CONNECTICUT RIVER RISING; NOW AT 18 FT.

Reports from Springfield Say Several Low Places Are Flooded—Expect the Crest Tonight.

Hartford, March 25.—State highway officials were today attempting to keep two leaps ahead of a wall of water that was running down the Connecticut river, from Springfield, Mass., and points north, with every prospect of doing heavy damage in Connecticut.

The highway from Glastonbury to Portland was ordered closed in midmorning. The Cromwell to Middletown road was to be shut to traffic by one this afternoon. Property owners in the flood zone were arranging to prevent loss or damage by taking precautionary measures.

The Connecticut river stood at 18.6 feet at noon and was rising slowly. Officially expected a crest of 19 feet by late afternoon and the immediate subsidence of the water. The river was falling at White River Junction, Vt., and Holyoke, Mass., but rising at Springfield, Mass., at the same hour.

SPRINGFIELD REPORT.

Springfield, Mass., March 25.—The Connecticut river was rising at an alarming rate today.

At noon the water was fourteen feet above normal, flooding Agawam meadows, creeping up to the highway and trolley tracks in the Riverdale section of West Springfield and threatening cut off by highway and trolley that city and Holyoke.

START PROBE IN WATERBURY PLANE CRASH

Capt. Arnold R. Rasmussen, of State's National Guard Killed and Companion Injured When Machine Slips

Waterbury, March 25.—A military board of inquiry was being assembled today to investigate the wrecking of an airplane here yesterday afternoon, and the death of Captain Arnold R. Rasmussen, adjutant of the 44th Division Air Squadron, Connecticut National Guard. Coroner John T. Monzani also began an investigation on behalf of the county.

The plane, a Curtiss J-5, of Waterbury, injured in the crash, was under treatment in Waterbury hospital suffering a broken jaw, concussion of the brain and lacerations. Smythe undoubtedly will recover, hospital authorities say, but he will need treatment for a considerable period.

Funeral Plans.
Immediately after the tragedy members of Corporal Frank Coyle Post, American Legion, started plans for Captain Rasmussen's funeral, which will be military in character and for which every military organization and every veteran body will turn out. The date for the funeral was set tentatively for Wednesday afternoon.

Captain Rasmussen and Smythe had taken off at Branford Field, Hartford, just after one o'clock yesterday afternoon in a state plane, with Rasmussen at the controls and Smythe in the rear cockpit. They circled Hartford, and flew here, apparently intending to circle the Rasmussen home before returning.

Witnesses saw the plane dive from an altitude of several hundred feet, coming out of the dive perhaps a hundred feet above the Rasmussen home. Then the machine banked apparently in an effort to climb again. In this process the left wing hooked a bank inside the highway near the home and the entire plane was fung to the earth.

The engine and instrument board were jammed backward by the impact of the plane with the earth and Captain Rasmussen was crushed. Smythe was rendered unconscious by the concussion of the crash.

Brother a Witness.
The accident was witnessed by Lieut. Ernest Clark, of the 43rd Air Division; Foy Rasmussen, a brother, and some cousins. Mrs. Rasmussen had been watching the approaching plane and went into the house just before the crash.

Floods and Tornadoes Over Week-end Make Thousands Homeless and Cause Property Damage Far Into the Millions—39 Drowned in Kentucky.

Atlanta, Ga., March 25.—Recession of mountainous flood waters which cut swaths of destruction through the narrow valleys of eastern Tennessee and Kentucky over the week-end, today revealed a death toll of 39, many thousands homeless and property damage far into the millions.

The Tennessee-Kentucky death list, along with four drownings in Alabama, and 15 deaths in six southeastern states from a series of freakish tornadoes, increased the storm and flood fatalities in the stricken sector to 58 over the week-end.

Flood waters earlier in the month claimed 43 lives, caused tens of millions of dollars property damage and made 25,000 homeless in Georgia, Alabama, and northwestern Florida.

Twenty-four deaths were reported by John Davis, chairman of relief work at Harrison, Tenn., while a few miles away, eight Boy Scouts were drowned. They were carried away on the roof of a camp cabin by an overflow of White Creek. Nearly a score of other scouts were rescued.

Additional Deaths
Three additional deaths were reported today from Webster, Tenn., and four from Kentucky where, it was estimated, more than 5,000 persons are homeless. Three boys were drowned at Barbourville, Ky., and another perished in the flood waters of the Cumberland river at Pineville.

Four deaths indirectly attributable to the flood occurred on the Warrior river near Birmingham, Ala., when a skiff was overturned. The new flood menace in that state was reported improved today. There are still nearly 25,000 flood refugees in Alabama left by the disaster of ten days ago.

Fifteen persons were killed by cyclones which struck sections of Louisiana to Virginia, some score were injured and considerable property was damaged. Many persons in middle Tennessee have left their homes.

The Cumberland river was at flood stage as far south as Nashville and low sections of the city were under water.

CHINA RELIEF DRIVE HALTED; YIELDS TO BAN

Department of Public Welfare. When all the facts of the case are known, he said he believes the department will reserve its decision.

The refusal of the State Department to permit solicitation of funds for the campaign came as the result of the National Bureau of Information's refusal to endorse the movement.

Members of the Manchester committee expect that the trouble will be ironed out in a few days.

A letter sent in reply by China Famine Relief declared that frightful famine prevails in China, that the need is urgent and an appeal to the generosity of America necessary.

Mr. Gulick's statement, says that confusion has arisen from separate appeals by the China Relief and the Association for the Welfare of the Children of China and that, on suggestion of the State Department, the organizations were trying to get together for a joint financial campaign but have not been able yet to do so.

This is in reply to charges that one of these agencies had paid the other a large sum of money to withdraw from the field while the first one conducted a drive for funds.

Another matter that has created adverse criticism is the development that in a previous emergency a very large sum of money was used to reach the sufferers.

When the China famine organization of 1920-21 wound up its affairs the famine having ceased and famine relief being no longer necessary, it found it had over a million dollar surplus.

It is believed that the failure of the former organization to employ the million dollars while the famine was still on, is being notified of the use until it became a "surplus" to be devoted to purposes never contemplated by its donors.

The "I'm Alone" vehemently described the sinking of his schooner as the "most cowardly attack on a merchant ship since the submarine warfare."

He admitted he had been engaged in rum smuggling for some time, but declared that he was outside of American waters when he was first halted by the patrol boat, reach the surface.

"I knew I was right, so I did not stop when they ordered me to." He denied that any aliens were aboard. He identified the dead seaman as Leon Malnak, a native of St. Pierre, Miquelon, a French possession.

Mr. Clancy spoke on the subject of radio in comparison with the playhouse. He has had years of experience in the theater and has been with the Travelers radio for the past year. He said the radio artist had a much more difficult job than the artist of the stage.

Mr. Clancy reviewed the history of radio since 1924 when Station WKAQ at Pittsford began broadcasting. They started the work with the idea of selling receiving sets and it was a great success.

Mr. Clancy said today the people of the United States are taking radio for granted. Big advertisers began some time ago to use radio to exploit their wares and are making a big success of it.

The greatest secrecy was maintained regarding the investigation until late last night. Captain Gamble then gave the following outline of what had happened in the chase and sinking of the ship:

"The matter was sighted the "I'm Alone" at six o'clock Thursday morning eleven miles off the Louisiana coast near Marsh island. The vessel was apparently anchored and awaiting boats to get the cargo, said to be 2,400 cases of whiskey loaded at Belize, Honduras.

The vessel speeded away, the Walcott followed with the usual signals, later commanding the skipper to leave her. The order was defied.

"Then the Walcott fired blank shots and later, solid shots through the rigging of the two-masted schooner.

The schooner's skipper then shouted, through the megaphone, permission for Commander Frank Paul to board the vessel to come aboard, unarmed and without an escort, for a conference.

When the three inch gun hit the hull, the crew leaped overboard but the lifeboats had been shot away and the men began swimming as the schooner sank.

DISCLOSES HUGE BROADCAST PLAN

Travelers Radio Manager Tells of Unusual Program to Be Heard Soon.

James F. Clancy in his talk before the Manchester Kiwanis club today, stated that radio development had as yet been scarcely touched. Mr. Clancy, who is manager of the Travelers broadcasting service in Hartford, surprised his audience by the announcement of a plan of Henry Ford and Edison to put on the greatest radio broadcast in history.

London, March 25.—Suspected of being the notorious "Bridgeport stabber," who has a record of attacking 23 girls, Conrad Miller, 25, was held here without bail today.

He was arrested after it is alleged he followed a pretty 22-year-old nurse, Antoinette Petrone, from a wealthy Shippan Point home where she is employed, and tried to attack her in East Stamford with a carving knife.

When seized, police said, he shouted: "I'm not the Bridgeport stabber; why don't you go hunt?" A number of Bridgeport detectives who have hunted the "phantom stabber" for months were on their way here to question the prisoner.

The Bridgeport marauder usually approached his victims suddenly as they were walking through parks, or along lonely streets and stabbing them with a small knife. He is credited with committing three crimes in Stamford in recent months.

Pipa toads, which have recently arrived at the London Zoo from South America, are so thin that one can see through them.

Hens in Manchester and vicinity seem to be in an egg laying contest judging by the extra supply of "hen fruit" now on hand. The price has taken a drop and the "strictly fresh eggs" are selling for prices less than "fresh eggs." This is due to a contract price at which "fresh eggs" are bought and the over supply of "strictly fresh."

H. S. DANCING CLASS HAS ANNUAL PARTY

Over 175 persons attended the annual High school dancing class party in the school assembly hall Friday night, April 12. It was estimated that more than a hundred pupils learned to dance during the year through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Wirtalla, instructors of this art at the local institution for the past five years.

Mr. Wirtalla was presented with a set of white gold cuff-links bearing the Masonic emblem. Mrs. Wirtalla was given a bouquet of roses. During the evening, the Wirtalla Slide, a little figure they have originated, was danced. There were other fancy dances. Refreshments were served. The dancers wore souvenirs, fancy hats for the boys and golden bells for the girls.

CAST OF PLAYLET GIVEN ENTERTAINMENT

The cast of eight young people who recently presented the play "Leave It to Dad," were entertained by Mrs. F. C. Allen, their coach, at the parsonage of Second Congregational church following the Christian Endeavor meeting last evening.

The table decorations were in keeping with the Easter season. Fruit salad, sandwiches, cake and cocoa were served. The favors were daffodil nut cups filled with a tiny chicken and Easter eggs. The place cards bore cleverly drawn pictures illustrating the roles played by the different characters: Gordon Tuttle was garbed as a chauffeur and the other young people in the cast were drawn in characteristic poses and attire. Music and a talkfest occupied the remainder of the time.

BOWLING CONGRESS

REPARATIONS

There is a very considerable body of economic opinion, steadily developed throughout the last decade, that it is substantially impossible to exact war reparations from a defeated nation unless the amount is made small enough so that it can be paid without any great inconvenience to the penalized country.

It is this idea, or fear, almost exclusively, which has created so much apparent sympathy for Germany—which has brought about a reduction in the allies' demands upon the Reich from thirty-three billion dollars to something like nine billions, reported to be the figure contemplated by the present reparations conference.

In 1871, after a war which, compared with the World Conflict, was a mere series of skirmishes and in which not a dollar of damage was inflicted on German soil, France was compelled by Germany to agree to the payment of an indemnity of a billion dollars besides submitting to the loss of Alsace and Lorraine—and given just three years to make the payment.

In view of the enormously increased capacity for production throughout the civilized world, since 1871, and the greatly increased money value of commodities, it is seriously doubtful if the nine billions demanded of Germany, to be paid over a period of more than half a century, represents three times the weight of burden, per capita, that France was compelled to carry to a goal in three years.

For the sake of the immediate interests of a comparative handful of industrialists and international traders there is a good deal of danger that Germany will eventually get out of this affair without ever having paid a penalty she will seriously feel, economically. This danger is not that the allies will lose the satisfaction of revenge, because there is nothing in the world so useless as the gratification of a desire for vengeance.

often emphasized, of impersonality in industry—of "mass production" of giant combines, of vast organizations whose directors know no more of their employes through personal contact than the stars know of the fireflies. But not—and not anywhere near—to the extent that is so often asserted.

Foreigners reading our newspapers and magazines would be likely to imagine that American industry had become a vast automatic machine into which individuality and individual relations between employer and employe fitted nowhere at all. Yet there are in this country literally thousands of industrial concerns in which good understanding between employer and employe is as active a force as it was fifty years ago—and our guess is that such concerns remain still the backbone of American industry; that the major part of the manufacturing business of the country is, even yet, conducted on that basis.

The annual dinners of the Case Brothers, at which the management entertains the entire working force—as, so comfortably and happily, on last Saturday night—are a concrete manifestation of a spirit that still exists in a myriad of American industrial establishments; mutual helpfulness, mutual understanding, team work all the way from the clean-up gang in the shop yard to the general manager behind the mahogany. It was on that foundation that American industry grew. It is, as a matter of fact, on that basis that, in its most important aspects, it is continuing. The roots of our industrial strength lie not in the enormous plants at a few places like Pittsburgh and Detroit but in the far more important total of concerns like Case Brothers—to be found in every town and city in the country—where the boss knows the worker and the worker knows the boss—and all are co-laborers and friends together.

CHINA RELIEF

Disclosures concerning the ethics of the China Famine Relief may not be at all conclusive, and it may possibly be, as Relief officials maintain, that their operations are "misunderstood" by the Connecticut Department of Public Welfare. But the situation has become sufficiently involved so that this newspaper feels its duty to its readers and to itself call for disavowal of any further support of the Relief movement until the entire picture has been placed before the people.

There is no question in our mind about the urgency of the plight of millions of people in China. It is undoubtedly true that it is a desperate one and that every dollar actually employed in the feeding of those unfortunate men, women and children would be mercifully, magnificently, used. But if there is any likelihood that many of the dollars, instead of being employed in actual famine relief, are to be diverted to the use of a crowd of professional almoners whose principal interest is in easy jobs and fine salaries for themselves and their friends, then the Herald wants no part in helping such an enterprise.

Until there is a very clear exposition of the situation Manchester people will do well to hold their contributions in reserve. The determination of the fund's treasurer here to retain possession of the money so far collected, pending developments, is a wise one.

This is all without prejudice and the future course of the relief movement here should depend on what facts are established. If the money is for starving Chinese, well and good. If it is for hungry promoters, not good at all. We shall see.

COURT BUSINESS

While the survey of the operation of Connecticut's courts being conducted by Yale, under the direction of Prof. Clarke of the law school, is supposed to be solely a fact-finding activity, Prof. Clarke permits himself the privilege of expressing opinion, at least by implication. And it is to be gathered that he would favor the removal of foreclosure cases from trial courts save on appeal; his reason being that such cases form a very considerable part of the business of the courts, and unnecessarily so.

If Prof. Clarke were to do his estimating by a stop-watch instead of by the number of printed lines on the court calendar he might not arrive at the same conclusion. Foreclosure cases, as a matter of fact, occupy a surprisingly small amount of the courts' time, considering the number of them handled. They are disposed of almost as rapidly as police cases in the night court of a big city, where three minutes constitutes a fairly long trial. And nobody knows against how much chicanery and crookedness they are

CHARTER REVISION Consolidation Of Schools

What does consolidation mean as applied to the Town of Manchester? Is it a question of some few thousands of dollars invested in this purpose by the Town in the equities of the Districts in their school buildings; or is it a question of some fewer thousands of dollars which represent the difference between what it would cost to run our debts on account of schools as a town or as separate school districts? The differences are so small that surely there are some greater interests at stake. Is it again only the desire to get rid of multiplicity of tax assessments and collection, which the district system has involved? Further, is it the desire to reduce the inconvenience of those who have to send their children farther distances to schools in their own district than they would to nearer schools in other districts?

Certainly consolidation must mean more than these advantages, great as they are. It means putting all of the educational resources of the Town behind each and every child. It means tackling this educational problem as a common responsibility of the whole Town, instead of as the separate interest of small communities of taxpayers. It means conceiving of schooling as our major undertaking worthy of the combined efforts of us all and capable of summoning the best we have got in brains and earnestness to work it out. It means in a word, lifting it out of the range of petty neighborhood quarrels into that of a high determination to give of our best and our most united efforts to our children.

a safeguard, but it is a certain thing that it is a good deal. This is especially true since there drifted into real estate speculation in Connecticut a great number of foreign-born adventurers possessing no sense of business honor and restrained by no ethical considerations whatever. It is an extremely salutary influence on these people to have their mortgage transactions under scrutiny of a major court. There is perhaps no other business activity that so emphatically needs this kind of supervision.

Prof. Clarke also sees in the flood of divorce cases a source of needless cluttering of the courts. This is another activity that looms bigger on the calendar than under measure by the court-room clock. Divorces take up more time than foreclosures, but since almost all of them are disposed of on Friday mornings they cannot be regarded as a complete log-jam to court operations.

There is a general satisfied feeling with the first weeks of the Hoover administration. The president has done a number of things which have evoked cheers from all quarters and nothing, as yet, that proved at all unpopular. Nearly every day something has been announced which tended to disappoint those who hoped and predicted that Hoover would be the poor president. Of course, he may have immense trouble with the extraordinary session. But he is off to a beautiful start. Day after day, he has even been pleasing the progressives and the Democrats. His order for publicity on the income tax refunds and for an end of the spy system in federal penitentiaries, for instance. Also his new oil conservation policy, his acceptance of Indian Commissioner Burke's resignation and his new policy of relations with the press, to mention a few.

The bootleggers are apparently the only unhappy group in Washington today. Due probably both to the drastic Jones law penalties and Hoover's understood desire to see to it that bootleggers are actually worried. Many of them believe that every thing will straighten itself out for awhile; some of them think conditions in the booze industry will be stabilized by the present situation. But the "men higher up" in the business have raised the price, and they are taking unprecedented precautions. Those who have ever had unpleasant contact with the law enforcers are changing their headquarters or their automobiles or their automobiles all at three, and hiring new delivery men whose faces are unfamiliar to the law.

Most of them have raised prices, but some of them not all exorbitantly. They explain to customers that the "men higher up" in the business have raised the wholesale price and that they must pass it along. They deeply resent any insinuation that the Jones law has been made a pretext for profiteering. It is going to cost a lot more, they insist, to buy protection from prohibition agents and the police. Immunity is now more valuable.

When Congressman George Huddleston of Alabama joins up with Congressman Cordell Hull of Tennessee to fight the tariff bill, as he presumably will, an ancient alliance again will have been resumed. Nearly thirty years ago Hull and Huddleston were classmates in the law school of Cumberland University at Lebanon, Tenn. At that time the highest honors which could come to law students there were the senior class presidency and the leadership of the "Moot Court," in which the students tried law cases for practice.

One afternoon Huddleston tramped a mile through the rain to suggest to Hull what was probably a first "political deal" for each. They ought to combine forces, Huddleston said, and capture those two jobs. Hull agreed. Neither was a member of a Greek Letter society and Cumberland and members of these societies generally divided the honors between them. But the Hull-Huddleston ticket was the strongest against each other and lined up all the non-members. Huddleston was elected president and Hull judge. They were the only students of their period to arrive later in Congress.

Backstairs Tariff Activities Mar Serene Calm That Seems to Prevail in Capital—Bootleggers Actually Worried.

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, March 25.—Whatever awful things may be in store during the extra session of Congress beginning in April, a state of serene calm exists in Washington at the moment.

There is a great deal of backstairs maneuvering going on in connection with the tariff bill and this is the time when conflicting interests are really doing their most important work on that legislation, but no one is publicly squawking about anything, yet and the lasting bitterness which was feared might have been created by the presidential campaign apparently has faded away.

There is a general satisfied feeling with the first weeks of the Hoover administration. The president has done a number of things which have evoked cheers from all quarters and nothing, as yet, that proved at all unpopular. Nearly every day something has been announced which tended to disappoint those who hoped and predicted that Hoover would be the poor president. INCREASED SALES FOR OAKLAND AND PONTIAC

With March drawing to a close, the first quarter of the new year marks increased sales of Oakland and Pontiac throughout the state, in which distinction is controlled by The A. C. Hine Company.

John W. Kemp, of Kemp Brothers, the Manchester dealers selling under the Hine company is much impressed with the manner in which this pair of sixes has registered with the public.

"All signs indicate," says Mr. Kemp, "that we are on the way to a record breaking sales volume this season. Winter business throughout the state was much greater this year than last year. This may be accounted for in part by the fact that both cars have been wonderfully improved, and represent greater value than ever."

Theaters

At the State.
The State theater is presenting today to local movie fans George Jessel in his first singing-talking feature production, "Lucky Boy." It tells the story of the rise to fame of a boy from New York's East Side to Broadway fame and a position in society through marriage to one of its fairest daughters.

Jessel sings from start to finish of the picture, there being five songs heard in it, and he also engages in a lot of dialogue and wise cracking. With a music shop, vaudeville, a night club and a Broadway musical show the background for most of the action, "Lucky Boy" promises to be something quite unique in sound pictures. It is a Tiffany-Stahl production directed by Norman Taurog and Charles C. Wilson.

Supporting Jessel in the cast are such prominent favorites as Richard Tucker, Margaret Quimby, Rosa Rosanova and William K. Strauss.

In addition to this delightful picture, the State is also presenting a pleasing array of snappy short subjects, including a Hal Roach comedy and the current installment of MGM News Events.

Wednesday and Thursday of this week, the State will present "Stark Mad," Warner Brothers' latest 100 per cent talking picture.

Daily Lenten Thought

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of The Congregationalist

When a great philosopher was asked what he thought of a certain man, he refused to express any judgment saying, "I do not know his end." That was a wise reflection for the end is often very different from the beginning and from the outward course of life's activities and experiences.

To the eye of the thoughtless the man whose life is outwardly successful is to be envied and admired, but the wise man looks deeper and inquires regarding the real nature of the success. Is it founded on good living and sound principles, or has it been attained by shady and crooked methods, and by selfish and ruthless practices?

So also the thoughtless man views with passing sympathy, or with intense pity, the sacrifices and sufferings of his fellowmen without inquiring at all concerning their purpose, or the spirit in which they are borne. But life's experience more insistent upon anything than upon this, namely, that in spite of all seeming success and excess of the material things of life, many people in the world are downright unhappy? While, on the other hand, a great peace and satisfaction unquestionably have come to innumerable people whose way has been anything but a way of ease or comfort.

We would be nearer the truth concerning life if we would judge more by actual results and effects than by appearance and superficial aspects. With deep truth it may be said concerning any man that his life's story is not told until his end is known.

Newell A. Hill spent the week-end with his brother Hartwell Hill of Brookfield, Mass.

COXEY'S MARCH

Thirty-five years ago today, America, in the throes of an industrial depression, witnessed the start of one of the strangest movements in its history—the beginning of the march of "Coxey's army" from Massillon, O., to Washington.

The "army," which consisted of some 350 men when it reached the capital, was under the leadership of Jacob S. Coxey, self-styled "General." He was one of three leaders of the unemployed who had a definite plan of action. He was the most explicit of all, and the other two—Kelly of San Francisco and Fry of Los Angeles—formed similar "armies." Neither of them, however, reached Washington.

Coxey planned to lead his men into the Capitol building and to overawe Congress into passing a law providing that $500,000,000 worth of currency be issued and spent to improve highways.

At the steps of the Capitol, Coxey and his men were turned back by police who invoked an old statute to make the "army" leave the grounds. Coxey and one of his lieutenants were arrested and convicted of a misdemeanor after they attempted to make speeches.

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Monday, March 25.

The pentecostal season brings with it many beautiful and significant musical works, among the finest of which is the cantata "Alleluiah," written as an act of devotion by S. St. The Gimbol Choral Society of 100 voices have prepared this pre-Easter work for radio presentation and will broadcast it over WIP at 3 o'clock Monday night. Well known Philadelphia vocalists will be heard in the solo parts of this religious musical drama. The compositions of such masters of opera as Bizet, Gounod, Leoncavallo, Von Flovot, Wagner and Verdi are to be knit into a concert for the family party that will go over the WEAF chain at 9:30. Florence Easton, the English soprano, who is welcomed with equal heartiness from the stage of the Metropolitan Opera Company or in the home; Alfio Tedesco, the newest Italian tenor of the Metropolitan, and an operatic orchestra and chorus directed by Carlton Rogers, are to provide the program. Henry Burbig, humorist and author, will present one of his hilarious burlesques on the tragic poem, "The Girl with the Blue Velvet Band." The poem will first be read by G. Underhill Macy. The features of the hour will be an orchestra, male quartet, tenor and baritone. Now that Thompson Rogers is on the map again, a big way, the folks of the community have decided to improve their railroad depot. The formal dedication will be broadcast by the WJZ network at 9:30.

VERSATILE ENTERTAINER FOR CHAMBER'S BANQUET

Frank Lane, of Brookline, Mass., to work at Annual Dinner Here on April 8.

Frank Lane, of Brookline, Massachusetts, "The World's Most Versatile Entertainer" has been secured by the committee on entertainment for the Chamber of Commerce annual dinner in Cheney Hall, Monday, April 8. Lane's title, "The World's Most Versatile Entertainer" is vouched for by a long list of printed testimonials, but better yet by two local men whose judgment we can depend upon, namely: Governor Trumbull and "Bill" Halsted. As a matter of fact, Frank and Bill worked together on the entertainment stage and it is upon Mr. Halsted's recommendation and guarantee that the committee went after Frank Lane.

- All members of the women's weight normalizing and figure marching classes are requested to report for practice from 7 until 8:15 tonight at the School street Rec in preparation for the coming gymnastic exhibition.

By a peculiar coincidence, both Mr. Lane and the speaker of the evening Dr. David D. Vaughan are from Brookline and have worked together on several occasions. The committee wishes to impress upon the members that they may bring non-member guests, also that they are not crying, "wolf, wolf" when they say that the table parties should be made up early. Everything points to a record attendance this year. Better have many advance reservations and table parties be made at this stage in the arrangements. Table locations are being assigned absolutely in order of their receipt and those who wait until the last must expect the less favorable table locations.

Don't Let That Cold Turn Into "Flu"
That cold may turn into "Flu," Grippe or, even worse, Pneumonia, unless you take care of it at once. Rub Murostrol on the congested parts and see how quickly it brings relief as effectively as the messy old mustard plaster.

Murostrol, made from pure oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other simple ingredients, is a counter-irritant which stimulates circulation and helps break up the cold.

You will feel a warm tingle as it enters the pores, then a cooling sensation that brings welcome relief.

WHY BE AFRAID?

Most people do not realize how much of their lives are controlled through the fears they have developed. Most of these fears are needlessly grown through habits of thinking, developed from the influences of environment. As far as we can ascertain at the present, the new born baby has only two inherited fears; one, a fear of loud noises, and the other a fear of falling. All other fears are what we now know as "condition" fears, and these make up 998 out of a thousand fears we entertain, compared to these other two "that flesh is heir to."

What a wonderful world we would live in if we could all by some magic lose these extra fears. It is the fear of what you think is going to happen that causes the most trouble. Of course, distressing things such as failure, sickness, and various disasters do occur, but the trouble is we poison ourselves mentally by too much expectancy and suffer a thousand times more than we need to.

It is wise to use judgment in deciding all of the actions of our lives, but such caution should never be allowed to develop into a fear. I assume that most of my readers follow this daily column because they wish to have health more abundantly. Most of you realize that fear of disease is really an important factor which also causes disease and yet many will be surprised to know that there are even more important fears which affect health and leave their unmistakable mark in physical disorders.

It has been found that fear of FAILURE is the greatest of these, and that at least 75 per cent of those examined psychologically have this failure fear. Of course, this may refer to failure in health, or failure in business, finances, love, success, etc.

Other important fears are fear of the dark, fear of drowning, fear of animals, etc. Some people fear they will be misunderstood, while others fear they will be found out—like the man who said he didn't mind how many lies they told about him as long as they didn't tell the truth.

Just how the baby is affected by distressing emotions, such as fear, is still somewhat a mystery, but it appears that with our newer discoveries about the ductless glands we are finally on the right track in clearing up this mystery. We do know that such glands as the adrenals, thyroid and gonads are directly and almost instantly affected through certain emotions.

Sudden fears are in themselves of no consequence, as the body can usually react temporarily to these sudden emergencies, but the insidious effect of chronic fears is of the greater importance because we have a thousand times more of these fears and also because we seldom realize anything about it.

The science and art of psychoanalysis has of late years proved helpful in understanding the various hidden processes of the mind and in uncovering long forgotten fears which have turned into repressions and have served to inhibit the patient from developing into a normal person with wholesome, healthful habits.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Asthma and Tuberculosis

Question: C. A. M. writes: "I am a boy fourteen years old. Have had asthma ever since I was three months old. Do you think it will ever run into tuberculosis?"

Answer: We do see a few cases of asthma which are complicated with tuberculosis, but it is by no means a rule that asthma turns into tuberculosis. Why not cure up the asthma, develop strong lungs and avoid tuberculosis? Send for some special articles on the cure of asthma, and the development of a strong chest.

"What causes a numb, scorched-like feeling on my tongue, my gums and the top of my mouth? If it is acid in the system, kindly tell me if oranges and lemons are counter-actors of acid. Also does acid in the system affect one's eyes so that it makes one feel as though she were going around in circles—dizzy?"

Answer: The condition often called "an acid system" is really due to a reduction of the blood's alkalinity. The use of citrus fruits will help to correct this condition, principally through stimulating the flow of more bile, which is an alkali. This may also get rid of the dizziness, especially if it is caused by biliousness.

WAPPING

The five reel moving picture, "Last We Forecast," was presented at the Federated church last Thursday evening, by Rev. Mr. Pardee, of the Connecticut Temperance and Anti-Saloon League, and was very interesting. There was quite a large audience to see it.

Why Give Up A Government Which We Know Is GOOD and PRACTICAL, For One Which We Know Nothing About?

Folks of Manchester! We're Just Like Nine Happy Families Living Peacefully In One Big House

Nine districts of Manchester—where we each pay our own separate expense of personal and district maintenance, only

It is fair! It is just! It is right! It is our present, established form of good government by district system. It has proved itself through the years. It gives each and every one of us the power to vote in person on every question that affects our lives, our homes, our welfare. It gives each and every one of us the individual right to control our own business. We, the plain people of Manchester, are free and equal—with equal rights for all. It is wonderfully good government. There is no town or city throughout our country that can boast of a better government, of and by and for the people, than our own town of Manchester has.

And yet, it is proposed that we change all this. Amendments to our town charter, for revision of our present form of good government, will be voted upon by you, on Saturday, March 30th. In our own simple language, these amendments propose that we consolidate all districts—that we give up our rights as citizens free born and equal—that we relinquish our present power and authority as individuals, to vote for and to elect our town officers—that we abandon our rights of voting on how our money is to be spent.

It is a proposal, the result of sixteen months of deliberation on the part of the Charter Revision Committee. And we are given less than five weeks to study it. It must not be jammed through. It should not be permitted. For our eyes are open to the danger that faces us. All of us everyday folk, the people that make up Manchester—all of us will eagerly go to the polls next Saturday, and decisively vote "NO."

The Committee for Good Government

Every thinking man and woman of Manchester, who wants to pay only his or her own fair share of taxes and of personal expenses; and who does not want to pay any part or portion of other people's taxes, will gladly go to the polls next Saturday and vote "NO!"

THIS HAS HAPPENED
"HARRY HARRY" BORDEN is shot between one and four o'clock Saturday afternoon, RUTH LESTER, his secretary, finds his body Monday morning sprawling beneath the airshaft window of his private office.

McMann, detective sergeant, questions the following suspects: MRS. BORDEN, Borden's estranged wife and mother of his two children; RITA DUBOIS, night club dancer, with whom Borden was infatuated; and JACK HAYWARD, Ruth's fiancé, whose office occupies the narrow airshaft from Borden's.

McMann's belief in Jack's guilt is strengthened by Jack's admission that he returned to the seventh floor Saturday afternoon, and by the testimony of elevator boys and NICKY MORAN, OTTO FRUJGER, BILL COWAN, Jack's friend, unwillingly tells McMann he heard Jack threaten Borden's life Saturday morning.

McMann questions BENNY SMITH, Borden's office boy; ASHE, his manservant; MINNIE CASSIDY and LETTY MILLER, seventh floor scrubwomen; CLEO GILMAN, Borden's discarded mistress, and JAKE BAILEY, his bodyguard.

MARTHA MANNING, mother of Borden's illegitimate son, is brought into the case by Ruth Lester and questioned, but allowed to go when McMann cannot take up her challenge to bring forward anyone who saw her in the building Saturday.

Ruth knows that McMann is being pushed to make an arrest and she fears Jack may be thrown into jail at any moment. McMann gives her permission for her to leave his office on a strange mission. When she returns jubilant, she finds Rita's husband, RAMON BOMERO, with McMann. McMann tries to force a confession from Rita and Ramon but without success. From behind Rita's chair comes a wall of terror as a fainting body falls heavily to the floor.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XLVII

"Get me some water—quick!" Ruth, first on her feet and first to reach the side of the unconscious scrubwoman, commanded. Jack Hayward, who had stepped into Borden's office just as that terrible scream had broken on its ultimate high note of horror.

"What's happened to poor old Letty?" Jack asked, as he sprang to obey. "I'm afraid she's hurt her head against my chair in falling," Ruth answered. "I'll see if it's cut—"

And to the amazed horror of everyone in the room, the girl behind the tender compassion in her voice by giving a sudden, hard jerk at the dark tangle of hair that hung in wisps about the ashen-pale face of the woman on the floor.

"Ruth!" Jack Hayward cried out angrily. The girl did not appear to have heard. Her small hands gave a quick tug at the hair, so sharp that the woman's scalp seemed to have been torn off. Ruth cast the thing from her and immediately after it went the cheap, steel-rimmed spectacles that had shielded eyes closed in merciful unconsciousness.

"My God! Martha Manning!" It was McMann who voiced the identification, his flinty gray eyes wide open at last and staring incredulously at the small, aristocratic head, wrapped tightly with smooth bands of fine, black hair.

"Yes, Martha Manning! Didn't you know?" Ruth answered, but there was no triumph in her voice—only infinite pity. "Give me the water, Jack . . . Thanks! Her poor head is hurt . . . There's a great lump swelling—"

"But—how did you know?" McMann demanded, with angry bewilderment. Ruth did not answer until her compassionate fingers had slipped into the glass and dabbed cold water upon the death-like face now pillowed against her arm. Then, with her free hand, she reached into the pocket of her smart little brown velvet frock and drew out the tightly folded sheet upon which she had written what Bird-weld had called her "serial story" earlier that afternoon.

The detective took them, shook out the folds. The first sentence was enough to mottle his heavy face with the dark red of chagrin. "Rita! Will you get me some whisky, please? You know where Mr. Borden kept it," Ruth directed, her interest wholly with the unconscious woman, upon whom the cold water had had no effect.

The dancer, who had been taking in the scene with stupefied bewilderment, ran to obey, but when she returned from Borden's private office the pink flask was at her own lips, and she was drinking deeply.

"Gawd! I needed that!" she breathed, as she passed the remainder of the liquor to Ruth Lester. "So Baby-face beat you at your own game, did she, Big Boy?"

"It—looks like it," McMann admitted, and began to read aloud from the first of the four sheets of typing that he held in his not quite steady hand.

"Martha Manning, in the guise of Letty Miller, a cleaning woman, killed Henry P. Borden. My reasons for this conclusion are: '1. The hands of 'Letty Miller' and Martha Manning are identical. When Letty Miller was telling Mr. McMann her story, I observed a yellow stain upon the nail and first joint of the index finger of her right hand. When Martha Manning was being interviewed by Mr. McMann, I observed the same stain, and knew that it had been made by nicotine. In all other respects also the hands of the two apparently different women were identical.

"2. 'Letty Miller' wears glasses habitually. Martha Manning was not wearing glasses today or when she called twice upon Mr. Hayward, and apparently had no need for them when Mr. Hayward gave her insurance literature to read in his presence. Yet across the base of Martha Manning's nose was a small indentation, such as is made by the wearing of spectacles.

"3. Martha Manning was undoubtedly in this building on Friday evening, when Jake Bailey was here with Mr. Borden, leaving a few minutes after nine through the main entrance. Yet, according to Mrs. Fallow, in charge of the cleaning women, only cleaning women passed through the lobby of the Starbridge Building between nine and 9:35 Friday night. Therefore, Martha Manning must have been a cleaning woman. Being a cleaning woman, she possessed a passkey to all offices, but only Letty Miller, since she cleans Mr. Hayward's office, could have been familiar with his office and known of the automatic in his desk. And on this floor could have entered and left offices on this floor on Saturday, without having been noticed and asked on Monday to give an account of her whereabouts. Repeated questionings of tenants on the floor Saturday afternoon and of elevator operators have failed to give any evidence of visitors in this corridor or in Mr. Hayward's corridor, nor already questioned by the police.

"4. According to the manager of the Acropolis Hotel and other employees whom I questioned today, Martha Manning, during the last three weeks, has been absent from the hotel on week days, except Saturday, from her room in the afternoons until half-past nine at night. On Saturdays she has not been in the hotel between a quarter of 12 and half-past four. Three weeks ago—the Monday following Christmas day, 'Letty Miller' began her work as a cleaning woman in the Starbridge Building. Her hours are four to nine each evening, except Saturday, when they are from 12 to four."

The detective paused to shift the sheets in his hands so that the second page of stenographic typing should be uppermost, but Ruth Lester interrupted: "The rest is just a connected story of the entire case, but please don't read any more now. She's coming to."

"I guess I've read enough," McMann admitted heavily. "So you won't win the $5000, Miss Lester! Well . . . my hat's off to you!"

"I told you I'd give you half," Ruth reminded him. "But, oh, let's not talk of money now. . . . Letty!" Ruth called softly, and her lips almost brushing the deathly pale face against her breast—the thin, lined face that had only needed a complete lack of the brilliant make-up that Martha Manning affected—to be remarkably well disguised.

The dark-fringed eyelids fluttered, opened wide at last to reveal a pair of great, tragic brown eyes that were content to rest for a moment upon the sweetness and beauty of Ruth Lester's face. Then partial comprehension came, and those tragic eyes became filled with terror, rolled wildly from one face to another in the circle that hemmed her in.

But with comprehension came cunning, for it was not Martha Manning's lovely throaty contralto that spoke, but the flat, monotonous, timid voice of 'Letty Miller.' "I—I'm sorry. I must have fainted. I—I haven't been very well lately. The—black pigeon started flying about my head, and I fell into the room. . . . But you—wanted to see me, sir?"

And Martha Manning, who thought she was still 'Letty Miller' to Detective Sergeant McMann and all those others looking at her so compassionately, struggled to rise. Between them, Ruth and Jack Hayward assisted the thin, calloused figure to a comfortable position in one of the chairs about the big table in the center of the outer office.

"Feeling better? How about a little more of the whisky?" McMann asked gruffly, but not unkindly, when he had seated himself opposite the erstwhile scrubwoman. "Letty Miller" shook her head and lifted one of those betraying hands to her hair. When her weakly trembling fingers encountered the smooth bands of her own dark hair, instead of the lank strands of gray which they expected, her eyes went blank for a moment, then widened and widened until they were embosomed with terrified comprehension, as their gaze clung to the detective's face.

But not even that hard-boiled third-degree artist could long endure the ordeal of meeting those eyes. His own dropped, and with what Ruth Lester knew was real kindness, he answered the question which Martha Manning's terrible eyes were asking by slowly pulling the gray wig from his pocket and laying it on the table before the woman.

"So—you know?" The ashen lips hardly stirred with the whisper. McMann cleared his throat loudly. Ruth's hand wavered out, was taken in a strong grip by Jack Hayward's. Slowly, portentously, the detective spoke: "Martha Manning, I arrest you for the murder of Henry P. Borden, and it is my duty to warn you that anything you say may be used against you!"

As those words were being spoken, Martha Manning's thin body straightened slowly, stiffened against the chair back, but before the detective had completed his official warning to his prisoner, her breast rose high on a great breath of what Ruth was oddly sure was relief.

"May I ask—how?" Martha Manning spoke then, almost steadily, in the lovely contralto voice which had been described so many times during the investigation. "Miss Lester—" McMann began, and hesitated. "I thought so." The pale lips at-most smiled, but without malice. "She was the only one I feared—because she was fighting for the man she loves. . . . And they say love is blind. . . . It may be—sometimes—" and the tragic eyes glanced toward the spot where Harry Borden had fallen and died.

McMann shifted in his chair, either embarrassed or impatient. "If you'd like to make a confession, Miss Manning—though I don't mind telling you the case is pretty complete without it—I'll take you now to the district attorney's office. Otherwise—remand you to jail—preliminary hearing—await action of the grand jury—"

"The district attorney's office?" The lovely voice quivered with dismay, and a great eyes sought Ruth's appealingly. "I'm willing to make a full confession—oh, not just willing! I want to tell—for the peace of my soul, but can't I make my statement here? Miss Lester is an expert stenographer. I want it to be over quickly, among my—friends." And those tragic eyes flashed a glance of gratitude and affection toward Jack Hayward, who stood beside her, his arm about Ruth Lester's shoulders.

"We—ell, if you won't try to repudiate it later—" McMann conceded. "I shall not repudiate anything I tell you now, for it will be the whole truth," Martha Manning assured him quietly. "But—if you don't mind, I'd rather—this girl—"

The dancer sprang to her feet. "O. K. with me, Miss Manning! But say, don't get any hate on me! I didn't want your man! . . . How about it, Big Boy?" and she whirled excitedly toward the detective. "Miss Dubois had nothing to do with Harry's—death," Miss Manning informed the detective. "He was alive when she came, he gave her the torn half of a bill, and she left him—still alive."

"All right, Rita!" McMann decided, after a frowning silence. "You can rush out to get a lawyer for your husband. He'll need it. Miss Manning's story can't help him."

"Thanks a million times, Miss Manning! You're a peach—I don't care what you did!" And Rita paused at the door long enough to pat a fingertip kiss to the murderer, who had turned in her chair and was gravely watching the departure of the last woman who had won the love of "Handsome Harry" Borden.

"Willing to act as stenographer in an official capacity, Miss Lester?" McMann asked Ruth, when the door had closed upon the dancer.

"Yes," Ruth answered, and slipped out of the half-circle of her sweetheart's arm to get notebook and pencils. "Please—in justice to myself, may I go back to the beginning of my—my relationship with Harry Borden?" the contralto voice quivered, when Ruth was ready, with pencil poised.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
© 1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

All children get hurt in one way or another many times over.

Don't get nervous, mother, and lose your head. Children can stand a lot of bumping and bruising.

But cuts need a little more than kissing. In themselves they may not amount to much but wherever the skin is broken steps should be taken instantly to prevent blood poisoning. You never can tell what germ is hanging around on grubby little hands or knees ready to jump into the opening and cause damage.

Don't wash a wound and then put on the antiseptic afterward. Reverse it. Put tincture of iodine on right away and wash it out later. The other way you are likely to wash dirt and germs into the cut. The water you use on a cut or wound should be boiled and cooled if possible.

In big cuts it is still more necessary to keep them free of germs. Cut away all clothing near the wound. Don't handle the wound until your own hands are thoroughly scrubbed and dipped in some antiseptic solution. But first, if the bleeding is bad, try to control it by pressing on the flesh around the wound.

No Not Handle Wound The wound should be handled as little as possible. The best thing is to get a doctor at once. But if he is not available, the treatment of iodine and sterilized water may be followed. Be very careful about the kind of a pad or bandage you put over it. The soft cotton cloth or gauze should be boiled and quickly dried, before it touches the wound. Don't allow it to touch anything after the boiling. Use the scissors should be dipped in antiseptic solution and scrubbed. Cleanliness and sterilization are absolutely necessary. Watch a wound if you are attending to it yourself—even a small one. If there is any sign of pain near it, or red streaks, or pus, when enough time has been allowed for reasonable healing to begin, don't waste a second. Get a doctor at once. Blood-poisoning is the one thing you can't afford to take a chance on.

There are excellent balms for burns but a good substitute is a solution or "plaster" of baking soda, or the same of borax acid, applied right on the burn.

In severe bruises, cloths wrung out of hot or cold water may be applied, or cracked?ice wrapped in a cloth. Alcohol, arnica, or witch hazel, diluted, are very comforting. If the skin is broken treat it as a cut.

HEALTH

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The modern educators argue frequently about whether or not a child should hear a fairy story or fantasy before going to sleep.

Every one of these stories has its own or horror-man. Some children are unable to sleep at night because of their fears; they lie awake fearing the dark, fearing burglars, robbers, giants, or whatever else may be stimulating their nervous systems.

The psychologists seem to differ in their points of view. One group insists that it is a mistake to tell the child anything unpleasant or fanciful.

Another group, headed by the individual psychologist, Adler, argues that the ghost stories and frightening on the part of the parents are not the cause of the fear of the dark. A child who is courageous will merely find these things amusing, for he knows they are not real.

If a child is cowardly it will find cause for anxiety even without fairy tales. Eventually it learns to use its cowardice, its anxieties or its fears as a weapon to get what it wants. Thus it gets the constant presence of its mother at the bedside by its shrieks of terror.

In school it develops a nervousness before the simplest tasks. When it is nervous it vomits and then it is excused from the lessons. Furthermore, the nervous or sickly child soon finds that its condition is recognized and that it gets a head-start over the other children to compensate for its supposed weakness.

It is easy for an adult to talk lightly of fear. Fear is one of the most important forces in life. If it were not for fear mankind would expose itself to dangers which would be fatal to the human race.

The important factor is to teach the child the things that are to be feared and those that are not to be feared.

One should fear danger, loss of approval of those in authority, the shame that comes with an action that one knows is wrong.

It is perhaps simple to get the child to obey by threatening him with unknown dangers. Let the cause for anxiety be the things which he himself fears most are the things unknown.

If the child is given an adequate explanation of the meaning of the dark, if it is told about such animals as dogs and becomes used to them, if it sees its parents view small cuts, bruises and pains with equality, it is likely to have the same attitude toward them. In all life there is nothing so destructive to happiness and longevity as fear. Don't be afraid!

The WOMAN'S DAY

BY ALLEN SCHAUBER

So, instead of Greta Garbo, who is what any woman would do on looking like, Prince Sigurd, 23-year-old son of Sweden's Crown Prince, is to marry plump and healthy Princess Juliana, daughter of also plump and healthy and wholesome Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.

At least it is said that the official announcement of the engagement will be made from the Dutch court most any day. The Swedish court, 'tis said, was recently thrown into panic at word back home of the prince's obvious admiration of the exotic orchid of the films, Greta in person.

NO CLUTCHING!
The prince was forbidden to dance with Greta on shipboard where they met, his retinue having wireless, the Swedish palace for instructions as to how to cope with this crisis.

So here again, in real life, is the story of tragedy. Love must bow to affairs of state, and the young prince must marry the young princess, though his heart would fly from the nose glasses and studiousness of "la jeune fille serieuse" to the charms of "la jeune fille joyeux" of the screen.

SIGURDS WIN
Prince Carol of all the Rumanians didn't do so. He gave up his throne for the lady of his heart. Many have condemned him, but perhaps many have applauded. And yet, whether preserving the traditions of a monarchy by sacrifice of self is really important or not, or whether the traditions are not worth the sacrifice of even one individual, the fact remains that the human race is so constituted that it applauds the strength of self-sacrifice whether in a necessary cause or not, and gives the plaudits to the Sigurds rather than the Carols. It is apprecia-

TO SAVE US

Suggestion that even such deep-dish halls of learning as Yale and Harvard make a course in beauty culture as compulsory as chapel or one credit in mathematics was pronounced at the recent convention of the Master Hairdressers.

To be sure, the suggestion was for the mere purpose of obtaining newspaper space, as it did. Still, there is something to be said for the idea. Judging by the lost and benighted permanent waves turned out by some shoppes, things have reached a point where at least Yale or Vassar should take a hand and see if proper supervision can't spare us from the onslaughts of "operators" turned loose on an innocent public.

"MARRY, YOUNG MAN!"
Six bachelor brothers, aged from 74 to 68, all living together on a farm in the Ozark foothills, recently confessed that if they could live their lives over they would marry, one and all. They advise all young men to "marry early and settle down."

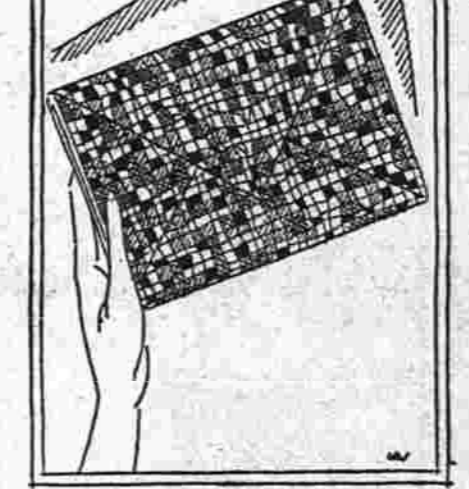

It is conceivable that had the six bachelors married, they would be as inclined today to warn young men not to do that very thing. This human contrariness—the insistence of finding the far pasture green—is a bewildering thing.

PRESIDENT CAN!
If you invite Sam Brown and his wife over for an evening of bridge and, getting yawn about 11 p. m. with Sam and the little woman showing no intentions of departure, you would hardly be excused for just saying "Well, nighty night, folks," and running away.

But there's where the President of the United States and his lady have the edge on you. It's quite ill-faith for these First Two to wave a gracious farewell to their guests as they, to the strain of something or other, take the White House elevator upstairs to bed.

Well, they need some compensations!

REC SHOWED LACK OF CAPABLE LEADER

Wright Misses Easy Shot, Dunn Beats Him, 100-98

North Ender Looks Like Sure Winner But Falters at Finish; Dunn Makes Fine Comeback; Match Tonight.

Herb Wright, one of the four north end representatives enrolled in the battle for the town pocket billiards championship, was eliminated Saturday afternoon at the Recreation Center by Walter Dunn. The margin was just about the closest possible. Leading 99 to 95, Wright missed an easy cut shot close to the mouth of the pocket which, if pocketed, would have given him victory. A moment later, he scratched playing safe and then Dunn elected a combination shot, made it, and ran out.

Tonight, another promising north end entry will swing into action in the person of Joe Coughlin who last year lost to Jarle Johnson 100 to 98 under almost the same conditions Wright bowed to Dunn Saturday. The only difference was that Coughlin missed his easy shot on his 93th ball and got into position for another easy shot on the play. Coughlin meets Griswold A. Chapell at 7:30. Tomorrow night Johnny Gardner and Mac Macdonald will meet. Thursday evening John Carney plays John McMenamy in a second round match. Bill Kaminsky and Harry Bellamy may play Wednesday night. The only other remaining first round match to be played is the Sam Houston-Joe Brozowski match which hasn't yet been booked.

But to get back to the Dunn-Wright match, Dunn led during the early racks but when Wright struck his stride, he swept past his opponent into a commanding lead which left one point as great as 18 points. He was playing better than Dunn at this stage and looked like a sure winner. However, Dunn rallied nicely and succeeded in gradually closing the gap until Wright's lead was three balls. Wright, increased it to six and led 99 to 93 with an easy shot left for him. As related before, Wright missed and Dunn ran out a moment later after swapping safety shots.

The rack by rack total score follows:

LOCAL DEMOLAY BEATEN 42 TO 36

The local DeMolay basketball team lost one of its best played games of the season to the New Britain chapter there Saturday 42-36. The game was one of the best and closest played at the "Y" this year, according to the director there. Only nine fouls were called during the game, seven on New Britain.

The game was a nip and tuck affair from the first until the final minute, neither team leading more than four points.

The game was not decided until the last few moments when McConeky and Crockett were forced out on account of injuries.

The New Britain team had some nifty pass work and was a trifle better than the local boys. As the score shows, Stahl and Erickson gathered the most points for New Britain while Bissell, Crockett and Bray starred for the locals.

Both teams will meet again at the East Side Rec. It will be the local boys' last game this season and it should prove to be a very interesting game. The summary:

BOSTON UNIVERSITY TO NUMBER BALL PLAYERS

Boston, March 25.—Since football and hockey have been interesting to spectators by the numbering of the players, it was decided by the Boston University athletic association to number the baseball players this coming season, according to George V. Brown, director of athletics. It is believed that the Terriers will be the first college team in the country to wear numbers for identification purposes.

Training Camp F-l-a-s-h-e-s

St. Petersburg, Fla.—With Dazzy Vance scheduled to pitch, the Brooklyn Robins hoped to make it two straight over Boston today. They scored their first triumph of the season over a major league opponent when they swamped the Braves at Clearwater yesterday, 7 to 2. Clark and Koussal held the Braves in check except for homers by Richbourg and Harper, and Brooklyn's rookie infielders, Rosenfield and Rhiehl, got two hits apiece.

San Antonio, Texas, March 25.—The New York Giants have yet to lose a game this season. They beat the White Sox again yesterday, 4 to 3, on a wild throw in the tenth by Autrey, Chicago's new catcher. Hal McKain, signed by the Sox two weeks ago after being declared a free agent by Judge Landis, pitched good ball for five innings.

Los Angeles—The Cubs were enjoying a well earned day of rest today following their fifth consecutive victory over the Detroit Tigers. Hack Wilson's homer with three men aboard in yesterday's closing game clinched the clean sweep for the Bruins. The final score was 8 to 5. The Cubs today are enroute to Tontoucan, Ariz.

San Antonio, Texas, March 25.—The White Sox were anything but gloomy today over having failed to finish on top in their first "big time" test of the season. The Giants beat them in a ten-inning battle here yesterday, 4 to 3. Manager Blackburne of the Sox consoled himself with the showing made by pitchers Thomas and McKain. He figures a "break" beat 'em.

Bradenton, Fla., March 25.—The Red Sox start their fourth week of training and their final week of Bradenton today with every man on the squad in perfect condition. The regulars face the Indians this afternoon and the Carrigans take on Indianapolis.

St. Petersburg, Fla.—The Braves today were getting ready to go away on a two week trek that will bring them back to Boston and the opening of one more campaign. Just three more games will be played here, one with the Brooklyn Robins today, and a pair with the Athletics tomorrow and Wednesday.

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Bud Taylor says Al Singer will be the next lightweight champion of the world. He adds: "If I didn't ruin him in our last fight," McConkey said he was personally opposed to Edy O'Doul, but he had to let him go. He says "he had to wind up like a pitcher before he threw in from the outfield." Golden Prince, the winner of the Cof-Handicap, was trained in the sands of the San Diego seashore. Monte Munn, once an aspirant for the heavyweight championship, is working for the Indiana General Service Company in Marion, Ind. Art Shires, White Sox first baseman, is the best looking and best dressed fellow in the league. And one of the toughest. Charley Fisher, one of the big automobile fishers from Detroit, has bought a racing stable of horses.

OUT OF THE PAST

These four fellows are the ones you either cursed or praised for their work in the 1915 world series. If you happened to see one of the games played at Philadelphia or Boston that year, The Red Sox and the Phillies were the rival clubs, and the Sox took the Phillies over by winning four games out of five.

HIDES IN BED TO KEEP AWAY FROM PAULINO

San Juan, Porto Rico, March 25.—Paulino Uzcudun, Spanish contender in the American heavyweight elimination tournament, was $10,000 richer today for less than one round of fighting. He made the long jaunt from the United States to knock out Francisco Cruz, Portuguese heavyweight, after only one minute and 23 seconds of their scheduled 10-round bout had elapsed last night.

Although Paulino has scored few knockouts in his career, Cruz believed him to be a "killer" when it was time for the bout to start, the hope of Portugal turned up absent and was found hiding in bed in his home. Finally lured to the ring, he launched a brief offensive which was halted by a stiff jab. He was floored for a count of five and a few seconds later was stretched out for the full count.

"This is my nineteenth year and I'm not through yet. The old soup bone feels all right. Of course, I haven't all my old time speed but the old bean is still functioning and I think I can fool them for another year or two—maybe longer. I won sixteen and lost nine last season and I hope to beat that record this year."

"In your great career what game gave you the most satisfaction—the greatest kick, so to speak?" "Oh, I guess that game against the New York Yankees in the

Grover Alexander After 19 Years Still Hankers for No-Hit Game

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN. Avon Park, Fla., March 25.—"The toughest pitcher in the National League for me to pitch is Rogers Hornsby. I'd rather see anybody else up there at the plate than him."

So declared Grover Alexander, the famous pitcher of the St. Louis Cardinals as he engaged in a little fanning bee with the writer on the bench at the local ball park while the Cards were going through their spring training paces under the watchful eye of the new manager, Billy Southworth.

"Another hard guy to pitch as far as I was concerned was Jimmy Archer, the old catcher of the Chicago Cubs in the days of that Tinker-to-Evers-to-Chance combination. Archer wasn't so much of a hitter but he was tough meat for me."

"How long have you been pitching, Alex?" "In Nineteenth Year. I'm not through yet. The old soup bone feels all right. Of course, I haven't all my old time speed but the old bean is still functioning and I think I can fool them for another year or two—maybe longer. I won sixteen and lost nine last season and I hope to beat that record this year."

Jack Quinn, Elderly Twirler Is Finicky As Woman About His Age

By JAMES L. KILGALLEN. Fort Myers, Fla., March 25.—Jack Quinn, the ancient pitcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, is as finicky as a woman about one thing—his age. He refuses to tell how old he is.

"You are listed on the club roster as 41 years old," Jack was informed as he warmed up preparatory to pitching a few innings in an exhibition game. "It that right?"

"No, it isn't," he replied. "I'm not that old."

"How old are you?" "I'm not telling."

"How's the old soup bone?" "Good as it ever was."

"How does it feel to be with the A's?" "It's a treat."

Quinn was obtained via the waiver route from the Boston Red Sox.

The A's have a fine chance of copying the pennant and I'd like to get in that world series," said Quinn.

He added that he takes the shifts from one club to another philosophically. He remarked that he won the pennant for New York in 1921 and they sent him to Boston the next year. He said you never can tell what will happen in baseball.

In Good Shape. "I went from my home in Chicago to Hot Springs three weeks before spring training started, and right now I'm down to 180 pounds, my best playing weight."

"How come you have lasted so long in the Majors, Jack?" "I pitch with my shoulder rather than my arm," he answered. "Pitchers like Joe Wood who use all arm do not last long. I never have a sore arm. I don't see why I can't keep on pitching for a long time."

LOUGHRAN HAS EVERYTHING TO LOSE THURSDAY

Victory Over Middleweight Walker Little Boost But Defeat Would Ruin Heavyweight Hopes.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, March 25.—Everyone else and his brother-in-law in the plumber's supply business having taken up the matter of making boxing forget Rickard, it is Paddy's Harmon's turn this week, by right of succession and by right of several other things, including a lot of very vulgar money. Patrick is opening his new $10,000,000 Chicago arena on Thursday night with the Walker-Loughran fight for the light heavyweight championship and the occasion is most important for many reasons, not exclusive of the fact that all Loughran may stand to lose is everything.

He is going in there with his championship crown over one ear against a smaller and lighter man and it isn't necessary to add that the champion who does that is not giving himself all of his pocket money. If he beats Walker impressively, what of it? Everybody will say that he hasn't proved anything except that the light heavyweight champion can't beat the middleweight champion. If he doesn't beat Walker impressively, then he must abandon all idea of playing with the heavyweights, an idea fine, as we say in Latin quarter, which has kept him out of New York boxing for nearly a year; and in case he blows the decision—good night, tosti.

This, of course, automatically makes it a great spot for Walker. He can't go wrong; so maybe he will go right. Walker got an early J. J. Dillon used to hang the big guys out to dry. Walker himself did this with McTigue and Emmanuel over whom Loughran got a disputed decision. Walker probably thinks that he can repeat with Loughran, though not necessarily so. Walker would have to be a clump not to realize that, in taking this match, he placed the burden of proof on the other guy, both competitively and financially.

When the latter difficulty is unsnarled, they probably will have a squad of bank examiners picking up the pieces, for Loughran has made an arrangement that defies ordinary comprehension. He, first of all, is taking $5 per cent. of the net receipts. This would be assumed that Loughran expects him to do better than this. If Walker wins, however, all Mickey gets is $10,000 and the title.

In other words, Loughran is promoting Paddy Harmon's fight for him and, if that doesn't make him a smart hombre, I hope to drive up in a hearse and report failure; Rickard spent twenty years of his life promoting fights, but the best he was able to do was to get a fighter to fight for him. This underwriting of the fight might be the anguished that goes with the opening of a new arena of the pretentious of this one.

It will seat 25,000, thus beating the Garden's capacity by 5,000, and according to advance reports, Harmon's backers can match the Garden crowd, million for million. Anyhow, the least worried man on the premises this week should be Harmon.

As for Loughran, he ought to be worried but probably isn't. This young man has a habit of deciding what he wants and then going out and getting it. He has been in many a tough spot but his record says that he hasn't been wrong yet. At that, Thursday night will give him a downright good chance.

Dunn Wins Rec Title From Ty Holland 50-32

Despite the strain of just completing a nerve-racking 100 point match with Herb Wright in the town title tournament which he won by two points, Walter Dunn immediately afterward, his match with Ty Holland in the finals was started upon the conclusion of the Wright match and although Holland played well at times, Dunn showed himself easily the better player of the two. The final score was 50 to 32 which is about the closest any player came to Dunn in the tournament.

CATHOLIC CHAMPS

Chicago, March 25.—De La Salle High school of Chicago was being feted today as the National Catholic Intercollegiate basketball champion of 1929.

The De La Salle sharpshooters won fame for themselves and alma mater, and a holiday for their schoolmates, by beating out St. Stanislaus of St. Louis, Miss., in last night's final game at Loyola University's national tournament.

The score was 25 to 16. The largest crowd that ever packed Loyola gymnasium witnessed the thrilling climax.

Curtis Walker, outfielder with the Reds, was a bandmaster in his youth at Beeville, Tex.

Helen Hicks says her father and her brother, who attends the University of Michigan, are fair golfers.

By TOM STOWE

The Rec Five basketball team played 25 games during the season just completed, winning 17 and losing only eight. From a standpoint of games won and lost, this is considered an excellent record. During the course of the season, the team showed great promise but folded up in tent fashion when it was given an opportunity to compete with the best teams in the state. The local outfit won 14 out of 15 games before it lost to New Britain in the first of its games with state title contenders.

The defeat at the hands of the Hartford City crew seemed to take the heart out of the Rec Five and they never showed their true ability again until the next to the last game of the season and then only in flashes. In the season's grand finale against the Dixies, the Rec Five played like champions in rolling up their biggest score of the season, 53 to 18, but this wasn't a fair test of their skill because the Hartford combine is far from a first class team when "Cap" Bissell early in the season was a severe blow to the team.

One of the most noticeable faults with the Rec Five throughout the season was the lack of a real leader, a man who was capable to steady the team when in the face of defeat. The talent was there, but not the leadership. In this connection, it was the opinion of many that the acquisition of Harry Benson would have been an excellent move on the part of Manager Ben Clune. Benson's ability to lead a team far surpasses that of any other person now playing basketball in Manchester. He showed his worth with Plainfield.

However, Clune was blocked in his desire to obtain Benson's services through the point-blank refusal of George Stavinsky, the team's leading scorer, to play if Benson were signed. It seems Stavinsky had a verbal altercation with Benson over the amount of money he (Stavinsky) was supposed to obtain for playing part of the 1927-28 season with Plainfield. All seasons of neutral persons to bring about a settlement or even an arbitration were in vain. Meanwhile, Benson stood ready to play. The reason for not divulging this information before was to prevent any trouble in the ranks of the team. Now that the season is closed, the fans are entitled to know the reason why Benson did not play. This story does not attempt to place the blame, simply to give the facts.

Stavinsky led the Rec Five scoring during the past season, accumulating over 200 points. 204 to be exact. He threw in 83 field goals or 23 more than his nearest rival, "Hank" McCann and played 25 less game. "Stiffy" also made 38 foul goals which was the highest made by anyone on the team, although McCann also made 38 foul or less attempts. Roy Norris finished third with Ty Holland and "Hank" Madden almost tied for fourth honors. Each made 45 field goals but Holland got one more foul. Incidentally, Holland proved the best foul shooter on the team. His percentage was almost 665. He made 31 out of 46.

Here is the Rec's season record:

Not Champions But—"None of us are saying anything about the pennant," Grabner went on. "That's poor stuff for any ball club. The other fellows don't forget it all season and the patrons expect too much of you."

There are several mighty strong ball clubs in the league this year. The Yankees, of course, are strong, but they're reaching the cracking age. You saw them in St. Petersburg; Is Lazzari throwing all right and he's a pencock and Moore ready to pitch."

We told him just what Miller Huggins told us—"Don't know." "If they're not, the Yankees are shot," he said. "I don't look for the Babe to go so long, but he's a fellow you can't figure. Look what he did in the series last year when we thought he couldn't walk!"

"I can't see the Athletics as being better than fourth place. They had their chance last year and the same bunch of players they have on the club never will forget how the chance was blown."

Watch the Dixies. "The Browns are a good ball club, too, but I'm looking particularly at Detroit. There's a ball club. It was a powerful ball club last year that made a lot of mistakes. The work wasn't any mistakes with Bucky Harris around. He's a smart manager and one of the best leaders in baseball."

"If Detroit gets some pitching, look out! And Uhle and Yde are liable to come through."

"Our White Sox club might come through, too. In an open race you sometimes can sneak in with a ball club that didn't look like a champion at the start."

"We got a lot of spirit on the club and that's something

SLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

SENSE and NONSENSE

The officer of the law picked his way through the rapidly growing crowd and picked up the slightly battered victim of a passing motorist. He pulled out his notebook and grabbing the poor man's arm, said gruffly, "You say you didn't see the license number, but could you swear to the driver?"

The bleeding one spat forth a few teeth and replied solemnly, "I did; but I don't think he heard me."

Ode to the 23rd. The Ford is my Motor. I shall not want another. It maketh me to lie in muddy places. It leadeth me into much trouble. It draweth on my purse. I go into Paths of Debt for its sake. Yea, though I understand my Ford perfectly, I fear much evil, For the steering wheel or axle might break. It hath a blowout in the presence of mine enemies. I announeth the tire with a patch. The radiator boileth over. Surely this thing shall not follow me all the days of my life. Or I shall dwell in the house of poverty forever.

The Modern Smithy. Beneath a spreading chestnut tree The filling station stands; The smith (?) no more a smith is he— Has strong and greased-smear'd hands. He looks the whole world in the face And shouts "You need brake bands!"

The children, coming home from school Look in at the open door; They buy birch pop and ice cream cones And loudly call for more; For the man's wife runs a hot-dog stand As large as a grocery store: He does not hear his daughter's voice Singing in the village choir. His sons stay home to wash the bus Or patch a ruptured tire. He tends the gasoline and tows Stalled cars from out the mire.

He goes not, Sundays, to the church. What time has he to pray? He says, while selling gas and oil, "Sunday is our best day." But if you ask "Which way to Heaven?" He could tell you the way.

"Thanks, thanks to thee, O smiling friend, For the new tube you have bought! We judge the old one good enough, Though patched, 't would go, we thought!" We ramble on while musing o'er The changes time hath wrought.

One cannot get the horses shod. For love nor yet food pelf, So get an avul and a forge And do the work yourself. But learn the tricks or you may lay A good horse on the shelf.

LETTER GOLF

STARTS OUT EASY Speaking of EASY JOBS, there is today's puzzle. Far is six, and while it isn't a Chinese puzzle, there is a word in it of Chinese origin. One solution is on another page.

Word search grid with letters E, A, S, Y, J, O, B, S.

THE RULES 1-The Idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2-You change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word of common usage for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed. One solution is printed on another page. Mrs. O'Row: My husband's car is the latest car out, you know. Mrs. Cutler: Yes, so all the neighbors say—and every night, too, at that, my dear.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

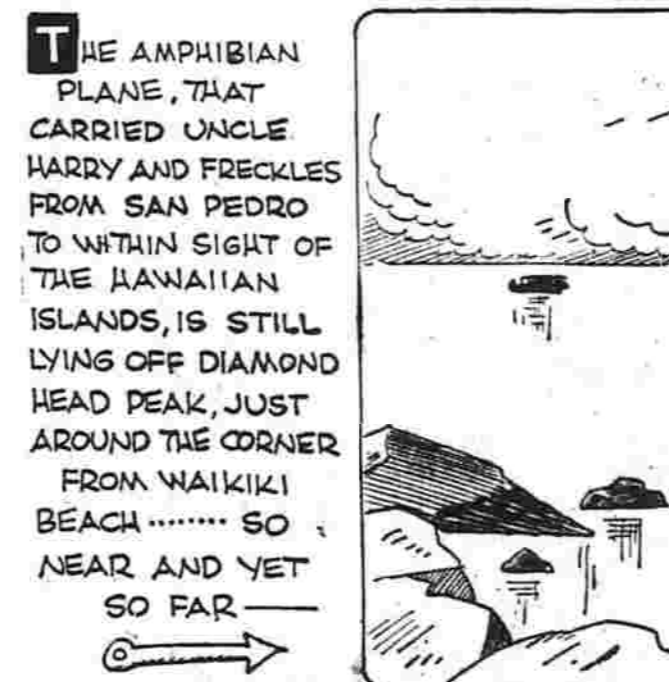

"Whee! Whee!" cried Clowny. "This is great. It's mighty hard for me to wait to find out where we're going to land, when this fine ride is o'er. I hope that we stay on the ground, and finally wind up safe and sound. The wind is whizzing by so fast it makes my poor ears roar." "Here too," snapped Coppy, scared to death. "Why I can hardly catch my breath. I've never seen a hill so steep. I wish that I could jump and get away from this coal car. But landing spots look much too far, and I am not enthused about a sudden, awful thump." "Oh, don't do such a foolish thing," a coal man cried. "Let's have our fling at riding in this queer coal car. I'm sure 't will end all right. I know these tracks lead for below, and that's where we are going to go. Just be a little patient, and the end will come in sight."

So everybody sat real still, though every Tyn'd had his fill of sailing down the real steep grade. They all were filled with fear. At last a coal man loudly said, "Oh, look at what is far ahead. The long hill ends, and all is smooth." This made the whole crowd cheer. And then they reached the level ground. The Tynmites all looked around, and noticed that the track still went far, far across the land. "It looks," said Coppy, in a daze, "Like we will coast a long, long ways. How we are ever going to stop, I cannot understand." It wasn't long, however, till there came a new and sudden thrill. The car swung round a little bend. O bumper came in view. "Look out!" cried Scouty. "We will smash that bumper with an awful crash." The train stopped with a jerk, and through the air the whole crowd flew. (The Tynmites clean up in the next story.)

CASE CO. HOST TO EMPLOYEES

Fifty Year Service Men Especially Honored at Annual Banquet.

More than one hundred of the employees of The Case Brothers Manufacturing Co. attended the annual banquet tendered to them by the company Saturday night. The party took place in the Highland Park Community Club house. The dinner was prepared and served by the ladies of the sewing club of the community. The menu included roast beef, mashed potato, turnip and green peas, rolls and cold slaw, apple pie and ice cream. At the head table were seated members of the firm, Lawrence Case, A. L. Crowell, the speaker of the evening, James B. Thwing, of New Haven, Elmer Thiennes, the toastmaster, Lucius Foster, and members of the office force and three employees, who had completed more than 50 years of continual service for Case Brothers. The last three were John O'Keefe, John F. Gorman and Adam Isleib.

Isleib Rewarded.
After cigars had been lighted Lawrence Case welcomed the employees and guests and called the attention of the gathering to the three guests of honor, remarking that Mr. O'Keefe and Mr. Gorman had completed their half century of labor with the firm some time ago and were taking life easy. Mr. Isleib only last week finished his 50 years of service and was still in their employ. In honor of this event Mr. Case in behalf of the firm presented to Mr. Isleib an envelope containing a substantial check. Mr. Isleib was so overcome that he was unable to find expression to his feelings to more than say thank you.

Mr. Case then introduced Mr. Thiennes as toastmaster of the evening whom Mr. Case said had always taken a lively interest in Y. M. C. A. work, and who was no stranger to the people of Highland Park. After calling Mr. Crowell, who reviewed briefly the good work of the Community Club was doing he introduced the speaker of the evening; James B. Thwing. Although in the banking business and connected with the Banking Capital Co., at New Haven, Mr. Thwing did not talk on banking or investments. His subject had to do with service—service to others. He recognized that he was addressing 100 men who had to earn their living by hard work. He prefaced his address by telling a number of witty stories that had come to him during his travels over the state.

Of Poor Parents.
Mr. Thwing said that he was not always in the banking business. He was brought up on a farm. His people were poor but as he grew up he was determined to get an education. This was accomplished only by hard work and sacrifice of many pleasures that others would not give up. He stressed the fact that too many young men today were wasting their leisure time instead of taking advantage of their opportunities. It made him sad to see so many men standing on the curbs and leaning up against the buildings as though they would fall if they did not support them. They were missing their opportunities for advancement. He urged his hearers to consider the other fellow. Everybody can do something for his fellowman and such work is sure to bring success and soul satisfaction. He concluded his talk by repeating one of Edward Guest's touching poems on the subject of service to others.

Entertainment.
Following the speaking the party enjoyed several reels of moving pictures put on by Mr. Case while still others enjoyed setback. A list of rewards were distributed to lucky ticket holders. These prizes were donated by the merchants of the town, and included a ton of coal, a coffee percolator and pocket knives. At each plate were several souvenirs, the gifts of the merchants. Altogether it was one of the most successful gatherings ever held at Highland Park.

For the benefit of those who cannot shop before six we will remain open until 9 p. m. all this week. The Smart Shop, and Nelligs, Millinery, State Theater building.—Adv.

MAY LOSE AN EAR AFTER FOG CRASH

Joseph O'Coin Injured Near Stafford During Dense Mist Saturday Night.

Joseph O'Coin of 51 Bissell street and William Durrand of Homestead park, were injured in an automobile accident late Saturday night between Rockville and Stafford. O'Coin, who was thrown out of the car, had his right ear nearly severed, but Durrand escaped with an injured knee and was able to resume work this morning.

The cause of the accident was the unusually dense fog of late Saturday night. One report had it that the car which struck the Ford roadster driven by Durrand, was proceeding with its lights out. This is sometimes done by drivers during heavy fogs. O'Coin and Durrand were on their way home from Stafford where they had been visiting friends. State police investigated.

O'Coin was taken to the Rockville City hospital where six stitches were taken with silver wire in an attempt to grow the right ear on again. It had been almost entirely cut off. O'Coin returned to his home here yesterday. He is employed in the Bigelow-Hartford town, and included a ton of coal, a coffee percolator and pocket knives. At each plate were several souvenirs, the gifts of the merchants. Altogether it was one of the most successful gatherings ever held at Highland Park.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

GOOD FRIDAY SHAD

While the shad runs of the Maryland rivers and coves are producing fine yields of that succulent, luxurious fish, this is the week of Big Demand, as Good Friday witnesses the eating of more fish dinners than any other day in the whole year. And so, even with big catches of Shad coming through, it is a question whether there will be enough of them to go round.

To guard against any Pinehurst patron having to go without the Good Friday Shad we are booking orders now. Every household which places its order well in advance will receive its Shad—not a long frozen and always more or less inferior fish from the far south, but a freshly caught and perfectly refrigerated one from those Maryland waters where the Shad, on their spring time journey up the coast, first attain to prime condition.

We can't quote figures today, but market conditions insure that the Shad will be very reasonable in price. The quality, as evidenced by those we had last week-end, is very high.

Our Meat Department reports that its best features for tomorrow will be Pinehurst Quality Corned Beef—your favorite cut is among the pieces in the vat, whatever it is—Meadowbrook Sausage Meat and Tender Cuts of Short or Sirloin Steak. Delivers at 8 a. m., 1:30 p. m. and all morning and afternoon. You select your hour of delivery and we'll do the rest. Phone 2000.
