Tobacco Worker Struck by Trolley in Buckland Was New Britain Man; Other Crashes of Minor Nature.

One man was killed in a series of five accidents here over the week-end. The dead man is Bruno Keriski of New Britain, an employe of Hackett Brothers, on their tobacco plantation here.

Fatal Accident. Keriski, age 38, met his death in a sudden and mysterious manner early yesterday morning in Buckland. Probably the exact cause will never be learned.

Car Occupants. There were three passengers on the trolley car in addition to Conductor Charles Howard of 47 Jensen street, Manchester Green, and Motorman Tedford.

GANGSTER ADMITS TO MANY CRIMES

Also Confesses to Murdering Pal Who Threatened to Squeal.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 6.—With Anthony Kalkiewicz held as a member of the bandit gang that killed a guard, wounded three other men and escaped with $8,100 in the recent payroll holdup of the Fedders Manufacturing Company, police today revealed Kalkiewicz had unfolded the most amazing tale of cold-blooded murder and bandit operations in Buffalo's criminal annals.

The list of crimes reeled off unconcernedly by Kalkiewicz, police say, is topped by the "execution" of Victor Chojnicki, 27, a member of the gang, who threatened to "squeal" to police when denied his "split" of the holdup proceeds.

Was Gang Leader. John Kwiatkowski, 26, known as "Big Korney," was the leader of the gang, according to police. Both Kalkiewicz and Kwiatkowski are held here on first degree murder charges.

OCEAN FLIGHTS FROWNED UPON BY OFFICIALS

Government Will Not Prevent Them But Thinks They Are Foolhardy and Suicidal.

Washington, May 6.—The Federal government opposes trans-Atlantic flights in heavier-than-air machines. No action will be taken to prevent such flights beyond the declaration that official Washington believes attempts to span the two oceans in light aircraft is "foolhardy and suicidal."

The government's position was made clear today to remote an impression that the new administration would encourage American aviators to span the Atlantic and Pacific during the "coming season."

First Booster. Esterwood is the season's first booster for a trans-Atlantic flight. He has tossed $25,000 into the ring for the first aviator who flies from Rome to New York and thence to his home town in Dallas, Texas, any time after June 1.

NAVAL LIMITATION PARLEY POSTPONED

Put Over Until Autumn; Meanwhile Nations Will Study Problem.

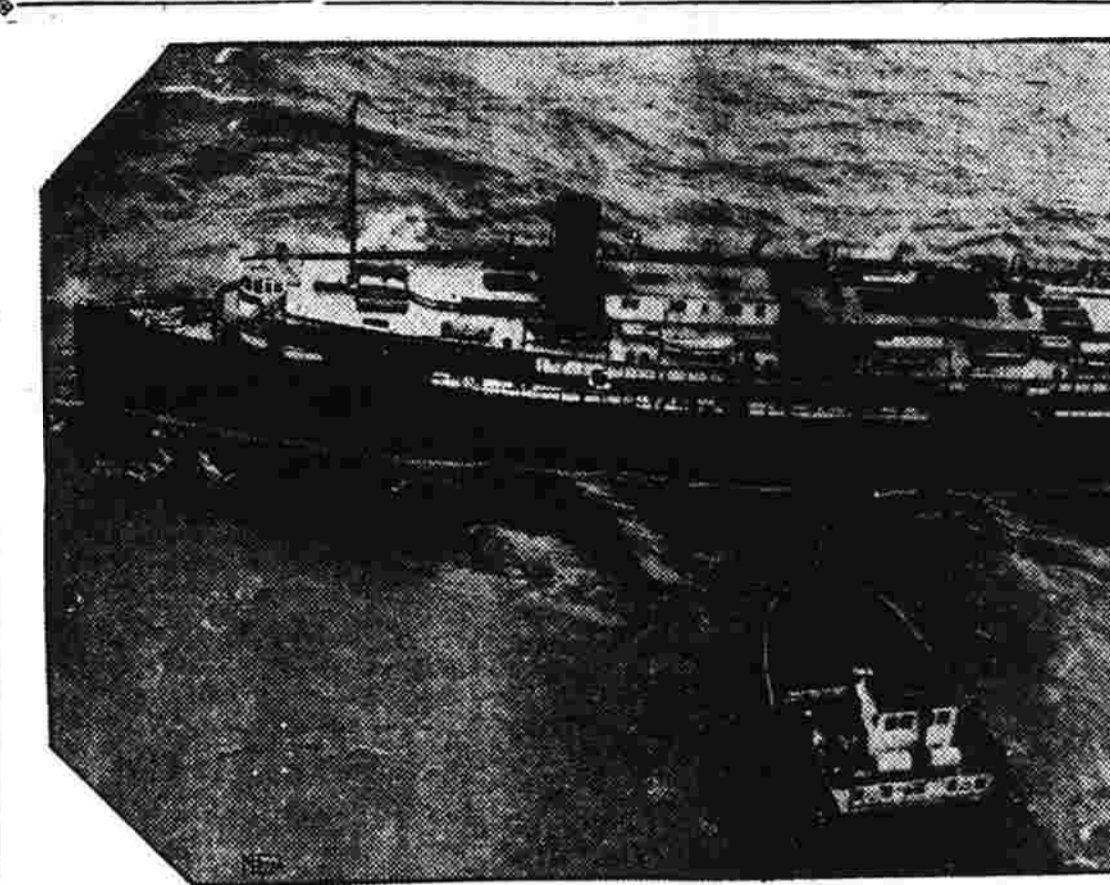

Geneva, May 6.—Open discussion of the naval limitation proposals put forward here by Hugh Gibson in behalf of the United States was today postponed until autumn by the League of Nations preparatory disarmament commission.

In the meantime the naval situation will be studied by the governments of the big naval powers. "The American proposals do not constitute a rigid plan to be accepted or rejected, but are merely suggestions," Mr. Gibson told the commission.

Consent to Delay. Mr. Gibson, who is the United States ambassador to Belgium as well as delegate to the commission meeting, and Maxim Litvinoff, of Soviet Russia, both of whom represent countries not members of the League, consented to the delay.

Friendly Spirit. The meeting of the commission drew towards its close in an atmosphere of amity and optimism. France made another concession to the United States regarding land armaments when Count Massigli withdrew the proposal for international control of budgets and land effective.

ENGLAND FAVORS THE YOUNG PLAN

If France Refuses to Accept It Will Find Itself in Minority.

Berlin, May 6.—It was understood here today that England has practically accepted the Young plan for settlement of the reparations problem. Both the English and American delegates to the Paris reparations conference are said to agree, in effect, to Germany's acceptance reservations. These provide:

1. Complete restoration of German financial and economic sovereignty. 2. Liberation of the Reichsbank, the German railroads and the Reich budget from foreign control. 3. Release of "pawned" taxes and securities.

TELEPHONING FROM A TRAIN NOW REALITY

Toronto, Ont., May 6.—Telephoning from a fast moving railroad train having been demonstrated as practicable, officials of the Canadian National Railways today began working on plans to install the service on its system and provide the traveling public with this new and revolutionary service.

Ultimately, it is expected, all trans-continental trains in the United States and Canada will be equipped for long distance telephone transmission and reception. The demonstration

Hartford, May 6.—The Legislature had a Monday session today for the first time this season. Mellon on charges of holding office illegally, became a majority opinion today when Senator Stephens (D) of Miss., wired from his home that he would support the secretary. RACING BALLOONS OVER NEW ENGLAND

Two Out of Twelve Still in Air—Are Heading for Canada.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 6.—Two of the twelve balloons that took off here Saturday evening in the 1929 national elimination races were still in the air today, with possibilities of setting a new record in their drift over New England.

Ten of the dozen entrants were reported landed this morning, the last to report being the Detroit Balloon Club entry, piloted by S. S. Rasmussen, which grounded at Camden, N. Y. Rasmussen reported to the race headquarters here today that he and Tracy Southworth, aide, had landed shortly after 9 a. m., Sunday.

With the report of Rasmussen's landing, interest centered on the two balloons remaining in the race—Navy No. 1, and the Detroit Times' entry.

Over New England Navy No. 1, with Lieut. Thomas G. W. Settle, pilot, and Ensign Wilfred Bushnell, aide, was reported sighted over Brattleboro, Vt., and was believed to be heading northeastward into Canada.

The Detroit Times, carrying E. J. Hill, pilot and S. G. Schlosser, aide, was also believed to be traveling northeast over New England, although no reports had been received from it.

Of those who have reported themselves out of the race, the Goodyear VII, Ward T. Van Orman, pilot and A. T. McCracken, aide, made the best distance, landing near Keesville, N. Y., a distance of approximately 465 miles.

SON OF C. E. HUGHES GETS FEDERAL POST

To Become New Solicitor General of U. S.—Appointment Comes as Surprise.

Washington, May 6.—The new solicitor general of the United States will be Charles Evans Hughes, Jr., son of the former secretary of state.

President Hoover will send the nomination to the Senate today. The solicitor generalship, which is regarded as the premier government law post with the exception of the attorney generalship, had been vacant for two months. The present attorney general, William D. Mitchell, occupied the post before his promotion to the Cabinet.

Young Hughes is a graduate of Brown and Harvard universities, and has been practicing in New York for several years. His appointment came as a distinct surprise to political Washington.

As solicitor general, young Hughes will be the government's principal pleader before the United States Supreme Court, upon which his father sat as associate justice until 1916.

1,400 PATIENTS FLEE FLAMES IN HOSPITAL

Morris Plains, N. J., May 6.—Fourteen hundred patients of the New Jersey state hospital at Grey Stone Park, near here, were forced to flee their beds in scanty nightclothing early today when fire broke out on the fourth floor of the five-story main brick building of the hospital.

Three fire departments from adjacent towns responded to calls for aid and withdrew at 2:15 a. m., when the blaze was thought under control.

Later in the morning, however, the smoldering embers of the blaze, whipped by a rising wind, burst into flame and calls for aid were again sent out. At last reports, the fire was still burning and had eaten its way through the rear of the building where it was threatening the main portions of the institution.

Although none of the inmates of the hospital, an institution for the care of the mentally afflicted, was burned, several suffered from shock and were treated by hospital physicians.

Damage of the first fire was put at $100,000.

HELEN WILLIS BUYS PRESENTATION GOWN

London, May 6.—Miss Helen Willis, the comely young American tennis champion, who is to be presented at the royal court on Thursday night, began an intensive shopping campaign today in preparation for this coveted event.

Miss Willis brought her presentation gown with her from Paris, the English customs authorities allowing her to bring it in duty free. The American tennis star, who arrived from Paris yesterday, is staying at the American Women's Club.

"Oh, dear, even the traditional English weather is here to greet me," exclaimed Miss Willis, referring to the drizzle of rain and fog. "I am thrilled with the prospect of meeting Queen Mary and the Prince of Wales. My only worry is how I am to complete my shopping in the few days before Thursdays."

DARK HORSE LOW IN BRITISH OPEN

Fred Jewell, English Golfer, Has Low Score—Those Qualifying.

Muirfield, Scotland, May 6.—In a gusty, blustering cloudburst that all but blew everything and everybody out of the course, an obscure Englishman by the name of Fred Jewell led the field home in the first half of the qualifying round of the British Open championship today. Jewell scored a 72 to top one of the greatest fields ever assembled.

Walter Hagen, the champion, finishing in a tie for sixth place with Archie Compston, Aubrey Boomer, Abe Mitchell and Cyril Tolley with a 76.

Deadlocked in second place were George Von Elm, former amateur champion of America, and Bobby Crumplank, another Yankee, one stroke behind the leader. Two strokes back were Leo Diegel, American pro and Canadian open champion. He was tied with Albert Whitting, another Englishman of overnight prominence.

Bill Mehlhorn, fighting for vindication because he was dropped from the Ryder Cup team, could do no better than 79. Johnny Farrell, notable open champion, had a 82. Gene Szeraas was only one stroke better. Horton Smith, sensation of the winter campaign in America, carded a 78, finishing with fingers that were almost frozen.

Form simply didn't exist in this wild, unreasoning day that swept its anguish one moment and raged in a windy temper the next sometimes it did both.

YOUNG TURK OUTLINES PROBLEMS AT KIWANIS

Tells Local Club Members What His Native Land Has Been Through—Notes of Interest.

Hashim Hussein, a native of Constantinople and a student at the Hartford Theological seminary, spoke before the Manchester Kiwanis club this noon at the Hotel Sheridan on "The New Turkey." Mr. Hussein outlined the events which had taken place in Turkey, its reformation and the introduction of western civilization.

The speaker is a well educated young man. He has an excellent command of the English language and was of the opinion that the new era for Turkey dawned more than 60 years ago. He claims that it is the liberals of the country and the younger element who deserve credit for all that has been accomplished.

The trouble with Turkey has been that the majority of its people were illiterate. Since the desire for education has been spread among the Turks through foreign teachers and influences, they have been helped to see a new light on matters of business and industry and the country may now be said to be fairly prosperous. He thought Turkey had been a misunderstood nation. France had more influence with the Turkish government than any of the outside nations.

Mr. Hussein asserted that the great German soldier, Von Moltke, received his early training in the Turkish army.

Stephen Hale won the attendance prize today donated by Kayette Clarke.

The Kiwanis chorus will begin rehearsing every day next week commencing with the regular meeting next Monday.

On May 27th the "Head-to-Poster" who lost in the attendance contest will entertain "Coal Barons" at dinner at the Manchester Country club, at the regular noon hour. Herbert House and his losing team have agreed not only to put on a good dinner but a good program.

AN APPRECIATION. Henry Morton Dunham of the organ department of New England Conservatory of Music, Boston, died at his home in Brookline, Mass., early Saturday morning. From his frequent visits in Highland Park he is well known here. For over fifty years, Mr. Dunham was an organ instructor in the conservatory. It was on his organ in 1831 that the dedication recital on the new organ in the old South Methodist church. Again in 1926, he played at the dedication of the Case Memorial organ in the new church, as a tribute to the family. In fact this was his last public appearance.

Mr. Dunham's compositions comprise sonatas and other works for the organ and also for orchestra. These won for him international recognition. At the organ in the home of Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Crowell he gave many delightful hours of music, which are well remembered by many who were present. To these devoted friends, he dedicated his sonata, "In the Highlands," a "musical picture of life and its settings at Highland Park."

Mrs. Crowell was graduated under Mr. Dunham from the New England Conservatory. His interest in the church music of our town continued through all these years, and his sevenfold Amen, an integral part of the service of the South Methodist church today, is a constant source of inspiration.

One of his most remarkable compositions is the tone-picture, "Aurora," which he wrote by request as a musical parallel to Guido Reni's portrayal of the dawn, and which by its high art proved to be also a true parallel to Browning's ode today in "Pippa Passes." This orchestra composition was performed by the Symphony orchestra in Boston, and also by the Los Angeles Symphony Orchestra in that city, and the ode that Mr. Dunham described on his beautiful score was read during the prelude.

WANTS WARRANT FOR SEN. HEFLIN

Alderman of Brockton Says He Spoke Without Getting License.

Brockton, Mass., May 6.—City Councilor Howard A. Coleman, Democrat, announced this afternoon that at a meeting of the Common Council tonight he would move for the issuance of a warrant for the arrest of United States Senator J. Thomas Hefflin, Democrat.

The councilor said he would introduce a resolve asking for the warrant on the ground that the Alabama Senator on March 17 spoke at a public gathering here in which he did not have a license, which no permit had been obtained.

It was at this St. Patrick's day meeting that Senator Hefflin made an anti-Catholic address, following which a pop bottle was hurled at him outside the hall as he was leaving. The bottle missed him and struck and slightly wounded a Brockton policeman, Sergeant Stephen J. Bryan.

For three weeks Senator Hefflin had tried unsuccessfully to get the Senate to adopt a resolution deploring the attack on him here.

His Charges. Hefflin's address here was made to members of the Ku Klux Klan and the speech in the Senate referred to the bottle as a "deadly missile" and proposing that the Senate "express its solemn condemnation and repudiation of the reprehensible and criminal conduct" of the Brockton bottle-thrower. The resolution was bookered by Hefflin and the Alabama Senator turned his guns on his colleagues and the Washington correspondents, terming the latter "squirrel heads."

On May 1 Hefflin succeeded in having a vote taken on his resolution, and it was turned down, 69 to 14.

LONGWORTHS-GANNS IN SOCIETY SQUABBLE

Washington, May 6.—The capital's social warfare over the seating precedence at formal dinners did not end with solemn decision of the diplomatic corps that Mrs. "Dolly" Gann, half-sister of Vice-President Curtis, was entitled to rank as "Second Lady" on such occasions.

Those who thought it did just don't know their Washington. The buzzing around the tea tables and in the drawing rooms became anew today and centered on the dinner invited to rank as "Second Lady" on such occasions.

To this dinner, so the story goes, were invited the Ganns and the Speaker and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, who are allied to the Ganns by a second marriage. Mrs. Longworth was to be present and seated as the ranking lady. Mrs. Longworth is said to have sent her regrets at the last moment. These regrets, it is said, were followed by the Ganns' regrets when she was announced as Mrs. Longworth had declined. So neither of them attended.

The town is buzzing about it, but none of the principals would discuss it today. Mrs. Meyer referred inquiries to Mrs. Gann and Mrs. Longworth. Mrs. Gann referred inquiries to Mrs. Longworth. Mrs. Longworth told reporters she was "out of town."

ABOUT TOWN

Troops 1 and 8, Boy Scouts, will meet at the Harding School and Lutheran Concordia church respectively, at 7:15 o'clock tonight.

Miss Ida Voltz of 281 Main street called on Saturday from New York for Switzerland where she will visit relatives.

The Sub Alpine Club yesterday observed its sixteenth anniversary in the clubhouse. A full course Italian dinner was served by Osano. The banquet was attended by several town officials and their wives in addition to a large turnout of club members. The club, since first organized, has had several times enlarged and this made it possible for a large gathering such as attended yesterday.

Mrs. Adal N. Merrifield, teacher of practical instruments in this town and Willimantic, will give her annual spring concert at the High school hall this year instead of at the Hollister street school where it has been given for several years past. The date set is Friday evening, May 17, and Memorial Temple Pythian Sisters will sponsor the concert. Mrs. Merrifield has engaged as the assisting artists for the forthcoming program, Miss Lillian G. Grant of Cambridge street, talented alto-soprano, and Robert Gordon, well known local baritone.

It was 3:55 p. m. when Mr. Robb, seated at a corner of a Pullman coach, lifted up the receiver of a Continental telephone and said he wished to talk to his office in Toronto. In less than a minute the connection was established.

"Hello, is that you, Mr. Barber?" asked Robb.

Congratulates Workers. The reply was in the affirmative. Then Mr. Robb said: "I hear you very well. I want to take this occasion to congratulate all the men who made this achievement possible."

And then, one by one, the newspapermen talked to Toronto. The train was clicking over the rails at a 30-mile-an-hour speed. Yet this in no way interfered with the conversation back and forth. The voice at the other end was as clear and audible as a voice ordinarily is during a local call.

It was the first time that two-way conversation from a moving train had been held. During the experiment, telephones from trains has been in operation in Germany. The method in Germany however is beset with many problems and voice transmission is a slow process involving the process of switching over from speaking to listening, which often has the effect of breaking and losing part of a conversation. There was none of this at this demonstration.

A person desiring to telephone from trains in the future will be able to do it as easily as they put in the ordinary long distance telephone call. He merely steps up to the operator on the train, tells him his name and the number of the party to whom he wishes to speak. The train operator signals a terminal operator and gives him the necessary information. When the call is ready, the operator notifies the passenger. The process is reversed when a call is put in from some point to a train.

Eventually it will be possible to talk from one moving train to another. Mr. Robb predicted today. "We will also be able to telephone train dispatchers from our trains which will prove a safety first aid."

"Within a very short time we will install the telephone service on two of our trains running between Toronto and Montreal. This will mark the beginning of the service, which will proceed rapidly and within six months great steps in this direction will have been made."

STARTLING TESTIMONY

London, May 6.—A sensational admission by Second Officer Watson of the ill-fated Lampart & Holt liner Vestris, that he was "instructed what to say" before the American investigation in New York, was made by him here today in the inquiry of the British Board of Trade.

NEW RECORD SET IN IRON AND STEEL PRODUCTION

BY ALLARD SMITH, Vice President, The Union Trust Company, Cleveland.

The iron and steel industry has climbed to extraordinary levels of activity during the first four months of 1929. Not only have production and shipments been greater than ever before, but the earnings of leading companies are revealing important gains also.

For the first time on record, the production of steel in March exceeded the rated capacity of the industry by three per cent. The output for the month was at the annual rate of 60,000,000 tons, compared with an actual production of 49,857,000 tons in the record-breaking year of 1925.

There are four chief consumers of iron and steel products—the automobile, building, petroleum and railway equipment industries. These take almost 60 per cent of the total steel produced every year. In 1928, the automobile industry, for the first time, ranked first as a user of finished steel, taking more than 17 per cent of all made.

Of the four large consumers of steel products, only the building industry has shown any signs of lagging this year. The manufacture of motor cars and of railway equipment has been particularly active. The production of passenger cars and trucks in the first quarter of the year exceeded 1,500,000, an increase of 50 per cent over the same period of 1928.

Equally as impressive has been the gain in the buying of freight cars and locomotives during the first three months of 1929, were as great as for all of 1928. The farm implement industry also has been extremely active for several months in response to the growing demand created by the widespread movement of farm mechanization.

While production of steel continued at a high rate in April, new incoming business has lately shown some seasonal decline. This indicates the season's peak of operation has been reached and that some moderate slackening of the breakneck pace is probable over the coming weeks. The industry on the whole is in a sound position, with large cash resources, moderate inventories and no suggestion of price inflation.

SUSPECT PATROLMAN IN WOMAN'S MURDER

Says He Took Her To Hotel for Safekeeping Where She Died.

New York, May 6.—A sweeping investigation is to be launched today into the death of Mrs. Helen C. Coburg, wife of Policeman Christopher Coburg.

The woman died in Flower hospital yesterday nine days after she was found in a room in a Broadway hotel suffering from lacerations evidently sustained in an altercation.

Patrolman Frank A. Gentner, a friend of both Patrolman and Mrs. Coburg, is held at headquarters on a charge of homicide, pending the outcome of the investigation. Detective Harold Flay of the West 47th street station, where the probe centers, will seek to prove that Gentner was the "Fred Merritt," in whose hotel room Mrs. Coburg was found.

Gentner is quoted as declaring that he took the woman to the hotel merely for "safekeeping" following a party in which they had "a few drinks."

An autopsy held on Mrs. Coburg's body indicated that she had been attacked in some undetermined fashion and had died of septic poisoning which resulted when the lacerations became infected.

Commissioner Grover A. Whalen is expected to take a hand in the case to determine the manner in which his department handled it.

POLISH ENTERTAINMENT PROVES BIG SUCCESS

The Polish National Catholic church presented a most successful entertainment yesterday afternoon in Turn Hall on North street. Three comedies in Polish were presented and there were several solos and instrumental numbers. An orchestra from Manchester composed of Polish men and also one from Glastonbury played. Rev. S. Guzik was much pleased with the success of the entertainment and asked The Herald to thank all who took part and those who attended.

Those who took part were S. Samulawska, R. Rubacha, H. Ferus, S. Brz. Samulawski, Cz. Kowalska, S. Sliz, J. Parciak, J. Zawistowska, H. Grabowska, C. Rubacha, H. Obremaska, J. Wiencok, and the Misses Skrabacz, Gryzk, Jaworska, Majewska, Wierzbicka, Rydzewicz and Genevieve Wroblewska.

NOON STOCKS

New York, May 6.—The Motor stocks and the Oils, with a few of the favored specialties, pushed forward to slightly higher price levels at the beginning of the new week, behind a moderate wave of week-end buying orders. The airplane stocks were the favorites in the Specialties, while the over-extended stocks like Advance Rumely Common and Preferred fell back 2 to 4 points. American Can drew the blue ribbon by its much-threatened exploit in crossing 150 for the first time, which is equivalent to a price of $900 a share on the old stock.

Wall street was hopeful of two important developments within a day or two: first the settlement of the reparations tangle; second, a Stanley Works advance. The latter positive easing up in the money market. The rental rate for call loans was ten per cent, but it was

The identity of the dead man was not known for several hours but was finally learned through the efforts of Sergeant John Crockett, who with Patrolman Joseph Prentice, investigated the accident.

It was learned that the man had been employed at Hackett Brothers' tobacco plantation. Keriski came to Manchester only a short time ago from New Britain. He is unmarried. Positive identification was made yesterday at the funeral parlors of William P. Quish by Mrs. Stephen Swawski, a sister of the dead man, who lives at 313 High street in New Britain. Keriski was a World War veteran.

The man might have been under the influence of liquor and fell onto the tracks, but not the opinion of Dr. Le Verne Holmes, assistant medical examiner, who examined the body shortly after the accident and said he found no odor of liquor.

Dr. Holmes said that the body was badly crushed but that the trolley wheels did not pass over it. The body was dragged considerable distance between the tracks and the ties in the track. The rails were very slippery at the time and this made it difficult for the motor man to stop. Keriski had a broken neck and the left side of his chest was badly crushed.

Measurements which were turned in showed that the trolley car traveled about 80 feet after striking the body, which Motorman Tedford, supposed, according to the report of the police, was a bundle between the trolley rails. Today witnesses were secured that testified Saturday afternoon at 9:30 Keriski was under the influence of liquor and was then heading down for another place to buy intoxicants.

Had Been Discharged. He had not worked on at Hackett tobacco plantation for a week and when it was Saturday he had one day and one hour in pay coming to him, amounting to a little over $2. He boarded in Meekville and has been drunk every night since his coming to Manchester a few weeks ago.

He was allowed to go from his work last week because of his drinking and not working regularly. The investigation that was continued by Lieut. Wm. Barron this morning showed that light on thought to be from a head light on a car and found near the accident was broken in small pieces and had been in the road for some time.

Keriski was a small man and could not have been lying between the rails without his legs or head going onto the rails. The fact that his hands and face were cold when the trolley crew felt of them gave cause to the report that the man had been dead for some time and that it was an automobile that had hit him, but when taken to the undertaker's rooms of William P. Quish, where Dr. Holmes conducted a more complete examination it was found that the body was still warm and that he could not have been dead long.

Relative Identified. The Manchester police yesterday morning notified the New Britain police of the death of the man and asked them to get into communication with his sister in that city. The sister telephoned to Manchester from New Britain last night at 5 o'clock that she was coming to Manchester. In company with two men she came to Manchester this morning and identified the dead man as her brother and also claimed the body. She was making arrangements for the funeral, which will probably be held in Manchester.

Car Abandoned. Russell J. Squires of Rockville is registered as the owner of an abandoned Chevrolet coupe which was found almost totally wrecked at the Oakland bridge. Whether he was driving the car, police were unable to ascertain. The car was apparently going east and turned completely over. Marks at the scene indicated that the machine had gone off the road and had torn a section of the highway fence down before turning over.

Auto Hit Bus. A Nash sedan driven by Wilfred Barber of 1014 South Main street, Waterbury, locked hub caps with a New England bus in front of the home of Samuel J. Prentice east of Manchester Green. Joseph Sovie, father in law of the driver and passenger in the car was badly cut in the head and was taken to the Memorial hospital here for treatment. Other occupants of the car were Mrs. Barber, wife of the driver, Mrs. Joseph Sovie and their three youngest children, Raymond, Elmer and Violet, the latter two twins.

The Barber car was westbound and the bus eastbound. Both cars were on their own sides of the road, according to testimony, but Barber pulled somewhat to his left to avoid hitting a pedestrian. The bus didn't give the Waterbury man any too much room and the cars came together. The left front wheel of the Barber automobile was torn off and the machine crossed the road and nosed through a wire fence.

Man Hurt. The passengers were tossed about and Mr. Sovie, holding the twin children on his knees, sacrificed himself to save the youngsters. He was tossed against the cross bar in the top of the automobile and suffered a long cut in the top of his head. He was attended by Dr. G. A. F. Lunsberg and then removed to the hospital where stitches closed the wound. The rest of the occupants of the car were badly shaken up and somewhat bruised, but all insisted upon going to their homes rather than to the hospital.

Samuel J. Prentice opened his home to the injured and they made the return trip to Waterbury this morning. Other Crashes. Ross Campbell of West Center street cut in too closely on Emil Jarvis of Parker street at East Center and Walker streets at about midnight Saturday night and as a result their automobiles came together. Campbell turned around and went back towards the Green, but his number was caught by another motorist. Campbell was in court this morning charged with evading responsibility.

as a sedan turned over on Twin Hills near Pine Forest last evening when a wheel broke. No one was injured, however, and the car was hauled to Schaller's garage for repairs.

APPLICATIONS FLOOD STATE PARDONS BOARD

second degree murder; and Rubin Glazer, serving one to three years for assault with intent to rob. Petition Denied. Prior to the main session the board denied the applications of Guy and Maynard Tressler, accomplices of Roger W. Watkins, for permission to file applications for pardons. The Tresslers took advantage of a new rule which permits late applicants to be given consideration if the board is willing.

The first case heard today was that of Sebastiano Patevasin, of Middletown, 29, a factory worker who made his second application today. He was sent up in 1919 for life for second degree murder in the death of one Lebarde, a fellow employe. The plea was made by Bernard Kosicki, a lawyer of Middletown, who declared the crime was the result of Patevasin being persecuted by his fellow employes, and this situation led to the quarrel that resulted in death. States attorney Inglis said the circumstances surrounding the case were taken into consideration when the second degree murder plea was accepted. He also said the family of the murdered man were not anxious to have the prisoner free.

Father Pleads. In the second case, a father, John Spelly, appeared for Michael Spelly, of Middletown, who made his first application for pardon on a six to ten year sentence for a statutory offense. The man said his son was much needed at home and he would like to see him again. He seemed to have been punished sufficiently. Spelly was sentenced two years ago. In opposing the pardon the state's attorney declared the boy's crime to be "unexcusable." In addition Spelly had a police record at Meriden.

Rockville Case. Joseph Radville, of Vernon, was the sole Tolland county prisoner to apply for clemency. He is serving one to five years for criminal negligence because of the death of three children in an accident while they were being carried to the tobacco fields last summer. Saul Berman, of Hartford, represented the man. State's Attorney Noone opposed the application, saying "the elements of negligence, inattention and carelessness as well as overloading of a truck with children, and operating without a license" entered into the case. He thought sufficient leniency had already been shown in the light sentence.

Metwink, of Willimantic, serving eight to fifteen years for manslaughter, made his own plea upon his first application. He was sent up for killing the wife of one, Berkowitz, while he was attempting to kill the husband, from a distance, and he came in contact during an epidemic. A collection was taken to help defray expenses. Tonight in Second Congregational church vestry an entertainment will be given with the use of the new machines. The feature picture will be "The Goose Hangs High," starring Esther Ralston. The comedy picture will be "Our Gang." Leon Holmes will give a monologue and Karl Borst will play the piano. The proceeds will be devoted to the payment of the motion picture equipment.

Full of Morphine. Charles Desereaux, of Plainfield, accused of receiving stolen property in what was alleged to be an automobile theft ring, made his own plea on his fourth application, saying he was full of morphine and cocaine on the day he pleaded guilty, and offered an affidavit reciting the whole history of his case. He has been locked up since 1925. Mr. Bradford declared the state had ample evidence showing the man had employed boys to get cars in Worcester, Mass., which he resold. He thought the prisoner had not been led by morphine or anything else, and that he had sufficient counsel when he pleaded guilty.

In the first Litchfield county case, State's Attorney Holcomb said the people of Norfolk did not want (Continued on Page 2)

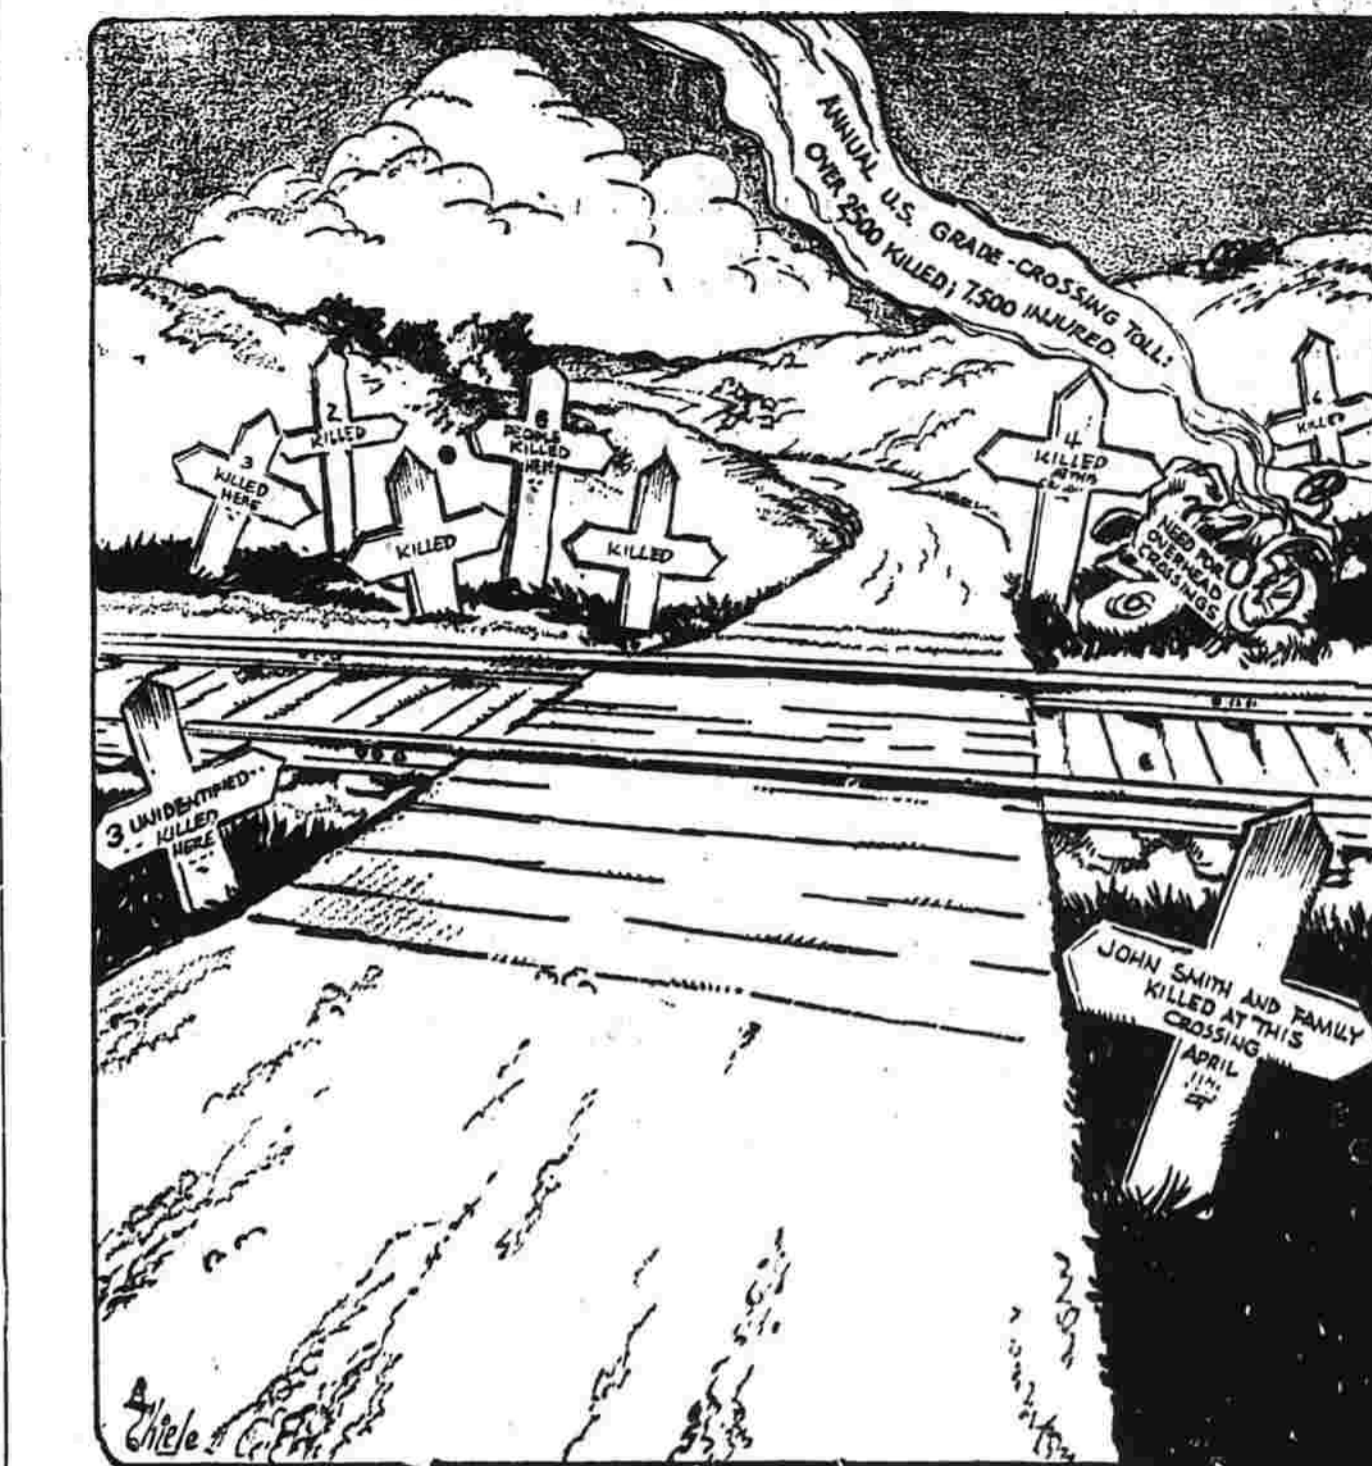

Giardano Candido, of Torrington, made his tenth application for pardon from a life sentence for murder through counsel who claimed him mentally deficient and wanted him returned to Italy. Mr. Holcomb favors deportation, he said, if possible. But there was no question of the man's guilt or of his sanity at the time of the crime, Mr. Holcomb declared.

Norman Frank, of Woodbury, made his plea for pardon from a sentence of two to three years. The crime is listed as an attempt to steal cattle. He said he was arrested while drunk and that no warrant was used. His health is now poor, he said. State's Attorney Holcomb said that regardless of "modus operandum at the time of the arrest, this prisoner was found guilty and did not receive a particularly heavy sentence."

Jacob Richardson, of Litchfield, serving five to ten years for a statutory crime, was represented by Norman C. Beers, of Danbury, who said he had investigated the case thoroughly and was convinced the associates in the crime were more guilty than the prisoner and the sentence in the case was too severe.

The board is expected to sit through the afternoon and well into the evening in finishing its docket. Decisions will be announced later. It's about time the domestic science schools established a course in mechanical engineering.

It was the first demonstration to the congregation of the newly acquired Holmes projectors, the purchase of which has been under consideration for some time. Rev. F. C. Allen, the pastor, presided and introduced the representative of the Church Film company of Boston, Rev. J. M. Peterson, who gave a brief address setting forth the experiences of other churches with Sunday evening motion picture services and their universal appeal to young and old.

Favorite hymns were thrown on the screen for congregational singing and three pictures were shown, two of them from Christ's teachings, "The Good Samaritan" and "Forgive Us Our Debts" and another "Who Loseth His Life" was the story of a young physician who sacrifices his chances for fame with the discovery of a serum for sleeping sickness, in treating the people with whom he came in contact during an epidemic. A collection was taken to help defray expenses.

As Germany has accepted the Young plan with reservations attention centered today upon the decision of France. Emille Moreau, chief of the French reparations delegation, who has been absent from Paris, was expected to return late today when the French decision will be worked out.

France, Heaviest Loser. There is a disposition among the French to resent the intimation that any further delay in a settlement will be due to France's attitude. It is pointed out that, as France was the heaviest loser in the war, she ought to receive full compensation for her injuries. It is maintained that the French demands are equitable and just under the circumstances.

It is possible that the French decision will be announced by Wednesday night. It is believed that Belgium will follow the French lead.

Under the Young plan the Germans would pay for 58 years, 37 of these annuities averaging slightly more than 2,000,000,000 marks. Twenty of them would average slightly more than about 1,700,000,000 marks while the final payment would be about 900,000,000 marks.

KEITH'S Where you can afford to buy good furniture. Not a Piece But a Policy. We couldn't draw a picture of a policy so we used a living room table. The lines show the importance of correct proportion. The legs serve as evidence of the high regard we have for workmanship and design. The finish proclaims the fact that miles and oceans mean nothing compared to securing the finest wood. The general character emphasized the manner in which we treat detail. A living room table—but we might just as well have illustrated a bed—a chair—or a couch. That is why we say not a piece—but a policy—a policy which is giving Manchester and its environs a store where anyone can afford to buy good furniture with absolute assurance of correctness in design and detail. SPOKEN IN HEAT
 Considerable flurry has followed the declaration of Chief Justice George W. Wheeler, at the State Bar Association meeting last Friday, in which he took the unexpected position that certain benefits to the poor people accruing, in his belief, from prohibition, outweighed "these invisible rights of ours."

It has been one of the elements of strength of Chief Justice Wheeler that the humanities have always exercised a great influence upon his views and his decisions; that he has never been a victim of that mechanized legalism which degrades the balance of so many lawyers' minds. Largely because of the peculiar sanity of his judgments and his impatience with the hair-splitting positivities that so often distinguish legal practice, Judge Wheeler has been for many years profoundly admired and, to a very unusual degree, beloved.

Yet with every consideration given to the passionate devotion to concrete justice which we all know to be the basis of his character, it is a little surprising to find Justice Wheeler, even in the heat of an unexpected debate, ready to put even a demonstrated humane advantage ahead of the "invisible rights" which he so summarily dismissed. We take the liberty of believing that Judge Wheeler would never have uttered or even seriously entertained, in the reflective mood in which he has always made his official decisions, any such principle.

No fair-minded person could object to Justice Wheeler's objection to the proposal of Lucius F. Robinson that the Bar Association in effect commit itself to the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment by calling for a mail ballot on a repeal resolution, because, as the chief justice pointed out, the resolution was sprung on the Hartford meeting without notice. Nor will anybody question Judge Wheeler's sincerity in concluding that prohibition has benefited the poor people of his city.

But we do contend that the chief justice has, in the reasons he assigned for his opposition to the Robinson resolution, departed farther from his devotion to "invisible rights" than we have ever known him to do in the course of his long and honorable career. We doubt very seriously whether, in his capacity as chief justice, he would ever subscribe to the theory of government to which, in an impassioned moment and in his capacity as a member of the Bar Association, he committed himself.

It is, however, rather beautiful testimony to the respect and affection in which the chief justice is held by his fellow lawyers that the Robinson resolution was withdrawn, in deference to Judge Wheeler's attitude, in spite of the fact that a majority of the members present were in favor of it.

MR. MELLON
 We have always believed Andrew W. Mellon to be a disinterested, tremendously intelligent and extremely efficient public official. This belief is, beyond doubt, shared by a very great majority of the American public. He was a very rich man when he entered the service of his country as secretary of the treasury. Everybody knew that, but nobody particularly objected. For one reason, it would be perfectly ridiculous to imagine Andrew Mellon allowing his judgments and his policies to be affected by motives of personal gain. He was certainly rich enough to be far removed from the temptations that influence so many men of lesser fortunes.

At all events the present seems a curious time to be discovering that Mr. Mellon is ineligible on the ground that he is "engaged in commerce." Who, with a fortune, is not engaged in commerce? Mr. Mellon may own a lot of aluminum stock, as he owns quantities of any other securities, but he certainly is not an active operator in aluminum or any other commodity, any more than any other heavy stockholder in manufactures, farms or other enterprises.

The proceedings brought against Mr. Mellon, if successful, could be employed to displace any other secretary of the treasury who had a dollar invested in the shares of a manufacturing enterprise or a transportation company. To that extent he too would be "engaged in commerce."

If Mr. Mellon's enemies in the Senate, and they are more or less numerous, had anything on the secretary of the treasury that would warrant his being displaced, they would probably get considerable backing throughout the country in an attempt to oust him, because there is a certain element that is just naturally suspicious of a multimillionaire in office anyhow; but it is altogether too obvious that the grounds on which it is now sought to displace Mr. Mellon are trumped up and ludicrously strained.

NO FEATHERWEIGHT
 President Hoover's graceful and obviously sincere action in taking advantage of an exceptional opportunity to publicly recognize the high standing of his recent opponent, former Governor Alfred Smith, should do much toward re-establishing a disarranged balance.

Previous to the last campaign the capacity and character of Governor Smith were very generally recognized throughout the country. His ambition to become President, laudable enough in any case and far from ridiculous in his, unfortunately, however, caused the New York man to lose the sympathy of a large number of persons who had previously been his admirers. With the characteristic impetuosity of the American voter, many of these immediately leaped to the opposite extreme and became derisive where they had been laudatory, contemptuous where they had been respectful. The result was, naturally, that the former governor came out of the campaign not only defeated but far less strong with the American public than when he entered it. He was only Al Smith, presumptuous person who had been previously rebuffed. His long and admirable record as head of the greatest of our commonwealths had been forgotten, and has largely remained so.

It is with considerable satisfaction, then, that those who have believed that in Mr. Hoover we have a President who is not only brainy but spiritually big hear him referring to Alfred E. Smith, in a letter to the president of Notre Dame University, as "so distinguished an American" and "so great a public servant."

Mr. Hoover, at least, recognizes the fact that the man whom he defeated in the November election, was no featherweight.

THE VESTRIS LIES
 Pretty much everybody was thoroughly convinced, at the time of the investigation into the Vestris disaster, that there was shenanigan going on. It was not believed, for example, that the truth was being told when it was flatly asserted by the agents of the Vestris at New York that they had not been in communication with the commander of that unlucky ship previous to the sending out of the long delayed SOS. This assertion was supported by the testimony of wireless company operators and others, but probably nine out of ten persons suspected, nevertheless, that they were being compelled to swallow a lie. There was plenty of other evidence in the New York hearings which seemed far more worthy of disbelief than of belief. But what could be done in the face of sworn testimony?

Now, in London, the senior surviving officer of the Vestris calmly and unblushingly admits that the American courts were laughed at. He confesses not only that the Vestris was seriously overloaded but that the survivors conspired to hide that fact from the investigators on this side of the water. Such lying can, of course, have had its inspiration only in one source, the owners and their American agents. And if they procured lies in one direction it is fair to assume that they would serve their ends.

In our belief the Lampert & Holt line stands thoroughly discredited and American tourists and travelers, in justice to themselves, ought not to forget.

TONIGHT'S TOWN MEETING
 It is rather difficult to imagine any serious opposition to the proposal that the town of Manchester accept the State Highway Department's offer with relation to the resurfacing of the Main street pavement from the Center to Depot Square, even though action at this time may bring the abandonment of the trolley line and the substitution of buses a few months earlier than might otherwise be the case. The dangers of automobile traffic over that stretch of road have been so great and so obvious, in the integrated condition of the pavement that relief through the present proposition will appeal forcibly to seven-eighths of the people of the town, we feel sure. Just the same, voters interested in the welfare of the community ought to make it their business to attend tonight's meeting to take action on the question, for unless the will of the majority manifests itself in voting strength it is always possible for an active minority, however small, to make trouble and sometimes to defeat in town meeting some proposal that is favored by a very large majority—of those who stay away. It would be well for voters who are interested in the elimination of the Main street death-trap to be on hand at tonight's meeting.

Health and Diet Advice
 By DR. FRANK MCCUE

VITAMINS ARE ABUNDANT
 In spite of all of the recent publicity about vitamins, very little is actually known about what they are or how they produce changes in the body. Such small quantities of the actual substances containing vitamins are required and the effect of their absence is so pronounced that they may be said to exert an action as powerful as some of the human dietless glands.

Many years before vitamins were discovered, certain German "Nature Cure" doctors stated that from their observations upon patients, certain vital elements were present in fresh raw foods which were present in cooked and prepared foods. These statements were made even without the complicated laboratory tests available to scientists today. The first conjecture of vitamins as definite substances is from the observation that the oriental disease, beriberi, resulted from the use of polished rice, and could be prevented by the use of rice bran, and that scurvy could be prevented by the use of lime juice.

The knowledge of vitamins is by no means an exact science, even yet. The terminology is continually undergoing changes. At present, vitamins are classed by most authorities about as follows:
Fat Soluble Vitamin A—Furnishes resistance to tuberculosis, rickets and deficiency diseases. Promotes growth, prevents keratomalacia and xerophthalmia (inflammatory diseases of the conjunctiva of the eyes).
 This vitamin is destroyed by rancidity and excessive cooking. Is present in: Cod liver oil, egg yolk, cream, whole milk, carrots, yellow corn, beef fat, liver, butter, yellow corn oil, olive oil, spinach, alfalfa, yellow turnips, lettuce and probably all green leaves.
Water Soluble Vitamin C—Prevents beriberi, and is anti-neuritic.
 Is destroyed by excessive salt or soda. Is present in: Yeast, germ of wheat, leaves and growing parts of vegetables, cabbage, spinach, carrots, nuts, and glandular meats.
Water Soluble Vitamin E—Prevents scurvy and certain substance hemorrhages.
 Destroyed by heat (except when in an acid medium), drying or freezing. Is present in: Oranges, lemons, grapefruit, tomatoes, sprouting grains or green leaves, celery, lettuce, spinach, cabbage, etc.

Fat Soluble Vitamin D—Prevents rickets, stabilizes the use of phosphorus and calcium, hence very useful in most bone diseases, such as: Pigeon breast, bowlegs, and swollen joints.
 Is found in all yellow or green foods, especially those listed under Vitamin A, which have been acted upon by sunlight or the ultra violet ray. An excess of the ray may, however, destroy the vitamin. The same effect of this vitamin is also produced if after these foods are eaten, the skin of the body is then exposed to sunlight or ultra violet.
Fat Soluble Vitamin K—Its absence causes sterility, or inability to produce offspring. Its presence assists in a larger milk supply. The evidence of this vitamin is probable, but not conclusive. Is found in the oils from all vegetable foods, wheat germ, nuts and possibly beef fat.
 You will see from reading these lists that there is an abundance of vitamins included in my daily menus published every Friday. If you follow these menus, you need not worry about vitamin deficiencies.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Abscessed Tooth).
 Question: Mrs. A. M. A. writes: "My dentist discovered from an x-ray of my teeth that one of my gold-crowned ones was abscessed. This tooth has never given me any trouble, but my dentist wants me to have it out and have some bridge work done. I would appreciate your advice as to whether or not a condition of this kind can be cleared up with a proper diet."
 Answer: If the gold crowned tooth upon which the abscess has developed is dead, the best policy would be to have the tooth removed, but if the nerve is still alive, and the abscess is on the side of the tooth, it is sometimes possible to have the abscess drained by a puncture and irrigation. After this, a fasting and dieting regimen could be used to advantage. Get the

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.
 Washington, May 6.—Frank B. Lord, who has worked with the Democratic National Committee through six campaigns and was assistant to the national chairman in 1916 and 1920, has blossomed out with a novel and drastic proposal which he believes will enable the Democrats to elect a president in 1932.
 Lord says the best thing for the party to do is to hold no national convention before the election. He expects that the Republicans will renominate Hoover and that Hoover will be re-elected if the Democratic opposition follows its old methods of a convention to nominate a candidate to oppose him.
 The Democrats of the country should offer a more or more definite, he says, a different one in 25 or more states. In each case the man nominated for the presidency by the Democrats of all states would be the strongest Democratic vote-getter in his state or section. Each state conventionally nominates electors favorable to his candidacy.
Many Strong Candidates.
 Thus, New York Democrats might nominate Governor Roosevelt, Massachusetts Senator David L. Walsh, Maryland Governor Ritchie, Virginia Governor Byrd, Kentucky Senator Barkley, Texas Governor Moody, Montana Senator Wheeler or Senator Walsh, South Dakota Governor Bulow, Colorado Governor Adams, Wyoming Senator Dill, Wyoming Ex-Governor Ross or Senator Kendrick and so on.
 Lord contends that no Democrat from another state could possibly run as strong as such men as these in their own states. His theory is that hardly any of the states would turn down their favorite office-holders, and figures out a combination of states and statesmen which ought to net the Democratic candidates a combined total of at least 275 electoral votes. Then, says he:
 "Let the successful Democratic electors hold their own national convention, and, between the time of their election and the day fixed for the electors to meet in their respective capitals to cast their ballots—a period of nearly two months—let them agree on a candidate for whom all of them would vote. An elector may vote in the electors' college for whom-ever he wishes."
 Lord says this plan presents a prospect of success where the old plan of naming a candidate "guarantees defeat before the campaign opens." Now that the party has been split by either an issue or a personality, let's try strategy.
 The scheme is more ingenious than practicable and most certainly will not be adopted, but there is some sound theory behind it.
 Lord estimates that 8,000,000 votes cast for John W. Davis in 1924 as the bed-rock minimum strength of the party, bereft of independent support. He says analysts show that at least 3,000,000 of those votes were cast against Al Smith in 1928, reducing the number of actual Democrats among the Smith voters to something like 5,000,000, plus perhaps 2,000,000 new voters.

 The remainder 8,000,000 votes which Smith received were obviously cast by independents, Independent Republicans, progressives and liberals," he says, and asks how this independent vote can best be held.
 The small vote in South. The south is no longer the backbone of the party; that backbone has been broken. Numerical disparity between southern Democrats and Democrats elsewhere is too large to warrant their control of party policies and destinies. Smith received 64,000 votes more in Massachusetts than in the entire six southern states he carried, Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Louisiana, South Carolina and Mississippi. The 11 states of the once solid south, including also Florida, North Carolina, Texas, Virginia and Tennessee, cast a total vote for Smith which was 350,000 below the vote for Smith in New York. The total Democratic vote of the so-called solid south was 1,737,000 and the total Democratic vote of other states was 13,262,497.
 The last campaign and election, held Lord says, decentralized the party. He cites the disparity between numerical voting strength and congressional representation, pointing out that the south has 22 Democratic senators and 87 Democratic representatives, whereas the other states, with eight times as many Democratic votes, have only 13 Democratic votes, have only 13 Democratic senators and 79 congressmen. National policies must be largely defined and limited by the action of the congressional membership, he says, so that it is likely to be impossible for the Democrats to harmonize their differences nationally.

Not a New Plan.
 Thus the proposal to keep the party decentralized until after the election without giving the defeatists a chance to wreck it with their wrangling before the campaign begins.
 In 1836, when there were only 26 states, the Whigs tried a plan similar to Lord's suggestion in an attempt to defeat Martin Van Buren the Democrat. They nominated Daniel Webster to carry New England, Senator Hugh White of Tennessee to carry his own and one or two other southern states, General William Henry Harrison and Judge McLean to carry Pennsylvania and a few western states and vice-presidential candidates to carry New York and other states. The plan to keep Van Buren from an electoral majority almost worked. A majority was 148 and Van Buren polled 170. A switch of 2,000 votes in Pennsylvania would have beaten him.

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 6.—One of our very Broadway playwrights recently got a rush order to appear in Hollywood to write chatter for the talkies.
 His fortunes being not dissimilar from that of a certain boy, he had exactly $200 in his pocket when he landed in the capital of cinema. There he found himself awaited by a crew of newspaper reporters, all intent on hearing from the dignitary some few nice things about their Los Angeles. He decided that it would be a good time to put on the big city "dog." And he piled it on heavy, as I get the story.
 Oh yes, Los Angeles was all right—but, after all, it was a bit bleak . . . it was rather small town, and all that.
 Threading one hand in his jeans to pay the bill at the coffee house where they had stopped to talk, the playwright found that his money was gone.
 "The 'big town' guy had been tricked in the 'big town' within an hour of his arrival."
 But then, life is like that!

Manhattan has scores of ingenious racketeers who put an end of time and thought into stunts that will keep them from having to work for a living. Though you can never tell when they don't work. At any rate, one of the latest begging stunts is being worked rather successfully about the big depot.
 A poorly dressed chap pretends to be deaf and dumb. He appears on the waiting room floor and starts looking around as though he had lost something. Generally, a few curious or sympathetic passers-by will start helping him.
 Suddenly he produces a paper usually be corrected by using a fasting and dieting regime, instructions for which I will be glad to send you. If the young man is cured in this way, I feel sure that he will be quite safe in marrying.

 Consolation is offered to Senator Heflin by Senator Gillett, as follows: "I am sure the man who threw the missile, and whose aim was so bad he missed the senator and hit a policeman, is sorry." Does Senator Gillett mean sorry he hadn't practiced?
 Comment in the Atchison Globe to the effect that the man who talks a lot is usually untruthful must be wrong in one respect at least. We're thinking of the man who can work up an interesting monologue about most anything while the water is trying to give someone the check.

opinion of several dentists if this seems advisable.
 (Spells During Night).
 Question: R. J. L. asks: "What, in your opinion, could be the matter with a young man having some spells at night, when he shows his tongue and seems to be having sort of convulsions during his sleep. He has them every few months. After having had one, he wakes up in the morning with a headache, and vomits. Twelve doctors have examined him—once said bad tonsils, and he had them removed; another said trench mouth, and he had treatments until his mouth was pronounced all right. Otherwise, all those doctors claimed his general health couldn't be better. Still, they couldn't find the cause of these spells, and they continue at intervals. Will it ever be safe for him to marry?"
 Answer: Judging from the symptoms described in your letter, the most probable cause of the spells is nocturnal epilepsy. This can

Shamrocks Leading 5-2 When Rain Stops Game

Only Two Full Innings Finished; Sipples and Massey In Limelight; Wallitt on Mound.

Rain washed out what would have been the first semi-pro baseball game of the 1929 season here yesterday afternoon halting the contest between the Shamrocks and Rockville at the West Side in the last half of the third inning. Consequently, the game does not count officially.

Manchester was leading 5 to 2 at the time when the head umpire, Old June Fluvus, instructed Umpire Busch to call it quits for the afternoon. There seemed but little doubt that Manchester had the better team. The Shamrocks showed much better than Rockville in the two full innings each team played.

Previous to the thunder storm which came out of the west rather suddenly, the field was swept by a strong, cold wind. Nevertheless, two or three hundred fans braved the elements until the rain began to fall. Then they wasted no time scampering for shelter and the rain came down in torrents.

Timely singles by Sammy Massey and Tommy Sipples, well known Manchester players, were largely instrumental in giving the Shamrocks their lead. Massey singled twice and Sipples poled out a single and a triple. The former chased in one run and the latter brought two more pairs of shoes across the plate.

Six passed balls and an error by Burke, visiting catcher, all coming in the first inning, didn't help the Windy City's cause any. In justice to Burke, however, it should be borne in mind that he is an infielder, not a backstop.

But it was the first game of the season for both teams and each presented a patched up lineup. Robertson, a newcomer, made his debut behind the bat for Manchester, and did a nice job. "Woody" Wallitt, catcher by trade, was on the other end of the battery for Manchester, and allowed only three hits, fanning four. Walter Weber, former Community pitcher, worked for Rockville.

The summary of the game, as much of it as was completed, follows:

Consider the sad plight of Connie Mack. Just before the season started, injuries, illnesses and general hard luck sent Cornelius home to Philadelphia in advance of his men, thoroughly disgusted, resigned to whatever might happen.

Mack still can be chary, however. Looking over into the National League where the Boston Braves are "up there," Mack may wonder if, after all, it means anything.

Before the season opened, the experts were doubting among themselves if Judge Fuch's two ball players and huge board of strategy would win any ball game. It begins to appear that all you need to win ball games is five managers.

Here is the spectacle of ancient men playing with all the fire of youth. It wouldn't surprise us now to see Johnny Evers step in as a pinch-hitter and smash out a home run.

And Ruth, oh, Ruth! With a batting average of .215.

WESTERN TEAMS ROUT THE EAST

Win Ten and Lose Five; Yanks Win; A's In First; Vance Proves Worth.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, May 6.—There undoubtedly are a lot of things that can be done with a salary of $25,000 a year, exclusive of the fact that it can't be offered as a commensurate reward to a pitcher who can win ball games for the Brooklyn Club. This outfit fought to its dying end to originate and escape giving Dazzy Vance the biggest contract ever to be tendered a pitcher in the major leagues. It ought to begin paying him for next year right at this moment, for there's one thing the Dodgers figure to do in 1929, outside of enraging in a desperate finish for seventh place, that is to finish away ahead of Vance on that $25,000 business.

In beating the Reds, 4 to 1, yesterday, Vance completed 29 innings at a net loss of only one earned run and this with a club that steps right out and gives a pitcher no help all the time. You can say what you will about Vance but he is likely to leave baseball behind him with a prestige as great as that of the Mattie, the Yanks, the Johnsons, the Waddells and other immortals, and from early indications, this will be his greatest year.

Gray is Tamed

Vance's performance in sending the Reds away with four hits was one of the features of a week-end of inter-sectional baseball. The other came in St. Louis yesterday when the only game the Browns lost during the week was the game that dropped them out of first place and promoted the Athletics accordingly. It is the little things that count, they say, and the Browns, who haven't been hitting, were very little yesterday. In fact, they neglected to score at all against Walberg and Sam Gray, with a sixth-inning performance, had to accept his first beating of the season.

However, in spite of Vance and Walberg, the East took quite a fogging in the first skirmishes with the West, which won two games and lost five. The only western teams that were "down" in these engagements this morning were the White Sox, which blew two to the Yankees, and the Browns, beaten in their only start by the Athletics. Quite a plausible contender, the latter. They either have been in front of the field or well up with the Browns since well back in April, the pair tied on April 25 and 28 and the Browns going into their longest lead to date, 1-2 games, on April 30. However, the Athletics proceeded to take the lead in their first game on the road, and if that isn't one good way of winning a pennant, then I'm forced to check the bet.

Giants Go Down

Barring the Athletics and Yanks, who began to hit in Chicago and forgot to stop, the rest of the east has been hitting everything with its chin. The Giants were outlasted by the Cardinals in a couple of those grocers' picnic ball games and, in consequence, our Mr. McGraw's entry fell from third to fifth place during the week while the Cards went into a tie for second with the Cubs. The latter still had that impressive punch in scoring 25 runs in two games with the Phils and it is hard to see how they can go very far wrong.

The club that is doing that is the Braves, who continue in first place in spite of everything the handicappers can do about it.

However, they looked a little more natural yesterday. They lost, the nirates, who beat them after blowing the opener, haven't been hitting much behind rather indifferent pitching, which is a combination that generally manages to do one no good in a big way.

Speaking about hitting, that's one of the things that reminds us that the Senators aren't. It is as hoped that this club would find itself on the road. Instead, it found itself on the sidewalk. It lost its second to the Indians yesterday and had to be downright resourceful about it. Liska turning in a great two-hit game in which only three put-outs went to the Washington outfield. It's right difficult to lose that kind but the Senators seem to be very original about things like that. And, anyhow, nobody yet has discovered a way to win a ball game with the large total of no runs they got against Miller.

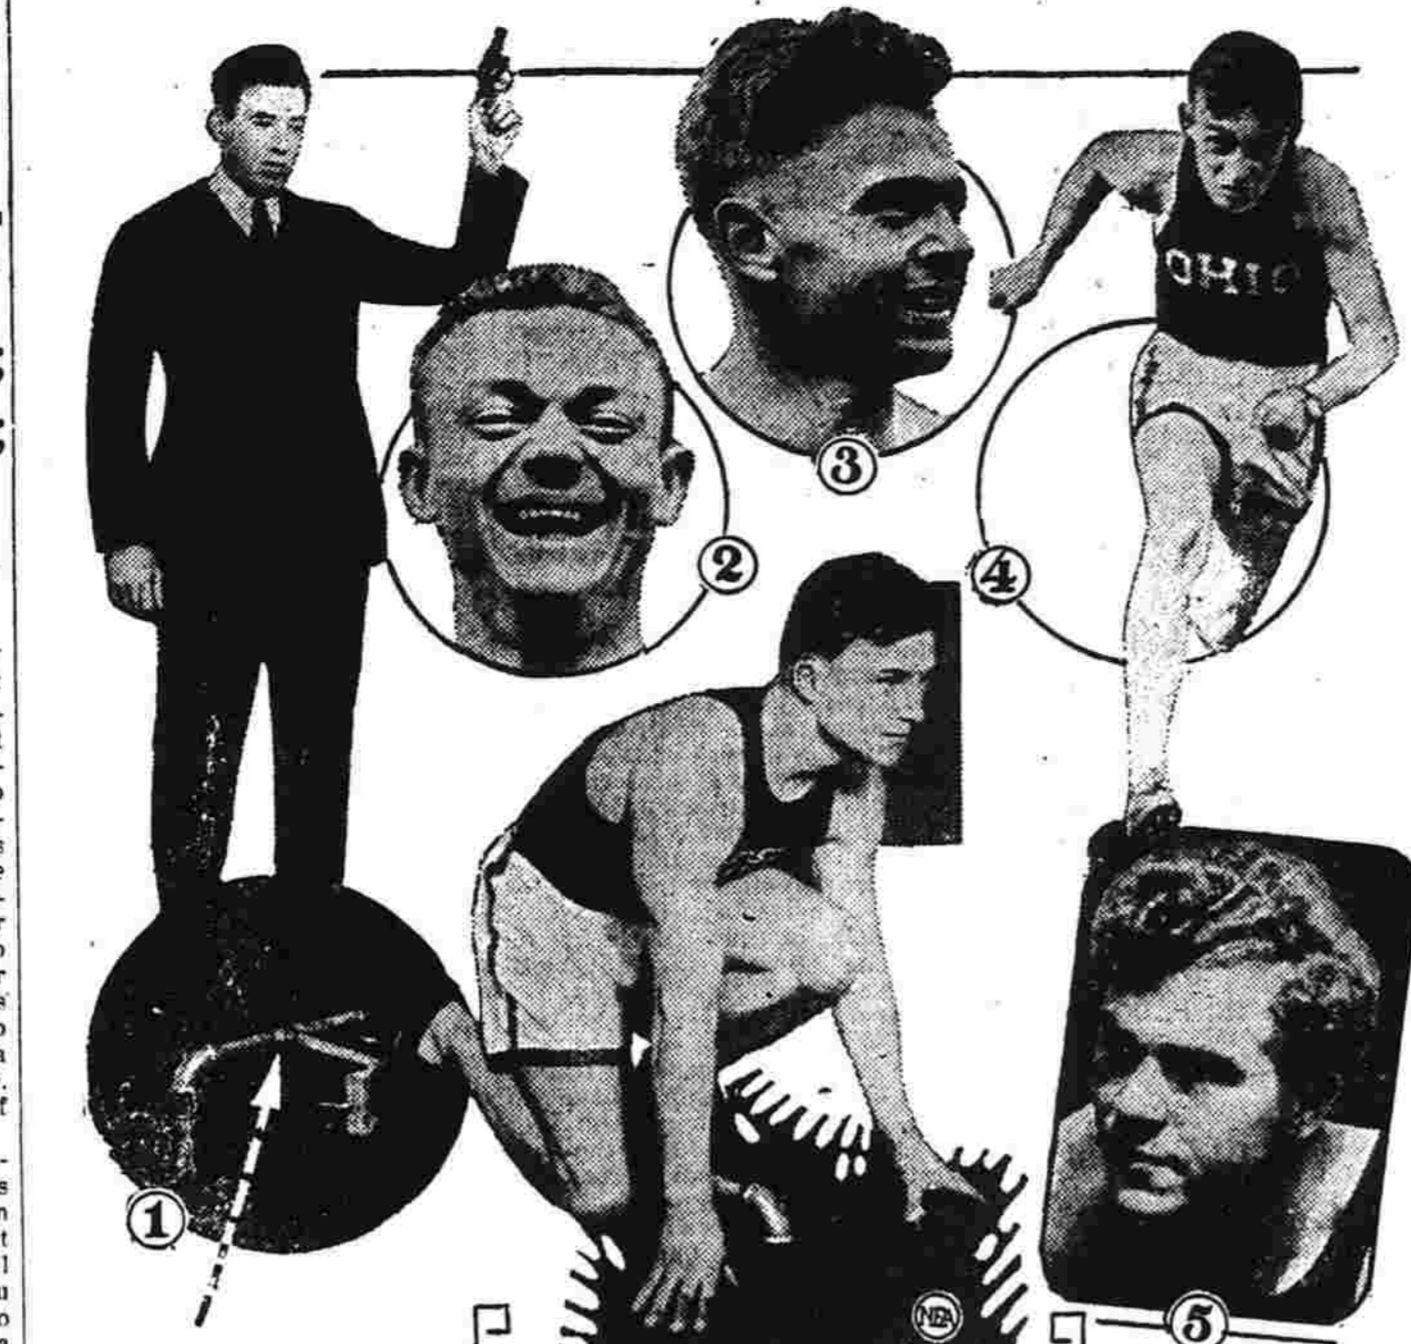

The Tigers completed the eastern route by knocking the Red Sox off for a pair Saturday and yesterday. Apparently the only thing the Red Sox have to show for another season is a lot of new uniforms.

SEEM SURE TO SET NEW RECORD

The widely-discussed starting block devised by Coach John Nicholson of Notre Dame and the "Big Four" among sprinters are shown here. No. 1 is the starting block. Nicholson is pictured above, gun in hand, starting Jack Elder, Notre Dame sprinter, from the block No. 2 is Claude Bracey of Rice Institute. No. 3 is Frank Wykoff of Glendale Junior College, California. No. 4 is George Simpson of Ohio State and No. 5 is Charlie Borah of Southern California. Because these four sprinters each have turned in 9 3-5 performances in the 100-yard dash this season, experts figure one should make a new world record before the season is over. Simpson was clocked at 9 5-10 Saturday in the feature of the sixth annual Ohio relays at Columbus and this may be recognized as a new world's record.

Does Starting Block Help The Sprinters?

By BOB MATHERNE.

Of paramount importance to A. U. and college track officials is this question of the moment: Does a sprinter benefit from use of the starting block devised by Coach John Nicholson of Notre Dame?

The question arose when George Simpson, Ohio State sprinter, clocked off a 9 3-5 performance in the century dash of the Penn Relays—starting, as everyone did from a Nicholson starting block.

This record-equaling dash of Simpson bore none of the objections—such as wind behind a runner's back, improperly measured distance and incompetent officials—frequently offered as cause for rejection of an excellent performance. It was on the level—if the starting block doesn't help.

Coach Nicholson devised the starting block several months ago for two reasons.

He figured that it would prevent the usual waste of time that has been occurring in the start and that it also would eliminate the necessity of having a corps of workmen about to refill these holes after they were used.

And it is a simple little affair, as you may notice in the accompanying illustration. It takes the place of the customary starting holes and accomplishes what Nicholson intended. Whether it helps or not, remains to be proved.

The block, shown by the arrow, is hinged to an iron bar which connects at right angles with another bar at the rear of the runner. The rear bar is fastened in the ground by long spikes. Naturally, the block is above ground. Jack Elder of Notre Dame is demonstrating use of the starting block here. The inventor is the man with the pistol.

At most, it seems to most observers that the new method is little different from the old method. And perhaps the high officials will see it that way and list Simpson's name along with Drew and Kelly and Paddock and others a co-holder of the world record for the 100-yard dash.

Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the national A. A. U., was one of the officials of the Penn Relays. He doesn't believe the starting block is an "unnatural advantage." And he favors recognition of Simpson's performance as official.

It may be concluded, from events of the past few weeks, that the outstanding sprinters of this country are Simpson, Frank Wykoff of Glendale Junior College, Charlie Borah of Southern California and Claude Bracey of Rice Institute. All have hit 9 3-5 seconds in the 100 this spring. Some more than once.

Three of these sprinters—Bracey, Simpson and Borah—are likely to face each other this summer in the I. C. 4-A games, the national intercollegiate at Chicago and national A. A. U. meet at Denver.

With all three entered at the same time, it seems a certainty—granted that the track conditions are favorable—that the long-standing record of 9 3-5 seconds for the century will go by the boards. In other words, it may be done by one of these young fellows in such a manner that not even a slight risk will be given for refusal of the performance as official and a new world record.

That's the track for track fans to look forward to, the meeting of Borah, Simpson, Bracey and perhaps Wykoff in the same event. And when they do, that record should fall.

CRUICKSHANK AND VON ELM SHOW WAY IN BRITISH OPEN

BY F. A. WRAY

Mulfield, Scotland, May 6.—Playing into the teeth of a driving rain, George Von Elm, former American amateur champion, and Bobby Cruickshank, one of America's leading Pros, each carded a 73 today by way of giving the field in the qualifying round of the British Open golf championship something to think about.

Von Elm, whose last gesture of importance was to beat Bobby Jones out of the American amateur title in 1926, carded a 37 for the first nine and a 36 for the last nine, whereas Cruickshank went crazy at the outset with a 34 to the turn and an eleven-hole total that was two under par. He failed to hold this pace to the end, however, and needed 39 strokes for the final nine holes.

Meantime, Johnny Farrell, the present American Open champion, had turned for home in 39 strokes while Charles Whitcombe, one of England's best, needed 42. The heavy going for this first day of the 36-hole qualifying round was anything but conducive to snappy scoring. Max Bell, the California amateur, did very well in getting an 83 under the conditions that prevailed but Fletcher W. Stiles, Pine Valley, Simply couldn't get his strokes working in the downpour and carded a total of 101.

Has anyone ever suggested that those big archways in the Senate and House may be the results of wind erosion?

"It's train time all the time at grade crossings."

Sammy Massey Decides to Go Through With Plan to Organize Strong Team in Manchester; First Practice Next Sunday Afternoon.

An attempt is going to be made to put Manchester back on the baseball map as it used to be in the dear old days gone by.

Sam Massey, former second baseman for the old Manchester club among several other first rate teams in Manchester, said yesterday afternoon that he had definitely decided to go through with his plan to organize a high grade baseball team to represent Manchester.

The first practice for candidates desiring a berth on the team will be held at 2 o'clock next Sunday afternoon at the West Side playgrounds.

Anyone in town who feels that he is capable of making the team, is welcome to report.

Massey wants it plainly understood that he will use outside players in case sufficient local talent of the proper caliber is not available. In all probability, at least two or three of the players will be from out of town. This statement is not made to discourage any local players who wish to try for a berth on the team, but rather to have the situation thoroughly understood beforehand.

It is planned to open the season with a twilight game about the middle of May or shortly afterward. All such games will be played at the West Side playgrounds. Massey said yesterday that he planned to bring the best available attractions to Manchester in an attempt to restore the sport to its former pinnacle. The Brooklyn Royal Giants, Cuban Stars and clubs of like caliber, are among those which will be brought to Manchester once the season gets under way.

It is very apparent that there is a real scarcity of pitching prospects in Manchester. Massey says that Eddie Boyce is about the only twirler who might be able to make the grade. Massey is planning to bring such star moundmen as Frank Nekola of Holy Cross, and others, here if the efforts of the team receive encouraging financial support from the fans. It will be up to the fans as well as the players to do their bit to help revive the sport.

THE GIRL WHO POOR GIRL

by RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED

MILDRED LAWRENCE falls in love with STEPHEN ARMITAGE who is lured away from her by PAMELA JUDSON when she tells him that Mildred is trying to marry her brother, HAROLD, for his money. Harold fears HUCK CONNOR, because he holds a check which he forged. Huck is infatuated with Pamela, who plans him to make Stephen jealous. When Pamela maneuvers Stephen into an engagement Huck frames him for the theft of an auto and causes his arrest. Pamela breaks their engagement, but Stephen will not let her in jail and promises help.

Harold had once confessed his fear of Huck to Mildred and said that he threatened to "get Armitage" to keep him from marrying Pamela. With this as a clue, she determines to force Huck to tell Stephen and is shocked to hear of his death—apparently accidental. Then she tells Stephen her suspicions but they have no proof and things seem hopeless.

In desperation Mildred goes to Pamela and tells her story. Pamela sends her to MR. JUDSON, who still believes she was scheming to marry Harold for money. But he is impressed by what she says and takes her to headquarters where she repeats her suspicions about Huck. Mr. Judson promises to put up bail for Stephen's release.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

Mildred looked expectantly at Mr. Judson as he made his promise. He appeared to be more agitated than at any time since they left the hotel together.

"What you have just said has convinced me that both Pamela and this young man Stephen will need immediate protection," he told her. "I believe I'd better return to the hotel and see that she is safe."

"But what about Stephen?" Mildred asked. "Perhaps Pamela is with him now."

"I don't believe so," Mr. Judson returned. "I know she planned a visit to the jeweler's this afternoon. You see, I promised her a new necklace to cheer her up. She feels her brother's death deeply."

Mildred felt like saying she must indeed feel it, but she could not so easily assuage her grief, but consideration for Mr. Judson held back the sarcasm.

"But you won't leave Stephen in jail?" she appealed.

"No, no. I shall send my attorney."

"Send a policeman with him, please. I'm afraid there will be trouble."

Mr. Judson appeared to think over her suggestion. "Perhaps you're right," he said. "It might be a good idea to have him come to the hotel, too. Then if Connor makes a move..."

"You mean you will use him as a decoy?" Mildred broke in nervously.

"He'll be well guarded," Mr. Judson assured her.

"But you'll tell him why you want him at the hotel? You won't let him run any risks?"

"Naturally, my dear. Now don't you worry. And if your employer complains of you being away from the office this afternoon refer him to me for an explanation. I'll tell him how much obliged I'll be to him if he'll fire you."

Mildred smiled wanly. She knew that Mr. Judson was not joking, but the position that had meant so much to her before would mean only heartaches now.

"Goodbye," she said and shook hands with him.

He watched her go, hurrying toward the nearest subway entrance, and there was something about the set of her young shoulders that tugged at his heart.

While Mildred hurried back to her office Pamela was on her way to the jeweler's. She was in high spirits, except when the memory of her recent bereavement intruded itself upon her pleasant reflections of her visit with Stephen.

She had burst in upon him without warning. In the rather dim light of his cell she could not see the quick ebbing of his color.

With a bound she was in his arms, pulling his head down, showing kisses upon him, crying out how he'd abused her poor dear "Steveo."

To Stephen she was like the sun bursting out from heavy clouds. No wonder. She had spent the best part of two hours after Mildred had left her in her rooms at the hotel in making herself beautiful with the avowed intention of overwhelming him.

Her maid was at the moment having hysterics in the servants' quarters while a dozen costumes, brought out and discarded, still lay scattered about Pamela's dressing-room.

Stephen's arms tightened about her while his hunger for her satisfied itself with her nearness. He was emotionally crazed. The power of self-hypnotism he had induced by endless hours of longing for her swayed him uncontrolled.

She was here! She was his! She had come to him!

These were all his thoughts. There was no place in his mind then for the memory of his true valuation of her character.

"It hurt my pride to think of anyone I loved being in jail," she told him. "I didn't see how selfish it was of me, Stephen darling, but I couldn't come to you. I couldn't stand this horrible place; I knew I couldn't. But today I realized in a flash that I couldn't live any longer without you—and here I am. Oh, we won't ever part again, will we?"

"My father is going to get you out of here. Then we'll be married quietly and go away for a long while. Perhaps to Africa. I think it would be lovely to fly across the voids. Don't you? I mean the high voids with nothing but the blue sky over our heads. And if there should be a lion when we come down you won't let it eat me will you?"

She was clinging to him, laughing and sobbing.

Stephen's head was in a whirl. "Oh Pam, Pam," was all he could say in a dazed, helpless sort of way.

"Honey boy," she cooed. "Honey boy, I wish I could stay here with you until dad comes but I can't. I've got to go. I've had the toothache for days but I was too low to care and if I don't go to the dentist now I'll have to give up the time tomorrow and I want to be with you every minute."

Stephen held her tight. "I'll do some shopping too," she said happily. "I'll get some khaki things, though I think they're awfully ugly, don't you? But one can't wear anything else in Africa—it wouldn't be safe with those Kaffirs or whatever they're called, would it?"

"Kaffirs," Stephen mumbled, scarce knowing what he said.

"Oh, I hate to go. Steveo. I hate to leave you in this horrible place, but it will be just a little minute longer. I'll try to be back at the hotel when you get there."

It did not occur to Stephen to wonder how she could visit her dentist and shop all in "just a little minute." Her descent upon him had been too sudden and overwhelming to allow him to reason. It was not until several minutes after she had left him that he realized he was experiencing an unusually unexpected reaction. He wished he had asked her something about her remark that her father was going to get him out of jail.

He felt completely in the dark, trying to make sense of Pamela's running talk. Freedom! Marriage! Africa!

"Good Lord!"

Pamela was troubled with none of the doubts that assailed Stephen. Her imaginary toothache was not even so much as an imaginary one as she made her way to the manager's private office in the jewelry shop where she was accustomed to look over the best of the stock about once a month.

"Good afternoon, Mr. Blaine," she greeted the manager brightly, and then remembered to be more sedate. The truth was Pamela had felt the shock of Harold's death tremendously, but her mercurial nature would not permit her grief to remain plunged in either long or joy.

With the eradication of the signs of her grief had come absorbing interest in the prospect of being Stephen's sweetheart again. And now, with an early wedding ahead of her, the prospect was even more alluring.

Her father had promised to take her on a trip abroad soon, but she didn't care for the new Mrs. Judson. They hadn't been friends before the marriage, but they were rather or less now. A journey in her stepmother's company had not appealed greatly to Pamela.

"May I offer you my heartfelt sympathy, Miss Judson?" Mr. Blaine was saying to her.

"Oh," Pamela said, and reached for her handkerchief with which she dabbed carefully but prettily at her eyes.

Mr. Blaine held a chair for her. "I hate to come here at this time, Mr. Blaine," she said softly and wistfully, "but I expect to sail shortly for Africa and father wants me to select my wedding presents now."

Mr. Blaine offered his congratulations as readily as he had his condolences.

"It's to be a quiet wedding," Pamela explained when he asked her about the things she wished to see. "No attractions, of course, and I shan't have to buy any gifts. But you might just bring out the bracelet to match that necklace you were showing me last month. That lovely one with the big sapphire and the baguette diamonds."

"Ah, yes indeed, yes indeed," Mr. Blaine said happily. "I am glad that you are to have it, Miss Judson. I know that our designer had you in mind when he sketched the setting. But, of course, we can make some slight changes in it if you like."

"No, I think it's beautiful as it is, and there won't be time to make any changes on it. Now let me see, I think I'll have an all-around diamond wedding ring. You may show me some. You see, my fiancé is too busy to select it for me. It's so very hectic, you know, sailing for Africa on practically a moment's notice."

"Might I ask if I know the young man?" Mr. Blaine inquired upon the strength of his long business acquaintance with the Judson family.

"He's a young man from the west," Pamela answered. "No one you know, I'm sure. But he's most definitely placed."

Just what she meant by "definitely placed," Mr. Blaine was allowed to figure out for himself. He took it to mean that the young man was well established in the social world.

Pamela rose after choosing her ring and Mr. Blaine accompanied her to the street door and wished her happiness on her new venture.

She was in her car and headed for the hotel before she remembered that she had intended buying a present for Mildred. She was so happy she wanted to make up for having caused Mildred to lose her position.

"Oh, well, bother. I'll send her a row of those cute little ivory elephants from Africa."

Mildred, at that moment, was in little need of ivory elephants or anything else from Pamela.

When she left Mr. Judson and hurried to take a subway train to her work she was followed by one of Huck's men, who had specific orders in regard to her.

As she reached the head of the subway stairs and paused to get a nickel out of her bag for car fare, the man stepped over into the angle formed by a pile of dry goods boxes against a building, where he would run small chance of being observed, released a cord and allowed a gun to slip down into his right hand, curled his finger around the trigger and fired.

SERMONETTES FOR DRIVERS

All for safety means safety for all.

Highway orations never settled the right-of-way question. Better to ride slow in an auto than fast in an ambulance. You can't get by a grade crossing on your looks.

The one-armed driver may be courting his gal, but he is also courting disaster. An automobile is no safer than its driver.

The Golden Rule is the best traffic law ever written.

"The foundation of speed in the writing of shorthand as well as in typewriting," she says. "Pianos and phonographs are found in typewriting rooms throughout the country."

Styler by ANNETTE Paris—New York.

The youthful sun back tennis dress is gaining more and more popularity every day. It is worn for tennis and general daytime wear, since the direct rays of the sun striking the unclothed body, have proven so beneficial to health.

Everywhere in fashionable circles this smart dress persists. It is worn on the veranda of the Country Club, for golf, tennis, beach and for porch wear at home. Style No. 497 can also be made with high neck at back with deep V at front and finished with applied bands that are perforated for contrasting to carry out tri-color scheme. Dotted lines on small back view show either of two depths for sun back. The circular skirt is trimmed with applied scalloped bands. It is sketched in pale pink, with light and dark red contrast in washable silk crepe. Silk plique, printed cotton pique, linen, cotton broadcloth and polka-dots and checked gingham other favorite combinations. Designed in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 and 22. Pattern price 15 cents in stamps or coin (coin is preferred). Wrap coin carefully.

We suggest that when you send for this pattern, you enclose 10 cents additional for a copy of our Spring Fashion Magazine. It's just filled with delightful styles, including smart ensembles and cute designs for the kiddies.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

NOT KITTY'S FAULT

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

As recently as 1929 newspapers reported two instances in which infants were found asphyxiated in bed and someone had alleged the sudden leaving of the bed by a cat. The idea that the cat could suck the breath of the infant and thereby produce death is simply a notion. In 1791 a jury at a coroner's inquest in England rendered a verdict to the effect that a child near Plymouth had met death in this manner. Nevertheless, there is no reason to believe that the condition actually occurs.

It is, of course, possible that a cat might lie over the face of an infant and produce asphyxiation, but possibility is not proof.

Every year in the large cities of the United States there are numerous instances of deaths of infants from sleeping with adults who accidentally overlie the infant during sleep. Not infrequently infants are found dead through having been permitted to roll over and lie with the nose and the mouth buried in a soft pillow. There are

Doesn't It Get Your Goat

The WOMAN'S DAY by ALLEN SCARVER

There are said to be more than 200,000 "wild children" in Russia. These are children who would be known as vagrants in this country, but who have been turned into prowling, marauding, dangerous little beasts by the savage rigors of a country in transition pangs.

Thousands of these children were deliberately abandoned by their parents when the struggle for bread became too much for self alone, let alone children.

This is the surprising phase of "the wild children" picture—that the paternal instinct is only as strong as we believe it to be when its own needs have been cared for first.

"SHE WEARS 30"

The famous "keeping up with Lizzie" game is invading the realm of health and physical standards, according to Dr. Morris Fishben in his "The Human Body and Its Care."

"Not all of us are either Greyhounds or Newfoundlanders in our body build," he writes. "The American represents a combination of numerous races and peoples and we have among us the round and broad German; the short and active French; the stalwart Norwegian, and the excitable Latin. Certainly it is the height of folly to think that such varied people should all attempt to develop a certain body form."

And yet, he paraphrases, because Mrs. Jones is 5 feet 6 inches and weighs so-and-so, Mrs. Smith insists that her utterly different dimensions shall conform to Mrs. Jones's.

Perhaps Mrs. Smith has to conform if she can ever "find a thing in the world to wear." Fashion designers and clothes manufacturers have a little way of forgetting that the American woman is a diverse type; it is they who insist on pouring us all into the same mold, and in order to procure funds to cover the framework, it is necessary to emulate the anatomy of the model they select.

ROUGH HANDS

Dr. George W. Leonard, a wealthy physician of Chicago, filed suit for divorce against his wife, Ethel, the other day. He named a co-respondent, but his wife in her counter petition said that her husband complained that he could "not take her out socially," that he was ashamed of her rough hands and her lack of education.

She told the old story of the "poverty of early married days and her 'sticking by the ship' while everything was anything, but hunky-dory, with her husband trying to work his way through medical school, while she raised babies, did her own housework, and borrowed money from her father.

OLD DRAMA

"Now he's ready for a fresh and pretty woman not worn out by overwork in the lean days," she says.

It may all be very true. This domestic human drama is enacted again and again. But because it has been one of our traditional human dramas for so long, one is occasionally prone to wonder if wives haven't heard the story so often that some of them are apt to dramatize themselves in that situation when they may be much more to it than just that.

questionably other instances in which infants have been asphyxiated through accidents of one type or another. The domestic cat not infrequently sleeps in any soft place it can find about the home.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

We spend years teaching the child type; it is a great thing if we can teach children not to demand sympathy if they are hurt, for instance. Yes, there are all sorts of moral courage exemplified in a child's daily experience.

Usually the morally brave child will turn out to be a physically brave child too. Isn't it worth trying for?

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

THE BIRTH OF PEARY.

Today is the birthday of Robert E. Peary, discoverer of the North Pole and the man who determined that Greenland is an island and not an arm of a vast Arctic continent. He was born May 6, 1856, and died in 1929.

Peary credited most of his success to his practice of adopting Eskimo dress, food, snowshoes and manner of life in general. He believed that the centuries had taught these people how best to combat their rigorous climate and bleak surroundings.

His first expedition to Greenland, in 1891, was marred by an accident in the ice floes off the island which broke one of his legs in two places. A few months later, at a Christmas party he gave for the Eskimos, he outtraced on snowshoes all the natives and his own men.

Peary reached the pole, on a subsequent trip, on April 6, 1909, and claimed it for the president of the United States.

With the flag of the United States, Peary planted at the pole the colors of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity during his undergraduate days at Bowdoin College.

Good Advice.

"When you're in trouble or if you've done wrong or made a mistake, I want you to come and talk it over with me, Jim," says his father nowadays. "I don't expect you always to be right, but I want you to do what you think is right."

If Jim thinks he is going to have a fair jury he will come even though he isn't sure about his father's approval.

It isn't fear of punishment that keeps children from going to their parents, but fear of injustice. If we can gain their confidence and they trust us, the question of moral courage is solved, for that is the first and biggest step—confidence.

Other Proofs of Courage.

There is, of course, more in moral courage than frank confession. That is only a small part of it. To bravely face unpleasant duties and do them to the best of one's ability takes moral courage. And to submit uncomplainingly to trouble that cannot be helped, that is moral courage of the highest

WORSE OF TWO EVILS

Cleveland.—Joseph Flankowski, and his sweetheart, Frances Kortelevski, 19, were facing Judge Joseph Sawicki in Police Court. Joseph was charged with carrying a concealed weapon with which he was charged, he intended ending his life because of a quarrel the couple had. "Which do you want," Judge Sawicki asked, "go to the pen or get married?" Joseph decided to get married.

IT MAY HAPPEN ANY DAY NOW Irate Arm of the Law on Motorcycle: "Hey! Who do you think YOU are, Lindbergh?" Good-looking Young Man at Steering Wheel: "Right, officer, I AM Lindbergh."

SAFETY I am teaching, I am preaching That the Safety plan is best, Thus it is that I'm existing When so many are at rest.

THE RULES.

1-The Idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change 'COW' to 'HEN' in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

Mr. Peck: "The next car I buy will be a small coupe." Mrs. Peck: "Why?" Mr. Peck: "I think it would relieve your voice in driving!"

"My wife ran the car into the fence the other day and knocked some paint off." "Of what, your car or the fence?" "Neither; off my wife."

She came home with her hat on one side and her clothes all crushed looking. "Looks as though she's been knocked down by a motorist," said one neighbor, sympathetically. "Or picked up," said another, thoughtfully.

"I met my wife in a funny way - ran over her with my car and later I married her." "If that happened very often there wouldn't be so much reckless driving."

"I read in the magazines that a motion picture actress ran an automobile over a 60-foot cliff into the sea. They don't do that really, do they?" "Oh, dear, no. That scene was faked. They simply raised the ocean to the top of the cliff, ran the auto into it, and let it settle gently down again."

Brown: "Hello! Have you been for a joy-ride?" Smith (Hitterly): "No, a jaw-ride, I took my wife!"

"What is the best thing to take when one is run down?" Inquired a friend at the writer's elbow. Would suggest the number of the car. The great problem of distribution. Think of the legs like that being wasted on a kangaroo, far from street crossings.

THE TINYMITES STORY BY HAL COCHRAN - PICTURES BY KNICK

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE) The swarm of buzzing hornets knew that there'd be trouble when they flew out of their nest upon the ground and charged the Tinymites. They watched the Tinies run and scream, and saw them jump into a stream. "Oh, look!" buzzed one. "They're soaking wet. They sure are funny sights." And then the hornets flew away and Clowny loudly shouted, "Hey! This water's deep. We'll have to swim. The bees have gone. Oh, guess." Then Scouty snapped, "Why, those weren't bees. They were big hornets, if you please. You are the one who poked the nest, and got us in this mess." The Tinies now were swimming round, and heading for the nearby ground. Said Copy, "I'll be glad when we have safely reached the shore. The current's a bit. It's tiring me. How I will make it I can't see." And then the Goofygo flew past and cried, "I'm back once more. That swarm of hornets scared me, too. The only thing that I could do was fly away. I dodged them and they now are out of sight. A log is drifting down your way. Just grab it. That's an easy way to rest there in the water. Then, I'm sure you'll be all right." They gladly did as they were told, and when they all had grabbed a hold, one Tiny shouted loudly, "Hey there, Goofygo. Come here. We think that it would be quite grand if you would carry us to land. When swimming it seems far away, but really it's quite near." "All right! I'll give you all a thrill," the bird replied. "I'll use my bill." And then he swooped down quickly and whirled one of them around. He made this trip and then three more, and finally had them all on shore. "Oh, thank you, shouted Scouty. "We are glad we're safe and sound." (The Tinymites meet the King Bee in the next story.)

POLICE COURT

Ross Campbell of 136 West Center street, was arrested on a charge of evading responsibility by Sergeant John Crockett at 12:10 Monday morning. Campbell is alleged to have been driving an Overland sedan which struck a Nash sedan operated by Emil Jarvis of 272 Parker street near Walker street while in the act of passing. Both cars were going in a westerly direction. After the accident, Campbell is said to have deliberately turned his car around and fled from the scene. A passing motorist pursued and learned the car number, which led to his arrest. In court this morning, a plea of not guilty was entered by Campbell when charged with evading responsibility.

After Jarvis had testified to his car being hit on the left front wheel and driven over the north curbing he said that Campbell was trying to pass him. This was supported by his son. Later Jarvis stated that Campbell did make a half turn and that another car, coming from the west had just passed.

In his own defense Campbell said that as he was about to pass the Jarvis car when he was struck and pushed around by the car coming from the east and that he was not aware that he had struck the Jarvis car, but instead started in pursuit of the car that struck him. At Manchester Green he lost him and returned by Manchester Green road to the north end and then south on Main street to his home on West Center street. He was fined $50 and costs.

Michael Lew, as he called himself, saying he was employed in the kitchen of the Hartford hospital, faced the town court on a charge of intoxication, having been picked up Saturday night by Captain Schendel. He was fined $10 and costs. He did not have the money to pay because, he said, he had been robbed.

On Saturday night, Lew said, he was asked by two men owning an automobile with Massachusetts markers to take a ride. There was some liquor in the party and after driving around Hartford, where they had met him, they took his money, something like $30 and then drove to a woods and left him off. He did not know where it all happened. He was walking along the road when found by the police. He said the men who gave him a ride said they were from Springfield.

His story about being employed at the Hartford hospital proved to be true and his foreman made arrangements to come to Manchester and take care of the fine and costs.

SALVATION ARMY

Large crowds gathered at the Salvation Army Citadel yesterday to take in the service being conducted by Commandant and Mrs. Abrams. All were delighted by the splendid discourses that the Commandant gave. The band and local officers Adjutant Heard, were away in Bridgeport, Conn., over the week-end, giving two big concerts, one in the S. A. Auditorium Saturday night, and one in the Cameo theater from 2 to 4 Sunday afternoon with a large crowd of Bridgeport people present, and at night in another big street meeting, and service in the hall. In the morning the band played in the United church. There will be no service in the local Citadel tonight, but Tuesday and all other nights up to Sunday May 12. Commandant and Mrs. Abrams will be here. Wednesday night will be devoted entirely to the young people.

The Woman's Benefit association will hold its regular meeting in Odd Fellows hall tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

SOUSA'S FAMOUS BAND BROADCASTS TONIGHT

Will Be Heard During General Motors Family Hour Starting at 8:30 p. m.

John Philip Sousa and his world famous band will be heard over the radio for the first time this evening, in an hour broadcast, sponsored by Chevrolet Motor Company to signalize the achievement of placing on the road a half million new six cylinder cars in four months time. The radio debut of the famous "March King" will come through the National Broadcasting Company coast to coast chain during the regular General Motors "Family Hour," starting at 8:30 p. m.

According to The Mackley Chevrolet Company Inc., local Chevrolet dealer, Chevrolet was particularly fortunate in seeking an attraction to emphasize its latest record to secure the first radio performance of this famous director-composer who has been an American institution for the past two decades.

"Naturally, we Chevrolet dealers are proud that our company has been instrumental in introducing Sousa and his band to the microphone," R. A. McNally said. "We are equally proud, however, of the occasion marked by Sousa's first broadcast. By putting on the road over 500,000 new Chevrolet sixes since January 1, we have established a record never before duplicated by any dealer organization distributing six-cylinder automobiles. In fact, no other dealer organization in the history of six-cylinder manufacture has ever equalled this record in the course of a full year.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT" INSIDE STUFF.

Pinehurst doesn't accept the stiff-necked theory that the inside arrangements and problem of a store are none of its patrons' business. We feel that Pinehurst and its customers are sort of engaged together in the general partnership of living, and that nothing that goes on here is altogether out of the zone of the customers' concern. So we'll tell you why we are having a fourth telephone trunk line installed today.

There were several days last week when our phone plant was inadequate. There were so many "busy" calls for Pinehurst recorded at the Telephone Company's exchange that the company began to keep track of them. The result was the discovery that in one day, with three phones in service in this store—three trunk lines—no less than seventy-eight persons who called for No. 2000 were informed by the operator that "All lines are busy."

When we found that out, of course there was only one thing to do—slap in another trunk line station here. So after today there probably won't be any "busy calls" at all for a while. When the telephone order business catches up with this fourth trunk line—why, we'll put in another, that's all.

It's a bit gratifying to us, because it shows that Pinehurst's eagerness to serve its customers, not only with the best but in the best possible way, is being appreciated.

The phone number for all lines is 2000.
