

HAY FEVER

Judging by the number and type of letters which I am receiving, the annual crop of hay fever or autumnal catarrh is being harvested. Although cases of hay fever may begin as early as June or July, by far the largest number occurs toward the last part of August, and remains until frost. Hay fever patients usually know the exact date when their next attack is going to occur, and regard its approach with apprehension. This disease is characterized by a profuse flow of secretions from the eyes and nose, a general feeling of depression, sleeplessness, intense headaches and sensitiveness to light and a loss of appetite. It is exceedingly troublesome and interferes with work and recreation.

The majority of hay fever victims are intellectually developed or highly nervous individuals. The irritation from pollen or dust is usually blamed for causing this disease, but there must always be two other conditions present, first—a general tendency toward acidosis or catarrh and, secondly—a local congestion of the membranes of the nose.

Even though appearing locally, hay fever is really of constitutional origin and is caused by a failure of most of the organs of elimination to discharge their full quota of toxins so that the mucous membranes, irritated by the excessive quantity of acid excretions, develop a chronic state of engorgement.

Much foolish advice is given as to the treatment for hay fever, but the cure is very simple and depends entirely upon dietetic treatment. The person who has a tendency to this disorder must first cleanse his blood stream by a short fast of several days from all food, and he must drink large quantities of water, possible three or four gallons per day, and use at least one enema of a quart of warm water. Shower baths should be used twice daily, followed by brisk rubbing with a rough towel till the skin fairly glows. This stimulates elimination from the skin and relieves the overworked mucous membranes, and relief will almost immediately be felt.

It is surprising how quickly hay fever will disappear under this regime, but if your sickness has been of many years' standing, the tissues may be so chronically engorged that much time may be required for a cure. The inflamed mucous membranes have been trained in the habit of being eliminated and the cure cannot be greatly hastened except by those treatments which stimulate elimination.

All starches and sugars, and bananas, should be excluded from the diet for a considerable time and in many cases it seems advisable to discontinue milk and cream, although normal amounts of butter may be used.

Even though you are not suffering from a spell of hay fever at present, you can often prevent its future occurrence by following this regime between the periods of attack.

So many people have hay fever that many of the sufferers have banded themselves together in an organization which meets annually so that the members can mutually sympathize. I am serving notice on this association that if they invite me to address them next year at their annual convention, I will guarantee to break up their society if the members will follow my advice, and the following year they will not have enough of their old members to form a committee, let alone an association.

Developing the Chest and Back Question: A Reader asks: "Kindly publish in your column whether or not it is possible for a man twenty-one years of age to develop the chest and back."

Answer: Unless you are greatly deformed it will be impossible for you to develop your chest and back to perfect shape through taking certain exercises. The best exercises are arching which are called chest weights which are found in any gymnasium. In addition to this exercises may be taken by lifting heavy weights under the instruction of a competent physical culture teacher.

Butter Combinations Question: Elizabeth asks: "Should butter be used with your starch and protein combinations?" Answer: Butter is a neutral food and may be used in moderate amounts with any food.

Nervous Child Question: Anxious Mother writes: "I have a little girl who will be twelve years old next January. She is very nervous and thin. For the last six months she has grown tall very rapidly and is pitifully thin now. What kind of diet would you prescribe for her?" Answer: Girls often make peculiar changes in their weight and shape during the adolescent period. Do not worry about a "spelling" diet.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER Washington, Oct. 18—The publicity organizations of the Republican and Democratic national committees are running a neck and neck battle as the campaign gets into its final month.

The Democrats hold a record for delivering eight news stories to your correspondent in a single envelope, but Republican messenger boys arrive far more frequently.

Whenever more than an hour passes without receipt of mimeographed releases from Republican headquarters, correspondents begin to fear some accident to Mr. Hoover. office, together with some staff of its own. In addition to these mimeographed stories delivered during the day to all correspondents, the Democrats issue a weekly known as the "Democratic Campaign News" and also a weekly clipping sheet from which pro-Smith editors can make a wide choice of favorable items.

A few weeks ago one of the Democratic publicity producers made a stupid break about Hoover's Quakerism, but the machine is now hitting on all six.

Most of the mimeographed sheets which flood into the newspaper offices consist of predictions by visiting state leaders that the party's candidate will carry such and such a state by heavy majorities, announcement of somebody's bolt or declaration for the candidate, announcements of speeches and radio hookups, all the latest blarney from national chairmen and other campaign leaders against the opposition and news stories of speeches about to be delivered.

In both campaign organizations, the publicity divisions are among the largest departments. The Republican director of publicity is former Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas. His assistants are Alfred Klehofer and Harry Brown, veteran correspondents, at the head of a small corps of trained news writers.

The Democratic staff in New York is under Mrs. Henry Moskowitz. There are two women on the Republican staff, Anna Steese

Richardson and Alice Fox Pitts of Buffalo. Between 50 and 200 telephone calls are received each day from newspaper and magazine writers.

The G. O. P. office keeps in instantaneous touch with its New York and Chicago branches by an automatic telegraph circuit similar to those used by telegraph companies and press associations. Thus the three branches swap news. The Democratic news writers use commercial telegraph service for the same purpose.

Members of the publicity staff cover the Hoover and national committee headquarters in the same manner as other correspondents. They interview all visitors and soon their stories are being turned out in hundreds of copies for mailing and hand distribution to newspapers and correspondents.

At the close of each day the Republican boys send around a blue envelope entitled "Republican Daily News Bulletin" which summarizes all the Republican news of the day from over the country, with specially contributed columns from Chicago and New York.

DOOM OF COCKTAIL IS SEEN IN PARIS AS MIXERS ARE SCARCE

Paris.—The doom of the cocktail is rapidly approaching in this city, since Paris bartenders who really know how to mix 'em are getting fewer and fewer. Bartenders are born, not made, says Fred, the dean of 'em all, in explaining the tragic situation. The rookies in game do not know anything and never will, according to Fred.

"People don't get the stuff they ask for in Bronxes, Martins and Manhattanis, so they have taken to drinking straight orders, or even the lovely French aperitif," laments the old bartender.

"Look at that dame over there," said Fred, pointing to a sweet young thing in a corner of his domain. "Well, she asked for a Martini. I gave her a Manhattan. She don't know the difference, so that is why the cocktail is dying out."

The inference is that if the New York Governor doesn't even know what is going on in federal administration in direct relationship to his own town he is very badly equipped to pose as a critic of that administration in relationship to the whole nation.

Mr. Mellon has "crowned" the brown derby.

HERE'S OUR OPINION

Here is a statement and an inquiry which appeared recently in a Western newspaper:

How strict should sentences for gross violations of the traffic law be?

A Kansas City motorist got drunk and indulged in a mad joy-ride across town. In this ride he hit two automobiles in succession, ran over and killed a 76-year-old pedestrian, drove away without stopping and crashed into still another car.

He was caught, brought to trial on a charge of manslaughter. He pleaded guilty; the judge sentenced him to two years in prison.

People who commit crimes like that of the Kansas City killer are no more adequately treated in being given a two years' sentence than a mad dog is adequately treated who is tied up for two hours and then turned loose again.

There are very few states in the Union where the crime of manslaughter is not punishable by at least ten years imprisonment, as a maximum. In no such case as the one in question is anything less than the maximum manslaughter penalty anything but a wretched farce.

DEAFY DOWD

A New York fiddle saw the nimble white fingers of Deafy Dowd intrude themselves into the pocket of a citizen in a City Hall Park crowd and so the fiddle nailed Deafy then and there.

Deafy grinned lugubriously as he opened the hand and displayed his catch to the cop—a nickel and two cents.

Yesterday the same thing occurred again, an impromptu hook-up being arranged in connection with a Great Zepelin celebration. Notice of the hook-up was sent out by its sponsors, but the radio stations did not supply their amended programs.

We cannot be expected to invent amended programs for broadcasting stations on occasions when unexpected changes are made. And a very little thought on the part of the radio fan will bring realization that it is quite unfair to blame the newspaper in such cases.

SLIMY TRAIL

After all, perhaps the crook pictures don't overdo matters so very much. A beer runner's battle, Chicago style, staged on Fifty-fourth Street, Manhattan, a few doors from Broadway, resulted in the killing of one recognized gangster, the serious wounding of a deputy-sheriff of perfectly clean reputation but now an undoubted beer racketeer, and the quick getaway of an orderly to whom the deputy-sheriff's bankroll of over $900 was handed for momentary safe keeping when the wounded man was being put to bed in a hospital. INTENTIONAL DUPE

NOVEL BACKGROUND

IN "TENTH AVENUE"

New Underworld Photoplay Is Dramatic and Thrilling; At State Tonight and Tomorrow.

Tenth Avenue of New York City—wild and unruly, menaced by gangsters and guns, murder and marauding, inhabited by sinister moving shadows—such is the tremendously powerful background against which was filmed "Tenth Avenue," a De Mille production which will be shown at the State theater tonight and Friday.

Just five long blocks from fashionable Fifth Avenue, but only a short distance to the other side of the world, "Tenth Avenue" is an intimate glimpse into the lives of those whose code is based on widely different standards from other sections of the Metropolis.

Phyllis Haver, Victor Varconi and Joseph Schildkraut portray the principal featured roles. The picture was adapted from the screen by Douglas Doty from the stage play of the same name.

The associate feature for today and tomorrow is lovely Laura La Plante in "Finders Keepers"—one of the funniest films of the year. The story is by Mary Roberts Rinehart and is a splendidly executed bit of entertainment. No dull moments, lots of laughs, a good share of thrills and a cast of real actors.

The latest issue of MGM News will be shown in conjunction with the two big features.

Coming Sunday and Monday, George Bancroft in "The Docks of New York" terrifically big. A big star who has proved his bigness in "The Showdown" and "The Drag Net." Bigger than ever in this drama as seaman, a rough, salty, stark drama with a touch of humor. A picture to please everyone.

X: On the Ballot It Will Elect Hoover

Placing an X on the ballot was the old time symbol of hearty approval of a candidate and his party. Fifty-eight millions of men and women will be eligible to vote this year for the various candidates in the field. There will be many local problems to be fought out but above them all stands the one issue—Herbert Hoover. The voter who keeps his eye on this great outstanding figure and preserves Hoover ideals in selecting all other candidates on the ballot, will have done a worthy service to the nation. Never has there been such an opportunity for the voter to pick a worthy public servant. Never was there a time when the country could look forward with such assurance of an able administration. There is no question about Hoover. (To Be Continued)

Watkins Bros. Inc.

New York, Oct. 18.—In most cities a house number is an address. In Manhattan it may become the basis of bitter court action.

A certain social quality attaches to many New York addresses. Because of certain historic, or romantic, or social circumstances, it becomes more important to live at No. 289 So-and-So street than at 291.

Just a few months ago there was finally settled a long legal battle over the use of the address No. 1 Park avenue. At the present moment another is beginning over the use of No. 2 67th street. The first mentioned engagement cost at least one of the litigants a small fortune. But it was considered quite worth the money, in view of the social circumstances.

New York, I am told, is one of the easiest cities in the world in which to get arrested—and also one of the hardest.

O. Henry, if my recollection serves me, told of the efforts of a tramp to break into jail on Christmas eve. He did almost everything but commit murder, yet he was forgiven because it was the Christmas season. Finally, when he passed a church he decided to reform, to lead a better life, and even to attend the services. At this moment of hesitation a policeman came along and arrested him for vagrancy. And things happen just about that ironically.

The other day a fellow was arrested for turning up a corner in a vacant lot. A passing policeman assumed that the corner had been stolen. But a bill of sale established his rights to the ownership.

"What were you doing in a vacant lot?" the officials demanded. "Well," replied this most perfect of citizens, "I wanted to practice on the corner and I happened to think of the neighbors."

One man in a million who would save the nerves of his neighborhood, and they arrest him for it! As the movie captions put it—"Life is like that."

Hat checkers in the big cafes, theaters, dance halls and such are generally nimble slight-of-hand performers. They learn to palm coins in order to deceive the average boob concerning the average size of the tip.

In all such places the plates reveal a number of carefully planted quarters. As amateur of fact, the average tip is a dime. But upon receiving the dime the check boy carefully palms it and replaces it dexterously with a quarter to give the next customer the idea that this is the expected tip.

Whereas the nickel-in-the-slot pianos or phonographs once lured the transient idler, radio slot machines now spring up in the Manhattan arcades. For 10 cents it is possible to get 15 minutes' worth of whatever you can pick out of the air. These noise devices have practically supplanted all other forms of music in the Chinese restaurants, speakeasies and other cheap resorts where music is dispensed according to the number of nickels deposited.

In fact one restaurant, hoping to attract radio-fagged customers, displays a large sign: "Music—but not radio—with meals."

KIWANIANS PLANNING

TO GET OUT THE VOTE

"Vote as You Please but Vote" is the slogan being broadcast by 98,000 Kiwanians in the United States, in an effort to produce a record vote in the national election in November. In many communities on election day Kiwanians will assist in getting voters to the polls. In some cities telephone operators will be engaged to call all homes and offices to remind persons not to forget to vote. Lapel tags, "I Have Voted Today! Have You?" will be given to voters to wear on election day.

SERVICE for the MOTORIST

By ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service

Since winter is so hard a taskmaster toward the automobile, everything possible should be done to make the machine's life easier. Nothing should be overlooked while the car is being inspected and improved, for every little part is, of itself, as important as the rest of the car.

Take the battery, for instance. At intervals, also, the battery should be checked up, to see that it does not fall below a specific gravity of about 1.200. Although it would best be maintained at about 1.5.

Because of the heavier load it will get in winter, the battery must be up to its highest efficiency. The motorist can help it much by seeing that all contacts to the battery are tight and clean. Corrosion should be brushed off with a stiff wire brush, or washed off with a solution of baking soda.

It may also be necessary to have the generator adjusted so that a heavier charge will go into the battery. For the nights are getting longer and the battery is called upon to do more work than is required of it in the summer. The charge, however, should not go above 20 in the ammeter dial, and will still be useful at this point, it will approach the danger point when hand cranking may have to be resorted to.

That's unnecessary when proper attention is paid to the car.

The motor may be working properly and there may be no trouble with the ignition, but if the other moving parts of the automobile aren't lubricated properly they will cause a heavier burden on the engine.

The transmission and differential, therefore, need care for the winter as much as does the engine itself. They should be inspected for the amount of oil in each part, and its consistency. The differential needs a lighter oil for the winter as it has been running in during summer.

The transmission case might also need a change of oil, for if this oil has been thinned down by too much wear, there is greater liability of its freezing.

Although they should be kept in their most resilient condition at all times of the year, the springs require special care during winter. It is on them that most of the stress of winter driving goes.

The shackle is the part of the spring that needs thorough lubrication. If it hasn't been touched for some time, the bolt may have been "frozen" so as almost to eliminate the spring action. Lack of grease and accumulation of rust causes this freezing.

In greasing the shackles of springs, it should be remembered that the job isn't done until the old grease has been forced out at the other side of the spring.

"The Patriot" Proves Great Acting Needs No Noise

By GENE COHN

New York.—Just as the talking picture hysteria was headed toward crescendo, along came Emil Jannings' "The Patriot" to challenge the industry and film-goers alike. This challenge is not audacious. It says that acting can speak louder than words. Silently it defies the talking pictures to attempt a duplication with all their combined noises. I have seen this film with and without sound. And it seemed to me to prove the utter futility of sound in the presence of great pantomime.

"The Patriot," in my inmost opinion, is proof unto itself that great silent dramas can be made. It's rather amusing that such a justification of a much discussed and abused industry should come at the very moment when Jannings, for instance, is being "sounded out" for his next picture.

The weakness of the silent drama has been just that—its weakness! A dying man may shriek, but that will not save his life. Indeed, it might be that his groans and cries would further exhaust him.

Nor will crumpling wheels, shouting mobs, chattering characters or crooning theme songs of the talkies do much more than provide a passing popular novelty, unless the sort of thing to be found in "The Patriot" appears at regular intervals.

The novelty will pass. The audiences will no longer excuse the baldest sort of mediocrity on the ground that it is an experiment in sound—already an array of Manhattan film reviewers grow impatient with the reiteration of bad pictures set to unimportant noises.

By this time, I believe, "The Patriot" will have been generally released to most parts of the country. It should—and probably will be—hailed as a cinema masterpiece, as it was in New York. Weeks after its Broadway opening, it still calls on the police to handle the crowds trying to see it.

For it reveals an impersonation such as not even Jannings has given before. It ranks him with the greatest of actors, on or off the stage. And it allows the name of Jannings to be mentioned in the same breath as that of Mansfield or Mantell. And, thanks to the intelligent and artistic direction of Lubitsch and the laudable hands-off policy of Jesse Lasky et al., the story runs unencumbered by the usual ridiculous intrusions. If, then, it proves a box office success, it proves also that film audiences will support fine things—and, this alone, should break down a lot of barriers that have been self-raised by gentlemen of the industry.

It helps to create an appetite among film fans for great pictures. It might lead the industry out of its silly lethargy and provide entertainment for people tired of the monotonous, machine-made stories.

This, of course, relates to the silent drama. It seems to me to prove beyond a doubt that there is a great field for silent pictures if and when they are properly produced and acted. There is, of course, a field for the talkies.

And, by the way, this young man Von Sternberg is coming along. The same fellow who directed George Bancroft in "Underworld," he now has another splendidly photographed and directed opus in "Docks of New York."

LACK OF SUPPORT IMPERILS PARADE

Whole Armistice Day Celebration Dependent on Raising of Fund.

Facing an unexpected and incomprehensible lack of general financial support of the great and long anticipated Armistice Day celebration among the people of Manchester the Finance Committee for the celebration today issued a third letter of appeal. Response to the two letters previously sent out have been disappointingly meagre, only a fraction of the necessary fund having been subscribed.

No hint of such a thing is contained in the letter, nor is any member of the finance or general committee responsible for any such statement, but it is entirely within the possibilities that, unless there is a marked change in the attitude of the public, the splendid enterprise will have to be abandoned.

Cannot Proceed. It is absolutely not to be expected that either the American Legion or the general committee or the finance committee or any other group of individuals will proceed with the arrangements for the celebration unless the funds are in sight, for to do so would be to incur obligations which there might be no way of meeting.

While there are more than three weeks yet before the actual date of the affair, there is no such time for raising of the money, which ought to be in sight right now.

Following is the letter, signed by George H. Waddell as chairman of the finance committee, which is being circulated today and applies to every Manchester person.

Armistice Day. "Let me forget—Armistice Day is Memorial Day of the World War. Can it be, that in ten short years, we have forgotten this most terrible of human conflicts and the sacrifices involved?"

"Can it be that Manchester has forgotten the sacrifices of her men who went forth in her defense and never came home?"

"The responses to the call for funds to carry out this tenth anniversary celebration would seem to indicate that the great majority of Manchester people have forgotten the true significance of Armistice Day."

"This letter does not afford space to tell of all the plans of the citizens committee for this day. The newspapers will tell that part of the story."

"This letter is a direct and very urgent appeal to you for a contribution, large or small, to help defray the expenses of this tenth anniversary of Armistice Day, November 11, 1918."

Your committee must have 10 subscriptions at $100; 20 subscriptions at $50; 50 subscriptions at $25; 100 subscriptions at $10; 500 subscriptions at $5 and a large number of subscriptions at $1 or less.

"Send your card and subscription in now and show your committee that you are with them."

The parade committee under Clifford D. Cheney planning for Manchester's Tenth Armistice celebration met last night to learn to what extent plans for the day have been made by the various organizations planning to enter floats, marching delegations or both.

Victor Bronke, speaking for the Legion, said that prizes would be awarded for the best floats entered. These will be loving cups, Mr. Bronke said.

5 TRUNKS OF LIQUOR-SMUGGLED OVER BORDER

Boston, Oct. 18.—Federal prohibition agents were satisfied today that they had tipped in the bud a plan to smuggle liquor in trunks across the United States-Canadian border into Buffalo, N. Y., and thence to transport it by fast express to Boston.

In Buffalo, last Sunday, Max Weiner was arrested and several trunk loads of liquor seized, but a plan to smuggle liquor in trunks across the United States-Canadian border into Buffalo, N. Y., and thence to transport it by fast express to Boston.

Telegrams were immediately despatched to Boston by the Buffalo customs officials with the result that 23-year-old Wm N. Hoye, of Buffalo, was arrested Sunday evening upon his arrival here aboard the Buffalo express. Five trunks of high grade liquor in the custody of Hoye were seized.

This afternoon, before Federal Judge Eliza Brewster, young Hoye pleaded guilty to an information charging unlawful transportation and concealment of five trunks of liquor from Buffalo to Boston. He paid a $300 fine and was released.

Federal officials stated that they had inside information that the liquor in the lands of both Weiner and Hoye was part of a shipment smuggled into this country from Canada and boldly transported to a railroad express car for transportation to Boston.

BAR COLLEGE BOYS FROM REGISTERING

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 18.—Princeton University undergraduates have turned against the city with a vengeance, it became known today, as a result of their having been barred from registering for the presidential election.

If the city officials deny them their ballot they will withhold their trade from Princeton merchants, the students say.

President John Grier Hibben of Princeton, today declared that a precedent of more than 40 years has been broken in refusing to allow undergraduates to register and added that in his opinion there is evidence of prejudice against the students on the part of the election officials.

Graduate students were allowed to register while nearly 2,000 undergraduates were turned away on the ground they have not resided in Princeton for four months.

General opinion of the attorney is that the students may claim the city as their residence. Last year undergraduates were barred from voting in the municipal elections. Election officials are claiming this as precedent for their action this year.

AMUNDSEN WRECKAGE

London, Oct. 18.—An aluminum gasoline tank believed to have belonged to the airplane "Latham" which disappeared with Captain Roald Amundsen and four others after they set out from Tromsø, Norway to search for missing members of the ill-fated dirigible Italia, has been found by a sailing vessel north of Trondhjem, according to a Central News report received from Oslo, Norway today.

CHURCH AND LABOR TOPIC OF DEBATE

Episcopalians Hear Both Sides at Present Convention at Capital.

Washington, Oct. 18.—Considerable interest was apparent today in the Episcopal churches' stand on the relation of church to industry, following a mass meeting at which the sides of both capital and labor were presented to the delegates to the triennial convention.

The committee report on labor relations, presented to a joint session of the House of Bishops and the House of Deputies last Monday, showed a strong sympathy for organized labor, while many prominent laymen in the church are associated with the large industries.

—Labor's side of the question was presented to the mass meeting by William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, who called upon the church to help solve the "complicated industrial problems" which have arisen since the World War. In explaining the aim of his organization, Green said:

Human Betterment. "The ultimate object of the American Federation of Labor can be expressed in two words, 'human betterment.'"

"A social condition in which poverty on the one hand and great wealth on the other prevails is not conducive to spiritual growth or to spiritual prosperity," he said.

"The seeds of gospel truth cannot take root or grow in the soil of human poverty. Nor does religion appeal to those who possess great wealth and spend their lives in riotous living."

The Other Side. Harper Shibley, of Rochester, director of banks, mines and lumber companies, in presenting the other side of the question cited "greed" and "selfishness" in business and asked the church to help combat them.

That Shibley considered these motives exceptions to rather than characteristic of business was apparent, as he described organized industry as the friend rather than the enemy of the worker.

E. J. Hutchinson, president of the Bethlehem Fabricator Co., expressed opposition to the church as a corporate body injecting itself into industrial matters, though endorsing the church influence on industry.

"I would say the church has a place of influence on industry and that place is in the church," he said.

DEATH SIGN SCARES RUM RING SQUEALERS

Philadelphia, Oct. 18.—A menacing foreboding across the threshold of the underworld death sign to the "squealer" hovered over the Philadelphia rum investigation today.

Those endangered by the revelations of police cooperation have sent forth the word that too much is being spilled across the bar of justice, authorities declare.

Francis J. McKeown, former owner of a Germantown saloon and counted on as one of the state's star witnesses, was arrested as $5,000 bail today charged with "willful and deliberate perjury." Why? McKeown took the witness stand at the trial of Mathew W. Patterson, ward politician and former police Captain Charles W. Schoenleber.

The defendants are accused of conspiracy in alleged collecting from saloonkeepers for police protection. A scowling spectator trailed his forefinger at right angles across his throat.

Perhaps the McKeown stared, then he stammered Assistant District Attorney Lemuel B. Schofield by repudiating testimony supplied a few weeks ago under examination.

Judge Edwin O. Lewis held McKeown on a charge of perjury. "When Al Hendrick, judge baron," testified at a hearing to paying $3,600 a month's right-of-way protection for his beer truck fleet, four men in the court room snapped their fingers across their throats.

HOLD THREE SUSPECTS IN NEW YORK MURDER

New York, Oct. 18.—Police today were questioning three youthful habitués of Broadway night clubs in an effort to solve the mysterious murder early yesterday in Sunnyside, Queens, of a 27-year-old night club hostess known variously as Mrs. Lita Bonello, Mrs. Leo Gordon and Mrs. Sam Wolch. These three suspects were taken into custody when detectives made a flying tour of the night club district during the night.

Police said the woman was the wife of Leo Gordon, alias Anthony Bonello, facing a death sentence in Kansas City for the killing of a policeman in a bank robbery there on June 14, but that she had been living here with Sam Wolch, a revue dancer. Wolch was questioned last night and then released.

Detectives also were seeking two men who were seen leaving the apartment house in Sunnyside a short time after a neighbor heard the screams of a woman.

Mrs. Bonello, formerly a telephone operator in Kansas City and a cabaret girl here. She was brutally beaten and stabbed. The police theory is that the underworld believed she knew too much about the Kansas City robbery, and killed her to seal her lips.

KITCHEN STAPLES STORED IN BINS

It is safe to say that most kitchens fall short of requirements principally in only one item—the closet or shelf space. Even if there is plenty of such space, 50 to 60 per cent of it is frequently useless because it is too high—out of reach.

Now comes a neat little convenience which brings supplies handily within reach. A minimum of closet space is made ample by its presence. Staples such as flour, sugar, coffee and ice are held in bins and drained through glass nozzles, operated by porcelain handles, that give notice when supplies are running low.

This product is made of heavy gauge metal, finished inside and out in a baked sanitary finish. It is said that it cannot rust nor corrode, and that it can be kept as clean as a china dish. It comes in white and various colors to match the color scheme of the kitchen.

It saves steps and reaching for various supplies. Much shelf-space is set free for other uses, and a motely assortment of bags, tins, jars and packages is eliminated. The nozzle permits pouring without spilling right into a measuring cup. It is sanitary; the air tight compartments keep out the dust that would fall into open boxes, or boxes frequently taken out and left open while in use.

STILL DETOURING

There are 561 highway detours in the area east of the Mississippi river and north of the Ohio, reports the American Automobile Association. This is about 150 more than the detours existing at this time last year.

ANTI-SALOON HEAD TO SERVE SENTENCE

Gets Sixty Days and $250 Fine for Calling Courts Wet.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 18.—Lack of money to carry on his fight and uncertainty whether the United States Supreme Court would accept his appeal forced Dr. E. S. Schumaker, nationally known superintendent of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League today to abandon his long struggle to escape a 60-day state farm sentence and a $250 fine for contempt of court.

This was the formal explanation to the people of Indiana made by the headquarters committee of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League after Dr. Schumaker had petitioned the State Supreme Court to consent to the withdrawal of his plea for a new trial, filed with the court clerk to draw up commitment papers for the incarceration of the dry leader in the state farm at Putnamville.

Surrounded by a throng of dry leaders sat in his downtown office here this afternoon awaiting the arrival of William L. Reasoner, sheriff of the Supreme Court, with commitment papers to take him to prison.

Asked by newspapermen whether he expected to be a prisoner by nightfall, Dr. Schumaker replied: "I hope so."

Hoped For Pardon. Friends of the dry leader were hopeful that Gov. E. Jackson would pardon Schumaker as soon as the league head was officially "dressed in" at the Putnamville institution.

The Schumaker case started March 10, 1926, when Attorney General Arthur L. Gilliom asked the State Supreme Court to cite the dry leader for contempt because of criticism of the court's decisions in appealed liquor cases. On August 6, 1927, the court imposed sentence.

The statement of the headquarters committee of the League follows: "The headquarters committee of the Indiana Anti-Saloon League has for more than two and one-half years tried by every honorable means to keep its superintendent from serving a penal sentence. It has, however, refused to resort to any means dishonorable or cowardly. It has spent no inconsiderable sum of money to fight this case to the present time and now has insufficient funds to carry it to the United States Supreme Court. Besides, it is uncertain whether or not the Supreme Court would accept the case."

LINK SEWER GRAFT WITH AL'S REGIME

New York, Oct. 18.—The Republican organization in New York state today launched a campaign to place responsibility for the $16,000,000 Queens sewer scandal at the door of Governor Alfred E. Smith.

Following the conviction yesterday in Long Island City of Maurice E. Connelly, resigned borough president of Queens, and Frederick B. Seely, former chief of the Queens Sewer Bureau, Republican speakers dug into the seven years history of alleged corruption and fraud of Queens borough sewer extension for campaign material in Gov. Smith's greatest stronghold, Metropolitan New York.

Ottinger's Campaign. Attorney General Albert Ottinger, Republican gubernatorial candidate, in opening his campaign yesterday cited the Queens sewer-graft scandal in his indictment of Tammany Hall rule in New York City.

A campaign pamphlet circulated by Republican state committee declares that although Gov. Smith's attention was directed to the irregularities of the Queens contracts by a special investigating committee of the State Assembly as early as 1921, the inquiry which led to the indictment of Connelly and Seely did not begin until December, 1927.

Charges that Queens officials paid in four times as much for sewer pipe as other cities, were the nub of the public protest which forced the investigation by a special state commission.

Estimates of this "cut" between contractors and borough officials during the last eight years place the total at roughly $16,000,000.

NO WORD OF MACDONALD SINCE HE STARTED HOP

Many here view MacDonald's flight in such a small plane a foolhardy adventure but equal number believe he has a good chance of succeeding in view of the favorable weather reports from both sides of the ocean.

MacDonald's plane carries no radio. Unless he is sighted by a ship he will not be heard from until he makes a successful landing. A forced landing on the ocean is something upon which MacDonald is gambling not to happen. His plane is not equipped with floats.

The last successful trans-Atlantic flight to Europe was made from Trepassy to Wales by Miss Amelia Earhart in the tri-motored monoplane Friendship with Wilmer Stultz at the controls.

Cubs And Cloverleaves To Settle Title By Series

Tie Game To Count In "Best Out Of 3"

At Least Both Clubs Favor Such Arrangements As They Go Into Huddle Tonight to Make Arrangements.

By TOM STOWE

For the first time in the history of Manchester football, it now appears that the contending teams are going to meet in a "best out of three" series to settle the town championship this fall.

All this despite the announcement yesterday that the Cubs had decided to play only one game.

Both Say Okay Although this information may sound a bit premature in view of the fact that the officials of the two clubs have not yet met to make arrangements, it is nevertheless believed to be what will happen when they get together tonight at Dr. A. B. Moran's office at 7 o'clock.

The suggestion that the two teams play more than one game was made by The Herald sports editor several weeks ago.

So with all hands now agreeable to play more than one game on a reasonable percentage of money.

Only Apparent Hitch The only apparent hitch which may arise at the meeting tonight is over the eligibility list.

Better Team to Win However, this sort of an arrangement gives protection against one team winning a fluke which although it hasn't occurred in late years here, is far from improbable.

Reserve Reimbursement True, it will enable both teams to pick up quite a bit more of jack, but who can blame them for that?

For the first time in many years, it appears that the players on the two teams are going to get some money for their serious efforts, and well they deserve it.

Local Sport Chatter

Connie Dietz and "Sobby" Vendrillo are out of the Cubs' lineup for an indefinite period with injured knees.

Pete Vendrillo, generalissimo of the Cubs, is trying to obtain employment for Billy Skoneski and Tommy Melkie at Cheney Brothers.

Several Manchester persons will attend the testimonial dinner being tendered Arthur E. McGinley, sports editor of The Hartford Times, this evening at the Hotel Bond.

According to reports reaching town, Coach Luke Urban of Canisius College at Buffalo, N. Y., expects Ding Farr, Jimmy Mistretta and "Doc" Keeney stand a good chance of making the varsity team before they graduate, if not next year.

A new oak diving plank is being installed in the Recreation Center swimming pool. It will be ready for use shortly.

The West Side Rec basketball team will hold a practice session at the West Side Rec at 7:30 this evening and Manager Kenneth Smith requests all of last year's team and any new candidates to report at this time.

Although nothing official has ever been given out on the matter, it is understood that the Cloverleaves are paying Jerry Fay $750 to coach their team this season.

Only one team can win, but it's going to be pretty tough on the coach who loses. Both ends of the town are staking high on the man to bring them the title.

Speaking of Football

General Theory of Defensive Play by Individual Football Players on Team Is Very Easy to Understand.

BY "JOCK" SUTHERLAND University of Pittsburgh Football Coach

A football team that cannot tackle might as well pack its suits and quit the game. Tackling is one of the most important fundamentals of football.

When I find a boy who can pull down a hard-running back with a smashing tackle, and who has speed and a reasonable amount of intelligence, I know he is going to develop into a good player.

There is a general theory of defensive play which many coaches believe in and adhere to strictly which is known as the "basket" defense.

Centers should know a lot of football. Opposing quarterbacks watch the defensive center perhaps more than any other player, as he is the whole secondary defense changes as the center moves in or out of the line.

Backs, like linemen, are taught to watch every movement of the offensive team, linemen and backs. The plan of any good attack is to throw some defensive man out of position, particularly the backs because of the forward pass threat.

FOOTBALL PLAYING "BIG TIME"; SOME CRUCIAL TESTS SATURDAY

Teams Jump From Minor to Major Schedules in a Week—No Little Games On the Books—The List.

Alabama, apparently headed back toward sectional affluence, will be forced to expose its hand against Tennessee and before I get off this subject entirely, I would like to mention the fact that Illinois, 1927 champion of the Big Ten, will play Indiana at Champaign.

New York, Oct. 18.—Football comes up for a big league trial on Saturday for the first time this season. It has been out on option with Walla Walla and Hokus Focus and now it suddenly is on the major time, with crowds and stakes increased accordingly.

The haste with which the 1928 season is getting to a climax is best realized by the fact that California and Southern California are meeting at Berkeley, To the Golden Bear.

At Newark, N. J.—James Braddock, Jersey City light-heavyweight won decision over Peto Latzo, of Scranton, Pa., former welterweight champion, 10.

At Mineola, N. Y.—Billy Fitz, Waterbury, Conn., knocked out Jack Lombardo, New York first round.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 18.—The Brown football squad today will complete its preparation for the Yale game, with the aerial attack being stressed. The squad is in poor physical condition and several regulars may not be able to start due to injuries.

New Haven, Conn., Oct. 18.—The "hold 'em Yale" yell may be heard quite frequently at the Yale-Brown game here Saturday, judging from the Ell varsity's failure to stop the freshmen in yesterday's practice. Given the ball six times on the varsity's ten-yard line, the frosh scored three touchdowns and made a field goal.

West Point, N. Y., Oct. 18.—The Army football squad of 28 players will leave here this afternoon for the Harvard game. They will work out in the Harvard Stadium tomorrow afternoon.

Cambridge, Mass., Oct. 18.—Harvard is expected to rely chiefly on the forward pass against the Army. Harvard intelligently, coached by a scout who has been studying the Army offensive plays, were stopped by the Crimson varsity yesterday after gaining considerable ground at the start.

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 18.—Combining theory and practice, Coach Roper will give his Tiger players a workout of only one hour and an hour's discussion as its daily football fare in the future. The Princeton reserves beat Rutgers yesterday 7 and 0 in a practice game.

Clarke Must Build Entirely New Five

Not One Regular Back From Last Season's High School Team This Season—Has Plans.

Never before in his nine years as director of physical education in the Ninth School District and coach of the local High School basketball teams has Wilfred J. Clarke been faced by a more difficult task than the one which confronts him in preparing for the 1928-29 season.

Every single regular member of last season's team has been lost through graduation. To name them, they are Nino and Alphonse Boggini, the two forwards; "Doc" Keeney, center and Billy Dowd, "Butch" Kittel and Terry Shannon, guards. Dickie Kerr, substitute forward was lost in a similar manner.

In fact, all that remains from the varsity team last season are two substitutes, Vincenzo Boggini and "Hop-easy" Oppizzi.

All New Team This means that Coach Clarke must build an entirely new team. He said yesterday in discussing the forthcoming season's prospects, that the talent for the team would have to come largely from what was the second and third teams last season. None of these has been lost through graduation.

The second team members were "Pitt" Healey and Dave Wrenn, forwards; "Tubby" Johnson, center with George Greenaway and Hugh Moriarty, guards. Coach Clarke says he hopes to obtain another hour of practice a week this season because of its vital necessity all things considered. The team was allowed three hours of practice a week last year, he said, on Monday, Tuesday and Thursday afternoons.

New Systems It is Coach Clarke's present plans to try out a new system of play this season whereby his team will be able to play two styles of offense and a similar number of defense. This is to make it difficult for opposing teams to tell between the halves just what they may expect the final half. The two styles of offense would be short passing with the pivot and long passing with cutting for the basket. The two defenses would be zone and man-for-man.

One of the most important factors in successful basketball is getting a team to shift from the defense to the offense before the opposing team has had time to organize its defense, Coach Clarke says. This is one of the points on which he spends much time and patience each year. However, there are few schoolboy teams which have this down to perfection.

It is Coach Clarke's ambition to develop a state championship team before he completes his work here. This will be his tenth year as coach of Manchester High basketball teams and on several occasions he has built up teams that have gained sufficient reputation to be selected for state and New England tournament play. On one occasion, Manchester was beaten by Bristol in the semi-finals for the state title at Yale.

Bubbling over with the Hoover brand of enthusiasm, friends of the Republican candidate come to National Headquarters bearing all sorts of anecdotes.

But this particular little story breaks the record for variety of detail. In 1907, Mr. Hoover had his attention called to a book of mystery, 'De Re Metallica,' written by Georgius Agricola.

Agrioola's real name was George Agricola, but like all scholars and writers of his day, he took a Latin name and wrote in Latin.

This book is acknowledged to be the first written word on the subject of mining and smelting written after the Roman period.

Mrs. Hoover was well grounded in Latin so she brushed up and with the assistance of various linguists, made the skeleton of the translation. Dr. Hoover set up a

STAGE-STRUCK

One thousand girls, we are told, arrive in New York every day to go on the stage.

These scare figures have been given out again and again until it would seem by now that every girl must know the slimness of her chance.

Between them they worked out a real feeling of mediaeval Latin, and they wiledly included in the book humorously crude woodcuts.

Speaking reminiscently of the work which absorbed their leisure time for five years, Mrs. Hoover said:

"Making this mediaeval book intelligible to a modern engineer was an absorbing piece of work. It appealed to our imaginations. I did the groundwork, or as I often describe it, the general housework of the project."

The results of this labor may be seen in the exhaustive footnotes found on almost every page of the huge volume, but to some of us who have seen it, the book is the sign and the symbol of Hoover's thoroughness, and the extraordinary community of interests, the comradeship which exists between this unusual couple.

High Society by Ruth Dewey Groves AUTHOR OF 'WHEN A GIRL LOVES' 'LOVE FOR TWO' etc

CHAPTER I

The bag was empty! But Jerry couldn't believe it. Again and again she thrust her hand into the felt folds, poking and digging in the spaces that could not long have concealed a pinhead.

Her roommate, powdering her nose before the golden oak dresser, heard her gasp and wheeled in alarm.

"What's the matter?" "My money is gone!" "No!" Myrtle stared at the open bag in Jerry's nervous fingers, though it were poisonous. "Maybe it fell out. Let's look in the closet."

The search was a frantic one. Every inch of the dark cubicle was covered.

"I warned you not to leave it here," Myrtle said with a reproachful look. She was exasperated because she knew that the loss of the money would mean to Jerry Ray. When a girl refused to treat herself to a soda, for weeks and weeks...

"I thought it would be all right for one night," Jerry sobbed. The theft was fast becoming a reality to her. For nearly a year she had saved that money, dime by dime, quarter by quarter and dollar by dollar.

It seemed sort of funny that only a few minutes ago she had run up the stairs ahead of Myrtle, who wasn't going to Atlantic City, tripping over the heels in the carpet before their door, as usual, but with an unusual song in her heart. As quick as that everything could change. The song was a dirge now.

The Bag Was Empty!

If that was all there was to it why not benefits by it? Going around with boys who had nothing but love to offer, you would marry for love. For love! Jerry believed that most people knew more about it than a hen knows why she lays an egg.

But if you met the "right" people you could pick out a man whose promises—if he didn't talk about love—were something besides wind. Jerry decided to give herself that chance. This was shortly after she came to New York.

The best way, she concluded, since the mountain didn't come to Mahomet, was to go to the mountain. A real mountain. That was the advantage of knowing that marriage was a matter of propinquity.

She was not ashamed of her decision to marry money. She was going to "sell" herself or anything like that. The man must be someone she could respect and like. She saw no reason why marriage should be approached in a coy, oh-it-just-happened manner.

was tired, perhaps tired of the stream of colorless tenants who came and went, their drab-patterned lives making no imprint. Tired, as her mother was tired of the years that came without event, unheralded, unsung. Flat, tedious years. Years like a gray soil that had put forth one blossom to justify its existence and then had gone on molding, dying.

Saving to lift her mother, by the only way she knew, into a more gracious world than this, had not been an unadulterated hardship. It had been thrilling to watch her savings account grow. Yesterday when she had withdrawn it from the bank because she would have no time on Saturday to attend to it, she had felt like dancing out with it. What were sodas and shows then?

The risk of leaving it in her room overnight had seemed unavoidable. She was leaving on Sunday morning. She had worried a little over it. There had been a sneak thief in the house two years before, she had heard, but she was too elated over the prospect of what lay before her to think much of trouble.

Her new suit case was packed with lovely things. Not a faded or mended garment in it, such as filled her share of the limited drawer space in the mutually-used dresser. Well, she had thought she lay on the bed. Well, she had had that much to show for her thrift. Some pretty clothes. Too bad she hadn't bought the evening dress here that she had planned to get in Atlantic City. She had thought it would be exciting to shop there.

disappointment of the previous day. While George was away for the tent she and Myrtle had hitchhiked to the nearest village, and bought a picnic lunch. When he got back they had it spread out in the shade, all except what hunger had compelled them to gobble up.

Myrtle thought they ought to apologize for having eaten, but she stopped when Jerry gave her a look. It was nearly two o'clock. They had breakfasted at seven. Why should they get a headache? she asked when Myrtle had said they ought to wait for George.

"Will he?" Jerry replied with the twisted smile she used when speaking of men. "Starved?" she asked when George arrived. Myrtle started then to explain that they'd been so famished that they'd had to eat. Jerry's glance silenced her.

"No, I had some hot dogs down the road," George told them and Jerry laughed. Myrtle flushed. "Here, I brought some along for you kids," George went on, and brought out a paper plate covered with a paper napkin. Myrtle laughed then.

They ate the hot dogs with relish and put the spread-out lunch away. Then they busied themselves with the tent. "Put it right out here," Myrtle ordered. "It's swanky enough for anyone."

It was a forest green umbrella tent with a canvas floor, and George made short work of getting it pegged. When that was done Jerry offered to put away the camp things while Myrtle and George drove to the village for some lodgings to put on a cut Myrtle got on her hand.

Cots, a table and chairs, a small gasoline-burning stove, and a few dishes and cooking utensils had been stored with the tent. The girls had brought blankets from their room and a suit case with the things they would need overnight. The next evening George would take them to town to get the rest of their outfits, which they had not wanted to bring until they were sure of a camp site.

Jerry had scarcely got the camp in order when she heard George's car rattling in at the tumbledown gate. For a fleeting moment she envied Myrtle—it must be fun to have a boy friend with a car, even a junky, old rattler. No, why not a real car? Men were all alike, only some were worse than others, not better. They should be chosen for what they had—there was a difference in the way they fooled girls about love.

U. S. Prosperity Hinges On Result Of Election

What is the extent of Europe's industrial recovery and how does it menace the wide spread prosperity of the United States? Who are the men and what are the movements involved in this restoration of Europe's power? The Philadelphia Inquirer, believing that answers to these questions are of vital importance to the United States at this time, sent Richard J. Beamish, a staff correspondent and trained observer of industrial movements and conditions to Europe. He has just returned and the series of which the following article is a part of a result of the economic survey.

BY RICHARD J. BEAMISH

Article Number One

Are American Industries menaced by the financial and commercial recovery of Europe? Is America's present prosperity about to come to an end, unless steps shall be taken to safeguard it?

Are American standards of living and work in danger from the competition of low wages, long work hours and a low scale of living in Europe and Asia? The same answer is given to each of these questions—questions vital to every American home. The answer is YES.

That the questions might be answered in detail with facts as their foundation, it was necessary to make close range studies of plants and the homes of workers in areas from which come the most formidable competition with American industries.

Plants and Homes Visited

The representative of the Philadelphia Inquirer went into the cotton mills of Lancashire and the looms of the English textile workers, into the towns from which come the shoes, the pottery, the woollens, the cutlery and hardware of Great Britain. He went into the great iron and steel district of the Saar and of Eastern France and the great German steel region of the Ruhr. The factories of Italy and the amazing industrial development of Czechoslovakia were studied and analyzed. The all-European cement cartel and the power iron-steel cartel of France, Luxembourg, Belgium and Czechoslovakia were dissected. The Irish Free State, with its industrial development of the Shannon and its declared policy of a high protective tariff was visited. The American-owned and American-aided industrial plants in Central Europe, which have come to plague America with low-cost competition, were surveyed. The manner in which all Europe discriminates through high tariffs against American automobiles was noted.

The result of this first-hand investigation is given herewith. It shows an aggregation of nations entrenched behind high tariff walls, all looking toward the United States as a land where their low-cost manufactures will find a ready and growing market if the existing inadequate tariff schedules of the United States shall be maintained. It shows England quarantining deliberately upon a policy of amalgamating such basic industries as cotton, coal and chemicals, so that it may control the world markets in these commodities. It shows international cartels operating for the express purpose of competing with the United States, not only for the world markets, but for America's own home market.

The Sherman Anti-Trust law forbids such amalgamations and cartels in the United States. The only answer to them is such increase in tariff schedules as may assure to America its own market, with a consequent continuance of the American policy of high wages and a short workday.

This series of articles will be buttressed by information given by European bankers, manufacturers and workers. It will be made authoritative by quotations of wage scales, living costs and imports into the United States. It will show how the European worker lives and works.

Question Put Up to Voters

It is the contention of the Inquirer that the questions asked and answered by this series of articles constitute the most important issue in this presidential campaign. The United States of America has achieved the greatest spread of prosperity for its citizenry in the SECOND OF ST. JAMES' CARD PARTIES IS HELD

The second of the season's series of card parties being held in St. James' Hall under auspices of various committees of St. James' Church for the benefit of the church fund, was held last night and well attended.

Mrs. Philip H. Carney won first prize at bridge, and Mrs. Thomas J. Danneher second prize. The consolation prize in this class went to Mrs. W. J. Carrington. The first prize for men went to Mrs. John Danneher, with Frank Hightend second.

In straight whist Mrs. Simon Hilderbrand won first place and Miss Selman Gorman second, with the consolation prize going to Mrs. John Pearson, while Joseph Dillon, John Keefe, second, and John Scanlon, consolation, took the men's prizes.

In the setback, Henry Thomas, first; Patrick Lawless, second, and Leo Leason, consolation, were the men winners and Mrs. John Moran, Mrs. Thomas Connell and Miss Nora Curry, won first, second and consolation for the women.

There will be another party next Wednesday night, the committee in charge being composed of members from the East Side and Mrs. James Fogarty, Mrs. Joseph Leary, Mrs. John Humphries, Miss Julia Hogan, Mrs. Simon Hilderbrand and George Olds.

The next article will describe the new British policy by which restoration of British domination of the world's industrial markets is sought; also a description of the dynamic personality of the industrial leader who has formulated and is organizing this epochal movement.

HUNGRY GYM WORKERS NOW NUMBER SEVEN

The membership of the before-breakfast gym class at the Rec on School street has increased from one to seven persons in a week's time. When the class was first organized, George H. Williams was the sole member, but George told so much about the advantages he derived that half-a-dozen others enrolled.

The class starts at 7 o'clock and lasts until 8 o'clock. Those who go through the morning workout are George Williams, Helge Pearson, Albert Pearson, R. Kurland, Arthur McCann, James Sargent and Morris Lesser. Additional members are being sought.

The class meets every Monday, Wednesday and Friday morning.

4 Family House $7000

Each tenement rents for $20.00. Why pay rent. Give us a small cash payment and the rent should pay the balance.

2 family, 12 rooms, only $6,000, near car line. Also garage. We are offering it at $6,000.

Single six rooms, steam heat, gas, sewer, sidewalk, oak floors and trim, first floor, 2 car garage, $6,700, $500 cash.

Foster Street, two houses, one single and one double, now offered at $12,000. This is a 10% proposition as well as a home.

Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

Wilson, in 1912, was feared as too independent by many party leaders, but had a host of firm friends at the Democratic convention. He was nominated only after a bitter struggle, on the forty-sixth ballot. The Republican party was divided between Taft and Roosevelt, and Wilson received 435 electoral votes to 88 for Roosevelt and 8 for Taft.

Trouble arose with Mexico over the ill-treatment of American citizens by bandits and we came very close to war. There was no regular government in Mexico at the time, and American bluejackets were sent down to protect Americans. General Pershing headed an expedition into Mexico in pursuit of the bandit Villa, who had raided American properties. (To Be Continued)

Attractiveness in Line and Color

THE KOHLER ELECTRIC CLOTHES-WASHER is good-looking. Its lines are symmetrical and well-proportioned. It is balanced and compact, and occupies very little space.

In Kohler colors, the machine is unusually attractive. There are six colors to choose from, in addition to white. A room heretofore drab can now be cheerful with color. There is a finer impression of beautiful cleanliness, reflecting a happier tone, gratifying a pride when possessed. With chromium plated fittings, the general attractiveness is further enhanced.

HE HEARS that his uncle died without leaving a will. Under the law he is entitled to a share of the estate which he loses no time in claiming.

He may be the last person in the world his relative wished to remember. Nevertheless, in this case, the failure to write a will fills a scapegrace's pockets and deprives nearer and dearer members of the family of what they would otherwise receive.

Let us tell you what happens in this State if you postpone making your will until too late.

It will take but a few minutes of your time to come in to get the facts.

Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

THOSE MARVEL OYSTERS

Pinehurst customers declare the famous Rowe oysters to be a ten-strike. The reason is simple enough—they are the finest oysters in the world that are marketed in any quantity worth mentioning.

The present supply comes from the Gardiners' Bay farms of the Rowe Co., which is a Connecticut concern established more than a lifetime ago. Gardiners Bay, as you know, is a great deep bight of the ocean at the East end of Long Island, where the water is absolutely pure and always cold. Also always briny salt. Oysters planted there when they are wee things, and which grow to maturity there acquire a flavor and a healthy firmness and crispness never equaled by warm-water oysters.

Also there is almost no lapse of time from the day of their being dredged up, culled and opened, to their arrival at Pinehurst. They are "solid packed"—no water admixture whatever.

Rowe solid-packed oysters are as fine to eat raw as if opened at the moment and served on the half shell. For service otherwise they are incomparable.

FISH DAYS. The fish bill of fare this week is extensive and the quality right square up to the standard that has been building up Pinehurst's fish trade for the past year, steadily and importantly. Absolutely NO fish is ever offered to a customer here which isn't in perfect condition.

THE MEAT DEPARTMENT today suggests NATIVE VEAL CHOPS, also tender fresh Pork Chops and Pork Shoulder.

When baking, try Pinehurst Porto Rico Molasses—the kind that "Mother used to use."

Please remember that delivery will be made either morning or afternoon at your convenience. Phone two thousand.
