

STATE SOLONS ARE FACING A BUSY WEEK

General Appropriations Bill
Up for Passage—A Resume of the Week's Work of Our Legislature.

By CLARENCE G. WILARD

Although the past week in the Connecticut General Assembly was an exceedingly quiet one marked chiefly by the disposition of a large amount of unimportant routine business, the coming week will witness action on one of the major bills, not only of the current session but of every meeting of the legislature. This measure is the general appropriations bill which provides for all expenditures from state funds for the next two years. The general appropriations bill will be started for action upon the calendar of the Senate on Tuesday. The measure is not far different from the general budget prepared in advance of the session by the Board of Finance and Control. It is a bill drafted by the committee itself to cover all of the individual appropriations bills which it has thus far deemed worthy of favorable action. It does not contain all of the appropriations which will be made during the course of the session, for there will be a few other expenditures, yet to be decided upon by the committee, which will undoubtedly be recommended to the Assembly in a small supplemental appropriations bill to be submitted later.

Awaits Action

The measure has already been accorded a favorable report by the committee and is now in printed form awaiting action. It is more voluminous than ever before, since, with the advance aid of the Board of Finance and Control, the committee has been able to delve into details on a greater scale than in past sessions of the Assembly. Moreover, the 1927 appropriations bill is considerably more easy to interpret than past measures of expenditures. The committee has been able to locate every item of state expenditure in its proper place and to show exactly where each dollar of money will be used. This has been made possible by the new system of accounting introduced by the Board of Finance and Control when it was instituted two years ago. The total biennial expenditures for the 1929-1930 period are listed at $39,642,864. This figure is higher than the total expenditures recommended in the appropriations measure of the 1927 General Assembly and has therefore led to the impression that Connecticut is to spend considerably more money during the coming two years than in the past biennium. This, however, is not wholly true, since the apparent increase in the budget is due not to greatly increased expenditures but to the improved method of accounting mentioned above. The above total shows the exact amount of anticipated expenditures, while past yearly balance sheets showing expenditures were not as completely descriptive of the financial situation. In the past, it was the custom to permit some of the state commissions to appear before the legislature in the form of reports to the state in the form of net expenditures. The reports did not state the gross income and expenses of the commission. For example, if a commission's income was $4,000 for the biennium and its expenses were $6,000, its report would merely show the total cost of maintaining the department, which in this case would be $2,000.

Under the new accounting system, all commissions must show both income and expenditure, and since their income is connected in no way with the appropriations bill, the total expenditure for each commission is the only item shown. Early Adjournment Assured
In view of the extraordinary large amount of uninteresting and routine business disposed of during the past week, it now seems very safe to predict that the General Assembly adjournment. More than half of the business submitted to the legislature this year has now been completed by far the more substantial majority of it having been rejected. It is much easier to dispose of business rapidly at the present time than it was a month ago, for most of the committees have nearly finished their work of conducting public hearings and are now sending their reports into the houses in quick order. At the present rate of speed, the Assembly will hardly need more than another month to finish all business before it. It may be possible that the session will extend into the second week in May, but quite improbable that it will continue after that.

FRENCH POLITICIAN DRINKS ONLY WATER

Paris, April 6.—"He only drinks water," is the political slogan that may defeat Leon Blum, wealthiest Socialist in France, who is candidate for deputy in the Department of the Aude. American prohibition is always considered a joke in France, but it is doubtful if the citizens of the Aude ever heard of prohibition or imagined it possible.

Blum was a little late in deciding to run and the Department of the Aude was all the party could offer him. Opposition cartoonists have fired their broadsides. One depicts Blum emerging from a bathtub, a bottle of mineral water in one hand and a stick of rouge in the other. With the rouge he is giving his nose a color that could never be acquired with drinking water.

BIG STEAMER GOES AGROUND OFF BROOKLYN

French Liner Paris With 1,000 Passengers Aboard
Fast on Mud Flats—May Be Refloated Today.

New York, April 6.—The French liner Paris went aground in a fog off the mud flats of South Brooklyn early today. There were almost 1,000 passengers aboard.

The steamer had left her pier at West 14th street a few hours before she went aground.

First reports to the office of the French liner were meager. The exact position of the grounded liner could not be immediately obtained. Passengers aboard the ship, which was outward bound, included John Erskine, author; Arturo Toscanini, conductor; and Mrs. W. H. Woodin wife of the president of the American Car & Foundry Co. The liner went aground shortly after three o'clock. At eight o'clock half a dozen tugs were standing by. While the ship was reported to be solidly lodged in the mud flats, the passengers were said to be in no danger. The ship carried 415 first-class passengers.

Henry Fog.
The fog followed a severe wind and electrical storm which broke over New York. The Paris left her dock in the midst of the storm. By 9 a. m. fifteen tugs had reached the vessel, which was lying in the mud about a mile off the Brooklyn shore. Consideration was given to a plan to unload the fuel oil tanks of the Paris to lighten the ship. No attempt was made to free the liner, however, until near high tide, which will occur about 2:30 this afternoon. The Paris was bound for Plymouth and Le Havre.

Next Tuesday; Provisions of the Measure.

State and municipal regulation of motor vehicle junk yards is proposed in a bill which will be considered at a public hearing before the legislative committee on Motor Vehicles at the Capitol, Tuesday afternoon. Local supervision, as to location, will be vested in the mayors of cities, wardens of boroughs, selectmen of towns, and town managers. Their approval will be necessary before a license may be obtained for operation of the yard from the commissioner of motor vehicles. Provision is made in the bill for public hearings upon applications for certificates of approval to establish and operate such yards, after due publication of the applications. The applicant will be required to pay a fee of $10 and the costs of publication with the ex-

Classified Ads. Do The Trick

Helena Dreger of Andover had a little fox terrier dog which she wished to sell. Thursday night's Herald carried her ad in the Classified columns. That evening she sold the dog and was kept busy answering "phone calls as well as letters. There is no mystery about Classified results. They are sure as death and taxes, if you use the Herald. RIOTING IN SOUTHERN TEXTILE STRIKE

Rioting, minor injuries and arrests came thick and fast in Gastonia, N. C., when workers of one of the nation's largest textile mills went on strike and five national guard companies were sent to quell mob violence. The upper photo shows rioting in front of the mill as officers sought to drive back the crowd. Hundreds of women took part in the demonstration and lower left you see two of them trying to disarm a guard. At the right is shown the arrest of a woman strike leader. Center is George Pershing, sent as a representative of the Communist Party to Gastonia to organize a local of the National Textile Workers' Union, repudiated by the A. F. of L. He claimed to be a cousin of General John J. Pershing.

FEDERAL ARMY MOVES INTO NEW WAR AREA

Now Waging Campaign for Subjugation of Religious
Insurrection in 5 States;
Other Areas Quiet.

Mexico City, April 6.—With two powerful Federal expeditionary forces moving northward in the States of Chihuahua and Sinaloa without encountering opposition today, a third Federal division waged a campaign for the subjugation of the so-called religious insurrection in the States of Jalisco, Guanajuato, Michoacan, Durango and Zacatecas. The religious rebellion is now regarded by the government as its most difficult problem. Gen. Sarruno Cedillo, leading 5,000 troops, is engaged in a "mopping up" campaign in the states where the religious rebels are most numerous. No More Battles
Gen. Plutarco Calles, secretary of War, and commander in chief of the Federal armies, informed President Portes Gil that he thought that there was slight prospect of any further fighting in Chihuahua.

He stated that Gen. Jose Gonzalo Escobar, leader of the rebels who were disastrously defeated at La Reforma, had fled to Sonora to rejoin Generals Manzo, Topete and other rebel leaders there. He declared that Gen. Marcelino Caraveo, commander of the rebels in Chihuahua, was preparing to flee across the border into the United States. Calles predicted that the rebels would evacuate Chihuahua City before the federal advance and that Gen. Almazan would occupy the city without being opposed.

On the west coast, there were equally slight prospects of immediate fighting. Gen. Cardenas, leading the federal forces in Sinaloa, reported that Gen. Manzo was retreating into Sonora. Cardenas stated that he expected to enter Culicagan, capital of Sinaloa, today. Military observers here believe that all the rebels in Chihuahua and Sinaloa would eventually be concentrated in northern Sonora, probably at Juarez, for a last stand. In that event, the residents of El Paso would have another opportunity of witnessing a battle across the Rio Grande, this time with the rebels defending instead of attacking.

Reports received here yesterday stated that federal sympathizers had concentrated a force of 800 men at Guadalupe, Chihuahua, 28 miles east of Juarez, with the intention of attacking that city in the near future.

'New Freedom' Theory Wrecks Wedded Life

New York, April 6.—Married men and women in America are showing an increasing tendency to take "French leave" of each other, Miss Virginia M. Murray, executive secretary of the Travelers Aid Society, said today in discussing the organization's annual report which reveals an increase in the number of persons who run away from home. "They pack up and leave over less provocation than they did years ago," declared Miss Murray, a social worker for 18 years. "If they don't like the way things are going at home they get out. Our desertion cases are on the increase. I guess it's this new freedom we hear so much about."

The statistics of the society, just compiled, show that 5,219 persons ran away from home in the United States in 1928 as against 6,195 in 1927. New Orleans is not included in the 1928 figures, that city having neglected to send in a report.

Broker on Stand Swears
That Attorney Told Him
He Had Used $25,000 for
That Purpose—Egan Got
$325,000 of Watkins
Funds and Advised Broker to Leave Town.

The high spot in the trial of Attorney William E. Egan of Hartford, charged with conspiracy in frauds perpetrated by Roger W. Watkins, now a convict in Wethersfield prison, came yesterday afternoon when Watkins, testifying as the state's star witness, swore that Egan told him he had used $25,000 of the money handled by Watkins to "square" the courts and that Egan had indicated Superior Court Judge Edward M. Yeomans as the person with whom the money had been used. Watkins also swore that Egan told him that Superior Court Judge Allyn L. Brown had been "seen" by Judge Yeomans, and that he, Watkins, had "nothing to worry about."

Not His Knowledge
At no point did Watkins testify to any knowledge of his own that Judge Yeomans had received any of his money or that Judge Brown had been consulted concerning his affairs, his testimony having to do only with what Attorney Egan had told him. Watkins had not finished his direct testimony when court adjourned yesterday and is to return to the stand on Tuesday for the completion of his direct testimony and to undergo cross examination. Says Egan Got $325,000
Watkins testified that, up to the time of his flight from Hartford two years ago yesterday, Egan had received from him $325,000, of which $200,000 was in cash and the rest in checks. He said that Egan had manipulated the $200,000 note which convinced the bank commissioner that the sales agreement between the National Associated Investors and Winthrop Gregory & Co., was a legitimate transaction. He testified that it was at Egan's (Continued on Page 2)

HOOVER ORDERS 'NO ROUGH STUFF'

President Wants Dry Law
Enforced But With Less Gun Play.

Washington, April 6.—Strict enforcement of prohibition— but no rough stuff.

That somewhat singularly describes the Hoover administration's policy of the Hoover administration, as outlined today in the most authoritative quarter. Melodramatic run-play by Federal agents, unnecessary violence, and rough-house tactics in conducting raids without legal sanction will not be tolerated. Orders to this effect have been issued and sent trickling down throughout the personnel of the Federal enforcement machine.

Hoover Against It
President Hoover wants no Aurora incidents involving Federal agents. The deplorable circumstances surrounding the killing of Mrs. Lillian De King before the eyes of her small son in Aurora, have been brought to the President's attention, and while no comment was forthcoming because it is viewed as a state matter, it can be said that Federal agents will be severely punished if they resort to similar tactics.

Federal agents were under orders to use firearms only in defense of their lives. While obviously there will be some violation of these instructions, it is the purpose and policy of the new administration to weed out of the service those agents who are too quick on the trigger. 100 Already Killed
Official treasury records show that 190 persons have been killed in shooting affrays between citizens and enforcement agents since the 15th Amendment became effective. Of this number, 25 have been killed in the last 15 months.

This list, large as it is, admittedly is not complete. As for lawless killings may be directly attributed to prohibition enforcement, officials admit there is no way of telling. All save a few of the states have their own enforcement machines and state killings—such as that of Mrs. De King at Aurora, Ill.—are not listed in Federal records. Police killings are not included, either. The Treasury figures concern only cases where Federal agents have been involved.

President Hoover views this steadily growing list of deaths with some concern, in common with other administration officials. He sees in such incidents as the Aurora affair prohibition being brought into disrepute. He "wishes prohibition to succeed," as he informed Senator Borah (R) of Idaho, in the pre-convention days, and he considers one certain way of not helping it to succeed is to have Federal agents themselves setting an example of lawlessness and violence.

DANRURY WOMAN KILLED AS AUTOMOBILE UPSETS

Driver Escapes Injury But is Arrested for Driving While Under Influence of Liquor.

Danbury, April 6.—Mrs. A. B. See, wife of a railroad policeman, was instantly killed this morning when a machine driven by Edgar Hall, chauffeur for a local theater owner, sideswiped a road side pole, upset and slid along the top of a stone wall for 50 feet before it came to rest. Mrs. See was home, escaped without injury and was arrested for driving while under the influence of liquor. The machine belonged to Mrs. Estelle Bateman, one of the owners of the Capitol theater here, and Hall was regularly employed by her to drive the car. Mrs. See was caught beneath the car after being flung out in accident. The car was a complete wreck.

CAPITAL INCREASE MEANS PROSPERITY

Millions of New Capital for
proved by Our Assembly.

Hartford, April 6.—The Legislature of 1929 will go down on the records for the number of corporation capital increases it has permitted. Millions of dollars of new capital has been approved, ranging from the Southern New England Telephone Company's proposed $50,000,000 increase, which paid the capital at $100,000,000 down a few thousands to be issued by some concern that in years to come may stand among the state's leaders in industry.

Members of the Legislature say that Connecticut's prosperity has never been better illustrated than by the business of the session now drawing to a close. Very few requests for the right to increase capital have been refused. After careful study the Legislature has found no question as to the propriety of permitting the increases. Leading in the proposed new issue of capital are the insurance companies whose business success means prosperity to every town in the state, and whose slump in business, if it ever comes, would be felt from one end of Connecticut to the other.

The Other Side.
Standing against the signs of prosperity and almost opposing them are the schemes of various towns to issue new bonds. Anything to get hold of spending money seemed to be the rule at one time, according to petitions to the Legislature for new bond issues, but the Assembly has kept a tight rein over the expenditures. The statute that limits the total of bond issues to five per cent. of a town's grand list means something to the Legislature of 1929 just as it has to previous ones.

High Light Of Week
The high light of the Legislature in the week just ahead will be furnished by the biennial budget bill. The Senate, at least, will wrestle with the budget. The sum of $39,642,864 asked for the cost of running the state government for two years is the largest the state has yet known. The appropriations committee of the Legislature and the State Board of Finance and Control have spent long weary hours on the budget and as it stands today is believed to be the utmost in economy. How the $39,000,000 will be divided among departments is the big thing now, but no one expects much trouble in arranging this.

"The apology bill" is at hand. Such a name has been applied to the "dirt road" substitute bill. The roads, rivers and bridges committee has anxious hours ahead of the bill. The Senate will get the bill first but the Senate hardly is likely to settle the bill for the session. When it gets into the House the fur may fly. Many members of the House will go after more than the bill offers. "Only a codification of existing highway laws" is the way some members describe the bill and they intend to fight for something more for rural communities than a mere handful of words that in the long run means nothing. So runs the expressed opinion of some House members.

Absentee Voting

A proposal to submit to the electorate of Connecticut a constitutional amendment permitting absentee voting comes into the Legislature on Tuesday. Several years must elapse before the absentee vote can be cast. That is, if the Legislature adopts the present measure. Stamford's secession plan is coming into the Legislature again this week. The Shippan Point group are trying a new tack this year. Instead of withdrawing altogether from the state's fastest growing city, the Shippan residents are asking to be permitted to live in a separate taxing district "of and in" the town of Stamford. The cities and boroughs committee will hold (Continued on Page 2.)

POWERS MAY UNITE TO FIGHT AMERICA

League of Debtor Nations is Being Talked About Now in Germany.

Berlin, April 6.—A League of Debtor Nations, uniting through common interest all the principal powers of Europe (both victors and vanquished) into opposition against the United States as the sole creditor nation—this is the specter gradually emerging from the Paris reparations conference, according to the view of international experts, here today.

At the same time a powerful weapon is being put into the hands of the threatened debtor league by the creation of a world reparations bank, which could easily be used to unite the resources of all Europe against Wall Street.

Combine War Debts
All of this is a result of the combining of war debts and reparations at Paris as a basis of the reparations settlement. The Allies have sought this development and the United States has fought against it since the Treaty of Versailles was drawn and signed.

Through this combination, if a settlement is reached, Germany would tacitly assume as part of her indemnity to the Allies, the Allied war debts to the United States. This eliminates the debt conflict between Germany and the Allies and unites their interests against their joint creditor, the United States.
The First Signs.
The first manifestation of this point interests was the joint pressure upon the United States to reduce Europe's war debts. Already German newspapers are joining in the allied demands that the Americans must "make concessions." To the irony of history this is brought about by the aid of the American observer in the reparations conference, who accepted the allied principle, and thereby forced Germany to drop her long standing opposition against this combination.
This is the highest government officials in Berlin in discussing Germany's "surrender," told International News Service.
"We do not care how the settlement is motivated so long as the figure is low enough."
This is in striking contrast with the previous German expressions.
As a return for Germany's "Joining the European fold," it is expected that the Allies would make a settlement of the reparations taste possible.

Introducing a New Feature—
QUOTATIONS
On Page 5 Today

What people say is news, if they are important people. That is the reason for the new feature The Herald is starting under the heading, "QUOTATIONS."
This feature is being prepared, first of all, with the view to be interesting and entertaining, rather than controversial. Readers may often be out of harmony with what Senator Jones, Henry Ford or Thomas Edison says of a certain subject, but this will only add to the value of the feature.
Men and women are curious. To know what So-and-So thinks of this or that is one way of satisfying that almost universal trait. Besides, the quotations have the personal appeal of big names.
The quotations you will find in this feature are carefully gathered. They will be short, newsy, unusual, opinionated, interesting.

THE STORED POWER

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE International Sunday School Lesson Text, April 7. Then I said, Here am I; send me.—Isa. 6:8.

Isalah heard a voice saying, Whom shall I send. He replied, Here am I; send me. He was sent on a mission most unpleasant to him. He was sent to tell the people that they heard, but did not understand; that they saw, but did not perceive; that they were immersed in sensual pleasures and cared for nothing else; and that they would continue thus until their cities were laid waste and the land became desolate.

Yet there was with the message a bright and wonderful assurance most graphically expressed. Though wasting and desolation would go on until utter destruction impended, they were assured that the power stored within it power to renew its foliage when winter has cast its leaves, so there is preserved within everyone throughout this life the power to glorify his life with holiness.

Here is a message of strength, comfort, encouragement and joy particularly for those in whom sorrow, or loss, or sin has destroyed happiness. God's life is within. It is everlasting life, because it is a power stored within every mortal that no spiritual winter can kill. It abides throughout this life, surviving all desolations apparent or real. Whosoever will may come.

Isalah replied to the call. Here am I; send me. Likewise let us be ever ready to proclaim to our lower and despondent nature the happy message that there is power within that can make life worthy and happy.

Are not as important, according to the prevailing fashion, as the whims and impulses of the child. Against this cult there is a deep revolt among men and women who do real thinking in the light of their experience of actual life. They know themselves and they know human nature. Therefore they are clamoring for more of authority in all realms of life, and especially in the department of ethics and of spiritual experience.

The Keith Method of Laying Permanent Linoleum Floors

Floor is smoothed and loose boards nailed down. Heavy deadening felt is then firmly cemented to your floor. (We use the heaviest 1 1/2 lbs. to every square yard.)

This felt is then thoroughly rolled, giving a perfectly smooth surface and an ideal base for the linoleum.

Another layer of cement is applied to the felt lining and linoleum is then laid and rolled, care being taken to match the pattern at every seam.

Seams are then cemented and cut n. Our linoleum mats are very particular about the neatness of every seam, a factor adding much to the appearance of your floor.

Lastly the linoleum is carefully trimmed around the edges the baseboard moulding replaced and your permanent linoleum floor is finished. The Keith method certainly pays!

The International Sunday School Lesson for April 7 is, "The Ministry of Isaiah," Isaiah 6:1-8; 20:1-2; 38:1-5. Pity the people who spend their days in reading modern books and in listening to up-to-date philosophical discussions. Most of them are missing the great truths of the times. Behind and beneath all the clack and clatter of our day's professional debate upon morals and religion and sociology there is sweeping an immense tide of popular concern about God and the soul of man.

are today fertilizing the minds of mankind; whereas your too-vocal professors would like us to forget what they said yesterday; as we obligingly do. There is hope and courage and cheer and inspiration in the utterances of the son of Amos; results which no one claims for the "new" philosophies of our day.

Isalah was overwhelmed by a consciousness of his own unworthiness, crying "Woe is me, for I am undone." Every man who beholds the holiness of God is bowed down into deepest humility by the sense of his own unfitness. Thus he is made ready to become a herald of the Divine Right of the Deity to order human life and to require obedience. Only the lowly may serve the Most High God. Every true prophet knows himself, not as able, but as enabled. The fire of his purged lips is from a heavenly altar. Spiritual vision sees first of all the greatness and glory of Jehovah.

Any religious experience which does not eventuate in duty done is unlikely to be valid. "Here am I, send me!" is the cry of the servant who has seen the King. To become His messenger, His work carrier, His errand-runner thenceforth is the whole of life's mission. Would we have a revival of religion? It can come—aye, we may say it is coming, along the way indicated by the Archbishop of York—only by conviction of the character and greatness of God.

What Makes a Prophet? A prophet is one who speaks forth the highest truth he knows. A few evenings ago a group of men were gathered at dinner, to hear an address by a famous psychologist, who, in the somewhat technical terms of a schoolman, talked about the six sides of human life and their consequences upon conduct, especially in youth. Like many modern scientific presentations, it was wholly materialistic and fatalistic and depressing. After perfunctory expressions of pleasure, the gathering was about to break up, when one man asked, "Professor, what place do you accord to religion in influencing character?"

"None," replied the psychologist magisterially; "up to twelve years of age a child has no experience of religion, and it does not affect his character at all." "Let me tell you a story," continued his questioner. "When I was ten years of age, I met with a dreadful accident"—and he gave the details—"and by all the laws of probability, I should have died in that remote field and my bones have been picked by the crows and

How A Dozen Hens Grew To Over 5,000

Fred and John Luck, by Bitter Experience and Many Mistakes Finally Learned the Habits of Chickens; An Interesting Story of Local Boys—Have 7,000 Egg Incubator—How This Big Business is Managed.

YEARS ago a sage remarked that "some time in every man's life he will think seriously about raising chickens." It sounded rather far-fetched when it was made but time has shown that the sage knew what he was talking about. Even men and women, born and brought up in cities approach this question seriously when things financially worry them. "Get a few chickens and sell them go ahead," they say. So they get chickens and generally go broke.

The amateur generally goes at the problem this way: Picking up a poultry journal he reads that So and So's feed will make hens lay dozens of eggs a day. Incubators will produce thousands of chickens in a short time. These chicks become broilers in a few weeks and one knows how much broilers cost in restaurants. And the eggs—volumes could be written about the subject. You figure it out something like this:

"Two hens will lay 14 eggs a day. Those 14 eggs will become hens and will in a short time lay 98 eggs a week. Those 98 chickens will lay 686 eggs a week and those 686 hens will lay 4,802 eggs a week and—now your head grows dizzy. Why in a year you'll have millions and millions of eggs all for an outlay of a couple of dollars for the two hens you bought in the first place. What gold or iron mine can compare with chicken raising!"

Then you start with your two hens and in a little while you go back to the old job after eating the two hens for you'll find that there is all there is to eat on your poultry farm.

IN WHICH YOU TAKE A TRIP TO THE OUTSKIRTS

TO get some inside information on this fascinating business a trip was made to a poultry farm this week. Way out Keeney street way and the trip was a revelation. Folks journey across seas to view beautiful scenes while right here in town there are vistas galore. Up hill and down dale, a view of the surrounding country. High hills, Church spires, Babbling brooks, Sylvan dells. All these one sees until the town boundaries are passed. One finds that out automatically when the springs in the auto start to do what they were built to do for you are low off the Manchester road. Soon a pretty white house looms, its presence heralded by the crowing of innumerable roosters, the clucking of hens and the cheep cheeping of thousands of chicks.

Just inside the fence which borders the road, Fred Luck, one of the Luck boys is discovered and he takes you around the poultry plant, explaining things the while.

Started With 12 Hens
"Mother and brother and I started with a dozen hens about three years ago," he starts. "There must be over 5,000 chickens around here now."

The first building visited was a big breeding pen. Here were housed 500 layers. They were the breeders that supplied the huge incubator. There were other houses with layers that brought this number to nearly 1,500. It was noticed that there is running water in these houses and feed pens which are kept continually filled.

The outside of these laying pens are of rather rustic construction. No window glass is used to let in light. There are ventilators and shutters to keep out the cold and drafts and the pens are always warm.

Big Incubator
Next came the incubator room which is in the same building as the laying pen. Here was found a big incubator, or a series of incubators built together. It is capable of holding 7,000 eggs at a time. About one thousand chicks a week are being hatched now. A hot water plant keeps the incubators at the proper temperature. An automatic device turns the eggs four times daily. What a contrast to the days when the hen was obliged to turn her dozen eggs twice daily with her beak. And that brought to mind a story about two setting hens that were it not vouchsafed for would be classed as a nature take.

A farmer in Manchester had two setting hens in his barn. One had made its nest on the floor and the other on the top of a barrel. When the hens left their nests daily to give the eggs the necessary airing the farmer noticed that each day the nest on the floor had one egg less and the one on the barrel one egg more. He decided to watch how this happened to come about. Believe it or not, but the hen on the barrel would pick up one egg, place it under her wings and in a succession of hops carry it to her nest on the barrel and place it there.

The little human interest touches in this life are the most interesting. In the unfolding of the story about poultry raising on this page today, one of the Brothers Luck let fall a remark that bares the soul of the genuine sportsman. John Luck, famed in his neighborhood as a hunter and fisherman will not kill a skunk!

Now a skunk is in the same category as a snake. Let one appear and every man, woman and child in the vicinity searches for sticks and stones to exterminate the pests. But not John Luck and here is his reason: "I will never kill a skunk and I'll tell you why. Were you ever mowing on a hot summer's day? And did you ever drive into a yellow jackets nest? If you have you know there is not only danger of killing the horses but yourself falling in front of the mowing knives. It has happened many times.

"Well, my friend, skunks just love to eat yellow jackets' nests and yellow jackets. They keep the meadows clear of this danger and they should be rewarded."

HOW THE LITTLE CHICKS ARE RAISED TO BROILERHOOD

WHEN the eggs, after 21 days, begin to break from the inside as the chicks force their way out, they are given a little more air as they need it to breathe. The fluffy balls of down make their way to the light which comes from a little window in each incubator. As they do they drop into a tray underneath the egg tray and in a day or two they are ready to be taken to the brooders.

These brooders are in separate small buildings scattered all over the farm, which by the way contains 25 acres. These houses are small enough to move and they are moved each year or oftener to new ground. Hundreds of chicks are placed in each of these houses. Coal stoves radiate heat for the little ones who crowd about the radiator during chilly days or cool nights.

Love Greens
At this juncture Fred got several heads of cabbage and threw them among the hundreds of chicks. What a scramble! In no time there was nothing left of the cabbage so quickly did they tear it apart and eat it.

It developed that the Lucks raise Bagred Plymouth Rocks mostly, although they have some White Leghorns and some pedigreed Rhode Island Reds for show purposes. They chose the Barred Rocks because they made broilers fast, are hardy and are good layers and make good table fowls. "The best all around bird" as Fred explained it.

It also was brought out that chickens are kept for only a year and then are killed except the breeders. Fred said that he used no trap nests to find out the layers but that either he or his mother could pick out a layer just by feeling it. "It took a long time to learn the knack," he said "and I learned by many mistakes. Theories don't work here. Practical experience and learning by mistakes is the only road and it is not an easy road either. One must devote one's entire time to the business. From dawn until eleven o'clock is our working day. There is always something to do."

The Lucks mix their own feed and they use tons of it. Bone meal, fish and meat scraps, grains and other ingredients are mixed on the barn floor. Here again experience plays an important part because feed is important to keep the hens growing fast.

Fast Eggs Sold
Although eggs are sold from the farm, the main business is in broilers and table fowl. Hartford hotels and markets and Manchester stores take care of the supply but once in a while a big order comes from outside. Only last week an order came for 600 broilers for the New York markets.

Fred who acted as guide said that the State Agricultural College at Storrs was a great help to poultrymen and any time he had any difficulty he brought his problem to the experts who solved them for him.

Fred, by the way is a well built young man. He is above the average stature. Ruddy faced. Tanned by the winds and sun in his outdoor work. Wears no hat. John, his brother, who later joined the party, is not as tall as Fred but he also exudes health from every pore. Both are well built and muscular.

ENTER, JOHN, WHO NOW ACTS AS A NEW GUIDE

BUSINESS called Fred away so his brother John volunteered to guide the party. He is famed in his neighborhood as a hunter and fisherman in the neighborhood so his talk was less of chickens than of woodcraft. He shares equally with his brother the work on the poultry farm, however.

John showed how a ram supplied way to the spring that nestles in the shadow of Minnechaug Mountain, a high piece of ground that is supposed to be about 700 feet above sea level. It is a wonderful spring that bubbles up from a gravel bed.

The talk then led to pests that bother chickens. John said that the worst pests were hawks. He said that hawks love to sit on bare limbs of trees to watch for their prey and this weakness proves their undoing.

"I take an old branch of a tree," said John, "stick it into the ground and place a steel trap on the top of it. Along comes Mr. Hawk. He does not swoop down immediately on the chicks but must first survey the surroundings. Seeing the nice bare pole he decides to perch on it and bing! there is another dead hawk. I catch many of them that way."

Not Country Boys
"Well," said the interviewer, "it is very interesting to you and I suppose you country boys get so accustomed to the scenes about you that you fail to see the beauties of a sunset or feel the contentment that accompanies a trip into the country by a cliff."

"O, I don't know" answered John slowly. "You see we were all born and raised in New York City."

And thus another allusion was shattered.

DECLARATION OF WAR

Twelve years ago today — at 3 o'clock in the morning—the House of Representatives passed a resolution, which the Senate had passed two days before, declaring war against Germany.

The vote in the Senate had been 82 to 6. The vote in the House was 373 to 50. The joint resolution was signed by Thomas R. Marshall, vice president, Champ Clark, speaker of the House and approved by President Wilson, on this date in 1917. Our entrance into the greatest armed conflict in history followed the breaking off of diplomatic relations with Germany, Feb. 3, after that country had begun its campaign of unrestricted submarine warfare and 200 Americans had lost their lives on the high seas. In addition, our commerce had been interfered with, and intrigues had been plotted against our neutrality and security.

Two days after the resolution declaring war was adopted, the Austrian chargé d'affaires in Washington asked for his passports because his country was an ally of Germany. It was not, however, until Dec. 7, 1917, that war was formally declared against Austria-Hungary.

GOING A-MOTORING Tomorrow, if it prove fair and normally springlike, is likely to see a great outpouring of automobiles on the roads of Connecticut.

It is a stimulating and refreshing diversion, this spinning about the country, particularly through the diversified and ever-changing scenery of this most beautiful of states.

The speed bug who tears from one side of the state to the other and from end to end of its length, seeking only the thrill of speed and the piling up of mileage, gets nothing whatever of the satisfaction that comes from observing travel.

It is the senseless, purposeless contagion of haste that converts what ought to be the greatest pleasure ever devised into a thing of risk and anxiety—that piles up the death rate and fills the country with maimed and suffering victims of motor accidents.

Go to ride, by all means. And when you ride, drive so that you can see something besides concrete. The world is full of beautiful things.

And so, for our goings about, we pay in death and wounds, it's all so needless and so supremely so profoundly dumb.

BAD DOPE On March 27 Col. Stephen O. Fuqua was appointed to be chief of infantry of the United States army with rank of Major General.

Aside from the fact that such instances of insubordination always attract a mild degree of public interest—when they become known—the one feature of the affair with which ordinary people are likely to concern themselves is that a principal ground for objection to Col. Fuqua's elevation appears to be that he is not a graduate of West Point.

It appears, but did not graduate. He entered the army during the Spanish War and became a lieutenant in the regular establishment in 1901.

There may be something or there may be nothing to the charge of favoritism. But by the introduction of this sore topic into the controversy the anonymous objectors have done their cause absolutely no good at all.

former Princess is expecting more than he will realize. It is the creditors' fault if they lose their money. And it's the creditors' fault in thousands and thousands of cases not nearly so far away as Bonn.

NONSENSICAL Of those who had for many years admired the personality and the political talents of Charles Curtis, United States Senator, and who gladly availed themselves of the opportunity to vote for him into the Vice-Presidency along with President Hoover, a good many are more than a little disappointed that he should have proved himself capable of getting into this squabble over the social status of his sister-hostess.

Apparently Vice-President Curtis and Mrs. Gann are making an attack on a fairly well established custom of international etiquette; and if that is the case there is no excuse for it. And even if the contention of Mr. Curtis and his sister, that the lady is being deprived of social prestige to which her position as hostess in her brother's home entitles her, could be justified technically, then there would be very little more excuse than in the other event.

The whole controversy is childish and nonsensical and the Vice-Presidency's dignity is suffering from it. We should hate to think it true, but there is in this affair a distinct implication that Mr. Curtis and his sister are both suffering from an exaggerated case of inferiority complex.

DRUNK AND DISORDERLY The finding of the yacht Nomad, with unattended helm and her company of three men, including the owner, helplessly drunk below decks, drifting on the high seas off the Jersey coast, presents several puzzling questions. Perhaps there is no question at all about what became of her captain, for the owner reported that the skipper fell overboard and was lost in a blow; which is something that might happen, even to an experienced sailor-man, and has happened to many a one.

It strikes us that the rum-smuggling aspect of this affair was foolish from the start—there wasn't a ghost of a case against anybody on that ground. But it apparently occupied the attention of the authorities to the exclusion of the far more serious offense of allowing a ship to drift at will, out of all control, in the path of navigation.

If ever there was a case where a ship apparently deserved prosecution as drunk, disorderly and obstructing traffic, it would appear to be this one. Whether you can bring a charge like that in a maritime court we haven't the remotest idea. But you ought to be able to, and the court ought to be empowered to take her away from her owner before he hurts somebody with her.

OWN FAULT The Kaiser's sister, who at 60 married a wastrel youth who blew in her great fortune, is being bawled in court by creditors who are trying to collect $144,000 out of an estate that is said to inventory zero. The creditors are stirred up especially by the fact, so they allege, that Frau Subkov, who once on a fair time was the Princess Victoria, resolutely refuses to give up a very extravagant mode of life, move into a modest home and get along with a single maid.

The odd thing about it is that she gets the luncheons and the dinners and the servants stuck around—and probably next year they will make up part of a new swarm of creditors who then will be trying to get their money, while the Princess is hanging up somebody else.

There is no more obligation on the part of the tradesmen of Bonn to keep on supplying Victoria with provender, clothes and household equipment without money and without price than to do the same thing for the humblest laborer's wife. But they did it, and they are hollering; and they are still doing it and will holler later.

And he knows that they know him and he knows that they brings pleasure to them. . . . and so is a happy man, after a fashion. GILBERT SWAN.

IN NEW YORK New York, April 6.—Our own "who's who" of Manhattan, Joe can't be more than nine. Stationed, as he is, at a Fifth Avenue corner where grand dames swish sikkely by, Joe is like something out of Horatio Alger. Leaning against his favorite fire hydrant, calling afternoon newspapers in a childish piping voice, Joe seems but slightly taller than his prop. With a cap pulled over one side of his face, he might be Jackie Coogan or Davie Lee in a film stunt. But Joe is real. . . . too touchingly real. . . . you'd ask me. Joe is working for a living at a city corner when most kids his age are first learning to spit tops.

Joe is part and parcel of New York, fitting neatly into the incongruous pattern from which the city is made. He is, obviously, "natted" at his corner by some shrewd newspaper circulator. And, sure enough, hundreds of people comment . . . "how cute . . . how street car . . . how they hold up by traffic, hop street cars, and their papers from him. And yet, as might be expected in Manhattan, no one seems to do anything about Joe. They all think he's cute and precocious beyond his years—but they let him stand there, in blizzard rain and sunshine, making his few pennies and running home with them. In any small city of this realm, Joe would have been long since given his chance.

And there's Gus. Gus is blind, and as old as Joe is young. His stand is near the exit of the Pennsylvania Station. He sits all day on a box, his head bared to the sun when there is a sun and his bundle against the elements when the elements are unfriendly. During the course of a day thousands hurry by the red stand on which his papers are piled.

And you really ought to know about Maggie. Maggie is Irish and her hair is mottled, ranging from red to streaks of red-gray. Maggie cleans up the ritzy ball rooms of the Manhattan after the last dancer has taxied away. Maggie comes with the dawn with scrub pail and mop. Maggie sweeps away the great collections of bottles that have gathered under tables during the night. Maggie knows nothing of this tinsel world in which her mop makes watery patterns. The sparkle of crystallized decorations mean nothing to her. There is no allure in a scene which fairly intoxicates a more sophisticated world. It's just a job to Maggie—a job that pays rent on a meanness somewhere back of Bleeker street.

And Guido is the fellow whose hand-organ is first to appear in the spring. The old woman with the knotted strings of hair sticking from under a shawl is Mrs. Guido. Guido also is the fellow who always plays "O Sole Mio" and "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and "Sidewalks of New York." Guido is shrewd. He has never surrendered to the popular jazz rolls, like the other hand organists. He knows that the "hardy-gurdy" fans want good old hardy-gurdy tunes. His approach causes windows to open and dimes to clatter on the sidewalk. He knows thousands of New Yorkers and they know him. . . . and he knows that they brings pleasure to them. . . . and so is a happy man, after a fashion. GILBERT SWAN.

Health and Diet Advice By DR. FRANK McCOY

MAKING SPINACH PALATABLE. Mothers often have difficulty in persuading their children to eat spinach. Sometimes they even resort to the old method of withholding the dessert until the quota of spinach has been consumed.

Why is it that this very wholesome vegetable should be unpleasant? Even adults usually eat it with a sense of duty rather than pleasure. As a little boy once expressed it, "Mama, why didn't God make the things that are good for us taste like ice cream, and candy and cookies?" We probably never know why many of the foods which are good for us are not readily relished, while others which are actually harmful are nevertheless tasty.

Spinach, as it is usually cooked in a soupy, tasteless mass of green substance, appealing neither to the taste, smell nor sight, and there is little wonder that when served in this form it finally becomes repulsive to the child. Once a child has had its appetite spoiled by badly prepared spinach, carrots and other vegetables, it is difficult to make these vegetables liked; but if the child has always been accustomed to eat them properly cooked and served in a variety of ways, it is probable that this dislike would never occur.

The usual method of cooking spinach is to first partially wash it and then cook it in a large quantity of water. This is just about the worst possible way, as the flavoring of the spinach is scattered through the water and the child may find gritty particles in the spinach, making it repulsive thereafter.

The proper method of boiling spinach is to first thoroughly wash it and then place it in a pan with-out water. Cover the pan tightly and place over a slow fire until the spinach has been wilted after which the heat may be slightly increased. Cooking for five minutes is usually enough—never over ten. Enough juice will come out of the spinach to prevent burning. After the spinach has been cooked, the lid should be removed from the pan and most of the juice allowed to evaporate. Prepared this way it is much better in flavor.

I recall that I did not like spinach until I ate a spinach loaf made by adding a quantity of mashed potatoes and baking the mixture. Distilled vegetables can in this way often be disguised by adding them to other foods so that the flavor or appearance is changed. It would be a good plan for mothers to experiment with many different ways of preparing these vegetables. They undoubtedly would be able to create some recipes which would be liked by the youngsters and in this way avoid many of the little unpleasant arguments which sometimes arise at the dinner table.

By RODNEY DUTCHER. Washington—Few presidents have aroused such widespread interest in their future careers as Calvin Coolidge.

For one thing, Mr. Coolidge himself has not enlightened anyone and it is understood that he has as yet made no definite plans beyond his intention to contribute occasional magazine articles.

He has turned down a number of jobs, but it is not known whether he is still considering any attractive offer of a position. He has made it clear that he will not return to his old profession of law in Northampton.

If he were to accept all the offers he has had from publications he would be busy writing for the rest of his life. His only drawback might be to eventually become a shortage of subject material.

The question of what ought to be done about ex-presidents has always provided a source for argument. The supreme court offers a good berth, just as dignified as the presidency, but good lawyers are required for those jobs and not all presidents have been that.

T. R. was Spectacular. What his post-White House career amounts to depends on the individual president. Roosevelt always went in for the spectacular, in or out of office, and besides his hunting-exploration tours in Africa and South America became a presidential candidate again, organized a new short-lived but important political party, tried to raise a division for the World War and wrote Taft, the only ex-president living except Coolidge, taught law at Yale for several years before a Republican administration was able to make him chief justice in 1921.

Wilson, whose health was broken late in his second term, opened a law office here afterward with Bainbridge Colby, but was never able to do much with it before his death. McKinley and Harding died in office.

Grover Cleveland was the first president to be voted back into the White House after being once voted out. Between his two terms, beginning in 1885 and 1889, he practiced law in New York City and prepared the best he could for the next contest. He lived until 1908 at Princeton, N. J., after his final retirement, delivering lectures at the university and writing many articles on national affairs.

Benjamin Harrison also wrote, practiced law and lectured on constitutional law after March 4, 1893. He wrote a book called "This Country of Ours," and served as an American member of both the peace conference after the Spanish-American War and of the International Board of Arbitration.

Chester A. Arthur died in little less than a year after retiring from the presidency. Garfield, who had preceded him, was assassinated. Rutherford B. Hayes, who like Grant and Garfield had been a Civil War general, devoted his post-presidential career to education and philanthropy. He was a strong advocate of prison reforms and manual training.

Grant Had Trouble. Ulysses S. Grant, who was regarded for a time as a third-term candidate had all sorts of trouble after he left the White House. He made a world tour during which he was honored and acclaimed everywhere. But then he entered business, which he knew little about, and suffered severe financial loss. He wrote memoirs in an effort to recoup and Congress voted him a general's pay for life.

Andrew Johnson was nearly booted out before he finished the rest of Abraham Lincoln's term. He stayed in politics and in 1875

Permanent Linoleum Floors

There's a "best" way of laying good linoleum floors, just as there is a "best" way to do everything else. It is the "Watkins Way" of making linoleum floors permanent, seamless, watertight, and more resilient.

High boards and uneven places are first smoothed down. Then a layer of extra heavy deadening felt . . . which makes the floor softer to the foot, more soundproof and a great deal warmer . . . is cemented to the bare floor. Next the linoleum is cemented to this felt with waterproof cement and rolled and weighed down to give a smooth, seamless floor.

Of course this method costs more than ordinary laying but it is well worth the difference in the extra years of service it gives you.

Have your inlaid linoleum laid by our experts.

biennial trip to reelection during the past week when the House voted against its passage by an overwhelming margin of 200 to 39. The Senate registered its disapproval during the previous week by a vote of 22 to 11. As is customary, the appearance of the jury service measure in the House developed no small amount of argument. The unfavorable report of the Committee on the Judiciary was stubbornly opposed, especially by some of the women members of the House, but the argument was of no avail. As a matter of fact, the jury service bill actually lost ground. It was thought early in the session that this year the measure would recover, at least some of its losses of 1927. Such was not the case, however, for instead of regaining the 100-vote margin of two years ago, the measure lost two additional votes this year.

Vaccination Bill Killed
Another measure which followed its traditional course of rejection during the past week was the bill which would abolish the practice of compulsory vaccination against smallpox. This bill by no means aroused the customary amount of interest this year. It is usually necessary for the judiciary committee to conduct its hearing on the anti-vaccination proposal in the hall of the House, but this year the committee decided that its own committee room would be sufficiently large to accommodate those who would attend the hearing. In this, the committee was entirely correct, for although the smaller room was well filled, there were by no means the usual number of persons appearing for and against the bill.

The committee's unfavorable report was vigorously opposed only by one speaker. Several members of the House spoke in favor of the report and for the rejection of the bill, stating that they believed with the medical profession that vaccination had been the means of practically eliminating the dreaded scourge of smallpox. There were only a few dissenting voices when the vote was taken.

Senate Walcott Visits
United States Senator Frederic C. Walcott of Norfolk, who was elected to represent Connecticut in the upper house of the national congress in last fall's election, paid a visit to the Connecticut Senate on Tuesday. He was accorded the seat of honor on the rostrum, known as the Charter Oak chair, and sat throughout the session watching the work of the group of which he was president pro tempore two years ago. Prior to the opening of the session, Senator Walcott spent considerable time renewing his acquaintance with former senators as they came into the chamber and in making the acquaintance of the several members who were not in the Senate two years ago.

Immediately following adjournment, Lieutenant-Governor Ernest E. Rogers formally introduced Senator Walcott to the Senate. At this point a fine demonstration of the senator's popularity in Connecticut was shown in the fact that the Democratic members of the upper house were among the first to bring their feet to applaud him.

Patriotic Tableaux by Women, Too, Will Feature Night Schools' Closing.

Next Wednesday evening will mark the 75th and final session of evening schools in Manchester for the present season. It will also be the occasion of the closing exercises which will be held in the High School assembly hall.

Principal A. N. Potter said today that about forty persons will receive certificates. He will make the presentations personally near the close of the program which will end with the singing of "Music in the Air" by the members of the classes.

The program opens with the salute to the American flag by all students and will be followed by the singing of "America Beautiful." Ten men from the foreign born classes will enact a play, "The First American Library." One of the principal parts portrayed will be that of Benjamin Franklin, the famous inventor, who founded the first library in this country.

This presentation will be followed by a series of eight tableaux by 18 women members of the school. These will be of a patriotic character and will deal with the various phases of the life of American women from the time of the Pilgrims to the present.

Selections by the High School orchestra and High School quartet will be followed by the awarding of pins to the seven pupils with a perfect attendance. This will be made for Orford Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution. Only 7 of the 87 persons to enroll at the start of the night school season, have attended every session to date.

BEGINS NEW CLASSES FOR VIOLINISTS

Leonard Eccellente, local violinist, has announced that he is prepared to take a number of new pupils of the violin. Mr. Eccellente gives special attention to beginners. He will also take advanced pupils, with a view to teaching them the latest approved methods in advanced violin instruction. Mr. Eccellente stresses the fact that only private instruction is given by him. He does not believe that the proper personal attention can be given to pupils in class instruction.

Leonard Eccellente has been heard in a considerable amount of solo work in local circles recently, having appeared at numerous banquets and at other social functions. His accompanying the senior choir at St. James' church on Sunday mornings has excited much favorable comment from listeners. He is at present arranging for radio broadcasts and for a limited number of engagements on the concert stage in various places throughout the state.

of what People Say about Plymouth

AMERICA'S LOWEST-PRICED FULL-SIZE CAR

FULL SIZE

WHEN people discuss Plymouth, quality is invariably the keynote of their conversation.

They say most complimentary things about its Chrysler smartness, its charm, its slender-profile radiator, its graceful "air-wing" fenders, its arched windows, its chromium-plate bowl-type lamps.

They comment highly on Plymouth's full-size dimensions, its richness and spaciousness, its wide, deep seats, its exceptional leg-room.

They refer glowingly to the powerful performance of Plymouth's 45 h. p. engine, of Chrysler "Silver-Dome" principle—its speed, its pick-up, its ability on hills, its smoothness, its quietness.

They speak of Plymouth's safety—of its full-size Chrysler weatherproof 4-wheel hydraulic brakes, its rugged full-size chassis, springs and axles. They praise Plymouth's amazing economy in fuel, oil and upkeep.

After all, it is only natural that people should talk more about Plymouth's fine qualities than they do about its low price—for Plymouth is, first and last, a motor car of intrinsic quality and value.

QUIMBY HEADS "Y" CAMPAIGN

Drive of County Organization to Be Held Next Friday and Saturday.

Clarence P. Quimby, chairman of the finance committee of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A. in the Manchester district, announces that the annual financial campaign of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A. will be held simultaneously over the entire county next week Friday, April 12 and 13. John H. Thompson of Farmington is general chairman of the campaign. In the Manchester area the campaign will be in charge of the district committee of the County Y. M. C. A. and a group of local canvassers with Mr. Quimby as chairman. The budget for the County Y. M. C. A. is $12,000. Two full time and two part time secretaries are employed. In addition provision is made in the budget for the annual field training of students in the town and county departments of Springfield College, which brings four student secretaries into the county for part time service.

11 Years Old.
The Hartford County Y. M. C. A. is closing eleven years of service to the town and country communities of this county, coming into being at the close of the war in 1918. During the present year its service has extended into 43 communities of the county. One important feature of the County Y. M. C. A. is its group work. There are now 42 groups in the county, ranging from work with 9-year-old boys to grown men. These groups are found in 28 communities.

John H. Thompson

Pretty Austrian Star to Appear in U. S.

Not many of Hollywood's moving picture luminaries come from Austria—but pretty Dina Gralla, leading comedienne of the Austrian screen, is shortly to make her film debut on this side of the water. She'll be introduced to the American public in the pictures "The Prince and the Dancer" and "Switchback."

Charles W. Holman

The youngest boys are organized as Friendly Indians, their activities based upon the Indian lore of New England. There are Friendly Indian groups in Wapping and Buckland. The Pioneers, boys of 12 and 13, base their activities upon the pioneering heroes of the covered wagon period. An interesting method of marking their advance is by filing notches on their club emblems as the old pioneer notched his gun. Pioneer groups in this district are in Wapping and Highland Park.

High school boys are organized in the widely-known Hi-Y club movement, of which the local Hi-Y club and the Torch club in the freshman group are a part. Other Hi-Y clubs associated with the Hartford County Y. M. C. A. are found in the Enfield, Glastonbury, Bloomfield, Simsbury and Southington High schools, and Suffield school. Lewis P. Lindsay of Suffield is in charge of this division of the County Y. M. C. A. Chester L. Robinson, Ray C. Pillsbury are local leaders. For employed boys and young men, special employed boys' clubs have been organized.

Junior Band.
A new venture was begun with the organization of a Junior Y. M. C. A. band in Marlborough during the year, under the direction of A. E. Lyman of Columbia. The band is composed of 22 boys and girls, and has played in Hebron, East Hampton and Manchester for special community functions, and at the State theater at the County Boys' Day in Hartford last December.

Two of the most successful community clubs of the county are affiliated with the Hartford County Y. M. C. A., the Highland Park and E. Berlin clubs.

Earl Parmelee of Windsor is chairman of the Field Service committee, which has general supervision of all group work. The athletic activities of the County Y. M. C. A. have grown rapidly under the direction of Harry N. Anderson of Hartford and a group of athletic commissioners including Louis Main of South Windsor, Hugh Greer of Glastonbury, W. A. Bailey of Plainville, Kermit Parker of

New Britain, Rev. V. L. Phillips of Kensington, George Backman of Southington, Allen Jacobson of Simsbury, S. J. Magill of Thompsonville, A. L. Randall of Broad Brook, T. K. Cureton, Jr., of Suffield, George Beer of Highland Park and J. E. Rand of Manchester.

Their activities include basketball, baseball, indoor and outdoor track, swimming and tennis. Three state championships this year have been won by teams of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A.—swimming, outdoor track and intermediate basketball. The teams winning these events being composed of athletes from Kensington, Enfield, Manchester, Suffield, South Windsor, Glastonbury, Southington and West Hartford.

Camp Woodstock

One of the important features of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A., well-known to Manchester residents, is Camp Woodstock, the summer camp conducted jointly with Toland and Windham County Y. M. C. A.s. Elmer T. Thiennes, executive secretary of the Hartford County Y. M. C. A., is camp director of the camp. The camp has a capacity of 120 boys. It operates for boys from July 5 to August 2; for special clubs, August 2 to 16; and for Windham County girls, August 16 to 30.

An interesting addition to its field of activities last summer was the work conducted among 200 negro students from the colleges in the South, who were employed on tobacco plantations in Buckland and other parts of the county. The North End Community branch of the Hartford Y. M. C. A. and the colored division of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A. co-operated in carrying on this service. This work brought national comment and included co-operation with the local churches, moving pictures, volley ball, library facilities and discussion groups. Similar activities will be carried on this year by the World Brotherhood committee of the County Y. M. C. A., composed of Charles W. Holman of Manchester, Paul E. Sessions and Rev. F. T. Cooke of Bristol, Dr. Brownell Gage of Suffield, and Charles C. Persiani of Southington.

Entertainment

The County Y. M. C. A. has also conducted an entertainment bureau for churches of the county; has supplied 37 speakers who have made 63 addresses to groups, high schools, churches and service clubs, conducted a free educational moving picture service, and acted as a bureau of vocational guidance.

The board of directors of the County Y. M. C. A. is composed of: Charles W. Holman, president; R. O. Clark, E. Berlin, vice-president; Calvin C. Bolles, South Windsor, treasurer; Ralph M. Grant, South Windsor, clerk; F. C. Bidwell of Bloomfield; Henry R. Burk of Enfield; Lawrence W. Case of Highland Park; Sherman W. Eddy of Avon; Malcolm Farmer of New Britain; Phillip Graham of Suffield; George F. Kase of Hartford; Francis S. Knox of Glastonbury; George R. Marsh of Bristol; Earl P. Parmelee of Windsor; Charles C. Persiani of Southington, and R. H. Phillips and John H. Thompson of Farmington.

Rev. Elmer T. Thiennes is the executive secretary of the association, having as his assistants Rev. Herbert H. Tompkins of Colchester and Leonard J. Black of Springfield. Miss Hazel S. Wipperf is in charge of the office, and Hector

Stewart is the student assistant from Springfield College.

THE MOTHER TONGUE

A vaudeville artist was singing "Baby Face," only he pronounced it "Bibby Face."

"This wasn't going at all well with his audience, so a brother performer told him to sing it in better English."

"Yes," he replied, "but you see, 'Baby Face' doesn't rhyme with the next line—'Take your plice.'"

"Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the judge.

Chicago, Ill., April 6.—A team of six-foot plus athletes from Athens, Tex., today successfully battled midsummer temperatures and the leggy Grove, Tenn., to go into the semi-final round of the National High School Basketball Tournament at the University of Chicago.

A temperature of 80 degrees—said to be the hottest April in Chicago in fifty years—had a visible effect on both teams, but the towering Athenians came through in a poorly-played contest. Both teams were sluggish in advancing the ball and time and again missed up easy shots which in preceding games were good for two points.

The East still had a chance to keep its present season reputation from total obliteration through the efforts of Brockton, Mass., High school which was into the semi-finals of the consolation tournament. This morning Brockton meets Wheatland, Wyoming, the team that eliminated Bristol from the consolation round.

College Grove, which the day before, eliminated the tournament favorite in Wheeling, W. Va., combatted not only the heat but Athens' stubborn defense and hard luck at connecting with the goal. The Tennessee champions got plenty of shots but twice did the ball drop through the net for a field goal.

The remainder of the points were by the free throw route, but the chances College Grove got at the basket were not as good as near the goal of from far down the court they were rushed by the rangy Texans ever following the ball.

In contrast the Texas state champions worked the ball in close where the Tompkins brothers and Summer would make their six feet and more of height count. But even the scoring Texans found their scoring ability hampered by the heat.

Bennie and John Tompkins teamed together to give Athens a 4 to 2 lead at the half, and in the second period Summer came through to roll up the advantage of 12 to 5. The third period, which ended 15 to 7, was the worst of the game, and most of the points on to the Neither team could hold on to the ball, pass or shoot. A changed lineup, however, sent Athens rapidly ahead in the last period.

Monteverde, At 60, Hopes to Win Pyle's Coast to Coast Marathon

BY LES CONKLIN

New York, April 3.—A. L. Monteverde, who competed in his first running race more than fifty years ago, hopes to win C. C. Pyle's coast-to-coast marathon this year.

Monteverde, sixty years old and a grandfather, will be among the starters when the bunion derby gets under way here on May 6, but will not be actuated by the impulse that will encourage the other contenders to drag their weary dogs along the trek to San Francisco. Monteverde seeks fame, not gold.

Just For Fun

"Grandpa" prizes his amateur standing highly and sees glory in the word "retire." "Just for the fun of it," he plans to complete the heart-rending, back-breaking, foot-blistering marathon from the towering skyscrapers of Manhattan to the Golden Gate, at the rate of fifty miles a day.

The aged athlete intends to pay his own expenses, and friends who have agreed to accompany him in an automobile will carry his supplies. When the other pavement pounders gather round "Cash and Carry," Pyle's free lunch wagon at the end of each day's jaunt, Monteverde will eat his own grub lest his amateur status become sullied by the taint of professionalism.

NO TRACK MEETS FOR GOOSE.

Washington's chances for getting some place in the American League race this year depend in no small part upon the arm of Goose Goslin. The Goose will hit, of course, and will assist in the manufacture of plenty of runs, but if he can't throw any better than he did for the major part of the campaign last year he will not be more runs than he can knock in.

Walter Johnson wasn't quite sure when he talked to him in Tampa that the Goose's arm was better.

"The boys on the club tell me that he was throwing well in the latter part of the season and he tells me that it is all right," Johnson said. But later reports have it that his arm is not strong and that he is trying to cultivate an underhand throw.

There has been somewhat of a mystery about the exact cause of his disabled wing last year. Bucky Harris said he wasn't certain and that Goose never had told him. There was the popular story that he had thrown his arm trying to show some southern college boys how to put the shot.

Johnson made a rather significant remark in this connection when we were talking to him. "I'm going to make Goslin nurse his arm until we get ready to start the season," he said. "And I'll tell you one thing—if we hit any town on the way north where there is a track meet going on, Goslin will not be allowed near the place!"

An Expensive Ornament.

It must have been a pain in the neck to Colonel Jake Ruppert when Miller Huggins announced that $125,000 worth of young shortstop from California wouldn't do and that Durocher would work in place of Lyn Lary. "But Huggins had his way when he said that young Lary had a lot to learn about fielding and that there wasn't a place for him to learn on a championship club.

Huggins said the main defects in the young fellow's mechanics were in taking a ground ball and that he got a little off balance every time he made a throw.

There is no doubt that a $125,000 youngster would have had some box office value, but there is more color in "Mouthy" Durocher than there ever will be in Lary. Durocher is one of the cocky type that arrives only once in a decade.

It might be disputed that Lary is a $125,000 ball player, but the Yanks put out that much dough for Lary and Reese, and they turned back Reese to his original owners without even giving him a trial. So der good Colonel Ruppert figures that the youngster on his bench set him back all those grand.

The Cubs Visit The Mexican Rebels

When the Chicago Cubs were at El Paso, Tex., for an exhibition game recently, Kiki Cuyler, Hack Wilson, Fred Blake and Guy Bush had to pay their respects to the Mexican rebels across the river at Juarez. So they journeyed over, against orders that they should stay on the American side of the border. An enterprising photographer snapped these for NEA Service.

CHICAGO TOURNAMENTS.

The defeat of Bristol, Naugatuck and a host of other Eastern high school teams in the national tournament conducted by the University of Chicago in the Windy City, only goes to prove that school in the lesser populated sections of the country take their basketball more seriously. They may not have the facilities, but they do have the spirit, and, after all, that is what counts.

Take the teams from Joes, Colorado, and Heath, Kentucky, for instance. They didn't even have a wooden floor to play their games on and had to learn basketball on hard-rolled dirt courts. Just think of it! Can you imagine any city boy showing any such interest in sports under those conditions? In these instances the mountaineers from Kentucky and Colorado have learned the value of passwork; in other words, team-work. They found it too difficult to dribble on the dirt courts and gave all their efforts to perfecting passwork.

The result has been to improve their ability almost beyond measure. And when they met opposition on regulation basketball floors, their teamwork and uncanny eyes developed from untiring practice has served to carry them over the top to victory in most instances. Here in the East where teams have everything made as comfortable as possible for them, coaches have no end of trouble in trying to eliminate dribbling and individualism.

The East can well afford to take a few pages from the history of the West in basketball. The most amazing part of the brilliant playing of the southern and western teams from the rural sections is the fact that they learned the fine points of the game to such an extent that they make less fouls than their haughty rivals from the cities. It all goes to prove that boys who are given every opportunity possible do not take proper advantage nor show appreciation.

The present tournament at Chicago, the eleventh of its kind, is going to be discontinued after this year as revealed exclusively in this column a short time ago (thanks to C. P. Quimby who furnished the information) and in connection with this, it is interesting to read what the Chicago Tribune has to say in its widely read column, "In the Wake of the News," it follows:

"What may prove the last preparatory basketball tournament with logical claim to national recognition is being held this week at Bartlett gymnasium. For a decade, it had been looked forward to by high school athletes as the climax of their endeavor. No other event draws such a wide array of list comprising nearly all states in the Union.

"Even Indiana, which by a rule of its state high school association does not permit its teams to compete, sends coaches of all leading views to watch the play, either to criticize or to learn, according to their viewpoint. Such is the event which may be singing its swan song.

"The Wake will regret the passing from our sport calendar of such competition. We always feel that it is beneficial and instructive for athletes of one section to meet athletes of other sections on equal terms. It not only gives them experience, but it also gives them respect for valorous opponents. It tends to wipe out provincialism, if provincialism may be used in this sense.

"We have no quarrel with the motives which impel high school principals to frown on such tournaments. They contend this event stresses athletics to too great a degree, that it imposes a physical strain on young boys and that it takes them from their class rooms for a week, although the tourney is timed to meet many vacation periods. If the reasoning is sound, the objections are more or less valid. On the other hand, we wonder whether there are not as many objections to the contemplated cure as to the disease, if it be a disease."

While the machine may have done much to strengthen his stomach muscles, it didn't enable him to retain his title. Kilbane gave him a decisive thrashing in 20 rounds at Vernon, Calif.

This, of course, was quite some time before the era in which Abe's very presence at any sporting event caused the Wischelmers to wag their heads and murmur something about "in the bag."

DID YOU KNOW THAT—

Earl Combs cracked Myles Thomas over the left eye in batting practice. . . . And there were seven stitches in it for Thomas. . . . And, a severe shock for Miller Huggins. . . . Reynolds, the White Sox outfielder, is the fastest man in baseball. . . . They say the American League ball players say that Ehms, the A's pitcher, doctors the ball. . . . But that he uses two gloves. . . . And they can never get a look at the one with the works in it. . . . Paul Seull, Penn's All-American fullback, quit the baseball squad this spring. . . . And is going out for the golf team. . . . It's a good thing for the Cleveland Indians that there aren't so many good southpaw pitchers in the league. . . . Their club is loaded down with left-hand hitters.

RISKO SURPRISES OTTO VON PORAT

Cleveland Baker Up sets Dope in Beating Norwegian Giant at Boston on Decision.

Boston, April 6.—Johnny Risko who had been relegated to the ranks of the "also rans," today was again a power to consider among the leading contenders for the heavyweight title. As a result of what was probably the biggest fight upset of the year, the Cleveland baker boy took a decision from Otto Von Porat, Norwegian giant, after ten rounds at the Boston Garden last night.

Risko's victory was as unexpected as it was decisive. Before the bout the former Norwegian Royal Guard had been quoted as a 2 to 1 favorite to continue his long and impressive string of victories. Out of 25 starts, Von Porat had won 23, most of them by the knockout route.

Having been defeated in the same ring by Jimmy Maloney and Ernie Scaaf, and stopped in New York by Max Schmeling, German Sensation, Risko was not considered a menace. But he came back to left hand the Norwegian for ten rounds, taking eight of them by a wide margin.

Only in two rounds, the seventh and tenth, did Von Porat come near making it interesting for the Cleveland boy, and got an even break.

The famous right hand Von Porat was supposed to possess was seldom used. Throughout most of the bout he kept it uselessly at his side. Although Risko gave way to both reach and height, he was the aggressor throughout the melee, and proved superior on the defense.

Both entered the ring at the same weight, both tipping the scales at 192 pounds. Johnny Brasill was the third man in the ring.

A WORLD RECORD IN THE MAKING

Here's a remarkable action photograph of the finish of the 100-yard dash at the recent Southern Method relay at Dallas, Tex., showing Claude Bracey, Rice Institute sprinter, breasting the tape in world record-making performance of 9.4 seconds. Bracey's run hardly will be recognized as official because of the fact that a stiff wind was at his back while he thundered down the stretch. Simpson of Ohio State, who finished third, is shown at the right. Bracey is at the extreme left.

CRAVES A FIGHT

North End Man Toys With Opponent to Win 100 to 66; Plays Open Game Against Him; Only Five Left in Field.

Only five players remain in the battle for the town pocket billiard championship with the elimination of Sam Houston last night by Bill Kaminsky, pride of the north end, by a score of 100 to 66.

In the top bracket, Johnny Gardner and John McMenemy are marking time for their semi-final match next week Tuesday or Wednesday. The winner of this match (Gardner is a top-heavy favorite) will play in the finals. His opponent will probably be Johnny Bensch or Billy Kaminsky. However, Bensch will have to put out Walter Dunn to meet Kaminsky in the semi-finals. They play at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

The Kaminsky-Houston match, last night was one of those wide-open affairs marked by indifference and shooting on the part of both men. Houston was off form and Kaminsky took full advantage of this by spreading the balls about the table. Sam would get a few and miss. Kaminsky usually got the bulk of the remainder. Kaminsky scratched and seven times to twice for Houston.

The rack by rack total follows:

'ONE ROUND' HOGAN ASKS FILM DAMAGES

San Francisco, April 4.—George F. Hogan, once known as "One Round Hogan," is "humiliated and mortified."

And so he has on file today in Superior Court a suit for $750,000 damages against a motion picture company and sundry "John Does" for producing the motion picture "One Round Hogan."

Hogan's complaint recites that between 1910 and 1915 he gained his "One Round Hogan" sobriquet by quick knockouts in the prize ring. In 1915, however, he "reformed," married, raised a family and wanted to forget his prize fighting career. And then came the movie bearing his now distasteful moniker as a title, and "showing pugilists stripped of the waist pumping each other and knocking each other into unconsciousness."

All of which humiliation "ruined his health and held him to the ridicule of his friends," Hogan alleged that it will take $750,000 to soothe him.

AMARANTH CELEBRATES SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY

Many Grand Officers Present at Meeting in Temple—Unusual Entertainment.

Chapman Court, Order of Amaranth, celebrated its seventh anniversary last evening. Several grand officers were present, also guests from Hartford, West Hartford and New Britain. After the business session, which included initiation, the party adjourned to the banquet hall and enjoyed an entertainment put on by the men. Harry Armstrong and Paul Volquardson, both well known tenors, gave the program which represented the rehearsal for an imaginary minstrel by the Amaranth. The jokes were chiefly on the male members and were written by Mr. Armstrong who apparently was seeking Mr. Volquardson's approval. They sang solos and duets and the final number was the most amusing of all for here Mr. Volquardson appeared ready for bed and perched on Mr. Armstrong's knee. When asked if he wanted a bedtime story he called-

GAS STOV

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

It's the little things that make some people go up in the air the quickest.

VETER GOLF

OUCH inevitably follows PAIN. Even in letter golf. Par is eight and one solution is on another page.

Letter Golf puzzle grid with words PAIN and OUCH.

THE RULES. 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

2-You change only one letter at a time. 3-You must have a complete word of common usage for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4-The order of letters cannot be changed.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The Goofygoose soared "way up high and Clowny shouted, "Me, oh my! This cabin is a classy one. We would not ask for more. There's room for everyone of us, so no one needs to start a fuss. We all can sit and wonder just where he is leading for."

SENSE and NONSENSE

A Football Story The story is going around about a football player in a small Connecticut college who was unusually dumb. To the surprise of everyone he passed all of his work, including a special examination in chemistry.

One In Every Office A dame I would like To put out of biz: The one who 'phones "Guess who this is?"

Eph Snow "Where there's a will there's a sore toe," said Eph Snow.

Wife: "Before we were married you said mother could stay with us whenever she pleased."

Judge—And what are your grounds for divorce? Young Bride—Harry snores. Judge—How long have you been married? Y. B.—Two weeks. Judge—Granted; he shouldn't snore.

Ambrose loved a very Modern Girl. She was his fiancée. One day he got a good idea and sent her a little present. The Very Modern Girl thought this gift a very charming little ornament, but knew not what it was. "What is it Ambrose?" she asked. "It's made of gold, but it's not a brooch or a ring or a bracelet. I've never seen anything like it."

Young Lady—I want a pair of squeaky slippers, size 10. Shoe Clerk—Squeaky slippers? Who for? Young Lady—For father, so my George can tell when he's coming down the hall.

"Heaven will protect the working girl," the old song says, but what we want to know is who is going to protect the poor fish the working girl is working.

Amos Jackson entered a store and asked the clerk to show him some washboards. Those that the clerk showed him were lightly constructed and Amos asked to see some heavier ones.

"Yo see," said Amos, "de las' one Ah bought heah, made de fourth dat mah wife done bus' over mah laid, an' Ah can't stan' for dat wicked expense!"

"An Example
 to us
ALL"

HER son was a busy railroad man. One would hardly have imagined his having much time for sentiment.

Yet when his will was opened it contained as fine a tribute to a man's mother as we have ever read. In it he established, as a memorial to her, a home for other mothers who, less fortunate, have no thoughtful sons to look out for them.

Another tribute was discovered in his will. To make sure that this memorial to his mother would be properly administered, he appointed a company like ours as co-executor and trustee of his estate.

In this way he recognized the fitness of a trust company or bank to carry on faithfully the business side of the project.

Sentiment prompts a man to make his will, and good judgment leads him to name a bank or trust company to settle his estate.

His Tribute

"My Mother represented to me all I really had in life, which I did not entirely realize until her death. It was always my desire to be financially able to give my Mother every comfort in life, which was the mainspring of my efforts. All of my life up to the time of her death, my Mother and myself lived together, and I look back to the days of my earliest recollection of anything, to the unselfish devotion of my Mother to her children, her Christian fortitude and patience through most trying times, to her wonderful example to us all, and my worship of her as one apart from the world around her. To be with my Mother was to recognize a supreme influence; indescribable. It is to my Mother, therefore—to her memory—I wish to establish this memorial—"

Many men in our city have so named us in their wills. We fully appreciate the responsibility imposed upon us. We have the organization, the willingness and the experience this service calls for.
