President Elect Wants Trip to Latin-American Republics to Be Without Diplomatic

Alto, Calif., Nov. 15.—President-elect Hoover has rejected the suggestion that he visit Latin-America as the official representative of the United States government.

He insists upon making his good will tour through the southern republics as a private citizen and has accordingly refused to accept official diplomatic status.

The uncertainty on this point which has perplexed diplomatic observers at home and abroad since the Hoover tour was announced at the White House a week ago was cleared today by final orders issued at Mare Island Navy Yard for the personnel complement of the battleship Maryland, which is to carry the president-elect on the Pacific leg of the 10,000 mile friendship jaunt.

No Aides

Although an extra detachment of marines has been assigned to the battleship for guard duty and personal detail during the voyage, no provision has been made for either the military or naval aides and escorts required by diplomatic usage for formal government missions.

When Mr. Hoover goes ashore, he will go as a citizen of the United States visiting a foreign soil. His diplomatic privileges and immunities will be limited to those extended by the various governments as honors and courtesies to a distinguished visitor.

Mr. Hoover's rejection of the more formal status is understood by ranking officials at Mare Island to have been dictated by his determination to avoid all discussions along his route which might be construed as a pledge of policy from his own administration, which begins March 4.

As president-elect he will enjoy, save possibly for the formalities of salutes, virtually every honor which would be extended under diplomatic etiquette to visiting American presidents, but while thus aided in his quest for firsthand information and direct personal contact with the problems and people of Latin-America, he will be without voice as a representative of the United States government. He will avoid all risk of involving President Coolidge for the remainder of his administration.

FRENCH DEPUTIES STAGE FIST FIGHT

Radicals Forget Dignity in Arguments Over Reparations Negotiations.

Paris, Nov. 15.—"Europe's future depends upon the outcome of reparations negotiations which are now speedily progressing and nothing prevents the imminent nomination of the experts' committee," Premier Poincaré announced in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon. "I find no incompatibility in the French and German views."

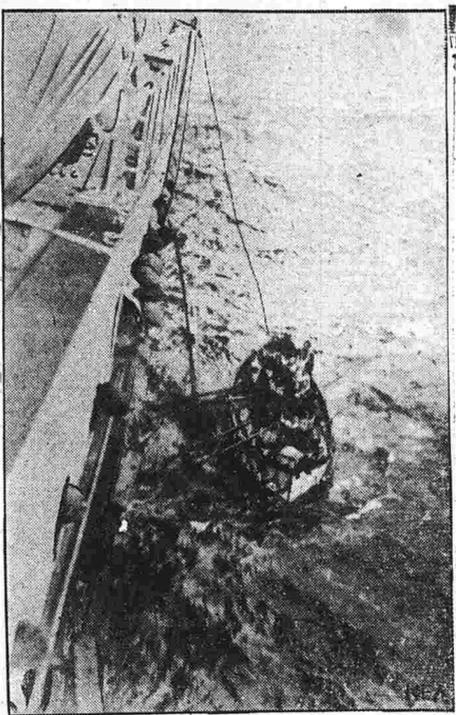

These statements were contained in the premier's declaration of policy when the new Cabinet was "introduced" to the Chamber. He did not mention war debts.

The Radical Socialist and Communist members were the only ones that did not applaud the Premier's announcement.

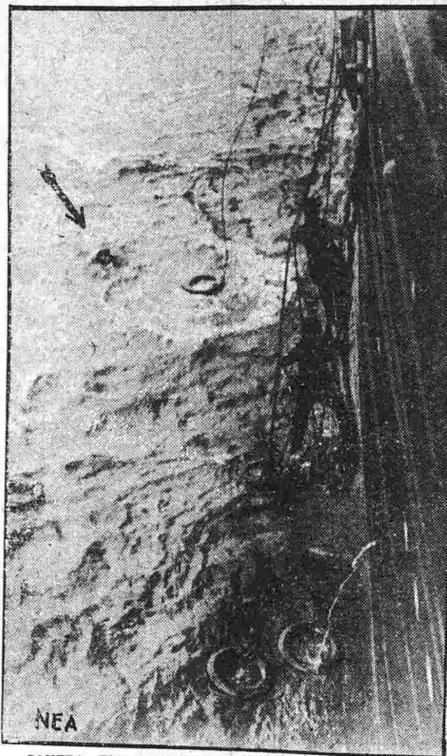

Socialist Deputy Marsais and Communist Deputy Clamamus started a fist fight during the debate which followed the premier's speech. Marsais uppeared his opponent and the Communist was starting a hazzmaker when Marsais interfered and separated them.

France, it is learned, has delivered a note to the German embassy. It is understood that this note agrees to the appointment of experts to the commission which will definitely settle the reparations problem. Germany asked that the commission include only experts so that politics could be excluded from consideration of the reparations issue.

TWO REMARKABLE SNAPSHOTS OF RESCUES AT SEA

THE RESCUE!—After a night filled with forebodings such as only the individuals concerned could describe, one of the lifeboats from the S. S. Vestris is shown reaching the side of the North German Lloyd liner, Berlin. Note the heads of passengers leaning over the Berlin's rail to shout their congratulations! Also the lines from the ship, ready to hoist up the survivors.

SAVED!—This is, doubtless, one of the most extraordinary photographs ever made of a rescue at sea. It shows Carl Schmidt, of Chicago (marked by arrow), a passenger aboard the ill-fated S. S. Vestris, at the happy ending of his terrifying battle against death. For 21 hours after he had jumped from the deck of the sinking ship, Schmidt had managed to stay afloat.

THREE INJURED AT BAD CORNER

Two Cars Crash at Adams and Hilliard Streets Junction This Morning.

Three Manchester persons were badly injured in an automobile accident this morning in Hilliardville when automobiles were riding in collision at Adams and Hilliard streets, one of the town's most hazardous corners.

Frederick T. Brousseau of 351 Woodbridge street, a former supernumerary member of the Manchester Police department, is in the Memorial hospital with possible fractured ribs in addition to a deep cut over one eye and minor bruises.

Other Driver Hurt
Anderson McBride, 24, of 133 Summer street, driver of the Ford sedan which figured in the collision with the Brousseau automobile, is also recovering from cuts and bruises which he suffered in the crash.

Smith in Georgia
Savannah, Ga., Nov. 15.—Arriving in Georgia today Gov. Alfred E. Smith, of New York, expected to spend most of the day on the links of the Savannah Golf Club.

The governor's party arrived early today on the private car of his life-time friend, William F. Kenny, New York contractor.

A foursome was being arranged here for the governor even before he awoke.

'Black Gang' Knew Vestris Was Doomed

New York, Nov. 15.—The "Black Gang" of the coffin ship Vestris, those anonymous slaves who sweat in the bowels of the vessel—knew that the steamer was doomed. Twenty-three coal-trimmers of the Vestris who arrived today among the rescued aboard the French tanker Myriam declared that the Vestris left Hoboken with a coal port partially open about four feet above the water line.

Like the trickle through a Holland dyke which developed into a flood, it was through the incompletely closed coal port that a storm-tossed ocean poured causing one of the great sea disasters of modern times.

The water mounted steadily in the engine room all day Sunday, according to members of the "black gang," and when it was almost up to their necks, they asked that an SOS be sent out.

All day Sunday we urged an officer to tell the captain to send out an SOS but we were told that the captain could not be moved," declared Evans Hampden, negro. (The SOS from the Vestris was (Continued on Page 2.)

PLAN PUBLICITY FOR NEW ENGLAND

Portland, Me., Nov. 15.—With a "New England Sales Plan"—a project for a three year industrial development, advertising and publicity campaign for the six New England states to be conducted by the New England Council and to cost $300,000 a year—as the chief proposal before it the fourth New England conference, an "economic parliament," began a two day session here today.

A regiment of New England industrial and commercial leaders, mobilized for the conference, were told that the purpose of the "New England Sales Plan" was:

NOT SINGLE ARREST IN ROTHSTEIN CASE

Inactivity of Police Causes Mayor Walker to Take Charge of Affair.

New York, Nov. 15.—With the Arnold Rothstein murder mystery taking on, hour by hour, the hue of the notorious Herman Rosenthal case, the authorities, under the continued whip of severe criticism, today resumed their investigation in the hope of turning up a real development. No arrests have been made since Rothstein was shot a week ago last Sunday night in Room 349 of the Park Central hotel.

District Attorney Joab H. Banton, who is coming in for criticism as well as the police, said that he planned to question Inez Norton, blonde sweetheart of the slain gambler. She has just returned from Atlantic City, where she has been resting for her legal battle to retain the $1,500,000 trust fund bequeathed her in Rothstein's deathbed will.

INSPECTORS ORDERED TO PROBE TRAGEDY

DEATH CLAIMS BYRON DARLING KNOWN TO ALL

One of Manchester's Best Liked Citizens Dies in 76th Year—Was a Cheney Brothers Pensioner.

Byron F. Darling, of 1 Bow street, one of Manchester's best known and best liked citizens, died last night at the Manchester Memorial hospital in his seventy-sixth year. Death was due to a complication of diseases and followed a lingering illness. He entered the hospital last Monday morning.

Mr. Darling had been falling in health even before his retirement from work at Cheney Brothers a little over four years ago. During the past three months, he had weakened rapidly but bravely bore up refusing to be confined to his bed or removed to a hospital until Monday. The end came peacefully while he was asleep.

Born in Portland

Byron Franklin Darling was born May 12, 1852 in Portland, Conn. His family removed to Providence, R. I. when he was a child and it was there that he received the greater part of his education. He specialized in civil engineering and for several years was connected with that work before he came to Manchester at the age of 27 years.

Mr. Darling's first employment in Manchester was with what was then known as the New England Railroad. A year later, in February, 1882, he entered the employ of Cheney Brothers working as freight agent. It was at that time that Mr. Darling began boarding at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred W. Hyde on Bow street. He had made his home with them for 48 years during which time he had grown to become regarded as one of the family.

Went to Klondike
Mr. Darling was always a lover of outdoor life and adventure. And so it was that in 1895, he and four other men left Manchester and went to Alaska on a gold hunting expedition. This was about the time of the famous Klondike gold rush which attracted thousands of gold seekers from all parts of the country. Mr. Darling and his party remained away from early spring to late fall during which time they penetrated further into uncolonized territory than any other person, white or Indian, had ever dared.

Mr. Darling had an intensely interesting experience at that time.

BIG DAY'S DEFICIT TO GO OVER $1,000

Total Collection Is Now $5,800—Final Meeting of Committee Tonight.

By more than a thousand dollars, Manchester failed to meet the expenses of the mammoth Armistice Day celebration here last Sunday and Monday, it was learned today.

The budget set as the amount necessary to finance the affair was $1,000, but Harold C. Alvord, of The Manchester Trust Company, to whom the money was to be contributed in a general public subscription, said today that he had received only $5,800. He added that all money was believed to be in.

The general Armistice Day celebration committee consisting of the chairmen of all the various sub-committees, will meet at the State Armory at 7:30 tonight for the purpose of making a final settlement of all business. Colonel Harry B. Bissell, is head of the general committee.

BLAME SHIFTING CARGO FOR WRECK OF VESTRIS

Latest Figures Indicate That 127 of the 338 Persons Aboard Ill Fated Steamer Lost Their Lives—Seventy of These Were Passengers, the Majority Women and Children—Survivors Coming Into New York Tell Horrible Stories of Inefficiency on Part of Captain and Crew—Actual Probe of Wreck Up to the British Board of Trade as Ship Was of British Registry; Various Stories of the Tragedy.

Washington, Nov. 15.—Inspectors of the Steamboat Inspection Service in New York and Norfolk have been directed by D. M. Hoover, chief inspector, to take testimony of all available survivors of the Vestris disaster. It was announced today.

No formal investigation of the wreck was ordered, however, as the service's jurisdiction does not extend to vessels of foreign registry. The Vestris was British owned.

TO START PROBE

New York, Nov. 15.—While the list of the survivors of the Vestris disaster being brought into New York today, a rigid investigation of charges of "criminal negligence" and "murder" was begun by the federal government with a view of fixing responsibility for the sinking Monday of the liner in the storm-tossed waters 250 miles off the Virginia coast. Latest figures indicate that 127 of the 338 persons aboard the Vestris lost their lives.

Seventy of the 127 unaccounted for were passengers. United States Attorney Charles H. Tuttle and his assistants lost no time in launching their inquiry even though there is some question of the jurisdiction in any criminal proceedings that may be instituted. The Lamport & Holt steamship Vestris was of British registry and intimation came from the British Embassy that an investigation also would be made by the British Board of Trade. There is a possibility, too, that a Congressional investigation will follow.

Some Questions

The federal inquiry is seeking to determine, on the basis of charges made by survivors, the following:

- 1.—Why wasn't the SOS sent out sooner from the Vestris?
2. Did the company fail, as alleged by survivors, to provide adequate safety equipment?
- 3.—Was Captain William Carey, the commander, who went down with his ill-fated ship, guilty of inefficiency and vacillation in the face of danger?
4. Were the officers of the Vestris guilty of callous indifference?
5. Did the crew, as a whole, look out for itself at the expense of the passengers?
6. Were the lifeboats in bad condition?
7. Did the Vestris leave its port in New York listing somewhat and not in the best of condition for sea voyage?

Round Up Witnesses

United States Attorney Tuttle designated his assistants to round up witnesses today "to fix the responsibility and perpetrate the facts." It was not long after the investigation was started that one of Tuttle's assistants, Edward Silver, declared that murder charges would be in order if some of the stories related by survivors concerning the conduct of the crew were substantiated.

Heavy prison sentences could be given, under federal law, to any convicted of negligent operation of passenger steamship, Silver said.

Officials of Sanderson & Co., local representatives of the Lamport & Holt line, operators of the Vestris, were reluctant to make any comment upon the bitter charges made by the survivors.

Subpoenas have been served on officials of the Lamport & Holt line; officials of the federal steamboat inspection service, which gave the Vestris a clean bill, when she left port, and survivors of the disaster.

LATEST CHECK-UP OF SEA TRAGEDY

New York, Nov. 15.—A check today of the list of the saved and missing from the lost Lamport & Holt liner Vestris revealed that the following:

338 persons composed the entire company of the Vestris when she sailed from New York Saturday.

129 of these were passengers. 209 comprised the crew. 59 passengers are definitely known to have been saved. 127 members of the crew are definite, known to have been saved.

13 bodies picked up have been landed by the U. S. S. Shore. 5 bodies have been picked up and landed by the U. S. S. Davis. 4 bodies have been picked up and landed by the Acushnet. 4 bodies have been picked up and landed by the Tucker. 237 persons therefore accounted for living and dead. 101 persons (passengers and crew) missing.

127 of the crew and passengers dead or missing. 70 of the 127 unaccounted for were passengers. 57 of the 127 unaccounted for were members of the crew.

while, were coming into New York on rescue ships and cutters. Fifty-seven exhausted survivors were brought to Gravesend Bay by the French tanker Myriam, which was transferred to a tug and taken to a pier in Brooklyn early today. Of the 57 survivors in this group only eight were passengers, the remainder being members of the crew and officers. The passengers were silent for the most part on Captain Carey's alleged negligence in delaying the despatching of the S O S. The majority of the crew, however, vigorously denounced the captain for not sending the S O S out earlier and were outspoken in their opinion that "someone was negligent."

The battleship Wyoming was reported this morning as nearing Norfolk, Va., with eight rescued. Yesterday the liners American Shipper and the Jerlin brought in 148 survivors. Twenty-one bodies and perhaps a few survivors were due here today aboard cutters. Best available figures were that 127 of the 338 persons, passengers and crew, who set out from this port, happy and carefree on Saturday, are lost. It was the grimmest sea disaster since the Lusitania was sunk.

MORE SURVIVORS.

New York, Nov. 15.—Snatched back from death, fifty-seven more survivors of the Vestris landed here early today, some to add their tales of nightmare horror, others their charges of wanton negligence to the picture of the sinking of the liner.

A blunt nosed tug pushed up the same bay down which the Vestris proudly bore 328 souls last Saturday and eight passengers and 49 members of the crew debarked. Three vessels saved 154 others. The remaining 115 will not return. The survivors came from two lifeboats picked up near the scene of the sinking, 250 miles off the Virginia coast, by the French tanker Myriam. At midnight the tug took the castaways off the tanker at quarantine. Its mission accomplished, the Myriam turned out again for London.

With scarcely a signal the tug came out of the night and eased alongside the quay at 1 o'clock. First the 49 members of the crew filed

ESKIMO MARKET IN CENTER CHURCH Annual Bazaar, Novel in Plan, Opens Today; Many Features.

The Center church as a result of the artistic endeavors of the committee in charge of decorating, has been transformed into a section of the land of perpetual ice and snow for the annual bazaar or Eskimo market. The chapel which contains the main features of the bazaar has streamers running from each corner to symmetrical figures in the center. Upon these streamers is banked feathery wisps of imitation snow. Colored lights arranged by John Reinartz completely change the atmosphere of the room to a veritable fairy palace.

The booths are all arranged like snow banks and upon entering on the right and proceeding directly around the hall one encounters the following displays: balloons, pop corn, home made frozen loaves, aprons, white elephants (featuring the odds and ends turned in by members), fortune teller, general display under the direction of the Kings Daughters, candy, a merchant booth containing samples secured from manufacturing concerns and the Eskimo pie grab bag, for the children.

The stage has been transformed into a vista of the frozen north depicting a walrus and a polar bear on a stretch of frozen ice. It is the feature of the evening's entertainment. The scenic effects for the stage were secured from the J. W. Hale Co. and Watkins Brothers. The Junior room of the Sunday school is now a pine grove in which there is set tables where those desiring refreshments or a supper may be served in Eskimo fashion. The menu however, features several delicacies the poor Eskimo never so fortunate as to see much less taste.

A budget of $300,000 a year was recommended for not less than three years to include to continuation of the New England's council's established functions. The plan would be carried out by the council, an all-New England development organization created in 1925 and sponsored by the governors of the six New England states, plus sales efforts of states, communities, public utilities, manufacturers, and agricultural, commercial and industrial organizations of the New England states.

Presented at the plan was made by Dudley Harmon, executive vice-president of the council. The conference began today with a meeting for organization secretaries. A joint meeting of the New England governors with the New England Council presided the first general session of the council at which President John S. Lawrence presented a review of the council's accomplishments in the three years of its existence.

matric meeting in Banton's office between the young divorcee and Mrs. Carolyn Rothstein, as Banton said he was going to interrogate the widow, too. Banton is convinced that Miss Norton knew the names of Rothstein's enemies and perhaps the name of the man who shot him.

Warren May Resign Despite denials the report persists that Warren will resign shortly. There have been several conferences between the mayor and police chief at City Hall.

The Federal Grand Jury, meanwhile, was reported as ready to begin an inquiry under the direction of Assistant United States Attorney Sylvester and Blake, to determine whether Rothstein was involved in a gang of international criminals that in recent years has smuggled millions of dollars worth of drugs—and perhaps jewels—into the country. Several witnesses are said to have been subpoenaed for the investigation.

One theory of the murder was that Rothstein was killed by a drug addict, but the general belief is that he was shot by gamblers who had lured him to a "red-top" meeting in an attempt to force him to settle a $319,000 poker debt he had incurred at a "no limit" card game weeks before.

Important developments in police circles are expected if an arrest is not made within the next 48 hours.

but also was forced to undergo many almost unbelievable hardships. Mrs. Hyde believes that his ill health was a direct result of these hardships. Although it was reported at the time that Mr. Darling and his party found plenty of gold at the limit of their penetration into the northern part of Alaska, weather and other unsatisfactory conditions forced the party to turn back when almost at the door of success.

Shipping Clerk Upon his return to Manchester, Mr. Darling re-entered the employ of Cheney Brothers. This was in April, 1897. For a time he worked as a watchman and later was packing and shipping clerk in the shipping department where he worked until September 27, 1924. Ill health was the cause of his retirement and shortly afterward he was pensioned by Cheney Brothers, having been in the employ of that firm for forty years and four months.

Mr. Darling had a manner of making friends with everyone due to his pleasing personality. He was a life-loving man, kind-hearted and generous to the very limit. He was a lover of outdoor life, but took an especial interest in flowers, pets and sports, such as hunting. He had a wide knowledge of flowers and how to grow them. His principal hobby, especially during the latter years of his life, was taking care of his flower garden. His loss is bound to cause deep regret to everyone who knew him.

His Family Mr. Darling leaves no near relatives. His only sister, eighteen years younger than himself, died last year. Since he came to Manchester, death had claimed his father, mother, brother, sister and sister-in-law. The closest surviving relative is William Barrows, Jr., son of the late Mrs. William Barrows, of Providence.

Mr. Darling was a member of the Odd Fellows here for 33 years and also a member of the Shepherd Encampment. He belonged to Sunset Rebekah Lodge and was a member of the Manchester City Club. A great deal of his life time was spent with friends at the home of the latter organization.

The funeral service will be held at Watkin Brothers funeral parlors on Oak street at 7:30 tomorrow evening and it is expected that the service will be largely attended. The body will be removed to Providence Friday night for burial in the family plot there Saturday morning.

ABOUT TOWN

Sunset Rebekah and King David Lodge of Odd Fellows will run the last card party in their series of five in Odd Fellows hall this evening. The prize for the whitest player who has piled up the highest score for the entire series will receive a special prize tonight. Six other awards will be made and refreshments served.

Mrs. Harold Norton will be hostess at another community bridge and whist party Friday evening at the White House on North Main street. Prizes will be awarded for both progressive whist and bridge, playing to begin at 8 o'clock. Refreshments will be served after the games. Players from all over the town will be welcome to attend these card parties at the Manchester Community clubhouse.

The American Red Cross Annual Enrollment drive to date has secured $74.65 in Manchester. The captains in charge of the teams that are making the calls for soliciting membership in the various sections of the town report that they have received a generous response from those canvassed and that the drive will end successfully with Manchester more than subscribing its quota.

The officers of the Manchester Home Club held a meeting last night at the clubhouse on Brainerd Place. The stock in the home will be delivered today to those members who bought shares. It was also voted to appoint William Brennan as chairman of the house and entertainment committee. It will be his duty as chairman to arrange all entertainments and to keep affairs running at the club that will hold the interest of the members.

The Y. U. Whist club was organized last evening at the home of Mrs. Charles R. McCarthy, 73 North Elm street, to meet weekly. After the business, games and a buffet lunch were enjoyed.

Harold C. Heffron of 512 Center street, a supervisor of playground recreation work in Hartford, is having his two weeks' vacation. Heffron is also a police supernumerary here.

Timothy Hayes of Hilliardville was taken to the Memorial hospital this afternoon to receive treatment for a badly bruised hand suffered while at work for the Manchester Construction Company at the Hilliard dam job at Adams pond. Hayes got his hand wedged between the iron bucket which is used hoisting dirt in excavation work and a large plank. He was discharged following treatment.

AVOW MERITS OF CHURCH BUILDERS

S. M. E. Members Appreciate Efforts of Participants in Edifice Achievement.

Members of the South Methodist Episcopal church, in a largely attended meeting held in the chapel of the church last evening, indulged in a season of mutual congratulation on the complete freeing of the church from debt, and of formal acknowledgment of the special services of those members who had been especially active in bringing about the building and financing of the new edifice.

The chapel had been tastefully decorated in "victory" colors and a program of flowers added to its beauty, having been contributed by Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Strickland and Mr. and Mrs. Ross Lewis. The proceedings opened with the congregational singing of "America the Beautiful," which was followed by a musical program participated in by Miss Elizabeth Willard, Mrs. Bertiline Lashinsky and a male quartet consisting of Sidney Strickland, Ernest Clough, Robert Gordon and Fred J. Bendall. Mrs. Lashinsky acting as accompanist.

Tribute to Predecessor. Rev. R. A. Colpitts, the pastor, commended the church officers and members on the discharge of the last of the church indebtedness. He paid a tribute to the wholehearted work accomplished by his predecessor, Rev. Joseph Cooper and to the band of enthusiastic workers who had achieved the result. He said that the church would spare no effort, he said, to live up to the high traditions established by them.

At the close of his remarks Rev. Mr. Colpitts offered a preamble and set of resolutions embodying acknowledgment by the people of the church of the efforts of the various committees participating in the promotion and erection of the new structure. The individual workers, as their names were reached, were called to the platform and a copy of the resolutions was presented to each.

Two of the bodies aboard the Acushnet had been identified as those of Thomas Jones, about 30 years old, bar man aboard the Vestris, address unknown, and Paul Whitehead, 29, a civil engineer of Kingston, N. Of the others, one was that of an elderly man, with very little hair and that gray. He weighed 150 pounds and was 5 feet 8 inches tall. He was dressed only in underclothes.

Skull Crushed In The fourth body was that of a negro, apparently a member of the Vestris crew, about 30 years old, 5 feet 7 inches tall, and weighing 150 pounds. His skull was crushed in, the flesh on his right arm had been missing entirely.

There was a lifebelt around the waist of each body. The Acushnet, a small cutter, has participated in rescues many times in the past. Her captain, Charles E. She was cruising about 200 miles from the site of the wreck, according to Captain Jensen, at 11 o'clock Monday morning when she got the SOS from the Vestris. She made full speed for that ship, arriving at the scene about 1 o'clock Tuesday morning. All day Tuesday she cruised about looking for bodies. Four found were picked up between noon and 5 p. m.

Third, it was learned that no definite and binding itinerary will be made prior to the Maryland's departure out of San Pedro harbor next Monday morning. Mr. Hoover will make up the schedule from week to week to suit his wishes, and to meet the requirements of sea weather, deep water fishing and the pressure of the inauguration in the United States.

As now decided in Mr. Hoover's mind, the tour will include visits to Mexico, Guatemala, Nicaragua, Chile, Peru, the Argentine, Uruguay, Brazil, and possibly Cuba, whether Bolivia or Paraguay will be included later remains entirely with the President-elect. This trip will require two full months, lacking only a few days.

Lifelines had to be stretched to the port boiler for men to swim along the sloping floor. Two trimmers held the man with the shovel as he attempted to get the coal.

NORTH METHODISTS' BAZAAR GETS CROWD

First of Three Night Sale at North End Church is Very Well Patronized.

The vestry of the North Methodist church was filled last night, the first evening of the three-night bazaar in which all organizations of the church are taking part. The color scheme is lupin blue, pink and white. The walls of the entire room are hung in the blue paper, and the sprays of pink blossoms, pink and white lattice, transform the vestry into a place of beauty.

All of the drop ceiling lights have streamers in the three colors and at the windows tie-back curtains of paper in the prevailing color scheme change the appearance of the room. The primary department adjoining has been named "The Parrot Tea Room." Here substantial suppers are served at dainty tables or light refreshments may be purchased at any time through the evening.

Miss Beatrice Lydell, chairman of this department has accomplished wonders with this room and has worked tirelessly to carry out her plans. Parrots in cages, on valances, chocolate parrots in gay paper cases are everywhere in evidence. Pink is the prevailing color used in the tea room and the decorations here and in the main vestry were enthusiastically admired.

The booths are arranged around the sides of the hall, and a wide variety of desirable gift articles is offered for sale, many of them the handiwork of the members, both young and old, who have been getting ready for the bazaar for weeks past. The "memory" booth attracts no little attention laden as it is with gifts from all parts of the country including Michigan, Nebraska, and even from friends in Europe.

A short program of entertainment was given last night by Mrs. William Smith, Wapping, consisting of musical numbers and an amusing farce entitled "Hanging Out the Family Wash." The dialogue was full of references to North Methodist people and the actors who were blacked up and in grotesque costumes kept the audience laughing every minute. The instrumental music will be presented.

"PLAIN MURDER" SAY SURVIVORS OF VESTRIS

slowly and silently off, grey army blankets across their shoulders. Then the handful of passengers, headed by Hermann Hipp of Chicago and Campbell Kellman, of Upper Montclair, N. J.

Woman Among Them. A flash of color—Mrs. Conrad S. Slaughter of Chicago—dressed as you would expect a shipwreck survivor to be. She is small, with bright red hair and wore white duck sailor trousers, a man's shirt, miles too large, a nondescript sweater and over her shoulders an army blanket.

Mrs. Slaughter was quickly gathered up by her husband, who was rescued from the Vestris and came in yesterday aboard the American Shipper, and carried to a waiting automobile.

Other Passengers. Then Harry Fay, boxer of Pittsfield, came off and William M. Fields of New York, O. C. Patterson of Edmonton, Alberta, Walter Cadogan of New York and S. Cox of Montreal.

Two of the three wireless operators of the Vestris were among the 49 members of the crew. They were Charles Vercherre and James McDonald. Michael O'Loughlin, the chief operator, was still at his key to make the weakening signals heard when the Vestris heeled over and went down. Dr. William Sears, the ship's surgeon, and Leslie Watson, second officer, were also among those rescued by the Myrland.

The members of the crew were bundled into waiting busses chartered by officials of Lamport & Holt, owners of the Vestris. They were not allowed to talk to newspapermen. Too much had been said yesterday, it was indicated.

Unbelievable Tales. The tales of the survivors brought in yesterday by the American Shipper which carried 125 and the Vestris which had 23 of the rescued, have started at least two investigations. The passengers told of incidents unbelievable at variance with the traditions of the sea—of cowardice among the seamen. They charged negligence, incompetence, improper training and stupidity on the part of William J. Carey, the master, and his officers. U. S. District Attorney Tuttle promises an investigation here. One is to be conducted in London by the British Board of Trade and a third by the U. S. Senate is talked of. Outraged relatives and friends of the dead who have heard survivors explain those deaths demand that blame be fixed.

Everywhere among the rescued passengers it was the same story. How the radio SOS had been delayed, how the passengers were forced to wait for help, how an SOS when the fate of the ship was apparent ten hours before she sank would have saved all aboard, how slow-fingered sailors stupidly nailed a piece of tin over a gaping hole in a life boat, how a boiler room fire, because it was not checked down until the lifeboat filled with twenty babies and children, how half-filled lifeboats roved quickly away from struggling, pleading passengers leaving them to drown.

Here's A Story Of Interest To County Armagh Folk

It's About 105-Year-Old Danny Robinson, Who Has Lived on the Shores of Lough Neagh, Near Portadown, All His Life.

The Weekly Telegraph published at Belfast, Ireland, recently carried a two column photograph and a sketch of a personage who it is highly probable, will be remembered by some, at least, of the numerous Manchester residents who are natives of Portadown and contiguous territory in County Armagh, Ireland. This personage is Danny Robinson, aged 105, who has lived all his life in the village of Maghery, on the shores of Lough Neagh, which is only a few miles from Portadown and was visited by a good many Manchester people in their early days. Danny, according to the Telegraph article, was a man when the oldest of them saw the lake, even though that was in their childhood.

The Belfast paper's story about Danny follows: A wonderful old man is Danny Robinson, who lives in a humble little whitewashed cottage at Maghery, on the shores of Lough Neagh. He is 105 years of age, is still healthy and contented, and looking forward optimistically to many more days in which to enjoy life. When a "Telegraph" representative paid him a visit he found the old man walking out in front of his cottage.

He posed for his photograph and then as he sat in a chair at the door he related some interesting facts about his life.

Old Danny, a fisherman all his days, stands the heavy burden of years well, and although somewhat deaf, his eyesight and mentality are sound. His old wrinkled face, too, betrays intelligence, just as his blood-shot eyes peering out from shaggy brows tell with humor.

He could not say what his longevity was attributable to. "Nothing ever came amiss to me," he went on. "I was always ready for it (meaning food) and plenty of it, but not so much now. What I was always very fond of was warm soda-bread just off the griddle."

He does not smoke, and never smoked in his life, and although a teetotaler he was never fond of whisky.

"You give me a bowl o' porter and a bit o' butter-milk every time, and I never know what it is to be sick in my life. God has blessed me; He must be fond o' me, or He wouldn't have let me live so long."

All his life, from boyhood, when he worked in his father's boat, old Danny has made his living in Lough Neagh, and he remembers many dark and stormy days. He was an eye-witness of a terrible tragedy many years ago when nine men were drowned in a storm in Toome Bay.

Pollan were much more plentiful in his early days than now, and cheaper too, and the lot of the fisherman was not an enviable one, the work hard and laborious, and the income scarcely enough on which to subsist.

"Yet there is Danny, today, still blessed with the same health, though not so strong as he used to be, and probably one of the oldest men in the United Kingdom at the moment.

The seven sons and five daughters that he reared are all married, with the exception of one son and daughter dead, as is also his wife. He lives with his son who is 75, and like his father, is drawing the old-age pension. In the house next to him lives a married grand-daughter who has a baby, so that Danny is a great-grandfather, and proud of the fact.

"As long as I can mind," he told our representative, "I went to Chapel every Sunday and holiday. I go yet, and not the last either. This day week I hope to be in Lurgan to buy nets. I got on the bus. Mebbe I'll not live to wear them out, but there will always be somebody."

He cannot tear himself away from his boat, and still goes out with a grandson to fish a little. On the previous day he had a catch of upwards of a score of pike. Danny's hair is quite white, and he told me he cut it himself, and he gets shaved when he goes to Portadown occasionally.

"The barber makes nothing out of me except what he gets for shaving me," he said with a roguish smile. As I took my leave of him and wished him yet many happy days, he said: "I haven't any notion of dying yet a while," and certainly his appearance and buoyancy of spirits did not belie his words.

PARK BOARD ACTS FOR LOCAL SKATERS

Favors Center Springs Shelter House, More Lights and Sweeping of Pond.

A shelter house to be located on the north side of the skating pond on the Center Springs Park, has been decided on by the Park Commissioners and is to be built by the Manchester Construction Company, the work to be started at once. The building will be of frame and closed on three sides. The steep bank on the north will cut the wind. There will be no heat in the building, but provision will be made for fires in front of the open side. Benches will be provided for use in changing skates, but it is not the intention of the Park Commission, out of whose appropriation it is to be built, to make it a gathering place for onlookers. It will be for the use of skaters only. The building will measure ten feet by thirty. Part of it may later be converted into a place where hot coffee, cocoa and something to eat may be had, but this is to be decided upon later. In addition to providing the building better lighting will be arranged and the Park Commission will take charge of keeping the pond clear of snow.

VESTRIS VICTIM MAY BE RELATED LOCALLY

There is a fair possibility that the "E. Braithwaite" listed among the missing persons in the Vestris sea disaster may be a distant relative of J. Rhey Braithwaite, of 52 Pearl street.

When notified by The Herald that such a name was included in a list of the missing persons this morning, Mrs. Braithwaite said that her husband had a brother by that name who was connected with the navy, and that it might be he, but her husband ended any undue alarm for he said his brother, Harold, died in 1920.

Mr. Braithwaite added that he had relatives in Bridgeport, New York and Chicago. There is a second cousin, Henry Braithwaite living in Chicago, but the local man did not think any of his relatives had occasion to be on the fatal ship.

OIL MAGNATE ILL

Baron, Hussar Captain, Here As A Decorator

Rarely does a town unknowingly entertain a baron or a captain of a European regiment, composed entirely of members of the nobility, or a man who had been a scenic director of the Metropolitan Opera House and of the old Hegret Cosmopolitan studio that made such screen features as "When Knights Rode" and "The Sign of the Cross," or a man who holds a degree of electrical engineer, and is a graduate of the Paris and Munich Academies of Fine Arts. Manchester, nevertheless, was unconscious host to all these in one person when Baron Alexander Seitz, a widow trimmer and interior decorator for the Hartford Gas Company, came here to supervise the remodeling of the Gas company's office on Main street.

The Baron has a legitimate right in this title and he was a captain in the 7th Hussars of the Austro-Hungarian army during the old Austria-Hungarian empire. He is also a graduate electrical engineer and a graduate of the Academies of Fine Arts in Paris and Munich. He is, too, a first cousin of George Seitz, internationally famous moving picture director now under contract with Famous Players.

Baron Alexander Seitz came to this country 30 years ago. Since then his father died and the title descended to him as the eldest son. The Baron however had become thoroughly Americanized by that time and adhering to the rule "when in Rome go as the Romans do" has never used his title. He says that his father would rise in wrath from his grave should he realize that his son had renounced his birth right.

The name of Seitz has played an important part in the history of Hungary since 700 A. D. when Count Seitz, driven out of Roumania by Turkish invasion, sought refuge in Hungary where the title of Baron was bestowed on him.

The call of new and far land proved an irresistible attraction for the Baron while still young, so he came to this country 30 years ago and has since then made America his home.

GILKINSON WILL CASE IS SETTLED

Property Is Sold to Samuel Gilkinson Who Is Paying Others in Cash.

The trouble that took the heirs under the will of the late Samuel Gilkinson into Hartford county superior court, has been settled. The case concerned a mortgage three of the heirs claimed William, one of the four heirs under the estate, still owed the estate. The division of the property was made by Robert J. Smith, as administrator, who gave to each of the four heirs an equal part. William and Samuel were each given a quarter interest as were Mrs. Minnie Henderson and Mrs. Sarah Harvey.

A claim was made that one of the brothers, who had built a home of his own had borrowed money from his father to do this and that the money had never been repaid. In addition to the house on Lincoln street, there was also some money, but the inventory did not show that there was anything in the way of an outstanding bill due from one of the sons. The heirs requested that it be taken to court and it was tried last winter. The son they claimed had owed the money presented a note, which he said he had received from his father when he paid up the bill and the court decided against the other heirs.

As a result of this the heirs got together by deeds filed in the town clerk's office the property is being given to Samuel who is paying the others their shares in money.

NO RETURNS MADE YET ON DOCTOR'S LETTERS

Dr. LeVerne Holmes, school doctor, who was responsible with the town board of health for sending to the parents of each pupil a circular letter telling of the advantages of vaccination as a preventive against disease says that it is as yet a little too early to tell just how the letter and the enclosed pamphlet is being taken by the parents. There seems to be no objection so far and this, he says, would indicate that it is meeting with favor.

The work is not to be done by Dr. Holmes, but the certificate is to come from the family doctors. It will take better than a week before any report can be given. The returns are not expected until next week, but from the general comment that he has heard on the matter it seems to be meeting with favor with the parents of the children.

MR. WALCOTT'S CHANCE

There are a few Connecticut people who have taken a real interest in the possibility of creating a great ocean terminal at New London—but only a few.

Every tree lover will be interested in this subject, because if the chestnut is going to do a "comeback" after the years of blight which seemed to have spelled its doom, there will be general rejoicing.

Since reading the New Britain man's letter we learn from a resident of Addison that there is on his property a vigorous independent young chestnut tree about seven feet high, as well as several smaller ones.

In this connection the Herald invites communication from any of its readers who may know of the existence of young chestnut trees and it would be especially interesting to know if any of them has reached the bearing stage.

It would seem, if there are any such, that the nuts are a bit too sacred a thing to eat—that they ought to be planted and every effort employed to raise trees from them.

Such a place! Scoffing at the Bristol Press' expressed fears that the new cement highway down Southington mountain is going to prove a toboggan slide for automobiles when the snow and ice come, the Ansonia Sentinel points to the "shoulder on each side of the road, of full driving width, of crushed stone offering better traction (traction) than did the old road, evidently for use in winter driving."

The Sentinel conceives the mountain road to be an engineering marvel and altogether a lovely thing. "But," it admits, "it is no place to come down on brakes alone, never to be used and never can be."

To all of which our comment is that, if we just simply had to come down Southington mountain when there was ice on the ground, if there was absolutely no way in which we could avoid it—we wouldn't. We'd stay up there and live on the scenery till spring.

Small Excuse Mrs. Sinclair Lewis (Dorothy Thompson) accuses Theodore Dreiser of plagiarizing her book "The New Russia" in the writing of his newer book "Dreiser's Look at Russia." She points to various passages where Dreiser uses the same adjectives and almost the same language, in describing Moscow, that she employed. Dreiser says, in effect, that Mrs. Lewis is all wet, inasmuch as he was in Russia longer than she was and knows more about it, and that anyhow he handed her most of her material.

As a matter of fact these two folks don't appear to us to have between them anything worth quarreling about. Whether Dreiser swiped Mrs. Lewis' stuff or Mrs. Lewis swiped Dreiser's stuff or they both swiped the major part of their stuff from official Soviet publications makes mighty little difference.

Regrettable For obvious reasons we didn't care to speak of it at the time, but it is sincerely to be hoped that, if Manchester ever has another parade with out of town organizations coming here voluntarily to help give us a big day, as on Armistice Monday, the townspeople will treat them with just a little less icy aloofness.

The splendid 169th Regiment and the Governor's Foot Guard may possibly have paraded two miles between ranks of spectators somewhere else and have heard no more than the feeble clapping of a single pair of hands on each block, but we doubt it.

It certainly wasn't any lack of friendly feeling that caused the crowds here to stand as mute as so many wooden Indians, and as undemonstrative. But how is a marching body to know that it is being appreciated if the spectators fail to express their pleasure.

Hereafter, for the sake of making the visitors feel something besides "uncomfortable, at least, let us whom it up a little bit for the marching guests—when they deserve it, as did the 169th and the Foot Guard. At the worst, if we can't get away from our self-consciousness enough to do a little applauding for the guests of the occasion, for heaven's sake let us never again be guilty of the extremely bad taste of emphasizing our lack of hospitality by clapping hands over our own local contingents. That was terrible!

Washington Letter Washington, Nov. 15.—Democratic Chairman John J. Raskob's views on the inefficiency of a political organization which works to elect itself only three or four months every four years may be new business, but they shouldn't be.

After an election, of course, the party in control of government has an enormous advantage. The administration becomes the party's political machine, waxing mighty on federal patronage. The losing party, on the other hand, is always in a bad way. Generally this party has been the Democratic party.

There are all sorts of reasons why a minority party, under our political system, invariably succumbs from its frenzies and laments for another long sleep; numerous serious obstacles which must be overcome by the type of headwork uncommon among politicians if serious competition is to be offered the federal machine four years in the future.

If the party in power provides a satisfactory administration, the case of the minority party becomes nearly hopeless. Smith's campaign this year was based almost wholly on Republican iniquity and neglect of important problems. His job was to convince the voters that he would give them a better brand of government.

The fundamental weakness of the party out of power has generally been its lack of sustained leadership. Without such leadership it can only rarely hope to overcome the majority party's edge which such a party has by virtue of its control. Consider the Democrats over an eight-year period. In 1920 Wilson was assuredly the party's great leader. But Wilson was a very sick man. Incapable of leadership except as an inspirational symbol.

Leadership fell to Cox, but only after a cat and dog fight for the nomination could Cox get his hands on it, and then only for a few months, until he was licked. After that there was no leader to follow for another four years.

If Cox had run close onto Harding's heels in the vote count he might have maintained leadership on the assumption that he was the next logical nominee. But that was impossible and the party did nothing but prepare for the frightful Madison Square Garden mess in 1924, in which no candidate for leadership could establish his supremacy.

When leadership went by default to John W. Davis it appeared that Davis didn't know just what to do with it and, like Cox, he was through after election. The job went by default to Smith at Houston and there were probably some who hoped that, even if licked, he would hold onto it for the next four years. But Smith and his friends were unable to take charge of the party for 1928 purposes before early July.

National chairmen, some of whom have been pretty bad, are named with no thought, apparently, that they will do the party any good after election in case of defeat.

Sometimes parties have been able to point to some inspiring leadership and effective minority effort in Congress, but the character of Democratic opposition there in the last eight years has been little short of pitiful.

There have been a few brilliant instances of defeated candidates who continued leadership of their parties and made victorious comebacks. Thomas Jefferson, Andrew Jackson and Grover Cleveland are those who come to mind.

Bryan maintained continued leadership, but there is question whether, from a standpoint of victory and defeat, he did more harm or good. Today the battered party needs a strong leader, perhaps worse than ever. It may still look to Smith, in recognition of its gallant fight. Or it may, as usual, sail on without helmsman or rudder for another four years.

METHODS OF COOKING

(Continued) Frying is the most unsuitable method of cooking, since it causes the food to be much more difficult to digest. Butter, contrary to popular notions, is a most unsuitable medium for frying, because it becomes separated at extremely low temperature.

Olive oil, cottonseed oil, and corn oil are preferable. The fat should be hot enough to immediately coagulate the outer portion of food immersed so that the fat does not penetrate into the food.

Frying in shallow pans is not as satisfactory as frying in a deep pan, because when the pans are not deep enough, the foods and fats are scorched and mixed in indigestible conglomeration.

Baking is a process of cooking food in the dry heat of an oven. Great temperatures are in this way possible, but the interior of moist foods will scarcely ever reach the boiling point.

Baked foods are drier than boiled foods, and some dextrinization takes place in the external parts of all baked starchy foods.

Baking is a widespread method of preparing any food, even those which are ordinarily ordinarily thought of as being baked, such as carrots, beets, cauliflower, string beans, peaches and celery.

The larger and more solid foods may simply be placed in the oven with a pan underneath to catch the drippings, but the small leaf vegetables should be placed in a baking pan with a cover on to maintain their moisture. Many different vegetables may be combined in his manner.

Roasting, broiling and grilling are practically the same processes in cooking food by direct radiation in an unconfined atmosphere. Roasting is the term used for a large joint. Broiling and grilling are terms applied to comparatively small pieces of meat.

These three processes aim at quickening the surface of the meat so that the most of the juices are retained, and those which escape form the meat gravy used for basting or pouring over the roast to prevent drying, and to more uniformly distribute the heat.

Because of the high temperature of the surface of the meat, a peculiar tasty substance is produced which gives the delightful flavor to the roast meat. Over-roasted meat gives a disagreeable flavor because of scorching.

Broiling is a process of cooking resembling both boiling and baking. The meat is first browned by searing, similar to that of broiling, after which it is covered with a close fitting lid to produce a moist steam.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Nov. 15.—There are underworlds and underworlds in New York.

There are minor underworlds and major underworlds. There are cheap, sodden, tawdry underworlds and rich, powerful, unscrupulous underworlds in which gold is tossed carelessly about. There are Rockefeller's underworld and gutter snipes. These underworlds are well acquainted with each other, but they don't have to speak when they meet, any more than do those representatives of different castes in more polite society.

It is when some Arnold Rothstein is "taken for a ride" that eyes are rubbed and the good folk of a great city look about them and ask, incredulously, "Can such things be?"

Rothstein was insofar as Manhattan went, king of the gamblers. And because he was the biggest of them all he cannot be accepted as typical. He must be categorized as an individual. For, in the underworld as elsewhere, the distinctive personalities reach the peaks, or the depths if you prefer.

When one considers that some such sum as $285,000 dropped in a mid game was mentioned as a possible cause of the Rothstein shooting, the sums involved in a few evenings of play can be properly appreciated. And when Rothstein's properties were estimated, they added up to something around $20,000,000.

Yet, with all this wealth and power in the underworld—"they" got him.

With all his riches and drag, Rothstein knew that he was marked and could do nothing about it, but wait.

Rothstein belonged to an aristocracy of the underworld. There's a trim, busy little cafe on Broadway, just below 50th Street, where his tribesmen gather. You'll learn by listening, but not to them, that So-and-So dropped a million on the horses last season. And So-and-So has the reputation of being a wise guy, with inside information and all that. If he can lose a million, what chance has the average plunger?

You'll hear, but not from them, that Nick the Greek is back in town, which means that big crap games will go on behind closed doors for a few nights.

Of all the gambling figures in Manhattan, Nick the Greek is likely to live the longest and have the fewest enemies. The reason is that he generally loses. And, again, he doesn't play steadily. He may make a profession of gambling, but he fits in and out. He may drop a fortune, but unlike the other professional gamblers of Broadway, he doesn't hang around to get it back in one way or another.

He doesn't try to fix races, or prize-fights, or engage in all the various and sundry by-products of the gambling racket. He wins quickly or he loses quickly. In any event he's here today and gone tomorrow. If he loses, he disappears into the west or middle-west. He stays away for many months. And when he comes back he has big money. No one ever has learned how or where he gets it. No one has asked. Nick is a real "sport." He wins and loses like a gentleman. He never squawks, and he always pays up.

Rothstein was, of course, a "lone wolf." One has to be to become biggest man in anything. A gambler who runs nothing into millions has to play a lone game and hit out for himself. He has to have the "house percentage" and he has to be "in the know" when the big wagers are on, whether it be a fight or a race. He has to invest his money, as Rothstein did—trying it up in apartments and clubs and businesses. And he has to, some day before he is very old, get ready for "the works"—for no man can win millions without leaving a trail of fees.

Windham Determined To Trip Local Schoolboys

'Watch The Chicago Cubs With Hornsby,' Slogan

With Roger Playing Second and McCarthy Managing It Will Be Worth Watching.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, Nov. 15.—"Watch the Chicago Cubs," comes the word from the boys who see all, hear all and know nothing. "Watch the Cubs with Hornsby in there."

There's one thing you can always say for the boys. They are never any sillier than usual. With Hornsby playing second base and Joe McCarthy running the ball club, no one will have to tell baseball to watch the Cubs. It will be watching because it will be prompted by one of the most compelling of all emotions—human curiosity.

There is little of the "clubhouse lawyer" about Hornsby. His emotions are too honest to tolerate even a hint of surreptitious conniving. He simply is impetuous, crazy to win. In fact, he is a ball player with only one possible liability. He prefers to do his thinking out loud.

Branch Rickey, Jack Hendricks and Jim Tierney, have listened from left to right to some of his most candid thoughts without marked enthusiasm. The first two were managers of ball clubs on which Hornsby worked; the third is something of a one-man "kitching cabinet." All three are agreed that there is one outstanding trouble with Hornsby.

He isn't a deaf mute. Will Mac Stand for it? Will McCarthy overlook a few frank utterances from time to time? Undoubtedly. Joseph generally is credited with being a man of human understanding and an occasional expression of honest opinion about this and that is only part of the ball game, after all. But Joseph's family name is McCarthy, and he comes by it very honestly.

"There's one thing you can bet on, no matter what happens," an American association man told the writer recently. "Joe McCarthy will boss any ball club he is managing."

This man knew McCarthy through all the latter's years in the association. But he doesn't know Hornsby or he wouldn't be thinking along the lines his remark called to mind. Hornsby is no man to conceal and deliberately try to undermine another's authority. To all outward intents he reported in Jack Slatery in St. Petersburg last spring without nothing in his mind except the matter of getting himself ready to give the best he had for the ball club. It is natural to surmise that Hornsby had something to do with or was behind the heading of Slatery and his own elevation to the job of player-manager. There is nothing in the evidence to sustain this notion.

Hornsby, however, did say a number of things to the boys in his role of field captain and his tone never was the kind that lacks authority. He wasn't with the club three days before he had called some of the players off the gallow for smoking in the dressing room. That's Hornsby. Intolerant of careless spirit; out of patience with mediocrity. He lives baseball; he breathes it. To those who don't share his enthusiasm, he becomes a fanatic, a pest.

Watch the Cubs? The next thing you know somebody will be telling us not to forget to breathe.

Dr. Charles W. Goff, formerly connected with Cheney Brothers Medical department and now conducting private practice in Hartford, who is also captain of the Collecting Company in the 118th Medical Regiment of which several Manchester young men are enrolled, has loaned army blankets to each member of the Cubs football team for the series with the Cloverleaves. They come in quite handy these chilly November afternoons.

The Meriden Journal says that Jack Curry's Endeavor basketball team will open its home season November 24 in Meriden with the Bridgeport Alpines. Curry, a former member of the old Company G team here, has the following men in his team this season: Billy Cook and Jack Rothenfeld at forward positions, Jerry Conway at center, with Herm Cohen, Red Linger and Eddie McCarthy at guard-posts.

The Herald bowling league matches tonight are as follows: At FARRS, Manchester Construction vs. Charter Oaks, Bon Ami vs. Highland Park; at MURPHY'S, Sons of Italy, West Sides vs. Nighthawks; Center Church vs. Manchester Green. The first round schedule is due to be printed on this page tonight. Members of all teams will do well to clip it out for reference and alley managers should post them in their places of business.

It has been definitely decided that the town series game between the Cubs and Cloverleaves will start at 2 o'clock sharp Sunday afternoon. The teams will take the field for practice shortly after 1 o'clock.

Smith, formerly connected with the sports department of the Hartford Courant and now with the New York Evening Graphic, telling of his deep regret in learning of the death of Herby Flavell. Ken saw Herb were the best of pals and he was shocked to learn the sad tidings.

Judge Fuchs, having traded Hornsby away, announced the other day he would manage the Braves himself. The judge may as well have the disgrace as anyone else.

Later, however, the judge announced that Johnny Evers would help him. Something like C. C. Pyle hiring Red Grange to help him play football.

What We Think In Sports

By THOMAS W. STOWS

FAIR PLAY
As the date for the opening of Manchester's big football classic between the Cubs and the Cloverleaves rapidly approaches, one hears all sorts of wild rumors and remarks that detract, rather than add, to the real intent of the sport. It is nothing new, for they crop up annually.

Football, the same as baseball, basketball or any other sport, was founded for the promotion of athletics on a sportsmanlike basis. There is no place in football for the man who doesn't play the game on the level. Colleges bear out this statement, yet the sports field contains and altogether too generous sprinkling of the undesired element.

More Harm Than Good
However, it is interesting to note the decrease of this class. Officials of athletic organizations have come to the realization that this element is a handicap, rather than an asset. And so, it will be in the town series in Manchester. The player who goes into the game with the sole intention of giving his utmost for his team's cause is bound to be of the most value to his club.

Remarks about "getting" this or that player is decidedly foolish business. Almost always those who make the threats would be more valuable to their team sitting on the bench than playing. For, after all, it is the player who accepts an intentional foul with a smile, thus reaping the profit of the penalty, who does the most for his team. Retaining foul play for the same, is very unwise and often exceeding injurious to a team's cause, especially when the person first offended happens to be one of the best players on that organization.

Keeping Cool Important
Ability to play football means little or nothing if a player cannot exercise better judgment than to "lose his head" over an unfair play. Winning the town title means a lot to many fans at both ends of the town and the players owe it to their loyal supporters to be very unwise and play hard, but fairly, at all times. It is better to have lost fairly than to have won through foul play.

Unfamiliarity with the rules is often costly to a team which is over-anxious in an important contest and because of this fact, I think it would be advisable for all of the players on both teams to study the penalties which are given below, or better still, read over the rule book a bit before Sunday.

FIVE YARDS:
Failure of substitute to report.
Guard or center carrying the ball.

Penalty to snap ball.
Player attempting fair catch, taking more than two steps after the catch.

Time called more than three times in one half by a captain.
Unreasonable delay.
Holding the defensive side.
Rushing into the kicker.
Crawling.

LOSS OF 15 YARDS:
Substitute communicating with another player before ball is put in play.
Player leaving field during en-minute intermissions.
Failure to come to a stop in shift play.

Interference with fair catch.
Throwing player who has made a fair catch.
Pushing, pulling, interlocked interference.

Holding by side in possession of the ball.
Interference by side making forward pass.
Forward pass by side not putting ball in play.
Intentionally throwing ball to ground to make incomplete forward pass.

Roughing the kicker.
Piling up.
Hurdling.
Tripping, tackling out of bounds.
Unsportsmanlike conduct; abusive language.

LOSS OF 25 YARDS:
Team delaying start of game.
Team not ready to start second half.
Clipping.

LOSS OF HALF DISTANCE TO GOAL LINE:
Illegal return to game.
Player disqualified for kneeling, striking, kicking.
Foul within one yard line. Foul behind goal line.

SUSPENSION:
Illegal return to game.
Illegal equipment.

Milton Cohen Expects To Outpoint Battalino

New York Feather Hopes To Square Accounts Tonight In Hartford.

Bat Battalino and Milton Cohen of New York meet tonight in Foot Guard hall in the star bout of the Ed Hurley Boxing Club show. They met before in pepping rain at the Velodrome so the question of supremacy remains unsettled. Battalino sees himself winner on a knockout, insisting he could not get set to punch in their other meeting as the ring was soaked. Cohen is not a very stiff puncher so he makes no kayo forecast, but he does believe his superior boxing talent and ring generalship will enable him to keep out of the way when Bat rushes in to the attack and he expects to pile up enough points to win.

Milton Cohen

There are several bouts on the undercard. Pancho Villa meets Red Riner of Springfield in a six-rounder and Marino Pagoni of Springfield will meet Zeke Maxier, Hartford county lightweight, in another six. Eddie Reed battles Nick Florentino of New Haven in a four-rounder and Kid Thomas of New Britain will clash with Bobby Freeman of Hartford in a four. There are three other bouts.

PROMISING BACK AT OREGON.

John Kitzmiller, sophomore halfback at Oregon, is being acclaimed by critics that section as one of the most promising backs in the country.

PLAYERS WARNED AGAINST UNFAIR PLAY BY COACHES

Fay and Kelley Not to Tolerate Rough Tactics; Mentors Preach Rules.

Coach Jerry Fay of the Cloverleaves said last night that he had warned his team against any rough playing in the series with the Cubs. The former Grove City star made it plain that he will not tolerate any unsportsmanlike play. "Regardless of any remarks that may come from any irresponsible fans, my team is going into those games to play football. Anybody who doesn't want to come back to the bench. What's more, if any of my players are put out of the game for dirty playing, they are done for the series," he concluded. It is understood that Coach Kelley feels about the same concerning unfair playing. At the last practice session, he spent considerable time reading various rules and penalties from the rule book to the members of his team so as to prepare them for their crucial test Sunday.

Both Kelley and Fay represent sportsmen of high standard. Much of their knowledge in this respect was picked up at college. They can be relied upon to do their utmost to see that the members of their teams play football as it should and not let personal feelings get the better of them.

Which indicates that Gans is one of the best prospects among all the young boxers and good judges of the sport say he looks like a sure champion. Gans, shown here, is said to be one of the best showmen developed since Paul Shervenbach.

SWISS HOCKEY STAR MADE HEAD OF TEAM AT YALE THIS FALL

Walter Lehman, once noted Swiss hockey player, is directing soccer work at Yale this fall, stepping into the position of head coach after four years as freshman coach, and will carry on the reputation of having put out teams that took fifty-three out of sixty games played. Lehman, graduate of the University of Berne, was on the all-Swiss soccer teams of 1906-07-08. When the war interrupted Europe's other activities he served as a captain in the Swiss army mountaineers. He came to Yale in 1923. For the last two summers he has been back in Switzerland serving as head-coach for the Swiss National Soccer and Athletic association, lecturing and demonstrating to the major teams in that country.

Dope Points to Victory for Kelleyites, But Underdog Has Been Winning Altogether Too Freely This Season.

With all of its players in splendid physical condition, something unusual in football nowadays, Manchester High school will enter its annual clash with Windham High at Willimantic tomorrow afternoon the favorite to win. Manchester has won six of its seven games and has but two more to play, the other with Naugatuck High, Connecticut's only undefeated schoolboy outfit of importance here a week from today. Victory over Windham and Naugatuck would give Coach Tom Kelley's aggregation about as good a claim to the mythical state title as any other school in the state. But before thinking too much about a win over Naugatuck, Manchester must be disposed of. That should be no easy task, even though the statistics favor dear old M. H. S. Windham of late years has been a tough nut for Manchester to crack and who knows but what the psychological effect of entering the game the underdog may be beneficial to Willimantic.

According to reports reaching here from the Thread City, Windham is determined to beat Manchester regardless of the outcome of any other contest on its slate. Plans are being made for a new field at Windham High and the game with Manchester is being advertised as a financial stepping stone to that end. All of which means that a record breaking crowd is expected to watch the battle.

Manchester will have the advantage in weight, but Windham hopes to win through the air if unsuccessful on land. A chap by the name of Melkie, brother to the lad who plays fullback for the local Cubs, is said to be the best line runner on the Windham team with Warren one of the fastest and most dangerous ones backfield there.

Coach Kelley put his team through a long scrimmage practice yesterday both on the defense and offense. Special emphasis was laid on the perfection of the local aerial defense. The importance of intercepting passes was stressed by the local mentor. The only changes in Manchester's lineup over last week will be that Healey will be back at his wing post and Red Happenny had replaced Sully Squatrito as regular halfback. Healey had been out with an injured leg while Happenny showed up good against Bulkeley High of New London here last week.

HAS QUEER GUN THAT MASQUERADES AS CANE

Price of Ledgard's Arms Collection is Walking Stick That Shoots.

J. P. Ledgard, well known North Main street proprietor of a sporting goods and bicycle repair shop, besides being a numismatist of local repute, has an interesting and fine collection of firearms.

The weapon that Mr. Ledgard considers the prize of his collection and the one that creates the greatest amount of comment among those who have its history and action explained to them is a cane gun shooting a 44 calibre bullet.

The cane gun is kept in a glass case and only on special request will Mr. Ledgard remove it from its sanctum. The gun resembles an ordinary heavy walking stick, but a twist of the head and a slight pull reveal a hidden chamber that will hold one 44 calibre cartridge and concealed on the under side of the cane is a screw which, when there is a shell in the chamber, acts as a trigger. At the butt end of the cane is a plug which, when removed reveals the rifling of a gun barrel.

Such cane guns, Mr. Ledgard says are all of foreign manufacture. The one in his collection was made in England. The manufacture of them has practically ceased. At one time, however, they were in demand by poachers.

Mr. Ledgard says the cane gun was presented to a member of his family years ago.

Science Editor, NEA Service As winter comes, the American motorist will have to watch the daily weather reports more closely than he has the rest of the year.

For on the temperature of each locality will depend the amount of anti-freeze solution to use in his cooling system. This is especially true if denatured alcohol is being used.

In order to keep the motorist well informed regarding this important phase of motoring, the United States Bureau of Standards has experimented with various forms of anti-freeze in varying proportions and under different temperatures. As a result, the engineers have formulated a table of figures telling what proportion of anti-freeze to use with water for the degree of temperature expected at any locality or at any time of winter.

Here is the table:
Degrees Fahrenheit	Per cent Alcohol	Per cent Glycerine
20	19	22
10	30	32
0	38	40
-10	45	47
-20	52	54

The alcohol here considered is the denatured variety, 188-proof. The glycerine is the pure, distilled chemical that is now being prepared in several commercial forms for radiator use especially.

Forms of terylene glycol may be considered for the purposes of this table as "glycerine."

The temperature given is the lowest to which the percentage of anti-freeze and water may be used with safety. Below that temperature, the proportion should be increased in order to keep the solution from freezing.

Water ordinarily freezes at 32 degrees Fahrenheit. In order to keep it from freezing when the outside temperature is lower than 32 degrees Fahrenheit, a proportion of anti-freeze must be added to the water. Since the freezing point of the anti-freeze is lower than that of water, the mixture of this liquid with the water of the cooling system tends to keep the resultant solution from freezing.

This is the explanation for the use of anti-freeze.

As the temperature of the air outside drops it is obvious that the amount of anti-freeze in proportion with water would have to be raised. Thus, according to the table given, if the outside temperature is expected to go down to 20 degrees above zero, which is 12 degrees below water's freezing point, alcohol to the amount of 19 per cent, or one-fifth of the total cooling system content, should be used, with the remainder water. If glycerine is to be used, this proportion would have to be 22 per cent of the entire amount.

In order to tell exactly how much alcohol would make one-fifth of the cooling system content at 20 degree Fahrenheit, the capacity of the cooling system must be known. This is given in the instruction book that goes with each automobile. If this book is not handy, any dealer or service station attendant will furnish the information.

In the case of alcohol, only so much should be used as is necessary to satisfy present conditions, or at least for a time until a rise in temperature is expected. This can be gauged by the time of year and the average temperature conditions of each locality.

If glycerine is used, however, the problem is simplified. The lowest possible temperature over the entire winter may be considered at the very start and the proportion of glycerine suggested by the table for that temperature, mixed with the water.

Thereafter there should be no more worry about the proper amount of glycerine in the cooling system, provided there is no leak.

PLAN ON SPEED ROADS

A syndicate headed by Lord Asquith has offered to build several speed roads between principal towns in England. The roads would contain two lines of traffic. No crossings would be encountered and there would be no speed limit.

OCEANS OF GASOLINE

The average American motorist used more than 550 gallons of gas during 1927; the total amount consumed was 11,563,490,000 gallons. Averaging 13.5 miles to the gallon, the motor vehicles have traveled 1,516,071,150,000 miles in consuming this gas.

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Fate introduces JERRY RAY to wealthy ALESTER CARSTAIRS when he crashes his airplane into the camp site...

Unable to buy a new gown for a party Alester has invited her to, Jerry yields to the temptation to take one from the store...

Jerry is discharged from the store when she confesses that the dress is ruined. She seeks another job, and is surprised one evening when Dan calls...

Alester takes Jerry for a drive and goes to the deserted camp where he offers a ring and a proposal which stuns her...

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV
The theater was dimly lighted and silently vast, it seemed to Jerry...

"Lights," Mr. Weinertz bawled, and there was a scurry of feet in answer. A few seconds later the stage was flooded with light...

"Will you walk through that door over there and go up on the stage, please?" he said.

Jerry glanced at Alester, her heart in her slippers. He took her by the arm and moved with her to the door.

"Don't forget what I told you, kids," he whispered. "Close your eyes while you dance and pretend you're a prima donna stopping the show."

Jerry forced a smile. Alester accompanied her to the stage and stood by while a piano was moved onto it at Mr. Weinertz's order.

Then he left her, after dragging a chair from the wings and placing it near him.

A young man came out and seated himself at the piano. He did not look at Jerry and she thought he must have left some interesting occupation to play for her tryout...

More lights were turned on and she feared that the trembling in her knees could be seen from the front seats, where Alester had joined Mr. Weinertz.

Suddenly a jazz tune jangled out from the piano and Jerry heard a voice calling to her to dance. She closed her eyes and attempted to obey. But her feet had become glued to the floor.

"All right, all right," Mr. Weinertz shouted to the piano player. Then to Alester: "Go up and get your little friend, Al."

The music crashed to a stop. Jerry's heart turned to ice. She had failed, but they'd given her such a little time... Alester was leading her off the stage in silence. She was too humiliated to look at him.

Mr. Weinertz was standing. He put out a hand and took one of hers. "My my," he said: "what a cold hand it is. But that is fine, fine. All the true artists have stage fright. The others—pooh—no imagination. I would not want a girl even in my chorus who was like that."

He pushed Jerry gently into a seat. "Now you will sit here and get used to the theater," he went on, "while we hear some singers."

Jerry felt a surge of relief come over her that brought tears to her eyes. She sank back in the seat with a big sigh. Alester began to talk rapidly, inconsequently, and she knew that he too had been humiliated by Jake Weinertz's calling her off the stage; that he was evincing relief.

They had to wait a few minutes before the singers arrived. Mr. Weinertz turned to Jerry and told her that she was to sing. She was nervous, but she wanted to say something, something about the theater, and she knew practically nothing concerning it.

"It's the test we give to voices," Mr. Weinertz explained. "Those singers Mr. Arradonde selects at his auditions come here and sing for me. They must be judged for appearance and stage presence, as well as for voice," he added conversationally.

Jerry was glad she hadn't been asked to sing, doubly so when, a little later, several young women came onto the stage and bowed nervously around the piano. The pianist was called and again took his place. One of the singers stepped forth at a signal from a small, dark man with gray hair at his temples whom Jerry had not seen step out of the wings, and took a piece nearer the proscenium.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

A Nebraska man decided, so he now confesses, that his young wife must be killed because she smoked cigars. He tried strychnine first and wheat flour next...

He gave some signal that Jerry did not see. Mr. Arradonde—she guessed it must be he—motioned the singer back to the piano when they music stopped abruptly in the middle of her song.

Then another girl walked down stage and Jerry felt Mr. Weinertz's arm brush against hers as he jerked himself forward in his seat, his eyes on the scene before him.

"Arradonde," he called, before the girl could start singing. "Come here."

The dark man came to the footlights and Jerry could hear plainly what passed between him and Mr. Weinertz when the latter went over to talk to him.

She looked curiously at the girl on the stage. Surely she was good looking enough and she was very smartly dressed.

"She can't sing—she's a piece of tinsel, I tell you," Mr. Weinertz was saying angrily to Mr. Arradonde.

The latter turned to look at the girl. His brows came together in a black line.

"I don't remember having seen her before," he said. "No, of course you don't," Mr. Weinertz answered excitedly. "It's her old trick. She wants to get out of the chorus so she slipped into the office with you singers after you'd heard them and... here she is," he added, "but she tried the same thing last year with Mr. Shields. I remember her."

He raised his face to the girl. "If you had a voice to match your nerve," he said to her, "I'd go into grand opera and sign you up for life. Get off the stage. Come around for regular rehearsal tomorrow if you want a place in the chorus."

"You go to hell," the girl retorted and shrugged her way off the stage.

Jerry's mouth was O-shaped in surprise. She pulled away from the producer when he came back to his seat. Was that the way he talked to girls who didn't have rich young friends to introduce them?

The theater had lost some of its glamour already. Two of the remaining singers were rudely stopped and motioned away. Jerry's heart ached for them, and for the poor creatures hopelessly occupying the hard benches in Mr. Weinertz's waiting room.

She was glad when the tryouts for the singers were over. It didn't matter quite so much to her now whether she failed or succeeded. She had begun to perceive that one must have a love for the stage greater than hers not to mind its seamy side.

But she'd started and she'd make good if she could. There was a seamy side to working in a department store, too; the cranky customers, for instance.

When she found herself on the stage the second time she was able to dance—not as well as she could, but well enough to satisfy Mr. Weinertz that she possessed grace and a sense of rhythm.

He was willing, he told her, to stage her for the chorus, but he hoped she realized that a lot of hard work was attached to the job. Jerry said she would be glad to work hard. It couldn't be, she thought, with an inward smile, so very hard to practice dance steps. Why, dancing was fun. It was the fear of being rudely bawled out that bothered her.

She and Alester left the theater alone. Mr. Weinertz had other business there.

"Let's go to the Ambassador and dance," he said eagerly. "I'm proud of you, Jerry."

It was the first time Alester had seen her to a fashionable hotel. Perhaps she was still making amends, she thought. Well, she wasn't ashamed of her appearance, and she was going to be somebody now. He might really be proud of her some day.

The tea room with its air of richness delighted her. She had to pinch herself once or twice to make sure that she wasn't dreaming and that she would not wake up presently and find herself back in her furnished room, with a day at Fane's ahead of her.

The women she saw at nearby tables were beautifully gowned and all of them wore at least one jewel. Jerry glanced at her own hands. They looked so bare without even a single ring.

Perhaps Alester followed her glance and read her thoughts for he reached into his pockets and pulled out the emerald ring she had given him. He put it on the table between them and Jerry wondered what he was going to say.

DIET AND HYGIENE BIG FACTORS IN GOOD TEETH
By MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

No matter how beautiful a person may be, an open mouth revealing decayed or stained teeth with discolored and badly formed gums will ruin the effect of the facial appearance.

Of late so much has been written on the care of the teeth that everyone should know that a badly chosen diet during infancy and childhood will lead to defective and decaying teeth.

The healthfulness and appearance of the gums is greatly dependent on the cleanliness of the teeth and on factors of irritation.

Because of poor tooth structure or deficient cleaning, food may remain between the teeth. This food acts as an irritating substance and also as a point at which bacteria may grow and develop toxic materials which act further to cause inflammation and suppuration.

When a Tooth Is Out
After teeth are fully erupted, they do not grow in length or breadth, and they are not likely to change their positions unless changes occur through the removal of teeth or through extensive decay.

If a molar tooth is lost, the teeth on either side of it will begin to tip toward each other, eventually practically closing the space between them.

If either a lower or an upper molar is lost, the one opposite it will have no tooth to strike and will continue to elongate until it becomes loose and is finally lost.

When a sufficient number of teeth are lost and are not replaced by artificial teeth, extra work and strain is put upon those that remain, so that they may wear more rapidly or as a result of movement become loose.

Finding the Cause
It is impossible to assign any single cause for receding gums. Expert dentists list the accumulation of tartar at the place where the teeth join the gums, poorly finished fillings or inlays and rough edges on teeth or artificial dentistry as contributing factors.

A diet which does not keep the human tissue in a proper state of nutrition, a diet deficient in important vitamins, will also result in the appearance of receding gums. If such a condition becomes apparent, attention should be paid not only to the teeth themselves but to the whole question of diet and hygiene.

YOUR CHILDREN
by Olive Roberts Barton
Someone said to me, "You write so much about boys, and yet you have girls. Why don't you write more about them?"

Well, perhaps a dozen years hence I can look back and sort it all out, and profiting by my own mistakes, give others suggestions. There are, of course, things to emphasize and things to avoid.

With all my study, my observation, and my professional experience, I am a mother, and a mother of girls. And so I cannot say, "You should do this, and you should do that with your daughters," without a sop to conscience in the form of an apology.

Very often, too, a woman's masculine "he" as a general term applied to all children. This is correct in every sense, for I have found the psychology of the child mind to be about equal in both sexes.

There is little psychological difference between the urge to play house and the urge to play soldier. Both are the development of an impulse to experiment and to satisfy a certain curiosity of life.

As to the adolescent girl, will anyone tell me what manner is not more or less a sex about: the future of her girls when such prospects as Keyserling, Shaw, Ellis, and our own authorities cannot fix her status?

What will happen? Will the safe and sane middle-class go on with the conventions, the tenets of the ten tablets, and thus establish a balance that will guide the family-ship through the stormy seas of this new-world renaissance? Or will they be swept aside by the new-world movement itself with its vast horde of thoughtful young people who are learning in school more secrets of life than their ancestors knew?

Can the ignorant teach the informed? Another thing: how can mothers prepare children for a future that they do not see? In the old times a mother knew what the future her daughter was to face. We mothers know little about the future our daughters must face. In half a century, the world will be in their hands.

What can we do but give them our own ideas of justice, fairness, and our sense of right and wrong as we know it? We can try to avoid complexes in their makeup that will make their fight harder.

There is no use in stumbling over straws when large and ominous hay-stacks are all around us. What is to be said about the future of the girl? Should she be in the kitchen or in the office. Should she make her future husband handy by helping him to bring in the bacon or by cooking the bacon he brings in? Is it her duty to have a large family she can't care for properly or a small one she can?

Who is right? We don't know. Bringing a mother is a big job.

COLUMBIA

Letters which have been recently received from Rev. and Mrs. Duane Wain, now in Portugal studying the language before going to West Africa as missionaries, give interesting accounts of customs and conditions in that country. On their arrival in Lisbon their first impression was that it had the "narrowest, crookedest, most hilly, roughest, dirtiest streets we have ever seen." Dr. Markham got a taxi to take us to his home, and we scarcely drew an easy breath until we were out of it. They apparently have no speed laws, and the taxi simply tore up one street and down another regardless of cobblestones and turns. I never saw anything like it. Some of the streets are so narrow that people walking have to stand back against the wall while a car passes. Can you imagine it? Speeding in such places with a woman are really beasts of burdens. She saw one with an iron bed, mattress and two rocking chairs on her head, together with a dozen chairs tied together. One of the servants in the house where they board carried a wardrobe trunk partly full on her head about a block up a hill and up a flight of stairs.

The money system of Portugal is divided into Escudos and Centavos. 100 Centavos make one Escudo, and one Escudo is worth about 4 1/2 cents in our money. Foods are quite cheap and labor receives very low wages compared to our American ideas. Manual laborers receive about 18 Escudos a day. Servants receive about 100 Escudos or less a month. The combination chambermaid and waitress in their boarding house works from 7:30 to midnight, and then sleeps on a mattress on the floor, all for the princely sum of 40 Escudos a month, about $2.00 in our money. When an American missionary told her of the wages and living conditions of those doing the same sort of work in America, she thought it was a fairy tale.

The distinction between the upper and servant classes is very sharply drawn. Mrs. Wain was told that she must never say "Please" or "Thank you" to a servant. She wished to make candy one day, and asked the landlady for a little butter and a platter, but she was not allowed to carry them to her room, the servant followed bearing the platter and a small piece of butter. The food in Portugal is very good, vegetables being especially cheap and plentiful. Dinners are quite elaborate 4 or 5 courses affairs, and take about an hour and a half to consume. Mrs. Wain says the salads look perfectly delicious, but are dressed with pure olive oil, which is too much for her. Candy and all sweets are very rare. The candy is practically all imported and very high and usually very stale. Mr. and Mrs. Wain are well and happy in their chosen work, but both state that they are occasionally homesick for the airy Columbia Parsonage and all their good friends here. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Lafleur, who were recently married, were surprised Tuesday evening by nineteen fellow employees of Mr. Lafleur's at the S. N. E. Telephone Co., traffic and commercial departments of Willimantic. The guests brought with them material for a bountiful lunch, also a tray of silver for Mr. and Mrs. Lafleur.

They are now in Coimbra on a hill with a beautiful view of the valley. In pleasant weather they study in one of the numerous parks, that little Duane, Jr., may play in the fresh air. Mr. Wain carries the baby in a sort of a knapsack on his back when they take long walks, and everyone staves, as in Portugal it is the women that carry the burdens. Mrs. Wain states that the women are really beasts of burdens. She saw one with an iron bed, mattress and two rocking chairs on her head, together with a dozen chairs tied together. One of the servants in the house where they board carried a wardrobe trunk partly full on her head about a block up a hill and up a flight of stairs. "THE TOILERS" AT THE STATE TODAY Gripping Story of the Coal Mines Has a Brilliant Cast; Olive Borden in Co-Feature. Stark drama, passionate love and the delightful humors of the every day comedy of living which enlivens even a mining village make of "The Toilers," the Reginald Barker production now showing at the State Theater, a film worth seeing twice. Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., and Jobyna Ralston have the featured roles as Steve, the young miner who saves the life of the homeless orphan, and Mary, their unusual and effective characterizations and the side splitting comedy of Harvey Clarke and Wade Boteler as Steve's bachelor housemates form the human element behind which the background of the tolling miners and nature's sporadic resentment against the rifting of her store-houses make such epic drama. "The Toilers," is a picturization of the famous novel by G. Rigby, author of many fine stories of the Pennsylvania coal district. Olive Borden in "The Albany Night Boat," is the associate feature for today and tomorrow. Sparkling humor, thrilling situations and delightful moments of suspense are to be found in this breezy story of modern youth and life's great social problems. Miss Borden is given splendid support by a selected cast of screen notables. The current issue of latest MGM News Events will be shown in conjunction with the two features.

JUST A GAME Dora: "Well, Dad, I'm engaged." Dad: "You don't mean it!" Dora: "Of course not, but I've lots of fun."

TALCOTTVILLE The members of the Missionary Society (home branch) surprised Mrs. George W. Smith at her new home on the Rockville road on Tuesday afternoon. Although the "house-warming" was a complete surprise to Mrs. Smith, she was wholly equal to the occasion, proving herself to be a most gracious and charming hostess. Delicious refreshments were served by the committee consisting of Mrs. Hiram Lovrin, Miss Bertha Dart, Mrs. William Lee and Mrs. Wilbur H. Smith, Miss Dart and Mrs. Lovrin entertained with recitations. After singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds" the company departed, wishing Mr. and Mrs. Smith many years of health and happiness in their attractive new home. Armistice Day was observed on Sunday at both the morning service and the Christian Endeavor meeting. Rev. F. P. Bachefer was the leader of the Endeavor meeting, while Charles R. Monaghan led the Junior C. E. meeting. The Golden Rule club will hold a food sale at the store on Friday afternoon Nov. 16 at 2:30 o'clock. Mr. and Mrs. James Wood were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Shephard and Fred Chase of Hamden.

TROLLEY RAIL RUTS

AGAIN CAUSE WRECK

Erling Larsen's Automobile Turns Over on Main St. No-body Injured.

An automobile driven by Erling Larsen of 72 Seymour street, Hartford, turned completely over when the wheels caught in one of the notorious trolley rail rutts on Main street near the Memorial Soda Shop at Haynes street at 10:30 last night. A car owned by Joseph Morrison of 18 Lilley street was parked in front of the soda shop, headed south. Larsen, going south, attempted to turn out to pass the Morrison car when the wheels of his car caught in the ruts, causing him to lose control and before he could right the car it turned over.

The police were notified and Sergeant Crockett went to make the investigation. The car was righted, the engine started and the automobile proceeded on its own power. Nobody was injured.

The report of the officer showed that the trouble was caused by the bad condition of the roadway around the rails of the trolley company.

FOR NO. 1'S SOCIAL

Will Be Held on Tuesday Evening, Nov. 27, Breaking Old Custom.

The annual Thanksgiving social given by Hose & Ladder Co. No. 1, S. M. F. D., at Cheney Hall will be held two nights before Thanksgiving this year instead of on Thanksgiving Eve as in previous years. The committee has found that many folks have a desire to be at home on the eve of the holiday and some leave town to visit relatives or friends elsewhere. Accordingly arrangements were made to hold the affair on Tuesday evening, November 27th.

The annual "Turkey, Goose and Pig" ticket drawings will be held on this night giving the lucky ones the opportunity to use their prizes on the holiday.

The music committee has secured Benny Conn and his Worcester Bell Hops to furnish music for the dancing. This orchestra is well known throughout New England. Many novelties are introduced by the musicians during the evening. Their radio broadcasting has made many friends for them and a large crowd is expected at the social to enjoy the music as well as the other features.

The various committees are working hard to make this event the best of a long list of annual entertainments of this sort enjoyed by hundreds of people in the past. They are: General Committee: L. N. Heebner, chairman, Harry Schledge, Harry Malmsten, Fred Wohlbe, Lawrence Williams, Clarence Smith, E. L. G. Hohenshal, J. R. Lashinski, Joseph Moore, Stewart Gardner, Fred Lorch, B. B. A NEW PROBLEM

JUDGE: Why do you say your husband was guilty of cruel and abusive treatment? He seems to have been a good provider, faithful, kind and a good father.

WIFE: Yes, but he always hogged the close-ups in our home movies.—Life.

CLAPPER FANNY SAYS

A woman's instinct is what tells her she's right, whether she is or not.

SENSE and NONSENSE

A TONGUE LASHING AND A TICKET

Mother: "Archibald Gilbrooks, what do you mean, talking to your sister that way?" "We're playing I'm traffic cop, Ma."

RECKLESS, ANYWAY
Policeman: "I'm pulling you in for reckless driving, endangering the lives of pedestrians."
Motorist: "Why man, there isn't a pedestrian on the street."
Policeman: "All right then; I'll make it attempted suicide."

"YES BUT—"
It was an enraged traffic cop who addressed himself to a certain fellow who had held up a string of autos several blocks in length. "Can't yer go faster," he roared. "Yes," was the calm reply of the driver of the antiquated flivver. "I can, but I don't want to leave the car."

THERE'S A DIFFERENCE
Child (in bus to stranger) "Daddy, Daddy!"
Mother: "Hush, darling. That isn't Daddy. It's a gentleman."

"How's your car running?"
"Not so good; can't get her throttled down."
"Have your wife?"
"She's the same, thank you."

TILL DEBT DO US PART
No, sir: I'm not interested in a 1928 model. My old bus may not have four wheel brakes and balloon tires but I'm going to keep it just the same. I know I should have a car with a self-starter, and I know that I'm sentimental or enjoy cranking it, or think that kerosene lights are better than electric ones, or like to see a car with the paint all cracked off it, but I'm darned if I'm going to turn it in before I've made the last payment on it.

An exchange says science can explain everything except why a flivver makes a chicken think it lives on the other side of the street.

"How did you become a victim of wanderlust?"
"From constantly searching around for a place to park my car."

The auto salesman rubbed his hands together and said, "Now, Mr. Jones, you seem to be very favorably impressed by the great superiority of our Cold-in-Head Six, as I pointed it out to you. Don't you want to buy one of these great cars?"

"Well, I'm sorry to have taken your time like this," Jones answered, "but you see, I have one of your new Cold-in-Head Sixes. I have had it about a month, and I was becoming discouraged, so I thought I would drop in and hear the sales talk again."

"Well," sighed the householder as guests began backing and turning their automobiles all over his front yard, "it won't be lawn, now."

NEVER GOLF

A VERY LIGHT ONE

Remember way back when every LAMP had its WICK that had to be trimmed every so often? You'll have a hard time trimming par on today's puzzle, however. Par is five and one solution is on another page:

Word puzzle grid with the words LAMP and WICK filled in.

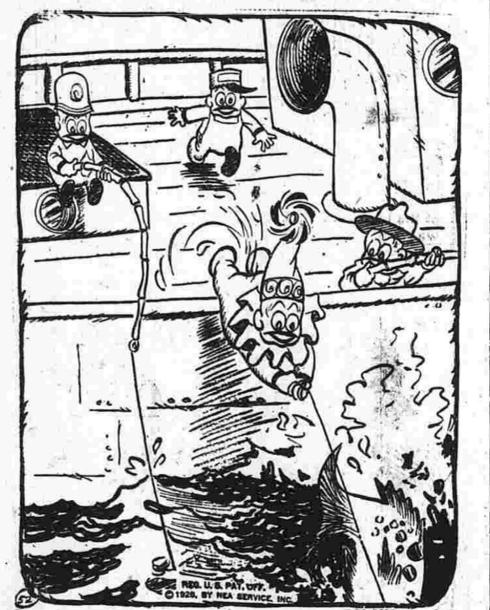

THE RULES

- 1-The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.
2-You can change only one letter at a time.
3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

Where there's plenty of parking space, nobody wants it; and ideas seem to feel that way too.

Invention Wanted: Motor brakes that get tight with the driver.

THE TINYMITES

At last the deck was scrubbed complete. The captain said, "That's very neat. You Tintins know how to work when you apply yourselves. And now that you are ready through, I'll tell you what I'll let you do. Down in the kitchen you can get some cakes off of the shelves.
Up jumped the Tintins, one by one, and Cobby yelled, "That will be fun. The work has made me hungry and the cakes will sure taste good." Into the kitchen they all ran and found the cakes piled in a pan. There came a sudden scramble, and they all ate all they could.
"Now, let's run to our bunk and rest," said Clowzy. "That sounds like the best idea I can think of. Both my arms and legs are sore." They reached the bunk and down they flopped. Then at their door the captain stopped. "How would you like to fish a bit?" they heard him loudly roar.
"Ob, great!" said Scouty.

(Scouty rescues Clowzy in the next story.)

BILLY BOY, BILLY BOY!
 "Can she make a cherry pie, Billy Boy, Billy Boy? Can she make a cherry pie, charming Billy?"
 Ask Grandma or Grandpa if either can remember a song that went like that—and watch for the grins.
 It's a long, long time since charming Billy and the girl who could "make a cherry pie quick as a cat can wink its eye" were roundabout. So long that the idea of making a cherry pie in November would have been a wild joke to the folks who sang the song. But you can do it now, just as well as in June. Pinehurst has the good—freshly received canned PITTED Cherries, all ready for the pie.
 Also Evaporated Peaches that make the best Peach Pie in the world. Likewise Glass Jars of Mince meat of peculiar goodness.
 Among other new arrivals are Cape Cod Hermit Cookies—with all the quality of the home made.
 Another new thing is a mighty handy size package of Chase and Sanborn Tea Bags—25 cents a box.
 A new customer dropped in the other day. She said, "My sister-in-law told me that if I could get it anywhere it would be at Pinehurst." We had "it." We almost always do have, whatever it is if it's in the food line. And that isn't all of it—if we haven't it WE'LL GET IT for you.
