

RICH DOCTOR MISSING, FEAR "BLACK HAND"

Police Make Known Dr. Brancati Has Been Missing Since November; $225,000 Also Gone.

New York, April 25.—"I will come to your office—I and others—each of whom will skin you alive, because you are a brute and a pig."

With this note, scrawled in an illiterate hand in Italian, and a .32 caliber bullet as their only tangible clues, Assistant District Attorneys Sylvester Ryan and George Deluca, today prowled through the musty interior of the old Gouverneur Morris mansion overlooking Long Island Sound, seeking some connection between the threatening letter and the present whereabouts of the mysteriously missing Dr. Charles Brancati—if the millionaire Italian be still alive.

Back in the sinister maze that closes the mystery—as baffling as ever brought forth by the facile pen of Poe or Doyle—lurks the somewhat shadowy form of one Luigi Romano, for whom the missing person Bureau and the Bronx district attorney's office are also searching.

Missing Since Nov. 1.

Dr. Brancati, a graduate of Columbia Medical College and prominent in Italian fraternal circles, has been missing since November 1 last, although his disappearance was revealed only yesterday. Since his departure—voluntarily or otherwise—from the gloomy mansion, about $225,000 of the physician's funds have been withdrawn from brokerage firms by persons presenting authorizations bearing the missing man's alleged signature.

Becoming alarmed at Dr. Brancati's protracted and unexplained absence, Ernest Brancati, the physician's brother, went to the Bronx district attorney's office a month ago. He revealed the physician had been annoyed by "black hand" letters and had had several enemies. Identity of the latter was not divulged.

Letters from London.

The mystery today assumed an international scope when it was learned the letters of "authorization" to the brokers had borne Canadian and London postmarks.

The dreary old Morris mansion, overlooking the Sound from its bleak promontory in the Bronx, is the starting point of the investigation begun by Ryan and Deluca.

Making their way through the ancient interior, the district attorneys came across the threatening letter lying on the floor in one of the bedrooms. Many gay parties enlivened the lonely mansion, neighbors of the doctor say.

DENTIST MURDERED IN GANGSTER FEUD

Police Believe He Doubled-Crossed Burglars Who Stole Fortune in Bonds.

Chicago, April 25.—Gang vengeance obtained today as a plausible motive for the murder of Dr. Frank L. Brady, dentist, who was shot to death last night in his west side office.

Investigators have unearthed Dr. Brady's former alliance with the "Midge" Pernekes robbery gang, credited with several killings and with raids which netted loot of hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Two gunmen burst into Brady's west side office last night; a woman patient was reclining in an ante-room after a treatment. Dr. Brady had just extracted a tooth for a man.

"I've got you at last," cried one of the arrivals.

Two bullets entered the dentist's chest and he died instantly.

Suspected by Police.

In the belief Dr. Brady was engaged in disposing of huge quantities of bonds stolen by the Pernekes band, police admitted his telephone was had been tapped constantly.

Brady was arrested in 1925 in a round-up of the Pernekes desperadoes. A raid on the home of Brady's mother, Mrs. Anna Beauchamp, disclosed a veritable arsenal of machine guns, shotguns, revolvers and bombs were discovered hidden between the walls.

Rather than testify against her son regarding many crimes and the proposed holdup of a Loop bank, Mrs. Beauchamp committed suicide.

Pernekes, the diminutive leader, and fellow gangsters were sent to prison, but Brady won freedom for lack of evidence.

One theory is that Brady betrayed the gang in disposition of some of the loot.

STILL HOPES OF SETTLING DEBT PROBLEM

German Delegates Confer With Chairman Young on "Salvage Methods" Which May Help Some.

Paris, April 25.—There were indications today that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief of the German delegation to the reparations conference, has still another card that he had not yet played to help along the negotiations toward a possible settlement.

Dr. Schacht held a long conference with Owen D. Young, chairman of the committee of experts, over "salvage methods."

Afterward Dr. Schacht announced that he and Sir Charles Adair plan to leave for Berlin on Tuesday to attend a meeting of the board of the Reichsbank to discuss certain phases of the reparations issue. They expect to return to Paris on Thursday with their report.

Various "salvage methods" to be the experts in bridging the differences between the allied terms and the German offer are being discussed privately.

Expected Rate Raise.

News that the Reichsbank had advanced its rediscount rate to 7 1/2 per cent was received here early in the afternoon, but it had been expected and thus caused no surprise.

Dr. Schacht refused to comment upon his conference with Chairman Young and his proposed trip to Berlin, saying:

"I have not a moment to talk now. I may have more to say later."

Belief that the Germans are planning concessions was strengthened by a brief statement by a member of the German delegation to International News Service. He said:

"It certainly is not impossible that the conference may assume a new aspect upon Dr. Schacht's return from Berlin."

French financiers, who have been watching the German market with keen eyes, admit that there is cause for anxiety over the effect of the break in the reparations conference. There has been a steady withdrawal of gold from Germany during the past month, a considerable portion of it going to the United States.

FARM BOARD PLAN FAVORED BY HOUSE

Hoover One Step Nearer in Getting Relief for the Agriculturists.

Washington, April 25.—President Hoover nears his first Congressional victory today in the passage by the House of the Haugen farm relief bill setting up a Federal Farm Board to encourage cooperative marketing with the backing of a $500,000,000 appropriation.

The first high hurdle has been cleared by administration leaders in preventing consideration of the old equalization fee plan of farm relief.

The export debenture plan of the National Grain also will be ruled out of order.

Thirty-one attempted amendments to the Haugen bill had been defeated as the House continued to work on amendments to the measure today.

Final Vote Near.

Rep. Haugen (R) of Iowa, chairman of the agriculture committee, was driving the bill steadily toward a final vote with virtually solid Republican support and with the machine-like precision with which the old McNary-Haugen bills were rolled through the House.

The Senate meantime continued to debate upon the McNary bill, similar to the Haugen bill except for inclusion of the export debenture feature as an optional plan. In the Senate there is little likelihood of an early vote.

Administration leaders exhibited confidence that they would pass the bill in a form satisfactory to President Hoover, despite the defection of many western Progressives who supported him in the campaign.

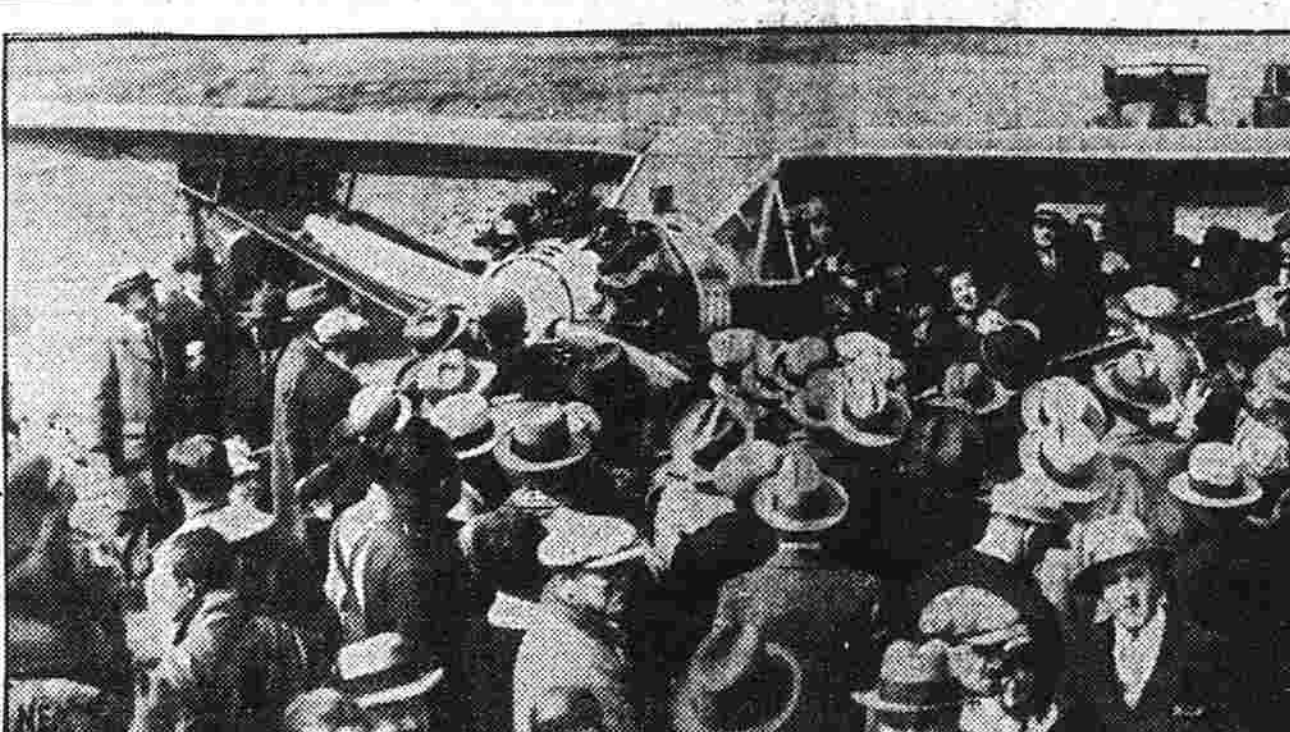

The most notable defection was that of Senator Brookhart (R) of Iowa, who appealed for passage of "a good bill" over the President's veto. He scathingly denounced the farm relief views of Mr. Hoover and accused him of "changing front" since the campaign ended.

STOCK DIVIDENDS.

Philadelphia, April 25.—Pennsylvania railroad today placed its stock on a $4 annual dividend basis, again $3.50 previously, by directors declaring a quarterly dividend of $1 a share, payable May 31 to stock of record May 1.

E. C. Felton was elected a director of the road to succeed the late Samuel Rea. Other directors were re-elected.

At the End of Elinor's 26-Hour Hop

After 26 long, weary hours in the air, while she swung in wide circles over Roosevelt Field, Long Island, Elinor Smith, the "flying flapper" of Freeport, L. I., brought her Bellanca monoplane to earth after establishing a new endurance flight record for women. Spectators and field officials surged about the plane to greet the 17-year-old champion and here you see her leaning from the six-passenger cabin ship as it taxied to a stop. For the last six hours she had down with a disabled stabilizer and had to exert all her strength on the hand controls to hold the heavy craft on its course. She bettered the previous record by more than four hours.

NINE DAYS IN BOAT, 11 SAILORS RESCUED

Cook Dies on Eve of Rescue; Men Were Without Food or Water for Nearly a Week.

New York, April 25.—Tossed about for nine days in an open dory, eleven men, one of them dead, of the New Bedford schooner James E. Coburn were picked up early today 250 miles north of Bermuda. The shipwrecked men were rescued by the crew of the steam yacht Amida, owned by E. R. Behrend of Newport, R. I., according to a wireless message from the master of the yacht to the Radio Marine Corporation here.

The dead: M. Sargent, cook. The survivors: J. Perersia, master; Edward Rice, mate; W. Milliken, engineer; Joseph Madero, steward; Joseph Delgado, Manuel Silva, Henry Diaz, R. Montero, John Britto, seamen; Eugenia Smeldo, messboy.

The James E. Coburn, four-masted schooner sailed from Baltimore April 1. She foundered April 17. She was bound for Fort Defiance, Martinique, and was last sighted April 12 off Cape Henry.

Take to Boat.

For the week since they abandoned their stricken vessel and took the open boat, the eleven men of the schooner's crew were virtually without food and water.

The cook died last night when rescue was so near.

Few details of the tragedy of the sea were included in the terse wireless message from Captain McLoughlin, master of the yacht Amida.

The position noted is about 600 miles off Cape Hatteras.

BEER SUPPLY GONE ON THE LEVIATHAN

Americans Prefer It to Heavy Liquor on the Homeward Trip.

On Board the S. S. Leviathan, April 25.—The preference of Americans, at least in so far as the Leviathan passengers are representative Americans, for beer over heavy liquors, and even wines, has been amply demonstrated on this voyage, the first westward journey of this vessel since 1923 when sold to passengers.

The beer supply on the ship has been completely exhausted, while orders for wines and liquors have been very light.

Beer All Gone.

The first realization of the dent which had been made in the supply of lighter alcoholic beverages came last night when the dining stewards announced that the beer supply had been exhausted, with the ship still more than 36 hours out of New York.

"Maybe that is why there has been so little wine drinking. This crowd is one of beer drinkers," one dining steward remarked.

The smoking room is still getting a light play from passengers, but it was noticed that there was some increase in the number of orders of wine after the beer supply had been consumed.

SENATE FAVORS NAVAL PARITY WITH BRITAIN

If Not the Expected Agreement Will Be Rejected by Congress, Leaders Say; Our Position.

Washington, April 25.—Any new naval agreement, growing out of the discussions before the League of Nations, must provide absolute equality between the United States and Great Britain or it will meet rejection by the Senate, it was indicated today.

The American overture, made through Hugh S. Gibson, at General's office, with general approval among Senatorial leaders but all groups were agreed that the final accord, if any is reached, must provide parity between the American and British navies. The old irreconcilable group joined with their ancient foes, the League of Nations advocates, and the World Court adherents, in affirming this American position.

The lone dissenting voice was raised by Senator King (D) of Utah, a "Little Navy" leader, who declared parity should not be an issue in naval disarmament agreement. King, however, has long maintained this stand in his "Little Navy" battles, only to go down to defeat in the Senate.

Not Ready Yet.

While approving the American overture, Senatorial leaders held the belief that foreign governments are not ready yet for further disarmament but that publicity on the American offer may force a successful conference in the near future due to pressure upon the governments by world opinion.

The irreconcilable camp particularly advocated a naval parity between the United States and Great Britain. Senator Moses (R) of New Hampshire, who succeeded Senator James A. Reed (D) of Mo., as leader of the bloc, had this cryptic statement: "I'm for parity."

Senator La Follette (R) of Wisconsin, another irreconcilable, enlarged upon the bloc's attitude.

"I feel it was a very statesmanlike declaration of the administration's position and should afford a basis for genuine disarmament among the great naval powers. It expresses the hopes of the great majority of the American people."

Caraway's Opinion.

NEW YORK TO ROME NEXT SMITH FLIGHT

Girl Who Broke Endurance Record Wants to Make the Trip Alone.

Freeport, N. Y., April 25.—A non-stop flight, New York to Rome, is the ambition of Elinor Smith, famous American girl-flyer.

"I'm planning on trying it this summer," she said today as she rested in her home here after her strenuous feat of establishing a new world's endurance record for women yesterday. She had been in the air 26 hours, 21 minutes and 33 seconds, being the former record held by Mrs. Louis McPhetridge Thaden of Los Angeles by four hours and 18 minutes.

A little way but very happy, the slim, blue-eyed Miss Smith, occupied her time opening and answering telegrams and taking "cat naps." She smilingly remarked that she was a little behind on sleep.

To Fly Alone.

She was quite certain she would make the Rome flight and she merely laughed when asked if she felt any qualms about making such a hazardous journey. And all alone, a La Lindbergh.

Even her mother, Mrs. Thomas Smith, a former actress, is not afraid.

"Anyway, there would be no sense in me trying to keep Elinor out of the air," said Mrs. Smith. "I simply could not do it, and neither could her father."

How She Passed Time.

Miss Smith herself was quite modest concerning her latest achievement. Asked how she occupied her time while in the air 26 hours she said: "Oh, I read Mark Twain's 'Adventures of Tom Sawyer Abroad' and dreamed of making a trip abroad myself—in my own way."

Her mother remarked that the girl's backers on her projected New York-to-Rome flight have already put up the money but they desire to have their names kept secret for the time being. There was some talk of a flight to Berlin, but Elinor wanted to make it Rome, and Rome it will be.

Elinor declared that had her fat not given out she could have flown for a dozen hours longer. She was feeling physically fit.

CONGRESS SCORES ROUGH AND READY DRY AGENTS' ACTS

POURS A FISH INTO RADIATOR
And Then the Trouble Starts for Manchester Green Man; Trout Cost Him $3.50.

Henry Nevers, employed by William Cowles of Parker street, went fishing yesterday and among the trout he caught was one six inches long. He was pretty proud of that trout and instead of keeping it with the rest of the string placed it in a separate pail. Having a little business to do and the radiator of his automobile leaking when he went to take the pail, forgetting the trout and poured it in with the water. A few minutes later he realized his mistake and he turned up at the Depot Square filling station with a boiled fish in the radiator apart to pick out the boiled fish in pieces. It cost him $3.50 for the work.

Town May Be Asked to Buy 9th's Schools.

Three of Four Parcels Offered to District by Cheney Brothers in Realty Are Town Propositions.

The proposition made by Cheney Brothers that the Ninth school district purchase the Cheney owned school buildings at a price of $682,558.94 has brought up a question in the minds of town and district leaders here whether or not the town should purchase some of these buildings. Some members of the Board of Selectmen believe that it would be more economical if the town were to purchase the heating plant, and Franklin school and building on the Recreation building. This view agrees with that of several other taxpayers and business men in town The Herald has approached.

Town Needs Them.

It is pointed out that of the district owned to the Ninth district by Cheney Brothers only one, the Barnard school, is really used and needed by the Ninth district. The Franklin school building, part of the High school system and is not used in any way by the grades of the Ninth district. The Recreation Center is used for High school symposium instruction and for town social affairs as much if not more than it is used for the grades. Moreover, the state requires that recreational facilities be provided for High school students. Since the High school, Franklin school and Recreation Center are heated by the heating plant on School street, it would seem wise, The Herald's informants say, for the town to purchase this plant rather than purchase heat for its buildings through the Ninth district.

Build, Buy or Rent.

The town has just recently acquired a High school building, but now finds itself about to pay rent to either Cheney Brothers or the Ninth district for a second building. It must have the quarters for the Franklin school provides or else build a new High school. That leaves but three courses open to the town with regard to its High school facilities. Either it must buy the Franklin school, pay rent to Cheney Brothers or the Ninth district, or build another school to house those pupils already quartered in the Franklin school. It's a case of buy, build or pay rent for the town as well as the Ninth district.

Would Cost $240,000.

Cheney Brothers have offered the Franklin school to the Ninth district, and it is assumed the offer to the town would be the same, at a price of $164,638.14. The heating plant price is $56,432.28 and the land cost would be about $20,000. This means that the town would be required to pay a little over $240,000 to own these buildings which it should have in its own best interests, say the proponents of this plan. The Recreation Center is left out of the discussion simply because it is common talk in the Ninth district that this building will be the bone of contention when the whole proposition of the schools.

TREASURY BALANCE.

Deeds of Dry Agents Keeps Treasury Department in Hot Water and Irritates Congressmen; Sen. Bingham Raises His Voice to Criticize Coast Guard; Others Protest.

Washington, April 25.—Congress showed signs today of becoming irritated over the rough-and-ready use of firearms in prohibition enforcement.

Congress is dry, sternly so politically, but the increasing number of "incidents" wherein enforcement officers have been too quick with their trigger-fingers has started a backfire of public sentiment which is daily making itself felt in the form of protests from constituents. Even Dry Congressmen are sensitive when their constituents begin to complain.

The U. S. Coast Guard and Customs patrol are coming in for severe criticism on Capitol Hill. It began with the shelling and sinking of the Canadian schooner "Im Alone" 200 miles at sea, it increased when shots were fired at the Norwegian fruit boat Juan; when the waterfront of Miami was raked with machine gun fire; when Stuyvesant Fish's yacht was boarded in New York harbor; and the latest episode, the shelling of the American coal collier, T. A. D. Jones, hasn't helped matters any.

Officer Dismissed.

The Treasury Department has endeavored to soothe ruffled Congressional feelings by announcing that the officer responsible for the machine gunning of the Miami waterfront has been forced out of the service. But even that hasn't stillled the protests going up from Capitol Hill.

Even so suave and even-tempered a legislator as Senator Hiram (Continued on Page 3)

JUDGE TO SENTENCE WRITER ON MONDAY

Grandmother-Author of Sex Pamphlet Faces Term in Prison.

New York, April 25.—The motion by defense counsel for Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett, grandmother-author of a scientific sex pamphlet requesting ten days in which to prepare arguments to have the conviction of Mrs. Dennett on the charge of sending obscene matter through the mails set aside, was denied today by Federal Judge Warren B. Burrows, in Brooklyn.

Judge Burrows said he would sentence Mrs. Dennett next Monday. The white-haired prisoner faces a federal penitentiary term and a fine or both.

Morris Ernst, attorney for Mrs. Dennett, argued today that the barring of his expert witnesses, at Mrs. Dennett's trial by the court, might have led the jury to believe that the defense claims that the pamphlet was used by reputable educators was not well founded.

Ernst also argued that the "welfare of the youth of the country was at stake" and that it was not good for the future of the nation in permitting the postmaster general to decide what was and what was not obscene.

Welfare of Youth.

"It is not because Mrs. Dennett is liable to be sent to jail," pleaded Ernst, "but because the welfare of the youth of the country is at stake. How are the children to get information if the author of a pamphlet such as this is to be branded as a felon? There is no such case in all the annals of jurisprudence."

In denying a motion for time in which to supply the court with expert opinion, Judge Burrows said:

"I have given this case a great deal of thought. Nothing new has been adduced here today. The verdict was in accordance with the facts and was a proper one."

At Mrs. Dennett's trial for sending a pamphlet entitled, "The Sex Side of Life," through the mails, the court ruled the pamphlet was the best evidence. It was read to the jury which decided it was obscene. The court barred attempts to introduce as defense witnesses a number of authorities on education, medicine, morals and psychology. These were prepared to testify that the pamphlet was a worthy educational treatise.

TOWN PLAYERS PUT OVER SERIOUS PLAY

Remarkable Work of Four Members of Cast Greatly Aids in Success.

The Town Players engaged in a daring adventure when they produced "A Bill of Divorcement" at the Circle theater last night...

Imagining a mother whose husband was shell-shocked in the great war and has been confined in an asylum for fifteen years...

The agonizing possibilities of this situation are developed with consummate skill, and they are intensified by the fact that in the father's family there is a faint taint of insanity...

It is an amazing thing that a little group of local players could "put over" such a play as that. And yet the Town Players did it.

field." She was the bitter, unsympathetic, formal religionist to the very life, and at no point was there the slightest suggestion of amateurishness in her work.

As "Kit, Pumpfrey," the young fiance of "Sydney," Ray Warren was much more than adequate. He has a perfectly easy stage presence and put into the part all the boyish innocence, and by turns all the boyish feeling, that belong to it.

Other Characters. It is no derogation of the work of the rest of the cast to signal out the achievements of those four for special recognition. The entire company had been well and ably schooled and there was that alertness and promptness in the movement of the play the lack of which so often is the bane of amateur productions.

On the whole, the undertaking of this highly ambitious play would seem to have been more than justified. Followers of the Town Players have been given a glimpse into the deeper dramatic qualities in the possession of the membership.

show, was arrested on an assault charge made by a young woman, but the charge was dismissed. The letter read:

"Big Villian: If you don't send me quickly this woman you have in your house, I will come to your office and skin you alive."

"If you don't chase her quickly out of your house, I will show you that I am a man, and that you will no longer remain on earth. However, I will let you enjoy your self for one day's time. Then I will come to your office—I and others—each of whom will skin you because you are a brute and a pig. Neither date nor signature was on the scribbled sheet."

Held for Ransom. Ercola Brancati, another brother, told authorities that at various intervals during the last five months he has received typewritten letters, bearing what he is sure is the doctor's signature, informing him the missing man is safe but demanding the orders for money to meet both the brothers believe the letters were typewritten by some one who is holding the physician for ransom and who had forced the doctor to sign them.

The elusive personality of Luigi Romano was injected into the mystery when a letter was received by the brokerage firm of Hardy & Co., with whom Dr. Brancati had an account, directing that $234,000 be transferred to Romano.

Romano then withdrew all but $232 of the doctor's fund and disappeared. A widespread police hunt for Romano has proved unavailing.

Dr. Brancati started life in New York as a poor Italian boy. He worked as a barber, then a mediator in spare moments. Upon graduation from Columbia Medical College he established a large and lucrative practice in the Italian colony here. At the time of his disappearance he owned in addition to the Morris mansion, valued at $400,000, and the $234,000 deposited with Hardy & company.

NOON STOCKS

New York, April 25.—New advances in a rally of the railroad, utility and specialty stocks in the first hour today were not sufficient to offset losses in the active industrials, and the Market showed the effects of the usual Thursday nervousness over money market conditions.

The bulls followed up their old tactics of pushing a few of the favorites sharply forward at the opening, Hayes Body gaining 4 points in this process and Columbia Graphophone annexing 3 points more in the first period.

A wave of selling in the oil stocks was Wall street's reaction to the continued over-production of Crude Oil and the possibility of the stopping of this wastage through cooperation with the state agencies. Simms Petroleum reacted all the way back to 30, or about 4-1/2 points below yesterday's high price and loss of a point or two were recorded in other active standard and independent oils.

The bull rampage in stocks this week will probably cause an increase in brokers' loans which was something the conservative forces in Wall street were anxious to avoid. Whether or not it has been possible to manipulate the money market as successfully as at other times will be told when the report is issued after the close today.

Allis Chalmers, at the head of the high-priced specialties, added 6-1/2 points to yesterday's 15-point jump and sold at 200. Consolidated Gas, Briggs Manufacturing and a few others moved against the market, but persistent selling of Bethlehem Steel, U. S. Steel, Radio, General Motors and other speculative leaders carried prices down a point or two.

Weakness in Bethlehem Steel followed reports of the possible issuance of 600,000 new common shares at $35 a share, the proceeds to be devoted to the expansion of plant and manufacturing facilities rather than the redemption of outstanding bonds.

Investment buying of the Rails was resumed in the second hour, with Pennsylvania reaching a new high for the year at $3. Boosting of the dividend on the common shares to $4 a year and formation of the new Penn Road Corporation for the purpose of holding the stocks now owned by the railroads, has increased the popularity of Pennsylvania stock with investors and the speculators alike. Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Union Pacific, and other high grade dividend rails moved up moderately in response to a better buying demand.

The money rates were unchanged and demand for new funds was not so heavy. Commodity markets were firm, with cotton off 4 to 10 points.

TWO MORE BOYS HERE TO BE EAGLE SCOUTS

Arthur L'Heureux and Harvey Gould to be Given Honors Tomorrow Night.

Two more names will be added to the list of Eagle Scouts in Manchester at the Court of Honor Friday evening at the School street Rec when Arthur L'Heureux of Troop 2, St. James church, and Harvey Gould of Troop 3, Center church, receive the highest award bestowed by Scouting. With the addition of these two Scouts there will be five Eagles in Manchester. Four of these have become Eagle Scouts during the past year, while one received the award nearly four years ago.

To many people Scouting seems to be an organization to keep the growing boy out of mischief between the age of 12 and 18. The passing of tests and the attainment of the Eagle Scout rank, to them, are just methods used to keep the boys busy. To a certain extent this is true. But, concerning the tests, it is not. A boy who attains the Eagle Scout rank, if he is a real Eagle has learned the equivalent of a college education.

During the year a young man applying for entry in an officers training camp. The requirements called for two years of college. On the strength of his Eagle Scout certificate, he was allowed to pass. To attain the rank of Eagle a Scout must pass 21 merit badges. Eleven of these are designated and the other ten the Scout can choose from a list of 74. The eleven obligatory badges are: swimming, life saving, bird study, cooking, camping, athletics or physical development, pioneering, first aid, public health, civics and personal health. Other merit badges cover all phases of everyday work. A Scout who passes merit badges sooner or later hits on one which he picks out as his life work. No Scout can really get all the badges as new ones are added every year by a committee which carefully chooses the subjects which will be of benefit to the Scout.

TRADE BOARD TO PROBE NEWSPAPER PURCHASES

Report That Power Trust Will Use Them to Spread Propaganda.

Washington, April 25.—Subpoenas have been issued by the Federal Trade Commission for half a dozen New Englanders involved in the recent deal by which the International Paper & Power Company acquired control of two Boston newspapers, the Herald and Traveler. It was learned today.

The transaction is being investigated by the commission in connection with its probe of the power trust.

The subpoenas are said to have been served in Boston yesterday and today, but pending confirmation, commission officials declined to divulge any of the details, or to reveal the identity of those sought for questioning. The papers are understood to be returnable April 30.

The commission's attention was drawn to the Herald-Traveler transaction by Senator Norris (R) of Neb., who asked that it be investigated as an apparent part of the power trust's campaign to influence public opinion against municipal or public ownership of utilities. It has already been shown that the so-called trust subsidized college and university professors and procured arguments against public ownership in college text books.

Officials of the International Paper & Power Company are understood to be among those subpoenaed for questioning.

DID HAGEN ERROR?

Leeds, England, April 25.—As the members of the American and British Ryder Cup teams played their final practice rounds on the Moortown course today in preparation for the opening match tomorrow, the chief topic of conversation at the club house was whether or not Captain Walter Hagen made a mistake in omitting Horton Smith's name from the possible line-up for the foursomes tomorrow. Smith, the 29-year-old "baby" of the team, who stole much of Hagen's thunder by winning most of the winter tournaments in the United States, will play in the singles on Saturday along with Al Watrous of Detroit.

WOMEN OF THE FUTURE BIGGER THAN THE MEN.

Chicago, April 25.—Puny, anaemic men and lusty, beautiful women will inhabit America of the future, unless something's done about it. This warning was sounded at the Midwest Society of Physical Education, in convention here today.

Women, say the educators, are reaching physical perfection through outdoor athletics, while men steadily are becoming enfeebled and stunted in poorly ventilated offices.

HEBRON

Mr. Mackintosh, a student at Berkeley Divinity School, New Haven, took charge of the service at St. Peter's church Sunday morning.

An accident occurring during the long rain storm took place on the Columbia road at the top of Post Hill Saturday afternoon. A Studebaker driven by New Haven motorists skidded, and finally capsized, turning completely over and resting on the top.

The Christian Endeavor societies of Hebron and Gilead were invited to unite with the Endeavorers of Buckingham church Sunday evening and a number of the members availed themselves of the privilege, the services here being omitted.

Snow fell all day on Monday, and there was a heavy frost visible Tuesday morning. Truman C. Ives was brought home from St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, Saturday afternoon. Mr. Ives is in a much improved condition. He was operated on for acute peritonitis. He has been placed again in the frame which he is wearing while under treatment at his home for bone tuberculosis.

Travels of Mr. Ives have been discharged from the hospital where he underwent treatment for an injury to the knee. Claude W. Jones is also much improved. He has also suffered from a knee trouble.

Miss Marjorie Martin spent the week-end as the guest of her parents, the Rev. and Mrs. T. D. Martin, returning to her work as librarian at Dalton, Mass., Monday morning.

The Rev. T. D. Martin, rector of St. Peter's church, who had been kept in by an indisposition for a week or more, officiated at two funeral services on Tuesday. The first was that of Mrs. A. E. Turner, of West street, Columbia, on Tuesday m., and the second that of George Matson Buck, occurring at 3:30, a committal service being held at the grave, and interment in St. Peter's cemetery. Mr. Buck, whose age was 102 years and five months, brought here from the home of his daughter, Mrs. Arthur Buell, in Avon, where he spent the last eight or ten years of his life and where he died. Mr. Buck had been a resident of Hebron for all but about twenty years of his life, coming here as a small boy to be brought up on the farm of Samuel Skinner, after the death of his father, Eastus Buck, of Portland. Mrs. Buell said that her father's death was caused principally by old age, but was hastened by an attack of grip. He retained his faculties in a remarkable degree nearly to the end, and five minutes before he called for a glass of lemonade. Mr. Buck retained his voting residence here, casting his last ballot for John W. Davis for president in 1924. Up to 100 years of age he was in the habit of visiting his farm on Burnt Hill in the summer, and helping about the haying.

Tax collector Edward A. Smith met the tax payers at Jones street and at Amston as per schedule. He will be at Gilead, at Fogil's store on Thursday, and at Hebron center, at the town clerk's office, on Saturday, April 27.

Delia Porter, town clerk's assistant, reports that so far only about thirteen dog owners have had their dogs registered. 138 dogs were registered last year. Tech registration fee of $2.00 for each male dog, and $1.00 for each female dog, must be received on or before May 1, or the sum of $1.00 will be added to the fee. Most dog owners are in the habit of waiting until the last day or two of the time limit before paying the fee.

Friends from this place attended the wedding in Colchester, Monday, April 22, of Miss Pauline Karas of Colchester, N. Y., formerly of Hebron, a daughter of Mrs. Margaret Yuriga, to Alexander Kleiner of New York. The ceremony was performed at St. Andrew's church, by the Rev. Father Mooney with a high mass, at 9 a. m. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Anna Karas, as maid of honor, and the Misses Rose Backward and Blanche Fuller as bridesmaids. Joseph Karas, a brother of New York, and William Yeske of Collinsville, a friend of both bride and groom, also stood up with them. Miss Marlon Marieno of Boston, a niece of the bride, was flower girl. The bride wore a gown of ivory satin, and her veil was caught with a narrow band of orange blossoms. She carried a cluster of white roses. The maid of honor wore a pink satin gown. The bridesmaids carried crepe. Miss Backward's dress was of orchid color and Miss Fuller's pale green. Both wore picture hats to match. The little flower girl wore green satin. Guests from New York, Boston, Pennsylvania, Collinsville, and Hebron were present. A reception took place at the home of the bride's mother in Hebron. Mr. and Mrs. Kleiner left for a trip of a few days in Pennsylvania.

CONGRESS SCORES USE OF FIREARMS

Bingham (R) of Connecticut, raised his voice today to caustically criticize the nervous terrors of the U. S. Coast Guard, which in the past six weeks have got the State Department into difficulties with several foreign countries.

"Apparently," said Bingham, in condemning the shooting at the Collier Jones, "these Coast Guardsmen enjoy shooting very much as small boys do. They like to hear the noise. One shot very nearly killed the mate on the Jones."

"Incidentally, the department will make public tonight the notes that have passed between Washington and Ottawa in the 'Im Alone' case, in which the schooner was not only sent to the bottom, but a French citizen was killed. These notes embrace some 15,000 words of protest and reply."

The State Department is being embarrassed exceedingly in the 'foreign incidents.' Great Britain, France, Canada and Norway now have protests lodged with the department over the shooting of their flagships by zealous Coast Guardsmen.

The State Department with considerable reluctance has been forced to defend the 'Im Alone' sinking, but officials there have made it clear they have little stomach for the task.

As serious as the present 'incidents' are, the State Department lies in almost daily fear that over-zealous Coast Guardsmen may at any time be too quick on the trigger in the case of a passenger vessel and create a real 'incident.' The case of the 'Im Alone,' which was admittedly a run-runner, has proved knotty enough, without courting any more flagrant cases.

So that end pressure is being directly brought to bear on the Coast Guard to weed out of the service those men who display too much twitching in their trigger-fingers.

GILEAD

The Tri-County Christian Endeavor meeting will be held in Hebron next Sunday evening. A special program has been arranged for.

Robert E. Foote attended a meeting of the directors of the Toland County Farm Bureau held at Rockville Monday evening. The three-act comedy "Safety First" was presented at the local hall Monday evening by the Epworth League of the South Methodist Episcopal church, Middletown. The scenery and costumes added greatly to the play which received much applause.

Mrs. Elizabeth P. Hills has returned from a week's visit with Mr. and Mrs. William E. Hibbard at their home in Manchester.

Miss Ruth Ellis and Miss Belle Chamberlain will go with the senior class of the South Manchester High school to Washington, D. C. They leave Saturday morning and return the following Thursday. Charles D. Way has returned to his home after spending several weeks with his son Dr. Cassius Way and Mrs. Way in White Plains, N. Y.

There will be moving pictures at the Hall Friday evening.

The Ladies Aid society met with Mrs. E. E. Foote Wednesday afternoon. Mrs. A. W. Ellis and Mrs. Foote were the hostesses.

The "Gay Gilead Girls" sang over the radio from Station WCAC, Storrs, Monday at 5:40 p. m. Local "listeners" in were quite enthusiastic in the event.

Charles D. and C. Daniel Way were visitors in Hartford Monday.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hills, Mrs. A. H. Post, Mrs. A. W. Ellis and Mrs. E. E. Foote were visitors in Willimantic Tuesday.

Five women and three children were arrested by Chicago police the other day in a raid on gambling. Something just had to be done.

SINCLAIR READY TO GO TO PRISON

Oil Magnate Prepares to Give Himself Up Before May 4th.

Washington, April 25.—Harry F. Sinclair, multi-millionaire oil magnate, has abandoned all hope of escaping the jail sentence of 90 days imposed for contempt of the Senate, and is preparing to come to Washington to give himself up before May 4, according to reports reaching here today.

The Supreme Court on Monday declined to grant a rehearing in the case, thus closing the last door but one, a presidential pardon, which President Hoover has no intention of granting.

Arrangements are being made here by Sinclair's agents for the period during which he will be a "guest" at Occoquan, the country workhouse in Virginia, where district prisoners are confined.

A suite of rooms has been rented in a fashionable hotel, where Sinclair had a whole floor during his conspiracy trial. It was also a "guest" at Occoquan, the country workhouse in Virginia, where district prisoners are confined.

The papers in the case were traveling down through the legal bamboozle today. The Supreme Court is expected to decide on the District Court of Appeals, which in turn mandates it on to the Federal District Court, and the latter places the papers in the hands of the U. S. Marshal for action. May 4 is the "deadline."

Sinclair will have to substain on plain workhouse fare at the Occoquan "farm," according to Superintendent Banard. The jail boss made this statement in reply to reports that the oil magnate was planning to have his meals sent down from a Washington hotel. The prison rules forbid this, it was said, and no exception will be made in Sinclair's case.

PROF. WOOLSEY DEAD; WAS LAW AUTHORITY

One of America's Greatest Legal Scholars Passes Away at New Haven.

New Haven, April 25.—Theodore Salisbury Woolsey, LL.D., one of the greatest of American legal scholars and an authority on international law was dead here today. He was 79 years of age.

Prof. Woolsey was professor of international law at Yale University from 1879 to 1911 and professor emeritus since 1911. He was the son of the late Theodore Dwight Woolsey, an eminent Greek scholar and professor and former president of Yale University.

One of the founders of the Yale Review, Prof. Woolsey was a frequent contributor to its columns. Several of his essays were collected in the volume entitled "America's Foreign Policy" published in 1898. He edited "Woolsey's International Law" and "Pomeroy's International Law."

MAY START SOMETHING

The conviction of Mrs. Dennett, author of the pamphlet on sex which a jury ruled indecent though it had received the commendation of any number of clergymen, educators and other highly respectable persons, may turn out to have an important effect on the rules of evidence and the practice of American courts, before it is done with. Judge Warren B. Burrows of this state, sitting temporarily in the Brooklyn federal court where the case was tried, ruled against the admission of all evidence which would have shown that the pamphlet in question was printed in the Medical Review of Reviews, circulated by the Y. M. C. A., ordered by various health and religious agencies and very widely recognized over a period of ten years as a standard educational work of high value when placed in the hands of adolescents. So that the jury was called on to pass upon the merits or demerits of the work without being informed as to its standing in an important body of public opinion.

The position of Judge Burrows is perfectly easy to understand. It was, presumably, that the decision as to the innocence or guilt of the publication must be given by the twelve men of the jury and not by a large number of persons outside the court and the jury altogether. Ordinarily, of course, public opinion cannot and should not be allowed to influence a jury and certainly cannot, by any stretch of imagination, be regarded as constituting evidence, in ordinary cases. But the question is, can the ordinary interpretation of proper evidence be properly applied to a matter like this one? And it is on precisely that point that the defense may be expected to make its strongest representations in its appeal from the verdict of the jury.

Mrs. Dennett was convicted of sending obscene matter through the mail. The whole case of course hinged on the obscenity or otherwise of her pamphlet. The jury was confronted by a problem. What constitutes obscenity? The word is extremely elastic and the extent to which it can be stretched depends upon the frame of mind of individuals who must be considered objectively in determining the effect of the "obscene" thing. The jury may know, for instance, whether Mrs. Dennett's pamphlet seems obscene to them. But they may be the only twelve persons in America aside from the complainant and the prosecutor, to whom it would seem obscene. Is it not obvious that before a person can properly be convicted of obscenity there must be evidence that the utterance is calculated to offend the sensibilities and shock the moral fibre of at least a considerable part of the population? And if such evidence is essential to the just establishment of a prosecution, isn't it a fair assumption that evidence to the contrary should be admissible in defense?

We have no doubt that in the exclusion of the defense evidence in this case the judge followed, in his learning, the established practice of courts and the established rules of evidence, as far as there are court practice and rules of evidence applicable to such a case—the precise like of which probably has never been tried before. But if the effect of his rulings was to require a jury to pass upon the question of obscenity without opportunity to get an idea as to how many minds out of every hundred the book in question would be obscene, then it would appear as if this jury had been compelled to grope in the dark for its verdict.

Whether the interpretation of this law can possibly be made at one particular point of time, and pegged for all time, without any consideration of a constantly changing public viewpoint, is a question which may prove to be interesting to the appellate court. Whether, like murder, the crime of obscenity can be so accurately described by a judge, and the exact intent of the law made so clear that a jury will need to know nothing about the effect of a particular obscenity on the minds of decent men and women, presents a problem that it may take the highest tribunal in the land to solve.

CHAIN STORES

Edward A. Filene of Boston is recognized in Massachusetts—and far beyond Massachusetts borders, for that matter—as a keenly shrewd business man as well as a sociologist and humanitarian. His words are listened to with respect by other business men because they have come to know that he is very much oftener right than wrong, though he often appears to be in advance of his time. What he had to say to the merchants of Hartford at their banquet last night is, then, of much more importance than if it were the utterance of one speaking with less authority on matters of business.

Predicting a far greater growth of the chain system of merchandising than the country has yet witnessed, Mr. Filene nevertheless was so far from despairing for the institution of independent retailing that he declared the independents could win out in the inevitable contest against chain merchandising. And he put his finger on what has always seemed to us to be the essential and unavoidable weakness of the chain system in any attempt it might make to drive the independent retailer from the field. He said: "The average chain store manager is not as resourceful, nor does he have the same personal interest in his business as the individual merchant. The personal element is still a tremendous factor in retailing and a dependable asset to the individual merchant in his fight against the chain stores."

Mr. Filene was probably entirely correct in his considered conclusion that legislation against chain stores would never be likely to benefit the independent. There are many reasons for this conclusion, involving questions of constitutionality, public opinion, etc., but perhaps one of the most important is that it would only damage the independent retailer interests if they were to get into the same state of mind as the western farmers and begin to regard the government as their nursemaid.

Buying pools, elimination of waste, adoption of every possible leaf out of the chain store book, while preserving the individual enthusiasm of the proprietor and particularly the independents' far better understanding of the needs of his particular group of customers, must be the individual merchant's answer to the chain "menace."

It is not the independent retailer who must necessarily suffer from this sudden and revolutionary growth of the chain system—but the middleman. The strength of the chain system is that it deals direct with the producer. It eliminates, at least in part, the huge spread between production costs and consumers' costs. Obviously pool buying by independent retailers can accomplish the same end in great degree, putting the individual retailer all-square with the chain store in what he pays for his goods and leaving him still possessor of all the advantages inherent in his personal acquaintance, his command of public confidence and his immediate and everlasting concern to make his one store a success.

One of the greatest economic evils in this country is the constant intrusion of the middleman between the producer and the consumer; sometimes actually multiplying the cost of commodities to the user without benefit to the final distributor. If the war between the chain system and the individual merchant shall eventually result in the elimination of half a dozen handlings and resales of merchandise before it comes into the possession of the consumer, it will be a sad day for the manipulator but an economically good one for everybody else.

THOMAS

Senator Heflin occupied two full hours of the time of the United States Senate, sitting in extra session at call of the President for the accomplishment of some very urgent needed legislation, with a speech demanding a vote of censure upon the state of Massachusetts because somebody threw a bottle at him in Brockton. One wonders, had that bottle hit him, whether Heflin would have permitted a vote of farm relief, national origins or anything else before the regular session in December.

DIRT ROADS

It is all very well for legislative leaders to triumphantly cite the votes of small town representatives as contributing conclusively to the defeat of the dirt roads legislation; but it will take some argument to convince anybody that those back town delegates didn't dance to the snap of a whip. So far as the small town people of this state goes, it is safe enough to assert that seven-eighths of them would have voted, had they been given the opportunity, to put their roads in usable condition even though it were to completely stop, instead of merely modifying, the trunkline program.

COAST GUARD

Senator Bingham says it is time the Coast Guard showed a little more reasonableness and common sense in its efforts to enforce the law. The senator for the moment overlooked the fact that the Coast Guard, sadly, resembles the celebrated old grey mare in not being what it used to be. Mr. Bingham had in mind the Coast Guard which, as a youth, he admired for its splendid traditions and valiant service in the cause of humanity—not the Coast Guard now recruited from an element made up of potential racketeers, drifters and willing scoundrels.

IN NEW YORK

New York, April 25.—The most loyal animal, if you asked me, is the baseball fan.

I know all the stories about the dog and what he has done for his master. But even the widely advertised loyalty of the dog fails to move me quite as much as the constancy and affection of the dyed-in-the-wool fan.

Whether April comes in like a deluge or a pretty blond, the fan will rush up barking, "atta boy, slam her home, Babe, and get yer eyes fixed!" In Manhattan, at least, he will don his sweater and his winter overcoat and sit shivering in the stands while the winds off the river stir him to action. He will stand in line a thousand feet on the cold gray dawn of the morning before. He will fight traffic and ride for hours on subways. He will take chances on rheumatism, pneumonia and chilblains. And, after all his efforts and expenditure, he will look upon a field soaked in mud.

Somewhat the old familiar signs never seem to bother him. Year after year he will be gladdened by the signboard information that you can slide into so-and-so's emporium for a shirt; that such-and-such a show is a three-base hit and that you can run home in an Everybody taxcab. They will look upon these without protest. The most familiar advertising pun is sweet for them to look upon. And then they will howl down the umpire as of old and they will all but toss their bottles at the butter-fingered infidel.

But fear not, whatever today's weath'ron, they will be right back tomorrow—faithful and loyal to the end.

As far as I'm concerned, you'll see me there when the weather gets warmer.

Two things have happened today to make me feel uncomfortably old: someone opened an old newspaper file and revealed a cartoon of the late Happy Holloman, which I recognized; and attending a Broadway theater performance, I noted the name of Master Gabriel upon the program.

Now the mere fact that I can remember Buster Brown should be proof unto itself that I am not a member of the more-or-less younger generation. And the last time I recall hearing the name of Master Gabriel was when, as a lad in Michigan, he appeared in a musical comedy fashioned after the comic strip.

This Master Gabriel was still playing Lilliputian roles; his part was that of a midget in a circus. And he seemed as oldish young as when Buster Brown made the rounds. Meanwhile I had the feeling that I had probably changed considerably.

Kecey Allen, one of Manhattan's play reviewers, is telling this one on himself. Kecey, who is nothing if not a valiant first night sufferer, actually grew bored to the extent of walking out on a performance before it had ended. This is not an uncommon practice with George G. Nathan and others of the cognoscenti, for instance. But Kecey has been looked upon as a working critic.

So the management called his paper and spoke to the editor. "Say, Kecey walked out in the middle of our show tonight," came the voice. "Oh, don't mind that," chirped back the newspaperman. "You probably haven't heard that he walks in his sleep."

Out of a maze of wisecracks which made their appearance during the recent Texas Guinan trial came one which must be credited to the hard-working prosecutor. He had been trying his best to stump the night club hostess. "Ah," he sighed, as he finally took his seat, "she's as hard to rattle as a bag of feathers."

PROTEIN ADDED TO THE DIET. Starting with tomorrow, your diet will be changed so as to contain a certain amount of protein in the form of eggs. A good way to start adding this protein to your diet is to make a change in your breakfast, eliminating the starches, vegetables at this meal and substituting a breakfast menu of one or two eggs, melba toast, and stewed fruit. The eggs may be prepared in any manner except by frying. Here are some ways to prepare eggs besides the usual boiling and poaching to which you have been accustomed.

Some Recipes.
Coddled Eggs. Place the unbroken eggs in a deep pan which is not standing on the fire, and pour boiling hot water over them. At least one quart of hot water should be used to each two eggs. Allow to stand from five to ten minutes. When broken open the egg should have a jelly-like consistency, but should at the same time be so well cooked that there is no transparent albumen which has not been coagulated. If the pan is covered, less time will be required to get the same effect, but it is possibly more desirable to have the eggs coagulated and best constantly stirred. Stir gently with a spoon or fork.

French Omelet. To two ounces of milk add one egg. Put in a dry frying pan over a slow fire, and beat milk and eggs together. Stir and beat constantly so that it does not stick to the pan, and continue this until the mixture assumes a jelly-like consistency. Do not fail to keep on stirring the mixture even after it has been taken from the fire, as the frying pan will retain a good deal of heat which will continue to cook the eggs. Serve in sauce dishes or egg cups. You will find that one egg prepared to two ounces of milk in this way will serve one person, and exactly fill the large end of an egg cup.

Baked Egg. Cut with a small biscuit cutter rounds of white bread from slices one-quarter of an inch thick. Toast these round pieces until browned all the way through. Place one in the bottom of each muffin tin, moisten slightly with sweet milk, and break one egg into each tin. Bake in slow oven until eggs have become firm and all transparent albumen has coagulated, being careful not to overcook them. Delect each egg with butter when ready to serve.

The melba toast is prepared in the following manner: Cut all of the crust away from an ordinary loaf of white bread and slice the interior loaf one-quarter of an inch thick. Allow these to dry at least over night, and preferably longer. When thoroughly dry they should then be put into a moderately hot oven and toasted so that the heat will entirely penetrate the dried bread until it is a golden brown all the way through. It should be buttered fresh as it is being eaten.

Stewed fruits are best if cooked after thorough soaking. Wash, dried form they should be well washed and soaked overnight in enough water to cover them. They should then be cooked slowly in the same water for as long as possible in order to bring out the sweet, palatable flavor. No sugar should be added, as the slow cooking will bring out the fruit sugar which will make them taste more delicious than if commercial sugar is used. The lunch and dinner are to remain the same as you have been using, choosing a selection of the non-starchy vegetables both cooked and raw.

Your daily regime tomorrow will be this: Upon arising, brush your teeth vigorously for five minutes, take breathing exercises before an open window, then your morning enema, followed by a shower bath. Breakfast: One or two eggs prepared according to above recipes. Three or four slices of melba toast. A small dish stewed fruit from the following list: Prunes, figs, raisins, apples, apricots or berries. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(Metallic Taste.)

Question: Mrs. W. W. asks: "Will you please tell me the cause of a metallic taste in one's mouth—especially so after eating fruit?"
Answer: Sometimes the metallic taste is caused from the effect of the acids of fruit upon fillings in the teeth. This is especially true with those having amalgam or silver fillings. Changing to gold inlays or pivot teeth will correct this.

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, April 25.—Perhaps nothing in President Hoover's first message to Congress was more interesting than the fact that it contained nothing startling, nothing new and nothing calculated to arouse congressional opposition.

The message carried every indication that Hoover was not only phlegmatically averse to letting his administration in for a row with Congress at the outset. The President feels that there is no need for such a squabble; that it would merely clog up the machinery and would be only so much grief for everybody.

His disposition is to let the members fight the farm relief and tariff problems out among themselves, to judge from the message. Thus, although there may be some complaint about a lack of specific recommendations on the theory that the president should tell Congress just what he wants—there can hardly be any complaint that Hoover has shown a lack of discretion.

One Unexpected Point. The proposal to strengthen and speed up the Tariff Commission was the one recommendation that may not have been expected. But presumably no one is going to object to that.

There were three main phases to this very brief message: agricultural relief, tariff revision and the proposed movement of matters to be considered at this session. Partly because of his anxiety to limit the program and partly because he had no new sweeping suggestions to make, President Hoover was able to outdo Coolidge himself on verbal economy in such a message.

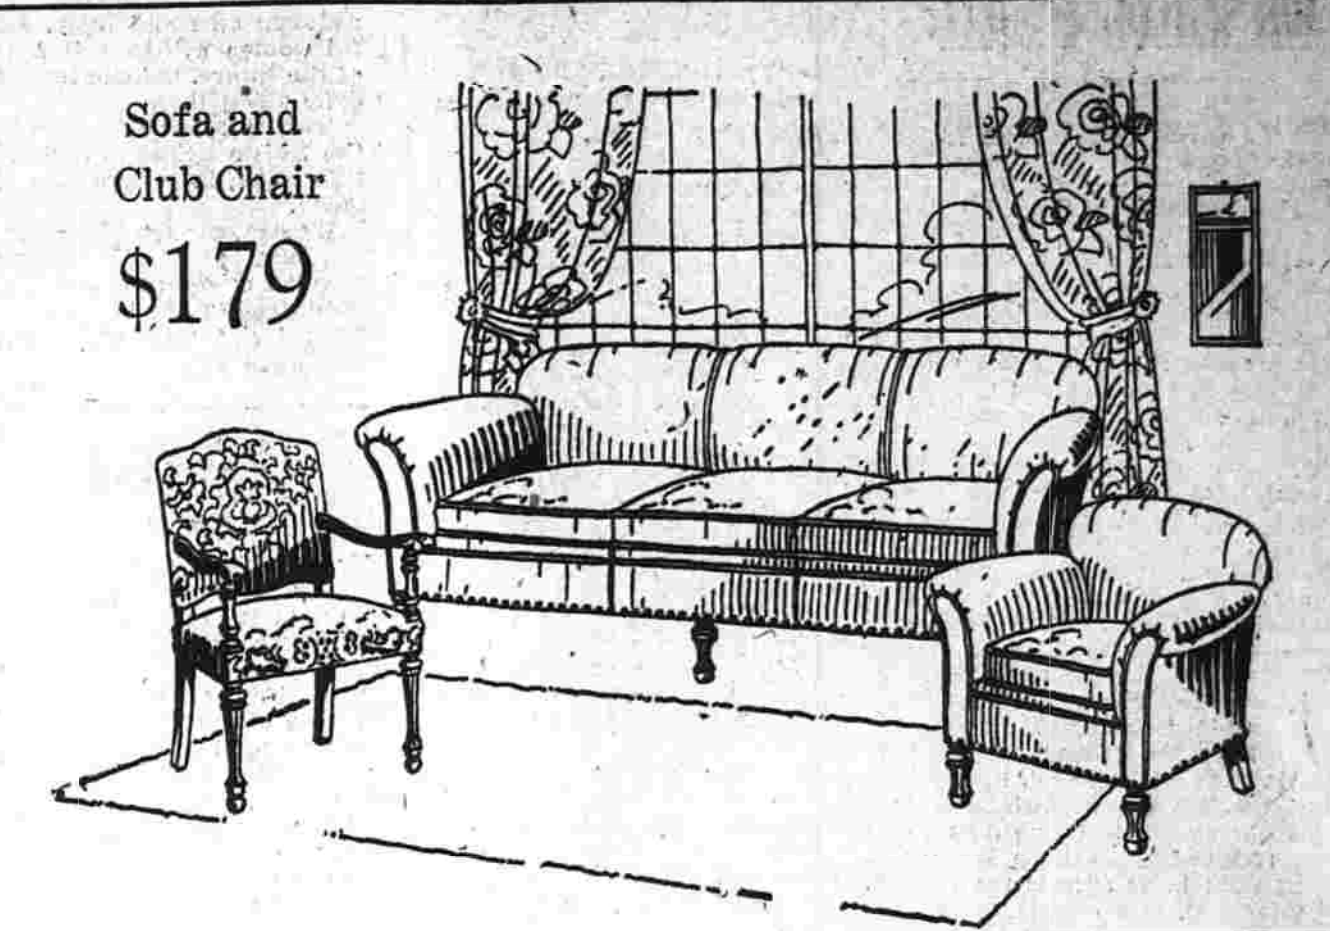

On agriculture, he simply touched on the causes of agricultural distress, discussed the need and possibilities of a federal farm board such as has been repeatedly proposed for many years, praised the cooperative movement and predicted the dawn of a new day for the farmers.

On the tariff, he laid down a general principle for duty revision, mildly warning against a general raid. There was no pronouncement from which any intimation might be drawn that he would veto this or that kind of a bill. In effect he said that an industry seeking higher duties should be able to prove that it had been really hurt by foreign competition to the extent of reduced operation and reduced employment. The actual effect of this suggestion will depend on how liberally Congress cares to construe the principle and whether it will be willing to take the word

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

HOUSE "BEAR FOR WORK" HIS SCHEDULES SHOW

Recently Sang "Il Trovatore" Seven Nights in Succession; Here Tuesday Night.

A record of seven "Il Trovatore" performances on seven consecutive evenings was made recently by Judson House, tenor soloist, who will appear as an assisting artist with the Beethoven Glee Club in its fourth annual concert, to be given Tuesday evening, April 30, in the High School Auditorium. The productions were in the open air before audiences numbering fully 10,000 each night.

Judson House.

By accomplishing this remarkable feat House disproved the contention of those who maintained that it was physically impossible. And then to show just how un-fatigued he remained, he immediately left for Athens, Ga., to sing four operas on three consecutive days, "Faust," "Carmen," "Samson and Delilah," and "Madame Butterfly."

In addition to his extensive operatic repertoire, House is prepared to sing at a moments notice 83 different oratorios and cantatas without the score. He has frequently sung as many as twelve recital programs without a single repetition.

The University of Vassar also has honored Judson House with the honorary degree of Master of Music. The award was given following a series of lectures on Beethoven by House at the University. He is one of the few North Americans ever to receive this honor at the South American University.

MISS DEXTER DESCRIBES CONTINENTAL CONGRESS

Attends Annual D. A. R. Convention in Washington; Calls It Best Yet.

Miss Alice F. Dexter, past regent of Orford Parish Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, who is at present visiting in Nutley, N. J., has written the Herald a letter in regard to the recent continental congress of the organization at Washington. This was the seventh continental congress Miss Dexter has attended and she reports it as being more delightful than any previous convention. Her letter follows:

The thirty-eighth Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution closed Saturday, April 20, 1929—one of the greatest, most harmonious meetings ever held.

From the casual reading of headlines which reflect the most colorful aspect one might believe that the chief business is the election of officers, and the airing of controversial views. As a matter of fact these are only incidental. Something for more significant and more fundamental holds the Daughters of the American Revolution together. Little is told of the widespread educational work sponsored by the Daughters, of their support of various Americanization schools, and their missionary work among the aliens who come to America to be Americans.

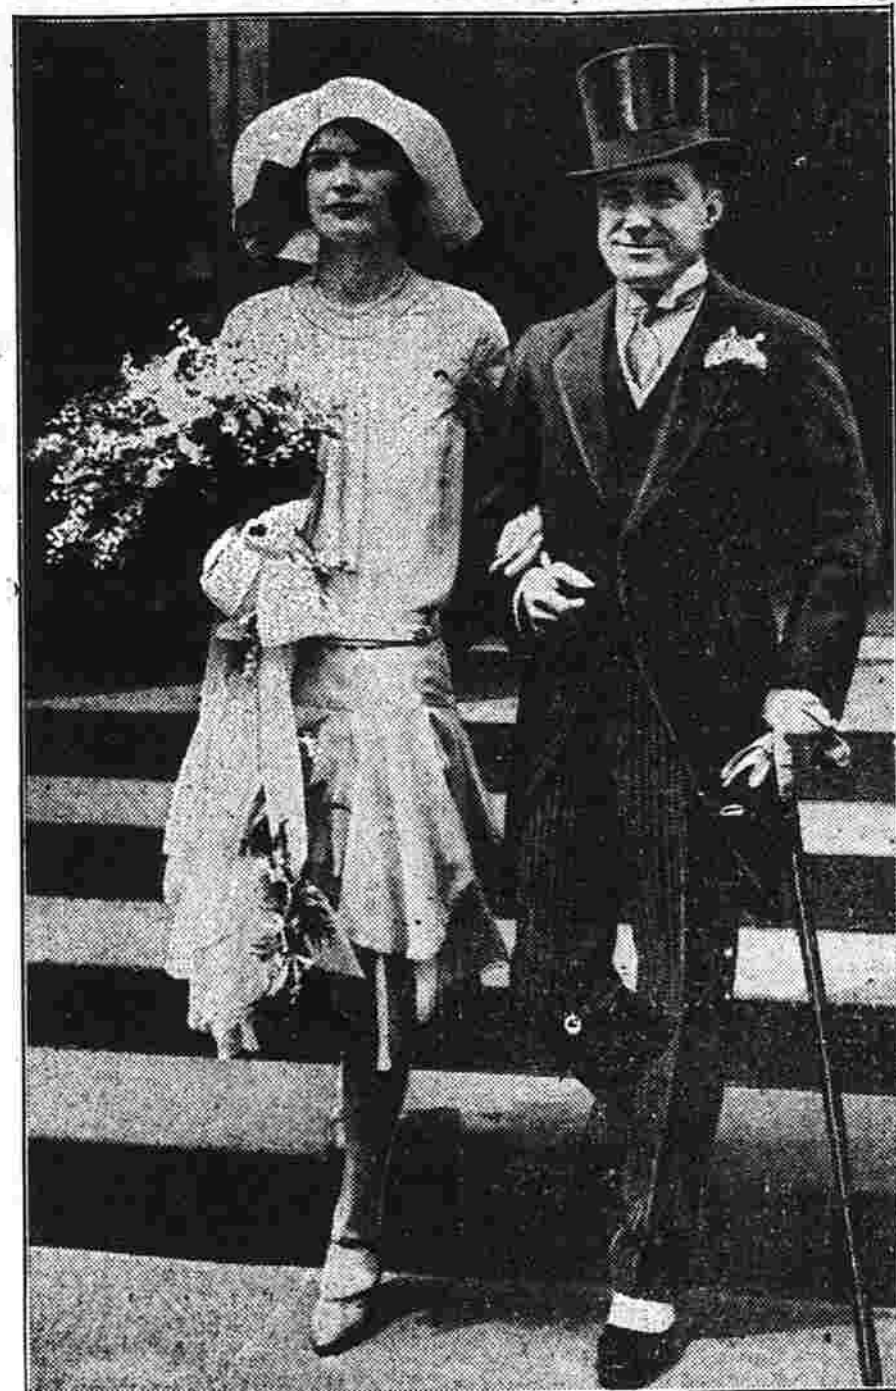

One hears little of their work to preserve the traditions of an earlier America and to keep fresh the memories of men and deeds and places that played a part in the founding of the country.

Times and conditions have changed but the same ideals which bound men and women together in the youth of the Republic are still alive, giving new courage and strength to dare new things.

Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau who concludes her three-year term as president-general has achieved a record for notable service which will place her high among the foremost president-generals of the organization. The retiring leader has instilled a strict discipline within her organization. The open-minded, fair and courageous way which she directed the battle against efforts to overthrow the principles of the society revealed the heroic strain of revolutionary ancestors.

The action of the National Congress which voted 2,000 to one confirming the expulsion from membership of Mrs. Baile by the National Board of Management shows the strong confidence the thousands of Daughters have in those they appoint to be their leaders. With the newly-elected president-

REGRET RUSSIA'S PLAN.

THREE AWARDS FOR BEST ESSAY ON COLUMBUS

Sons of Italy Offer Gold, Silver and Bronze Medals to Sixth to Eighth Graders.

A medal of solid gold, one of solid silver and another of bronze will be offered as first, second and third prize respectively to the students winning the essay contest on the subject of "The Life of Christopher Columbus."

Students in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, in all districts, regardless of creed or nationality, are eligible to compete. The Board of Education, who accepted the plan for the contest when it was presented at the Board's meeting by Joseph Barto, representing the Sons of Italy, will draw up the rules for competition and will select the judges. The Board will submit these rules for consideration on Sunday, May 12, to the Sons of Italy, who are sponsoring the contest to commemorate Christopher Columbus. Other Italian societies in Manchester will be invited to co-operate with the Sons of Italy, if they wish to do so.

The date of the contest and rules connecting with it will be announced at a later date.

CALLS WORLD AMUSING.

Chicago, April 25.—Professor Albert A. Nichelson, who is 76, wants to be 100, "because this world is so amusing."

"A man should live as long as he's amused," said the noted scientist today. "For me there are so many diversions—science, painting, tennis, billiards and playing the violin."

Besides, he remarked, he has another experiment in mind—a new calculation of the speed of light.

RICH GIRL POOR GIRL

RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED
MILDRED LAWRENCE meets STEPHEN ARMITAGE when he rescues her from a thief. Their friendship grows until PAMELA JUDSON, daughter of Mildred's employer, tries to lure him away from her. HUCK CONNOR becomes infatuated with PAMELA and she plays both men. Her brother HAROLD, in love with Mildred, who tries to keep him from gambling with Huck's crowd.

When Stephen continues seeing Mildred, Pamela tells him she is trying to marry Harold for his money. He defends the girl and Pamela cables her father to discharge her. Harold tries to have Mildred reinstated but falls. Pamela succeeds in poisoning Stephen's mind against Mildred and the latter faces dreary days in search of work. Then Pamela tries to break with Huck and when he objects tells him she and Stephen are engaged.

Huck commands Harold to prevent Pamela's marriage to Stephen under a forged check. Harold tells him he can't force Pam so Huck plans to dispose of Stephen. He has one of his pals ask for a demonstration of a car by Steve and they set a trap for him. He goes back to his office expecting to be discharged but nothing is to be done until after a full investigation.

Pamela insists on Stephen attending a dinner that night in honor of their engagement.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXVII

Pamela was stirring rock candy in her demi-tasse when Stephen joined her in the dining room of the Judson Hotel. She ordered a cup for him and Stephen told the waiter to bring a regular size. Pamela filled it twice for him.

"Nervous?" she smiled at him across her own particular table which had fresh cut flowers on it. "Bad day," Stephen replied.

Pamela pouted. "You don't look at all as if you liked being engaged," she said childishly.

The remark irritated Stephen; it always made him impatient when Pamela stepped out of character. He preferred her as the ruthless little demon he knew she was under her exterior of angelic beauty. But the beauty made him tolerant. And tonight she had enhanced it with all the art and skill she could command from high-priced beauty specialists.

She had slept until midday, gilded all the early afternoon to wake her up, and then had come home to give herself over to becoming a fairy princess for the night. Suddenly Stephen reached out and touched her hand. "If I lose you, Pam," he said, "I'll never get over it."

Pamela looked at him in astonishment. "Are you rattling a skeleton at me?" she asked. "You sound suspiciously like a person with a past."

"Not a past," Stephen confided, "but a damned uneasy present with a most uncertain future."

Pamela laughed. "Don't let it get you," she advised; "marriage isn't such a responsibility anymore. I take it you're thinking of how you're going to pay for my stockings. That's about all a toller's salary is supposed to be good for with rich girls isn't it? But read. I think I'll use it to buy bath salts for my Peke."

Stephen did not smile. "Don't joke, Pam," he said earnestly. "I'm in a hole."

Pamela shrugged. "Well, what of it?" she returned lightly. "Dad will get you out."

Stephen groaned. "He'll get you out, your father," he said miserably. "Your father will never let you marry a man with no future."

"Oh, what is the trouble?" Pamela exclaimed impatiently. She was beginning to feel bored.

Stephen told her all that had happened that day. "Is that what's spoiling our evening?" she asked feelingly. "I thought it was something serious."

"It will be serious when old D. A. M. gives me the gate and I've nowhere to go," Stephen declared.

"Don't be silly; you'll find another position," she said.

"That's only half the trouble," Stephen persisted. "Can you, Pam, dear, live on the money I'm able to earn?"

Pamela looked at him with melting eyes. "Of course, Steve, darling," she whispered tenderly. But there was no more sincerity back of the words than real softness in her heart. She hadn't, as a matter of fact, the barest idea of what living on a small salary meant. But all such matters could be adjusted after she and Stephen were married, she felt.

Stephen believed her; at least he believed that she would try to meet him halfway. His burden became lighter, but he'd have sunk instantly to hopelessness if he'd known that the man who had furtively watched his departure from his hotel was at that moment in his, Stephen's, room, on a silent and malicious errand. He immediately provoked Connie into going back to join Mildred and trying to make her talk.

He'll get all that's coming to him with Pamela Judson! Marrying for money!
"Connie, he wouldn't. He loves her."
"After knowing you? Don't make me laugh."
Her words were small comfort to Mildred who lay awake all the night through regretting that she had not made Harold tell her what Huck Connor could do to Stephen. "Tomorrow," she told herself at last, "I'll go to Huck Connor himself."

Which was exactly what Duke Brogan and Huck Connor had had in mind when they polished off their plans for framing Stephen.

At this point in his handling of the case Short went home and to bed. But he did not go to sleep. And while he thought over the circumstantial evidence against Stephen that young man was the center of interest among a group of Pamela's friends. He'd almost forgotten his troubles.

But if he could not see the black cloud that was gathering over his head there was one who prayed tearfully that harm would not befall him.

When Harold had gone to Mildred after his visit to Huck's room at the time Huck had avowed his intention of ruining Stephen, he was in a pitiable condition indeed. His resistance was at a low ebb and the temptation to unbend himself to Mildred was almost overpowering. His knowledge of her love for him could not hold him back. He couldn't depend upon her to keep his secret. And even if he did not tell her that Huck had threatened Stephen he knew that she would not remain silent with Pamela in danger.

Harold had no mercy for himself in comparing his cowardice with Mildred's staunch spirit. But the matter of deciding what to do was in an unusually anguished state of mind. She almost feared that he was verging on madness. His face was alternately flushed and pale and he couldn't hold his hands steady enough to light a cigaret.

He sat down, got up again, walked to the radio, tuned it in, tuned it out, sat down again, got up.

Mildred couldn't stand it. She signaled Connie to open the door and then she told Harold to sit down, pointing to the big arm chair that was now back in the living room.

He sank into it with an audible groan and Mildred flew to his side. She put her hands on his shoulders in a comforting way and begged Harold to tell her what was wrong.

"Something," she said frankly, "has to be done for you, Harold. If you refuse to let me help you I'm going to Mr. Dazel and have him cable your father, waited. Harold jerked up his head. "For God's sake, Mildred, don't do that," he screamed.

"Then tell me what Huck Connor is doing to you," Mildred bargained. Harold sank his face in his hands again and Mildred waited. His heart ached for him but she believed that a more level head than his was needed to fight Huck Connor.

With a painful gulp in his throat Harold looked up and spoke. "He's not doing anything to me. I don't want dad to see," he said and his terror drove him to glance about at his simple surroundings in a quick way that revealed to Mildred more than anything else the magnitude of his oppression.

"No one's listening," she said soothingly. "Won't you tell me more?"

Harold gripped her hands. "I'm afraid of him, Mildred," he whimpered, and a cold, sickening feeling crept over the girl.

"Why?" she whispered, and Harold's abject fear had communicated itself to her. "Such an extent that her voice came strained and unnatural."

"He can make me do anything," Harold told her wildly. "I'm a beastly coward, Mildred." His voice was growing louder now, showing his excitement. "You ought to kick me out in the gutter where I belong. I'm no good. I won't even save my sister, and maybe it's just because you love him that I won't save Armitage either! I'm too rotten to know what's decent..."

"Stephen!" The name burst from Mildred's lips at passionate cry. "Harold, what do you mean? What has Huck Connor to do with Stephen?"

She was shaking the boy's thin shoulders furiously, trying to make him speak, but Harold's excited confession was at an end. Mildred's reaction to the mention of Stephen's name had made him realize that she would fight for Stephen at any cost.

Her fingers clutched painfully through his clothing; he heard her voice break. It was unbearable. He had to tell her something.

"Stop shaking me," he said, and tried to pull away.

"Then tell me; tell me about Stephen," Mildred pleaded.

"I will. Let me get my breath."

Mildred dropped her hands and waited. Harold did not look at her. "He's going to marry Pam," he said reluctantly.

For a moment there was a ghostly, faint silence. Then Mildred turned away with a choked sob. Harold lifted his face, saw her at the door, in flight. He stood up and called to her but she did not answer.

Presently she sent Connie to ask him to excuse her. "She seems to have acute indigestion or something," Connie said, a bit peeved because she could not understand the drama that she sensed was being played in their flat.

YOUR CHILDREN

"Johnny, turn out the light in your room and study downstairs."
"Why?"
"Because I say so."
"Johnny, don't run the lawn-mower over the grass near the rose bed."
"Why?"
"Because I say so."
If you talk to the children at your house that way, there's a very strong probability that you are having the same trouble that Johnny's mother is having with him—disobedience.

I'm sorry to say that the more child specialists urge the opposite, the more determined certain parents seem to demand "unquestioning obedience," probably in the erroneous belief that it makes the best children. Most mistakes of the sort are well meant, they have the best intentions in the world behind them, and this is no exception.

For I take the liberty of calling "unquestioning obedience," or rather the demand for it, a mistake; that is, when it implies that all obedience must be unquestioning. A child should have faith in his parents, of course, so that when he receives a peremptory command he should obey it. It isn't of course always necessary to tell him why. Indeed in certain things I should demand it.

But if it becomes a habit with his parents to boss him day out and day in with never an explanation, needless to say that faith won't last. That is why parents who expect children to obey blindly defeat their own purpose. The chances are ten to one that they won't have obedience at all—unless they resort to frightening the children by threats and punishment. I suppose this submission, obtained by police methods, is called obedience—it has to be called something, but it isn't my idea of it.

Obedience that isn't willing, that isn't acceptable to a child, and that doesn't square up with his notion of justice, is not worthy of the name. If it causes sourness, sulking, resentment, and a sly alertness to break over when opportunity offers—what is it?

If you don't answer when Jimmy asks you "why," he must keep the mower off the grass, and say only, "Because I say so." It isn't enough. He isn't being impertinent. He really has a right to know.

According to a Chinese tradition, the use of cloth was evolved from the practice of women carrying their children in fiber nets.

A Chic Frock That Hints of Summer.

Infinitely feminine, charming and new in at least three ways is this Paris creation, from Norman Hartnell. First, it is made of sheer, pure white organdie and tulle, than which nothing could be more summery or dainty for a moonlight party. Second, its silhouette is one of the future, the true princess line with a long skirt that trails gracefully behind. Third, it takes the vogue for ruching trim seriously and uses, two, three and four rows of tulle ruching to ruffle its flaring, feminine skirt. A double ruching outlines the neck and falls like a lot. This frock would make a stunning bridesmaid style, done in pastel shades and topped by a floppy hat.

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SCANNER

"I didn't ask to be born!" is the glib answer on the lips of youth whenever it is confronted with certain responsibilities to parents, which it insists upon dodging.

"I want to live my own life!" is the average offspring's war cry as it walks out from situations in which its mothers and fathers could no more have thought of avoiding in their own relationships with their own parents, than cutting off a sire's arm or leg.

And just because parents are so constituted that they almost invariably believe that their offspring have the right idea, they have, for the most part, only turned the other cheek, and grimly endured all the wrongs imposed upon them while their children insist on "living their own lives," because they "didn't ask to be born."

THE OTHER VIEW.
It is refreshing, therefore, to find a parent who doesn't have "one slipped over on her" quite so easily; who gets up and dusts her feathers, and speaks out in meeting parent this popular parental, and especially maternal, conviction that it is only meet and just that their own lives should be bleak and lonely and bereft, but that the offspring must have complete freedom from responsibility to parents.

It is Faith Baldwin, author of "Alimony" and other popular novels, who takes her pen in hand to say, "I Have My Rights, Too. I Believe Mother's Should Live, as Well as Children." She writes in part—

"In the last decade we have heard about the rights of children from all sides. Even the children have expressed themselves all over the place. The age-old cry 'I didn't ask to be born!' has been hurled, like a battle-cry, into the shrieking ears of allegedly old-fashioned parents."

"It has been set forth that it is not easy to be a child, hampered and hindered on every hand by parental notions of behavior. From them, writing books about them, and dispelling them. We are too concerned with the problems of roof and bread, certified milk and education, shoes once a month, clothes all year round and life insurance."

"And when we say this, the great cry is heard, 'Remember the Rights of the Children!'"

"Therefore in a great voice I cry back, 'Remember the Rights of the Parents!'"

"Grant, for the sake of indisputable argument, that children do not ask to be born. They do not. But having them born, they have received from their parents the gift of life. It is a good gift."

"The child who whimpers at it should be reminded how savagely he could fight if threatened with his loss."

"This brings us to the rights of parents. It is impossible for the

WHOOPING COUGH NEEDS DOCTOR'S TREATMENT.
By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN.
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

In the spring the mother's attention turns to thoughts of whooping cough. Sudden changes in weather, wet feet, and chilly winds predispose to nose and throat infections.

Among the most easily contagious of the spring diseases is that characterized by typical whoops which differ definitely from ordinary coughs. The disease seems to be spread directly from person to person and not by hooks, toys and dishes.

The wise parent will keep his child away from any others that seem to be coughing, but such is in an unusual fashion. The child usually gives a series of explosive coughs, without time to take a breath between, and ends with a loud whoop or gasping sound. The face often becomes bluish from lack of air and when the spasm relaxes the child breathes deeply again.

If the paroxysm of coughing has been long sustained the child may vomit, cough up thick mucus or have nosebleeds. This vivid description should be borne in mind by the anxious mother, because the paroxysms may come on at night when the doctor is not present, and he will have to make his diagnosis from a description of the condition which the mother gives him.

There have been developed various forms of treatment for whooping cough which have been none of them has been proved a real cure for the disease. It has been stated that the chorol inhalations shorten the duration of the whooping, that various vaccines are of value, that injections of ether and various drug sedatives have a beneficial influence.

The interesting fact is that all of these methods of treatment have apparently had marked influence in certain cases while failing utterly in others. The physician will therefore treat the patient according to the particular conditions that he may find in any individual case.

The coughing stage usually lasts for several weeks. The child may be up and playing about if it has no fever and feels well otherwise. If the weather is warm and dry it may be outdoors, provided it is not allowed to mingle with other children.

One of the difficulties of care in this disease is control of the diet. If the child vomits a great deal its nutrition may suffer. An ordinary light diet should be given and should include no foods that irritate the throat.

This And That In Feminine Lore

Nestle pre-tested permanent waves are no experiment but an actual scientific achievement—at last you may have the perfect permanent wave of which you have long dreamed. Skilled beauticians will give you this sort of wave at the Lily Beauty parlor in the House & Hale building.

A reader of this page who has just returned from a visit to New York City, says that what impressed her most while there was the display of colored shoes—orchid, yellow, blue, red, and so on,—in the windows and worn by fashionable women on the streets. In fact every woman seemed to be wearing them. Shoes and bags very often matched but hats seemed to offer a contrast, according to my informant. In the shops georgette dresses seem to predominate in the most enchanting colors and patterns; black in the georgettes and other filmy weaves seems to be played up on the counters and in the ready-to-wear departments.

Practically every household has large and small sized sheets, large and small towels and other pieces of linen. Time and trouble is saved if the linen is classified and marked with a cross or any other mark in colors, placed at the outer edge so that it may be sorted without unfolding.

The mother who has cooked for a good-sized family often finds herself again cooking "for two" and looking up the small utensils of other years to prevent the left-over problem. There are a few things that can be served without a left-over such as all kinds of chops and fish. Roasts require much skill, so do thick porterhouse steaks, but "club" steaks sliced of beef tenderloin are good for two servings.

Lace straw hats are a favorite for summer brides and the lace-trimmed accessory wins over the plainer one right now. The latest sweater blouses for summer wear have a lacy pattern woven into them. If a woman can have but one party frock it should be of lace. Black, beige or the colored laces are all good. Gray lace is distinguished especially when it is combined with gray chiffon.

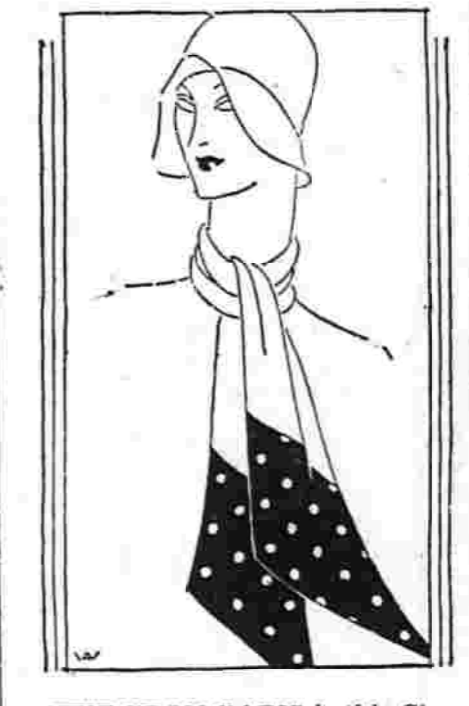

Rhubarb Strudel.
Line a buttered baking dish with corn flakes. Add a layer of stewed rhubarb; dot with butter, sweeten with sugar. Continue using alternate layers of corn flakes and rhubarb until the dish is full, ending with corn flakes on top. Bake in a moderate oven. The strudel is delicious if flavored with orange juice and grated orange rind.

Colored clothes should never be soaked and they require thorough rinsing to keep their colors bright. They must be washed quickly, rinsed at once and wrung as dry as possible and hung to dry in a shady place. It is not advisable to use bluing in the rinse water for anything but white or blue garments.

Throughout the land Child Health Day, May 1, is being observed in the schools and mothers and friends attend the health exercises. They can also co-operate with the public schools on that day by planning a good diet for the children.

Coach Tom Kelley

Manchester showed some classy fielding and hard batting in its lid lifter yesterday. Roy Fraser, who pitched as nice a ball game as any one could ask for until the seventh inning, up until which time he had allowed Coach Louie Chatterton's tribe only two bingles. He was hit hard, however, during the last three innings and it appeared for a time as though Rockville might close the gap. As it was, only four runs separated the teams at the finish. The slim silk city southpaw impressed one much the same as his brother Herb, who starred in a similar capacity last season.

For six innings last season, Fraser and tuck battle with both sides showing some classy work but the last three frames were replete with hard hitting mixed with a few errors that sent 19 runners scamping across home plate to completely wreck who had been an interesting pitcher's duel. The fielding of the local team was splendid, only two errors being committed.

Manchester got away to a two run lead in the first inning when Dave Samuelson got safe on an error, stole second, was sacrificed third by Marcus Moriarty and scored on Captain Ernie Dowd's clean single to center for the first run and Dave McConkey. Hugh Moriarty and Cliff Magnusson walking in succession to push Dowd home with the second tally. There wasn't any more scoring until the sixth when Ted Lupien singled and rode home on Magnusson's lusty double.

In the seventh, three more Manchester runs were scored. Samuelson struck out but was safe at first on a battery error. Marcus Moriarty singled and Lupien was filling the bases. McConkey also failed to get out of the way of one of Gross's pitches, thus forcing home Samuelson. Moriarty's single chased home two more runs and then Magnusson's long double chased in a couple of more. Charlie Bycholski singled for another tally.

Rockville came to life in its half of the inning. DeCarli and Gessay singled and both scored when Doss caught Lupien out of position with a healthy sock square into left field that went for a triple. Ted was playing too close to the foul line. Cadillac's single brought Doss home.

Nine runs were scored in the eighth—the same number that trickled across the plate the preceding frame. Manchester got four of them. Here's how. Samuelson walked, M. Moriarty singled, E. Dowd did the same and so did Lupien. Renn, batting for McConkey, lined to short, but H. Moriarty cuffed a single and Clarence Dowd, batting for Magnusson, did similarly. For Rockville, Pinney was hit and Witenok walked for a starter. Grace, De Carli, Gessay and Doss hit safely in succession and Cadillac did the same a moment later ending the damage. Pinney's triple and a felder's choice brought in the final tally of the game.

The brilliant fielding of Gessay at short, a one hand stab of a liner by Pinney at third and the batting of De Carli, Gessay and Doss featured for Rockville while the work of two sophomores, Fraser on the mound and Magnusson with the stick, was outstanding for Manchester. The batting of Lupien, Dowd and the Moriarty brothers also featured as did the excellent work of Bycholski behind the bat.

There were two or three instances when Manchester team did not work smoothly. Once Lupien and Dowd crashed together out in left-center while chasing a long drive that went for a triple. The former injured his left shoulder, but not seriously. On another occasion Moriarty, playing first, and Samuelson, the shortstop, came together while trying to catch a high infield fly. However, this fault can be easily remedied.

Dave McConkey, veteran twirler of the team, will be on the mound against Middletown tomorrow with Danny Renn taking his place at third base.

Hohman's Single Enables Hartford To Win Opener

The governor of the state will grace the Eastern League opening at the Buckley Stadium in Hartford tomorrow for the first time in many a year.

Usually the mayor of Hartford has been the sole dignitary at opening day, but Governor John H. Trumbull has sent President Bob Farrell his acceptance and Mayor Walter E. Batterson has promised to attend.

President Farrell hopes to be able to persuade His Excellency and His Honor to form a battery for the time honored custom of throwing the first ball.

Governor Trumbull is planned as the pitcher and Mayor Batterson as the catcher. No wild pitches will be charged against the governor and no passed balls against His Honor, this by agreement with the official scorer.

The Albany Lawmakers will be the opposing club and the game is set for 4:15. Albany comes to Hartford to open the local season after a two day series against Heine Groh's men at Albany. It is expected that "Shep" Cannon or Sam Hyman will be on the mound for Hartford and Joe Smith will do the catching. Interest is great in the Hartford debut of Heine Groh, who will play third base and wield his famous bottle bat in the Hartford cause.

Hartford opened its season yesterday with a 12 inning 5 to 1 victory over Albany. The score was 1 to 1 until Manager Groh opened the twelfth with a single and later scored what proved to be the winning run when Bill Hohman singled with the bases full. Albany got three men on the bases with none out in the ninth but "Coke" Woodman managed to weather the storm without a tally being scored.

Pitcher Marty Phelan and infielder Walter Cook have been shipped out to the Haverhill club of the New England League. Phelan's departure leaves Sam Hyman the only southpaw on the roster of pitchers.

Heine Groh is the Senators'

BUSCH IS IN FINE CONDITION FOR HARTFORD FIGHT TONIGHT

Hasn't Fought Since Last September But Physically He's Okay; Curcio Has Fine Record.

Tonight's boxing card arranged by Promoter Ed Hurley and set for Foot Guard Hall in Hartford promises to be one of the most interesting and best balanced of the winter season which is slowly but surely drawing to a close. Every one of the five scheduled bouts takes on the aspect of proving a humdinger. Usually one or two bouts stand out, but this week is a different story. Of course, so far as Manchester is concerned, they can all be a flop as long as Frank Busch beats Johnny Curcio and commits the task impressively. They are down for eight rounds.

Christy's Big Chance.
The star bout of the evening between Nick Christy and Pancho Villa. The latter's recent victory over the veteran "Click" Suggs has resulted in his being established the favorite to defeat Bristol's promising contribution to the featherweight division who has won all of his 14 bouts since turning professional. This bout will be crammed with action so far as Christy is concerned. The rest will be up to Villa.

Interest also runs high in the outcome of the Joe Zolter-Mickey Flahive, bout. The New Britain boy packs a right hand punch that carried considerable T. N. T. but unfortunately his jaw is so constructed that in pugilistic circles it is always referred to as "fragile." No small amount of actions is anticipated in the setto between Eddie Adonis and Frank Konchima, Jimmy Picardi and Sindufe Diaz.

Busch is in excellent shape physically for his eight round battle with Curcio. He topped off his training yesterday morning with a stiff road workout and calisthenics. Busch looks in the proverbial pink of condition and says he feels even better. He has high hopes of coming through with a victory tonight but does not believe in making predictions. "I'll do my best," was the substance of his brief response when asked for his opinion as to whether or not he would win.

Not Like Fighting.
While scores of Manchester fans are more than anxious for Busch to win his initial bout in the state, they should also bear in mind that while physically he is in fine condition, Busch has not fought since last September; in fact only twice in nearly three years. True, he has sparred with Frankie O'Brien and other boxers at the Park street gymnasium in Hartford, but a fighter will tell you there is nothing like actual ring warfare to keep a boxer in the proper trim. This is not an alibi offered ahead of time, but rather a simple statement of facts.

Busch will come into the ring around 173 pounds, according to his own admission. He says he can't get down much lower. In fact, he may be a bit nearer 175. It is understood that Curcio will tip the scales at about 168 which will give the Manchester boxer about a five pound advantage. It is expected that Dany McMahon, former manager of Kid Kaplan, and Mickey McCollough, both now of Hartford, will be in Busch's corner. Curcio lost to O'Brien on a kayo and has beaten Laddie Lee, Bobby Brown, Jimmy Amato, Jackie Horner and others.

It is quite probable that Busch will give the large delegation of Manchester fans a treat by displaying some fine boxing skill. His training with Jack Dempsey, Tiger Flowers, Jack Britton, Young Stripling and a host of other good men cannot have but taught him a good many of the fine points of the game which the less experienced boxers have had an opportunity to grasp.

WESTERN OUTFITS CUT OWN THROATS

By LES CONKLIN

New York, April 25—The National League race today has settled down into the regular April procedure—a case of the three strong western clubs cutting each others' throats while the New York Giants, the only ball team in the eastern division of the loop, pile up a comfortable lead.

The Giants are back in first place today while the Cubs, Pirates and Cards are practically deadlocked as a result of Chicago's 5 to 4 defeat by Pittsburgh yesterday. Carl Hubbell, elongated New York southpaw and the Giants swamped the Phils, 9 to 2. Jackson and Ott contributed home runs.

Heavy hitting by Fox and Simmons, and George Barnshaw's pitching beat Washington, 9 to 4, and lifted the Athletics into first place in the American League. Fox had four hits, including a homer. The Yankees handed the Red Sox a 9 to 3 shelling, Hoyt outpitching Ruffing.

A Frank Merriwell catch by Harry Rice in the ninth insured Detroit's 7 to 6 victory over Cleveland. Cleveland dropped all the way from first place to fourth.

The Boston Braves lost to Brooklyn again, 5 to 3, and dropped to second place.

Other scheduled games were postponed on account of rain.

FEW AUTOS REMAIN WITH FIRST OWNER
 Less Than One Per Cent in Purchaser's Hands When Life of the Car Is About Ended.

It is said that less than one per cent of the new automobiles purchased today are operated to the end of their useful life by their original owners. In fact, the average new-car owner today remains content with his purchases only so long as it delivers "one hundred per cent performance." In other words, he takes the "cream of the millage, and passes the "milk" on to the used-car market.

Obviously, he is interested in how much performance. In this there are three major factors: The in-built mechanical efficiency of the car itself; the care used in driving the car; and the protection against normal wear and tear that is given it. The first is up to the manufacturer. The second to the driver. The third responsibility is divided principally between the driver, the supply dealer or service man, and the refiner of the lubricants used.

"Most every new-car purchaser," says D. B. Spanogle, manager of Motor Oil Sales of the Atlantic Refining company, "is most careful to select a car of proved merit and experienced manufacture. Yet it seems beyond all understanding how little caution so many of these purchasers exercise when buying the thing upon which the very life of the car depends; motor oil.

"If the average motorist only knew or could appreciate the complexity of motor oil refining, and the years of experience that are necessary to produce really good oil!

"The Atlantic Refining company has been at it for more than sixty years. The very first oil specially made for automobile engines was made by the Atlantic refineries. And these same refineries have given the world a constant succession of motor oil improvements ever since. "No organization in the land has devoted more study to this very important factor in the operation and up-keep of automobiles. None has behind it such a vast store of knowledge, research and experimentation."
