

SLAYER USED ANOTHER GIRL FOR AN ALIBI

Girl Tells Police, However, That She Did Not Know Peacox Had Killed His Wife in Apartment.

White Plains, N. Y., May 1—Claustrine love that brought thrills to Mrs. Dorothy Peacox, whose married life was a kaleidoscopic maze of discord, was revealed today as the most logical motive for her murder and subsequent cremation by Earl Peacox, jealousy crazed husband, whole lilted young voice used to greet radio audiences with a genial "hello folks."

A romantic letter from a mysterious suitor, known only as "Gene from Baltimore," was brought into the open for the first time today although it had been in the possession of the talented radio instructor and writer for seven months.

But Peacox, too, essayed the role of a dapper Don Juan, police said, as they placed Miss Frances Newman under arrest on a material witness charge.

"I still love Dorothy, even though she be dead," Peacox cried in a moment of remorse in his cell here where he is held on a first degree murder charge.

Hints of Love Trysts
The letter from the mysterious Gene is written in a rollicking college-boy style. It hints of love trysts.

In the letter, Gene praises Mrs. Peacox as a "wonderful little hostess and home maker" and speaks his joy at being near her over a week-end.

Fraternity Pin
Reference is made in the letter to a fraternity pin which the writer says he has snuggled "against my heart—it was so lovable. The other Betas noticed it also, but said nothing of course."

Meanwhile, Peacox "enjoyed a comfortable night's sleep in the county jail, his mind apparently at ease. No qualms of conscience disturbed his rest, jail attaches said.

Hold Miss Newman
Miss Newman is being held under $10,000 bail while authorities check up her story that although she accused Peacox in the apartment where he killed his wife, she did not know the wife was dead and did not suspect that stains on the floor were blood "stains and, further, that the kerosene odor with which the apartment reeked did not arouse her suspicion.

Miss Newman, a slight, smiling blonde and self-admitted immoralista of the love-crazed husband, told police that Peacox had planned to

PACIFIC SCHOONER IN GRAVE DANGER

With 22 Men Aboard It Is Feared It May Sink Any Moment.

San Francisco, May 1.—With 22 men aboard, the schooner Kadiak was creeping precariously down the coast toward San Francisco harbor this morning and was in constant danger of sinking.

The 116 ton ship sent out distress calls last night and asked for assistance saying that she was sinking ten miles off Point Reyes. Complete mystery surrounded the accident to the ship but belief was expressed that the schooner might have struck on rocks in rounding the point and then pulled clear.

Rescue Ships Near
With the disabled ship was the Standard Oil tanker Charlie Watson which had raced toward the Kadiak upon receipt of the first radioed S. O. S. call.

During the night the schooner exhausted her supply of rockets in signalling her position to the Coast Guard cutter Tahoe and the Union oil tanker Oleum.

Terms exchanged between the distressed vessel and her rescuers at first declared the schooner could remain afloat only a few more hours. She was requested to send up night lights and her position finally secured from the flares. Later Captain Mattison said that he would proceed south toward San Francisco under his own steam.

Still later messages said that all hands were bailing water but there was no immediate danger.

The Kadiak belongs to the Alaska Packers' Association fleet and left San Francisco Tuesday for Alaska.

Four other ships were in the near vicinity as the Kadiak started for harbor, they were two Coast Guard cutters and two tankers, all in communication with the schooner.

Canada Need Not Aid U. S. To Enforce Law

Washington, May 1—Canada recognizes no moral or legal liability to aid the United States in the enforcement of its laws, C. H. Cahane, member of the Canadian Parliament, told the United Chamber at its seventh annual convention today.

Cahane spoke on business problems which concern both the United States and the Dominion.

He declared that the Canadian government had not asked the United States to aid in the enforcement of the provincial prohibition acts that were formerly in effect in some of the provinces.

"Frankly," he said, "I doubt if it ever occurred to any public man to suggest that we should call upon your government to assist us in the exercise of our sovereign rights within our own jurisdiction."

Canadian officials, he declared, "as a matter of courtesy," now notify promptly U. S. officials whenever a shipment of liquor leaves a Canadian port which might be landed in the United States.

Referring to the recent sinking of the "Im Alone," a Canadian vessel by a Coast Guard patrol boat, Cahane said it was the opinion generally in Canada that the agreement with regard to extra-territorial activities and rules have been overstepped.

SEC. DAVIS OPTIMISTIC IN "MAY DAY" MESSAGE

Trouble in Europe But in America There is Peace in Industry, Government Official Says.

EDITOR'S NOTE: May Day in Europe is a day of nervous tension, of demonstrations by the proletariat, and sometimes of rioting and bloodshed.

In the United States it is a day of peace, and this May Day finds employment high and general conditions of the workers good, save in some portions of the textile and coal industries.

In the following article, Secretary of Labor Davis gives his views on conditions.

BY JAMES J. DAVIS

(Secretary of Labor)
Washington, May 1.—May day is a day of happiness and rejoicing for American labor.

When the census has been completed, America will find she has nearly fifty millions of people gainfully employed, with the vast majority of them in steady jobs.

All our enlightened industrial leaders have come round to the policy of the liberal wage. Those employers who stand out against that policy merely put a spoke in the wheel of American prosperity.

Employment this year has so far shown reassuring improvements over the corresponding period of last year. Payroll totals are decidedly improved. Earnings are higher while unemployment has been reduced.

Business conditions in general are such as to offer some guarantee that labor may continue to enjoy its improved status. Steel, however, the business world, stands in prospect of an unusually active year.

Business Better
Except for conditions in coal and textiles, which have not yet yielded to the effort of the industrialists in general is in a sound and peaceful state. Relations between worker and employer throughout our national industrial system have never been more harmonious. Nothing is in sight to disturb this era of good feeling in industry.

The one cloud on the horizon to give labor the slightest uneasiness is the continued extension of automatic machinery with a tendency to displace workers for a temporary period. This problem is now receiving attention on every hand, at the hands of employers as well as labor and by governmental agencies.

The fact is recognized that such unemployment as results from the introduction of machinery is only temporary. Nevertheless, employers have seen the potential fact that business in general suffers when any considerable number of

WOMAN SHOPPER LOSES BAG CONTAINING $50

Name Not Known to Police, However, Because She Left Scene After Telling Manager

While shopping in Woolworth's Five and Ten Cent store here this morning a local woman whose name has not been learned lost her handbag containing about $50.

She reported the loss to the store manager, but, according to police, who later investigated, the store manager said there was nothing he could do saying it was the woman's fault for not holding on to her bag.

There was quite a crowd gathered in the store when the woman discovered her loss and she immediately cried out for help. The woman said that the handle to her bag was broken and this made it comparatively simple for the thief to take the purse without her noticing it.

Police are continuing their investigation though they are working in the dark because they have not learned the identity of the woman who lost the money.

LEGISLATORS FAVOR GRADING AUTOISTS

Premiums on Insurance to Be Based on Drivers Ability, Bill Says.

Hartford, May 1.—The State Senate today received a favorable report on a bill which allows a merit rating plan of liability insurance for automobile drivers, and also provides for state classification of the drivers according to their operating records.

The premium payment for the insurance is to be based on the state's classification of drivers.

The appointment of Frederick A. Scott, of Plymouth, who is now legislative clerk of bills, as commissioner of statute revision, was sent to the Senate by Gov. Trumbull today and immediately approved by that body.

The appointment is for four years from July 1, and the salary is to be fixed by the State Board of Finance and Control.

NEW YORK HOLDS MAY DAY PARADE

New York, May 1.—New York City was to witness its first May Day parade since 1916 today.

Thousands of workers, Communists, both pale pink and fiery red, and representatives of hundreds of labor unions were expected to assemble in Union Square at 1 p. m., and start a long march through the principal thoroughfares.

The procession was to be led by a brass band of negro musicians and five striking textile workers from Gastonia, N. C.

Thousands of placards and flags bearing the legends "Organize the unorganized," "Defend the Soviet Union," and "Fight the Imperialist War Danger," were to be carried by the marchers.

Immediately following the parade a mass meeting was to be held by the Communist party in the Bronx Coliseum.

Another mass meeting also was scheduled to be held at Madison Square Garden under the auspices of the Socialist and Labor parties.

The keynotes of this latter gathering will be a demand for universal disarmament, a greeting to the British Labor Party and a plea for the introduction of the six hour day and improved working conditions.

Although it was expected that the demonstrations would be orderly the police were prepared for any emergency and hundreds of uniformed patrolmen were assigned to special guard duty in Union Square and along the route to be taken by the marching Laborites.

IMMIGRATION IS UP AGAIN IN CONGRESS

Senator Reed Announced He Will Accept No Compro- mise in National Origins Fight.

Washington, May 1.—The four-year-old controversy over the immigration law, which has provoked a split between President Hoover and Republican leaders in Congress, flared forth anew today.

Senator David A. Reed (R) of Pennsylvania, who has broken with the President on the question, announced he would accept no compromise in his battle to prevent repeal of the National Origins section of the new law.

At the last session of Congress, he blocked action on a resolution proposing its repeal and at this session, he declared he would again prevent a vote.

To Continue Fight.
Senators Nye (R) of North Dakota, and Johnson (R) of California, who have led the fight for repeal of the new quotas, meanwhile said they would continue their fight to get a vote in the Senate on the issue.

They formed the minority of the Senate immigration committee which upheld President Hoover's request while the majority of the committee was disregarding it to oppose repeal of the quotas, which go into effect on July 1.

The whole controversy has revolved around a new computation of immigration quotas, based on national origins of the American people. Under the old law, quotas were fixed on the basis of the 1890 population. Under the new law, they are based on the origins of all the 120,000,000 people now here.

The new schedule of quotas reduced the number of immigrants from Belgium, Denmark, Germany, Ireland, Norway and Sweden among others and increased immigration from Austria, Great Britain, Hungary, Italy, Mexico and Russia among others. The total immigration will be but slightly reduced.

"There can be no compromise in the National Origins fight," said Reed. "Reports to the contrary may be dismissed as without any foundation whatever. The issue is fundamental. Nothing could be more vital than the make up of the future population of this country."

Our Destiny at Stake.
"The decision of Congress with respect to the National Origins law will affect the destinies of our country and the welfare of our people for generations to come. To abandon

MEXICANS FLEEING ACROSS THE BORDER

Revolt Over—Leaders Desert Rebel Troops Who Rush to U. S.

Nogales, Ariz., May 1.—Surrender of the adjoining Sonoran town of Nogales, last of the rebel strongholds, without a shot or gesture of protest, left the Federals in complete control today and apparently marked the close of organized Mexican revolution.

American troops here were standing to under arms in view of the remote possibility that trouble might break out afresh today in Nogales across the border.

The final hours of the revolt teemed with drama and came after a day of electrical tensions that saw willing fighters left to shift for themselves by the desertion of trusted leaders. American troops hurriedly called to arms and finally a frenzied exodus of the rank and file to the United States.

Indians Revolt.
The Yaqui Indian troops reviling the leaders who urged them to surrender, started to hold Nogales themselves but were finally driven by lack of food to give up the plan. Most of them fled to mountain fastnesses.

When rebel troops learned that the leaders who had persuaded them to revolt had deserted and left them to face the consequences they flung down their weapons, gathered their pitifully few possessions, and, with their families, swarmed over the border here.

About 1,500 refugees who crossed the line are quartered under guard of American soldiers in stockades and warehouses here.

About 1,900 rebels remained in the Mexican city to surrender to the Loyalists. Two airplanes and a great quantity of ammunition were confiscated.

Gen. Lucas Gonzalez, defender of Naco, Sonora, was on his way west to take possession of Nogales in strength.

The Latest Torch Slayer

Earl F. Peacox, center, 21-year-old radio repairman, confessed to strangling to death his estranged wife in New York on the first anniversary of their marriage and then hiding her body and burning it with kerosene in a woods near Greenburg, N. Y. Peacox is shown above in the custody of Police Lieut. Herman Mattes, right, and Captain Silverstein after admitting the "torch murder."

POWER TRUST PLANS TO BUY MORE PAPERS

Has Already a Dozen Large Dailies, President Tells Board—Is Merely a Business Proposition.

Washington, May 1.—The powerful International Paper & Power Co., which already has brought into a dozen large newspapers to the extent of more than $10,000,000, plans to increase its stockholding in the daily publishing field whenever it seems desirable to do so.

This statement was made to International News Service by A. R. Graustein, president of the great power corporation. Just before he left Washington for New York to obtain additional data requested by the Federal Trade Commission in its investigation of the so-called power trust and the trust's propaganda activities against public ownership of utilities.

Commission Started.
Graustein fairly startled the commission by revealing the extent of the corporation's present newspaper holdings. He disclosed that the $800,000,000 concern which he heads has acquired large holdings of stock in such dailies as the Boston Herald, Boston Traveler, Chicago Journal, Chicago News, Brooklyn Eagle, Albany Knickerbocker Press, Albany Evening News, Tampa Tribune and others.

The corporation has helped to finance Frank E. Gannett in the purchase of newspapers. Gannett's string now embraces some eighteen newspapers, scattered through New York and New England.

Future acquisition of newspaper properties, Graustein said, depends upon conditions.

Will Buy Others.
"If it seems to the advantage of the company to purchase other interests it will be done," he said. "About one-tenth of our newspaper output is now purchased by the interests in which we have stock holdings. That absorbs what we might call the surplus production of the company."

Graustein admitted, under questioning of the trade commission

MAY DAY TROUBLE ALL OVER EUROPE; MANY ARE INJURED

FIRE DEPARTMENT ON STRIKE TODAY

Foxboro, Mass., May 1.—Foxboro's Fire Department was on a "part time strike" today.

The veteran "smoke-eaters" modified their walkout ultimatum by stating that should a real fire menace arise they would turn out as volunteers.

The "strike" was the result of a controversy between the town's 25 firemen and the Board of Fire Engineers. Foxboro Selectmen meet tonight to act on the crisis.

One Killed, Many Wounded In Riots—Berlin Has Worst Street Fighting; Reds Stage Demonstra- tions Also in Paris, Vien- na, Belgrade, Moscow, Budapest and London.

While America observed May Day with comparative mildness, violence flared up at many places in Europe, in which numerous persons were wounded and thousands of arrests were made.

More than 1,000 persons—Communists, Radical Socialists and agitators—tried to storm police headquarters in Berlin. A Communist was shot and killed.

They gave battle to 500 police, many combatants were wounded in this and other fights throughout Germany. The police in Berlin had arrested more than 150 persons up to mid-afternoon.

Thousands of police, gendarmes and steel-helmeted soldiers patrolled the streets of Paris, according to International News dispatches.

Seize Literature
Seven taxicabs filled with Red literature were seized in Paris. The Parisian police arrested more than 2,383 persons in the biggest round up in the history of the city. Three members of the Chamber of Deputies, two Aldermen and 100 foreigners were among the prisoners.

Communists staged demonstrations and one day strikes in Vienna, Belgrade, Budapest and London.

In Moscow
Half a million men and women took part in a gigantic Communist parade in Moscow.

Rigid precautions had been taken by Premier Mussolini to curb demonstrations in Italy. Similar precautions had been taken by Gen. Primo de Rivera, the dictator of Spain.

The first May Day parade in New York since 1916 was conducted by Communists.

In Kingston, N. Y., the plumbers went up a strike.

A series of bomb explosions in the northwest side of Chicago wrecked three soft drink parlors. Secretary of Labor Davis, of President Hoover's Cabinet, issued a signed May Day statement saying that American workers are contented and this was a day of rejoicing for them.

DEMOCRATS' DEBTS BEING CLEARED UP

Raskob Reports $800,000 Collected Since Novem- ber; New Leader Named.

Washington, May 1.—Drooping Democratic spirits, at low ebb since the great holocaust in November, had a shot of spring tonic today.

The announcement that permanent Democratic national headquarters are to be established in the capital, to function militantly and aggressively 365 days in the year, was greeted with applause and enthusiasm by all factions of the party.

Chairman John J. Raskob made the announcement. In doing so he left the impression that his retirement may not be far distant, perhaps when the present deficit is cleared up. That deficit, which totalled $1,500,000 last November, has now been reduced to some $800,000, with excellent prospects, he said, that it would be under $500,000 by June 1.

New Leader
Whether Raskob retires or not, the spearhead of Democratic activity in Washington is to be Jonett Shouse, Kentucky-born and Kansas-reared, one of the original McAdoo men, and long experienced in the game of national politics. Shouse is to give up his business affairs in New York City and move to Washington, where he will devote all his time to building for the future, with Washington as his headquarters, and the whole country for his range.

Democratic fortunes are to be directed by the executive committee, and the national committee itself. The executive committee is to be kept small, its members including such stalwarts as Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York, Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, Senator Pat Harrison of Mississippi, ex-Senator Peter C. Broussard of Rhode Island and a few others, with Shouse functioning as its director.

Raskob To Remain
Chairman Raskob will continue to take part in its deliberations, but in the rather apparent self-effacement of the millionaire financier, Washington observers saw today a shrewd piece of strategy.

It is no secret that Raskob is not popular with the southern wing of the party. There have been open demands for his resignation ever since last November. The anti-Smith element in the south and west have constantly kept up the cry: "Rid us of Raskob and Smith." So long as Raskob kept functioning as chairman there was a constant irritant to southern sympathies.

Now, by the selection of Shouse to become the party oracle in Washington, much of the organization work will be taken off Raskob's shoulders and put upon those of a

SPAIN DISCOVERS NEW CONSPIRACY

Numerous Arrests in Barce- lona; Dictator Claps the Lid on News.

Paris, May 1.—A new revolutionary conspiracy has been discovered at Barcelona, long the seat of agitations against the Spanish government, according to a message received here today from Perpignan, near the Spanish frontier.

According to news brought over the frontier out of Spain, the alleged revolutionary plot was uncovered by the Barcelona police.

Numerous arrests were reported to have been made. Gen. Primo de Rivera, the Spanish dictator, is understood to be sending loyal troops into Catalonia.

A censorship has been established to prevent the details of the reported cabal from leaking out.

Officials Worried
Government circles in Madrid are said to be agitated over the discovery.

HOWARD DISQUALIFIED

New York, May 1.—It was announced at A. A. U. headquarters here today that the Mid-Atlantic Association of the A. A. U., has cancelled the registration card of Elmer ("Buddy") Howard, thereby depriving him of the amateur heavyweight title which he won at Boston last month.

The action makes a new national heavyweight boxing tournament necessary.

Howard's card was taken from him following an investigation which A. A. U. officials say, revealed that he had misrepresented himself in declaring that he was a resident of Philadelphia and had been for ten months in a row, the officials declared. Howard is a resident of Connecticut and had been denied membership in that state's branch of the A. A. U.

The Metropolitan Association will apply for permission to stage the new heavyweight tournament in conjunction with the International and Inter-city show at Madison Square Garden on May 7-9.

ALL FIVE IMPLICATED IN LAUFER ROBBERY

Car Driver Found to Be in With Group That Attempted Daylight Theft Here.

Further investigation into the habits of the five persons who were brought before the town court yesterday morning charged with theft, has disclosed information which brands the group as ne'er-do-wells. Charles Brodrick, the driver of the Dodge sedan in which the party was placed under a heavier bond when it was increased to $1,500 at the special session of the police court later in the day yesterday.

This was done because of a lot more evidence that indicated that Brodrick was not the driver alone, but had other interests in the gang.

The questioning of which the different members of the party was put resulted in a general breakdown of the story of most of them and a final sweeping written and signed confession of sufficient to implicate them all.

OWNER'S RESPONSIBLE

New Orleans.—The Court of Appeals here recently made a ruling that accidents suffered by an automobile, rented to a drunken man by drive-it-yourself companies, were directly responsible to the owner of the car. It is the company's fault, the court ruled, because "one who entrusts to incompetent hands a dangerous agency is responsible for the mischief due to the incompetent operation of the machine."

SPAIN DENIES REPORT

Madrid, May 1.—A report circulated out of Perpignan, on the Franco-Spanish frontier, that a revolutionary conspiracy has been discovered in Barcelona and that dozens arrested have been made, was officially denied this evening by the government.

The denial said: "Sumors of trouble at Barcelona are absolutely false."
"Normal conditions prevail throughout the entire country."

MAY ONE BRINGS TAXES, BASKETS, TICK-TACKS

Youthful Lovers Serenade Each Other Tonight With Goodies—Look Out For Disturbers.

Today being May 1 the property owners give most of their attention and also most of their cash to the payment of taxes, but to the youngsters this day means only the hanging of May baskets. Among the little tots in town this will get under way soon after 6 o'clock tonight. The baskets with a few candies and some little gift must be hung at the front door and then the little tot that hangs it must run away. The reason for the early start is to be sure that the friend gets the basket before it is necessary to go to bed.

With the falling of darkness there will be many a Thomas, and James, and all of the other young Americans who will not respond to the call to come home. They have been planning for some time to see that the old woman that objects to their baseball, football or probably placed ashes on the sidewalks so they could not coast, is to be disturbed. Tick-tacks will be one method of disturbance used. It is just as sure as "shooting" there is a tick-tack boy who will turn up, with hats off, hair ruffled and ruddy cheeks with the remark to the waiting mother: "Hello, Ma, was you calling me?" and then when the mother asks, "Where have you been?" there will come the universal reply, "Just out around, I guess I'll go to bed."

DEMOCRATS' DEBTS BEING CLEARED UP

(Continued from Page 1) man who was southern-born, western-reared, and as nearly popular with all of the divergent factions of the party as "shooting" and "tick-tack" boys. He was one of the floor-managers for McAdoo at Madison Square Garden in 1924. He was western manager for Smith during the late campaign. He has the confidence of both groups.

Aside from this happy compromise, the mere fact that the Democrats are to have real headquarters organization, is in itself a tonic to drooping Democratic spirits. Not since the Wilson administration has the party maintained an aggressive national headquarters in Washington. Between campaigns a skeleton office force has been maintained in a couple of rooms with a stenographer usually in charge. Only occasionally has the organization come to life for a few hectic months that intervene between nomination and election.

LINDBERGH SILENT AS TO DESTINATION

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., May 1.—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh landed here at 1:55 p. m., in a Cessna cabin monoplane. He came from Washington, D. C.

Lindbergh did not leave his plane. He handed a suitcase to a waiting mechanic.

Lerner Myers, traffic manager of Roosevelt Field, and his wife, Marie, climbed into the plane.

Reporters asked Lindbergh where he was going. "I have nothing to say," he answered, and took off in the direction of Valley Stream, N. Y.

HEFLIN RESOLUTION IS BADLY DEFEATED

Washington, May 1.—The Senate this afternoon refused to condemn the attack upon Senator J. Thomas Hefflin (D) of Alabama, at Brockton, Mass., last month.

Giving Hefflin the vote he demanded for the past week, Republican leaders killed his resolution on a record roll call. Their original intention to pass the resolution was changed, when Hefflin renewed his frequent attacks on the Catholic church and declared a vote on his resolution was a test between "Roman Catholicism and Americanism."

The opposition was strengthened too, by the impassioned speech by Senator Wm. E. Borah (R) of Idaho, for religious tolerance. Borah said he deplored the attack on Hefflin but that as the Senator went to Massachusetts as a private citizen it would be improper for the Senate to take any action.

FEAR CHILD SLAIN

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 1.—Because he revealed details of a love affair upon which he stumbled by accident, police today fear that 8-year-old Gerald de Souza has been slain.

Search for the boy since last Friday has given no indication of his whereabouts.

The frantic mother, Mrs. Elinore de Souza, 35, told her story today after detectives had questioned her.

It was three weeks ago that the child, quite by accident, surprised a man and woman in a love tryst. His childish mind failed to realize that he had knowledge that would wreck at least one home and cause another neighborhood scandal.

Gerald went home that day and babbled the story to his mother who warned him to be silent.

When a search of four days failed to reveal trace of the child, the police began to suspect that there was something more than a mere disappearance behind the story. Possibly it was a kidnapping, they suggested to the mother. When she told them she feared her child had been murdered, they immediately started out to question two suspects and search for the body.

The rejected resolution would have declared the Senate "regretful and condemned" the attack, in which a policeman was injured while defending Hefflin.

The vote follows: For Hefflin (14): Republicans (2); Robinson, Ind., and Sackett. Democrats (12): Black, Reese, Fletcher, George, Harris, Hefflin, McKellar, Sheppard, Simmons, Thomas (Oklahoma), Trammell and Tyson.

Against Hefflin (69): Republicans (49): Allen, Bingham, Blaine, Borah, Brookhart, Burton, Capper, Couzens, Cutting, Deneen, Edge, Fess, Frazier, Glenn, Goff, Goldsborough, Gould, Greene, Hale, Hastings, Hatfield, Herbert, Howell, Johnson, Jones, Kean, Keyes, La Follette, McMaster, McNary, Nye, Odell, Patterson, Phipps, Reed, Shortridge, Smoot, Stetson, Thomas (Idaho), Townsend, Vandenberg, Walcott, Warren, Waterman and Watson.

Against Hefflin: Ashurst, Barkley, Bratton, Broussard, Carway, Connally, Dill, Harrison, Hawes.

ABOUT TOWN

The Ladies society of the Zion Evangelical church on Cooper street will meet this evening at 7:30.

The Dorcas society of the Swedish Lutheran church will hold its regular monthly meeting this evening at the home of Miss Ruth Benson of East Center street.

A pre-natal clinic will be held at the Memorial hospital annex tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock.

The meeting of the Sunday school teachers of the Swedish Lutheran church which was to have been held Friday evening of this week has been postponed.

There was much activity at the office of Tax Collector George H. Howe, this being the last day when property taxes could be paid without the starting of the extra interest charge. The day's receipts were the largest by far as Cusney Brothers alone paid in one check $280,420.79 which included the tax on their property. Several large individual taxpayers remitted today also. Personal taxpayers have until May 31 before the extra dollar is added for non-payment.

As a result of an accident on Adams street at 11:15 on the night of November 8, 1927, when Andrew Foley was injured, a suit, brought by Mr. Foley, was scheduled to be heard in the superior court of this county today. Sergeant John Crockett, who made the investigation at the time, was today called to Hartford as a witness. The accident occurred when Mr. Foley, who had been a passenger in Edward Stein's automobile was about to leave the car and it is claimed he was struck and badly injured by an automobile driven by Robert Culver.

Miss Mary McLagan and Miss Florence Tyler will attend the Older Girls conference at Simsbury this week as representatives from the North Methodist church.

Closing hours for barber shops went into effect today with all the shops living up to the agreement made to close on Wednesday afternoons.

District Deputy Lewis Kinne of Glastonbury and Grand Chaplain Jackson were guests of Manchester Lodge of Masons last night. Former District Deputy Lewis R. Brock was also present. The fellow crafts degree was worked on two candidates. Refreshments were served after the ceremonies.

Miss Eva Koehler who won the W. C. T. U. essay prize announced in yesterday's Herald is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Emil J. Koehler of Coventry.

The Manchester Fire department was called to Main and Grove streets last evening to extinguish a fire on the roof of the home of Alvin L. Brown. Wood burning in the fireplace went through the flues and landed on the roof of the house setting fire to it in two different places. The company responded quickly and the blaze was extinguished with but slight damage to the house.

Rev. P. J. O. Cornell of Church street, Mrs. Cornell and her sister, Miss Augusta Burkland, left yesterday for Worcester, Mass., for a visit with Mr. and Mrs. Thure Hansen. Rev. and Mrs. Cornell will attend the sessions of the convention of New England Swedish Lutheran churches now being held in Worcester and which convened here last May.

The committee of arrangements for the Manchester Church Vacation school will meet tomorrow evening at 7:30 with the Rev. Marvin S. Stockings.

KILLED BY AUTO Oxford, Mass., May 1.—Axel F. Backlin, of Philadelphia, official of the American Steel & Wire Co., paid for a bucket of water with his car here today. Halting his automobile at the roadside by Oxford Heights pond, he crossed the road to get water for his radiator and stepped from a passing motor truck in front of a bawling truck which killed him instantly.

FRENCH STILL HOPE TO REOPEN PARLEY

Paris, May 1.—Allied reparations experts, notably the French, may attempt to exert pressure upon Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, chief of the German delegation, when he arrives from Berlin tomorrow morning in an effort to reopen the negotiations.

However, any such attempt would probably fail as advices from Berlin said that Dr. Schacht would not bring back any new offer. The semi-official newspaper Temps, which often reflects the viewpoint of the French government, urged the German experts to revise their counter offer and to make further concessions in the interest of a settlement.

This newspaper declared that the attitude taken by Dr. Schacht and his colleagues could not be defended, and that Germany need not hope for a later political conference to discuss reparations.

Meanwhile work upon the experts' report continues and it is being rounded into shape. Owen D. Young, chairman of the experts' committee, expects to confer with Dr. Schacht privately either tomorrow or Friday.

NEW LIBRARY BOOKS

The following books were added to the South Manchester library this week: Anigall Adams, Dorothea Bobbe; American Experiment, by Bernard Fay; American Woman and Her Bank, by B. Q. Mott; Automotive Essentials, by R. F. Kuns; Central Americans, by A. E. Ruhl.

Chrysalis, by Zephine Humphray; Fata Morgana, by Ernest Valde; Heart of the Hills, by Isabel Adams; Henry the Eighth, by Francis Hackett; Herman Melville, by Lewis Mumford; History of Hartford County, by C. W. Burpee.

Holiday, by Philip Barry; Joseph and his Brothers, by H. W. Freeman; Lyrical Poetry of the Nineteenth Century, by H. J. C. Grierson; Marinettes, Masks and Shadows, by Mills and Dunn.

Meet General Grant, by W. E. Woodward; Middletown, by Lynd, R. S. and H. M.; Rise and Fall of New France, by G. N. Wrong; Robert Frost, by Sidney Cox; Rules of Procedure and Debate in Deliberative Assemblies, by L. S. Cushing.

Sydney, N. S. W., May 1.—Details of the tragic death of Lieut. Keith Anderson and his flying companion, Robert Hitchcock, who were forced down in the Queensland desert while searching for the Southern Cross, were read today in their rudely scrawled diary upon their plane's rudder and signs left by the men before they succumbed.

The "diary" showed that the plane was forced down by engine trouble on April 10. A search party which traveled overland, reached the scene of the tragedy today. They found the body lying partly beneath the wing of the machine to be Hitchcock's instead of Anderson as first presumed.

Since 1800 the United States has purchased from foreign countries absolutely sovereignty over 2,242,700 square miles of territory for which it has paid $93,500,000.

MELLON'S ELIGIBILITY FOR POST UNDECIDED

Washington, May 1.—The participation of Andrew W. Mellon in the negotiation of a merger deal between the Aluminum Company of America and a Canadian concern was investigated today by the Senate judiciary committee, which again failed to reach a decision on the question of his Cabinet eligibility.

The committee summoned Senator Reed (R) of Pa., with various papers relating to the Canadian deal. It was shown the contract by which the Aluminum company acquired the Canadian interests was signed by R. B. Mellon, brother of the secretary but had not been signed by the Treasury head. Previously it was shown Mellon had participated in a business conference over the Canadian deal.

The committee will meet again tomorrow, still seeking a decision on the legality of Mellon's service as Treasury head while owning a fortune in corporation securities.

SALVATION ARMY

A good crowd was present at the Salvation Army citadel last evening to welcome Commandant and Mrs. J. H. Abrams formerly stationed here. Commandant Abrams, a Syrian costume spoke from the 23d Psalm. Tonight Mrs. Abrams will speak at the citadel. Mrs. Abrams will also address the women in a meeting for them alone Thursday afternoon at 2:30.

POLICE BEATS

A change of police beats in Manchester went into effect today. There is no change in the day force. Lieutenant Barrow, Officers McGlavin and Wirtala remaining on as usual. In the night Officer Seymour still has the midnight trick on Spruce street. Officer Martin comes to lower Main street, and Officer Michael Fitzgerald goes to the West Side. Officer Donaldson goes to the Center and Officer Galligan to the North End. Officer Wisley remains on the mill beat, as usual.

Success of Concert Far Beyond Expectations; Club Achieves Triumph.

The concert of the Beethoven club, attended by 760 persons at the High School auditorium last night, put that choral organization on an entirely new plane. Sentiment, local pride, a desire to encourage worthwhile musical effort, can be set aside in estimating the performance of the club, for it has leaped into a place where the merits of its work will stand the judgment of music lovers anywhere, without allowances or special rebates.

On that basis the Beethoven club gave a splendid concert. The more than three years of effort on the part of the director and the entire ensemble yielded full fruit in the presentation of an ambitious but wisely selected program, so exceedingly well done that the audience spent an evening of unalloyed delight. Incidentally, the entire concert was sung from memory; not once was a conductor or soloist required so much diligence of study and rehearsal that Judson House, solo artist last evening, told members of the club that he had never before seen the feat accomplished by a choral body.

Great advancement. So greatly has the chorus advanced in the last year, and so fine were the results obtained last night, that minor defects noticeable in previous annual concerts were found to be wholly eliminated. In this body of enthusiastic young musicians Manchester has a really worthy representative in the Associated Glee Clubs of America and it will surely give an excellent account of itself at the annual meeting of the great organization.

The beauty of rhythmic expression marked the opening number, "On Wings of Song," by Mendelssohn, well chosen as a beginning, preparing the way for the tremendous contrast provided by the "Soldiers' Chorus" from "Fidelio" in which the chorus centered every particle of its potential energy, which stirred latent martial emotions and fills the most timid individual with the ardor of derring.

The One Letdown. It was in the third number on the program—and this for an obvious reason—that the club suffered its single defeat of the evening, only a partial one at that. "The Lullaby of Love," which is the contest number at the forthcoming Associated Glee Clubs meeting, found the club a shade too anxious to succeed. The opening measures were beautifully sung—nothing could have been finer—and then nerves began to get in their work. The result was that in the later passages there was a noticeable letdown and the whole rendition, in consequence, was not within a considerable distance of being up to the high standard achieved in the rest of the program.

In the swashbuckler, rollicking type of selection the chorus was at its very best. In "Who Sails With Drake?" were shown excellence of tone, sharpness of clear cut attack and release in phrasing that could not have been better, no matter what experience might be back of the rendition. It swept the audience out of itself and carried it, wind-blown, to the Spanish Main where the Jolly Roger whipped its halliards.

"The Echo Song," by D. Lasso, was a delightful novelty and perfectly done. The chorus was divided into two sections, one remaining on the platform and the other being grouped in a corner of the hall to enact the echo. The echo refrain was most realistically produced. It took but a slender imagination to hear a group of singers hallooing across a wide valley and another group answering. This number met with an insistent encore.

The "Miserere." An outstanding feature of the program was the "Miserere" scene from "Il Trovatore," in which the famous duet was taken by Mme. Erva Giles, the soprano soloist, and Judson House. The mere technique of handling this scene, with its many difficult entrances and intricate musical phrasing, and sung in Italian—a language utterly unfamiliar to most of the members—without the use of a line of written music by anyone but the director and accompanist, was a feat very seldom achieved outside of professional grand opera. Yet the chorus sang this difficult composition with excellent tone quality, steadiness of rhythm and clarity of diction that were delightful, and at the same time maintained perfectly the values of support to the two soloists. Every other number on the chorus program was given with high credit to the organization and the unanimous expression among the audience was one of delighted surprise. The Beethoven club had far surpassed all expectations. The marked improvement was in all the parts and a beauty of tone and exactness of part-balance was achieved of which Director Pearson and his enthusiastic boys have every reason to be highly proud, as the result of less than four years of plodding struggle.

Solo Artists. The solo artists, Mme. Erva Giles, soprano, and Judson House, tenor, are so well known to Manchester and to millions of persons elsewhere, through their radio broadcasting, that it is hardly needed to do more than say that they were there and sang. Mme. Giles' soprano voice has a very delightful quality in her upper range, which, while it may seem light in volume, has a peculiar carrying quality. Her number last night were chosen with a desire to meet all musical tastes—everybody had something "for" him. As her first number—a program change—she sang a setting of "The Blue Danube," arranged especially for her by a friend. It was delightful, the tripping and dainty rhythm being treated with infinite art. It was encored. She scored a hit, too, in the "Italian Street Song" with the chorus. Among her group features, arranged especially for her by a friend, it was delightful, the tripping and dainty rhythm being treated with infinite art. It was encored. She scored a hit, too, in the "Italian Street Song" with the chorus.

Judson House is better known here than Mme. Giles, having sung at a former Manchester concert. His voice is unusually rich and of a powerful, robust type that is rare. He has it under wonderful control, however, and can and does display a rare adaptability to the mood which stamps him as an artist of high standing. Especially was this quality noticeable in the contrasting numbers of his first group: "The Cloths of Heaven," which is Keightley and dainty; "A Love But a Day," a sentimental love theme, and "The Pipes of Gordon's Men," robust, inspiring, martial. Each of these received the artistic interpretation to be expected from a Judson House. His second consisted of "Pleading," a delightful and delicate in treatment, and the ever popular "Ah, Moon of My Delight" from the "Persian Garden." In this latter number, especially, Mr. House's voice was heard to glorious effect. To encore and double encore again, he responded with "The Rosary" and "Lindy Lou," playing his own accompaniment.

Miss Eva M. Johnson acted as accompanist for the club and also for Mr. House and at the conclusion of his first group the artist led Miss Johnson to the front of the platform to share the lavish applause—a deserved compliment.

All in all the Beethoven club and its indefatigable leader have serious congratulations coming to them. They have definitely arrived.

ANDERSON-SPERBER. Miss Gertrude M. Sperber of 63 Pearl street and Eric A. Anderson, son of Mrs. John Anderson of 20 Darling street, East Hartford, were married yesterday afternoon at the Concordia Lutheran church on Winter street. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. H. O. Weber. They were attended by Miss Helen Anderson, sister of the bridegroom and Eric A. Sperber, brother of the bride. In the absence of the regular organist, Fred Warner, Helge Pearson, organist at the Swedish Lutheran church, played the bridal march from Lohengrin and the recessional by Mendelssohn at the close of the ceremony.

The bride's gown was of blue georgette. She wore a hat to match and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley. The bridesmaid wore orchid georgette with hat to match and carried an arm bouquet of Premier roses.

A reception followed at the home of the bride, Mr. and Mrs. Anderson on their return from a motor trip to Niagara Falls will be at home to their friends after May 15 at 63 Pearl street.

BORROWS BATTERY HERE, KEEPS IT, IS ARRESTED

Waterbury Truck Driver Goes to Jail for Failure to Return Goods to Local Supply House

John F. Shea of Waterbury, 24 years old, who is employed by the Byroly Transportation company, found himself in trouble while driving through Manchester on the 22d day of March and stopped at the Center Auto Supply company. He was in need of a battery for his truck and it was late at night. He did not have a dollar. The Center Supply company kindly allowed him to take a battery with the understanding that he would return it the next time he went through Manchester, or within a very few days. He failed to keep his word and consequently was placed under arrest.

The supply company through Ernest Bantly, manager, made every effort to induce the Byroly company to return the battery but without results. Mr. Bantly produced a letter he sent to the Byroly company making such a request and to which he never received a reply. In court this morning Shea pleaded guilty. He told the court that he had informed the Byroly company to the effect that he had secured the battery and that it must be returned. He gave as his excuse his wife's illness and claimed he was off work for several days about that time.

Judge R. A. Johnson imposed a fine of $25 and costs. The costs were higher than usual because of the fact that Patrolman R. H. Wirtalla went to Waterbury for Shea yesterday. The young man did not have a dollar in his pocket and although Chief Gordon communicated with the officials of the Byroly company, they made no effort to make good. The young fellow, who claimed he had a wife and two children, was taken to jail.

LAWYERS MARK TIME IN BEARDSLEE CASE

Bridgeport, May 1.—Counsel for Mrs. Oliver Beardslee, held in the detention home here since her husband was shot in Stratford last week, expects to receive a copy of Coroner John J. Phelan's finding in the case tomorrow, though nothing official has been announced concerning the finding. Meanwhile both the Town Court of Stratford and Mrs. Beardslee's counsel are marking time awaiting the issuance of the finding.

The first move of creditors against the estate of Oliver Beardslee came today when Benjamin R. Thorpe, local provisions merchant, brought suit in the Common Pleas Court here for foreclosure of a judgment lien of $665 against the Beardslee homestead at 180 King street, Stratford, the place where Beardslee was shot. The judgment was obtained on April 9 with J. P. Wilcoxon, of Stratford, Beardslee's conservator, as defendant. The bill was for estates that included a number of chickens which Mrs. Beardslee yesterday told Coroner Phelan her husband had carried to the "ice room owned by the mother of one George Wilson."

TREASURY BALANCE
Washington, May 1.—Treasury balance April 29: $226,307,274.25.

THE COPPER INDUSTRY

BY ALLARD SMITH, Vice President, The Union Trust Company, Cleveland.

ONE of the most dramatic events of the business world in recent months has been the sensational rise and the equally dramatic decline of copper prices. For several years copper hung to a depressed level of around 13 or 14 cents a pound. It began to show marked signs of strength late in 1928, rising to 24 cents a pound by April of 1929.

The advance of the red metal was intimately connected with the rise of living standards in this country, reflected by the marked growth of the electrical, automobile, radio and other industries which use large quantities of copper.

Sales of radio sets mounted from $5,000,000 in 1922 to $306,000,000 in 1928. There are now 10,000,000 sets in the U. S.

Although both production and consumption of copper have made new high records, the demand until recently has been met by the result that stocks of the metal in producers' hands ran low. They amounted to 55,000 tons this spring compared with 105,000 tons one year ago.

European recovery has been another important factor in the return of the copper industry to prosperous conditions. Export shipments from United States were $74,221 tons against $41,865 tons in 1927. Shipments to domestic users made an even larger gain, however, the total being $83,460 tons compared with $24,844 in 1927.

He denied, however, that the corporation attempted to influence editorial policy of the newspapers, which it bought into. Counsel for the commission ironically asked whether there was any probability of the so-called power trust's being adversely criticized by those newspapers in which it had heavy stock holdings.

Sen. George W. Norris (R) of Neb., who is responsible for the commission's present investigation, declared today at Graustein's testimony revealed another gigantic step by the power interests to get control of public opinion.

Recalling earlier discoveries that power and utility interests had maintained college professors on their payrolls, and introduced arguments against public ownership in school text-books, Norris said the acquisition of newspapers was merely "a logical step in the furtherance of the program."

It is a gigantic scheme which starts the imagination, he said. "Schools, churches, civic organizations, legislative bodies, broadcasting systems and now the press—all are to come under control of the greatest monopoly the country has ever seen."

Congress has done all it can do at this time, Norris said. "It's now up to the Trade Commission and the courts."

The commission's investigation was in recess today until tomorrow when the publicity methods of California utilities will be taken up.

GANNETT'S STATEMENT.
New York, May 1.—Frank E. Gannett, publisher of the Brooklyn Eagle, today issued a statement in which he declared that the International Paper company had no voting rights in the management of the Eagle and no control of its policies.

The statement was issued in connection with the investigation of the Federal Trade Commission into the activities of the company in the field of newspaper publishing.

"The International Paper company absolutely owns no common stock in the Brooklyn Daily Eagle and has no voting rights in the management."

"It owns only 40 per cent of a holding company which I absolutely control and this holding company only owns two-thirds of the stock in the Brooklyn Eagle."

"I personally have all the voting power of two-thirds of the common stock of the Brooklyn Eagle. The other one-third voting power is controlled by various individuals who were original owners of Eagle stock."

This country paid Panama $10,000,000 for the Canal Zone rights, but this does not include an annual rental of $250,000.

Most large consumers have purchased enough copper for their needs for the next two months. This fact has caused some slackening in current demand. In addition, soaring prices have stimulated production and supplies have increased. When pressed, upon the market these had an adverse effect upon prices. In the second week of April the price dropped precipitately from 24 cents a pound to below 20 cents. Meanwhile, most producers in the industry have been enjoying the greatest prosperity since war days. This fact was vigorously reflected by an impressive stock market advance of prices of copper shares.

IMMIGRATION IS UP AGAIN IN CONGRESS

on the principle involved would be to surrender to foreign blocks, and to discriminate in favor of some European countries and against others. Reed declared "alien groups" were attempting to dictate this nation's immigration policies. "All the national origins law attempts to do is to preserve our present racial balance." Reed concluded, "so far as this can be controlled by immigration restriction. To my mind, there is only one course open. To compromise with that issue is to invite destruction."

BOYS TO TAKE CHARGE OF THE STOCK MARKET

No One Over 21 Years of Age Will Be Among the Managers.

New York, May 1.—James N. Gilchrist, 20-year-old employe, "Boy President" of the New York Exchange, today prepared to assume his toga as king for a day of the world's greatest financial mart. James' ascension to the throne will come on the occasion of the annual "Boys' Day" tomorrow when juveniles, their youthful brows corrugated by the grave responsibility conferred upon them, take over and run the intricate machinery of the 'change.

The chairman of the board will be James McAlvanah, 18-year-old page boy whose duty will be to sound the opening and closing songs.

Walter H. Alms will be the president of the Stock Clearing Corporation and Gordon B. Pemberton and Andrew Germuth will act as managers of the day branch and night branch, respectively, of the corporation.

E. H. H. Simmons, for five years president of the exchange, will formally turn over his power to the new officers at a meeting in the governing committee room tomorrow.

None of the "financial leaders"—for a day—is over 21 years of age.

LICENSES SUSPENDED

A list of operators whose licenses to drive automobiles in Connecticut have been suspended for one year for driving while under the influence of liquor was given out today at the State Motor Vehicle Department as a part of the effort to reduce this highway menace. The department statement advised people to notify the department of the police in case they should see any of these drivers operating motor vehicles.

COLUMBIA

Miss Gladys Rice a student at the Willimantic Normal school, is spending part of her vacation in New Haven with her cousin, Miss Doris Pinckney.

Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Collins spent the week-end in New York with their daughter, Miss Eleanor Collins.

Miss Miller of Boston, with a friend, opened the Miller cottage at the lake for the week-end.

Mrs. Eugene Lafleur returned to her home Sunday after spending a few days in Meriden visiting her parents.

Miss May Randall of Hartford has opened the Dresser cottage north of the Green for the summer.

Work on the Jonathan Trumbull Highway has commenced. A steam shovel weighing 48 tons has just arrived for use on Woodward Hill.

Its operator is boarding with Mrs. Trythall. He has just come from New York, where he has been working building a 50-foot parkway.

Joe Lafleur is making frequent trips to the lake getting in readiness to open for the summer.

The schools of the town are having a week's vacation, as are the pupils attending the Windham High school.

Mrs. Emily Little returned to her home on the Green after spending the winter in Hartford.

The Misses Hazel and Lois Gillette of Spring Hill spent the week-end at the home of their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Isham.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Kingsley of Hartford were guests Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Tucker.

At the Columbia church Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. John Howell spoke on the driving force of discontent. There was no meeting of the Christian Endeavor in the evening, as the local society was invited to meet with the Hebron society at a Tri-County meeting.

The house on the Green formerly occupied by Miss Eliza Hutchins and owned by Henry Hutchins has been let to the State Inspector on the new state road now being constructed. He will move in with his family very soon.

The annual meeting of the Columbia Improvement association was held Saturday evening. The following officers were elected: President, J. N. Clarke; vice-president, Wm. Wolff; secretary, Cora Hutchins; treasurer, H. W. Porter; board of directors, W. H. Carpenter, C. E. Hunt, Fannie Collins and Raymond Clarke.

A handsome spruce tree which stood in the triangle of the road at the lake has been moved to the Green near the schoolhouse. This would have been destroyed as the new state road goes there.

"Ghost Talks"
"Children of Rita"

There still seems to be one form of screen entertainment that never is disliked by the theater-going public. That is mystery—a story that is chock full of hair-raising thrills, hilarious merriment and poignant dramatic moments.

Such a type of picture is the William Fox all-talking Movietone film, "The Ghost Talks," which is now being presented at the State theater. Not once does the spectator lose interest throughout the un-winding of the story. There are thrills, laughs and more thrills that seem to predominate at all times.

Every shriek, scream and gasp, as well as every spoken word has been synchronized perfectly with the picture. All of the players are heard as well as seen.

Such prominent film favorites as Charles Eaton, Helen Twelvetrees, Stepin Fetchit and Earle Foxe make up the cast. Lew Seller directed.

"Children of Rita," First National's film version of the $10,000 prize-winning story by Cornell Woolrich, is the associate film feature for today and tomorrow.

Jack Mulhall and beautiful Dorothy Mackall have the stellar roles with Doris Dawson, Joyce Compton and Jerry Payne in support. The story has to do with the modern jazz-loving, care-free youth of today.

Friday and Saturday the State will present Davey Lee, the famous child star of "The Singing Fool," in his first Vitaphone talking picture, "Sonny Boy."

CHICAGO BOMBINGS

Chicago, May 1.—Residents of the near northwest side were terrorized today by a series of bomb explosions which within five minutes wrecked three soft drink parlors.

Police Captain Paul Gilbert, in whose district the bombings occurred, said the blasts either signaled a new beer war or were the outgrowth of bitter feeling over a fund being raised for the defense of suspects held in connection with the slughters of seven Moran gangsters.

Windows within a radius of several blocks were shattered and half a dozen persons were reported to have suffered cuts from broken glass.

Those whose places were bombed were Benjamin Kepelsku, Paul Buczkowski and Joseph Kucharski. They have remained closed since the Moran gang massacre.

The three outrages evidently were the work of a gangster group operating in an automobile.

POWER AND NEWSPAPERS

One thing can be said for Archibald Graustein, president of the International Paper Company. In his testimony before the Federal Trade Commission concerning the International's investments in newspaper securities he was, in contrast to some of the magnates who in the last few years have been questioned by Congressional investigators, at least respectful and apparently truthful and frank.

We are inclined to put considerable faith in the rectitude of the intentions of the International Paper Company in its newspaper dealings. Certainly they appear to be such as might be approved by the most exacting critic.

But here again there is room for giving credit for all honesty of purpose, even when one feels somewhat nervous over the possibility of the water powers of the country being absorbed by huge corporate interests. There is a very large school of thought which is honestly convinced that complete economic development of the nation's resources is possibly only through the operation of these great combinations of capital.

Nobody and no influence has done more to foster the very general prejudice against so-called socialism than the independently owned newspapers of the country, over a long period that far antedates any such combines as the International Paper and Power Company. We very much doubt whether any degree of pressure from a power corporation, however great it might become, could greatly add to the enmity against government control that has been fostered by the newspapers of the country while still completely free agents.

And after all, the extent to which it would be possible for the International Paper and Power Company to color public opinion through newspaper control, should it seek to do so, would have very positive limitations. A newspaper which, because it was power-controlled, supported measures or policies plainly in opposition to the public interest, would lose its readers and so its political and financial value.

THE DENNETT CASE It has been stated that a plan has been made upon to bring about a showdown in the Dennett case by having one hundred leading physicians, ministers and educators autograph a copy of Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett's "Sex Side of Life" and mail it to the President of the United States. By this act every one of the one hundred would openly defy the law under which Mrs. Dennett was prosecuted, the statute forbidding the sending of obscene matter through the mail, and would do it in a way that would demand attention.

If this scheme is carried out it would seem to be almost impossible for the federal authorities to ignore the challenge. We can't for the life of us see how President Hoover could fail to take official notice of the proceeding and turn the case over to the Department of Justice. If he did, it would be open to him to take Judge Borrows and his jury have just declared to be a crime, and this with the whole country looking on.

And if the President of the United States should figure as an official complainant, how could the Department of Justice pay any less attention to his complaint than it did to the complaint against Mrs. Dennett, brought by a Virginia chapter of the D. A. R.?

It is easy to imagine President Hoover's disgust with the situation, if it develops as it promises to. We haven't the remotest idea that Mr. Hoover's mind is cluttered up with any of the smudges and quirks that makes a certain type of people regard sex and sin as synonymous terms, and biology a creation of Satan. He is sane and clean, and for that reason, under ordinary circumstances, a thousand persons might autograph any such text book as Mr. Dennett's and send it through the mails to him and all that would happen would be a note of acknowledgment from a secretary, if anything. But the conviction of Mrs. Dennett puts altogether another face on the affair. These people deliberately contemplate something that has just been ruled a criminal action—and they are forcing the head of the nation to take cognizance of it.

There would appear to be only one loophole out of wholesale prosecution of the challengers. The Dennett case is going up to the circuit court of appeals and will probably be heard in June. Perhaps President Hoover may take the view that, in view of this fact, the affair is still in a state of flux, and may decide upon the claims of error and sends the case back for trial. If the circuit court finds error and sends the case back for retrial, that will be something else again, and the valiant one hundred autographers may never get themselves arrested after all.

A ROSE AND A REPROACH

There is an editor on the Waterbury Republican on whom we would plan a rose, and then sadly chide him. Starting from the remark of a St. Louis writer that the "Worms" about which the birds sing "mean nothing to us," the Waterbury editor wisely remarks that worms do mean something—they mean trout, at this season "when flies are still unavailing." For that, the rose! Snobbery and angling ignorance combine to produce, even in New England and in April, constant assumption that the only real sportsman is the fly fisherman. Yet every angler knows that there are hundreds of New England streams where nobody could use a fly at all, and that until well along in May no trout would rise to a tied feather lure, anyhow, save by the merest luck. Here, then, is an editor who knows his angling onions.

But he is no cook. For he goes on to say that, "To eat one of them, after it has been properly rolled in crumbs and fried, is to lose all envy of the Grecian gods who are reputed to have dined on ambrosia." Listen, brother, we weep for the trout that you roll in crumbs before you fry it. Quit it! It's sinful! It's almost as bad as boiling a turkey, as they do down in North Carolina. Get your bacon fat piping hot. Slip your trout into it—not, please heaven! rolled in crumbs or meal or anything else. Let it stay not over ten seconds before you flip it over, then ten seconds later flip it again. That will keep it from sticking or curling up. And when you eat it you will be eating trout, thanks be! and not fried bread! Do this, and we will provide a second rose.

ASLEEP OR PRETENDING

Two or three months ago this newspaper pointed out that the developments with relation to the new German warships, though totally ignored by the Navy Department in its eagerness for the building of a fleet of 10,000-ton cruisers to carry eight-inch guns, as a matter of fact rendered those cruisers obsolete before the blueprints were drawn. Again, some weeks ago, when a fuller description of the first of the four German ships became available, we spoke our mind on the subject. We have seen nowhere, in any of the metropolitan newspapers nor have we heard in any responsible circles, however, the first word of expression of any such deduction as ours from the situation. Nevertheless we have adhered to it.

Now France, at least, has suddenly come awake. She realizes that if the Reich completes this Ersatz Preussen and build three more like her in the next four years, which she has a right to do under the Versailles treaty, she will have the French navy licked to a standstill on paper, because no French cruiser can match the Reich class ship in guns, nor anywhere near match her, and no French battleship could come anywhere near her, through lack of speed.

And that, if you please, will be exactly the situation of the American Navy, after the United States has thrown away two or three millions on these new cruisers, useless toys compared with ships of no greater tonnage but built under this revolutionary German plan. We will have nothing that can stand up to the Reich ships except battleships of hardly more than half the speed of these strange and terrible craft.

Just as France has awakened, so will the United States awaken—by and by. We firmly expect hot newspaper discussion and congressional debate on this question a year from now, or two years, when millions shall already have been squandered. But not yet. Not till a lot of fat contracts have been let—to be cancelled with equally fat allowances later.

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 1.—The big town gossip. The swanky Fifth avenue windows reveal that the boys will soon be wearing grim black shirts with bright orange ties. All right, go ahead and wear 'em! Don't mind me. My eyesight's slipping anyhow.

Eddie Cantor and Corey Ford have both written burlesques on "The Cradle of the Deep." And since the squabble over Joan Lowell's authenticity the wags have been having a great time. Someone suggested that, if and when the movie version is made, the theme song should be, "Look Out, You're Rocking the Cradle!"

Eddie Dowling, one of Broadway's most popular song and dance men, who just made his first talkie, "The Rainbow Man," is told. But then if you started to trill down the real names of stage and screen stars, heaven knows where you would wind up. For instance, such a poetic name as Dolores Del Rio becomes Annunzio, if you check it back. But Rudy Valentino, it always seemed to me, was an inspired monicker for a "love interest" hero. Particularly when he started out as Guglielmo. Oh well!

Life is like this: The first show producer get his clutch on the greatest of song bits, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love, Baby," kicked it out of his musical revue. The show closed within a few weeks. The same song was picked up for the colored revue, "Blackbirds." And they say that this production went over the top largely on the strength of that song.

The Lafayette, Ind., Courier has a particularly bright gold star list of graduates in and about Manhattan. George Barr McCutcheon, who died recently, is said to have written "Graustark," the romance on which he built his fame and fortune, while newspapering on that journal.

Bernard Sobel, who is Flo Ziegfeld's erudite little press promoter, started there. And Steve Managan, who now handles the affairs of Jack Dempsey, after a session with Gene Tunney, was a Lafayette sports reporter. And the propriety of Purdue University, of course, helped bring a number of now famous ones to town—including Booth Tarkington. Tarkington's classmates will tell you that he just couldn't get up in time for classes and was almost invariably late for school.

By the way, does anyone happen to recall what became of the Bunton Derby winners? Or the dance derby champions? Sic transit. J. P. McEvoy, who writes very funny books and plays, was a wrestler, as well as a greeting card writer. Beatrice Lillie, the British comic, says that the oddest experience of her life was that of meeting a soldier after the war who asked her to autograph his wooden leg. He had the names of 100 celebrities on it at the time.

David Belasco, grand old dean of the theater, has the most fabulous and legendary suite of offices of any Broadway producer. They are heavily and beautifully curtained and equipped with exotic and gorgeous furnishings. He always enters by the stage door—for atmospheric effect. This is a private elevator waiting at the back of the stage. His studio, which is on the third floor, has another entrance which is equipped with a burglar alarm. This door leads into a room filled with a museum-like display of rare glasswork. This, in turn, leads to his famous Napoleon room and then to the Gothic room. In the rear is a dignified and valuable library. Off this is an indoor garden with a running fountain. The "crucifix room" is the final touch.

Each has touches of expert stagecraft, and a first entrance is always extremely impressive and exciting. The desk at which the great man sits is so ancient that it is held together with bits of rope and string. GILBERT SWAN.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By ROBERT DUTCHER.

Washington, May 1.—The one thing certain about the prospective agricultural legislation is that everybody isn't going to be satisfied.

The changes also are that whatever program is enacted will require a considerable period to demonstrate its success, as suggested by President Hoover in his message to Congress. Since there probably will be quite a little moaning and howling for some time to come.

No one is rubbing it in very much, but the old farm bloc appears to be taking the last fluke of a sound trimming. Apparently it is being pushed right back to just what the Coolidge administration was willing to concede to the farmers and nothing more.

Farm Bloc's Last Stand.

The administration's onslaught against the export debenture plan, which was bound to be defeated, probably has squelched the farm bloc's last feeble struggle. This year finds a complete reversal of the situation in previous years when farm relief was on the legislative program. Both houses of Congress passed substantial majorities the old McNary-Haugen bill with its equalization fee. Twice Coolidge vetoed it and now it isn't even mentioned any more.

The two largest national farmer organizations have brought forward separate specific remedies and each has been turned down, not by Congress but by the White House. The American Farm Bureau Federation stood behind the equalization fee and the National Grange sponsored the debenture plan. Of course a majority of members of the old farm bloc are left in a somewhat peculiar position, which would be much more embarrassing to them if they were not such hardened politicians. Only a year ago they were all hollering for the equalization fee and insisting that nothing else would do. Then all of them except Senators Norris, LaFollette and Blaine dashed into the front ranks of the Hoover parade last summer and fall, assuring the country that all the farmers need do was to trust implicitly in Hoover—the most staunch enemy of the equalization fee.

The election result proved either that the farmers believed them or that they didn't want the McNary-Haugen bill especially, or both. If Hoover had lost a few farm states to Smith the agricultural legislation situation would now resemble a panic.

Some of the farm bloc boys expressed mildly a painful surprise at the Hoover message to Congress on the ground that it didn't go far enough. But there's nothing they can do about it, apparently. And in view of the circumstances they don't dare say very much either. They really accepted defeat when they supported the Hoover-Curtis ticket.

No one is in any position to show that Hoover's program isn't the best one or that it won't eventually be the one most helpful to agriculture. Of course some experts have serious doubts about its effectiveness, but Hoover himself was dead right in asserting that any real effort would have to be experimental.

The strongest feature about the equalization fee, as compared with measures proposed subsequently to its demise as an issue, was that it represented an attempt to control production. The theory was that if growers of the crops affected increased their acreage they would proportionately increase the cost of disposal of surpluses and only soak themselves. The theory was that they would have sense enough to realize that in advance.

Eliminates Control Feature. But there is no control feature in the administration farm bill. That problem will have to work itself out. Nobody knows what will happen if farm prices rise and a great increase in planted acreage follows, but there is reason for a strong suspicion that it won't be anything very nice.

One also hears the suggestion in Congress that stabilization is bound to create losses and that even if a $500,000,000 revolving fund is provided that sum is only about four per cent of the farmer's annual income. Some, contrarily, believe the government's farm board may even manage to turn a profit. Still another argument is that the benefits of higher farm prices will be shared by all producers, whereas the costs or losses of stabilization will be shared only by members of co-operatives who will be thus at a disadvantage.

"I have no confidence," says Senator Howell of Nebraska, "that a voluntary co-operative system resulting in part and not all of the producers paying expenses can be permanent."

Amounts to a Subsidy.

The export debenture scheme would be virtually a direct subsidy. Exporters of farm products would be paid the tariff duty on their commodity in the form of Treasury certificates good for the payment of import duties. There is some argument whether the difficulties attributable to import or export duties are sufficient to endanger the rest of the tariff structure. Howell is one who thinks it would. But the main objection to the debenture plan is that it has not been rigged up with any production control feature.

Nine Pieces $130

These two new dining ensembles offer two distinctly different ways to transform your dining room this Spring. The first, similar to the sketch, is of old English inspiration, having a six-legged table as shown, with sturdy stretchers and turned legs in evidence. Walnut,

American gumwood and maple overlays, toned to a rich nut color, have been used, while the chair seats are covered in a small figured, tone Jacquard velour. Table, buffet, china cabinet, arm chair and 5 side chairs included, or sold separately, if you wish.

Nine Pieces $232

This is a suite somewhat heavier in design, although also inspired by Early English pieces. The table is of the pedestal type, like the one shown, having four legs. The pieces included in each ensemble, . . . table, buffet, china cabinet, arm chair and 5 side chairs, . . . are made of beautifully grained walnut, American gumwood and oak overlays. A small checked, multi-covered Jacquard velour of distinctive design is used to upholster the chair seats. If you wish, you may select as many pieces from this group as you need.

WATKINS BROTHERS, Inc. 54 YEARS at SOUTH MANCHESTER.

HEALTH AND DIET ADVICE BY Dr. Frank McCoy "Why? The Fast Way to Health!"

WHAT PATIENTS' HANDS TELL THE DOCTOR The doctor often develops great powers of observation after years of practice, and he may learn very much more about the patient than the latter is usually aware. Often a doctor of many years' experience can almost diagnose a case by merely looking at the patient. Often, too, the doctor does not realize the actual definite physical changes which led him to his opinion, as he may do this by a subconscious recognition of similarities to other patients having the same type of disease. Just to illustrate, I am going to give you a few of the pointers that a doctor may learn from observing a patient's hands.

The doctor is also able to determine much about the patient's general health from the appearance of the hands and from the method of holding and moving them, and much can also be determined from the texture of the skin of the hands and from the appearance of the fingernails. It is even possible to sometimes determine how long a patient has had an acute illness because the nutrition of the nail suffers greatly an acute illness and a transverse groove will usually form in the nail. The time can be calculated by the fact that the length of time required to grow a new nail is about six months if the groove is about half way up to the fingernail, the patient had an illness about three months ago, and if the groove is a third of the way up, the patient had an acute illness about two months ago, etc. Dr. McCoy will gladly answer personal questions on health and diet addressed to him in care of the Herald. Enclose large self-addressed stamped envelope for reply.

Questions and Answers Large Neck Question: Mrs. S. M. writes: "I have had a large neck for 17 years. My doctor says it's not going to get any larger. I have asked several doctors but they don't say what it is. I'm 33 years old." Answer: It may be possible that you dislocate your ribs when twisting your body. Sometimes one rib will come over the other and this will cause pain when it is replaced. Have an osteopathic or chiropractic physician examine your ribs and see if this is the cause.

STUDENTS MEET LINDY IN CAPITAL

See Senator Bingham Present Famous Flyer in Senate Chamber.

Special to The Herald.
Washington, D. C., May 1.—The high school seniors on their trip to the nation's capital were thrilled yesterday afternoon when they arrived in the U. S. Senate chambers in time to see Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut present Colonel Charles Lindbergh to that body.
While news cameramen were taking pictures of the famous Lindy the local party crowded around and many attempted to get autographs. Frank Happeney and R. Carey tried to get Lindy to autograph a card for them and were caught by the cameramen while they were doing it. When Happeney asked Lindy for his signature the famous flyer replied, "Not now, Sonny Boy." The whole party was thrilled by the experience.
Yesterday was perhaps the day that gave us the greatest thrill of all, but today we have had the finest excursion that the high school tourists from Manchester have ever enjoyed. We went down to Luray, Virginia, to visit the beautiful Luray Caverns. These are the largest illuminated caverns in the world. (As if it were something new, we were called early this morning!) and at 7 o'clock we were bunched into the waiting buses.

The last bus which contained groups Nine and Ten, under the leadership of Bill Davis and Pit Healey, were peculiarly slow in starting, but it would be unfair to report that it was because anybody was late or had over-slept. They just wanted to be different, that's all.
Buses were very comfortable with low wicker chairs and deep spring upholstery seats. Our route of about ninety-eight miles was over the Lee Highway. We crossed the Francis Scott Key memorial bridge at Washington, and went on through Arlington County.

A short distance to the left was Arlington, the home of General Robert E. Lee, the National Cemetery, also Fort Myer, one of the principal United States forts.
Next came Arlington Court House, the county seat of Arlington county, and then Fairfax, the county seat of Fairfax county. Here the first Confederate soldier was killed in the Civil War, Captain J. Q. Marr. Also in this courthouse was the will of George and Martha Washington, written in their own handwriting, and many other records of Colonial days.
The battlefields of the first and second battles of Bull Run were next and then we came to Gainesville, the scene of numerous battles, then to Warrenton, county seat of Fauquier county. Warrenton was the home of Colonel Mosby and his statue stands in the courthouse

This was a grazing section and many beautiful estates were found. Near Washington, the county seat of Rappahannock County, the road intersected Route 37 to the south and coincided with it to Sperryville where it branched off and ascended the Blue Ridge Mountains through Thornton's Gap. The view from the top of the mountain at that point was very beautiful and rare scenery was enjoyed.
Descending, we came to Luray, the county seat of Page County and the home of the wonderful Luray Caverns, one of the natural wonders of the world. Guides took our party through the caverns in small groups. In the Mansion Inn we had that fried chicken dinner which Mr. Quimby had talked so much about.

The amount of heat generated by one tallow candle can be accurately measured three miles away.

NO NEW OFFER

Berlin, May 1.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, head of the Reichsbank and chief of the German delegation to the reparations conference, will return to Paris tonight without any new offer for the allied experts.
It was stated in behalf of Dr. Schacht that he would merely participate in the preparation of the final report which is expected about the middle of this month.
It is believed in some quarters that the report may offer opportunities for direct negotiations between the interested governments at some later date.
There is every prospect that Germany will continue under the Dawes Plan, although there is strong belief in both political and financial circles that the Dawes Plan itself cannot stand the strain when Germany is called upon for payments of more than $600,000,000 yearly.

SETS PRECEDENT

Montreal, Que., May 1.—In sentencing Assad Eddy to two months in jail and ordering him to pay a $1,000 fine, Judge Lacroix today established a precedent that may have far reaching consequences.
Eddy, a British subject, was convicted of bigamy because of his marriage in Malone, N. Y., in 1912 after he had been divorced in Reno from his first wife, a divorce which was not recognized in the Superior Court here.
In sentencing Eddy, Judge Lacroix ruled that any British subject domiciled in Canada is guilty of bigamy if he or she goes to a foreign country and contracts a second marriage.

RICH GIRL & POOR GIRL

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MILDRED LAWRENCE meets STEPHEN ARMITAGE when he rescues her fox fur from a thief. Their friendship grows until PAMELA JUDSON, daughter of Mildred's employer, tries to lure her away from her. HUCK CONNOR becomes infatuated with Pamela and she plays both men. Her brother, HAROLD, is in love with Mildred, who tries to keep him from gambling with Huck's crowd.

When Stephen continues seeing Mildred, Pamela has her disfigurement and also turns Stephen against her by saying that she is trying to marry Harold for his money. Bitter at Mildred, Pamela then permits Pamela to announce their engagement when she tells him that is the only way she can break with Huck.

Huck commands Harold to prevent Pamela's marriage under fear of exposure concerning a forged check. Harold says he can't force Pamela, so Huck plans to dispose of her. He has one of his gang frame him for stealing a firm car, and the detective arrests him after finding a roll of bills, a gun, and the auto keys which have been planted in his room.

Pamela refuses to see Harold and breaks her engagement to a "fallbird," but Mildred goes to him and promises help. She begs Harold to expose Huck and help her free Stephen, after he confesses Huck has threatened both of them.

Mildred and breaks her engagement to a "fallbird," but Mildred goes to him and promises help. She begs Harold to expose Huck and help her free Stephen, after he confesses Huck has threatened both of them. Mildred phones Harold to come over to her, but while he is dressing in his room Huck enters and tells him to stay away from her, under penalty of being exposed. Maddened, Harold defies him and they fight. Suddenly Harold realizes his danger and tries to call help.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

As Harold opened his mouth to yell for help Huck viciously clapped a hand to his lips. The boy fought desperately but was quickly overpowered and he lay motionless on the floor.

The rest of Huck Connor's murderous act was quickly carried out. Holding and silencing Harold with one hand, Huck dealt him a stinging blow with the other.

There was no cry as the hurrying body left the window and crashed through space to death below. Then, almost instantly, Huck set himself to follow the dictates of his rapidly working brain.

He flicked out his handkerchief and ran it over the woodwork of the window to remove any fingerprints he may have left on it. A quick survey of the room assured him that little was amiss. A chair had been overturned. He righted it in one swift movement.

His glance then fell upon the table that held the ash tray with the butt of the cigar he had smoked. Huck was too wise to smoke a special brand by which he could be traced, but he knew that Harold did.

Quickly he spread his handkerchief on the table, took up the tray with a corner of it and emptied the contents on the linen. He ran his coat sleeve over the table, and then, satisfied that he had destroyed all clues, turned to leave. As he was about to open the door he heard a faint sound of a footstep in the hall. He stopped, and he heard the door open. He saw a shadow, and he knew that Harold was in his room.

Harold's body was discovered soon afterward. A guest on a lower floor had glimpsed a falling object as it passed his window and instantly called the office to report his belief that it was a body.

Mr. Dazel himself rushed to the roof of the adjoining building after a glance from the nearest window. But first he stopped to send word to the house physician.

The assistant manager and several other hotel attendants followed. They found the body lying face downward. But enough of the features showed to make its identity recognizable.

"My God! It's Harold Judson!" Mr. Dazel cried and went down on his knees beside the body. He reached out his hands.

Someone touched him on the shoulder. "Have to leave it as it is for the medical examiner, sir. He's done for."

Mr. Dazel sprang to his feet. "Call the police," he ordered his assistant. "And you, Cummings, fetch some blankets."

That was all they could do. The house physician arrived on the scene shortly afterward and pronounced the boy dead.

It was dark, a glorious sapphire darkness, before the medical examiner gave permission for the body to be moved. It was taken to a funeral director's establishment and Pamela was not allowed to view it.

Up in Harold's room the hotel detective and the police had been making their investigations. Nothing aroused their suspicions that it was more than a suicide case or an accident until they came to their scrutiny of the window.

Rather perfunctorily they went over the floor, the baseboard, the window sill and the frames. Then, suddenly, when they had finished inspecting the woodwork their superficial air vanished. They looked at each other gravely there were three of them—and expressed a single opinion in a single word.

Would have been torn. And had his fingers slipped from the woodwork the marks would remain.

"That just about settles the accident theory," the house detective said.

One of the men regarded the window speculatively. Then he stepped forward, threw it up, and climbed to the sill where he crouched as though preparing to throw himself out.

When he let himself down again they all agreed that Harold could hardly have jumped from the window without touching the woodwork with his hands.

"It's a safe guess he didn't slip," the third man remarked, looking at the thick carpet under the window. "And it's just as safe to bet that he didn't go out of that window on his own power," the man who had climbed to the sill declared emphatically. "Looks like murder, boys."

Their talk became grim from that moment. The room was searched again but nothing to support their theory was found except the fact that in going over the window a second time they could see that the woodwork had been recently wiped. The second window in the room, which was closed, showed a slight accumulation of coal dust on the sill.

It was obvious that an open window would have collected a greater amount of dust had it not been removed. And the removal was too thorough to have been done by the dead boy's clothing as he was sped to his death.

"How about the door?" one of the officers asked of the hotel detective. "Did Flannigan find it locked when he was put on guard?"

"No," the hotel man said, "but that doesn't mean much. I've had to warn the boy and his sister time and again about leaving their doors unlocked."

"Well, we can't do anything more here," the officer stated. "Come on, Bill, we'll make our report."

When the report was filed it established a theory of the case that was in direct disagreement with the popular belief that Harold Judson had died a suicide's death or been the victim of a fatal accident.

But the police preferred to keep their theory to themselves. They did not want to put the murderer, if such there really was in the case, on guard.

A man was sent in haste to the funeral director's establishment and arrived before Harold's clothing had been removed. A minute inspection of his belongings was made and all metal or hard objects taken for possible fingerprint clues.

Shortly thereafter all doubt that Harold had met a violent death at the hands of an assassin vanished from the minds of those who learned that on the body of silver belt buckle was a clear thumbprint that did not belong to the bell's dead owner.

The funeral director was summoned and avowed that no one had touched the bell in his establishment, to the best of his knowledge. To avoid waiting on a meddling police officer obtained thumbprints of all persons who might have touched the bell after the tragedy. None corresponded with the print on the bell.

"The man who left that thumbprint was the last man to see Harold Judson alive," Inspector Markeson said in assigning men from the homicide squad to the case. "It looks like a tough job, boys, but I want you to clear it up. Good luck to you."

The investigation immediately centered in and around the Judson Hotel. It was not long before Huck knew that the hotel servants and employees were being questioned in regard to Harold's habits and associates.

Word was brought to him by one of his own henchmen that the waiter who was on duty for room service during what he called the "milk-wagon watch."

The information was more casual than it would have been had the man known what the police believed. His orders from Huck had been to see that as little was known of Harold's attendance at his poker parties in the hotel as possible.

"Though you'd want to know that a couple of John Laws are pussy footin' around for dope on the kid, sir," he said, having been trained by Huck not to forget that there was a waiter serving a guest.

Huck asked a few questions and convinced himself that the police were still on a false trail. With everyone saying the boy had killed himself; it was but natural that police should seek for a motive. Huck was not worried.

But he knew that Mr. Dazel had received a cable from Amos Judson, saying he was flying from London to Cherbourg to catch the first boat sailing from that port to New York.

This was common knowledge about the hotel. Huck had no difficulty in learning of it. It served to heighten his determination to carry out his plans as quickly as possible.

He sent urgent messages to Pamela, asking to see her. She did not answer. For the time being Huck was as entirely outside her world as though he'd never known her. Even the flowers he showered upon her brought no word of acknowledgment.

Apparently she was plunged into grief but Huck knew that a number of her friends had been admitted to her rooms, which she had not left since the tragedy, and he suspected that she was not so crushed as her seclusion would indicate.

one side and down the other for his "swell" ideas.

Pamela, beautifully recumbent upon her lacy pillows, where she wept fitfully and plied herself for having lost her only brother, would have been amused at the result of Rose Poberlin's attempt to create an atmosphere fit to receive her.

Her amusement would have been shortlived, however, if Huck's determination to introduce her to the Poberlin's had been known to her.

Knowing nothing of either Rose Poberlin or Huck's plans, she busied herself with selecting becoming mourning garb.

Baffled in his efforts for the time being, Huck set himself to devise some way of breaking down the barrier she had erected between them. He was still unsuccessful when he received a message that sent him in haste to see Duke Broegan.

Waves Are Coming Back with a Bang!

YOUR CHILDREN by Olive Roberts Barton ©1928 by NEA Service, Inc. Other Solitary Children.

In this day of small families a great number of children are growing up alone. I mean, without the companionship of other children.

A good many mothers prefer it so, because they have a very natural clinging to the old idea that the only safe child is the isolated child. When he hasn't any companions he is protected from disease! Besides, he won't learn mischief and he won't hear what isn't good for him!

The other day I saw a little fellow of about four leave the park bench where his nurse was sitting and run over to a group of children who were rolling down a little hill. He stood and watched, a stinky little rosy-cheeked figure in a blue overcoat and tam, that told of good care and 100 per cent health.

His nurse called impatiently, "Come back here, George, and play with your airplane. Come on now."

He came—walking backwards, all eyes and longing. "Don't you know you're not allowed to play with other children, George?" You mustn't go up to strange people that way. You stay here. Your mother wouldn't like it."

There are real scientific reasons for children having companions to play with. News of mental development and activity is accelerated, we know that by experience.

THE BATTLE OF MANILLA. Today is the anniversary of the Battle of Manila Bay and Admiral Dewey's famous order: "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley."

Just 31 years ago today that great naval battle in our war with Spain was fought. "Gridley," to whom Dewey's storied order was given, was captain of the Olympia, Dewey's flagship.

Fighting started at dawn, after the American fleet had entered the bay under cover of darkness. All night long the ships had crept silently under unsuspecting Spanish guns to take up their positions within the bay, commanded by the Spanish fleet.

The victory was won after little more than two hours of heavy firing, but desultory fighting continued until afternoon. News of it did not reach the United States for several days. Erroneous reports of a Spanish victory, sent out from Spanish sources, cast gloom over the United States until Dewey's cable gram, sent from Hong Kong, a week later, told of the victory.

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famous Authority

NOT MUCH GOOD! By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

The belief that alcoholic drinks of one type or another have great virtue in the prevention of coughs, colds and even of pneumonia has persisted for many years.

It is not a superstition, since there are no magic rituals associated with this belief, other than are associated with the general use of wine in Jewish, Roman and Christian festivals. In practically every religion the drinking of wine is considered meritorious and is associated with the celebration of important events. No doubt, special virtues have attached to the use of wine for this reason.

Scientifically, it is known that the taking of alcohol produces in the human being a state of euphoria, a sense of well being, which has caused alcohol to be used for a variety of ailments since the beginning of time.

The empirical use of this substance proceeded until eventually special claims began to be made for whiskey in the treatment of sepsis of one type or another, the idea being that the alcohol in the blood actually overcame the infection. Today there is a considerable amount of evidence available to indicate that in some instances the use of alcohol may definitely diminish resistance to infection.

When the great influenza epidemic swept across the country in 1918 there were tremendous demands for whiskey on the part of hospitals and of physicians because this alcoholic drink was presumed to have special virtues in controlling that disease. A critical survey of the scientific evidence indicates that the morbidity and mortality rates were just about the same in those treated with and without alcohol.

The chief val. 3 of drugs and physical measures in such conditions is to relieve the patient from pain and depression while the tissues of his body muster themselves in their attack upon the disease. No doubt, some people find whiskey exceedingly comforting under these circumstances, but the whiskey will not prevent pneumonia and, according to some medical authorities, will even make the likelihood of pneumonia greater.

As the Dr. Sabin if this quest for some impersonal fact which will help the world has been as truly heart-satisfying as the occasionally glimpsed mirage of the thing that "most women have," and they, if honest, would say "no."

And yet—just as no woman, or man, ever marries as a duty to the race, but as a choice which seems best designed for individual personal happiness, just so is it

The WOMAN'S DAY

Dressed in the white uniform of a medical research worker, Dr. Florence R. Sabin of Rockefeller Institute was photographed at her desk the other day, and her photograph flashed the country over.

After years of grilling, detailed, unobtrusive labor she suddenly became famous because she had, after analyzing millions of tuberculous germs, found a phosphorus-like substance, named phosphatid, which acts up on the human system as does the tubercle germ. This means new hope of a cure for the deadly disease.

The picture is not printed just because a woman did this thing. It is not printed in the same spirit as that of a more than usually comely girl who happens to do little or nothing, but who is good "page one art."

Dr. Sabin is comely in an elderly, dignified way. But the picture would have been printed and the fact made as much of if a Mr. Sabin had achieved this triumph.

THE WORLD'S ACCLAIM Humanity halls no one so much as the man or woman who helps preserve and maintain human lives. Ask anyone who has done more for earth, Dr. Sabin and all her kind—women who have given long and arduous years to an attempt to find one fact which will help the race—or the woman who marries, cares for home and husband and children in an effective way, and is personally happy and making a handful of other humans happy—and the answer will be that the Dr. Sabin count most.

As the Dr. Sabin if this quest for some impersonal fact which will help the world has been as truly heart-satisfying as the occasionally glimpsed mirage of the thing that "most women have," and they, if honest, would say "no."

And yet—just as no woman, or man, ever marries as a duty to the race, but as a choice which seems best designed for individual personal happiness, just so is it

THE BATTLE OF MANILLA. Today is the anniversary of the Battle of Manila Bay and Admiral Dewey's famous order: "You may fire when you are ready, Gridley."

Just 31 years ago today that great naval battle in our war with Spain was fought. "Gridley," to whom Dewey's storied order was given, was captain of the Olympia, Dewey's flagship.

Fighting started at dawn, after the American fleet had entered the bay under cover of darkness. All night long the ships had crept silently under unsuspecting Spanish guns to take up their positions within the bay, commanded by the Spanish fleet.

The victory was won after little more than two hours of heavy firing, but desultory fighting continued until afternoon. News of it did not reach the United States for several days. Erroneous reports of a Spanish victory, sent out from Spanish sources, cast gloom over the United States until Dewey's cable gram, sent from Hong Kong, a week later, told of the victory.

Be Healthy Drink Milk Time is Health Time

HEALTHY, happy children are a joy forever. Everyone loves romping, healthful youngsters. They bring happiness to the hearts of mothers; they ensure our nation's continued greatness. Mothers who wish to keep their children healthy in body, alert in mind should use milk as the first and most important food in the family diet.

MILK—The Protective Food Milk adds to the disease-resisting power of the human family. Science regards milk as the one food for which there is no effective substitute. CHILD'S PLAY IS IMPORTANT ITEM IN HEALTH PROGRAM

By GRACE ABBOTT.

Chief, Children's Bureau, U. S. Department of Labor.

By act of Congress and by proclamation of the president, we have all been asked to give thought today to our personal and community responsibility for the health of children. The American Child Health Association, which has developed the May Day as Child Health Day, suggests that this year we consider in its health aspects the theme which embodies the old spirit of May Day—recreation for children.

Does anyone need to learn to play? Have you heard anyone recently recommend a game, a book, or a play as a good way to kill time? Killing time is not what the doctor recommends for the business executive in need of healthful relaxation; it is not what the doctor, the educator, or the recreation specialist recommends for the child.

Two frequently parents give their first serious thought to the play habits their children are developing when they reach the adolescent age and they become apprehensive lest their desire for a good time may lead their young people away from happiness and health.

Children do not learn to love books and outdoor life, to swim and to play tennis, to find self-expression in amateur dramatics, in music and in handicrafts in a day or a year or several years. Nor can intelligent and resourceful parents alone meet the recreational needs of their children.

Every child should learn how to spend some of his leisure time profitably by himself, in the family circle and with groups of friends and neighbors. How to live happily together in the same time retain and develop our own individual capacity can probably be learned on the playground more successfully than in the school room.

Such a play program, we are now learning should begin in the pre-school period. Just as the general health habits developed during childhood are the foundation of health in later life, so the recreations we learn to love in early childhood determine the capacity for healthful, recreative play in adolescence and in adult life.

The youngsters who will be playing in sun suits this summer will, it is hoped, remain children of the sun, lovers of the out of doors, the rest of their lives.

The communities, schools and parents which are now investing thought and money in developing recreational programs which will insure the healthful participation of all children in games will realize dividends on their investment. Children and young people need more time for recreation than men and women. Not all of them are insured the leisure that is necessary.

The 8-hour day is a long day for young workers and in a few states a 10 or an 11-hour day is destroying the capacity of boys and girls of 14 and 15 for free and happy play. The community can never hand back to them the losses they are now suffering. Their recreational as well as their educational needs should be considered when child labor laws are discussed.

PROHIBITION NOW ISSUE IN ENGLAND For First Time Since 1892 Temperance Parties Are United.

London, May 1—For the first time in 37 years prohibition will be a definite issue in the British general election on May 30.

Not since 1892, when "local veto" became an active interest in politics, and nearly caused the defeat of William Stewart Gladstone and the Liberal Party, has this sharply cut issue occurred.

On this occasion, for the first time, all temperance parties are united and will concentrate on divisions which are held by a small or medium majority. Their pledged voters irrespective of party allegiance, will then vote solidly for the candidate favorable to their cause.

This election campaign is being run by what is known as "the active service movement," instituted and backed mainly by the free churches of Britain, and manned almost entirely by the "new voters"—those young men and women who have just turned 21 and who have never voted before—will present a "three point program" to every candidate. Each will be asked:

- (1) If elected, will you support a measure to secure public control of the supply of intoxicating liquor in clubs by means of an annual permit or license?
- (2) Will you support a local option measure for England and Wales, including an option "no license"?
- (3) Will you support a measure for the Sunday closing of liquor bars?

Parties Questioned
This questionnaire was sent to the heads of the three political parties in Britain and their general attitude can be judged by the replies received from them.

Premier Stanley Baldwin instructed his secretary to reply: "The Conservative Party has always regarded individual liberty as one of the most valuable assets of the English character. Much as we desire to see the evils connected with the immoderate use of alcohol disappear, we believe that such a result can not be brought about by the proposals which are put forward in your memorial without grave disadvantages."

J. Ramsey MacDonald, leader of the Labor Party, in a very friendly letter, said: "I welcome with all my heart the interest which the signatories show in the temperance movement. Last autumn the Labor Party declared for a royal commission to inquire into the whole problem. . . . the commission would be appointed immediately if a labor government were in power.

Liberal's Answer.
Sir Herbert Samuel, replying on behalf of the Liberal Party, said: "Our attitude is that the present national drink bill represents an unproductive and wasteful expenditure by the community which is indefensible in the existing economic situation, and inimical to the health and efficiency of many of the consumers. . . . It is necessary that the system whereby the sale and distribution of alcohol is regulated, should be revised and improved."

The net result of the replies is that the Labor and Liberal parties are prepared to legislate on the question of, at any rate, a modified form of prohibition, but the Conservative Party will remain conservative.

"Our new movement, in effect, originates from the youth of the churches," the Rev. Henry Carter, secretary of the Wesleyan Methodist Social Department, told International News Service.

"We are not Prohibitionists in the sense that we desire to close saloons against the wish of the majority. That would be un-English. But we do say that there is a general movement throughout Britain for thorough reform of the drink trade. The younger generation have no use for people who drink and waste their lives in saloon."

our people are reduced in purchasing power for even a temporary period.

Maximum Employment
Maximum employment for the maximum number of our people is at all times essential to our continued prosperity. The problem of labor displacement by machinery thus affects employers as much as it distresses labor, and because of this fact we may expect to see practical and effective measures to prevent serious disturbances to labor from this rapid extension of automatic machinery.

In the long run every advance in industry and technique only ends in industrial expansion with new products and new employment.

The immediate problem before our industrial leaders is so to introduce new machinery with a minimum of human displacement. I am confident that with the interest at present aroused in this problem, and in view of the thought expended upon it, we may soon find ways of continuing the displaced worker in some profitable occupation.

Apart from this natural effect of progress and aside from adjustments necessary in certain branches of our textile industry and in some bituminous coal districts, nothing is in sight to interfere with another year of activity in industry, with employment for more workers at the liberal wage that now rules throughout industry in general.

Bills passed from the Senate calendar today follow:
Creating a commission to investigate the advisability of establishing a metropolitan district for New Haven, West Haven, East Haven, North Haven, Orange, Woodbridge and Hamden; appropriating $410,000 to the Mansfield training school and hospital for construction and equipment; providing the Public Utilities Commission shall have control of fares, service, operation and equipment of taxicabs.

The House today received a favorable report on a bill which permits the city of Willimantic to regulate the construction and maintenance of structures within the city limits by city ordinance; giving the Norwalk Second Taxing District power to take the waters of the Wilton branch of Silver Mine stream, and North Wilton brook to provide additional water supply for the city, the area to be supplied to be agreed upon by the commissioners of the First and Second Taxing Districts; authorizing Hartford and New Britain to enter a joint contract for water supplies; three Danbury bills, the first validating contracts since June 1, 1927, the second allowing the city to establish a planning board, and the third providing for appointment of special policemen.

Judge William L. Larash, of Orange, presided over the calendar session of the House which passed the following: Incorporating the Connecticut Title & Investment Co., of Stamford, with a $25,000 capital, the incorporators being Abram, Morris and Bertram Spelky; amending the Naugatuck Borough charter to create the posts of chief, first and second engineers of the fire department; creating a commission to investigate the need of a new bridge connecting Hartford and East Hartford.

FARM BILLS SIDETRACKED

Washington, May 1.—Plans for supplemental farm relief legislation in the special session were temporarily abandoned by House leaders today under threat of the Senate to force the session into consideration of general legislation if any more bills are presented.

Rep. Haugen (R) of Iowa, chairman of the House agriculture committee, announced that he would not call up four supplemental farm relief bills reported by his committee until after the tariff bill is passed, and indicated that they would likely all go over until the regular session in December.

use her as an alibi—she not knowing what the alibi really meant.

Peacock told her, she said, to tell anybody who questioned her that she had "passed out" in a drinking bout at his apartment the night he carried the body of his wife from the apartment and threw it in his car, the crux of the "alibi" being, police believe, to have possible suspicion diverted from himself. Peacock, police say, planned to make it appear as though the "large bundle" he carried from the apartment was Miss Newman, sodden with drink, and not, as was actually the case, the still warm body of his bride.

Authorities who are holding Peacock for the Grand Jury which convenes May 6, expressed confidence that they can prove the prisoner guilty of technical premeditation, constituting first degree murder, for which death in the electric chair is the penalty.

GANGSTER SLAIN

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 1.—Guns of gangland roared in a fashionable hotel here today and August Bruck, 30, former lieutenant of George Remus in liquor operations, Chicago gunman, wanted in Detroit for robbery, fell to his death with five bullet wounds in his back. That Bruck died while attempting to defend himself was evident to police as Bruck had a revolver with no bullets discharged, right in his hand. Two women, badly frightened, rushed from his room to the lobby and fled to the street shortly after the shooting.

Is Babe Ruth Slipping? Batting Average Is 216!

Has Made Only Two Home Runs, No Doubles or Triples and Driven in Very Few Runs.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, May 1.—The understanding is general that George H. Ruth, the well known husband, wishes to be awarded a contract for $100,000 at the end of the current season, it might not be out of line to mention the fact today that what he is liable to get is the chance out of a two dollar bill, unless he stops what he is doing, which seems to be mostly nothing. He has trundled his way through ten games to date to a dapper .216 in the batting records and, as time goes on, the way he gets no better is downright interesting. Ruth didn't have many points to waste but he lost about fifteen of them during the week which ended today.

The boy friend often complained querulously in other years that he would hit 65 or 70 home runs but the pitchers would pitch to him but today he has no more comeback than a toothbrush, slightly used. The boys are throwing them right past his indignant bosom, with the result that he hasn't been passed more than five times and only two of his drives have been hit with sufficient rancor as to leave the pastime, abruptly. One of these was made off Hadly in Washington and goes down in the records as the only typical Ruth hit of the year to date. The other came from a half-swing at one of Ruffing's deliveries on the occasion of the great first time at bat this season.

The rest of the time he has been lopping his drive or something. Thirteen times, more or less, has been retired on infield chances, seven times has he fanned and perhaps as many as ten men have been left on base. In no game has he made as many as two hits and neither double nor triple has surged from his bat. I doubt if he has driven in more than three runs, although scoring six as a strictly personal gesture.

These figures are more or less casual since, as a statistician, I claim to be a high grade chump. However, they serve their purpose in indicating that all, indeed, is not well with our Mr. Ruth. His batting average is trifling enough but it doesn't tell the story. Ruth has been a perennial leader in runs scored, runs driven in, extra base hitting and passes, in addition to his home runs, except

In the department first mentioned, he has been almost obscure. As for his two home runs, a continuation of that pace will get him a few more than thirty at the pay off in October.

Of course, it may all come out in Monday's wash, for Mr. Ruth is an impulsive man and given to moods that defy explanation. He does nothing for ten days and, on the seventh, he does everything, leaving you a guess as to the night in which to identify the dead and dying.

At the same time, I don't think even Mr. Ruth will deny that he might be able to use the three or four home runs that he hasn't got so far.

LAUGHS from the DIAMOND

BY BILLY EVANG

Mickey Cochrane, voted the most valuable American League player in 1928, is the type player sought by every manager. He is perhaps the most aggressive backstop in baseball. The word "quit" isn't in his vocabulary. He is highly regarded by every American League umpire. They know that any time Mickey questions a decision, he feels he has a kick coming.

When Cochrane starts an argument it is difficult for the umpire to get the better of the verbal tilt. Umpires believe it is always well to shun a battle of wits with Cochrane if it can be done without losing control of the situation. Like a great many players, Cochrane indulges in a chew of tobacco during the progress of a game but off the field never uses it.

If you would ask Cochrane what incident of his career stands out as the most humorous, I am sure he would tell you that Umpire Dick Nallin silenced his batteries without so much as a word when Cochrane once rushed at him, intent on making a strenuous protest over a base decision that he felt should have favored the Athletics instead of going against them.

It was in the eighth inning of a nip and tuck game between New Nallin resorted to his deaf-and-dumb methods of silencing Cochrane by Philadelphia that Umpire Nallin, with two on and two out, Cochrane hit a ball to deep short on which Koehnig made a great stop and an equally great throw. According to Nallin, the throw beat Cochrane by a fair-line margin. He ruled him out, striking the side and erasing the two runs that would have been recorded had Cochrane received the verdict.

As Cochrane turned first and heard the shout of "Out," he advanced in the direction of Nallin, standing back of the pitcher, at top speed, ready to give vent to his feelings of great disgust.

JOLLY'S ATHLETICS WIN FIRST BATTLE

Legion League Opens With Hadden's Braves Losing 6-4 Decision; Game Tomorrow.

LEAGUE STANDING

Team	Won	Lost	P.C.
Athletics	1	0	1.000
Braves	0	1	0.000
Cubs	0	0	0.000
Dodgers	0	0	0.000

The candidates for the Manchester American Legion junior baseball team were divided into four groups last night when a two-round league was formed for the purpose of getting a better slant on the ability of the various players before the final selections for the team are made. The teams are the Athletics, Braves, Cubs and Dodgers.

No time was wasted in getting the league into operation one game being played last night with the Athletics nosing out the Braves 4 to 1 in a smartly played five inning contest in which only four errors were committed. Earl Jolly was elected captain of the Athletics and Wilbert Hedlund of the Braves.

The other two captains will be selected at tomorrow night's practice session at the West Side playgrounds. Any boys interested in playing should report at that time as there are two vacancies on each team. The game between the Cubs and the Dodgers will start at 5:30 prompt.

In the game last night, the Braves scored two runs in the first inning when Dey was hit by a pitched ball, stole second and ran home on Hedlund's double. Hedlund scored on Hicking's error when he attempted to field Hadden's ground ball.

The Athletics come back with four runs, Ford was passed and promptly stole second. After Hicking had filed out, Jolly singled Ford home. A Vennart was hit by a pitched ball and Lithwinski dropped Cotton's third strike putting a man on each base. Metcalf singled sharply to right field and cleaned the bases.

The Braves tied the score in the third on Hicking's error of Dey's grounder, a short passed ball and Hadden's single through the pitcher's box. Hadden advanced to third on a short passed ball and scored while Vennart was tossing out Brown at first.

THE AMERICAN LEGION'S MISSION.

Manchester's Dilworth-Cornell Post of the American Legion is to be congratulated for its efforts to give the town a first class representation in the junior baseball world. In Commander Fred C. Lorch and John L. Jenney, it has two real sportsmen who can be depended upon to leave no stones unturned in their efforts to give Manchester a winning combination.

Every team cannot of course win the championship but every player has an opportunity to win that which is far more important—the spirit of fair play, loyalty, team work, obedience, gameness and democracy. The whole American Legion junior baseball program is based upon the theory that the principles of good sportsmanship are closely related to those of good citizenship.

One of the first things which a boy will learn is to respect the rules of the game. Baseball without rules is like life minus laws which would be just a meaningless chaos and anarchy. He will learn to play fairly and will realize that nothing in life is worth while unless won on the square.

Loyalty is another lesson which a boy learns from baseball. A boy who was learned the importance of this characteristic in boyhood will be loyal to his family, to his associates and to his country when he reaches manhood. It affords a splendid opportunity to learn the value of team work; to strive to avoid any attempt for individual glorification.

Gameness is another of the essential qualities which are taught through the medium of baseball. A boy learns not to quit fighting until the last man is out; not to crab and grumble when the breaks are going against him. If he is beaten, he grins and tries again.

Probably the most important lesson that baseball holds for a boy is that in democracy. The game as played under the Legion program, brings together boys from families in all walks of life from the poor home down the railroad tracks to the fine homes in the residential sections. The boys playing together come to recognize each other for what each is worth in himself and not for what position his family may hold in the community. His own accomplishments set each boy's standing. This is true democracy and carried into adult life will constitute one of the basic attributes of good citizenship.

The code of sportsmanship which all Legion posts are striving to attain is as follows: Keep the rules. Keep faith with your comrades. Keep your temper. Keep yourself fit. Keep a stout heart in defeat. Keep your pride under victory. Keep a sound soul, a clean mind and a healthy body.

These seven "Keeps" comprise a mighty good code for citizenship. If the Manchester boys can learn to follow it and to adopt it to all of their life's relationships, the Dilworth-Cornell Post through the individual efforts of Messrs. Jenney and Lorch will have accomplished its mission.

CALL OFF RACE

JOCKEYS' STRIKE

Aurora, Ill., May 1.—The bugle call of "boots and saddles" will not be heard this afternoon and the 22-day spring meet at the Aurora race course may be cancelled entirely because of a horsemen's strike.

A deadlock between officials of the Exposition Park Jockey Club and The Thoroughbred Horsemen's Association of America had not been broken today and, for lack of entries in the seven scheduled races, the track management was forced to call off the opening day's program.

The strike was provoked by the management's refusal to yield to three demands by the horsemen that the present feed "monopoly" be removed so owners may purchase feed from whom they choose; that the minimum purse be not less than $1,000, and that one per cent be deducted from proceeds for the Horsemen's Association.

U. S. DAVIS CUP

TEAM PRACTICING.

Philadelphia, May 1.—J. Gilbert Hall, Fritz Mercer, John Hennessey, Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, the five men who compose the Davis Cup squad of the United States as chosen by Eugene Dixon and Joseph Wear, will start practice today at the Huntingdon Valley Country club near here. The candidates will continue working out until May 12, when they leave for Montreal, the site of the first Davis Cup match against Canada.

Twelve Homers Made Yesterday In Majors

DERBY REGATTA COMES SATURDAY

Yale, Columbia and Pennsylvania to Battle on Housatonic River.

Braves Win Again; Vance Tames Giants; Red Sox Halt A's as Yankees Win 10 to 9.

New York, May 1.—Five homers were made in the Baker Bowl Band-box as the Braves outslugged the Phillies in a 14 to 12 nightmare.

Four more were hit in the St. Louis-Detroit game, the Browns winning 6 to 5 and jumping to first place. In this game Emil Yde was knocked out of the box by the Browns.

Gehr's third homer of the season featured the Yagkees' 10 to 9 victory over Washington, a typical Yankee slugging match that lasted ten innings. Fred Heimach, relief pitcher, won his own game with a double.

Rogers Hornsby hit his third homer for the Cubs, but the Braves were nosed out in the tenth 5 to 4, on a walk by Pinch Hitter Joe Stripp.

In the New York-Brooklyn contest, Dazy Vance of the Robins, strike out king of the National League, won a 2 to 0 decision over Bill Walker and Dutch Henry. Big Ed Morris of the Red Sox, held the Athletics to four hits, one a homer by Simmons, and won 4 to 1. Earnshaw was the losing twirler.

A freak triple play, in which Hodapp was trapped between bases and Jamieson was fooled by the hidden ball trick, helped the Chicago White Sox trim Cleveland for the fourth time in succession, 8 to 4.

New York City

Gentlemen:

We hereby certify that we have conducted and audited a series of public tests of the 4 leading cigarette brands in various parts of New York City. These tests were open to the general public. Every person who entered one of the "testing shops" was asked to smoke the four cigarettes with brand names concealed and to designate, by number, which one he tasted liked best.

We further certify that the following table correctly summarizes the total results of these tests:

"Have many fixed fights were you ever in?" Jack Britton was asked by an expert during the course of a tanning bee in Miami Beach before the Sharkey-Stirling fight.

Looking For An Out
"Ther was a lot of talk about that Leonard fight," Britton went on. "Ther was some betting that Leonard would win and when he fouled me and lost ther was a lot of gossip that we had fixed it and that we had cleaned up. I don't know anything about the betting. I know that I didn't have enough money on hand to bet a dime and that Dan Morgan (his manager) was broke. I never have been able to believe that Leonard wanted an out because I know he tried to knock me out too many times in the early part of the fight."

He Carried Some
"I've carried young fighters," Britton said. "And I don't think there is anything wrong in saving a kid from punishment when there is no chance to hurt me."

Mrs. Shearer was elected to fill the position of Council Three and Mrs. Etta Loveland was appointed assistant guide in the department. The officers were chosen on Monday and installed by a representative from Monday afternoon an impressive memorial service was held for deceased members. The chaplain from the different tents placed flowers on the altar in their memory.

Miss Lillian Keeney acted for the regular chaplain of the local tent, placing flowers in memory of Mrs. Grace Stebbins and Mrs. Carrie Mars.

In the evening a reception and entertainment by Clara Barton Tent No. 7, followed the banquet at the hotel at 6:30. A delegation was present from the Rhode Island department. All sessions of the convention were well attended and the local members report an enjoyable time.

NOON STOCKS

New York, May 1.—The Industrial stocks and Specialties were the principal gainers in the sharp advances in prices in the first hour of trading today.

Though the Steel Corporation, with its magnificent first quarterly earnings report, was given the credit for the bringing in of a new wave of buying demand, U. S. Steel stock was compelled to play the wall-flower part, while the new Specialties basked in the speculative limelight.

United Aircraft, the strings to the movements of which are held by powerful financial interests, the stock being practically cornered, shot upward 16 points in the first half hour to 162, about double last week's low price, and 25 points above yesterday's low.

Stock sales in the first half hour totaled 726,000 shares, at the rate of 7,260,000 for the full session. Murray Corporation, at the head of the Motor Accessories, jumped 5 points to 96 1/2.

Columbia Graphophone was whirled along in an active turnover to $8. Advance Rumely breezed along to 104 1/2, on reports that a settlement would be made on the accumulated dividends on the preferred stock.

The preferred, on this news jumped 7 points to 125, up above 60 points on the move.

Though the renewal money rate was 11 per cent, Wall street looked for a much easier money market later in the week, perhaps before the end of the day. Close to $600,000,000 will be paid out in interest and dividends, beginning today, a good portion of which will come back to the stock and bond markets.

This is good fodder for a bull market, as Wall street well knows. The rise in the Coppers, which started in yesterday's session, carried the active metal shares a few points higher today. An American Smelting was again the favorite, with a 2-1/2 point jump to 112 and new gains of a point or more were scored by Anaconda, Cerro de Pasco and Green Cananea.

Briggs and Tilton Truck set up cut record high prices for the more Eriggs topping, 50, for the first time since its collapse to 33 1/2 in the March end slump. General Motors moved up 1-1/2 to 88 in the lead of the Motor shares, which were not very active.

The ticker fell behind 17 minutes in the second hour, the longest delay since the last week in March. Ticker prices at this time were slightly higher than values reported directly from the floor of the exchange to the board rooms, indicating heavy professional selling under cover of the strength in the specialties.

The commodity markets were slightly irregular, with Cotton off 4 to 10 points and Grain fractionally lower.

HOSPITAL NOTES

Mrs. Emma Lehman of 73 Bissell street was the only patient reported admitted today at the Memorial hospital. There was one death, Mrs. Mary Hunt, aged 75, of Middle Turnpike East, at 12:15 this morning.

ABOUT TOWN

Women of Mooseheart Legion held a successful whist party last night at the home of Mrs. Joseph Barto of Oak street. First prizes were won by Mrs. Edward Coleman and Frank Hoppie; second by Mrs. Andrews and Mrs. Florence Brooks; consolation by Mrs. Fredricks and Mrs. Yost. The latter and Mrs. Brooks played men's parts and won out.

Mrs. Katherine A. Jones of the State Beauty Club is spending the week in Washington, D. C.

Mrs. Frances Frote of Birch street has left for Harrison, N. Y., to visit her mother who is ill.

The Manchester Fish and Game club will hold its regular monthly meeting in Tinker hall this evening at 8 o'clock. A good turnout of the members is hoped for as matters of important business will be acted upon. Light refreshments will be served after the meeting.

The tenth annual Older Girls' Conference for Hartford County will be held in Simsbury on May 4th and 5th. The women and the girls' organizations of the Congregational church and of the Methodist church have extended a hearty invitation to the High school girls of the county to come to Simsbury. They offer royal entertainment.

The funeral of Mrs. Alma Johnson of Laurel Place was held from Watkins Brothers Sunday instead of Holloran Brothers as published yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. William A. Allen of Henry street had as their guests for dinner last evening, Mr. and Mrs. G. Kline and son Westcott of Glastonbury. Mr. Kline attended the meeting of Manchester Lodge of Masons at the Masonic Temple last evening in his official capacity as district deputy of the sixth district.

Center church Women's Federation will have a meeting at the church tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock. The program in charge of the Home Service committee will feature an address by Dr. Mary Cushman on West Africa. Members of societies from other local churches have been invited and tea will be served.

HARMONICA BAND

IN KIWANIS SHOW

First Appearance of Newly Organized Group at State Theater on May 22.

The newly organized Boy Scout Harmonica Band will make its first public appearance at the Kiwanis Minstrel show to be held at the State Theater May 22. It was announced today by Ronald C. Hillman, organizer and director. The band has an important part in the show and will appear in Scout uniform. The members have been rehearsing diligently at the School Street Recreation Center for the past few weeks and hopes to make a favorable impression in its first public appearance.

The names of the Boy Scouts in the band was given out today for the first time by Director Hillman. They follow:

LEAGUE TO ADJOURN

Geneva, May 1.—The League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission, which has been discussing all phases of the disarmament problem, will adjourn on Saturday to give the various governments time to study the American proposals for limitation of navies. It was officially announced this afternoon. The commission will reconvene before September after the maritime and naval experts of the different governments have had an opportunity to make a rapid examination of the American suggestions.

RARE ACCIDENT SCENES

AT ARMY-NAVY CLUB

Photographers Were Forbidden to Take Snaps of Daytona Beach Tragedy, But This One Did.

One of the very limited number of pictures of the fatal automobile racing accident at Daytona Beach, Fla., showing the body of Charles Traub, Pathé News cameraman, who was killed in the course of his work as well as Lee Bible, driver, is on exhibition at the Army and Navy clubhouse.

The picture was taken by a chauffeur for a millionaire before police arrived and prevented further pictures of the bodies of the men who were killed. Cameramen were not allowed to take snaps until the bodies had been removed. The unusual picture was brought to Manchester by Frank D'Amico. It will be remembered that Traub's body was cut completely in two by the trolley car when the driver lost control.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

The lines of life fall in pleasant places on a cheerful countenance.

SENSE and NONSENSE

WHAT THEY GO TO CHURCH FOR. "Some go to church for a walk, Some go there to laugh and talk, Some go there to see a friend, Some go there, their time to spend. Some go there to gain a lover, Some go there their faults to cover, Some go there for illustration, Some go there for affection, Some go there to doze and nod, Let me go there to worship God."

Something is always taking the joy out of life. All the time the women save by wearing bobbed hair is used pulling down bobbed skirts. . . . It has been our observation that the weather is never really hot until the underhirt begins to crawl. . . . We can't understand why the society woman showing a bare leg half way to her thigh should be shocked on seeing a man's suspenders. . . . "I presume the women have a right to smoke cigarets if they want to," said a Manchester man. "But I can't understand why they should want to. . . . A Manchester golfer says he always wears rayon silk socks when playing, so he is able to make a hole in one. . . . An exchange says the Bible is against bigamy because it declares that no man serve two masters. . . . Now that a French scientist has discovered that there is alcohol in the air, deep breathing will no doubt become more popular. . . . If you are sure that your church will get you to heaven, why spend so much time worrying about the other fellow's creed? . . . The doctor told Tom the other day that the best thing he could do would be to give up smoking. He replied: "Say, Doc, what's the next best thing?" One thing can be said in favor of present styles. They have put an end to potticot government. . . . There is now an automobile for every four persons in America and apparently a filling station for every four automobiles.

GALLANTRY, PLUS—A style expert is one who can make a woman feel modest when she doesn't look it.

"Bobby," inquired pa, "did you wash your face before the music teacher came?"

"Yes."

"And your hands?"

"Yes."

"Well," said Bobby, "I washed the one that would be next to her."

Landlady: I'm sorry the chicken soup does not seem very good. I showed the new cook just how it should be made, but she doesn't seem to have caught the idea.

Boarder: I thing it's the chicken she failed to catch.

Smile for the day: As conspicuous as a dollar bill in a collection.

Money usually accomplishes more when it's tight, but it's different with a man.

She—Did you have a good time at your summer cottage last season?

He—No, but dozens of our friends did.

LETTER GOLF

A lot of animals strayed across the letter golf links today, enough to stock an ARK and ZOO. Par for disposing of them is eight. One solution is on another page.

Table with columns for letters A, R, K and Z, O, O.

THE RULES. 1—The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change 'OW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN. 2—You change only one letter at a time. 3—You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count. 4—The order of letters cannot be changed. One solution is printed on another page. A friend is one who walks in when the rest of the world walks out.

THE TINYMILES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) One Tiny shouted, "This is heck to hang here on this big bird's neck. I fear that I will lose my hold and topple down through space. If he should hang his head down low, good-bye to me, 'cause off I'd go. I certainly was foolish when I picked this crazy place. "Hush, up," another loudly cried, "I, too, am trying to save my hide. I'm clinging to a long leg on this wobbly Goofygo. And worst of all, he won't hold still. Already I have had my fill of flying through the air like this, but what else can I do?" The cabin, which was still in place, despite the wild and speedy race, began to teeter to and fro. It seemed 'twas doomed to fall. The bird tried hard to hold it straight, but wind, that blew at mighty gait, made this act quite impossible. It was no use at all. The Goofygo then shouted, "Hay! You Tinsies keep out of the way. Don't let the cabin hit you as it slides off of my back. It's bound to whirl around and round until it lands upon the ground. And, if it hits you, passing by, 'twill be an awful smack." A mighty puff of wind then came. What happened really was a shame. The little cabin toppled and went whizzing down through space. Said Copsy, "What will that be worth, when once it hits the hard, hard earth. I wish 'twould hit a haystack. That would be a nice soft place." The Scooty cried, "Gee, that's too bad. To lose our cabin's rather sad. Let's all go down to earth and see if it is worthless now." "All right," replied the Goofygo. "That is, exactly what we'll do. The trip may be a long one, but we'll soon get there somehow." (The Tinsies find their cabin in the next story.)

 "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

MAY DAY.

This is May Day. Not so much of a day in Connecticut as some others, but those who love children—and that's almost everybody—and who have witnessed the Maypole dances in the parks in New York—which probably doesn't mean quite all of us—could wish, a little, that we went in for that kind of Mayday observance here too. One of the most worthwhile sights of the whole year and the whole great city is the scores of groups of school children doing their Maypole dances on the Mall and playgrounds of Central Park. And what a wonderful time the little folks have!

Well, if there aren't Maypole dances for the youngsters, the best thing we know of, next to that, is to send the children to Pinehurst on an errand. On May day or any other day. Everything is bright and clean and in order at this store—and children love bright and shining things. Also—and this is the real secret—they love to be treated "like grown-ups." Children invariably meet with respect here; the business they do is just as much business as anybody's and they are entitled to every consideration. Also they are the plenipotentiaries of the mothers and dads—if we should slight or take advantage of a tot we'd be slighting or mistreating the parent. None of that for Pinehurst!

Send the tots here. Make an errand, if necessary. Let them become familiar with us and let us get acquainted with them. May and childhood go hand in hand anyhow. It's their especial month. A good month to start them on the Pinehurst habit.
