

KING'S TEMPERATURE RISES, LATE BULLETINS ANNOUNCE

Monarch Passes a Quiet Morning; Slight Improvement in General Condition—No Mention Made of King's Heart—Crowds Continue to Gather Before Buckingham Palace.

London, Dec. 4.—A slight increase in the temperature of King George was noted, although not specifically mentioned, in a bulletin issued at Buckingham palace at 3:30 this afternoon. It follows: "The King passed a quiet morning. His temperature is now 100.2. The slight improvement in his general condition noted in the last bulletin is maintained."

The bulletin was signed by the five physicians—Lord Dawson of Penn; Sir Stanley Hewitt; Sir E. Farquhar Buzzard; Dr. L. E. H. Whitby; and Sir Humphrey Rolleston. The afternoon bulletin did not mention the condition of the King's heart.

The morning bulletin had not specified the patient's temperature, but one issued yesterday said it was 99.8.

FIRST BULLETINS

London, Dec. 4.—Another apparently favorable bulletin regarding King George's condition was issued by the Royal physicians at 10:30 a. m. today. The bulletin read as follows:

"His Majesty passed a quiet night, although anxiety concerning his heart must continue, the improvement noted last evening is so far satisfactorily maintained. "Sir Stanley Hewitt, "Lord Dawson, of Penn."

A huge throng awaiting the bulletin outside the palace gates received the news in silence. There were many anxious faces over the reference to the condition of the King's heart.

Prime Minister Baldwin, Sir William Johnson-Hicks, home secretary, and Lord Davidson, of Lambeth, former Archbishop of Canterbury were among the first visitors at the palace this morning.

King Sleeping

In answer to an inquiry at 8 o'clock this morning the only statement the officials would make was that "the King was still sleeping" and that "another bulletin would be issued later in the day."

The officials refused to divulge whether or not Sir Stanley Hewitt, one of the royal physicians, had remained at the King's bedside throughout the night.

The royal physicians arrived at the palace at ten o'clock this morning. Huge throngs gathered before the palace gates to await the bulletin which was expected to follow their visit.

Officials Silent

The palace officials reticent attitude seemed to increase the current uneasiness which was felt here through the night despite the apparently more favorable tone of yesterday's bulletins.

The official bulletin issued at the palace at 8:40 o'clock last night read as follows:

"The slight improvement in His Majesty's condition noted this morning has been maintained. His temperature is near normal. But it is necessary to emphasize the anxiety concerning his heart which still persists."

The bulletin was signed by Sir Stanley Hewitt, Dr. E. Farquhar Buzzard, Sir Humphrey Rolleston and Lord Dawson, of Penn.

Name State Council To Take King's Place

London, Dec. 4.—A Council of State was appointed today to carry out the duties of the Crown because of the protracted illness of King George. Owing to the fact the King is unable to sign state documents, the Cabinet decided upon the appointment of a State Council to carry on the administration of the government in the name of the King. APE MAN OF CALIFORNIA ADMITS HE KILLED FIVE Most Astounding Story of Crime Ever Unfolded; Made Victims Pray Before He Shot Them.

Riverside, Calif., Dec. 4.—Following a dramatic recital of brutality that rivals anything in fiction, Gordon Stewart Northcott today stood out as the most astounding criminal in the history of southern California.

In a voice deadly calm, the young rancher, who is only 21 years old, last night confessed to officers that nine youths were slain at his Winville chicken ranch, and that he himself had killed five of them. Sanford Clark, his 15-year-old nephew, whose weird story of mistreatment and murder of boys brought about Northcott's arrest in Canada and extradition to California, killed a sixth boy, according to Northcott. He refused to say who killed the other three boys. Plans for Northcott's preliminary arraignment in court today may now be changed to allow the young slayer to lead officers to the graves of his victims.

Wants To Show Graves

"Let's hurry and find the bodies," said Northcott at one stage in his ghoulish confession. "I don't want you fellows to think I'm a prevaricator."

Northcott's "breaking" was gradual. Earlier in the evening he confessed the murder of one boy, named Alvin Goehs, a Mexican. But that was all, he said. He admitted that much on a promise that he would be allowed to enter court today and plead guilty to that one slaying.

District Attorney Earl Redwine agreed. Later, however, about 20 miles northeast of San Bernardino, as officers were driving the prisoner to Riverside, he asked them to halt the car, that he had something to tell them.

Must Tell All

"There is use of my going any further until I tell it all," he said. That was the signal for the most weird tale of crime and perversion ever unfolded to the veteran police officers' ears.

Northcott told how he killed one of the boys because he was afraid

THREE PERSONS DIE IN TENEMENT BLAZE

Lights Stick of Dynamite While He Holds Fiancee and Her Mother.

Regina, Sask., Dec. 4.—Aneroid, a little village near here, was excited today over the act of a madman who blew up two persons and himself with a charge of dynamite. The perpetrator of the crime was William Lequa, formerly of Lake City, Minn. Reaching out an arm as he struggled with his estranged fiancee and her mother as they sought to escape from the death trap, Lequa touched a lighted cigarette to a dynamite fuse and blew the trio into eternity.

Lequa's victims were Beatrice Barager, 20, and her mother, Mrs. Mary Goldie. He was a roomer in the double murder, and suicide had been carefully planned in advance. The death trap was laid in Lequa's room.

The blast wrecked adjoining buildings, shattered windows up and down Main street and put the little town in general confusion.

FEW CHANGES PLANNED IN TARIFF LAWS

Speaker Longworth Assures Business Men That Revision Will Be Limited to But a Few Industries.

Washington, Dec. 4.—Revision of the Fordney-McCumber tariff law which will be undertaken by the new Republican Congress may be limited in its scope to a comparatively few industries and schedules, Representative Nicholas Longworth, Republican of Ohio, speaker of the House, said today.

He declared the proposed revision should cause no uneasiness in business circles which sometimes are disturbed while Congress is mulling its way through the thousands of items which make up a tariff law.

"I am in hopes that hearings of the ways and means committee will develop facts that will show a necessity for change in only a few schedules of the tariff law," said Longworth.

Law Works Well

"The present law has worked so well that a great many industries feel that they are now afforded the ample protection provided in the Republican tariff policy."

"The only way in which the facts can be developed is through the holding of public hearings by the

They Killed "to Break a Spell"

The three confessed "voodoo slayers" of York County, Pa., are pictured above after authorities had obtained from them a story that rivaled, in its superstitious horror, tales of old Salem witchcraft. John Blymire, left, self-styled "hex" doctor, is alleged to have instigated the murder of Nelson D. Rehmyer, a farmer, by Wilbert G. Hess, 18, center, and John Curry, 14, right. Below is the house in which Rehmyer was tied to a chair and burned to death when he refused to give a lock of his hair to "break a spell."

CHAMBER TO GO ON WITH WORK; FUNDS ASSURED

First Directors' Meeting Approves Year's Program for Commerce Body; No Curtailment.

It was reported at the first meeting of the new Board of Directors of the Chamber of Commerce last night that as a result of a canvass of the sustaining members' financial backing for the Chamber was assured for the coming year. This dispels an undecorated rumor, afloat for several days, that the Chamber of Commerce would not receive sufficient financial support to warrant its continuance and so would be forced to either disband or inaugurate drastic curtailment of its activities.

The directors last evening approved the budget and assured the secretary of their support in the work planned to be undertaken during the coming year. The board also voted for the continuance of its Investors' Protective Service and authorized an appropriation for the information service furnished by the Burns Detective Agency. That service, the secretary's report

MCKENNA ELECTION MAY BE CONTESTED

Local Man With Residence On Holl Street, Named to Rockville Council.

John K. McKenna, who lives at 88 Holl street, Manchester, was yesterday elected a Democratic member of the Rockville City Council over John J. Connors, Republican, by a vote of 338 to 269. As a result there is a probability that a contest will develop over the seating of Mr. McKenna because of the question of legal residence.

Mr. McKenna became a resident of Manchester in 1927 when he moved into a house at 88 Holl street and was listed by the tax enumerator as a resident in Manchester as was his wife, Mr. McKenna, because of military duty, was exempt from paying the personal tax in Manchester, but Mrs. McKenna did pay a personal tax as a resident of Manchester.

ECONOMY THE KEYNOTE OF COOLIDGE MESSAGE

Coolidge Cryptograms

The country can regard the present with satisfaction and anticipate the future with optimism.

Wastefulness in public business and private enterprise has been displaced by constructive economy.

The national income has increased nearly 50 per cent. It is estimated to stand well over $90,000,000,000.

On the whole the finances of the government are most satisfactory. During the year we have signed 11 new arbitration treaties and 22 more are under negotiation.

Our relations with Mexico are on a more satisfactory basis than at any time since their revolution.

The anti-war treaty "promises more for the peace of the world than any other agreement ever negotiated among the nations."

Our navy is deficient in cruisers. The bill (15-cruiser bill) before the Senate should be passed.

This country is neither imperialistic nor militaristic.

The past year has been marked by notable though not uniform improvement in agriculture.

The government has been, and must continue to be, alive to the needs of agriculture. The surplus problem demands attention.

Putting the government directly into business, subsidies and price-fixing... should be avoided.

We should lend our encouragement for more good roads to all principal points on this hemisphere south of the Rio Grande.

Until we can see our way out of the expense of the Mississippi floodway no further river and harbor legislation should be passed.

The policy of restrictive immigration should be maintained.

The country has duly adopted the 18th amendment. Those who object to it have the right to advocate its modification or repeal. Meanwhile it is binding on national and state governments and all our inhabitants.

We must extend to other countries the largest measure of generosity, moderation and patience.

We can well afford to walk humbly.

Peace and prosperity are not finalities, they are only methods. Our faith in man and God's justification for the belief in our continuing success.

BUYING POWER OF NATION AT HIGHEST PEAK NOW

Retail Trade Expert Predicts Biggest Holiday Business If Weather Is Good—His Survey

New York, Dec. 4.—Never in the history of the country has the buying power of the American people been larger than today. The power to buy and the will to buy goods of all kinds stands at high-water mark, and the weather man holds the key to the biggest holiday trade this country has ever known.

Thus Willis H. Booth, in an exclusive interview today, summarized the retail trade situation in the period of biggest buying, the Christmas shopping period. As a banker and business expert president of the merchants Association of New York and ex-president of the International Chamber of Commerce, Booth is in an excellent position to view every angle of domestic business with the vision of an expert.

"With an 'even break' in the weather in the outlying districts of the country," said Booth, "The American shopkeepers will turn over an enormous volume of holiday goods, household goods, wearing apparel and everything that adds to the enjoyment and festivities of the harvest and holiday season."

WON OVER MILLION ON THE ELECTION

Grand Jury on Rothstein Case Hears of Big Wagers Which Were Made.

New York, Dec. 4.—When Arnold Rothstein, murdered gambling magnate, died on election day, he had won $1,000,000 in bets on the election of Herbert Hoover for president—enough of a haul to pay the $300,000 I. O. U. for which he was slain and a series of gambling debts contracted over a two-year period of "bad business."

This was learned today by authorities as the Grand Jury concluding its investigation into the Rothstein assassination prepared to find three indictments.

Others Backed Hoover

Following the clue of their leader, members of the Rothstein gambling clique also heavily backed Hoover as a winner. Some of the Rothstein mob even visited national Democratic headquarters on the night of the election and placed Hoover bets over the telephone, International News Service learned today.

George A. McManus, whom District Attorney Joseph A. Banton promises the Grand Jury will indict in connection with the murder, today continued to smile in his Tombs prison cell.

Banton deprecated the reported McManus alibi claim that he could show he left the hotel "death suite" shortly after Mrs. Patsy Ruth Keyes, Chicago mannequin, departed. Mrs. Keyes, the witness who identified McManus, left a "party" in the room a few hours before Rothstein was shot.

"I have taken care of the alibi possibility," said Banton today. "We have provided against any such thing to our satisfaction."

Attorneys for the Rothstein estate were making every effort to locate the stake-holders of the $1,000,000 in election bets won by Broadway's notorious gambler.

Counsel for relatives of Rothstein and for the executors of the estate admitted today that a proposal for a settlement of the gambler's death-bed will contest had been made.

"No Congress Has Ever Met With More Pleasing Prospects Than at Present," He Says — Emphasizes Prosperity, Tax Reduction, World Peace and Business Conditions; Warns Against Spending Too Much Money

Washington, Dec. 4.—"No Congress ever assembled has met with a more pleasing prospect than that which appears at the present time. The country can regard the present with satisfaction and anticipate the future with optimism."

Thus plainly and simply, without any flourishes, did Calvin Coolidge sum up the state of the union today in his valedictory report to the Congress that goes out of office with him three months hence.

He was rendering an account of his five and one-half years stewardship, as well as peering into the future and he found both views eminently satisfactory.

Prosperous Days

Never, he said, have the times been better—the country is prosperous to a degree unrivaled in history; wages are high; business is good; taxes have been four times reduced; the national debt is being paid off; America is at peace with the world; notable steps have been taken to outlaw war; weak and struggling nations have been helped along the road to sovereignty and stability.

Nowhere in the horizon of American affairs is there discernible a single dark cloud.

But all this, he warned, can be maintained only by adhering to those policies already marked out—strict governmental economy; no excursions up legislative roads; and "unremitting toil" to preserve prosperity at home and tranquility abroad.

Sounds a Warning

The president left one solemn warning with Congress and the country. It was this: "Watch your spending." Time and again he returned to his favorite theme of economy. He admonished Congress against going on any appropriation spree, and said if it did it meant a deficit and an unbalanced budget.

"I am certain," he said, "that the Congress would not pass and I should not feel warranted in approving legislation which would involve us in that financial disgrace."

That was tantamount to saying that even if Congress does exceed the speed limit on spending at this lame-duck session, he will apply the brakes with veto.

Nowhere in the nearly 10,000 words that comprised this last annual message from Calvin Coolidge did he mention his own impending retirement, nor the administration that will succeed him after March 4. There was not even a hint, nor an indirect reference to the campaign and its momentous results.

Mr. Coolidge merely rendered an account of his own stewardship, and accompanied it with some general observations about the future conduct of the business, much as a chairman of a board of directors might do at an annual meeting.

On his own account, Mr. Coolidge proposed no new legislation. For the most part he travelled over the same subject matter, but with some recommendations in this, his final message, as he did in his previous messages on the opening of Congress.

He reported that the Pan-American conference at Havana last winter was successful; he had about sending the marines to Nicaragua, and how they established order and procured a fair presidential election; he said Chile and Peru were patching up their differences over Tacna-Arica; he declared, with obvious satisfaction, that relations with Mexico are better than they have been since the Madero revolution; he said recognition had been extended to the Nationalist government in China and that things were on the up there; he suggested that Congress be kept out of dealing with the Austrian and Greek debts; and finally he recommended the prompt ratification of the Kellogg anti-war treaty.

"The observance of this covenant, so simple and straightforward," he said of the Kellogg treaty, "promises more for the peace of the world than any other agreement ever negotiated among the nations."

Domestic Affairs

Then, turning to domestic affairs, he urged Congress to pass the new cruiser bill, designed to overcome the Navy's lack of fast, modern cruisers; said the World War veterans were being well cared for and warned against any such greater outlay of money on this score; said agriculture was getting better and that the govern-

Canvassers at Work on Their Districts in Effort to Collect $8,000 Fund.

No date has been set as yet for a meeting of the team captains or their members to report on the amount of money that has been pledged or secured in the campaign now being conducted in an effort to raise $8,000 for the Manchester Community Club activities and buildings and grounds located at North Main and Oakland streets.

The canvassers that have been territorially assigned to them are out working, but there is so much territory that it is hardly possible that all will be covered in a week and it may be over a week before some of the sections that are included in the territory serviced by the Community Club will be reached.

R. K. Anderson, chairman of the committee that is conducting this campaign, is also making an effort through letters to different organizations in town, to get assistance for the fund.

S. M. E. XMAS SALE STARTS THURSDAY

Will Continue Through Friday With Cafeteria Supper Each Evening From 5 to 7.

South Methodist church organizations will combine forces on the annual Christmas sale this week Thursday and Friday evenings, with an entertainment the second evening, and a cafeteria supper both evenings between the hours of 5 and 7 o'clock.

The Ladies Aid society will have a booth for the sale of aprons of all kinds and sizes. The Home-Missionary society will sell home-made foods and the Men's Friendship club will conduct the "corner grocery." Kings Herald will be in charge of the handkerchief booth and the Standard Bearers and Campfire Girls will be in charge of the candy booth. The Epworth League members will be charge of the mystery booth for the children and will dispense popcorn and other things children delight in. The Sunday school booth will offer for sale articles made in the Cheney mills, such as neckties, scarves, hostery and other popular gift items.

Mrs. J. W. Goslee is general chairman of the bazaar and Mrs. Abram McCann heads the cafeteria committee, with the assistance of the following ladies: Mrs. J. L. Winterbottom, Mrs. E. Benson, Mrs. Robert Keane, Mrs. Hamilton Metcalf, Mrs. James Munroe, Mrs. Ross Lewis, Mrs. C. J. Nyman, Mrs. Flora Stanley, Mrs. Mary Behnfeld, Mrs. Harry Keane, Mrs. C. L. Taylor, Mrs. Henry Harrison, Mrs. Arthur Bronkie, Mrs. Edward Quish, Miss Alice Benson will assist as cashier. Mrs. Ethel Eaton and several of the young girls of the church will assist in the dining room.

The supper committee will be prepared to serve such good things as chicken patties, scalloped oysters and potatoes, baked ham, baked beans, potato and spaghetti salads, cake, pie, rolls, coffee and ice cream. They will have a special Friday evening which ought to attract a host of people—appetizing home-made clam chowder.

CHRISTMAS P. O. RUSH IS ALREADY STARTED

As predicted by the post office officials preceding their half holiday on Thanksgiving, the Christmas and New Year rush has started at the South Manchester post office.

To walk into the lobby of the South Manchester post office any night now shortly after 5 o'clock and see the line that is formed in front of the money order window gives one the impression of a line at a first run well advertised moving picture. The money orders are being sent to relatives and friends in Europe with the expectation that it will be received before Christmas.

HOOVER PARTY HEADS FOR CALLAO, PERU

Aboard U. S. S. Argonaut, (Via Arlington, Va., Radio Station), Dec. 4.—With the cruiser Almirante Gran, flagship of the Peruvian navy, escorting her 300 yards to the starboard, the warship Maryland continued southward along the South American coast today, headed for Callao, Peru, which will be reached tomorrow.

President-Elect Hoover and the others of the Latin-American "good will" party will be met at Callao by American Ambassadors, Alexander P. Moore and Peruvian officials. After the party has been presented to the mayor of Callao, it will go to Lima, the capital, either by motor or train.

After arriving at Lima, Mr. Hoover will first go to the American embassy, then to the residence of the Peruvian president, August B. Leguis. Luncheon will follow at the American embassy. Then there will be various receptions in the afternoon followed by a state banquet and reception in the evening.

Despite the torrid rays of the equatorial sun, the weather is cool and pleasant aboard ship due to the Humboldt current, which is similar in effect to the gulf stream off the Atlantic coast of North America.

FUNERALS

Walter Bowman
The funeral of Walter Bowman, who died Sunday morning at the Memorial hospital, was held this morning in private parlors in New Haven. Burial was in New Haven.

ABOUT TOWN

The teachers and officers of the Center Congregational church will hold a supper and business meeting at which plans for the holidays will be made tomorrow night at 6:30 o'clock.

Grey squirrels that have summer homes in the woods and town houses in the trees of the parks and residential districts, to which they advert in winter, sometimes engage in sight seeing cruises about the business streets of Manchester, being just out of a rarity to excite wonderment when they manage, as they generally do, to cross busy thoroughfares without being caught into raw squirrel hash. One of them caused a number of sympathetic heart thrills on the part of onlookers this morning when he negotiated the busy corner of Bissell and Main street. He showed up on the east side of Main street, coming from goodness knows where, made half a dozen dashes at the Main street crossing, gave it up and finally disappeared across Bissell, six feet ahead of an observing automobile, and disappeared around the corner of the State theater.

Beginning tomorrow noon, Miss Gertrude E. Berggren, local contralto who is studying in New York, will broadcast a program every Wednesday noon from 11:30 to 12:30 from Station WJZ, New York.

The Social committee of the Highland Park Community club will conduct a setback party at the clubhouse this evening, with six prizes and refreshments.

Employees of the Bon Ami factory and of the quilting department of Cheney Brothers motored out to Coventry Saturday evening and surprised Mr. and Mrs. Lois Metterholzer at their new home. Friends in the mechanical department of the Orford Soap company where Mr. Metterholzer is employed, brought a banjo clock for the new home.

Lodge members of the Manchester Hebrew Association and friends as well as members of the family will attend a special service on Sunday to be held at the grave of the late Isaac Greenberg in conjunction with the unveiling of a monument to him at the cemetery of the Independent Order of Brith Abraham in Norwich. The service will be in charge of Rabbi from Hartford and Norwich. The monument is being erected by his widow. They are Louis Greenberg of New Haven, Andy Parker of Bridgeport, Jacob Greenberg of Manchester and Mrs. Lena Greenberg of Manchester.

The Masonic Club has purchased two pool and billiard tables formerly owned by Campbell Council, Knights of Columbus. They will be put in first class condition and placed with the present table in the social rooms of the new Masonic Temple.

BROTHER ACT

Brother acts on the major football teams are not as common this year as they were last year, but Harvard has one and it is a pretty smooth duo. The regular center for the Cambridge eleven is B. H. Ticknor, shown above, and alongside him at a regular guard post is stoned W. D. Ticknor, a brother, below. Both of these fellows are hefty and shifty and make the center of the Harvard line a hard place to pass.

NOT THE SLAYER.

Lake Forest, Ill., Dec. 4.—Ezra McVeigh, alias James Kelley, held at San Antonio, Texas, as an army deserter and self-confessed slayer of Miss Eilfrieda Knaak, fatally burned in the basement of the Lake Bluff police station, was in the insane asylum at Elgin, Ill., on the night of October 29, when Miss Knaak was found, it was learned by police here today.

McVeigh was committed under the name of Kelley October 27 and escaped Nov. 9. Kelley signed a confession that he struck Miss Knaak over the head and stuffed her body into the furnace.

Professor Shapley of Harvard announces that he has found the center of the visible universe 47,000 light years away, there have not been as yet, however, any announcements of good-will trips.

PLOTTING PLAN FOR NEW BRIDGE

Surveyors Mapping Out a Route to Eliminate Oakland Crossing.

A crew of surveyors is at work in the vicinity of North Elm street, Apol place and Oakland street trying to find a plan whereby the Oakland street railroad crossing can be eliminated. The crew is employed by the New Haven road and at present they are getting measurements whereby the roadway may be changed with the least possible cost or property damage.

This survey which they are making is with the intention of getting away from the grade crossing. It will not be possible, one of the crew said this morning, to bridge the Oakland street crossing and for that reason they have gone further to the east and have made a survey through North Elm street with the idea of bringing the roadway over the tracks from the steep bank on the south side of the railroad to a gravel bank on the north side and then having the road swing through Apol place.

The surveyors were much surprised when they started in to work to find that William Richardson, owner of the property on the north side of the tracks, had been using his steam shovel there and had cut down the bank, using the dirt to fill in on the north side of the low land in preparation for a side track. As a result of this the surveyors are taking measurements to the north of the old Apol Crossing House with a view towards crossing the brook and coming out on Oakland street, about 100 yards to the north of the bridge on Oakland street. This is but one of the plans that they are working out, and are taking measurements for.

With the necessary data that they have submitted to the home office in New Haven a plan will be worked out to be submitted to both the selectmen of the town of Manchester and the Public Utilities Commission for consideration, although it was not known by the men when this would be done, it seems assured, however, that the plan of having the road swing on a curve from the junction of North Elm and Woodbridge streets bringing the roadway along side of railroad tracks and coming out through Apol place, cannot be lowered. A substitute and perhaps more satisfactory plans will no doubt be offered.

Sanford Killed One
"Sanford is so smart, so I will tell about his killing Nelson Winslow. He did it, on his own, for he had murdered the kid."

"I felt sorry for Nelson Winslow. After I killed Winslow, the little boy seemed so distressed. He cried often. It was so pitiful and I have such a sympathetic nature. The poor kid went around the ranch looking for his 'crock.' I simply could not stand it."

"Then, one day, Sanford said he thought he had better kill Nelson because the kid was getting fretful. I certainly did not discourage him. I didn't help him, either. I did help Sanford any way."

"Sanford is such a weakling that I had to carry the boy's shoulders. Sanford trailed along carrying the feet. Sanford is a pretty lucky kid—everyone believes him and he will probably go free."

"I suppose there's nothing more for the law to do with me and maybe I'll see Eddie Hickman pretty soon."

Even at such a dramatic point in the weird tale, Gordon Stewart N'rtchoot, the super-killer—smiled.

"I could not stand to see the boy killed without first being sure they had made their peace with God. That is why I built the altar. You know, I intended to be a priest. I always said extreme things over them. They didn't know what for."

"I thought it was good practice and, then too, I wanted to be sure the little darlings would go to heaven. I am sure they did for they were so sweet."

Others Murdered.
"Now, about the other four boys who were killed at the ranch—well, it might be that I can take you to where their remains are buried. I know I can, unless they have been moved."

"If you ever get certain members of my family to talk, you will have one of the most weird tales you ever listened to. Believe me, officers, that chicken ranch was a regular butcher shop!"

"Come on, let's get this done—car started. I am anxious to show you the bodies and Alvin's head. I hope, we will be able to find them tonight, so you will believe me. I dislike for people to think me a prevaricator."

Psychology in Athletics New Sport Problem
Champaign-Urbana, Ill.—Every athletic coach like anyone else who must handle men and train them has to be more or less a psychologist. The most successful coaches are probably the best psychologists. That is, they know best how to handle men and how to get the most out of them. This is an art which is wholly distinct from their skill as tacticians in the sport they coach. A man may be ever so good as a tactician but who fails to know men, and hence fails as a coach. On the other hand, a man may know men, be a mediocre tactician, and still be a good coach.

In view of these facts the Athletic association of the University of Illinois, at the suggestion of George Haff, director of physical welfare, undertook, three years ago, to establish a laboratory for the study of psychological problems in athletics.

Complete Study.
It is one of the purposes of this laboratory to make a complete study of the men who come out for the different athletic teams at the University, to study the coaches and their methods, and thus help the students who enroll in the four-year course in athletic coaching to understand the psychological side of the coaching profession.

Studies are made on the mental and physical alertness, the memory and learning ability, the nervousness and steadiness, the vision and hearing, and the thinking power of all members of the various athletic teams with a view to making use of the best material in the squads.

The laboratory is also making a number of other studies on the psychological side of athletics. One of these concerns the way in which athletes sleep before and after games and other heavy exercises. Underneath the beds of some of the members of the teams are placed recorders which make a record on paper of every movement of the athlete during the night. These records show whether or not they are getting too much heavy work.

Bathing Experiments.
Last spring the members of the baseball team used, during practice, a special bath with electric connections built into it so that a measure of the time elapsed between the moment the ball hits the bat and the moment the batter reaches first base could be taken. This experiment on bathing showed that many batters spend as much time getting out of the batter's box as they do in getting to first base. It was also shown that such men could learn to get away faster and so stand a better chance of turning some of their blows into hits.

someone else would take the boy from him.

This boy, whom he named as Walter Collins, was his favorite of all his victims. Northcott told how he used to dress him in girl's clothes and make him places.

Dressed as Girl.

"Everybody thought he was a girl," he smiled. "I was real proud of him."

Even the hardened police officers shuddered when Northcott asked them to find a picture of the altar they found at his ranch home. They did.

Made Victims Pray.
"Well, that is where I made the boys pray before I shot them," he added calmly. "You see, I wanted to be sure the little darlings would go to heaven."

Northcott hinted that only part of the gruesome facts have been told, even now, when he told the officers they would be surprised if they could get other members of his family to talk.

Northcott blamed his father for his degeneracy. The senior Northcott is being held as a material witness, but so far he has admitted nothing in connection with the crimes. Northcott's mother, involved by some of the "murder farm" evidence, is in Vancouver jail, fighting extradition to California.

Northcott's amazing confession, as unfolded to the officers, was as follows:

"I killed Walter Collins, Lewie Winslow, Alvin Gothea, a boy named Richard and another boy whose name I never knew."

"I killed Walter Collins because I was afraid he would get away from me."

"You remember the altar you fellows found at my ranch—well, I made each of the boys I killed say their prayers before that altar just before I shot them to death with my .38 caliber automatic pistol."

Kept Body in House
"I kept Walter Collins' body in the house for three days. I just couldn't stand the thought of burying him. Finally, Sanford and myself dug a grave and put the darling boy in it. I cried as we piled the dirt in on his body."

"I killed Lewie Winslow, and Sanford killed the little one (Nelson). Sanford is a liar if he says he didn't."

"I have always been a misfit. And once a misfit, always a misfit. And I might say that my father got me off on the wrong foot."

"I am not saying who killed the other three boys at the ranch. I have taken all the blame that is mine. If anyone else wants to tell what they've done out there, it's up to them—I think I have 'come through' as well as can be expected."

panding output of the manufacturing plants; increasing consumption of goods at home and abroad; conservative business policies; a marked improvement in the basic industries that have been consistently depressed in recent years, and many other favorable developments, all contribute to the overflowing of the cup of plenty in American households today," said Booth.

"Of the basic industries that have been most consistently depressed in recent years, some have registered a very marked improvement during 1928," Booth declared.

Some Difficulties
"The most serious difficulties that have faced producers of copper, agricultural implements, fertilizers, leather and shoes, machinery and machine equipment, and the railroads, appear to have been removed. The cotton and woolen-textile and petroleum industries have also shown considerable improvement. Coal and shipping, on the other hand, have made comparatively little progress; while the immediate outlook for paper manufacturers, sugar producers, and the electric railways in general is not wholly encouraging."

Booth sounds a more encouraging note for the cotton goods producers, who, after a disappointing first half-year, have experienced more active business at firmer prices, and the same is true with respect to manufacturers of woolen goods. Although both these branches of the textile industry have suffered a recession in sales during the last few weeks, the outlook for earnings for the current half-year is comparatively good.

Ship-Building
"The position of shipping and ship-building is especially unchanged. While conditions have improved with the termination of the 'freight-rate war' in the north Atlantic trade, competition is still very severe, and threatens to restrict very closely any possible gain that may result from the record-breaking world traffic."

Paper mills running at 80 per cent of capacity are able to produce enough for current requirements, which is not a healthy condition, Booth declared.

The business situation in the United States has been strengthened by the continued improvement in agricultural conditions during the present crop season. Larger acreages and higher average yields have combined to produce an aggregate output about 5 per cent above that of last year. Although the abundant yields of grains, fruits, and vegetables are reflected in lower prices, these declines are offset by the improvement during the year in prices of livestock and of fats and poultry products. The large increase in mail-order sales is evidence of the expansion in purchasing power on the farms."

'FEED BACK' IN RADIO GETS TO SUPREME COURT

Washington.—Both the honor of one of the greatest inventions of radio and millions of dollars are involved in two cases which the United States Supreme Court will bear and undertake to decide in the near future.

Involved in the case are four of the most noted inventors of the world and the greatest business organizations engaged in radio manufacturing, as well as the United States government.

Couched in technical phrases of both science and law in the hundreds of pages which make up the record of the cases before the court, is told conflicting stories of how inventor developed the "feed back circuit," declared to be the basic invention of all modern radio.

On one point there is apparent agreement—that the great invention resulted from a desire to eliminate the nuisance of singing telephone wires and that its discovery was in part an accident.

While discussion of modern radio generally dates back only a few years to the time when broadcasting became popular, the inventions go back to periods from 1912 to 1914 when scientists were busily engaged in solving the problems which make modern radio possible.

In one case before the court the Third Circuit Court found that Dr. Edwin H. Armstrong, whose radio discoveries began while he was an amateur wireless operator at his home in Yonkers, N. Y., and a student at Columbia University, was the inventor of the "feed back circuit." The Circuit Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia held that Dr. Lee DeForest was the inventor. Inventions of Irving Langmuir of the General Electric Company and Dr. Alexander Meissner, whose claims belong to the United States government, are involved.

The Westinghouse Electric company became owner of Armstrong's patents while DeForest's patents were transferred to the DeForest Radio and Telephone company with the American Telephone and Telegraph company having part interest. The General Electric and the federal government are made respondents also in the appeal of the Westinghouse company and Armstrong.

The "feed back" invention itself apparently was based upon the vacuum tube, conceived by Thomas Edison, adapted to radio by Fleming, an English inventor, and improved into the audion by DeForest. These inventions, as described in court papers, were for the purpose of gathering in radio waves and converting them into frequency vibrations which would be audible to the human ear. The audion consisted of a vacuum tube with wires and a metal plate.

Singing Wires
Dr. DeForest is said to have conceived the idea in 1912 of using the audion on a telephone line to get the long distance singing wires which had long puzzled scientists, and was successful. Armstrong's claims at the same time to have been working with the audion and perfecting the device which revolutionized radio, although, according to the statement of his attorneys, he did not know that he was doing so at the time.

Four patents were sought, by Langmuir in October, 1913; Armstrong in August, 1913; Meissner in March, 1914, and DeForest in March, 1914. All, however, claimed prior dates for the discovery, DeForest claiming that his discovery went back to 1912 when he was taking the "sing" out of telephone wires.

All claimed the same results for the "feed back" circuits—that it would amplify radio currents many times by "feeding back" and would produce radio frequency currents at exactly the wave length wanted.

How Engineers Picked New Radio Allocations

This board tells the destiny of the broadcasters of the United States. Before it are two of the engineers who worked out the new allocations of radio frequencies. They are—left, Capt. Guy Hill, U. S. Army radio technician, and Dr. J. H. Dellinger, the Federal Radio Commission's chief engineer.

Washington.—On a board in an office of the Federal Radio Commission the new allocations of our 620 radio stations were worked out by the government's best radio brains in cooperation with members of the commission.

The board was kept locked up during the long labor of reallocation and no outsider was allowed to see it before it was recently moved into a more public spot for sake of convenience.

Marked off on the board horizontally are each of the frequencies in the broadcast band, from 500 to 1500 kilocycles. Vertical columns are marked off for the five zones which, under the law, must be accorded equal treatment in allocation. The United States government, are involved.

There are two pegs for each zone in each column, to take care of stations sharing time, and each station has its little white tag on which is inscribed its call letters, location and power.

Under the white tags representing stations on cleared channels are red squares for quick identification. Yellow squares represent Canadian-shared frequencies and green for limited time stations.

During the reallocation work the tags were shuffled back and forth. At the beginning, of course, there was plenty of congestion on the board, but it was the one method used and was supplemented only by a map showing the distances between stations.

The main difficulty was found leading lady in "Marquis Preferred" in the varying areas of the zones and their peculiar shapes. Pennsylvania, for instance, is almost surrounded on the radio zone map by other zones.

Actual allocation was made by the commission after the experts had told it just how to get the with the wavelengths available. When the blackboard was finally presented to the commission it represented the best thought of the biggest brains in radio. The experts who worked it out were Dr. J. H. Dellinger, the commission's chief engineer, Capt. Guy Hill, U. S. Army radio technician, John V. L. Hogan, an outstanding radio engineer, and Edgar A. Felix, radio broadcasting authority.

After consultation with these men the commission consented to reduce the cleared channels they had planned from 50 to 40 and with the framework before it proceeded to decide which stations were entitled to the various positions.

Lawes, Famous Sing Sing Warden, Writes, 'Never Met Born Criminal'
New York.—"I have never met the 'born criminal.'"

"You can't tell a criminal by merely looking at him. There is no such thing as a 'criminal type.'"

So declares Lewis E. Lawes, for twenty-five years warden of Sing Sing prison, who, in a book just published entitled "Life and Death in Sing Sing," explodes almost every popular conception about crime and criminals. He says that prisoners act like "average human beings." That they are as law-abiding within their own jail community as are the people enjoying their freedom on the outside.

"In twenty-five years' experience I have never met the 'born criminal' whom a supreme court judge described as marked by eight physical characteristics," said Lawes in his book. These characteristics were described as:

"Receding chin.
"Protruding jaw.
"Wide unshrinkable stare.
"Droop in the left eyelid.
"Low bumpy brow.
"Huge clumsy torso.
"Thick hair.
"Ears set at right angles to the head."

"The judge said that where as many as four of these characteristics were present in an individual there could be no doubt as to the man's criminal nature."

"A half-dozen well known men, who have at least five of the eight physical characteristics named, include the president of a leading American university, a great English preacher, a French general, a Russian statesman, a leading Spanish writer and one of the world's greatest inventors."

Another $25,000,000 would be set aside for loans to either stabilization corporations or cooperative associations for the purchase or construction of warehouses and marketing facilities. A second $25,000,000 fund would be authorized for loans to associations for use in advancing part payment on crops stored for future disposition.

Several safeguards were written into the bill to protect the government's money. The principal safeguard reads that no loans should be made unless the corporation or association involved "has an organization and management of such character as to insure the reasonable safety of the loans."

The country has duly adopted the Eighteenth Amendment. Those who object to it have the right to advocate its modification or repeal. Meantime, it is binding upon the national and state governments and all our inhabitants. The Federal Enforcement Bureau is making every effort to prevent violations under the terms of the Constitution, however, the obligation is equally on the states to exercise the power which they have through the executive, legislative, judicial and police branches of their governments in behalf of enforcement. The federal government is doing and will continue to do all it can in this direction and is entitled to the active co-operation of the states.

He concluded with a warning to the country not to become selfish and selfish "in the midst of an era of prosperity more extensive and of peace more permanent than it has ever before experienced."

"Having reached this position," he said, "we should not fail to comprehend that it can easily be lost. We shall not be permitted to take our ease, but shall continue to be required to spend our days in unremitting toil. The actions of the government must command the confidence of the country. Without this, our prosperity would be lost. We must extend to other countries the largest measure of generosity, moderation and patience. In addition to dealing justly, we can well afford to walk humbly.

"The end of government is to keep open the opportunity for a more abundant life. Peace and prosperity are not finalities; they are only methods. It is too easy under their influence for a nation to become selfish and degenerate. This test has come to the United States. Our country has been provided with the resources with which it can enlarge its intellectual, moral and spiritual life. The issue is in the hands of the people. Our faith in man and God is the justification for the belief in our continuing success."

Starting tomorrow and continuing for ten days, there will be an exhibition of new books for children at the South Manchester Library. Well over a hundred varied titles will be included in the display which extends from December 5 to 15 inclusive.

Parents and teachers are cordially invited to inspect the display which will be in the main hallway and adult circulation room of the building. The library also has copies of "The Book Shelf for Boys and Girls," a printed list of children's books. They will be distributed free to any adult interested in the selection of such books.

In commenting on the purpose and importance of the exhibit, an official of the library said, in part, this morning: "Children love books always and perhaps never better than at Christmas time when Santa Claus brings them brightly colored new ones in his pack.

Longworth, who sat with the Republican members of the ways and means committee when it was decided to begin holding hearings on a new tariff revision bill on January 7, heartily approved the course. He declared that it was consistent with the Republican national platform.

The full committee, including Democratic members, was called into session today to pass a resolution setting January 7 as the date for commencement of hearings. While the Republicans have a clear majority on the committee, it is expected that most of the Democrats will also support the proposal. Rep. John N. Gardner, (D) of Texas, ranking Democrat on the committee, announced that he was for a general revision. He believes that agricultural schedules should be raised and perhaps some others lowered.

Rep. Willis C. Hawley, (R) of Oregon, chairman of the committee, followed Speaker Longworth in reassuring business by stating that it was planned to consider only those schedules which have been rendered inadequate through changes in industrial and agricultural conditions abroad.

It is planned to complete hearings during the short session ending March 4, so that a bill can be framed either for a special session called by President-Elect Hoover or presented to the regular session next year. The decision was believed to eliminate the possibility of passage of an emergency farm tariff bill in the present short session, as advocated by Senator Capper (R) of Kansas. Both Speaker Longworth and Hawley said that no tariff legislation could be enacted before March 4.

FEAR GIRL KIDNAPED

Boston, Dec. 4.—Fearing that 16-year-old Mildred Jones, high school student of Templeton, was in the hands of kidnapers, state police joined with police in cities and towns in the eastern section of the state today in a wide search for the jeweler's daughter, who vanished between Everett and Winthrop.

The search was urged by a hoax perpetrated on her parents when a telephone call from an unknown man started her mother from Winthrop to the town of Bedford on a report that her daughter had been found unconscious in a camp and was removed to a hospital.

Exceeding the speed limit along the road to success is just as dangerous as along any other road.

Hartford Girl Got Well Quick

"My little daughter, Virginia, had a serious case of constipation," says Mrs. M. V. Robinson, 87 Franklin Ave., Hartford. "It left her very weak and pale. Her bowels wouldn't act right, she had no appetite and nothing agreed with her."

"Our physician told us to give her some California Fig Syrup. It made her right away, and now she is as robust and happy as any child in our neighborhood. I give California Fig Syrup full credit for her wonderful condition. It is a great thing for children."

Children like the rich, fruity taste of California Fig Syrup, and you can give it to them as often as they need it, because it is purely vegetable. For over 50 years leading physicians have recommended it, and its overwhelming sales record of over four million bottles a year shows it gives satisfaction. Nothing compares with it as a gentle but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord.

There are many imitations of California Fig Syrup, so look for the name "California" on the can to be sure you get the genuine.

EVEN the fortunate few who have "everything" will treasure your photograph as a distinctive gift that defies duplication. You can confer no greater compliment than to give your photograph to your friends. Arrange now for your appointment for Christmas.

BENEFIT CHAIRMAN

Already Preparing for Annual Police Concert to Be Held in February.

The Manchester Police Benefit Association held a meeting last night and arranged, by appointing a committee with Captain Herman Schendel as chairman, for the plans for the annual benefit concert to be given by the association.

The police each year hold one benefit concert, in the month of February and the money that is received from the entertainment is turned into the Police Benefit association fund. In appointing a committee at this time it gives the association time to get the plans underway by selecting the date and also gives them time to arrange a program that will merit the price of the ticket, as has been done in past years.

CONGRESS' SUNSET

With the Seventieth Congress in its final session there is, throughout the country, a very general feeling that the less it accomplishes the better. The Coolidge administration is in its evening; the Seventieth is now very large a lame duck Congress. It would please the people of the country, with the exception of those especially interested in a few special matters, if the Congress would take it out, as to a great extent it has done throughout its existence, in talk. There is a pronounced opinion that such important legislation as impends, aside from the routine, becomes properly the business of the administration and the Congress elected last month.

There is not the slightest use in blinking the fact that Mr. Coolidge and Mr. Hoover are two quite different men and will have made two quite different sorts of Presidents. The former's very great usefulness to the country has been derived from certain tenacious qualities which, however, are of negative rather than positive character. Mr. Coolidge has been, throughout his career, a repressionist rather than an actionist. He has never been the champion of any program conspicuous for its constructiveness. His merit has lain very largely in his extreme conservatism, his sense of thrift and his refusal to become excited, Mr. Hoover, on the contrary, is a constructionist in every fiber of his being. He is a blue-printer, an inventor of ways and means and a master in deeds. The country expects from him an administration of performance, and knows that he has the rare qualities that will enable him to lead Congress in a constructive program.

Wherefore if Congress fails to do anything at all about the cruiser bill, Boulder Dam, the tariff, railroad consolidation, and above all farm relief, but passes the buck to the new Congress which Mr. Hoover is sure to call into session in March, there will be general satisfaction.

CONNECTICUT DEER

Every two years, as the session of the Connecticut General Assembly impends, there is talk in some circles of endeavoring to establish a short open season for deer hunting. The argument is always the same—that the deer, protected for many years, have flourished and increased till there are more of them in the state than there is food for the wild lands; that farmers do "bootleg" hunting of deer anyhow and that the city and town sportsman ought to have some sort of even break with them.

It is unquestionably true that a good many deer are surreptitiously killed and eaten in Connecticut. It is equally true that it is impossible to enforce the law against a farmer's boy who knocks over a deer, skins it in the woods, buries the hide and carries the venison home. His neighbors, if they know anything about it, won't admit that they do and many country town justices will acquit, no matter what the evidence, if a prosecution is brought.

Still and all, there is no use in making a bad matter worse by declaring an open season. Opinion is even divided among sportsmen as to whether deer shooting is a real sport. Among the laity sympathy runs exclusively to the deer. But there is one particularly powerful argument against an open season on deer in this state which has nothing to do with ethics or opinions on sportsmanship. It is the immense peril to the public that would result from the turning loose in the woods of this state of a throng of decidedly amateur big-game hunters, each of whom would inevitably be armed with a rifle that would kill at a mile or a mile and a half.

There is no room in Connecticut for this sort of shooting. The very roads themselves are scarcely a modern rifle shot apart. It is as certain as anything can be that, if an open season on deer is ever inaugurated in this little state, there will be more deaths of human beings, as a result, than in any other state in the Union from the same cause, the number of hunters considered.

Three-quarters of the shots fired would be within half or three-quarters of a mile of some traveled highway. Not once in ten times would the hunter know in which direction lay the highway or by-road, or care. In the Adirondacks, in Michigan, in the rough counties of Pennsylvania, in Maine and Vermont there are enough of fatal accidents where hunters shoot one another by mistake. But in Connecticut the danger would be multiplied owing to the frequency of roads traveled by scores of thousands of automobiles daily.

It would seem as though this one factor alone ought to be enough to preclude the possibility of letting down the bars on deer hunting. Besides, if the farmers do bootleg venison they at least have the argument that they have to do the feeding of the deer.

MRS. WALKER REPORTS

For the purposes of the record the annual report of Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney-general in charge of prohibition, is a useful document. It will be useful for dry speakers to consult before making declarations that the practice of prohibition is rapidly gaining ground. It will be useful for the open minded to have at hand the next time some prohibition enthusiasts asserts that the smuggling of liquor is well nigh licked.

Mrs. Willebrandt quotes the figures of the Department of Trade and Commerce of Canada which show that whiskey alone to the export value of nearly nineteen million dollars was legally cleared with the United States as its destination last year. That would mean whiskey valued at more than fifty million dollars on this side of the line. And even Mrs. Willebrandt admits that a "substantial amount" of liquor crosses the border which is never legally entered for export.

Whether a "substantial amount" means as much more, or ten or a hundred times as much more Mrs. Willebrandt does not say; probably because she does not know, any more than anybody else knows. St. Pierre and Miquelon, Mrs. Willebrandt says, is the main source of supply for the high seas smugglers of the North Atlantic coast. She does not mention that St. Pierre and Miquelon exports are not included in the Canadian report for the sufficient reason that the island is French, not Canadian, and that the millions of dollars worth of booze shipped from that point are altogether outside of Canada's records.

Obviously it is not altogether true that the only liquor to be had in the United States is diverted and converted industrial alcohol.

ONE MAN'S EXPERIENCE

Ezra Meeker got something out of life that nobody born this year or next will ever get. He had the privilege of spanning, in his experiences, the equivalent of a thousand years. Seventy-six years ago he traversed the wilderness by covered wagon, ox-drawn, over the seven months long trail from Indiana to Oregon, braving the perils of a savage and unknown country. Later he traveled substantially the same trail by railroad train, then twice by automobile and lastly, returning for the final scene of his widely varied existence, he flew the route by airplane.

Four great epochs of transportation came within the zone of this one man's experience. No matter what inventions the future may hold there can be nothing so revolutionary as this period which synchronized with the life of Ezra Meeker. The best that can now come is development of change; when Meeker was born there was no thought of any change at all.

He was a brave old soul, jeering, at ninety-odd, at the friends who worried about his voyage through the air. He took the world as he found it and made the most of every finding. But we wish we knew whether Ezra Meeker was firmly convinced that the world was a better world to live in, in 1928, than when he took his bride and baby and tackled the unknown in his prairie schooner in 1852. He, better than almost anybody else, should have known.

ANTARCTICA

It is a strangely lonely and desolate corner of the world for which Commander Richard E. Byrd sailed from Wellington, New Zealand, on Sunday. The uninhabited Antarctic continent lies almost entirely immediately south of the 60th parallel of latitude, though that parallel does not quite touch the land at any point. Roughly speaking, however, "sixty south" marks the beginning of Antarctica. From that point to the pole there is no human life and no animal life larger than an insect. There are, it is quite certain, no trees and scarcely any plant life but mosses. Yet such observations as have been made, and they extend through all degrees of longitude, passing entirely around this polar cap, lead to the conviction that from "sixty south" to the pole lies a solid land mass greater in area than the whole of the United States and Continental Europe outside of Russia.

At the opposite end of the world the sixtieth parallel, north latitude, passes to the south of lands in which permanently live more than a million human beings and swarms of animals, many of them of major size. All of Alaska, all of Greenland and large parts of Norway, Sweden, Finland, Russia and Siberia lie far above "sixty north." The uppermost tip of Scotland, for that matter, is almost as far from the equator as is the Bay of Whales where Byrd is to undertake to establish his base of operations.

Surrounded by a huge ice barrier, accessible only across 600 miles of the stormiest seas in the world, the Antarctic continent is the most forbidding area, by far, on the face of the globe. Nowhere else could a group of human beings put themselves so completely in the hands of fate and be so far from chance of aid.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 4.—This is just a short story of the Bowery that was, and the Bowery that is.

The Bowery that was is a flashy, colorful and drab legend. The Bowery that is—well, it's drab when it's drab, and after that it's a bit monotonous. It retains its name, its bums and its two-bit lodging houses. And little else.

But once upon the time when the Bowery was the Bowery, there was a fighter they called "the Bowery Boy."

And anyone who cares to look through his Sporting Annual can chart back to a day when the name of the Bowery Boy was one, as they say, to conjure with. The Bowery Boy was truly a Bowery Boy, with the Bowery as his background, foreground—and now his past. Back in the 1890's, when a lot of us were still anticipating birth, the Bowery Boy "put away" none other than Mickey, whose name still lingers in song.

Overnight, the lad who had been Joe Bernstein, but who became the Bowery Boy, was more than a passing hero to his neighborhood. He was idolized, hero worshipped and feted.

Then the old story—transient glory, bright lights, money and then obscurity.

Very well! About a year ago, the Bowery Boy from the Bowery that was, revisited the Bowery that is. He hadn't been feeling well. And he was broke. He thought he'd like to revisit the scene of his glory in the event that his illness proved more serious than appeared on the surface. And as he plodded, half sick, along the tawdry lower Bowery that is, bums asked him for dimes. And he couldn't give them any, for he had none himself.

The following day he collapsed and they took him to the Bellevue hospital—a charitable ward.

For a time it seemed certain he would die, but finally he won and they tossed him back on the world again—broken in health. Some of the old-timers got together and staged one of those benefits. They gave the Bowery a fat purse to start himself up in business.

Over in Brooklyn, a fast aging man shuffles nightly about the smoke filled pool room, of which he is proprietor. It's a great hang-out for "four-rounders" and "fugs" in general. They gather around the pool tables and talk about the last fight and the fight before last and the next fight; they talk about their own prowess and hopes—and when the fast aging man comes about they call out to him and ask for his state of health. And he answers: "Oh, so, so!"

And if you were to ask them who this man is, they would look at you unbelievably and remark—"Hey, don'tcha know the Bowery Boy?" Which is all there is to this short story.

But there are many such scattered about Manhattan. For the prize ring leaves few prizes in the pockets of the men who have made their names and fortunes there. And those who make neither names or fortunes are to be found scattered about the sidewalks, "waiting for something to turn up."

The epic case was, of course, Young Griffith—who ended his days a lumbering old man, seated night upon night at the back door of the Rialto theater, watching the Broadway crowds drift by and getting a "hand-out" from time to time. One day he just tumbled over and they found him dead a few days later. They gave him an elaborate funeral—but the clairvoyants of the Broadway belt will tell you that his ghost still haunts the corner of 42d street and Broadway. For a dollar or so they'll produce it.

Health and Diet Advice

Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet, addressed to him, care of The Herald. Enclose stamped, addressed, large envelope for reply.

ERASING THE CROW'S FEET

In this age everyone desires to be young and beautiful and the first appearance of wrinkles causes much distress. While all of us desire to live a long life, no one desires to look old. Formerly, when a woman reached the age of forty-five or fifty, she took it for granted that she was old, but now women are learning to take better care of themselves, and it is not unusual to see grandmothers, who are active, graceful, and pleasing to look at.

It is not possible for us to live forever in the springtime of life, but it is possible for us to live so that we will enjoy life and avoid many infirmities and disabilities usually associated with old age. We know that ill health and worry may make a young person look old, and that health and happiness will make an old person appear young. It is undoubtedly true that the unwholesome habits of life may make a person prematurely aged and that wholesome habits will enable one to enjoy life for many years beyond the average span.

Even the appearance of wrinkles on the skin can largely be prevented by the cultivation of proper habits of life and care of the skin. Wrinkles grow because of regular creases formed by the skin folding in a certain way and thereby shutting off the local blood supply. With the advancing years the blood does not seem to be as nourishing to the skin as in youth, nor does it remove the toxins formed by the tissues as rapidly as formerly.

Patients who have undergone reducing diets frequently complain that the skin hangs loose after the fat has disappeared from their double or triple chins. This is because the skin, which was stretched to cover the fatty deposits, can not shrink or reduce as rapidly as the fatty tissues and consequently hangs in folds when its padding is no longer present.

The principal causes of wrinkles seem to be first, toxic deposits under the skin which actually poison the skin structures; secondly, a lack of nourishing elements in the blood; thirdly, a defective circulation. By noting these reasons we can easily devise a treatment which will benefit practically every skin in which the wrinkles have not existed for too long a time.

At the very start it is necessary to first cleanse the blood of the accumulated impurities which may be clogging the circulation or poisoning the tissues. Nothing is as effective for accomplishing this purpose as to take a short fast of orange juice, drinking about a glassful at intervals of one hour during the day. At the same time the bowels should be cleansed with a warm enema morning and evening. After the fasting regime, which should last from five to ten days, a well balanced diet, rich in all of the nourishing elements required by the body, should be employed. The menus outlined weekly in my health articles are good for this purpose. The enemas should be continued at least once daily for two or three weeks longer.

The best treatment of the skin is also important and is principally designed to promote circulation of blood.

In my next article I will outline a good treatment for the skin and give you some exercises for developing the contours of the neck and face.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Itching Ear Question: A. P. asks: "What is the cause of the inside of the ear becoming so itchy and dry and scaling, with a hardening of the wax? There is no discomfort otherwise."

Answer: You may have eczema in your ear. If this is not the case you can doubtless get over your trouble by putting some olive oil in your ears each night for a week, wiping it out each morning with a clean cloth. This will soften the wax and help to restore a normal healthy condition of the ear membranes.

Wrinkle Patches on Skin

Question: Mrs. M. R. L. writes: "I have a light colored patch that has recently come on my eyelid, also a slight one under my eye. Is this serious? What is the cause, and could you advise me what to do?" Answer: Your trouble may be vitiligo which is a disease due to the destruction of the coloring pigments in the skin. This comes from a systemic acidosis and further trouble can be prevented through dietetic measures which could correct the lack of the normal alkalinity of the blood. My article called "A Cleansing Diet" would be good for you, and I will be glad to forward it upon receipt of a large, Should, O. G. Fast if thin?" Question: Alice J. asks: "Is it all right for a thin person to fast?" Answer: I always advise thin patients to fast for a few days before starting on any diet for gaining weight. It is true their weight is reduced during the fast, but after the system is cleansed by this treatment they will then gain back all the weight they have lost and as much more as their body requires for perfect health.

WATKINS BROTHERS, Inc. 54 YEARS at SOUTH MANCHESTER

WASHINGTON LETTER

Washington, Dec. 4.—The chances of Congress disposing of the Muscle Shoals problem before the new Hoover administration takes office on March 4 appear remote at this writing, but that isn't deterring the folks who want the idle Muscle Shoals nitrate plants operated—and operated at once.

The newest frontal attack is being conducted along different lines; it is designed to show how much the American farmer is losing every day through the failure of the government, to operate the great fertilizer-manufacturing plants or lease them to somebody who will operate them.

According to the calculations now being impressed upon congressmen, so far this year the nation's farmers have lost an average of $4,732,772.94 per month, or at the rate of $52,793,275.28 a year. When one multiplies this by the 10 years that the great plants have stood idle, he gets the amazing total of $527,932,752.80. Therefore, since the cost was approximately $150,000,000, these figures are being cited to show how many-times the big project could have paid for itself had it ever been operated.

The figures are compiled by the Florence Times-News, which is published at Florence, Ala., and used to make air nitrogen, the saving to American farmers would have been $105,681.80.

"Compare this sum with the $6,862.80 from sale of power at two mills."

President Coolidge's firm stand against government operation, reiterated when an Alabama delegation called at the White House the other day, has made it clear that no government operation will be attempted under this administration. The president let it be known that he might approve the bid of the American Cyanamid Company if certain changes were made. But the outlook is that the Muscle Shoals problem, which has rocked along for years, is going to be handed over to the Hoover administration for decision.

FOREIGN LEGION OPENS AT STATE TODAY

Powerful Drama Stars Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone; "Floating College," Co-Feature.

The most spectacular and powerful drama in many months is playing at the State Theater for today and tomorrow. It is "The Foreign Legion," co-starring Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone, supported by beautiful Mary Nolan and June Marlowe.

This is, without a doubt, one of the finest pictures of the year and should rate high when the selection of the year's greatest pictures is made.

It is sheer drama, of romance and revolt, relieved with comedy masterfully placed at just the right spots. It cannot hurt your enjoyment by being told that the story revolves around the powerful situations of a son and his father opposed to each other, neither knowing who the other is.

The action takes place in the colorful locale of Algiers and is featured by sensational photographic beauty, which goes to the credit of Jackson Rose, one of filmdom's cleverest cameramen. Edward Sloan directed this gigantic screen story for Universal.

Paired with the above feature is "The Floating College," a peppy, breezy and delightful romance of a round-the-world cruise on a student ship. Sally O'Neill and William Collier, Jr., have the leading roles.

The latest up-to-the-minute news happenings are furnished in the current issue of MGM News Events. On Sunday and Monday, the State takes great pleasure in presenting to Manchester film fans the William Fox picture, "Mother Marches," hailed as the greatest film of the year. This production is now showing on Broadway to capacity audiences.

SATISFIED ANYWAY.

FULL TEXT OF PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

President Coolidge in his message to Congress said:

No The Congress of the United States:

No Congress of the United States ever assembled, on surveying the state of the Union, has met with a more pleasing prospect than that which appears at the present time. In the domestic field there is tranquility and contentment, harmonious relations between management and wage earner, freedom from industrial strife, and the highest record of years of prosperity. In the foreign field there is peace, the good will which comes from mutual understanding, and the knowledge that the problems which a short time ago appeared so ominous are yielding to the touch of manifest friendship. The great wealth created by our enterprise and industry, and saved by our economy, has had the widest distribution among our own people, and has gone out in a steady stream to serve the charity and the business of the world. The requirements of existence have passed beyond the standard of necessity into the region of luxury. Enlarging production is consumed by an increasing demand at home and an expanding commerce abroad. The country can regard the present with satisfaction and anticipate the future with optimism.

The main source of these unexampled blessings lies in the integrity and character of the American people. They have had the faith which they have supplemented with ability works. They have been able to put trust in each other and trust in their Government. Their candor in dealing with foreign governments has commanded respect and confidence.

These remarkable powers would have exerted almost in vain without the constant cooperation and careful administration of the Federal Government.

We have been coming into a period which may be fairly characterized as a conversation of our national resources. Warfulness in public business and private enterprise has been displaced by bringing our domestic and foreign relations more and more under a reign of law. A rule of force has been giving way to a rule of reason. We have substituted the calm circle of increasing expenditures, increasing tax rates, and diminishing expenditures, diminishing tax rates, and increasing profits.

Four times we have made a drastic revision of our internal revenue system, abolishing many taxes and substantially reducing almost all others. Each time the resulting stimulation of business has so increased taxable incomes and profits that a surplus has been produced. One-third of the national debt has been paid, while much of the other two-thirds has been refunded at lower rates, and these savings of interest and constant economies have enabled us to repeat the satisfying process of more tax reductions. Under this sound and healthful encouragement the national income has increased nearly 50 percent, until it is estimated to total well over $90,000,000,000. It has been a method which has performed the seeming miracle of leaving a much greater percentage of earnings in the hands of the taxpayers with scarcely any diminution of the Government revenue. That is constructive progress in the highest degree. It is the corner stone of prosperity. It should not fail to be continued.

This action began by application of economy to public expenditure. If it is to be permanent, it must be made so by the repeated application of economy. There is no surplus on which to base further tax revision at this time. Last June the estimates showed a threatened deficit for the current fiscal year of $94,000,000. Under my direction the department began saving all they could out of their present appropriations. The last reduction brought an encouraging improvement in business, beginning early in October, which will also increase our revenue. The combination of economy and good times now indicates a surplus of about $27,000,000. This is a margin of less than 1 per cent. on our expenditures and makes it obvious that the Treasury is in no condition to undertake increases in expenditures to be made before June 30. It is necessary therefore during the present season to refrain from new appropriations for immediate outlay, or if such are absolutely required to provide for them by new revenues; otherwise, we shall reach the end of the year with the unthinkable result of an unbalanced budget. For the first time during my term of office we face that contingency. I am certain that the Congress would not pass and I should not feel warranted in approving legislation which would involve us in that financial disgrace. On the whole the finances of the Government are most satisfactory. Last year the national debt was reduced about $96,000,000. The refunding and retirement of the second and third Liberty loans have just been brought to a successful conclusion, which will save about $75,000,000 a year in interest. The unpaid balance has been arranged in maturities convenient for carrying out our permanent debt-paying program.

The enormous savings made have not been at the expense of any legitimate public need. The Government plant has been kept up and many improvements are under way, while its service is fully manned and the general efficiency of operation has increased. We have been enabled to undertake many enterprises. Among these are the adjusted compensation of the veterans of the World War, which is costing us $112,000,000 a year; amortizing our liability to the civil-service retirement funds, $20,000,000; increase of expenditures for rivers and harbors including flood control, $43,000,000; public buildings, $47,000,000. In 1923 we spent $50,000,000 in the adjustment of war claims and alien property. These are examples of a large list of items.

Foreign Relations

When we turn from our domestic affairs to our foreign relations, we likewise receive peace and progress. The Sixth International Conference of American States was held at Havana last winter. It contributed to a better understanding and cooperation among the nations. Eleven important conventions were signed and 71 resolutions passed. Pursuant to the plan then adopted, this Government has invited the other 20 nations of this hemisphere to a conference on conciliation and arbitration, which meets in Washington on December 10. All the nations have accepted and the expectation is justified that important progress will be made in methods for resolving international differences by means of arbitration.

During the year we have signed 11 new arbitration treaties, and 22 more are under negotiation.

Nicaragua

When a destructive and bloody revolution lay broke out in Nicaragua, at the earnest and repeated entreaties of its Government I dispatched our Marine forces there to protect the lives and interests of our citizens. To compose the contending parties, I sent there Col. Henry L. Stimson, former Secretary of War and now Governor General of the Philippine Islands, who secured an agreement that warfare should cease, a national election should be held and peace should be restored. Both parties conscientiously carried out this agreement, with the exception of a few bandits who later mostly surrendered or left the country. President Diaz appointed Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy, United States Army, president of the election board, which included also one member of each political party.

A free and fair election has been held and has worked out so successfully that both parties have joined in requesting like cooperation from this country at the election of the next President, to which I have refrained from making any commitments, although our country must be gratified at such an exhibition of success and appreciation. Nicaragua is regaining its prosperity and has taken a long step in the direction of peaceful self-government.

Tacna-Arica

The long-standing differences between Chile and Peru have been sufficiently composed so that diplomatic relations have been resumed by the exchange of ambassadors. Negotiations are hopefully proceeding and it is written for the final settlement of the differences over their disputed territory.

Mexico

Our relations with Mexico are on a more satisfactory basis than at any time since their revolution. Many misunderstandings have been resolved and the most frank and friendly negotiations promise a final adjustment of all unsettled questions. It is exceedingly gratifying that Ambassador Morrow has been able to bring our two neighboring countries, which have so long been in a state of mutual distrust, to a position of confidence in each other and of respect of mutual sovereign rights.

China

The situation in China which a few months ago was so threatening as to call for the dispatch of a large expedition, has been a much composed. The Nationalist Government has established itself over the country and promulgated a new organic law announcing a program intended to promote the political and economic welfare of the people. We have recognized this Government's progress, and have negotiated a treaty restoring to China complete tariff autonomy and guaranteeing our citizens against discriminations. Our trade in that quarter is increasing and our forces are being reduced.

Greek and Austrian Debts

Pending before the Congress is a recommendation for the settlement of the Greek debt and the Austrian debt. Both of these are comparatively small and our country can afford to be generous. The rehabilitation of these countries awaits their settlement. There would also be advantages to our trade. We could scarcely afford to be the only nation that refuses the relief which Austria seeks. The Congress has already granted Austria a long-time moratorium, which it is understood will be waived and immediate payments begun on her debt on the same basis which we have extended to other countries.

Peace Treaty

One of the most important treaties ever laid before the Senate of the United States will be that which the 15 nations recently signed at Paris, and to which other nations have declared their intention to adhere, renouncing war as a national policy and agreeing to resort only to peaceful means for the adjustment of international differences. It is the most solemn declaration against war, the most positive adherence to peace, that it is possible for sovereign nations to make. It does not supersede our inalienable sovereign right and duty of national defense. We undertake to commit us before the event to any mode of action which the Congress might deem to be wise if ever the treaty should be broken. But it is a new standard in the world around which can rally the informed and enlightened opinion of nations to prevent their governments from being forced into hostile action by the temporary outbreak of international animosities. The observance of this covenant, so simple and so straight-forward, promises more for the peace of the world than any other agreement ever negotiated among the nations.

National Defense

The first duty of our Government to its own citizens is the preservation of order. Unless and until that duty is met a government is not even eligible for recognition among the family of nations. The advancement of world civilization-likehood is dependent upon that order which people of different countries which we term peace. To insure our citizens against the infringement of their legal rights at home and abroad, to preserve order, liberty, and peace by making law supreme, we have an Army and a Navy.

Both of these are organized for defensive purposes. Our Army could not be much reduced, but does not need to be increased. Such new housing and repairs as are necessary are under way and the 5-year program in aviation is being put into effect in both branches of our service.

Our Navy, according to generally accepted standards, is deficient in cruisers. We have 10 comparatively new vessels, 22 that are old, and 3 to be built. It is evident that repairs and replacements must be provided. This matter was thoroughly canvassed at the last session of the Congress and does not need restatement. The bill before the Senate with the elimination of the time clause should be passed. We have no intention of competing with any other country. This building program is for necessary replacements and to meet our needs for defense.

The cost of national defense is stupendous. It has increased $118,000,000 in the past four years. The estimate expenditure for 1930 is $688,000,000. While this is made up of many items it is, after all, mostly dependent upon numbers. Our defensive needs do not call for any increase in the number of men in the Army or the Navy. We have reached the limit of what we ought to expend for that purpose.

I wish to repeat again for the benefit of the timid and the suspicious that this country is neither militaristic nor imperialistic. Many people at home and abroad, who constantly make this charge, are the same ones who even more solicitously to have us extend assistance to foreign countries. When such assistance is granted, the inevitable result is that we have foreign interests. For us to refuse the customary support and protection of such interests would be in derogation of the sovereignty of this Nation. Our largest foreign interests are in the British Empire,

France, and Italy. Because we are constantly solicitous for those interests, I doubt if anyone would suppose that those countries feel we harbor toward them any militaristic or imperialistic design. As for smaller countries, we certainly do not want any of them. We are more anxious than they are to have their sovereignty respected. Our entire influence is in behalf of their independence. Cuba stands as a witness to our adherence to this principle.

The position of this Government relative to the limitation of armaments, the results already secured, and the developments up to the present time are so well known to the Congress that they do not require any restatement.

Veterans

The magnitude of our present system of veterans' relief is without precedent, and the results have been far-reaching. For years a service pension has been granted to the Grand Army and lately to the survivors of the Spanish-American War. At the time we entered the World War, however, Congress deferred the usual pension system followed by our Government. Eleven years have elapsed since our laws were first enacted, initiating a system of compensation, rehabilitation, hospitalization, and insurance for the disabled of the World War and their dependents. The administration of all the laws concerning relief has been a difficult task, but it can safely be stated that these measures have omitted nothing in their desire to deal generously and humanely. We should continue to foster the system and provide all the facilities necessary for adequate care. It is the conception of our Government that the pension roll is an honor roll. It should include all those who are justly entitled to its benefits, but exclude all others.

Annual expenditures for all forms of veterans' relief now approximate $765,000,000, and are increasing from year to year. It is doubtful if the peak of the expenditures will be reached even under present legislation for some time yet to come. Further amendments to the existing law will be suggested by the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, the Disabled American Veterans of the World War, and other like organizations, and it may be necessary for administrative purposes, or in order to remove some existing inequalities in the present law, to make further changes. I am sure that such recommendations as may be submitted to the Congress will receive your careful consideration. But because of the vast expenditure now being made each year, with every assurance that it will increase, and because of the great liberality of the existing law, the proposal of any additional legislation dealing with this subject should receive most searching scrutiny from the Congress.

You are familiar with the suggestion that the various public agencies now dealing with matters of veterans' relief be consolidated in one Government department. Some advantages to this plan in the Government department. Some advantages to this plan seem apparent, especially in the simplification of administration and in the opportunity of bringing about a great uniformity in the application of a survey be made by the proper committees of Congress dealing with this subject, in order to determine whether legislation to secure this consolidation is desirable.

Agriculture

The past year has been marked by notable though not uniform improvement in agriculture. The general purchasing power of farm products and the volume of production have advanced. This means not only further progress in overcoming the price disparity into which agriculture was plunged in 1920-21, but also increased efficiency on the part of farmers and a well-grounded confidence in the future of agriculture.

The livestock industry has attained the best balance for many years and is prospering conspicuously. Dairymen, beef producers, and poultrymen are receiving substantially larger returns than last year. Cotton, although lower in price than at this time last year, was produced in greater volume, and the prospect for cotton incomes is favorable. But progress is nevertheless in a vast and highly diversified agriculture or industry. Cash grains, hay, tobacco and potatoes est taxation inquiry was instituted to afford a practical guide for the forest reserves, not only to protect the ranges, but to preserve the soil from erosion. Similar action is urgently needed to protect other public lands which are now overgrazed and rapidly eroding.

Temporary expedients, though sometimes capable of appeasing the demands of the moment, can not permanently solve the surplus problem and might seriously aggravate it. Hence putting the Government directly into business, subsidies, and price fixing, and the alluring promises of political action as a substitute for private initiative, should be avoided.

The Government should aid in promoting orderly marketing and in handling surpluses clearly due to weather and seasonal conditions. As a beginning there should be created a Federal farm board consisting of able and experienced men empowered to advise producers' associations in establishing central agencies or stabilization corporations to handle surpluses, to seek more economical means of merchandising, and to add the proceeds of secure returns according to the quality of his product. A revolving loan fund should be provided for the necessary financing until these agencies shall have developed credit institutions. Such a bill should carry authority for raising the money, by loans or otherwise, necessary to meet the expense, as the Treasury has no surplus.

Agriculture has lagged behind industry in achieving that unity of effort which modern economic life demands. The cooperative movement, which is gradually building the needed organization, is in harmony with public interest and therefore merits public encouragement.

Responsibility of States.

Important phases of public policy related to agriculture lie within the sphere of the States. While successive reductions in Federal taxes have relieved most farmers of direct taxes to the National Government, State and local levies have become a serious burden. This problem needs immediate and thorough study with a view to correction at the earliest possible moment. It will have to be made largely by the States themselves.

Commerce.

It is desirable that the Government continue its helpful attitude toward American business. The activities of the Department of Commerce have contributed largely to the present satisfactory position in our international trade, which has reached about $9,000,000,000 annually. There should be no slackening of effort in that direction. The department's assistance to domestic commerce be continue. There is probably no way in which the Government can aid sound economic progress more effectively than by cooperating with our business men to reduce wastes in distribution.

Commercial Aeronautics.

Continued progress in civil aviation is most gratifying. Demands for airplanes and motors have taxed both the industry and the licensing and inspection service of the Department of Commerce to the capacity. While the compulsory licensing provisions of the air commerce act apply only to equipment and personnel engaged in interstate and foreign commerce, a Federal license may be procured by anyone possessing the necessary qualifications. State legislation local airport regulations, and insurance requirements make such a license practically indispensable. This results in uniformity of regulation and increased safety in operation, which are essential to aeronautical development. Over 17,000 young men and women have now applied for Federal air-pilot's licenses or permits. More than 80 per cent. of them applied during the past year.

Our national airway system extends 14,000 miles in length and has 7,500 miles lighted for night operations. Provision has been made for lighting 4,000 miles more during the current fiscal year and equipping an equal mileage with radio facilities. Three-quarters of our people are now served by these stations. With the rapid growth of air mail, express and passenger service, this new transportation medium is daily becoming a more important factor in commerce. It is noteworthy that this development has taken place without governmental subsidies. Commercial passenger flights operating on schedule have reached 13,000 miles per day. During the next fortnight this Nation will entertain the nations of the world in a celebration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the first successful airplane flight. The achievement of this epoch-making accomplishment belongs to our country, Orville Wright.

ment of an earlier message, that Congress enact the legislation necessary to make permanent the Parcel Post Convention with Cuba, both as a facility to American commerce and as a measure of equity to Cuba in the one class of goods which that country can send here by parcel post without detriment to our own trade.

"Maine" Battleship Memorial.

When I attended the Pan-American Conference at Havana, the President of Cuba showed me a marble statue made from the original memorial that was overturned by a storm after it was erected on the Cuban shore to the memory of the men who perished in the destruction of the battleship Maine. As a testimony of friendship and appreciation of the Cuban Government and people he most generously offered to present this to the United States. I am assured him of my pleasure in accepting it. There is no location in the White House for placing so large and heavy a structure, and I therefore urge the Congress to provide by law for some locality where it can be set up.

Railroads.

In previous annual messages I have suggested the enactment of laws to promote railroad consolidation with the view of increasing the efficiency of transportation and lessening the cost to the public. While consolidations can now be made under the present law until it is changed, yet the provisions of the act of 1920 have not been found fully adequate to meet the needs of other methods of consolidation. Amendments designed to remedy these defects have been considered at length by the respective committees of Congress and a bill was reported out late in the last session which I understand has the approval in principle of the Interstate Commerce Commission. It is to be hoped that this legislation may be enacted at an early date.

Experience has shown that the interstate commerce law requires definition and clarification in several other respects, some of which have been pointed out by the Interstate Commerce Commission in its annual reports to the Congress. It will promote the public interest to have the Congress give early consideration to the recommendations there made.

Merchant Marine.

The cost of maintaining the United States Government merchant fleet has been steadily reduced. We have established American flag lines in foreign trade where they had never before existed as a means of promoting commerce and as a naval auxiliary. There have been few years in which the American flag line has not been profitable. This year the public interest will be served by the enactment of legislation passed by the Congress, giving promise of continued successful operation. Additional legislation has been introduced which is necessary to promote future advancement under private control. Through the cooperation of the Post Office Department and the Shipping Board long-term contracts are being made with American steamship lines for carrying mail, which already provides the construction of 15 to 20 new vessels and the gradual reestablishment of the American merchant marine as a private enterprise. No action of the National Government has been so beneficial to our shipping. The cost is being absorbed to a considerable extent by the disposal of unprofitable lines operated by the Shipping Board, for which the new law has made a market. Meanwhile it should be our policy to maintain necessary strategic lines under the Government operation until they can be transferred to private capital.

Inter-American Highway

In my message last year I expressed the view that we should lend our encouragement for more roads in this hemisphere south of the Rio Grande. My view has not changed. The Pan American Union has recently endorsed it. In some of the countries to the south a great deal of progress is being made in road building. In other countries, however, features are often exacting and financing difficult. As those countries enter upon programs for road building we should be ready to contribute from our abundant experience to their task easier accomplishment. I prefer not to go into civil life to accomplish this end. We already furnish him competent men from these same sources and from the Department of Agriculture.

We should provide our southern neighbors, if they request it, with such engineer advisors for the construction of roads and bridges. Private interests should look with interest upon the construction of a road from the eastern coast of South

Waterways

Our river and harbor improvements are proceeding with vigor. In the past few years we have increased the appropriation for this regular work $28,000,000, besides what is to be expended on flood control. The total appropriation for this year was over $21,000,000. The Ohio River is almost ready for opening; work on the Missouri and other rivers is under way. In accordance with the Mississippi flood law Army engineers are making investigations and surveys on other streams throughout the country with a view to flood control, navigation, waterpower, and irrigation. Our large lines are being operated under generous appropriations, and negotiations are developing relative to the St. Lawrence waterway. To secure the benefits from all these waterways joint rates must be established with the railroads, preferably by agreement, but otherwise as a result of congressional action.

We have recently passed several river and harbor bills. The work ordered by the Congress, not yet completed, will cost about $243,000,000, besides the hundreds of millions to be spent on the Mississippi flood way. Until we can see our way out of this expense so further river and harbor legislation should be passed, as expenditures to put it into effect would be four or five years away.

Irrigation of Arid Lands

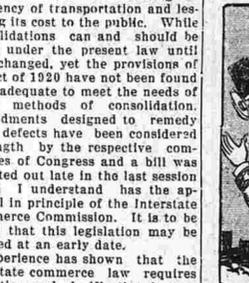

For many years the Federal Government has been committed to the wise policy of reclamation and irrigation. While it has met with some failures due to lack of thorough surveys, so that they could not be placed on a sound business basis on the whole the service has been of such incalculable benefit in so many States that one would advocate its abandonment. The program to which we are already committed, providing for the construction of new projects authorized by Congress and the completion of old projects, will tax the resources of the reclamation fund over a period of years. The high cost of improving and equipping farms adds to the difficulty of securing settlers for vacant farms on Federal projects.

Readjustments authorized by the reclamation relief act of May 25, 1922, have given more favorable terms of repayment to settlers. These new financial arrangements and the general prosperity on irrigation projects have resulted in increased collections by the Department of the Interior of charges due the reclamation fund. Nevertheless, the demand for still smaller yearly payments on some projects continues. These conditions should have consideration in connection with any proposed new projects.

THE CORNERSTONE

"It's the cornerstone of our prosperity."

While these developments in fundamental research, regulation, and dissemination of agricultural information are of distinct help to agriculture, additional effort is needed. The surplus problem demands attention. As emphasized in my last message, the Government should assume no responsibility in normal times for crop surplus clearly due to overextended acreage. The Government should, however, provide reliable information as a guide to private effort; and in this connection fundamental research on prospective supply and demand, as a guide to production and marketing, should be encouraged. Expenditure of public funds to bring in more new land should have most searching scrutiny, so long as our farmers face unsatisfactory prices for crop and livestock produced on land already under cultivation.

Every proper effort should be made to put land to uses for which it is adapted. The reforestation of land best suited for timber production is progressing and should be

1928 By NEA Service Inc. RUTH DEWEY GROVES AUTHOR OF "WHEN A GIRL LOVES LOVE FOR TWO"

THIS HAS HAPPENED
Fate introduces JERRY RAY to ALESTER CARSTAIRS when he crashes his airplane into the camp she is sharing with her roommate MYRTLE. She likes his pilot, DAN HARVEY, but Alester showers her with attention. Unable to buy a gown for a party he has invited her to, Jerry slips one from the store where she works, but it is ruined and she is discharged when she confesses. Dan tries to rein her, but when he proposes she tells him she does not believe in love but hopes to marry for money.

Alester makes advances which Jerry repulses. But when he learns that she will lose her job on his account, he uses his influence to get her a place in a chorus. Rehearsals are hard, but she is befriended by EVELYN STARR. Dan sees Jerry and tells her she is bringing her to the party, but to guard her reputation on account of his family.

Alester drives her to Atlantic City for the opening, but she makes him angry by refusing to attend a midnight party he wants to give the chorus. He takes LEONTE LEBAUDY in her place.

A short mention of her in the show review and promotion to a special dance number at the end of the week date Jerry. Evelyn wants her to go to Boston with her on the train but Alester insists on driving her there.

Jerry becomes uneasy when he goes by way of Philadelphia and says he wants to have a dinner party there and introduce her to some friends.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXIX

"The Kraal!" Jerry said precisely as Alester had anticipated. He chuckled. "But that's a notorious place!" Jerry exclaimed, puzzled at the amusement he was showing.

"You're right, it is," Alester agreed. "But it's also the hottest fashion of the younger crowd at the moment. They've got a show that lifts you off your chair."

"I didn't think respectable people go there," Jerry ventured, wondering if there was any possible way of getting out of it.

"I knew you'd be shocked," Alester admitted. "You're so funny, but you needn't worry. The Magnolia Rooms are private and no one will see you."

"I was thinking of Miss Mortimer," Jerry smiled. "If she's the kind of girl your mother likes I should think she would be too nice to go to the Kraal."

"Oh, Betty likes to go slumming," Alester told her. "Well, I don't," Jerry said emphatically. "I know her in the other half lives and I don't believe in commercializing misfortune to attract the curious."

"But the people who go to the Kraal aren't the victims of misfortune," Alester replied. "They are. They wouldn't be there. It's a misfortune not to know better."

Alester laughed. "Well, you just wait until you've suffered a little over the misfortune of having to eat the fried chicken and honey waffles we're going to have there and you'll pray for more bad luck to bring you back."

"Can't we go some place else?" Jerry pleaded. "On Sunday? Not a chance," Jerry sighed.

"I suppose I don't need to change my dress to go to the Kraal," she said after a while.

Alester told her no. "Shortly before the opening driving through the picket fence and up a rutted road to a group of bark-covered buildings that spread out from a central hall in the shape of a star.

Alester drove around them until he came to the entrance of one that bore the sign "Magnolia" over the door. Here he parked his car and led Jerry across a dirt-floored porch to a heavy, barred door.

It opened at his touch and Jerry found herself looking at a gruff-faced attendant who stood at a spear, she saw, that had been dipped in red.

She shrank back from this sight and Alester put a hand on her arm. "It's a gruesome place," he warned her, "unless you keep in mind that it's all hokum to produce atmosphere."

"And spoil your appetite," Jerry added, shuddering.

Just then a burst of weird sounds came through a distant door, that someone had opened. "It's like a jungle madhouse," Jerry thought.

Alester was leading the way toward a curtained opening at the end of the hall. "They lean hard on the wind instruments," he said.

"Wind instruments?" Jerry repeated, thinking of delicate flute notes.

"Oboes and . . . those things," Alester replied, never having troubled to inform himself that the primitive notes like those of the trombone that came to his ears were produced by a sackbut and that the tuba, the ocarina, the hautboy, bassoon and bombardon all added their tones to the wondrous symphony that had brought fame to The Kraal.

Someone appeared at the opening. A jeweled hand moved the curtain aside. Jerry saw a flushed girl in a simple silk dress standing before her. She supposed it was Miss Mortimer, but it occurred to her no surprise that a society girl should be grown so inconspicuously. She had learned from Evelyn that smart women never overdressed.

"Lo, Al," Jerry said in a singing voice as she came forward to meet Jerry.

"I've heard about you," she said. "Alester's impossibly boastful of his theatrical acquaintances, but we're all grateful to him for giving us the opportunity to know you too."

Jerry thought it was a very nice speech. She wished she felt it was sincere but the girl rattled it off like rote. Her mind seemed to be on something more important than meeting a show girl. She turned her head in the direction from which she had come and Jerry knew that she was listening.

"The music broke abruptly. A girl laughed before it began again in a thin, nerve-torturing whine. Betty Mortimer bit her lip.

"Come on," she said quickly; "you're missing something."

A maid in a slip of printed cloth swung round her came to take Jerry's and Alester's wraps.

They followed Betty to the curtained doorway. Alester held the bamboo fringe up for her to pass through but she hung back and let Jerry precede her.

"The music eating fire again," she said under her breath, but Jerry caught the words.

She had no time to ponder the meaning; before her was a scene of indescribable pandemonium.

At a table in the foreground sat a group of young men and women who were plainly Alester's and Betty's sort. On the table was a large black pot and under it an artificial fire. The table was very low—made from rough boards laid on mat seats.

But it was not the table or those about it that attracted Jerry's attention. At the end of the room—that end which connected with the central hall—wide doors, the entire width of the room, had been thrown open to afford a view of the entertainment.

Alester led Jerry to a seat and as she took it someone extinguished the light. Only the glow from the potfire filled the room. Beyond, where the show was on, there was a dim, greenish light supposed to resemble moonlight filtering through jungle verdure.

The music had changed now. The air vibrated to tympani, the throb of tom-tom, the varying note of a beaten gong, the shrill clash of cymbals, the strange sound of musical bones.

Jerry's hands were clasped in unconscious tension as she leaned before them and watched the scene before her.

Dark figures emerged from a painted forest and gathered round a huge pot like the smaller one she had seen on the table near her. They joined others that had come before them and piled wood beneath the pot, from which issued a white smoke like steam.

Jerry saw, with a horror she could not shake off, two grotesque creatures drag a girl, howling and foaming, to the side of the fire, where they threw her to the ground and left her to groan and shriek while they cast themselves into a veritable frenzy of leaping, whirling, bending, groveling gestures.

What happened at the end of the dance she never knew, exactly because she did not look, but from the comments of those around her she gathered that the girl had been sacrificed to the appetites of the cannibals—at least that she had been tossed into the huge pot.

Then the wide doors were closed, the lights went up and Jerry was introduced to the members of Alester's dinner party.

She heard a tall, thin girl with rosy hair and koh-rarked eyes address her as "Addie."

Jerry looked at her curiously, to see what a fire-eating girl was like. She saw at once that Addie—she missed her last name—had eyes or ears for no one except a good-looking man whom she called "Cleve."

Addie clung to him in a desperate attempt to hold his attention—to scorch him, it seemed to Jerry, who felt shamed for her.

The man gave an impression of trying to resist but of being fascinated against his will. He cast anxious glances about the table now and then and Jerry heard him address the girl to "steer it." Once she heard him say: "Marian may come in. Addie—you know she's trailing us."

Addie laughed—the same uncontrolled, mirthless sound that Jerry had noticed Betty listening to in the hall.

"That's getting on my nerves," someone remarked irritably. "It's been going on all afternoon."

Jerry looked around at the heightened color on the faces of the men, the feverish light in the girls' eyes. It was easy to believe they had been in this horrid place for hours.

Betty sat down beside her and put Jerry's thoughts into words. "Nasty, isn't it?" she said unemotionally. "I don't know how they stand it. I came in just a few minutes before you arrived."

"It's . . . interesting," Jerry answered in loyalty to Alester.

"Addie always spoils things," Betty went on in tones of absolute boredom. But Jerry noticed that her eyes were fixed unceasingly upon Addie and Cleve, and the flush had not left her smooth young cheeks.

"What does 'eating fire' mean?" Jerry asked before she was conscious that the words had formed in her mind. To her surprise Betty explained.

"Oh, it's just an expression we have for trouble seekers," she said indifferently. "Poachers, principally."

It was a vague explanation, but Jerry was further enlightened a few minutes later when a very attractive young woman with a wild-eyed young man in her wake entered the room.

She was in her "Marian" and she went about her business with no fuss and feathers—the business of removing Cleve. The wild-eyed young man tagged along, obviously upset over his role of escort to a raiding wife.

No one protested Cleve's departure. Jerry was sure she heard a sigh of relief from Betty, and immediately there was a general movement toward the dancing space. Alester led Jerry out and she saw with disgust that Addie was left with her head buried in her arms on the table, sobbing aloud.

"I suppose she thinks she's in love," she said to herself scornfully.

At the end of the dance she ventured to suggest that they ought to start for New York. Alester unexpectedly agreed. "There's an act I want you to see first," he told her. "I'll ask to have it put on now for us."

They walked toward the doors opening into the central hall. Alester rolled back one of them and left Jerry there while he went to the orchestra leader.

Halfway back she saw him pause suddenly and stand transfixed, his eyes on one of the tables that occupied the corners of the hall.

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLENE SUMNER

There comes a time in every young housewife's life when, if the jell doesn't jell and the children aren't happy, she begins to think that the housewife begins to think of such things as community kitchens and nurseries, and wonder why the world of commerce and industry doesn't make it possible for women to bear children and carry on wage-earning, "self-expressive work," too.

All these questions which we wonder about here at home have been and are actually being worked out by Soviet Russia.

No Discrimination The fact that eight per cent of the all-Russia Soviet, the chief governing body of the nation, corresponding to our Congress, are women, and that women chairmen of provincial and city Soviets, corresponding to our governments and mayors are so common that a Mrs. Ferguson or Ross wouldn't cause a ripple over there, is not nearly so interesting to the world of women as these facts—

That—Russia has no job discriminations against married women, as Maurice Hindus puts it in an article in "Asia."

"They, too, may do whatever work they are fitted to perform, whether in the teaching or medical or engineering professions or in industry. Neither a school board nor a factory manager nor anyone in charge of hiring workers has a right to refuse a woman applicant a position just because she is married or even because she is enceinte."

"In industries, such as the textile, in which women predominate, a network of nurseries has been established to make possible the proper care of babies during work hours."

"This state of affairs naturally raises the question whether the Russian woman, under the burden of her new privileges and responsibilities, is not becoming too independent, too aggressive, too ambitious, too intelligent, and thereby debasing and perhaps killing romance."

"And is the Russian woman really a happier human being because of her new equalities? The new social scheme may eventually bring to Russian women a great rapture, but it will not be without the cost of a great agony."

The question, too, for women everywhere—not merely those of Russia.

"I've been up in the attic today looking in the old packing chest and I came across that old blue coat of yours, Anne. Do you remember—the one with the squirrel collar?"

"Do I? Say, Mother, I began to think it would grow to my back."

"It's as good as new," said her mother, "and Julia can step into it right now."

"Say, Mother, you know what I want for Christmas, don't you? I want that pony coat. If you don't have it, Oh, please, Mother, I'm just crazy for a fur coat."

"Here's Julia now," said Mrs. Brown as the thirteen-year-old came in. "Julia, go up to my room and bring down that coat on my bed. I think I can fix it up for you to wear. It's perfectly good."

Julia disappeared suspiciously. Her fears were verified and in a minute she came tearing downstairs with "That old rag! Why I wouldn't wear that to a dog fight! It's got holes in the elbows and the collar looks like a drowned cat. I wore out Anne's old brown coat, and I'm not going to begin on another!"

"I'm a regular old-ladies-home for Anne's coats so I am. She just gets everything."

"I'm sorry we're poor," Mrs. Brown's reply to this, "was just have to manage the best we can."

It was her stock in trade, that reply, whenever Julia stormed about wearing Anne's cast-offs and made-overs. It always shut Julia up.

That day Anne's mother had been down street. She had made the first payment on the pony coat. It was to be Anne's Christmas gift. She figured that by having a woman only one instead of two days a week, cutting down on meat to every other day, crossing the out-of-town cousins off her Christmas list, postponing Julia's new coat another season and staying at home from movies (that was Dad's one extravagance), she could pay for the coat by April.

The whole family will go without things all winter on account of that coveted coat. And will Anne appreciate it? Not she. She'll stand for all the sacrificing they can do and then some.

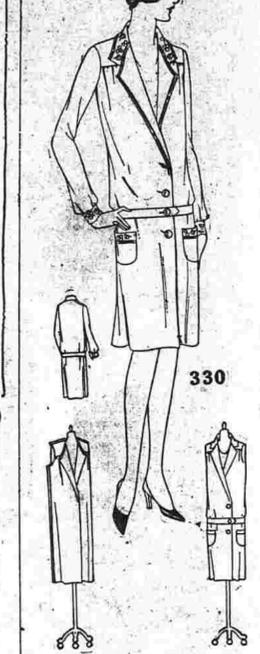

When she marries she will go on thinking that her husband should sacrifice for her as her mother, father and sister have done. And will it be her fault? No—her mother's.

There are many lopsided families like the Browns—one child getting all the favors. Is yours one?

CLEAN FUR
If the collar of your fur coat soils your neck, try the following cleaning process. Heat bran in saucpan, stirring it well so it will not burn. Rub while warm into the fur collar. Shake well and rub more until the last bran comes out clean. Shake and air the coat.

PLASTER PROTECTOR
To keep the plaster from cracking, when you drive a nail into the wall, dip the nail first into very hot water and hammer it in while hot and still wet.

This And That In Feminine Lore

Women actually look years younger after a facial, certainly when they have had several of them at the Lily Beauty parlor in the House & Hale Building, Tel. 1671.

Among the newest hats the one with some individuality in cut and trim is at a premium. Fur is popular for trimming but care must be used so that it does not make the hat look too heavy. A stunning little new hat had a tight head-band with a little bloused fullness in its crown. Insets of fur were in flat petal shapes at the side, forming a down-over-the-ears effect. Another pretty close-fitting hat had ivy leaves in different shapes of brown around its edges and also coming down on the ears.

Our Coventry correspondent writes of a "Swiss steak supper" which the ladies out there are to give at the North Coventry church on the 12th of the month. In talking with her about other news, I asked about the supper, for the benefit of other church societies or housewives. Swiss steak is round steak cut thick, two inches or so, and the individual portions cut, well floured and sauted or fried on both sides for a short time in suet fat. The steaks are then transferred to a casserole, seasoned, some water added, and carrot and onion for flavoring. It is then cooked in the oven for about an hour and a half. I remarked to our correspondent that a supper like this could only be served to a small number comparatively, but she replied that it has been the custom to serve it annually for years at an Elmira, New York church when sometimes several hundred are served. The dishes may be prepared at the homes of the Ladies Aiders or at the church if there is oven space enough. With the Swiss steak our Coventry neighbors plan to serve mashed potatoes and turnips and possibly one or two other vegetables, with a steamed fruit pudding and whipped cream, all for half a dollar.

You'll like the new series of house plans by Cora Wilson which will appear on the home page from time to time. Study them and if you are planning to build a home sometime in the future, save those that appeal to you and ideas or clever arrangements you find there may be incorporated in "our dream" home.

What a tremendous interest there is all over the country in Better Homes and Better Gardens—and by the way that is just the title of a well known little garden magazine. We have our share of home building in Manchester for a place of this size, but there is also great activity on the outskirts of our neighboring city, Hartford. Every week some of these new homes are furnished and thrown open to the public. More often they are not furnished but open for inspection. I went through one of these recently in West Hartford, a beautiful home for a prosperous business or professional man. The living room and halls were hung with a beautiful fabric paper resembling a satin brocade in a greenish gray. The dining room walls were covered with a handsome paper something like the old Lincoln wallton, in tones of brown, the raised portions standing out in relief. The kitchen and bathrooms were in white tile with colored or black borders and the chamber papers were in colonial or other quiet patterns now in vogue.

The furnished exhibition home was unusual in architecture both on the exterior and within. Entering the hall one was surprised to find the dining room at the left in the front of the house and the right wing occupied by the wonderful living room in eighteenth century style, in colonial hand-modeled plaster, heavy beamed ceiling and deep fireplace flanked on each side by upboards both open and closed. A great log was burning on the hearth and five artistic lamps of different styles illuminated the room. Dainty ruffled tieback curtains were at the windows with overdrapes of silk material. The furnishings were early American, with an English davenport and handsome occasional tables and chairs in walnut and mahogany, and large floor-size reproduction of a hooked rug. The room was indescribably cosy and inviting.

The dining room walls were hung with a paper reproduced from a design of a wall covering in the old Webb house at Wethersfield. The paper on the halls was copied from that in an old mansion in Farmington. The master's bedroom which was immediately above the living room and of the same size, also had a fireplace and the furnishings here were in colonial adaptation of Hepplewhite. There were five bedrooms and all were in keeping with the design of the house. One was covered with a pink colonial dot paper, antique and washable. Another, the boy's room was hung with a dainty little design almost like percale apron material. A strictly colonial room had a canopy post bed, comb-back chairs and other furnishings in keeping. The electric company had combined in the furnishings of the home, the beautiful lighting fixtures, electric stove, automatic refrigerating machine, laundry equipment and other items.

It will not be definitely known tonight whether the Cubs will play football again Sunday or whether they will call it quits for the season.

Last Sunday, the Cubs took the field minus such stars as Felix Moszer, Johnny Groujan, Charlie Minceul and Tony Ambulewicz.

Stratton, regular quarter back, on the other hand, is definitely out for the season with a severely strained right shoulder.

BY HENRY L. FARRELL

There is one thing unfortunate about the business of picking an All-America football team aside from the futility of trying to name eleven men out of eleven hundred who are the best players in the country.

The unfortunate thing is that, while the All-America teams are treated with scant seriousness by the public at large, the selections are taken most seriously by the young athletes themselves.

The Cubs made a profit of nearly $275 on their game with the Okforders last Sunday. This exceeds by more than double the net income from any game this season except the town series.

George Stavnitzky said last night that he had finally decided to cast his lot with the Rec Five in basketball. For several weeks, George has been "sitting on the fence" but at last appears to have toppled off.

Douglas Robertson, who was mentioned in last night's Herald as being a senior is only a sophomore so will be back with the football squad at Manchester High again next season.

Jack Shea, former Manchester High School student, who now attends New York University, told friends here that Al Lassman, captain of the N.Y.U. grid eleven, is a front of the class and that "en Strome is also so "wide" that when he sits in his chair he can't squirm around any.

Football insurance has certainly come in handy to the Cubs. They paid $247.20 for their two-dozen old policies and six men are now on the injured list, some of them so bad that their reimbursement will be quite heavy.

The $15 which Brunis Moskoe received for playing one game with the Cubs last Sunday is said to be more than he got during the entire four years he has played with the Cloverleaves.

One current report has it that the north end is planning to organize a basketball team to play the Rec Five before the season is over.

The Maple Ends of Bristol have a basketball team good enough to oppose the Rec Five judging from Bristol reports which show such men as Pete Jablonowski, former Terryville High star, who is also with the Cincinnati Reds in baseball "Tug" Zetarski, Ruffy Rao and Burhoff of last year's champion Bristol High quintet, Lubek of Taunton, Mass. High, and "Dutch" Leonard, in their lineup.

Speaking about good football records, did you know that neither Bates College or Trinity College scored a single point during the past season?

Conran's Five will journey to Thompsonville for a bowling match tonight. Two teams from Bryant & Chapman of Hartford will roll Talcottville and Chartist's All-Stars at Conran's tomorrow night.

The Herald League resumes play Thursday night. The pairings will be re-announced tomorrow.

PLENTY OF WORK

London.—One of the queerest legacies ever left in C. Britain is that left by John Rudge, Trysull, Staffordshire. He provided $5 a year for a poor man to go round the parish church during the sermon, awaken sleepers and eject stray dogs.

NORTH ENDS WILL SUCCEED CLOVERLEAVES, IT IS SAID

EXPECT HUGGINS TO DO TRADING

Managers of B. B. Leagues Gather in Toronto to Plan for Next Season.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

Toronto, Ont., Dec. 4.—Everybody had done approximately nothing with great reverence for the last 24 hours, so they retired to the lounge this morning for a much needed rest while awaiting the arrival of the early morning train, bearing the mail, the milk and Miller Huggins. The latter, sole proprietor of the only fountain pen in baseball that starts writing spontaneously and without reluctance, was expected to inject the spice of life into the impending convention of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues.

It is men like Mr. Huggins who make life worth the tremendous effort involved in living it. He isn't satisfied with a world's championship ball club that won its title in the minimum number of four games with a maximum number of base hits. He is all for tearing that club up and some of the pieces hence.

The Greeters Club, an organization inspired by some lofty purpose which, unfortunately, I have forgotten, will not be found wanting in this emergency. Among the greeters on duty will be Billy Evans and Roger Bacon of the Cleveland club; Bob Quinn, of Boston; Dan Howley, of St. Louis, and a lot of other guys who are sure they can do Mr. Huggins no good in a big broad way. It is my understanding that the Cleveland outfit means to bludgeon him with fair words about George Uhl, the pitcher, who forgets to win ball games every other year. In the course of events the 1929 season would be one in which George's memory was due to function again. But, Cleveland is not committed to philanthropy. It wants something, even for a memory.

To Talk Trade The meeting will afford Huggins his first chance to talk to Quinn about the proposed New York-Boston trade. The Yankee manager once said that he was willing to sacrifice Bob Meusel to get the man he wanted. At that time, it was suspected that he was referring to Charley Ruffing, but now the understanding is that Ed Morris is the young man in question. Dugan, Robertson, Pat Collins, Grabowski and Gazella are believed to be employees who are definitely on the block. Meusel merely had mentioned by way of showing the extent of Huggins' concern for the future welfare of the ball club.

Anyhow a guy who announced that he wants to do business is as welcome as the old pay check itself. Usually the boys spend four days in stealthily slipping around each other and then go off home wondering rather plaintively why they ever come to these things in the first place.

Expect Harris to Attend Another optimistic note was sounded with the expected arrival of Stanley Harris, the new Detroit manager. Mr. Harris is a very avid trader whenever he is convinced that he is about to get no worse than the better of it. However, managers with new ball clubs are notorious for their reluctance to rush into matters of business with rival outfits. They want to be sure they aren't trading a home run for a sensational foul to the third baseman and they can't tell until they see it with their own eyes the following season. It isn't likely that Howley, having performed his miracle with the Browns, will want to take a chance on trading himself out of the first division either.

Deals with the minor leagues are much more readily and effectively consummated, as a matter of fact, and with full representations from International American Association and Western League on hand and a scattering of Texas League and Southern Association, a lot of things may happen.

John Conroy Toole, International League president whose administration was said to be under fire, survived the preliminary meeting of the league without casualty. He announced after the meeting that nothing had been broached on the subject of his regime.

The International determined, among other things, that it would open its season in April and close on Sept. 25. The league will have a 168 game schedule as usual.

TO GET ANOTHER CHANCE.

The Chicago White Sox are going to give Johnny Kerr, a second baseman drafted from Hollywood, a chance to play second base next summer. He was with Detroit several years ago.

1929 Town Series Will Be Between Kelley's Cubs and Dwyer's North Ends, Dame Rumor Says.

Although confirmation is lacking, the general belief seems to be that the Cloverleaves football team has played together for the last time, under that name at least. Persistent reports are to the effect that the North Ends will take up the burden in 1929.

Taking this for granted, it seems quite probable that Jack Dwyer, discharged coach of the Cubs, will be at the helm of the representation from "God's Country." Dwyer took over the North Ends during the middle of the past season and has been quite emphatic in declaring that the North Ends possess sufficient talent for a team that can beat the Cubs in 1929.

Dwyer was with the Cloverleaves in an advisory capacity during the recent town series, and he says if he only had a couple of more good men on his line, the North Ends could have beaten either the Cubs or the Cloverleaves, judging from the amount of football displayed in the series.

Manager Bill Griffin of the Cloverleaves still insists that his club will be back on the grid next fall and he may be right, for next season is a long way off and anything can happen between now and then. However, a rumor story is always worth the space it takes up. Consequently, this article which can be taken for what it is worth.

Because of the manner in which Dwyer was dropped from the ranks of the Cubs, it is no secret that Jack would like to get a chance to coach an eleven meeting the Cubs for the town championship. That is why the wise boys who have their ears cupped for the latest red hot tips along Gossip Alley report that next year's series will feature the Cubs and the North Ends with Tom Kelley and Jack Dwyer as the strategists.

In case the North Ends do take up the work of the Cloverleaves, the chances are that several of the best players on the Cloverleaves will be drafted for service with the North Ends. It is only to be expected that Dwyer will do his utmost to induce Brunis Moskoe to enlist his services for a north end cause. Hiccup, Moskoe has always renned loyal to his club of the town despite attractive invitations from the south.

OPEN FORUM

MATHIAS SPIESS ANSWERS FISH ON "EVOLUTION"

Doesn't Think That Man Who Departs From Word of God Wears Horns and Cloven Hoofs.

Editor, The Herald:

In his letter, which appeared in the Open Forum of your issue of Dec. 1, A. E. Fish tells us that "Evolution is not a fact but only a theory." He asks the professing Christians to bear in mind a few facts about the Bible, while the lectures on evolution are in progress, which are being delivered in the Center Congregational church.

While Mr. Fish does not believe in evolution, he does believe however, that "a man who departs from the Word of God," at once develops a pair of horns, a tail and a cloven foot, for he tells us: "When man departs from the Word of God then he begins to devitalize." Strange that he does not hear the sweet voice of his Master saying: "Judge not, that ye be not judged."

He further tells us that "The fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge," but overlooks the fact that the ancient Hebrews under Solomon feared the Lord but had wisdom and knowledge enough to build the temple. Solomon was compelled to call in heathens, who were far advanced in the arts and science, and they built the first house of Jehovah, the tribal God of the Israelites.

Mr. Fish, like all other fundamentalists, does not object to the automobile, the gigantic ocean steamer, the talking machine, electrical machinery, the telephone and telegraph, the radio, the television and so many other marvelous achievements of man, which at one time or another were simply scientific theories before they became facts. These folks should not use and enjoy these things for they, so far as their mental status is concerned, belong to the wheelbarrow, except at the fallow candle days.

Man has achieved much during the last century, which is only a flicker of time in a geological sense. It has taken nature epochs and ages to develop things and we cannot expect every man to be a Luther Burbank, an Edison, Steinmetz or a Marconi.

When Mr. Fish speaks of the Bible, he has in mind one of the translations printed in English. All modern language Bibles are only copies translated from an older language but the original Old Testament is the Hebrew Torah and this book tells a different story. According to it the gods (heavenly) created heaven and earth and Jehovah was the "Most High God" (Elohim) who was not worshipped and did not dwell "in temples built with hands" until Solomon's temple was finished.

A pious fraud was committed throughout the translation of the Bible for when we read of "the Lord God" in a modern Bible we find "Jehovah Elohim," (Jehovah of the gods) in the Hebrew. Jacob prayed to El-shaddai, (god my demon) and all the ancient Israelites worshipped the teraphim, stone pillars, representing "the staff of life" and the "grove" or ashtoreth "represented "the door of life". It was sex worship pure and simple. The ashtoreth was also represented in Solomon's temple and the women who inhabited "the chambers of the sodomites" which Solomon had built by the temple" wore hangings for it. Two teraphims were on the porch of the temple.

Relics of sex worship came down through many centuries in various forms, the last is the belief that we "must be born again."

The Bible proves that man's belief evolved from Polytheism to Pantheism, Deism and finally to Christian Theism.

Who is it that will deny that Jehovah was not a terrible Deity of terror, a God of war and of bloody murder, he could not have been the God of Love.

Jehovah's wrath was appeased by a bloody operation of circumcision and by burnt sacrifices of animals.

He ordered: "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live." He upheld slavery as did the followers of Jesus until a little while ago, he favored polygamy to that extent that only a Solomon with a thousand wives was found worthy in his eyes to build the great temple.

True, we have discarded much of Jehovah's laws which however proves that we are evolving spiritually. We no longer kill witches, uphold slavery, or believe in his "everlasting covenant" circumcision. We need only compare the horns of a savage medicine man, with the cloth horns of the better class of pagans, to see that we are progressing, for the Hebrew Levites copied his headdress from the pagans and if we turn a Levite's hat with its cloth horns around one quarter-way, we have the Christian bishop's mitre.

Yes, everything in life is the result of evolution, even Mr. Fish's religion. Mr. Fish is a Christian and as such he should know that the history of the Christians is the horror of tie world. Gladly would we all present the church—"the bride of Christ" before the whole world wearing a pure white and spotless gown but if we read the history of Europe, pages stained with the blood of countless millions who died and were killed in religious wars and persecutions under "divine light" kings or other rulers or popes "ordained by God" who forced their will upon others or stole each other's territories, that spelt white gown, turban, scimitar, for all wars were fought "In His Name." Genetics were tortured and burned, the Christian Spaniards butchered the "oo's"; the Jews were slaughtered and driven from land to land. One Christian faction fell upon another like a flock of savages and instead of carrying out the true mission of "Love one another," the chief occupation of the followers of the lowly Nazarene was to butcher their neighbors.

We may be "deeviltionized" but with open eyes we are watching the Christians at Washington, D. C., the Methodist Board of Temperance and public moral and the so-called Lord's Day Alliance, whose sole aim is to deprive the American people of the freedom for which their forefathers fought, bleed and died. The question arises, Shall we allow a reaction or shall mankind be unpunished? Shall the forces of fanatical believers retard the tide of social and spiritual evolution? Is freedom based upon the shifting sands of mere human opinion or upon the adamant rock of eternal principle?

The fundamentalists have shown their colors in the famous Scopes case. It was but the entering wedge for more religious legislation which always has deprived others of freedom and which will, if not checked, deprive free Americans of what little freedom they now enjoy.

Yours truly,

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE: "Famous First Ladies"

Sketches by Bessey; Synopsis by Braucher

After President Wilson's term expired, he and Mrs. Wilson went to live in the house on S street where he spent the short time allotted to him to live. When the Hardings came to the White House, the twin beds that had been installed by the Tafts were substituted for the Lincoln bed the Wilsons had used. State dinners and receptions were resumed.

President Harding often had private dinners for a dozen or more men, and often expressed the wish to have "sauerkraut and wieners."

President Harding also insisted on having tooth-picks on the table. Mrs. Harding usually took breakfast in her room.

Mrs. Harding wore beautiful clothes and was very scrupulous about her person. Almost daily a hair-dresser called at the White House. Shortly before the presidential party left on the Alaskan trip that was to have such a sad ending, Mrs. Harding bought a number of dresses. A number of these pretty gowns were never worn.

GERMAN SHIPYARDS SHOW INCREASE IN BUILDING VESSELS

Hamburg.—Only Germany formed an order for new ships which setting in at the beginning of the current year, continued through the third quarter.

While orders at all the world's shipyards declined some five per cent, from June 30 to September 30 they increased in Germany by 3.9 per cent, reaching a total of 423,375 gross register tons.

Whether this lead will be kept up in the current quarter is somewhat doubtful, owing to the completion of the North German Lloyd's "Europa" and "Bremen" and the Hamburg-America Line's "St. Louis" and "Milwaukee" and also to labor troubles at the German shipyards.

The great bulk of the reduction in orders affected England which however, retains the general place, but with Germany second. Third place is taken by Holland, with a total of 191,290 gross register tons of new orders. Motor vessels make up 53 per cent of the quarter's new orders at all shipyards, but only 42 per cent in the German shipyards.

"What it is," she asked, "that carries a man along rough roads and smooth roads, up hills and down, through jungles and swamps and raging torrents?"

There was silence and then Harold, whose father was an automobile dealer, spoke up: "Excuse me, miss, but there ain't no such car."

LETTER GOLF

GOLF ARITHMETIC.

Golfers are notoriously poor at arithmetic and today's letter golf hole proves that weakness. It's just six steps from ONE to TEN. One solution is on another page.

Letter golf grid with letters O, N, E, T, E, N in various positions.

THE RULES

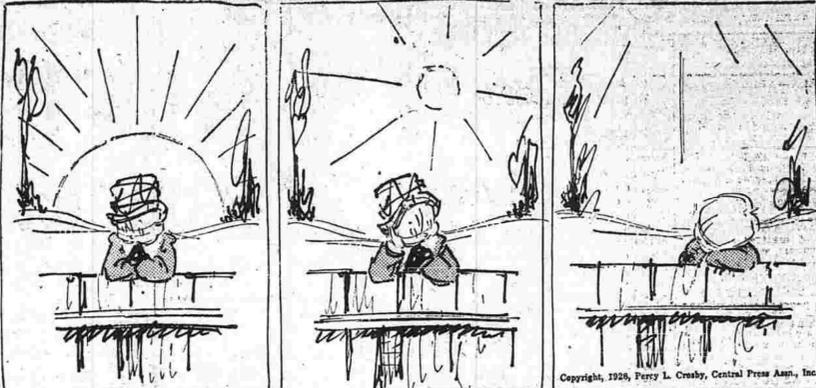

- 1—The idea of letter golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2—You can change only one letter at a time. 3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4—The order of letters cannot be changed.

THE TINYMITES

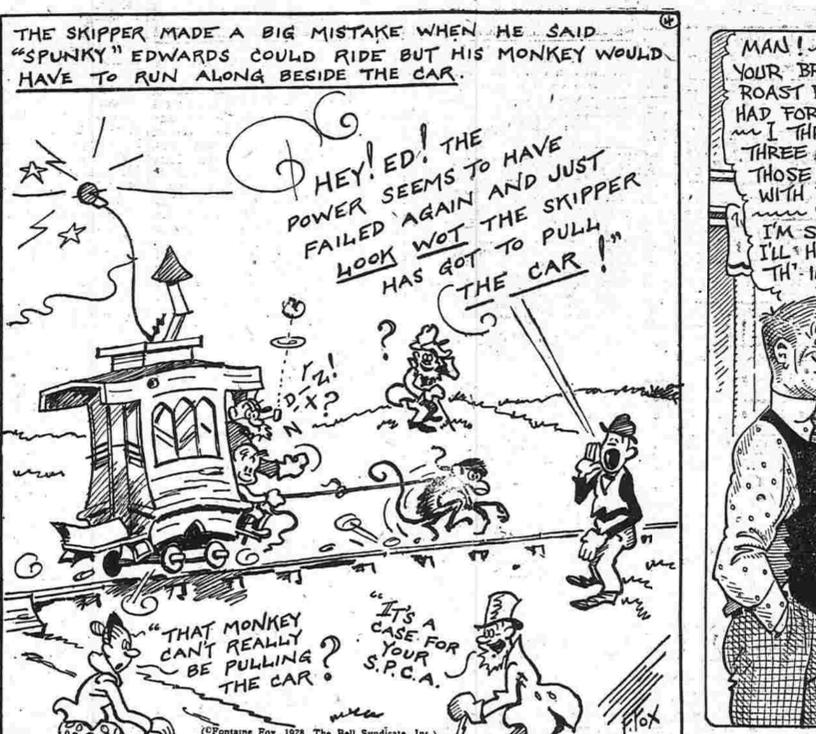

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The deer who pulled the Tinymites to where they'd see some brand new sights, went quickly over the ground. He was as fleet as he could be. Now, just imagine how it feels to travel in a boat on wheels. The Tinymites bumped around so much that they could hardly see. "Just think," cried Scouty. "My, how grand. We're bound for Santa's nice Toy Land. I wonder how far off it is, and when we will arrive." Poor Clowny answered, with a frown. "Who cares about that? Please sit down. This little boat is tipping so, we're lucky we're alive." The other laughed and Copy cried. "Why, I'm enjoying this fine ride. I guess this morning you got out the wrong side of the bed. What fun is it to act so cross? What matters if we tip and toss. Please let the deer to pick up speed." But Clowny shook his head. "Oh, no," he said, "I've had enough. I think this trip is much too rough. Here! Someone take the reins awhile. My arms are all tired out. But make sure that you hang on tight, or we will flop and drop from sight. If that should happen, we won't know what it is about!" This made the others laugh in glee. Then Carry should, "Mercy me! I'll do the driving gladly. I can show you how it's done." He took the reins in hand, and then the boat went bumpety-bump again. "Ha, ha," laughed Scouty. "Hang on to the boat. Gee, this is fun." Thus, on they went, o'er hill and dale until the light of day grew pale. Soon Scouty saw the moon, and cried, "Det's ride all through the night. I'm sure there's not a thing to fear. We'll all sneak naps till morn is here." And so they carried out his plan, and things worked out all right. (The Tinymites run into a snow storm in the next story.)

HOWELL CHENEY

TALKS ON WAGES

Addresses Catholic Conference on Industrial Relations.

One of the speakers before the Regional Catholic Conference on Industrial Relations at the Hotel Bond in Hartford yesterday was Howell Cheney of Manchester.

Mr. Cheney's subject was "Wage Incentives." Another principal speaker was Rev. Joseph Husleira of Fordham University and a number of delegates participated in a round table discussion after the addresses.

Mr. Cheney stated that the aim of the employer is to secure (1) the largest quantity of production, (2) the highest quality, (3) over the longest period of time, (4) with the greatest degree of promptness and exactitude of attendance and (5) qualities of citizenship in his employees.

Classified Jobs Mr. Cheney then described how his firm has classified all of the jobs its employees do from the least skilled to the highest.

The minimum rate, he said, varies, inasmuch as it is the rate the company must pay at any given time to attract a sufficient number of employees to the place.

"It is no longer within the discretion of the foreman to say which man's wages shall be increased," he said. "The employee builds up his own credit. By an accumulating system a man's wage is built up, which is better than to increase it merely in consideration of the length of his term of service."

High Cost of Selling Asked by Rt. Rev. Msgr. James E. Cassidy of Fall River, Mass., during the round table discussion why the laborer who produces material at a low cost does not share in the wide discrepancy between the cost price and that for which it is sold over the counter.

Mr. Cheney blamed the "high cost of selling," which, he said, "is one of our most pressing economic problems caused by the extravagant scale on which we all live" and for which he knows no cure-all.

Professor David A. McCabe of Princeton University presided at both afternoon and morning sessions of the conference. Thomas F. McMahon, president of the United Textile Workers of New York City, who was scheduled to speak during the afternoon, filled in on the morning program owing to the absence of Charles L. Bliss, secretary of the Boot and Shoe Workers, Boston, Mass.

George H. Wilcox of the Connecticut Business college has returned from Boston where he attended the session of the New England Business Educators Association of which he is president.
