

80 LOCAL YOUNG MEN GO TO JOBS WITH TEL. & TEL.

Pick and Shovel Recruits in Amazing Numbers Work Into Good Places Within a Year.

Picks and shovels are taking the place of wedding bells in "breaking up that old gang of mine." Concentration points around Manchester that once buzzed like hornets' nests are now conspicuous by their tranquillity even to their lonesomeness. Something strange has happened. Where are John, Tom, Bill and all the gang?

The answer may be found by looking over the payroll of the Long Lines Telephone and Telegraph company which operated all over the United States and in foreign countries as well. More than eighty young Manchester men are employed today in Division 1 of this company, which operates all over New England in addition to New York and New Jersey.

Many of them are boys who once used to hang around the streets doing nothing from morn till night. If a former Manchester man should return to town and search for old pals at the favorite "hangout," he might think that war had been declared. High school graduates as well as former mill workers are included in the Manchester's contribution to the working personnel of the A. T. and T., as it is commonly called.

The Job Santa Claus. Harold D. Puter of Gerard street, Manchester Green, is the answer to why so many Manchester boys have taken up this line of work. Mr. Puter is general conduit foreman and has the supervision of all of Division 1. Since a year ago for month, Mr. Puter has given work to no less than 132 Manchester young men. But let Mr. Puter tell the story in his own words:

"There are today some seventy-five young men of Manchester on our payroll whom it was my pleasure to engage. The very first of these men being selected from Manchester is because boys from this town have invariably made good. I have a list of some 45 additional Manchester men to whom I hope to give employment during the summer months. Most of these are men who are either married or have some other home connection which prevents them from leaving town.

Only One Quit. "Out of the 132 Manchester men whom I have had occasion to employ since last April, only one quit because he found the work too hard. And only three were discharged as unsatisfactory. That is, a mighty small percentage to join the ranks of the 'Faw Down Gang'.

Warning by Telephone, Residents Carried to Safety by Autos and Trains.

Snow Lake, Ark., April 23.—Nearly 1,000 persons had been washed out of house and home today as the result yesterday of the crumbling of a part of the Laconia Circle levee.

The wild clanging of farm bells and the insistent ring of rural telephones spread the alarm of the advancing wall of water so quickly that there was no loss of life and nearly all the livestock was saved.

The break in the levee was attributed to the pressure of the backwaters which have been banked against it for weeks. An area of nearly 13,000 acres was inundated.

25 POUND COD FOR PRESIDENT

Boston Chamber of Commerce to Present Fish to Nation's Chief Executive.

A 25-pound codfish is to be presented to President Herbert Hoover tomorrow. The fish, a gift of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, will be delivered by a party of 35 members of the Boston Chamber which leave here tonight on the start of a 7,500-mile journey across the country and back, under the banner "What Can We Do for You?"

SENATE AGAIN SLAPS HOOVER; IGNORES BILL

Washington, April 23.—Administering the second legislative rebuff to President Hoover within two days, the Senate Immigration committee today killed two resolutions for repeal of the National Origins Act.

CURRY IS NEW HEAD OF TAMMANY HALL

Commissioner of Records and Fifth District Head is New Chief.

New York, April 23.—John F. Curry, commissioner of records and leader of the Fifth Assembly District, was today elected leader of Tammany Hall to succeed George W. Olvany, who resigned on March 15.

District leaders, meeting in the inner sanctum of the Tammany society, voted him the victory after an hour's session while outside the locked door a crowd of 500 persons awaited eagerly for the decision on the successor to George W. Olvany. Everyone who is anyone in Tammany was there to give the new leader an ovation.

The fact that an actual vote was taken indicated that Curry did not have as smooth sailing as his backers anticipated. So confident were they that he had it "in the bag" that, before the meeting opened they expressed the belief he would be chosen by unanimous resolution.

DIRT ROADS BILL FINALLY DEFEATED

Beaten by Vote of 152-97 in State Legislature at Today's Hearing.

Hartford, April 23.—The Lower House of the State Legislature had its "dirt roads" fight today, and the rural communities saw their representatives go down to defeat after a hard struggle by a vote of 152 to 97.

The fight started when the "dirt roads" bill came up. Mrs. Corinne Alsop, of Avon, disappeared the committee's favorable report on the bill.

After the amendment had been swept aside by the vote of 152 to 97, the regular bill was put up and the House passed it with but trifling opposition.

DANGER OF FLOODS HEREABOUTS, PASSED

Boston, April 23.—Sunshine, for the first time in nearly a week, covered New England today and the cessation of rain combined with generally low temperatures decreased the danger of floods.

PLANS BEAUTY SPOT AT FAR SOUTH END

Park Board to Combine Evergreen Shrubs and Roses at Hackmatack St. Triangle.

One undertaking of the Manchester Park Board this summer promises to produce a thing of beauty that will give to those who enter and leave Manchester by South Main street a pleasant impression of the town.

The plan is to plant 1,000 Japanese spurs an evergreen shrub that spreads out over the ground and in a short time builds a solid green background, where grass will not grow.

MR. & MRS. McDUFF HAVE SILVER ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. William McDuff of Lilac street celebrated the 25th anniversary of their marriage Saturday evening by inviting 40 of their friends and relatives from Bristol Terryville, Easthampton, Windsor, West Hartford, East Hartford and this town.

After the amendment had been swept aside by the vote of 152 to 97, the regular bill was put up and the House passed it with but trifling opposition.

GIRLS FRIENDLY HAS REAL MOTHERS NIGHT

Nearly a Hundred Young and Older Women Foregather at St. Mary's Parish House.

St. Mary's Girls Friendly society entertained the mothers of the girls at a supper last night at the parish house. Between 80 and 100 were present and enjoyed a spread served under the direction of Miss Helen Crawford and her assistants. It consisted of baked ham, scalloped potatoes, cabbage and pineapple salad, pickles, relishes, rolls, coffee, jelly with fruit and whipped cream.

The decorations were in yellow and orchid; yellow forsythia flowers in these colors, made the tables springlike and beautiful. The decorations were in charge of Miss Hazel Robinson.

The reciter, Rev. J. S. Neill, said a few words in commendation of the work of the society. Little Mary Law gave a recitation entitled "Mother," which was well received. Miss Evaline Pentland spoke for the daughters and welcomed the mothers. She expressed appreciation for their kindly interest and touched on the aims and ideals of the Girls Friendly society.

Mrs. Ethel Davis made a touching response in behalf of the mothers. "There is no friend on earth like mother," she said. No matter what her station in life a girl always clings to mother. One who has no mother will always find a friend, one in whom she can confide, in the Girls Friendly society.

Rev. Alfred Clark also complimented the girls for their work. After this adjournment was made to the hall upstairs where a minstrel show was put on with Miss Agatha Wright as interlocutor, Miss Dorothy Norris and Miss Violet Madden as "end men." Mary Law sang "The Rose Tree" and Miss Wright and Miss Madden sang a duet. Miss Jessie Morgan gave several dance numbers. Several girls Friendly Society songs were sung.

REV. H. R. BRENNAN GETS HARTFORD PASTORATE

Anticipated Removal of Minister and Wife, Former Miss Pollard, Is Assured.

Friends in Manchester of Mrs. Harold R. Brennan, the former Miss Mabel Pollard and two years ago director of religious education at the South Methodist church, will be pleased to hear that Mr. Brennan has been appointed as pastor of the North Methodist Episcopal church in Hartford, as it was indicated some days ago that he might be.

Rev. Mr. Brennan comes to the Hartford church from Tilton, N. H., where he has been pastor for three years. Tilton is the seat of a large boys' school and Mr. Brennan has been doing splendid work there among the young people. They have made a multitude of friends in Tilton who will regret their departure.

Mrs. Pollard made many warm friends during her stay in Manchester and they will be glad to know she and Mr. Brennan will be located in the nearby city.

Committee's Action

The committee's action came on a motion to "indefinitely postpone" consideration of a resolution by Senator Walsh (D) of Mont., and another by Senator Nye (R) of North Dakota, for repeal of the National Origins Act. Senator Deed (R) of Pa. led the opposition while Senator Nye led the debate in favor of the resolutions.

On the vote, Reed was joined by Senators Keyes (R) of N. H., Hartford (R) of West Va., and Harris (D) of Ga. In opposing consideration of the resolutions while Nye was supported only by Senator Johnson (R) of Calif., chairman of the committee. Senator Gould (R) of Maine, was present but did not vote.

Not a Surprise

The rebuff to President Hoover's recommendation was not unexpected. When the President pleaded for repeal of the new quota law, it was known on Capitol Hill that he had named a Republican Congressional leaders. While the message was being written, rumor had it the President told the Legislators he would not mention the immigration law.

The committee's action came within 24 hours of a similar rebuff to the President by the Senate agriculture committee. The latter reported the Farm Bill containing a debenture plan right on top of a presidential message favoring the plan.

COLUMBIA

Mrs. Abram Turner of West street died suddenly Saturday evening after an illness of a few hours. Mrs. Turner was 48 years old.

Miss Edith Sawyer of Brooklyn has come to Columbia to spend the summer at The Pasture. Miss Sawyer is staying for the present with Mrs. Natch.

Miss Jean Natch of New York has been spending a week with her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Natch.

Mr. and Mrs. James Grimm of Bridgeport spent the week-end at the home of Mrs. Grimm's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Collins.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Lyman of Plainville spent the week-end at the home of Mrs. Lyman's father, James Utley.

Clayton Hunt went Saturday evening to Brigham's Tavern in Mansfield Depot to the banquet of the Service Relations Council, formed of those connected with the Willimantic Post Office. Mr. Hunt has the Star Route between Columbia and Willimantic.

Miss Margaret Hutchins was the leader of the C. E. Society Sunday evening. Her topic was "The wonders of the Bible."

A demonstration by a representative of the David Baking Powder Co. was held at the hall Friday afternoon. Cakes and frostings being made. There were about 24 ladies present.

There were 12 tables in play at the recent whist party at the hall. Miss Eva Collins won first prize for ladies and Mr. Clayton Hunt for men. Consolation prizes were won by Mrs. Junie Scudlers and Howard Squiers. Mrs. Ethel Blakely, Mrs. Elsie Collins and Miss Myrtle Collins were the hostesses. There will be another whist Friday evening, May 3, at which time Mrs. Cora Hutchins and Miss Margaret Hutchins will be in charge.

Monday evening a surprise party was held in honor of the 21st birthday of Miss Harle Field, at her home north of the Green. Friends from Willimantic and Columbia were present. Among those present was the twin sister of Miss Field, Mrs. Lucine Henssquin of Willimantic. Miss Field received many pretty gifts.

COLPITTS TO BE MAY 30 ORATOR

Pastor of South M. E. Church to Deliver Memorial Day Address Here.

With every member of the Permanent Memorial Day Committee in attendance, matters pertaining to the Memorial Day celebration were disposed of swiftly and smoothly at a meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, last night.

The committee accepted the resignation of Thomas Murphy from the Spanish War Veterans section, and appointed Jere Maher in his place. Mr. Maher's reason for resigning was that he was going to California and would not be in town on Memorial Day.

Charles E. House, chairman of the speakers committee, announced that he had appointed C. P. Quimby and Alfred Howes as members of his committee. He also reported that Rev. R. Colpitts had been engaged to deliver the Memorial Day address at Cheney Hall.

An invitation from Rev. J. Stuart Neill, to attend the services at St. Mary's church on Memorial Day was accepted.

Jared Pearl was appointed as honorary marshal of the parade.

A motion was made and passed to decorate the Quarryville and Bolton cemeteries and also hold the ceremonies at Gould's Pond on South Main street on Sunday.

May Incorporate.

Chairman E. L. G. Hohenhalt, Jr., was authorized to appoint a committee to draw up a set of by-laws for the organization and to also appoint a committee to consider the advisability of incorporating the Permanent Memorial Day Committee so that it may control the annual amount appropriated for its use by the town and spend the appropriation under its own direction, the surplus to revert into a fund created by the committee. This fund would be used to assist ageing members of the various patriotic societies.

Letters and invitations to the town's organizations asking for police protection, etc., and inviting participation in the Memorial Day services are being sent out this week.

The following were appointed chairman of the committees in charge at a meeting held last year: Flower committee, Wilbur Loveland; speakers committee, Charles E. House; school children, John Jensen; music, Michael McDonald; transportation committee, Frank Ingraham; printing, George E. Rix; secretary of the committee, George E. Rix.

Another meeting of the Permanent Memorial Day Committee in the Chamber of Commerce rooms, at 8 o'clock, D. S. T. next Monday evening.

GENERAL MOTORS TRIBE GOES ON SPRING PARADE

Bright and Shining, With Band in Van, New Autos Show Themselves to Town.

The "General Motor Family" had a parade at 12 o'clock, but starting at the turnpike, it was late in getting underway and it was just 12 o'clock when the string of bright and shining cars turned from Center street into Chestnut. It took a very little time, however, to make the trip to the mills. There the cars slowed down and went on formal parade.

There were little cars, big cars, and medium size cars. There were trucks, coupes, sedans, roadsters and runabouts.

At the head of the parade, riding in a truck, was the South Manchester High School band, leading a way on their merry jaunt. Just like a circus band only better. Down Chestnut street, to Forest, to Elm and then back to Hartford road to Main street paraded the cars and finally away on "over north".

Some were dressed up for the occasion, with flying ribbons and banners. Some evidently took the position that they were so good looking they needed no make-up.

TRAIN YOUR OWN MEN SAYS BIG OIL MAN

know how all our important employees behave.

Boss Knows His Men.

"You watch what they do after hours?" he was asked.

"Oh, we have no spying system or anything like that," he replied.

"But it is surprising how much the boss of any big corporation knows of his key men. You can generally tell the pace at which any of your men are living. I am often surprised to read of big bank thefts. Bank presidents must be blind sometimes if they do not know where a man has been living at a $20,000 salary has been living at a $20,000 pace. The bank officials should have known that in advance."

Discussing executive ability, Mr. Doherty made the assertion that "in business there should be no quick decisions—at any rate very few."

"Quick decisions are usually expensive," he said. "The business man should be so planned and thought out so that nearly every decision would be made long in advance. These hustle bustle decisions are not an indication of a good executive. Once in a while when someone suddenly builds next door to you, or something like that, a prompt decision has to be made. But not often."

Doherty declared he was opposed to "catch as catch can" methods of employing men and equally opposed to the sudden discharging of employees. He said time was when the public utilities companies were much like the railroads; they didn't care how they treated the public.

"Today, however, no business is better conducted than the public utility business," he asserted. "I have long stressed the necessity of courtesy on the part of my employees."

"I think employees who deal with the public are much more polite than they were years ago. The American public did not demand courtesy years ago but now they want 100 per cent."

Educated Himself

Mr. Doherty comes from a family of scholars, although he himself left school at the age of 12 "to see what he could do in the world." He obtained his education by borrowing books, talking to people and by practical application and experience. He was the type who "rowed his own boat," as he expressed it to me. He became known as a fighter and a crusader in the oil business. He is self-taught and is known as one of the keenest mathematicians and chemists in the industries in which he is associated.

He started his career as an office boy in the Columbus (Ohio) Gas Company, advancing through various positions until finally he became manager of gas, electric and traction companies in Madison, Wis., St. Paul, Minn., San Antonio, Texas, Denver, Colo., and 25 other cities. He made a tremendous fortune in Wall street, New York, where he owns dozens of valuable parcels of real estate. He is now head not only of the Cities Service Corporation but of Henry L. Doherty & Co., bankers and operators of public utilities corporations.

"Who's Who in America," says of him: "Mr. Doherty is recognized as one of the leaders in America in gas and electric, arts and industries. He is patentee of many combustion processes and apparatus an originator of many standard practices."

Mr. Doherty is a member of many scientific and engineering societies. He is also a member of clubs in Columbus, Toledo, Lincoln, Neb., Kansas City, St. Paul and Denver. He is an outstanding figure in the gas and electric light world and has made a big name for himself in Wall street. He has been in the gas business for thirty years with thirty or more patents to his credit but he informed International News Service today that he will be back on the job in his New York office "in about three weeks."

ABOUT TOWN

The next meeting of the Trinity Post Nobis Grands Association will be held at Odd Fellows' hall, Glastonbury, May 1.

Twenty-five tables were filled with whist players at the Buckland-Parent Teacher Association gathering last night. The first prize, $2.50 in kind, was won by Mrs. William Schlegel, Jr., and J. F. Risley. Second prizes were won by Miss Anna Callard and Edward Stein; consolation, Miss Elsie Bingham and Oscar Strong. The contest was served home-made cake and coffee. Dancing followed to music by Case's orchestra. The Ways and Means committee announced another whist in two weeks.

North Methodist Ladies Aid will conduct their spring rummage sale at the Buckland building, corner North Main and North School streets, on Friday afternoon and evening. Donations of articles for the sale will be called for on Thursday. If notification is given to Mrs. Walter Shipman, Mrs. Henry Stanton, Mrs. W. J. Wheaton, Mrs. Julia Chapman, Mrs. W. E. Hibbard.

The Hartford county monthly meeting of American Legionnaires and auxiliaries will be held Sunday, April 23 at 3 o'clock at the parish house of Trinity Episcopal church on Main street, Wethersfield.

The Ladies Aid society of the Second Congregational church will meet tomorrow afternoon from 2 to 5 at the Manchester Community clubhouse.

Rev. F. J. Creeger, formerly pastor of the Methodist church in Hazardville and well known to the young people in this area interested in Epworth League work, has been transferred to the church at Middletown by the New York East conference.

A whist will be given under the auspices of the Children of Mary at St. James' hall tomorrow evening.

The regular meeting of the Center church Women's Federation, which would ordinarily be held Thursday afternoon, will be omitted this week on account of the Fathers' and Mothers' banquet at the church tomorrow evening.

Temple Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold its regular sessions at the Masonic Temple tomorrow evening.

Alvin L. Brown, chairman of the Eighth District School board, today drew up contracts with the teachers in the district. They will all be invited to return. There are thirty-three of the contracts. Teachers in closing those of all the schools in the North School street school and the Hollister street school and two special teachers. In about ten days it is expected that the signed contracts will be returned. So far as known none of the teachers contemplates leaving.

Something new in the line of entertainments in the form of a musical sketch entitled "The Truth Teller" will be presented by the Dramatic committee at the regular meeting of the Swedish Lutheran church Luther League, at 8 o'clock Friday evening. Those taking part in the sketch are: Elsie Berggren, Beatrice Johnson, Norma Soderberg and Evelyn Anderson. The speaker will not be announced beforehand. Miss Helen Berggren is the leader "of the evening and also chairman of the committee in charge. Refreshments will be served, as usual and a social hour held at the culmination of the program.

Troops 2, 4, 6 and 9, Boy Scouts, will meet at St. James' school, St. Mary's church, South Methodist church and Community Club, respectively, at 7:15 o'clock tonight.

The Highland Park Boys' Club will hold a public setback at the Community clubhouse, at 8:15 o'clock tonight. The usual prizes will be awarded and refreshments served.

For the convenience of taxpayers who cannot reach the tax office in the Municipal building during the day the office will be open until 8 o'clock this evening. This morning's mail brought over 100 checks to the collector. Tax payments which were rather slow in the early part of the month, are becoming more brisk.

Town Clerk Samuel Turkington finds that an exceptionally small number of dogs have been licensed this year as compared with last year. The dog population, estimated at 1,200 would seem to be on the decline, as only 490 have been licensed. There is only another week left. The town clerk's office will be open until 8 o'clock tonight to give those who have not as yet licensed their dogs an opportunity to do so.

Park Board employees have been cleaning up the grounds in the rear of the municipal building, doing some grading and replacing some shrubbery that had died. They have also reseeded the lot owned by the government at the northeast corner of East Center and Main streets.

Recent reports from Mexico indicate that General Escobar, though proclaimed president by the rebels, is choosing to run again.

REVISION EXPERT FOR OUR ASSEMBLY

in other towns the selectmen would set the control.

The House today passed bills from its calendar as follows:

An act providing that osteopaths must be examined before a board of osteopathic examiners before receiving state license; giving the Stamford Small Claims Court jurisdiction over claims to $75, instead of $35 as at present; establishing a Town Court in Orange; giving the Public Utilities Commission authority to order highway traffic halted before proceeding across grade crossings at dangerous points.

Favorable Reports

Among favorable reports in the House today were: Creating a commission to investigate the need for a new bridge between Hartford and East Hartford; defining the rate of successful taxes; providing for the East Hartford's municipal divisions; changing the name of Strawberry Hill avenue, Stamford, to Strawberry avenue; exempting property of G. A. R. posts from taxation; authorizing Warren to borrow money from the state to issue school bonds; a number of West Haven charter amendments, concerning tax collector's salary, salary of the town clerk, providing that collector shall act also as collector for the town, and a number of other amendments concerning a fire commissioner, validating the Allington fire district organization, and providing pay for the selectmen's clerk; authorizing East Lyme to establish parking lots; amending Middletown's charter concerning the city school district; authorizing Orange to establish building lines; providing a chief engineer, and first and second assistants in Naugatuck's fire department; authorizing Danbury to issue $1,000,000 in water bonds. The bill being passed at once under suspended rules.

The Senate passed the following from its calendar: Providing the basis of state aid to towns for schools shall be on average tax income, dividing the towns into two groups: those with incomes over $55,000, and those below; incorporating the Wakesma Title & Real Estate Co., of Fairfield; authorizing Danbury and Bethel Gas & Electric Company to increase its capital to $2,000,000; empowering the state treasurer to impose a 25 per cent penalty on persons who fail to pay taxes providing that the grand lists of towns shall include tax exempt properties when the borrowing power of the towns is determined; exempting Greenwich Boys' Club from taxation up to $150,000; exempting the Greenwich Y. W. C. A. from taxes up to $100,000; providing that small loan companies must reduce legal interest rates on loans up to $300 from 3 1-2 per cent a month or 42 per cent a year, to 2 1-2 a month or 30 per cent a year.

Favorable Reports

Favorable reports in the Senate today follow:

Increasing the Hartford Water Board's powers; amending the Waterbury charter providing all transfers from department to department must be done by the administrator, some now being made by the board of finance; providing for Waterbury sewer construction; authorizing the public works in the first tax district; authorizing Waterbury to establish city planning and a board of five for that purpose.

Unfavorable reports in the Senate follow:

Providing a reduction in the bill board tax; providing no bill board be erected outside the commercial district of city or town; giving Waterbury's police board the powers now vested with the Board of Public Safety; providing a pension system for Waterbury widows of policemen; authorizing Farmington to take water from the Farmington river.

HOUSE PEEVED OVER SENATE VOTE ON FEES

of Iowa, chairman of the House committee.

"If the Senate passed the debenture plan we will kill it in conference," asserted Rep. Aswell (D) of Ia.

"If we are going to have farm relief the debenture plan must be defeated," said Rep. Williams (R) of Ill., one of five authors of the House bill.

Meantime administration leaders in the Senate were attempting to rally votes against the debenture plan, which was included as an optional measure in the McNary bill.

Watson's Views.

"I feel certain that the Senate, as well as the House, will follow the president's suggestions, and estimate the so-called debenture plan from farm legislation," said Senator Watson of Indiana, Republican leader of the Senate.

Watson said he also expected a motion to be made to insert the equalization tax in the farm bill "for the purpose of disturbing some of us Republicans." He will personally make the motion to strike out the debenture.

There was no indication, however, that friends of the export-cropers of surplus agricultural crops would receive a bonus of one half the tariff upon exports—would drop it.

Some organizations throughout the country, fearful that the gigantic co-operative movement attempted to be set up under the so-called "Hoover plan" of farm relief would destroy their business, have swung in line for it.

NOON STOCKS

New York, April 23.—Industrial stocks were ready to resume their brilliant upward march at the sound of the opening gong today. The market got away to a flying start in a number of the low-priced favorites among Oil, Copper and Motor shares, and close to 800,000 shares passed over the tape in the first half-hour.

A 100,000 share block of Simms Petroleum, representing an investment of $3,000,000 sold at $20 a share at the opening, which compares with yesterday's low price of $16 1-2 a pool under the direction of "the Mike Meehan crowd" was reported operating in Simms, with market rumors promising a higher cash dividend for the stock. This is the first time that a block of this size has passed through on a single transaction, though the 60,000 share block of Studebaker, which sold last year, represented a larger investment in actual cash.

Sharp advances were also reported for the high priced specialties. Adams Express' 15 point jump to 74 5/8 brought that stock to the highest price on record. Union Carbide and Allied Chemical soared to new high levels and most of the airplane stocks sold higher. Consolidated Gas, at the head of the Public Utility group, was in demand above 110. Speculative interest shifted to the steel stocks in the second hour. U. S. Steel pushed ahead to 136 3-4 and commanded the best prices of the current move. Johns Manville resumed its spectacular upward march with a 5-point jump to above 187.

The public utility stocks fended to the front today as reports of important developments circulated in Wall street. Consolidated Gas, which is to take over the Brooklyn Union Gas property, moved up to above 110 and American & Foreign Pumped 5 points to 101 1-2. American Tel & Tel sold at 135, a new high.

Not much money came into Wall street today and the call loan rate was stiff, around 7 1-2 per cent. A cut in the volume of brokers' loans this week would help the situation considerably.

KIWANIANS LAY PLANS FOR MINSTREL SHOW

An enthusiastic meeting of the entertainment committee of the Kiwanis Club, which is making arrangements for the annual Minstrel Show to be held at the State theater Wednesday May 22, was held yesterday and resulted in a definite program being outlined.

William Halstead, who was previously named chairman of the committee, found it impossible to continue because of pressure of business and Arthur A. Knofla was named in his place. The remainder of the committee consists of: Fay P. Quimby, sketches; Clarence Pearson, choral singing; Louis N. Heebner, Charles Milkowski and George H. Waddell, lighting effects and scenery; Elmer Watkins, costumes; Thomas Ferguson, publicity; and Harold Tu kington, music at program.

The committee is determined to make this Kiwanis Minstrel the best ever staged in Manchester.

It is the custom of the Kiwanis Club to stage a Minstrel show once a year, the proceeds of which go to the Kiddies Camp at Hebron, and the people of Manchester, in buying tickets for this show, aid the club in that cause.

Tickets for the show were distributed among the members at the club meeting yesterday.

pressure of the rising backwaters of the Mississippi river.

An area of nearly 13,000 acres is inundated in this district, according to International News Service, and many inhabitants are seeking refuge on high grounds built purposely for such emergencies.

In New York

In upstate New York on the outskirts of Rochester the Genesee river overflowed its banks with the consequent marooning of more than fifty families and property damage running into the thousands. The river waters were still rising today although the rain had ceased falling, and numerous highways and railroad cuts were inundated, greatly hampering traffic.

Conditions in the Susquehanna river valley, both in New York and Pennsylvania, likewise were reported bad.

Two lives were said to have been lost, farms inundated and hundreds made homeless along the winding course of the Susquehanna.

From New England came reports that numerous roads were under water and that rivers, reservoirs and dams were rising steadily.

Sunshine and warm weather, however, are expected to hold steady to a minimum in this section.

A number of local Kiwanians have specified their intention of attending the meeting of New Britain, Hartford, Waterbury and Winsted clubs tomorrow evening at the Shuttle Meadow clubhouse, New Britain. Tickets may be obtained from C. P. Quimby.

tween American bases, Hawaii to the Philippines, for instance.

The Washington conference partially broke down because France would not agree to any limitation in submarines. France wanted to build up a great force of submarines to offset Britain's superiority in surface fighting ships.

To get around these perennial barriers, the United States now proposes to make the reduction applicable to every type of naval fighting craft, and to work it out on the basis of relative needs. That is, if Great Britain decides she needs so many 7,500-ton cruisers, the American quota will be worked out on a lesser number. The 10,000-ton cruisers more adaptable to her peculiar needs.

"To each according to his needs," is roughly the American proposal.

"It is not considered likely in Washington that there will be any immediate action. For one thing, British general election is just around the corner. For another, France will never consent to armament reduction of any sort so long as the German reparations question is still unsettled. These two factors alone will operate to prevent quick action. The American proposal was simply planted for future growth—perhaps to flower at the second Washington conference in 1931.

Ambassador Gibson's speech was written in Washington before he sailed for Geneva. It was worked out in a series of conferences between President Hoover, Secretary of State Stimson, and Gibson himself, aided by naval technicians.

solid support of the British in cutting down navies.

Mr. Gibson explained to the correspondents that the American proposals cover all classes of warships. It does not aim at limiting new ships but at reducing navies to lower existing strength.

There are numerous details that would have to be worked out by naval technical experts. The American proposal was to express a broad principle and to show that the United States is ready to take the leadership in an international movement to slash the big navies.

As Mr. Gibson was believed to be acting as the official spokesman for President Hoover, the European statesmen will keep a watchful ear open in the immediate future for any additional details that President Hoover himself may announce.

DOOR STILL OPEN

Paris, April 23.—The reparations conference has been saved for the time being, and negotiations upon disputed points will be continued, it was officially announced this afternoon.

The following communiqué was issued in behalf of the committee of international experts:

"The committee which will make a report on the work of the conference will consist of the chiefs of the various delegations. During the preparation of the report efforts will be continued to reach an agreement upon points still in dispute."

Philadelphia, April 23.—Bernice E. Darling, 13, daughter of the Rev. Llewellyn Darling of Everett, Mass., who disappeared from her home Saturday, has been found here. The girl explained that she left home to become a motion picture actress. Her father is enroute here to return his daughter home.

The lights went out on the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor the other night. However, no rumormongers were reported to have lost the way.

HOVE TO IN STORM

Boston, April 23.—Unable to make headway because of a stiff northeast gale and snow, the freight steamship West Hika, disabled by the loss of a rudder during a storm a week ago, today was "hove to" about 170 miles east of Boston, with the Coast Guard cutter Mojave and Achusnet alongside, according to radio reports to Coast Guard headquarters.

As soon as the storm abated and the seas became calmer, the Achusnet will attempt to get a line to the West Hika and proceed to Boston, the radio report declared.

GUARDSMEN WARNED

Washington, April 23.—A warning to Coast Guardsmen who are too quick on the trigger was sent here today in the announcement by the Treasury that Boatswain James R. Ingram has been requested to resign from the service.

Ingram was in charge of the government patrol that recently raked the Miami waterfront with machine gun fire while pursuing a suspected rum runner in the Miami river.

Recent reports from Mexico indicate that General Escobar, though proclaimed president by the rebels, is choosing to run again.

MR. HOOVER AND THE LAW

If we are to gather any definite conclusion from President Hoover's address at the Associated Press luncheon in New York yesterday it must be that the chief executive is not nearly so worried over prohibition as over the general tendency to crime and the comparative impunity with which crimes may be committed. His declaration that only eight per cent of the felonies annually committed in the United States are even remotely connected with the liquor laws, and that the excessive number of murders, robberies, burglaries, forgeries and embezzlements have their roots elsewhere than in either prohibition or the fighting of prohibition, will come as a revelation to those who have been given to closely associating prohibition and the crime wave.

There will be nothing but applause for the President's urgent appeal for a new deal in the administration of criminal laws—which we take to be his formal registration on the side of that wholesale reform of the courts and criminal procedure which for years the press has been demanding. The President will be a welcome leader in this reform, where there has hitherto been no leadership save that of the newspapers—and the newspapers do not make the laws. Quite obviously Mr. Hoover's speech is in preparation for future action on his part looking to tremendous changes in the administration of the criminal law; and for those changes the country has been waiting in suffering and agony of spirit for many a year.

But we cannot closely follow the President's theory that there has been considerable falling off in the average citizen's respect for law—if we practically exclude, as Mr. Hoover does himself, the liquor laws. We very much doubt that the typical citizen of today has any less respect for the laws against murder, robbery, burglary, forgery or embezzlement than was rendered by the citizen of a hundred years ago. The President, in this connection, might have addressed himself to three comparatively small groups—the criminals, the police, the courts.

If there is less average of respect for the law now than there was a quarter of a century ago it is merely because we have brought into the country a vast element of born law-breakers—because, in a word, we have permitted a tremendous increase in our naturally criminal population. We have imported crime without even a tariff barrier against it. And, having imported it, we have proceeded to take its brighter brains and educate them in the law and teach them how to make a joke and a glib out of the rules of good order which used to suffice for the protection of our people.

A huge criminal population, brought overseas, police forces befooled by politics, lawyers with criminal backgrounds and courts tied hand and foot by ridiculous red tape—these are the elements where there is either no respect for law or where respect for law is cross-eyed and introspectively futile.

Perhaps the press can help out the President in fostering a new growth of respect for law in these quarters—but one President, fully determined to bring about a reformation in the methods of administering justice, can do more in this direction than any the newspapers in the country could do, lacking such a leadership.

HOOVER ON DEBENTURES

President Hoover's letter to Senator McNary, explaining why he is opposed to the agricultural debenture plan, shows that while he may not have "understood" the plan some time ago it quite thoroughly understands it, in all its implications, now.

In an article written prior to the President's elucidation of the debenture problem, this newspaper, while disclaiming any comprehensive insight into the debenture scheme, pointed out that if the measure were to be adopted the debentures would probably become the toy of special brokers who would reap the profits instead of the farmers' getting them. One of Mr. Hoover's ten reasons for disbelief in the validity of the plan is just that danger. He foresees an elaborate discount business in farm debentures. But he goes a deal further than that and sees what might have well occurred to anybody—but didn't, to the most of us—and that is the inevitable defeat of the purpose of the bill, by its own act, through the glutting of the export market and the consequent lowering of world prices on the specified commodities.

The purpose of the debenture plan is to raise the price of wheat, cotton and certain other staples. This it would accomplish by providing that every shipper of the staples in question, in export, should receive a debenture good for one-half the export duty on the commodity, redeemable as payment for imports. Mr. Hoover points out that if the debenture on wheat export is 21 cents a bushel, the assumption is that the price of wheat in the United States would automatically become 21 cents higher than the world price. This would be pie for the farmer, if he got the increment. But Mr. Hoover sees no assurance at all that the farmer would get even a considerable part of the boost. He sees it is going to speculators and exporters and debenture brokers—and the whole business coming out of the pockets of the people to the tune of $200,000,000 or $300,000,000 a year.

Also he sees what everybody must see who gives serious thought to the scheme of "dumping," under whatever form it may be camouflaged—the industrial advantage created for the foreigner who is fed on American foods at a less price than Americans are charged for them at home. If the Belgian textile worker could be fed at the cost of a dollar on American food costing the American worker three dollars, that would mean the end of American competition with the Belgian textile mills, tariff or no tariff. No farm relief measure proposes so extreme a spread in home and foreign prices as that would be, but every such proposal, whether it be the debenture equalization fee or the debenture plan, contains in some degree this threat to American industrialism.

"MENTAL MURDER"

Apparently the New York authorities have a pretty good idea of the identity of the individual who is supposed to have prompted the suicide of David Steinhardt, New York lawyer and receiver in bankruptcy, when the impasse which he had reached promised to produce trouble for others. Moreover it is hinted that the district attorney's office there may take action of some sort.

This situation is a curious one. It is probable that there can be found precedent enough for proceeding against anyone who, in the state of New York, proposes or urges the suicide of another person. Suicide in the Empire state is, if we mistake not, still a crime under the law, although it is a long time since prosecutions were brought against those who unsuccessfully attempted it, and were always rare. And if suicide is a crime, then to propose or urge it would appear to be, per se, an offense against the law the same as the aiding of abettance of any other crime.

The term "mental murder" has already been coined in connection with this case, and it would appear to be not ill-fitting. If there is, in the background of this case, some sinister, secret figure who prompted the self-destruction of Steinhardt so that he would not be prevailed on to tell all he knew, then the dragging of that figure into the light will be a good thing even if there is no successful prosecution. We can think of no more despicable and cowardly crime than talking another person into suicides in order to save one's own skin.

JOHN ENNIS

When old John Ennis died in Stamford at the age of 87 the newspaper accounts told of his all-around athletic activities and about his record walk from Coney Island to the Pacific coast, but little or nothing about his participation in the six-day pedestrian matches of the latter 70's and 80's of the last century. Yet there are plenty of elderly citizens who can remember when the name of Ennis, along with that of Charlie Rowell, the negro Hart, Edward Payson Weston, Hughes "the lepper," Harriman and others were as completely household words, especially among the young fry, as those of Babe

Ruth or Red Grange today or yesterday.

The six-day pedestrian matches of those times, held—the most notable of them—in the original Madison Square Garden, made a hundred times the furor than any such long-winded athletic event could possibly stir up nowadays. And in those days the merits of John Ennis were discussed by millions of people who never saw him, just as the merits of some baseball star of the first magnitude are discussed today.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

AT LAST! SOME FOOD

Today will be the fifth day of your curative diet, and I am sure place which will be helpful to you in the restoration of perfect health. Some of you may feel that you should continue on the fruit diet longer, as you may not have eliminated enough toxins to produce a complete cure of your trouble.

This has been really a very short fast compared to the ones which I give patients in my private practice. However, I am sure excellent results have been received and that you will be doing the right thing to start tomorrow upon regular food on which diet you will be still able to continue to eliminate toxic wastes, as the foods I will recommend are those of low caloric value and therefore do not require so much energy for their assimilation. Plenty of energy will be left to continue an extra amount of body cleansing. These foods may look appetizing to you today, but wait until tomorrow before you start on this diet.

When you get up tomorrow morning brush your teeth vigorously, as I have recommended, before taking your deep-breathing exercises, and your usual enema, followed by the sponge or shower bath.

What! Spinach for Breakfast? For breakfast, lunch, and dinner, your diet is to be confined to a selection from the following lists of foods: celery, spinach, small string beans, asparagus, small squash, cucumber, egg plant, beet tops, turnip tops, small beets, small carrots, small parsnips, small turnips, pumpkins, lettuce, okra, chayotes, oyster plant (salsify), mallow, kale, zucchini, parsley, endive, alligator pear, ripe olives.

These foods may be used either cooked or uncooked as you desire. I suggest that you use not over three vegetables at any one meal and that you use at least one uncooked vegetable to one or two cooked vegetables. For instance, this would be a good selection: Breakfast: Cooked spinach, cooked string beans, raw celery.

Lunch: Carrots and turnips cooked and mashed together and seasoned with a little butter and cream. Head lettuce.

Dinner: Baked parsnips, cooked asparagus (fresh or canned), grated raw beets.

These are just suggestions of possible combinations which will be filling, wholesome, and found pleasing to the taste. The vegetables should be cooked in as little water as possible, preferably in the thick aluminum ware which does not require any water in the cooking. The cooked vegetables may be seasoned with butter or salt, or a little fresh cream, but no white flour sauces.

Hunger and Appetite It is all right for you to use as large a quantity of any of these vegetables as you desire, providing you do not use too many varieties at the same meal. You will be surprised to find that you are satisfied with very little. This is not because your stomach is smaller, because of your restricted diet, but it is more than anything due to a mental change, as you have been unconsciously convinced that you do not require so much food.

An x-ray examination of the stomach of a patient who has just been on a long fast does not show any reduction in the size of the stomach. Patients who force themselves to go on a restricted diet will always find that they do not have that over-irritating craving for food which they formerly thought was hunger but which they really found to be a "false appetite."

Watch tomorrow's paper for instructions for the following day. (Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet addressed to him in care of The Herald. Enclose large self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.)

Questions and Answers

Pressure Cooker

Question: L. W. asks: "Will you please advise through the columns if food is harmful when prepared in a pressure cooker?"

Answer: Cooking with a pressure cooker is an excellent way of preparing food and superior to most of the older methods where the steam and favors are allowed to escape.

Running Ears

Question: Mrs. E. B. L. asks: "Will you please give me a cure for my daughter's running ears? She has had the flu and ever since, her ears have been running."

Answer: The discharge from your daughter's ears will stop more quickly if you give her a diet which will cure her catarrhal tendency. The treatment necessary cannot be described in the limited space of this column. If you will write me again, giving your full name and address, I will send instructions.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Today may properly be celebrated as the birthday of American night life. Whether the term be used to include an evening spent in an isolated farmhouse or in a metropolitan night club. For exactly 50 years ago, on April 22, 1879, Thomas Alva Edison was granted a patent on the incandescent lamp—an invention which changed the after-noon map of the world in less than 20 years. The basic principles underlying Edison's invention were known to science long before Edison experimented with them. His fame rests on the fact that he overcame enormous difficulties to make a practical public utility of what had been merely a scientific toy. Contrary to popular belief, Edison's achievement did not consist merely of placing a few magic wires in a "bottle" and hermetically sealing them with a threaded cap. It included devising a practical method of supplying energy to his lamp, or in other words, originating powerhouses. The Pearl Street powerhouse in New York, put in operation in 1882, was the first of the great central station systems of today.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, April 23.—They say the world is getting better and better, but no one has ever been kind enough to suggest as much about Congress. The Seventy-first Congress may get a special credit before it dies, but it writes its special session nobody expects that much good will come out of it.

All one can do is take it and report that it looks very much like its predecessor. In the Senate there isn't any more Daves and Charles Curtis, ex-jockey, sits in the driver's seat. In the House the Republicans have a new Democratic floor leader to co-operate with them.

There are a few new faces in the back seats, none of which will ever cause the hearts of sightseeing high school girls to flutter.

Republican senators are paying the penalty of November victory by being wedged in tightly left of the aisle, while Democrats on the other side are sparse enough to put their feet wherever they please.

Weeds Out the Useless. Each election mercifully reaches out the hook for some of the most useless and annoying members, but it produces others to match them, one soon finds, and there are always plenty left behind in any event.

We can pass rapidly with only a brief moan over the case of Jim Reed of Missouri, as it has been thoroughly moaned over before. A dozen others who were in the Senate when it met last December are also missing.

In a body dressed so solemnly in black, blue serge and oxford grey, one could not help noticing on the opening day the flaming cerise neckties of Senator Wesley Jones of Washington, loving father of the Jones "Five and Ten" law, and the notable brown suit of the large Mr. Bronson Cutting, the comparatively new senator from New Mexico.

As far as your correspondent could observe, there are no new bears or cauliflower heads worth mentioning in either house. The best and biggest new bald head is that of Senator Henry J. Allen of Kansas, about whom Charlie Curtis is continually fluttering as if to show that all is forgiven. The crop of white whiskers carefully cultivated on the chin of Ransdell of Louisiana continues to be only such growth in the Senate.

Burton of Ohio and Connally of Texas are the most impressive additions among the new or newer senators; both have already had their tryouts on the Hill. Burton was elected to the House in 1928, rose to the Senate in 1909 for six years, went back to the House and finally returned to the Senate at the age of 77. It probably hasn't ever been done before. Connally, who nosed Earl B. Mayfield out of the Senate, has a big black hat, a big black bow tie and a big loud voice. He has enough ability to amount to something in the Senate if he wants to, but his Democratic fellow-nonsentimentals may persuade him not to do anything as unconventional as that.

Your correspondent nearly fell out of the press gallery when Walsh of Montana appeared to smile in a conversation with Wagner of New York on the opening day, but he probably was only sneezing. A smile from Walsh might have caused the dome to fall in. Overman of North Carolina, owner of the Senate's most imposing stomach, appeared to have trained down slightly.

They Aren't Seen Often. There were a lot of fellows who looked like new members, but really were not.

The first day is the only time one ever sees them on the floor. Three new ladies in the House rather improve the general appearance, but congresswomen are still so few that you have to search around carefully to find them. Much is made of the fact that the three new girls, Congresswomen McCormick, Owen and Pratt, are all named Ruth. But careful inquiry reveals that it is only a coincidence. So is the fact that their initials spell MOP, which other brilliant correspondents probably will get onto sooner or later. A fellow can have a lot of fun writing about a coincidence like that last one.

Time passes and the widows of Congress are wearing brighter colors, though none of the styles displayed thus far is especially snappy. One still has to go back to the Senate and look at Tom Hefflin for that.

BEGINS OPERATIONS ON ROCKVILLE DISPOSAL

The Manchester Construction company, awarded the contract for the building of the filtration system and sewage disposal plant for the city of Rockville, started work on the job this morning. The sewage disposal plant which will cost in the vicinity of $60,000 and is the first step in this section to clear up the Hockanum river. The present sewer system of Rockville was built over thirty years ago and has failed to function for some time. There is a filter bed in connection with an old septic tank system, but it has failed to operate properly and the state health board and the water commission have insisted on a reform.

The city of Rockville and town of Vernon were bordering so close on their legal debt limit that it was necessary to get a special act through the Legislature for the bonding of the city for the $60,000.

"Equalization" That IS Needed!

IN NEW YORK

New York, April 23.—The New York school which John D. Rockefeller, Jr., endows and underwrites is an institution where those vast extremes, typical of Manhattan life, can be found.

Here mingle the children of the fabulously rich and the contrastingly poor. The opportunity for entrance is not based upon the standards of wealth, but upon the precocity displayed. Youngsters living in ordinary and humble circumstances who can run the mental blockade are given an equal chance with boys and girls whose parents are the financial kings of America.

Rich and poor alike must display mental alertness, which places them ahead of average youngsters of their years. Thus, while it is essentially a public school, its student body is automatically limited. Every effort is made to dispel any notion of caste differences and to draw the distinctions along mental lines. To be sure, the child of a captain of industry who has sufficient intelligence to gain an entrance is almost certain to have cast snobbery aside and to have observed human relationships from their proper perspective. Children of the newly rich, pampered into self-consciousness, are far more likely to be undemocratic.

Thus, I learn from a lad of my acquaintance, Davy Rockefeller, who is one of the students, cannot be distinguished—except by name—from any of the scores of lads and lassies in attendance. I am told that Davy seems to have no more money than anyone else and though he could purchase a whole museum of insects, is quite content to swap bugs for the collection he gathers in connection with class work.

Of course, Davy and some of his very rich companions are able to set out at vacation time for any place their interest or impulse may guide them. They can look over the Nile of Egypt or the native tribes of Africa, or they can have any form of tutoring they wish. Still the methods of teaching employed are such that the lad from an average family gets an excellent education. With the result that the Lincoln School leads when college exams come.

The experiment—if such it can be called—is largely the idea of John D. Jr., and some of his fellows. Thus, in the teaching of mathematics, the lads are sent out with surveyors to learn the uses and meanings of angles and curves long before they are plunged into the mysteries of algebra and geometry. They visualize and understand what they are driving at before they commence the actual study. And so, trigonometry is approached before algebra has been mastered.

Thus, again, if a Civil War battle is to be studied, an actual scene is re-enacted. The floor becomes a battlefield and troops are marched on Vicksburg, in the exact movements of the war. Thus, through the process of actual visualization, the pupil learns something which he never forgets—nor is any detail lost to his mind.

These instances are typical of the entire method of training. But the school must make certain that those who enter it are mentally prepared for their course and a stiff preliminary test is given.

It is one of the most interesting schools in America and may be a rather good indication of how future winds may be blowing. GILBERT SWAN.

An Appreciation FROM Roy Buckler S OON, I shall celebrate the anniversary of my first year of residence in Manchester, jointly with my first year of service to homes of Manchester. For ten years prior to coming here, I had been traveling at intervals throughout the New England States in the interests of improving laundering methods in almost two hundred different laundry plants. As a graduate textile chemist having specialized in the handling of cottons, linens, silk and wool, my work was with laundries exclusively, specializing in the correct use of soaps and cleansing powders in their service. The years gave me an unusual and rare opportunity not only to study modern laundering methods, but also how the finest and most careful methods could be incorporated in one plant. On succeeding visits to Manchester I realized, more and more, how much I would like to settle here permanently with my family. Finally, in the spring of last year we came here. I took over the Gordon Laundry with eagerness for task of modernizing it—with joy in the opportunity of introducing new and fine and modern methods in laundering; and of rendering perfect service to homes of Manchester. The response to my sincere efforts has been even greater than my most optimistic beliefs when I first started. Several hundred more homes are now being served by me with laundering service—several hundred more than when I first took this laundry over. Though I cannot help but realize it may be the reward of earnest effort, I nevertheless want to take this public means of expressing my great and sincere and heartfelt appreciation to all of you. And I take this opportunity of pledging my honor to continue to render at all times a laundering service as fine and clean and careful, as modern practice and my years of experience can make possible. ROY E. BUCKLER, PROPRIETOR. The Gordon Laundry Harrison St., South Manchester, Conn. TELEPHONE 222

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Tuesday, April 23.

Pat O'Day and Sir Ashley Ballou, the well-known comedy team, and Guy Lombardo and his famous orchestra, are to be featured on a radio program to be broadcast by the Columbia system at 11 o'clock Tuesday night. The two fun-makers will offer an act entitled "AB Lib and Ad Infinitum," while the Royal Canadianians will be heard in popular numbers, both old and new. Among the accomplishments of the program will be a "baseball game" featuring a musical dramatization of the career of Franz Liszt, the little Hungarian boy who was to become the greatest of all pianists and one of the world's finest composers, will be presented before microphones of WEAF and associated stations at 9 o'clock. A striking feature of the broadcast will be the rendition of Liszt's great compositions by Ely Ney, acclaimed by critics as the greatest living pianist, and the piano. Miss Ney's selections will be supplemented by an orchestra of 25 phonic proportions under the direction of Nathaniel Shilkret. At 10:30 Paul Whiteman's orchestra will synopsize a fox trot arrangement of Liszt's "Hungarian Rhapsody" through nationwide chain with WJZ.

JONES, TENOR, SCORES AT CHORAL CONCERT

Delights Large Audience at Eleventh Affair of Local Men's Club.

The eleventh concert of the Men's Choral Club of Manchester, well attended at High School Hall last evening, would scarcely have rated with the most successful of Choral Club concerts in the past had it not been for the brilliant work of the featured soloist, Allan Jones.

This was Mr. Jones' first appearance in Manchester and he leaped at once into high favor with his audience in his initial number, the aria "On Parades" from "L'Alfonzo" from Meyerbeer's "L'Africain." While there may be natural tenor voices a shade richer than Mr. Jones', he has power, an intense dramatic quality and a finished technique, and in such thrilling numbers as "Three dance orchestras," "The Evening Falls O'er the Sea," and "The Children's Crusade" by Pierre, in which he was accompanied by the Choral Club, the tenor's voice did not, perhaps, show to quite such advantage as in the dramatic numbers. Possibly due to the nature of his training, it also seemed to be true that Mr. Jones was slightly less at home when singing in English than in the Latin languages.

There were many moments during the evening when the Choral Club's somewhat diminished numbers and obvious lack of balance in the tenor sections were overcome by the spirit and determination of the ensemble, but these were notably more frequent toward the end of the various numbers, for there was a degree of fatigue in the choir. On the whole the concert, while not as sensationally excellent as some that the club has given, was a success. It is obvious, however, that the club is going to need some important reinforcement in the tenor division if it is to maintain its historic high standards.

The Biblical drama "Ruth" will be presented at Talcott Hall on Wednesday evening under the auspices of the Missionary Society. All are invited to be present. There will be no admission fee, but a collection will be taken. Ice cream and cake will be on sale after the entertainment.

A number of people from this place attended the Senior Dramatics at Sykes' Auditorium, Rockville, last Friday evening. Miss Dorothy Wood was a member of the cast.

Mrs. J. E. Bradley has returned home after spending several days as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Felix F. McQue and, family of Worcester, Mass.

Mrs. A. M. Kuhnney, who has been at Manchester Memorial hospital for several months has returned to the home of her sister, Mrs. Joseph Douglas.

DELNICKE FINED $100 FOR LOVE LANE WRECK

But Judge Remits $50 of Drunk-Driving Penalty on Plea by Attorney.

David Delnicke of Foster street, Wapping, was fined $100 and costs in Town Court this morning for driving a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Judge Raymond A. Johnson presided. Delnicke was defended by Attorney William Shea and pleaded not guilty.

Police Sergeant John Crockett and Officer Donaldson told about the accident which led to Delnicke's arrest and of getting Delnicke at his brother's home in Wapping. Both said he admitted driving the automobile that collided with a pole on Middle Turnpike at Love Lane, and that he admitted having been drinking. Dr. LeVerne Holmes said he examined Delnicke at the police station and found that he was under the influence of liquor and not in a proper condition to drive a car. Delnicke told the court he was blinded by headlights, went into a ditch, pulled out and then hit the pole. He said he was helped out by George H. Williams and then went to his brother's home. He had not been drinking since 1 o'clock the afternoon he said. He testified that he had driven a car for eleven years and had never been arrested before. Mr. Williams testified that he had witnessed and assisted in getting Delnicke out of the car, intending to take him to a doctor. Delnicke wanted to go home, however, and he took him there, and reported to the police on his return to Manchester.

Attorney Shea said Delnicke had told a truthful story and that there were special circumstances that he did not care to bring into the court.

Judge Johnson, after imposing a fine of $100 and costs, remitted $50 of the fine, which was paid.

Other cases which were pending before the court were not called.

VILMA BANKY IN SOUND PICTURE AT THE STATE

"The Awakening" Heads Double Feature Bill for Tomorrow and Thursday.

Vilma Banky's first sound picture for United Artists, "The Awakening," heads the elaborate double feature program at the State theater for two days beginning tomorrow.

"The Awakening" is a pulsating and colorful tale of a beautiful peasant girl of Alsace, who suddenly finds that after many years of longing she finally has found the love that her heart desires. Miss Banky is superb in her dramatic characterization of the peasant girl. Others in the cast are Walter Byron, who plays the role of her lover—a young French army officer Louis Wolheim, George Davis, William Oriamond and Karl Von Hartmann.

Victor Fleming directed "The Awakening." A colorful musical score has been prepared for the film by Dr. Hugo Reizenfeld. The sound effects are also brilliantly recorded.

The associate film feature for tomorrow presents Larry Kent and Dorothy Sebastian in "The Spirit of Youth," a glamorous tale of life, love and merry laughter.

QUITE DOGGY

Knoxville—More than $200 has gone into a bank here during the last two years credited to "Buddy," a dog belonging to George Worsham. By using his paw mark, the dog can draw money from the bank. A recent "signature" drew $200 from the bank to make a payment on his master's home.

INVALID KILLED

Washington, April 23.—Rep. Frank Murphy (R) of Ohio, was speeding to Florida today, in response to a telegram notifying him that his wife, a semi-invalid, had been killed in an automobile accident near Ocala, Fla.

The body will be taken back to Steubenville, their home, for burial. Mrs. Murphy was in a car being driven by E. W. Hockenburg of St. Petersburg, according to message received here. Others in the party were her mother, Mrs. Mary Barcus, Mrs. Cora Young of Syracuse, N. Y., and J. M. Love of Port Chester, N. Y. Near Ocala, the car skidded and overturned, crushing Mrs. Murphy. The others escaped with minor injuries.

Al Smith is going to write for the magazines for $2 a word. Mr. Coolidge ought to ask for a raise.

EXTENDS QUOTA TIME FOR M. T. C. APPLICANTS

Judge Gilson, as chairman of the Military Training Camps Association for Connecticut, announced last Friday night that the time for presenting Connecticut's quota for the camps to be held during the month of July at Camp Adams, Newport, R. I., Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., and Camp Ethan Allen at Burlington, Vt., has been extended. Three hundred and eighty-seven applications from Connecticut young men between the ages of 17 and 21 have been already received according to reports from headquarters at Boston of the Military Training Camps Association, leaving but 210 additional applications to be received from the entire State of Connecticut, to meet the allotted quota of 597.

In order that the excess applications received by the State of Massachusetts may not be permitted to exhaust the places assigned to Connecticut the members of the Association are making a special effort to speedily fill the remaining places. Applications for admission to qualified young men of good character may be procured from the headquarters at 319 United States Post Office Building, in New Haven. Approximately 95 percent of the Connecticut applicants are enrolled students in the High Schools, Preparatory Schools, and Colleges of the State, who are taking advantage of a month's vacation on Narragansett Bay at the expense of the United States Government.

Now Belts Join Ensemble Family

Belts are the latest additions to the stylish ensemble family. Some times hatbands add their presence, making quite a wide diversity to the group. Jean Patou uses necktie silk for an ensemble group suitable for afternoon wear, consisting of bag, scarf, belt, and hatband to match. The colors in the silk are navy blue and white and the stripes join in groups of four to make a decorative broad stripe. Note the latest way of wearing one's scarf—like a collar that ties itself, in a bow-knot at the front of the V neck.

WOOLEN EXPERT COMING TO C. E. HOUSE'S STORE

That our local retailers are progressive is evidenced by the appointment of C. E. House & Son, Inc., that its institution has, by special arrangement with the Kahn Tailoring Company of Indianapolis, secured the services of one of its woolen and style experts.

This expert is giving a tailoring exhibit at the House store. Domestic and imported Kahn woolens are to be shown and authorities' assistance and information is to be given to all those who seek it. The event is part of a huge national program sponsored by Kahn Company in order to make men and young men better acquainted with the worth of custom tailored clothes, and to advise them as to correct styles and what woolens and colors they should select in order to be smartly attired.

C. E. House & Son, Inc., are on record as having said that in all their experience they have never before been able to present through the courtesies of the Kahn Tailoring Company such an unusual display of woolens and offer such a splendid service to the men of this town.

The tailoring exhibit will be held Thursday and Friday, of this week.

112 JAPANESE DROWNED WHEN STEAMSHIP SINKS

97 Picked Up—Ship Went Down So Quickly Only One Call Sent Out.

London, April 23.—One hundred and twelve persons are believed to have been drowned when the Japanese steamship Toyokuni Maru went aground off Cape Erimo and sank, said a dispatch from Tokyo, this afternoon. The majority of the ships' passengers were fishermen.

Other ships went to the rescue and picked up 97 survivors from the water.

The Toyokuni Maru sank so quickly the wireless operator had time to send out only one SOS.

Cape Erimo lies on the southeastern coast of the northern island of Hokkaido and is approximately 45 miles from the big Japanese naval base at Muroran.

RICH GIRL---POOR GIRL TODAY'S CHAPTER ON PAGE 8.

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

MILDRED LAWRENCE was a public stenographer in the exclusive Judson Hotel. STEPHEN ARMITAGE, a go-getting automobile salesman, became interested in her after catching a thief who had snatched her purse in a subway station.

PAMELA JUDSON, spoiled daughter of the wealthy owner of the Judson Hotel, tried to break up the friendship and make Stephen become interested in her. She looked for little opposition from Mildred, since the latter needed her job to support her mother and younger sister. Pamela played Stephen against HUCK CONNOR, a man whom she had just met, and who was, unknown to her, a racketeer.

HAROLD JUDSON, Pamela's weak-willed brother, was in his way with Mildred. Huck, sensing an opportunity for gain, made Harold's acquaintance, and when he introduced the racketeer to Mildred she suspected him immediately.

Finally Pamela tired of Huck, and to get rid of him told him that she and Stephen were engaged. Stephen was staggered by Pamela's announcement, but confirmed it when she asked him to in Huck's presence.

Meanwhile Huck had framed Harold, gambling, and the latter had forged his father's name to pay the debt. Huck then threatened to expose him unless Harold would break his sister's engagement. Harold pleaded lack of influence.

So Huck planned to "get" his auto salesman rival in another way. A stranger approached Stephen and asked for a demonstration of an expensive car. Follow the story from this point, beginning tomorrow on Page 8.

80 MANCHESTER YOUNG MEN WITH TEL. & TEL.

tions to positions of responsibility where they earn from $25 to $35 per week plus board.

Earned by Hard Work. This is a point particularly gratifying to me because the men have earned their advancement from real hard labor. Not one of the Manchester men whom I have seen fit to advance has failed to justify the promotion. These young men who are now assistant foremen, inspectors, gang clerks and holders of other similar positions, started by swinging a pick and pushing a shovel in our ditches; they drilled rock, mixed and placed concrete, handled the heavy sections of duct, the big, unwieldy reels of cable, stood in the manholes and pushed the rods through the ducts to the next manhole during the hot summer of 1923. Further opportunities for promotion are occurring and there are a good many of the Manchester young men who are slated for advancement in the near future.

A number of the Manchester men are located in Lawrenceville, N. J., where the company is erecting a great plant covering several hundred acres and consisting of a number of buildings in addition to the great towers, antennas and other necessary paraphernalia for the sending and receipt of radio-telephone to and from Europe and South America. Every man on this job, regardless of the particular kind of work he now may be doing, will have an opportunity to learn the fundamentals of this new and interesting service.

Native Ability. Several of the Manchester boys have proved to be naturally adapted to particular phases of our work and although starting with the rest in the ditches—soon showed their fitness for better jobs. Examples of this are seen in "Dodge" Dowd, who is now first aid instructor for the entire division and a mighty good one. Stanley Richmond is another good example. Although starting less than a year ago, he is now a full fledged tester. Kenneth May is another Manchester boy who is more than making good in the New York office, while the same holds for Stewart Robinson in the record department. Ward Kerr, who is only 21, stands a chance of being sent to Germany or South America.

The first mentioned men in the list which follows have the best jobs. I am very glad to have been able to help these boys and feel proud of their progress. Furthermore, I believe that their home town may well share my feeling.

The Long List. Following is a list of the Manchester young men, the nature of their work and where they are located at present: Ward Kerr, technical employe with crew installing trans-Atlantic radio-telephone sending and receiving station at Lawrenceville, N. J.; David Turkington, assistant conduit foreman on a new subway at Saratoga, N. Y.; Elmer Kendall, assistant conduit foreman at Kingston, N. Y.; James Dowd, first aid instructor for all territory in Division 1, which includes New York, New Jersey and New England; Sherman Warnock, testboardman at Hartford; Kenneth May, clerical work in the New York office construction department; Stewart Robinson, record department of the New York office.

Also, Stanley Richmond, cable tester at Newburgh, N. Y.; John T. Wright, material man for Division 1, who travels about arranging for receipt, storage and distribution of construction material; John Gordon, gang clerk, whose duties are to keep record of all work, pay all wages and bills, located at Springfield; Hamilton D. Mullen, gang clerk with the conduit workers at Saratoga, N. Y.; Thomas J. Meikle, line gang clerk, Buffalo, N. Y.; Albert H. Gustafson, conduit gang clerk, Trenton, N. J.; Myron Wright, conduit gang clerk, Manchester-Willimantic; George Turkington, conduit gang clerk, Kingston, N. Y.; Robert Donnelly, inspector on conduit construction by contractors, Bridgeport.

Varied Jobs. Thomas Happenny, conduit construction inspection at Glen Falls, N. Y.; Leroy Staples and Wilfred Harvey, same work at Albany and Saratoga, N. Y., respectively; Thomas Spillance, operator of air compressor at Suffern, N. Y.; William Scott, same work, Kingston, N. Y.; and the following truck drivers: Lucius Thrall, Manchester; Oliver Jarvis, Danielson; Lester Bronkie, Manchester; Tony Tumlinisky, Willimantic; Howard Carter, Saratoga, N. Y.; Joseph Dunn, Albany, N. Y.; Lawrence Lutton, Albany, N. Y.; Edward Modean, Bridgeport; Edward Bursell, Kingston, N. Y.; Harry Madden, Kingston, N. Y.; Earl Hadden, Bridgeport; and these four splicer's helpers, Elmer Christensen, Utica, N. Y.; John Murray, Newark, N. J.; James Wright, Newburgh, N. Y., and Peter Harvey of Paterson, N. J.

Still Others. Also the following men who work on conduit crews: William Kelley, John Shannon, Clifford Hampton, Delucel Valentino, James Archibald, Dominic Excellent, all at Saratoga, N. Y.; John Anderson, Archibald Campbell, Francis Connor, John Groman, John Hamill, John Johnson, Henry Madden, Thomas Moriarty and Raymond Thomas, all located at Kingston, N. Y.; Harry Scott, Willard Robb, Theodore Zimmerman, Walter Leggett, George McCollum, Albert Ford, Harry Neilson, Leo Burke, Joseph Kellar, Joseph Snook, Frank Erick Luce and William Russell, all located at Trenton, N. Y.; John Truman, William Koneski, John Lis and Jabe White, rodding crew, at Jersey City, N. J.; Richard Wright, Samuel Haugh, John Dietz and William Schue, conduit crew at Buffalo, N. Y.; Henry Morgan and Robert, cable pulling crew at Princeton, N. J.

ZEP HOPS OFF Friedrichshafen, Germany, April 23.—The Giant German dirigible Graf Zeppelin took off at 1:33 o'clock this afternoon upon her second Mediterranean voyage. The decision to undertake the flight was made suddenly as it had been announced yesterday that the voyage had been postponed indefinitely. Dr. Hugo Eckener, head of the Zeppelin Works, is in command.

The weather was cool and cloudy. The ship rose easily and disappeared in a westerly direction. There are 19 passengers on the Graf including two women and a representative of the French air ministry. Premier Braun, of Prussia, who had planned to make the voyage, cancelled his passage and his place was taken by a representative of the transportation ministry. A ship's captain is empowered to conduct a marriage ceremony aboard his boat if the occasion arises.

WOMEN'S CONVENTION

Willimantic, April 23.—The State Federation of Women's Clubs, Inc., will hold their 33rd annual convention here on May 14 and 16, with sessions at Storrs, also. Clubs here and at Storrs will be hostesses. Departmental breakfasts on the morning of May 15 are to be a new feature of the convention this year, while morning and afternoon sessions are to be held at Storrs and all other sessions in Willimantic's First Congregational church. The convention will be directed by Mrs. F. R. Noble, of Willimantic, and Mrs. S. A. Dole, of Storrs. Features of the meeting will be a reception to Miss Clara Louise Plumley, of Darien, state president and the board of directors, on the evening of May 15, and a presdent's luncheon on May 16 led by Miss Sara Mead Webb, of Stamford. The Willimantic Lodge of Elks have invited the Federation to use their building for the reception to Miss Plumley.

RICH GIRL POOR GIRL

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MILDRED LAWRENCE meets STEPHEN ARMITAGE when he rescues her fox fur from a thief. Their friendship grows until PAMELA JUDSON, daughter of Mildred's employer, tries to lure him away from her. HUCK CONNOR becomes infatuated with Pamela and she plays both men. Her brother, HAROLD, is in love with Mildred, who tries to keep him from gambling with Huck's crowd. Mildred has to stay home a week because of an accident to her mother. Both men call and when Pamela finds it out she tells Stephen that Mildred is trying to lure him away from his money. He defends her and Pamela cables her father to discharge her. Harold tries to have Mildred reinstated but to no avail. Pamela succeeds in poisoning Stephen's mind against Mildred and the latter faces dreary days in search of work.

"The car's been stolen," he said directly . . . If ever Mr. Mettle came close to having apoplexy, it was at that moment.

Huck becomes insistent and Pamela plans to break with him. So she snubs him in Stephen's presence and then he objects. Stephen protests when they are alone and she says that was the only way she could get rid of Huck. She pleads with him to confirm the engagement. Meanwhile, Huck summons Harold and commands him to prevent Pamela's marriage to Stephen under fear of exposure concerning a forged check. He tells him he can't force Pamela so Huck plans to dispose of Stephen. A prospective purchaser guarantees that he will take a car if Stephen can make it do a hundred and insists on the new wind-up for the demonstration. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXV

"All right. Hold your breath and sit tight," Stephen admonished Lefty Flint, and in another minute they were flying along in a world gone mad. Telephone poles, fences, trees, fields plowed for spring planting or still covered with wintered grass and weeds, became a confused, jumbling procession that drew past and were gone almost before its component parts could be identified. Not that Stephen or Lefty noticed. The former kept his eyes glued to the road and Lefty never swerved his glance from the ever-mounting speedometer. At a hundred and two he reached out and touched Stephen's arm. "O. K.," he yelled, but the words were lost in the rush of wind that fairly tore them from his lips. Stephen understood his touch, however, and gradually the car slowed down to 90, to 80, to 70, to 60 and until it appeared to the two men to be creeping along at 50. Then Stephen turned to his companion, a great grin on his face. "When she's done 10,000 miles," he said, "you can step her up to . . ." "Never mind," Lefty broke in. "I'm satisfied. Let's go. It there's a cop anywhere around and he saw that we'll get the works." Stephen headed back toward the highway. "Take the first turn to the right," Lefty directed when they reached it. "Why not go back to the office?" Stephen asked. "We can't close the deal over here." "Sure," Lefty agreed. "I know that. Don't worry. The sale's made. I just want to have a friend look 'er over." Stephen saw no reason for refusing. "Give you a check for the full amount when we get back to New York," Lefty went on reassuringly. "Turn to the left at the light and cross the tracks." Stephen followed his directions, a little puzzled about their destination. It surely looked like a low class neighborhood, he thought, glancing at the row of shacks that hovered beside the badly rutted road. A bit farther on they struck a stretch of asphalt that was newly patched and Stephen increased their speed. "Take it easy," Lefty advised. "We haven't far to go." Stephen slowed and looked around. They were now in a section of small, unprosperous factories and deserted, ramshackle buildings, with now and then a wooden dwelling jammed between them, overcome by the progress of industry. "Over there," Lefty said, indicating a post-Colonial house that stood on a corner. Its wide veranda sagged at one corner and the parts of the ornate woodwork that a generous-minded builder had bestowed upon it were missing. The front door bore a name in weather-beaten paint, of a color to match the dreary dust of the house itself. Stephen just could make it out. "J. B.'s Place." Whatever was meant by place, he told himself, beginning to dislike the idea of stopping there. But the car practically belonged to Lefty, he reasoned. He remembered, too, a sale that had been lost at the last moment because of some small matter that had displeased the buyer. Lefty might get some remark about the car to his friend, and refuse to take it. Stephen decided not to run the risk of offending him. He turned in on the dirt driveway and stopped before the rickety front steps. Lefty sprang out at once. "Lock 'er up and come in," he said authoritatively. Stephen reached for his keys and opened the transmission gear, then allowed Lefty into J. B.'s Place. He suspected that it was a speakeasy. Lefty was at the port drink bar asking for J. B. The bartender jerked a thumb toward the back of the house and muttered something too low for Stephen to hear. Lefty turned and motioned Stephen to follow him. They went through a grimy hall to a rear room where they met the proprietor who was entertaining a few friends in private. Stephen was introduced to a man without formally, the man's initials appearing to serve as his full name. "Have a drink?" he was asked and Stephen said he would have beer. The day had turned unexpectedly warm. The light topcoat Stephen had donned when he left the office was uncomfortable indoors. He took it off before seating himself at a table with Lefty and J. B. and threw it over a nearby chair. And in a pocket of it he had thrust the keys to the car. Two others in that room knew this as well as he. In a word and a gesture Lefty had imparted the information to the bartender as soon as he'd entered the place. A quick glance when the bartender came for their order, a sly movement with his foot, and the chair with Stephen's coat, had been pushed aside, almost out of his sight. There was a delay after that and Lefty began to tell J. B. about "his" new car, praising it to the sky. "Let's have a look at it," the other said. "Sure," Lefty agreed. "In a minute. Here's the Gungha Dhin." They still lingered over their glasses when, a few minutes later, an electric piano suddenly emitted a raucous burst of sound. It filled the air with deafening clamor, drowning out conversation, though Lefty went right on talking, his voice raised to a high pitch. The noise got on Stephen's nerves. He looked in the direction whence it came, deliberating a descent upon the instrument with intent to demolish it. Lefty saw with satisfaction that his mind was for the moment at least, taken off the car at the curb. Another thing he had seen with even greater satisfaction—a small happening that had escaped Stephen's notice. A swift, sure motion of one hand, while with the other he placed glasses on the table, the bartender had managed to extract the keys from the pocket of Stephen's topcoat and drop them into the pocket of Lefty's own jacket. After that he had lost no time in quitting the room, and when the piano was started up Lefty listened anxiously for another sound to penetrate from the driveway to the rear of the house. But all the windows and doors were closed and the covering noises were effective. There was not even the echo of a suspicious sound to hint at what was going on out in front of the house. Stephen grew restless as Lefty continued to put off showing the car to J. B. Finally he glanced at his watch and rose, making some remark about the time being later than he thought. Lefty got up, too, as did J. B. "Well, let's see what she looks like," J. B. said interestedly. "Wish you luck in her, Lefty, on your next trip. But I think the long distance running is about done for." "Yeah," Lefty grimaced. "but this baby will give them a run before they take her." When they reached the front door Stephen paused to put on his topcoat. Lefty and J. B. stepped through ahead of him. When he followed they were standing in the driveway with well-assuming smiles on their respective faces. Stephen himself looked at it first with surprise untinted with any other emotion, but in the next second or two a sickening fear spread alarm to every thinking portion of his brain. The driveway was empty! The gleaming, powerful thing of beauty and speed that he had left standing there a half-hour before was gone. He clapped his hand to his coat pocket. His keys likewise were missing. Amusement and consternation battled for the uppermost position in his mind. Consternation won. "Good God! The car's been stolen!" he said hoarsely. "Sure looks like it," J. B. agreed, affecting uneasiness. "Didn't you lock it like I told you?" Lefty asked accusingly. Stephen nodded, his lips now grimly compressed. He was fast beginning to realize that he was in a bad position. "Well, you got your keys, ain't you?" Lefty pressed, "for the incurable people?" Stephen wheeled upon him, suddenly bursting into anger. "What kind of a joint is this?" he demanded. Lefty bridled. "You didn't take the bus inside with you," he answered tartly. "But I took my keys," Stephen told him, "and they were stolen from my coat pocket." "Aw hell, you probably left them in the lock," Lefty sneered with a touch of indifference. But Stephen was not heeding. He had dashed back into the house and was making for the rear room when the connection between him and the keys had not fallen out of his pocket to the floor. He gave up looking farther for them, knowing that he was using valuable time. "Where's your phone?" he snapped at J. B., who had followed him. The latter pointed to an instrument in the corner of the room. In a trice Stephen had reached it and was urging the operator to give him the nearest police station without delay. When the connection was made Stephen briefly outlined what had happened, giving the license number and other required information. The sergeant on duty said he would have a man at the place in a few minutes. Stephen was told to remain where he was. While he waited Stephen called the office and asked for Mr. Mettle. His hand shook as he held the receiver to his ear and listened for his employer's voice. "Hello, old D. A. M. that he had lost one of their finest cars wasn't going to be fun. Stephen knew. "Well?" Mr. Mettle rumbled after what seemed an all too short but yet interminable wait. "This is Armitage," Stephen began, but Mr. Mettle cut in on him. "I know that," he said; "what's the trouble?" Stephen let him have it like an explosion. "The car's been stolen," he said directly, unable to approach his confession in a roundabout way. "What?" yelled the other, and if ever Mr. Mettle came close to having apoplexy it was at that moment. He was so overcome that he was speechless. Stephen was able to finish his story without interruptions. "Where are you?" finally Mr. Mettle asked him weakly. Stephen told him that, adding: "I'm waiting for the police." "Come in when they're through with you," his employer ordered. "I'll wait for you. He hung up with a bang and Stephen groaned. "Here's your police," Lefty stuck his head inside the door to say, and Stephen went out where an officer was parking a motorcycle. Again he went over the story of the theft of the car, this time answering a great number of more pertinent questions. The officer shook his head. "We've telephoned the license number for miles around," he said, "but a fast car like that has a good chance to get away." "How about the keys?" Stephen asked. Someone in this place picked them out of my pocket." The officer turned to J. B. who was standing nearby, his hands in his trousers' pockets and a worried look upon his countenance. "Looking for trouble?" he inquired, a threatening note in his voice. "Aw, now, Kelly," he protested. "That's what he says. My bet is he left 'em in the car and's just a little to save his face." "Who was in the room?" the officer questioned Stephen, without replying to J. B. "Several men, all strangers to me, except this man and Lefty Flint," Stephen answered. "Want to come along to the station and make a complaint against anyone?" the officer went on. "This place has a bad name." He bent a hard look upon J. B. "Been a lot of crooked deals pulled off here." "What's under your skin?" J. B. answered. "I suppose if a car was stolen from in front of the Metropolitan Museum you'd blame the pitchers on the wall. If this kid here was dipped let him go ahead and prove it." "Who's this Lefty Flint?" the officer asked without giving Stephen time to reply to J. B.'s remark. Lefty stepped forward and the officer studied him closely, while Stephen explained that he'd been demonstrating the car to Flint. "H'm," the officer said reflectively. "How'd you happen to drop in at this place?" "It was Flint's idea," Stephen told him. "This man—I don't know his name—indicating J. B. with a slight wave of his hand, "is a friend of his. Said he wanted him to look over the car." The officer nodded. "Better come along to the station and tell us what you know," he said to Flint. "And you, too, J. B." They seemed reluctant to comply, but the officer was firm. "Any one else here who was in that room?" he said before turning away to his motorcycle. "No one but the bartender," Stephen replied. He'd made certain of that point for himself. The officer turned back. "I'll have a word with him," he said and strode into the house. The bartender was a new man. The officer could learn nothing from him but he made a mental note to keep an eye on him in the future. At the station Lefty and J. B. were closely questioned. The sergeant was inclined to believe Stephen's charge that his pocket had been picked, but since there was no one he directly accused no arrest could be made. But Lefty and J. B. were warned that it looked suspicious. Lefty's insistence that Stephen go to J. B.'s, and the fact that the latter had been in trouble with the police on several occasions, were against them. J. B. was in a surly mood when they left the place. Lefty decided to have a word with him and let Stephen go back to New York alone. They had come to the station in J. B.'s car, and when they left Stephen was not invited to join them. As he turned away toward the railroad station J. B. gave rein to his feelings. "Damned nice mess you've got me in," he said surlily. "There's no nothin' doin' around my joint now until this blows over." "Keep your hair down," Lefty rejoined placatingly. "You can't tie a little vacation." "With business like it's been for the last six months. . . . I'll take care of that," Lefty

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

MOUTH BREATHING OFTEN SHOWS NEED FOR AN OPERATION.

By DR. MORRIS FISHER, Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health and Magazine.

A child who breathes through the mouth rather than properly through the nose usually has a short upper lip, a narrow crumpled upper arch, protruding teeth in front, a lower jaw that is greatly undeveloped and a receding chin. This condition is preventable and parents should do all they can to correct mouth breathing in justice to the child's future.

Mouth breathers, keeping the mouth open, allow the upper lip to hang short. People who breathe normally through the nose keep the lips compressed, use the muscles around the mouth, and give the upper lip a chance to develop properly.

In the same way the upper arch of the mouth is caused to be very narrow and high, the incisor teeth project, and since the roof of the mouth is the floor of the nose, the breathing space in the latter is diminished.

A child breathes through the mouth because its nose is obstructed, usually by enlargement of the adenoids that lie back of the nasal cavity, and an associated condition is such that the child has no difficulty in breathing properly when standing during the day, but suffers blockage of the breathing tract only when lying down for a nap or to sleep at night.

Enlargement of the tonsils and inflammation may also be partly responsible for breathing through the mouth. This causes the child to push the bones of the lower jaw forward, locking the teeth in an unusual position.

When the infected and inflamed tonsils and adenoids are removed the child may not at once become a nose breather instead of a mouth breather because of the abnormal position in which the structures of the mouth, nose and throat may have developed. Furthermore, the mouth breathing will have become a habit established by long use.

"Looking for trouble?" the officer asked without giving Stephen time to reply to J. B.'s remark. Lefty stepped forward and the officer studied him closely, while Stephen explained that he'd been demonstrating the car to Flint. "H'm," the officer said reflectively. "How'd you happen to drop in at this place?" "It was Flint's idea," Stephen told him. "This man—I don't know his name—indicating J. B. with a slight wave of his hand, "is a friend of his. Said he wanted him to look over the car." The officer nodded. "Better come along to the station and tell us what you know," he said to Flint. "And you, too, J. B." They seemed reluctant to comply, but the officer was firm. "Any one else here who was in that room?" he said before turning away to his motorcycle. "No one but the bartender," Stephen replied. He'd made certain of that point for himself. The officer turned back. "I'll have a word with him," he said and strode into the house.

SMART TRIPLE TIERS.
A sophisticated fashion for the little sub-deb who demands frocks just like the grown-ups wear. The triple tiered skirt flutters so gracefully, and is such a decided smart change from full gathered skirt. Indeed not! It's just one of those more feminine types that Paris considers so important this season. It is just as smart and wearable as can be made of printed sprigged dimity in rose-pink tones, orchid voile, blue cotton tular, printed with white polka-dots, printed voile in geometric motifs in yellow, orange and pale blue and white checked gingham. For "dress-up" occasions, select printed crepe de chine. White voile is girlish for graduation frock. Taffeta in watermelon pink or peach shade in georgette crepe is adorable for parties and summer vacation wardrobe. Pattern comes in sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. In the 8-year size, 1 1/2 yards of 39-inch material with 3 3/4 yards of ribbon is all that is needed. Price 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLEN S. ULLMER

The Homeliest Woman in the World (such a distinction surely deserves capitals) has tossed her rare title to the winds, touched by spring and the desire to win at least an approving glance from The One Man.

This is the story which tumbles forth from colorful backstage land of Ringling Brothers.

The Homeliest Woman is Mrs. Mary Bevans of England, whose fame and fortune to herself and children for many a year.

The One Man is Alfred, the leopard caretaker—or is it the giraffe?

Anyway, story has it, when The Homeliest Woman saw Alfred, all pride in her title fled. She is supposed to have appealed to a circus colleague for help in winning some sort of favor from Alfred.

And someone or other straightway took her to a beauty parlor, had her given a bob, shampoo with a little fleck of dye in the rinse water, a marcel, a facial, a manicure, guided her in buying a spring wardrobe to "suit her type," and lo, Alfred has at least noted her existence, and hopes springs in The Homeliest Woman's heart.

At the circus, they say, is sending out an S. O. S. for a new World's Homeliest Woman, for Mrs. Bevans will no longer fill the bill.

PRESS AGENTS, EH?
Now I—and perhaps you—may be unduly suspicious, but I am sure we all agree that this is just one of those "swell" press agent's yarns. It smacks of the yarns continuously sent out about one set of Siamese twins or another—something to the effect that one of them wants to elope but doesn't know how to keep it a secret since her sister must tag along when the license is procured—for that matter, must tag along to the wedding itself, and how the dickens will she be "ditched" for the honeymoon?

It smacks of tales of the clown who played the fool while his hearer is breaking.

Somewhat, what so obvious for a heart-throb yarn as that the World's Homeliest Woman should fall in love when all the world is white with May, and for the sake of love toss away a title of distinction, even if a brand of distinction for which not everyone might bicker?

But, if true or false, it shows a true knowledge of female psychology which is interesting. Whether Mrs. Mary Bevans did or did not fall in love with Alfred, the leopard or giraffe caretaker, whether for love of him she did or did not toss away her distinction and big money making asset, as so much rubbish, the fact remains that there isn't a doubt in the world that she and any other woman would do that very thing if she wanted love of a particular man.

A DUBIOUS RESULT
The only slightly non-authentic phase of the story concerns the effect of the marcel and new clothes upon Alfred. This is a story-book ending. In real life, it is very doubtful whether all these transformations would make any real difference.

No, in real life, Mrs. Mary would toss away all that she had in life for the sake of the gleaming bauble of love, only to learn that she had neither that nor the things she had tossed away for it. If Alfred could not love her in her ugliness, it is just as sure that he could not love her in her new state, and especially sure if he ever dreamed that she had deliberately "given up all" for him. He would then become paralyzed with fright, and she would have absolutely no hope at all.

But, whether true or false, good luck, Mrs. Bevans. May you never mourn the rash thing you did when springtime knocked too persistently at your heart.

But you will mourn, I have no doubt. You will find yourself now just a plain homely woman, helped, after all, very little by the beauty parlor's best, and you will mourn for the loss of anything that lifted you from the common herd—even if that anything was nothing more than an insult like "The World's Homeliest Woman."

Bill Tilden May Not Make Davis Cup Team

Will Have to Improve Immensely in Play Before June; Goes Abroad Soon; May Fool 'Em Yet.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.
New York, April 23.—William T. Tilden, the man whose name will resound through the halls of time until posterity itself is not more, may have played his last round of singles on behalf of his Uncle Samuel in the Davis Cup series, unless he can lift the tempo of his game well above that of recent months. What he may be able to do before July may get him a place on the 1929 singles team; what he has been doing, won't.

This was more than common gossip in tennis circles today. It almost amounted to an official utterance, although those responsible were careful to point out that the final and official selection of the team was in the hands of the Davis Cup committee and that the decision not only would not but could not be made until June. No one hesitated, however, in anticipating the committee's action in the event that Tilden fails to function before the final and challenge rounds in Europe this summer.

Tilden, it was explained, has two chances of qualifying in the singles play, one positive, the other negative. The former would mean that Tilden had shown some definite vestige of his former mastery in the tournaments at Wimbledon, Paris and Holland. The negative chance is that those chosen for the singles in the American zone play so indifferently as to leave the committee no alternative but to stake its all on the gamble that Tilden can reclaim in the emergency some of the brilliance he once knew. The former tournaments, particularly Wimbledon, will be Tilden's tryout for the team. If he plays as well there as he did last year, you couldn't keep him out with a quarantine; if he plays appreciably below his 1928 Wimbledon form, you couldn't get him in with a court order.

There will be no formal trials for this year's team, it seems. Tilden and his inevitable partner, Francis T. Hunter, will sail for abroad early in May to acclimatize themselves gradually for the European season. America, therefore, will have to use other men in the early rounds of the Cup series, beginning in Canada next month. It is understood that these men will be George M. Lott and Johnny Hennessey, members of the 1928 team; and Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn. The latter beat Tilden indoors in William's first match as reinstated amateur last winter. Allison won the Mason and Dixon title from Hunter last Saturday, thus reversing the decision Hunter gained in Florida.

Mac Smith Hopes to Beat Jinx In British Open at Muirfield

New York, April 23.—Will Mac Smith be able to beat the championship jinx this season?
The Scot is hoping that when he returns to the United States in the summer he will have to account to the customs for an extra piece of baggage—a little silver cup, more or less rococo in design and of little material value. Yet to Mac it will be worth all the gold in the Treasury, for it will mean that he will have broken through the championship jinx which has haunted his footsteps since he came to this country two decades ago.

When you watch the Carnoustie man swing a club, you marvel that he doesn't walk away with every title in the world bar none. But that championship complex, from which no divot-digger is ever really free, has kept Mac from the blue-ribbon class, even when it didn't seem possible that he could fall to win.
Still Dangerous
When Mac tees up at Muirfield early in May, in quest of the British open title, will the ghost of that disastrous 82 he took at Prestwick walk along the fairway with him? If he can wipe that score out of his memory, Mac will be a dangerous contender for the fastest in the golf world.
Smith must have had many a nightmare over that 82. Think of it—needing 78 to win the British title, and taking 82 to finish fourth! That was Mac's portion in 1925. It would seem that a 73 for a master golfer such as Smith, should have been simple under any conditions, but Mac, with his nerves jumping and his teeth on edge, simply couldn't stand the gauntlet of having twenty thousand golf-mad spectators push him and maul him all over the course.
They say that in sportdom they never come back. Well, Mac did. He came to this country in 1908, a scraggly youngster with a thick curl of hair (from which he has never parted), and backed in the reflected glory of his brothers Alex and the late Will. The Smith boys had put the clan in the limelight by winning a pair of national titles, but it wasn't long before Mac made his bid for fame.
Fate had the cards stacked

RUS MAKES GOOD

RUS FISHER
Rus Fisher of Hartford who has pitched both for and against Manchester baseball teams (St. Mary's, Sons of Italy and others) is making good with the Harrisburg, Pa. club of the New York-Pennsylvania league according to reports. Fisher is well known by Manchester baseball fans. Fisher was the mainstay on the famous Elmwood Endees, a team which Tommy Sipples put to the fore last year and the season previous.

Mac drifted westward a few years later, and for some time he disappears from the golfing firmament entirely. Stories drifted back from California concerning the golfer, who was waging a war that seemed to be a losing fight. But the Smith clan is a hardy one—and in 1921 Mac started the world by coming back strong at Columbia, where his score of 299 was fifth.
Today Mac's mental state is perfect. He is comfortably fixed, has a grand job at the Lakeview Golf and Country Club, and if ever fortune is to smile on him, Muirfield is the place, and 1929 the time.

Bag 56 Hits in First Five Games, Six of Them Homers; Uhle Beats Alexander.

New York, April 23.—As the second week of the National League season stars, the Chicago Cubs continue to live up to their 1929 reputation of being heavy hitters. In five games they have collected 56 hits, including 13 doubles and 6 home runs, for a team average of .318. In winning his second start of the season yesterday Malone held the Cards to 6 hits and gained a 3 to 0 decision over the veteran Grover Alexander.

George Uhle, pitched Detroit to a 1 to 0 victory over the St. Louis Browns yesterday for his second win of the campaign.
Cincinnati came to life and bumped off the Pirates, 9 to 4. A six-run rally in the seventh turned the trick.
The hitless White Sox pounded four Cleveland pitchers for ten runs, while Alphonse Thomas blanked the Indians.
Rain again held all the eastern teams idle. The Giants, who were unable to play a single game of their series in Boston, were favored with fair weather for their opening at home against the Phillies today.

I am glad that Bill Klem has reconsidered his determination to retire and again will be a member of the National League staff of umpires. In the 22 years I spent in the majors, it was my good fortune to officiate in any number of important series with Klem. I might say that there have been umpires just as good as Klem, but certainly none any better.
Klem brooks no interference on the ball field. I feel sure that the only fine that Klem ever rescinded was at my behest. That's another story.

Meeting Klem last winter, we naturally discussed baseball, and one of the things talked over was the biggest laugh we ever got out of a serious situation or at least that looked that way at the time. I will let Klem tell his best laugh.
"I was umpiring in Philadelphia at the time and one of the sports writers in a Sunday edition featured me for almost a page of copy," says Klem. "The story was a big boost and, in the opinion of the writer, I deserved to be ranked as a star among the umpires of the major leagues. Since every fellow prefers to criticism, I was naturally much pleased at the complimentary notice."
"In the game Monday, the day following publication of the article, I had a tough time of it. Everything seemed to go wrong. At various stages of the game there would come from the Philly bench certain statements from the story of the day previous, followed by the usual 'Razzberry' or 'I don't believe it.' It kept getting worse and I finally decided I would have to nip the affair in the bud. As is customary with umpires, I picked a player from the bench, a youngster, whose name I didn't even know, as the one to be chased. This course is followed by most umpires, so as not to weaken the team but merely serve as a warning.
"Surely, you don't mean me, Mr. Klem?" said the youngster I had picked on.
"Yes I mean you and hurry up about it, make yourself scarce," was my reply.
The rookie slowly picked himself up from the bench, took a chew of tobacco, put on his sweater, looked around for his glove and moved leisurely toward the exit sign leading to the club house. As he reached the plate, he stopped for a moment and got rid of the following line of chatter at my expense.
"So you're Bill Klem, star of the big league umpires! Well, all I have to say is, if you don't guess balls and strikes any better than picking me out as the noise-maker, the fellow who wrote that story is either a friend of yours or an awful liar."
"I pretended to ignore the young man, but never in my life did I want to laugh as badly as at that moment, even though the quip was entirely at my expense."

VERSATILE CLOCK

London — The clock made for Pope Sixtus V, now in the mediaeval room of the British Museum, is three stories high. It tells on its dial the last days, signs of the Zodiac, the motions of the sun and moon on their courses. The gods of the days and weeks are represented. The four ages of man strike the quarters on a bell.

FRANCE BLAMES COCKTAILS AND LOVE FOR CRIME

Paris.—Cocktails, jealousy and the Stock Exchange are responsible for most murders in France.

Dr. Pierre Vachet, Director of the Paris School of Psychology, who has made an exhaustive study of crime in France gives the above reasons for the majority of crime and murder.

Mr. Vachet informed International News Service, that sixty-five per cent of the murders committed in France were on the part of husband and wife.

"The modern intensity of life and war," says the Doctor, "make it easier to kill today than yesterday. Five cocktails are needed today where one was sufficient yesterday."

"Passion for speculation in the stock market is another reason. The world must have excitement. It is found in speculation."

Jealousy Different.

Dr. Vachet says jealousy always was a "good reason" for murder—at least before French times.

"The Doctor's jealousy is much different from that of a man's," the Doctor informs us. "A jealous man will always kill his wife but a jealous wife always kills the other woman."

"This is easy to explain: A woman's jealousy is mental while a man's jealousy is merely physical. The consequence is that the wife feels she must do away with the rival while the man sees no other way but to destroy the woman."

The Doctor admits the fact that all murders are committed under abnormal mental strain.

Psychological Question.

"The psychological question is," he continues, "what produces or helps produce this abnormal condition. Three things, according to my observations, bring this state about in these modern times."

"After all, with the exception of jealousy, the other reasons are merely the eternal seeking for excitement."

"A man consumes numerous cocktails, he is obviously unbalanced mentally for the time being. His mind is in a state that permits him to commit a rash act. In other words the brakes won't work."

"Another thing, according to my observations on the stock market, is that the stimulation is as great as the cocktails. Again the brakes refuse to work."

Avareice and hate sometimes play roles the Doctor states but he assures that statistics prove that they appear less often than the cocktails, jealousy and the market.

Out of all the lost fads and fancies of the "flash age" E. Berry Wall's neckties, dogs and salad dressings still survive with their sponsors.

As a fashionplate on Fifth avenue in the Nineties he supplanted Beau Brummel as the criterion for elegance. For years the well-dressed man was called a "Berry Wall."

Other dictators of sartorial whims have come and gone, but Berry Wall is still on the boulevards, the only exponent of his high, open-neck collars, ample and puffy cravats and a poodle dog which he holds in leash.

When he enters one of the most expensive restaurants near the Place de l'Opera tourists look up and whisper to the waiters: "Who is he?"

Then they see Berry Wall mix his own salad dressing in the Continental style that he introduced in New York during the Lobster Palace era. The headwaiter and a couple of underlings stand by with the ingredients during the "ceremony."

Berry Wall has his own recipe for salad dressing. It has never been divulged.

FEDERAL AGENTS FIGHT DESPERADOES IN HOTEL

Inspector Shot in Battle—One Woman Arrested.

Chicago, April 23.—A post office inspector was shot in the abdomen and a gunman was wounded in a savage gun battle between three Federal agents and four desperadoes in a North Side hotel room today.

E. L. Jackson, the inspector wounded, is in a critical condition. Firing with shotguns and pistols began when four suspects lured to the Hawthorne Arms hotel, entered a room and found the two government operatives and an informer awaiting them.

One of the quartet named Mack-inn fell with a bullet in his thigh. The other three outlaws and a woman who was with them jumped one story from a window. The men escaped, but the woman, who gave the name of Mrs. Marie Courtney, wife of one of the suspects, sprained an ankle and was arrested.

Courtney, supposed leader of the band, is said by police to have a record for robbery and the attempted bribery in March, 1923, of jurors who were trying Gov. Len Small in a case involving misuse of state funds.

Washington, April 23.—United States district attorneys who fail to heed the letter sent out by Mabel Walker Willebrandt, assistant attorney-general, instructing them to "use discretion" in application of the drastic Jones law, will find themselves in exceeding distasteful with the Department of Justice, and it may be that a few resignations will be asked for.

This was the impression thrown out at the Department of Justice today concerning the statement of Levi H. Bancroft, district attorney in Milwaukee, to the effect that the Jones law would be applicable to all liquor cases in his district, so far as he was concerned.

SENSE and NONSENSE

SMILE every time you get the chance—it's the chance smile that wins. SMILE if you're thin—laugh if fat—and if you're neither—just grin. SMILE at hard luck—the fates may think you like it and quit. SMILE and never let the sun set on your troubles—set on them yourself. SMILE at the past and you can grin at the future. SMILE while you're awake and you'll laugh in your sleep. SMILE when you fall and you'll die laughing at your success. SMILE when you're mad—and try to frown when you're happy. SMILE at a dime and it will look like a dollar. SMILE if it kills you and you'll die with a grin on your face. SMILE every time you think of it and you'll soon get the habit.

THE GOLF WIDOW SPEAKS You were once devoted, dear, To me,—but your love was flashy. Shallow, fickle, insincere:— Now niblick and a masher Have replaced me in your heart And have driven us apart.

Marriage has, you will agree, Hazards, darling, in abundance; Granting this, I cannot see Why you seek this strange redundancy. You can lie and drive at home, Why then from its precincts roam?

Many a hole you've got into Here are home, and my perusal Of your past, reveals that you Here have made full many a fozzie. Your style I have not cramped, dear me, Why then seek a foreign tee?

Very well then, go, nor pause On the order of your going; Reap the whirlwind that, my laws, You have in the wind been sowing. I, too, shall a new love seek, Auction bridge—ten times a week!

NOT A SOUND WOULD BE HEARD Unless, you have something to say, Don't talk, so they say—we deny it! If this rule everybody'd obey This old world would be terribly quiet.

NOT A BLANK!

To FIRE today's SHOT take careful aim and blaze away five times. That's par. One solution is on another page.

Word search grid with letters F, I, R, E and S, H, O, T.

THE RULES.

1—The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

2—You change only one letter at a time.

3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.

4—The order of letters cannot be changed. One solution is printed on another page.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The North Star eyed the Tiny bunch and loudly said, "I have a hunch that you have never seen the funny milk way before. It's fun to spread it, me, uh, riv, and make it streak across the sky. When it is all spread out it looks just like a milky floor. "It surely is," one Tiny said. And each one shook his little head. They still were rather dazed to see such queer things in the sky. Imagine stars, both large and small, all whizzing round, unless they'd all. It was a most unusual sight, as they trailed through the sky. The North Star then broke in again. "We only have this now and then. The milky way cannot be seen on every night, you know. But, when I toss my tall o'er far, I start hem off, and there you are. I am he one, and only one, with power o make them go." The Tinies thanked the star once more. Then Clowny said, "What more's in store. We'd like to see all that we can while we are with the moon." This made the moon man broadly smile, and he replied, "Just wait a while. I think I have another treat. 'Twill be here pretty soon." This made one of the Tinies shout. "Oh, tell us what it's all about. We can't stay very long 'cause we have other things to do. Our bird may tire out flying 'round, so very soon he must be found. You see, we're always very kind to good old Goofygo." Just then they heard a swishing sound. Of course it made them look around. "That's what I meant," the moon man cried. "You've read of this before." And all of them saw, very soon, a big cow jump right o'er the moon. This pleased them so they clapped their hands, and all began to roar. (The Tinymites run along the milky way in the next story.)
