GREAT BRITAIN IS PREPARING FOR ELECTIONS

Parliament Dissolved and Date Set for Voting on May 30; 1,600 Candidates to Contest for 615 Seats.

London, May 10.—The thirty-fourth Parliament of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland was dissolved today and writs were issued for a general election on May 30.

Members of the House of Commons were summoned to the House of Lords shortly after 11 o'clock where they listened to the reading of the speech from the throne reviewing the work of the session just closed.

Returning to the House of Lords, the members of the House of Commons filed past the speaker, the Rt. Hon. Edward Algernon Fitzroy, giving him a parting shake of the hand.

Political Crisis. About sixty members of the present House are not seeking re-election. They said "good-bye," not "au revoir."

Dissolution Proclamation. The dissolution proclamation, signed by the King, will be issued this evening in the London Gazette.

Official nominating days for candidates for the new House of Commons has been fixed for May 20. At least 1,600 candidates are expected to contest the 615 seats.

The new Parliament, elected on May 30, is not expected to meet until the end of June. If the Conservatives are returned to power it is understood that Premier Baldwin intends to reconstruct his cabinet before he faces Parliament.

If no party secures an independent majority, a political crisis will arise which will require time for negotiation and consultation.

SENATE-HOUSE BATTLE RAGES ON FARM BILL

If Lower Branch Declines to Consider It Will Go Back to Senate—May Delay Action on Measure.

Washington, May 10.—The farm relief fight, which brought a serious defeat to President Hoover in the Senate, threatened to develop today into a battle of constitutional prerogatives between the two branches of Congress.

The House, always jealous of its constitutional powers, appeared likely to reject the new farm bill in its entirety, once it has passed the Senate. Its leaders have charged the Senate, by inserting the export debenture plan, usurped the powers of the House to initiate "revenue-raising legislation."

Insurgents' Position. Leaders of the Democratic-Insurgents coalition ridiculed this position, contending the debenture is an appropriation measure, rather than a revenue bill.

The decision, however, will rest with the House. If it declines to consider the bill with the debenture included, the measure will be returned to the Senate.

Not For Revenue. "Every lawyer who studies the debenture plan knows that it is not a revenue-raising measure," countered Senator Robinson (D) of Arkansas, leader of the Senate coalition.

Detective Hickey Says He is Convinced There Was No Outside Motive Nor No Outsiders Involved in Case; Revolver Still Missing—Huntington's Body to Be Buried Tomorrow Afternoon in Hartford.

County Detective Edward J. Hickey and he will say nothing except that the state is convinced the youth died by his own hand. The motive for the youth's death, Mr. Hickey announced, was despondency. There was no outside motive and there was no outsider involved in the affair, he said.

Members of the Huntington family also accept the suicide theory. This was announced through Charles Huntington, a cousin of the dead youth.

Walter T. Huntington.

Say Gun Was Found. It is rumored in the neighborhood that the weapon was found but for some reason, not known, the matter was not announced. It is remembered in the Jackson murder case that it was announced that the revolver was missing when it was in the hands of the authorities.

Footprints Traced. Yesterday Detective Hickey found a box of cartridges in the Huntington home—cartridges that would fit the revolver that fired the fatal bullet. Experiments were made with these cartridges and it was found that they could have been fired by the student and yet leave no powder stains on his hand.

Young Huntington's footprints have been traced up Tariffville road to the point where his body was found, Hickey revealed. A peculiar shaped heel on the shoes worn by Huntington greatly helped the officers to trace the dead youth's path to the swampy lands, where the body was found. The student entered the field off the west side of the road at a point about 50 feet south of the killing.

Parked Car Noticed. It was discovered today that at least two residents of this town have observed frequently of late a small coupe, occupied by a man and a woman, parked in the vicinity of the Huntington home. It is believed that the car was used to transport the body to the cemetery.

man and a girl, parked on the Tariffville road adjacent to the spot where Huntington's body was found. John Strong, a farmer who lives on the Tariffville road, said today that three times within the last month he has seen this car parked at the spot mentioned. The young man, he says, resembled the pictures published in newspapers of young Huntington. Tariffville road adjacent to the John Sabot, who lives in Windsor center, owns the property on which the body was found. A week ago Sunday he observed the car seen by Strong with two occupants answering the same description, parked at this spot, and again the next night, when he was passing, they were there again. Neither Strong nor Sabot learned the registration number of the car, although Sabot believes it was a Massachusetts license. It has not yet been ascertained whether Walter Huntington was at home on any or all of the nights when the car was seen parked on the Tariffville road although it is known that his visits home from Harvard were usually made over week-ends.

HICKEY EXPLAINS THEORY.

Windsor, Conn., May 10.—Suicide or murder? Despite the fact that Dr. Henry W. Costello, county medical examiner, has officially decided that Walter T. Huntington, 20-year-old Harvard student, was killed and did not take his own life, County Detective Edward J. Hickey delivered himself of the opinion today that the youth shot himself. Huntington's body was found beside the road near here. There was a bullet wound in the left temple, a mysterious, scribbled note nearby, and an empty .32 caliber pistol shell lying by his side. His hands were folded over his breast and the body itself was neatly arranged.

Hickey bases his suicide theory on the jealous devotion which the youth bore his late father, Henry A. Huntington, wealthy attorney. This devotion caused the student to rebel against attentions paid to his attractive widowed mother, Mrs. Mary Clark Huntington, by Claire Kennedy, 30, a Windsor resident Hickey said.

A combat of reason and emotion resulted in the boy's becoming beside himself with worry, Hickey stated, and caused him to wander into the swampy, roadside plot where his body was found. The one fallacy which thus far has precluded a suicide theory—the absence of a weapon—was explained by Hickey. The boy selected a spot where the weapon would be easy to dispose of and thus save himself from the odium attaching to self-inflicted death, Hickey said. The terrain about the suicide-or-murder spot is swampy and abounds in quicksands.

Disposed of Weapon.

Thus, the boy could have shot himself, ejected the shell from the weapon, and tossed the pistol into the sucking sands where it would quickly sink from view forever, Hickey stated. While Dr. Costello bases his homicide finding on the absence of the death weapon, he concurs with Hickey in some of the latter's views and intimated that additional evidence supporting Hickey's theory might cause his opinion to be reversed.

on the screen about as if he were sitting in the front row," it was said. And it was emphasized that the resultant projected image will not be as if the picture were magnified but will be a natural reproduction as the eye would see the scene. "Magnified" pictures, it was pointed out, objects are "coarse-grained" and disfigured.

The eventual results from raising the size of pictures through the "panorama film" were predicted to include the following: Use of larger screens. Building and leasing of larger theaters. Revolutionary projecting equipment.

Change technique of "shooting" original scenes. The research department of various motion picture companies have been working on the idea of enlarging the natural picture for the screen play. Experiments along these lines were intensified by the influence of the "talkies."

The Epworth League of the North Methodist church held its annual banquet and installation of officers in the vestry last evening. The tables were decorated with red paper and flowers in the colors of the league, red and white. The red flowering quince was the flower chosen. FARM RELIEF DIVIDES RANKS OF REPUBLICANS

Republican who more than all others persuaded President Hoover to call the extra session of Congress to deal with farm relief. And at the first opportunity, Fess added, Borah deserted the White House to vote for the debarment plan to which Mr. Hoover is so staunchly opposed.

The pedagogical reprimand was a spark which fired the kindling of party discord, and Fess was literally deluged today with stinging rejoinders.

Borah's Rejoinder Borah said he "sincerely supported" Hoover in the past campaign, but in so doing he didn't consider that he was to be forever enjoined from voting on public measures as he pleased.

"Only a base class of indolents and slaves would entertain or promulgate any such ideas," said Borah. "There is no difficulty about such matters nor misunderstanding among men, among gentlemen, of self-respect or intellectual integrity, or of slightest sense of intellectual responsibility."

Two Classes of Politicians "There are two classes of politicians... one is the individual who barbers his vote for gain and for money... there is the other who holds his convictions, his conscience, at the disposal of some particular individual, some one whom he looks upon as a political superior with a possible power to advance his interests.

"The contempt which self-respecting people measure out to both is a mere matter of degree." Defends His Vote Defending his vote for the debarment, Borah asserted there was no more substantial bounty contained in it than there is in the tariff law which protects industries.

"Mr. Fess," he said, "hastens with pride to vote all kinds of bounty in the way of duties to manufacturing interests, but recoils with pseudo-pride when extending precisely the same principle to the producer."

Other Republicans who voted for the debarment, among them Senators Nye and Frazier of North Dakota, Brookhart of Iowa, Norbeck and McMaster of South Dakota, Norris of Nebraska, La Follette and Blaine of Wisconsin, also joined today in taking shots at Fess.

The episode hasn't increased Republican harmony in the Senate, which may become vitally necessary if President Hoover is to get his program through.

NTI-TARIFF BLOC READY FOR BATTLE

Florida to Texas to support the measure, asserting that they had been given the greatest increases of any section of the country in the new rates on tropical fruits and vegetables.

Dickinson's Proposition. Rep. Dickinson (R) of Iowa, will propose increases in duty on casein, made from milk; live cattle, hides, tallow and sago and potato starch, which are said to displace corn and potatoes; black strap molasses, a substitute for corn; long staple cotton, flaxseed and other farm interests added leaf tobacco to the program.

The Republican conference also was to hear demands from many eastern interests for the opening up of the bill to amendments designed to benefit manufacturing industries which are declared to have been denied aid in the new bill.

Other Demands. These demands spring chiefly from the boot and shoe industry, textile interests, industries whose raw material cost is boosted, and for substitution of American for foreign values.

Senator Walsh (D) of Massachusetts, denounced the bill as failing to give adequate protection to many industries, asserted that it penalized nearly all manufacturing industries by increasing raw material and "levies outrageous and exorbitant duties on food products and building materials which will materially increase the cost of living to every American."

Rep. Garner of Texas, Democratic leader in the House, predicted that the bill would increase the consumer's bill $350,000,000 to $500,000,000 annually.

The Board of Health held its regular monthly meeting this morning in their headquarters in the municipal building. Routine matters were disposed of and bills approved.

The contract for the laying of cement pipes from West Center street, opposite Proctor road, through the right of way of the Manchester Sanitary and Sewer District, to Polly Brook near Olcott street, has been signed by the contractor who is to dig the trench and lay the pipe. He will start work next week. In the meantime the big cement pipes that are to be used in carrying away the storm water are being manufactured in the lots on the Dougherty property, this part of the work being done by the town.

Walks and gutters are being laid on Roberts road. This is the street known to many as Boulder road, but now officially on the town maps and records as Roberts road.

Shortly after 9 o'clock last night, a man who said his name was Johnson and that he was in the undertaking business drove through Main street asking for a police officer and complaining that he had been run off the road on Charter Oak street by an old yellow car, the driver of which he considered was intoxicated. Sergeant Crockett could get no trace of anyone who appeared to be driving under the influence of liquor or who had an old yellow car.

This appears to be the off season for real estate transactions in Manchester. Few papers of any kind have been filed with the town clerk during the week. Yesterday's records consisted of two quit claim deeds and today no instrument of any kind was filed for record. The rush has let up on the application for dog licenses, only a straggler coming in now and then. About seven hundred dog licenses were issued last week. There is a lull in the marriage application business.

Collector G. H. Howe is still working on his tax receipts. During the last couple of days the mail was piled high, waiting until those who presented their bills at the windows had been taken care of.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Selectmen will be held Monday night at eight o'clock, daylight saving time, in the Municipal building.

Dog Warden Walter E. Luettgens has raised an interesting point about dogs that have not been licensed. Some persons who have owned dogs have turned them loose instead of having them licensed. But a dog has become accustomed to living in a certain place and will return there. The dog warden has picked up several such and knowing the dogs and their owners, has returned them, only to be notified that they have no further use for the dog. Luettgens takes the stand that it is up to the owners of such dogs to see that they are killed or else be brought in for prosecution for harboring.

Beginner's day was observed at Miss Ethel M. Fish's Sunnyside Private school for primary and intermediate grades pupils at her home at 217 North Elm street today. Children of kindergarten and preschool age were entertained. Miss Fish opened her school last fall and has eight pupils most of which have enrolled again for next year.

Miss Ethel M. Fish and her niece Miss Barbara Fish of North Elm street left this afternoon for Boston where they will attend the meeting of the National Association of Educational Methods of which Miss Ethel Fish is a member. The session will be held at the Hotel Westminster.

HOSPITAL NOTES

William Armstrong of Hillard street, and Robert Burns of 519 Hillard street, were the only patients reported admitted at the Memorial hospital today. They came in last night. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Anderson of 71 Foster street last night. Felix Jesanis of South Main street, Leo Kasakas of 17 Starkweather street and Leo Katkavech of 74 Starkweather street were discharged.

TWO TROLLEY MISHAPS BUT NO ONE IS HURT

One Jumps Tracks on East Center Street—Controller Blows on the Other.

Several passengers were frightened but none was injured in two trolley car accidents here late yesterday afternoon. Both occurred about the same time. A one-man Manchester Green car in charge of Harry Slayden of Hamlin street was derailed at 4:20 at the curve on East Center street, east of Pitkin street. The rear truck went off the rails but the car was proceeding at a slow rate of speed and was quickly stopped.

The controller of a Rockville car "blew" at Depot Square at 4:45 but no one was injured. While but few passengers were on the Green trolley, the Rockville car was crowded. Fortunately, no one was standing in the vestibule except the motorman and he threw out the circuit breaker and got away from the flames in time to escape injury.

More than 1,132,000 vacuum cleaners were manufactured in the United States during 1928. About 60,270 of these were exported.

GRANT STORE REPORTS
GENERAL PROSPERITY

Sales in April Increase Despite Fact There Were 22 Rainy Days That Month.

Numerous changes have been made in the W. T. Grant Company's store on Main street making merchandise much more accessible to customers than formerly, and bringing their attention to the many bargains offered which make it possible to economically purchase many necessities.

The local Grant store has done considerable more advertising this year than ever before and these ads have helped to bring the "doubtful customers" into the store and learn of the great list of merchandise offered at bargain prices.

General prosperity throughout the entire group of states covered by the Grant Company chain of 230 stores during April is indicated in the recent report of sales by the company. April sales in the old stores were $3,448,012 as compared with $3,862,361 a year ago, an increase of 2.54 percent.

When it is considered that this figure was reached despite twenty-two rainy days and that the usual Easter peak or sales was missing due to Easter falling in March; the prosperity is more clearly indicated. The weather conditions and the loss of the Easter sales in April would have been ample reason for a loss in sales.

That the prosperity is not spotty but has been general is indicated by the fact that in the first four months of the fiscal year this same group of old stores showed an increase of 6.78 percent.

By basing their optimism on the general conditions throughout the country the officials of the W. T. Grant Company look forward to continuance of this general prosperity.

NO PARDON RECORD

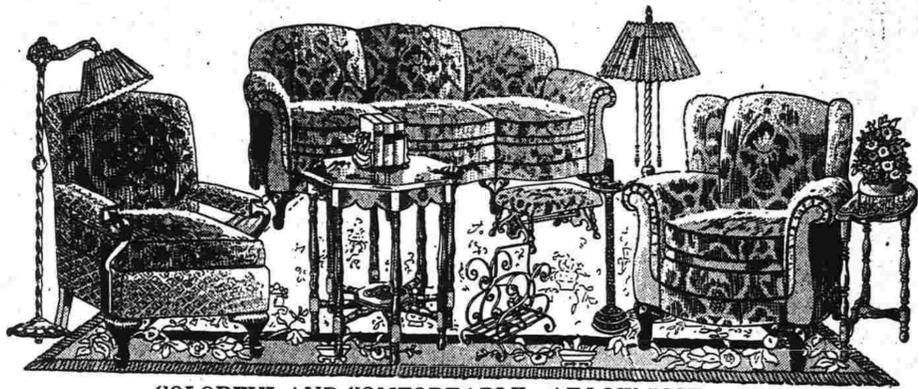

Topeka, Kan.—For the first time in more than 30 years a Kansas governor has failed to grant a single pardon during an entire administration. The record is held by Governor Ben S. Paulen, who took the office following the scandals over paroles and pardons in the administration of Jonathan M. Davis.

"Luckee Girl"

When Doris Vinton of "Luckee Girl" at Parsons Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 16, 17, 18 was eight years old she was introduced to J. J. Schubert upon one of his visits to Doris' home town, New Haven. Even at that tender age the girl could dance, and this she proved to the producer's surprise and delight. The man who now pays Miss Vinton's weekly salary for playing the role of "Omille" at the local playhouse, told her she should keep right on improving her choreographic talent and that when she finished her term at boarding school he would place her in one of his shows. Doris, who, by the way is the daughter of Carl R. Vinton, coach of the Davis Cup tennis team derived great encouragement from what the noted producer said. She continued at school, kept to her dancing and added culture and mimicry to her curriculum. But Doris just couldn't wait until she had attained the age at which Mr. Schubert promised to engage her. She left her school in New York and immediately secured a place in Alexander Leftwich's "Fashion Show." In that she was given six special numbers. The engagement lasted but a fortnight, but within that period Florenz Ziegfeld had his attention directed to the slip of a girl. He, too, was impressed and she accepted a contract to play in the "Follies of 1925". The talented girl advanced rapidly, soon replacing Ann Pennington, and later Ray Dooley and remaining with the Ziegfeld organization a year and a half, appearing in Philadelphia, Boston and Chicago.

Here Mr. Schubert again enters the picture, for he engaged Miss Vinton for his "Artists and Models" for the following season. Then she went into pictures, but finding she preferred the speaking and singing stage to the work before the camera, she returned to the footlights in Arch Selwyn's "Manhattan." Followed a part in "bay six hen", and now she is back under the Schubert banner in "Luckee Girl". There are murmurs that another Mital is in the offing.

JURY WITH A HEART

London, Ont.—A verdict of accidental death, returned by a coroner's jury as the result of a fire which claimed the lives of Albert and Vincent Luciano, was accompanied by instructions to turn the jury fees over to the Luciano family. It was also recommended that Westminster Township council provide water mains and fire alarm boxes in the Manor Park district, scene of the tragedy.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

GOOD MOTHERS

"What is wanting," said Napoleon one day to Madame Campan, "in order that the youth of France be well educated?" "Good Mothers," was the reply. The Emperor was most forcibly struck with this answer. "Here," said he, "is a system in one word."

We are coming more and more to realize that early home training is the most important factor which controls the development of character and ability in later life. The close attachment of the child to its mother and, therefore, close association, makes the mother's duty and responsibility of vital importance.

The mother who is well educated can no doubt assist a great deal in the child's education, but perhaps the most important requirement for the mother to have in this new age is a knowledge of the newer facts of child psychology and information regarding the simple, healthful habits for a child.

The GOOD mother of today knows that fear should play no part in the child's training, and that love is the greatest force which she has at her disposal. The old negative command, "Don't do this, because it will hurt you," should give way to the newer, positive one, "Do this, because it is good for you."

The GOOD mother should never be untruthful to her child. Lying and deceit should have no part in the child's training.

How easily the child learns of the seemingly good results which often come from telling a lie. He learns to get what he wants, and to avoid punishment in this way. Teaching the child to lie by example is giving him a real force to use which will always, in the end bring about disastrous consequences.

The GOOD mother will not teach her child to exaggerate those things which she considers either good or bad. It is so important that the child learns to put the proper emphasis upon important things, but without exaggeration.

The GOOD mother must feel her responsibility in teaching her child how to form good eating habits. This, again, can best be done by the priceless training of setting a good example. There is little difference between the kind of food which the mother and child should use, but if certain food is bad for the child, it will also be bad for the mother.

The admonition that such and such food is "Not good for little children" doesn't carry much weight when the child sees his mother eating the same unwholesome food. The GOOD mother will encourage her child to play vigorous, healthful games and not coddle him too much with fear of possible injury which probably would not happen and from which he would doubtless recover just as other children do.

The GOOD mother will show her deep interest in her child's education by studying along with him as much as possible, trying to keep at least a little ahead so that her counsel and advice will be respected.

The GOOD mother should take advantage of all of the wonderful ideas which are being developed by the teachers of child psychology. The GOOD mother of today can learn all of the clever little tricks with which it is so easy to influence the immature mind of the child. Nagging, bullying, fault-finding and training with "don'ts" should be replaced by the helpful teaching which can only come from a study of those newer methods employed by the thousands of teachers of child psychology who are devoting their lives to this work.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Nightmares.)

Questions: W. W. writes: "I have a brother who raves every night—jumps out of his sleep screaming that someone is going to kill him. I have taken him to several doctors, had his adenoids and tonsils removed, which the doctors told me was the cause. He is about 24 years old, his work is not hard, and does not eat on going to bed. What should be done, as I am afraid he will be killed in a fall through the window?"

Answer: Your brother no doubt suffers from indigestion from eating the wrong kind of food or wrong combinations of food at his evening meal. It takes about six hours to digest a well balanced meal, and if he is making dietetic errors he is liable to have the most trouble from five to ten hours after eating dinner. Nightmares occur at from one to two o'clock in the morning, after the stomach has become exhausted through hours of battling with incompatible food mixtures.

(Sulphured Fruits)

Question: R. H. S. asks: "Is sulphur, used in the drying of fruits, injurious to one's health? How can it be removed? Why is sulphur used for this purpose?"

Answer: It is better to use fruits which have not been prepared by sulphur fumes, as this method often leaves the fruits containing some sulphuric acid which is injurious. Most dried fruits are not prepared in this manner at the present time. The sulphur was formerly used to kill the worms and eggs which might be in the fruit, and also for bleaching purposes.

LONG SLEEP MAKES BABY HAPPY AGAIN

"Our baby kept waking us several times a night, until we started giving him a little Castoria after his last nursing," says an Iowa mother. "He slept soundly from the first night and it made him look and feel worlds better." Baby specialists endorse Fletcher's Castoria; and millions of mothers know how this purely-vegetable, harmless preparation helps babies and children, with colic, constipation, colds, diarrhea, etc. The Fletcher signature is always on the wrapper of genuine Castoria. Avoid imitations.

Many men owe their success to following a good plow horse.

In the spring the young man's judgment turns to

Hi-test TYDOL

It's Spring! So who can blame the boy if he lets his right arm rest gently about the shoulders of the Only Girl as they speed along the blossom scented countryside?

But there are hills to climb. And moist, mud-caked roads to conquer. And gear-shifting and romance don't mix very well.

So in the Spring, the young man's fancy . . . and good judgment . . . turn soundly to the selection of Hi-test TYDOL.

For "reduced gear-shifting" is only one of the advantages of Hi-test TYDOL. There's instant starting. And double acceleration. And anti-knock. And silken, silent super-power. All "extra cost" advantages . . . but without the extra cost!

What wonder that new pumps for this emerald green TYDOL are springing up like mushrooms and working overtime to keep up with the demand! You can't hide such super-value from wide-awake motorists.

BOOSTING THE LICENSES

Already sportsmen's associations have begun to utter loud and emphatic criticisms of the State Board of Fisheries and Game for rushing through the Legislature, almost at the close of the 1929 session, a measure increasing to $3.35 angling licenses that have been costing $2.25 and making a similar increase in the cost of hunting licenses.

Whether the blame for this proceeding is properly allocated to the State Board or not we do not know, but in our belief the action is a bad one and will have a bad effect.

It is only a few years since the institution of the hunting and fishing licenses and the fee for either was then only a dollar. The rate of advance has been rapid, and there will be no unanimity in opinion that the service rendered by the State Board has increased commensurately.

That fish and game culture is being carried on on a much more ambitious scale is true enough, and the commission is spending, of course, a great deal more money than it used to under the dollar license system. But the mere spending of money does not necessarily mean that a better money's worth is being obtained.

There are a great many Connecticut sportsmen who have experienced no enthusiastic emotions over the manner in which the state-leased system is working. Anglers in the southern part of the state, for instance, see little merit in a scheme whereby large sums of money are spent on the leasing and stocking of streams practically every one of which is within a handy automobile drive of Hartford, while no attention whatever is paid to the leasing of streams in other sections of the state. These sportsmen can hardly be blamed for protesting when they are compelled to pay instantly increasing sums annually for angling licenses if they are forced to conclude that the money is being spent very largely in providing easy fishing for the "capitol crowd."

Nor do the majority of sportsmen subscribe to the idea that there is any promotion of sportsmanship in the policy of dumping grown trout into roadside pools for dilittante anglers to haul out without effort.

In other words there is a growing conviction that the activities of the State Board of Fisheries and Game, while they are unquestionably larger and far more expensive than they used to be, are becoming less and less worth the money that is being taxed out of the license holders. Naturally, then, they object to having the prices of licenses increased with each session of the Legislature.

TARIFF CONFUSION

The confusion into which Congress has fallen with relation to the tariff revision measure, through the insistence of each of an uncountable number of interests on an increase in rates for its own special benefit, suggests that not only is it impossible to adopt a set of tariff schedules that will satisfy everybody but also that it may be impossible to continue forever along the present schedule system of tariff making or anything even remotely resembling it.

The number of American industries has so tremendously increased in the last quarter of a century, and not only industry but agriculture has become so highly specialized, that it is a question whether specific consideration of separate interests for the purposes of tariff protection may not eventually have to be abandoned in favor of a quite revolutionary but infinitely simpler plan of general ad valorem imposts, lest we be driven irretrievably ly in our efforts at adjustment. It is conceivable that the principle of the protective tariff could be preserved by some such sweeping method—say through the division of all importable items into not more than half a dozen classes and the establishment of ad valorem duties broadly applicable to each class as a whole.

To be sure, at the beginning, we might have to go through a short period of confusion worse than the confusion of confusion worse than the confusion of confusion. But the ultimate economic advantages of being on an understandable and dependable basis with relation to tariff protection would seem to be inestimable.

There certainly could be no worse basis for the readjustment of tariff schedules than the pressure of sectional or personal political influences and it is frankly impossible to prevent those influences from operating under the present system.

Something will have to be done, before many years, to simplify this problem. It is seriously to be doubted whether any imaginable kind of tariff board machinery can do more than mitigate the fundamental weakness of the manifold schedule system. And it must not be forgotten that there is always more or less likelihood, in the presence of such a tariff free-for-all as seems now to be impending in Congress, of a sudden popular reaction against the whole system of tariff protection and the upspringing of a veritable strong free trade party recruited from the consumers—an economic disaster to be avoided at any cost.

AT WHOSE ORDERS?

Connecticut is now to have another commission. This time it is one whose duties will be to build and operate an insane asylum in Fairfield county. The act under which the commission is erected, and a million and three quarters dollars appropriated, provides that the commission "shall purchase a site," etc. The commissioners have not been appointed as yet, for the measure only passed the Senate on the last business day of the session; yet it is quite well understood that the site has already been selected and that the hospital will be built in Newtown.

This is the kind of thing that makes people talk about "invisible government." Perhaps the Newtown site in contemplation is the best possible one. But who picked it out? Who did the selecting and under what law? Why the commission at all, if the job is already cut and dried? Whose business, other than that of the commission which must buy the land, was it to select the site? Why did the act very carefully say nothing about the commission doing any selecting?

The location of so important an institution as an insane asylum probably costing considerably more than a million and three quarters before it is finished would seem to be a matter for which somebody should assume a definite responsibility. What's the idea of requiring a commissioner to buy a site already selected without even the Legislature having a voice in the naming of the location?

It would be interesting to know who is the determining influence in putting this asylum in one particular spot without a scrap of legal action having been taken by anybody. Just interesting.

FIX BLAME ARIGHT

The killing of a college boy by local officers in Virginia because they mistakenly guessed that perhaps he might be a bootlegger is not fairly attributable to federal prohibition. It is to be laid directly at the door of the Virginia Legislature, if the Legislature of that state had refused to participate in the enforcement of prohibition its deputy sheriffs would not be hunting booze on the highway and there is no power on earth to compel a sovereign American state to adopt a statute supporting a federal law. Virginia, had she seen fit, could have treated the Eighteenth amendment the same as she did the Fourteenth and the Fifteenth amendments. But she did not wish to do so. She wanted to have her state police authorities chase bootleggers, and she has had them chase bootleggers. If in this instance a perfectly innocent boy has been cut off in the dawn of his manhood, it is only what was to have been expected—what we must expect to happen over and over and over again so long as there are rum runners on the roads and excited, muddled snooters hunting them in the dark. But you can't blame the federal law for what a state's law do—and this wasn't a federal job at all.

When these roadside assassinations are committed by federal ruffians, then it is fair to pin the fault on the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead-Jones laws. When they are committed by state officers there is nobody to blame but the state which, of its own

NOVEL COOLIDGE SHOT

Former President Coolidge "got his Vermont up" the other day in New York when a fresh movie cameraman sighted on both Mr. Coolidge and a group of photographers for whom the ex-president was about to pose in a room of the New York Life's office. He told the movie man to quit grinding and when he didn't he advanced angrily on him and told him to "get out." We don't blame Mr. Coolidge and we have no sympathy with the cameraman. But just the same we'd bet that movie company wouldn't have missed the close-up that their cheeky employe got for more than one thousand berries. It was a handout to the man behind the crank.

KNOW HIS VENTILATORS

Customs Inspector William J. Gary, attached to the New York Custom House, used to be a marine engineer, so that searching a ship for contraband liquor is just his dish. There were altogether too many fingerprints around a ventilator hood to suit Gary's experienced notions, so he investigated and found $5,000 worth of champagne down the shaft. Probably the reason so many of these searches reveal nothing is because there are so many searchers who know much more about silos than they do about ships.

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 10.—Trade follows the flag and gossip follows Hollywood. Hence, with the major lights of the film capital gathered in Manhattan with merger in their hearts, there's enough "low down" for everybody.
 For instance . . . Camilla Horn, the loveliest thing that happened along the Danube since the war was written, came into town not so many days ago bent on buying a one-way ticket to her homeland. She had been starred with John Barrymore and all that, but still and all she had not given much heed to her English tutors. Hence when the talkies arrived, there seemed little to do but decamp. Thus, a bit red-eyed from sorrow, Camilla reached Broadway. But before she could take the boat she was scouted by Warner Brothers had baited her. They were about to start work on "The Man On the Box" and had determined on a German as well as an English version. So the flaxen Camilla gets one more chance.

OLD FAITHFUL

Udine, Italy.—Antonio Valvasori, 100, claims that he has equaled or broken the world's record for fidelity. Valvasori, on his birthday, vowed that he never had loved any woman but his lawful spouse, whom he married when he was 25. He also is faithful in remaining "on the wagon." He hasn't taken a drink since his early youth, when one or two drunken carousals nearly cost him his life.

RETRIBUTION

Medford.—Patrolman George Cavanaugh got a bite in the right hand for trying to render first aid to a dog which had been hit by an auto. This convinced the officer that the pup was beyond repair. So he shot it, before going to a doctor to have his own wounds treated.

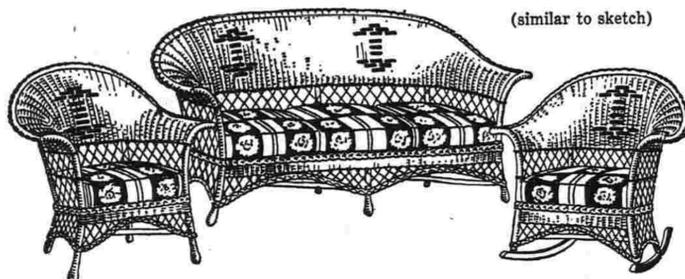

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, May 10.—Congressman Louis Ludlow of Indiana, who spent many years in the press gallery watching congressmen and writing about them for their constituents, took a bitter opinion both of the congressmen and the people who elected them.
 Everyone gets a little cynical about both Congress and congressmen after being around Washington while, but Ludlow reports that his opinion of both is somewhat higher now that he has been mingling around with one group and hearing from the other.
 How Ludlow jumped from the press gallery down onto the floor of the house is an interesting yarn. Began With a Speech.
 He made an inauguration speech after being elected vice-president of the National Press Club. Somebody put it in the Congressional Record and E. M. Ralston, a prominent Democrat and editor of Ludlow's home town of Indianapolis, saw it. He wrote: "Glad to know you're a congressman by proxy. Come on out here and we'll make you one in fact."
 So Ludlow began to get sentimental about the possibility of serving this district to which he had come as a farmer boy many years back and soon he was writing letters to a dozen Democratic leaders of Indiana asking what they thought about it. The late Tom Taggart, National Committeeman Charles M. Greathouse, State Chairman Earl Peters, Evans Woolen, Meredith Nicholson and the others all came back promptly with loud cheers.

Ludlow expected nomination without opposition, but two rivals sprang up at the last moment and his vote doubled their combined total. The district was normally Republican by 35,000, but all Indianapolis newspapers supported Ludlow, and although Hoover carried the district by 35,000, Ludlow won by 6300.
 Apparently there must be some satisfaction in being a congressman, because Ludlow is very thankful to the voters and very anxious to do a good job. He has sent 10,000 letters back into his district, signing every one of them and advising the folks that he wanted suggestions about any way he could help anyone and would like to be considered "your personal representative in Washington." This was something unheard of. Constituents call on their congressmen for every conceivable type of service without being asked. And Ludlow has been asked.
 He is putting in long hours with astonishing zeal. He has two secretaries in his office, both busy, instead of the customary one.
 Day after day he has been running around to the various government departments, establishing new contacts through which he can work to help everyone who asks for something.
 "I used to have one boss," he says, "but now I have a half a million." Which, coming from Ludlow, is no bunk. He says that way about it and is positively inspired by its opportunity for service.
 "I've been here 28 years now," he says. "I used to think a congressman had to say that for what he did for his constituents. But the way constituents show their appreciation has begun to surprise me."
 There's altogether too much public credit about Congress. Most of those that I know try to do what's right and how that I'm closer to them I'm developing more of a liking for them. Congress strikes a good average. There's very little real crookedness or venality here.
 Better Than In Old Days.
 "The present lobby is well behaved and quite respectable, compared with the old one. I can remember back when a senator or congressman would get a committee to wait on the president of the Pennsylvania railroad outside to see if he wanted any more legislation passed before adjournment."
 "The whole moral tone around here has improved. My memory goes back to the time when there was a bar in the capitol, on the House side. It was abolished more than 20 years ago. Congressman Charles B. Landis, who was a brother of mine, used to introduce riders to abolish that bar. Prohibition sentiment was being organized and the House used to pass the abolition measure, after which members would run over to the Senate and beg senators to kill it. The senators were elected by state legislatures and didn't have to worry about the dregs. Finally they got tired of doing the dirty work for the House and the bar was abolished."

Just ask for the Cleansing Diet Course.
(Creaking Knees.)
Question: J. S. asks: "What would cause my knees to creak and grind as though the kneecap were terribly dry? What treatment would you suggest for this?"
Answer: The creaking and grinding of the knees simply denote the lack of synovial fluid, and this condition can usually be corrected through the use of the proper diet and exercise.

(Heart Trouble)
Question: Mary J. writes: "I have been in bed four months with heart trouble. My meals seem to make so much gas, which increases the heart palpitation. Does diet affect the heart?"
Answer: The cause of most heart trouble is an excess accumulation of gas pressing against the heart. This is caused by eating wrong combinations of foods, which combinations produce fermentation in the stomach and intestines; also, by eating such foods as dried beans, onions, garlic, cabbage, etc., which always produce a large amount of flatulence.

RICH GIRL & POOR GIRL

By RUTH DEWEY GROVES

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

MILDRED LAWRENCE falls in love with STEPHEN ARMITAGE, who is lured away from her by PAMELA JUDSON when she tells him that Mildred is trying to marry her brother, HAROLD, for his money. Harold fears HUCK CONNOR because he holds a check which he forged. Huck is infuriated with Pamela, who plots to make Stephen jealous. When Pamela maneuvers Stephen into an engagement, Huck frames him for the theft of an auto and causes his arrest. Pamela breaks their engagement. But Mildred goes to see him in jail and promises to help him out. Harold had once told her he feared Huck and that he had threatened to get rid of Stephen to keep her from marrying Pamela. Mildred determines to force Harold to help her and is shocked to find his death—apparently accidental. She tells Stephen her suspicions, but they have no proof and it seems hopeless.

In desperation, Mildred goes to MR. JUDSON, who takes her to headquarters to tell her story. Judson puts up bail for Stephen's release and Pamela begs his forgiveness. A lawyer and detective escort Stephen away from the jail and they soon realize their taxi is being followed. At a congested corner the detective is shot at as the taxi passes. He escapes with a scratch as his answering shot had penetrated the thug's wrist and caused him to drop his gun—saving the bullet meant for Stephen. The thug makes a get-away and they learn he was driving a stolen car.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XL

"It's a common trick," Freen explained. "The owner allows his car to be stolen; then it's abandoned and he gets it back with no responsibility for anything that happens after he reports that it's out of his possession. But of course he delays making the report until the car has served its purpose."

"And the police have no little time to find it, I see," Oerndorf remarked.

"We'll have the owner brought in," Freen said and turned to Stephen. "Better come along to headquarters and have a talk," he added quickly.

Stephen shook his head. "Not until I've seen Mr. Judson," he replied.

"All right, buddy, but you know this 'stolen' car business means there's an organization after you," Stephen showed a sudden interest. "If the owner of that taxi really is in on this thing then hold him," he exclaimed earnestly.

"What for?" Freen asked.

"I'll tell you after I've seen Mr. Judson," Stephen promised.

"If you see him," Freen returned. "Don't be a fool, young man. Somebody's out to get you good and plenty."

Stephen's lips set in a stubborn line. "They'll have to take time to cook up something new," he said, convinced that he was safe for the time being. "You get that taxi owner and maybe you'll have someone who can tell you where Huck Connor is."

"This Connor . . ." Oerndorf began.

"He's the man Mr. Judson will give his right arm to find after I've told him what I know," Stephen declared. "Come on, let's go."

Oerndorf gave the driver orders to proceed to the question Stephen until Stephen told him firmly that he had nothing more to say until he had seen Mr. Judson.

At the hotel Stephen was asked to go at once to the owner's office. He opened the door and strode in briskly, his mind filled with what he was going to say about his theory that Huck Connor had murdered Judson's son.

Oerndorf followed less precipitately, but it was he who first saw that Mr. Judson was not alone to receive them.

Stephen was totally unprepared for the rush with which Pamela came to throw herself into his arms and "welcome" him back. She had completely slipped his mind since he'd left the jail.

Oerndorf walked over and looked out a window but Mr. Judson did not take his eyes from Stephen.

He saw the young man hesitate as though confused, saw his arms remain at his side while Pamela pulled him over and over again upon his lips.

Finally Stephen put one arm around her in an uncertain way that revealed more to Mr. Judson than Stephen himself was aware of.

Until that moment Pamela's father had not permitted himself to form an opinion of this young man his daughter was to marry. To him Stephen was the innocent victim of a man who had plotted his own ruin.

So thoroughly did he believe Mildred's story of Huck's intention to marry Pamela that he did not doubt Stephen had been purposely put in a position that would dispose of him as a rival to Huck.

Mr. Judson thought of Mildred now and a determined expression settled upon his face.

It had been easy to guess her secret. She loved this young beggar. Her last word, when he'd left her at the hospital a short while ago, was a plea to warn Stephen of the danger she believed he was in.

"You must meet dad," Pamela cried, suddenly drawing away from Stephen and turning toward her father. She saw, and misinter-stood, her father's forbidding frown. Quickly she ran to him and put an arm on his shoulders. "Stephen will be a new son to you, daddy," she whispered.

Mr. Judson looked up at her unsmilingly, and then turned his glance upon Stephen. There was no friendliness, no warmth in it and Stephen knew it.

But he had no time to concern himself with Mr. Judson's personal thoughts of him.

He stepped forward and held out his hand as the older man rose to meet him.

"You're a bit later than we expected you to be," Mr. Judson said after the introduction. "No trouble, I hope."

Stephen glanced at Pamela. "I'd like to talk to your father alone, Pamela," he said.

She went at once into an appealing pout.

"Please go, Pam, dear," her father requested.

Pamela came up to Stephen again and put her hands on his arms. "You won't be a minute longer than necessary?" she begged. "I've so many things to talk to you about, Stephen darling. Things you never dreamed of."

"I'll be brief," Stephen promised.

Mildred nodded to Mr. Oerndorf and left them.

"Sit down," Mr. Judson invited and resettled himself at his desk.

"Do not object," Stephen said, "to having your lawyer hear anything I may have to say?"

Mr. Judson stared at him.

"Of course not," he snapped. "Why should I?"

"Well, it concerns your son."

Mr. Judson started. He had expected Stephen to talk about Pamela.

"Do you know anything more about my son . . . his death . . . than Miss Lawrence knows?" he asked.

It was now Stephen's turn to be surprised. "Miss Lawrence?" he repeated dumbly.

"She came to me this morning with information that I hope will lead to the arrest and conviction of the man who murdered Harold," Mr. Judson told him.

Oerndorf sat forward on the edge of his chair. Mr. Judson caught his exclamation of surprise.

"I hadn't time to tell you all this when I asked you to bring Mr. Armitage here," he said to his lawyer. "Before that the police had asked me to say nothing to anyone about their belief that my son had been murdered."

"Mildred," Stephen mumbled. It seemed unbelievable to him now that he hadn't seen her hand in this.

Mr. Judson turned to him sharply. "I must confess I thought she had heard in some manner of the reward I intended offering as soon as the police would permit me to make it public," he said and watched Stephen closely.

That young man evinced an instant indignation. "I suppose you still believe that she deserved to be fired," he said scornfully.

Mr. Judson shook his head. "No," he said, "but she was mistaken as to her interest in Harold."

Stephen leaned forward. "If there's any doubt left in your mind I can tell you that she was only trying to help him out of some hole she'd got herself into," he declared stoutly.

"I know, I know. There is no occasion for you to defend her," Mr. Judson retorted, and Stephen was brought to a sudden realization that the pattern of Mildred's disinterestedness as regarded Harold Judson.

"But you owe her undying gratitude for getting you out of jail," Mr. Judson went on, his voice tinged with contempt.

He was certain now that Stephen was not in love with his daughter. He might, or might not, be in love with Mildred Lawrence. At least he was ready to defend her at a moment's notice.

Stephen nodded. "I never even guessed she'd been to see you," he said. "I thought . . ." Here he stopped. He couldn't tell Pamela's father that she had led him to believe it was her love and belief in him that had brought about his release.

"Perhaps you'd better go over the facts as you know them," Mr. Judson suggested to him. "Miss Lawrence may inadvertently have omitted something of importance."

"There's nothing I can add, I'm afraid," Stephen replied. "I only know what Miss Lawrence told me about this man Connor and your son. She is certain, in fact Harold told her, that Connor was blackmailing him. We don't know anything about Connor beyond the fact that I suspected he was mixed up with a gang of automobile thieves who operated for a while in Indiana."

"Then Pamela hasn't told you that we have a very definite clue to the murderer?" Mr. Judson asked.

Stephen shook his head. "She stayed with me only a few minutes," he explained. "We talked about . . . our future."

"H'm," Mr. Judson compressed his lips. "Well, it will interest you to know that we have the thumbprint of the man we believe killed my son."

"Good!" Stephen exclaimed. "Now we've something to go on!"

"Mr. Armitage," it was Oerndorf speaking. "Why didn't you tell what you know about Connor and Mr. Judson's son without waiting until you were released from jail?"

Stephen answered him promptly. "Because we, Miss Lawrence and I, had no proof to back up our suspicions. We thought everyone else believed it a case of accident or suicide."

"There's another and a better one," Stephen replied. "I was safe enough in jail but Miss Lawrence was threatened some time ago merely for trying to make Harold confide in her. Had she gone to the police with her story her life would have been in danger."

Mr. Judson glared at him. "Is it your opinion," he said, "that fear of such danger would prevent Miss Lawrence from doing her duty?"

Stephen glared back at him. "Certainly not," he answered readily. "I induced her not to go to the police; told her they wouldn't act on her unsubstantiated word."

Mr. Judson subsided. "She came to me," he said more quietly. "We went at once to Inspector Markeson. We must have been shadowed, for later, on her way back to work, Miss Lawrence was shot."

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

A certain little girl three years old suddenly began to stammer. No one in the family knew what caused it. It just developed in a few short weeks, before they realized what was happening.

Her mother tried various methods of curing her, one thing that I know she tried was to make her stop and think when she started to talk and then say each word very, very slowly. That worked fairly well when she was with the older people, but, of course most of the time she was playing with other children and then there was no one near to help her. So, like a lot of sound theories, it failed when put into practice—because there couldn't be enough practice.

Finally they took her to a doctor, but to her parents' surprise and indignation the doctor refused to be very much upset over it.

He asked about her meals, and hours for sleep, and about her friends, and if she seemed happy, and if she had a fair amount of outdoor play, and all that. But he didn't suggest any sort of lingual gymnastics or standing on toes or anything like that.

Incident recalled.

All this happened about five years ago, so long that I had almost forgotten the circumstance as the little girl now hasn't the least hint of an impediment in her speech; but it came to my mind when another worried mother recently asked me about her child of the same age.

"If she develops into a real stammerer," said the doctor, "then I should advise you to take advantage of a good school where scientific methods are assuredly of great benefit in such cases."

"But she's only three, and you know she can speak without difficulty because she has always done so. So I think if you help Nature a little she will cure herself."

"Increase her sleeping and resting hours, and don't allow her to get excited. Let her have some time alone each day. Make her as happy as you can—don't allow other children to quarrel with her; add not scold her. It may be a nervous affection."

"After the third birthday so many natural impulses start to develop in the child's mind, so much seems to happen all at once as the wonders of the world unfold, it was likely to cause a sort of suppressed nervous excitement that runs away with voluntary functional control such as the nerves that govern the speech muscles. The child becomes self-conscious, too. A decided psychological readjustment takes place at this time."

"I think if you watch her physical health, her food, and hours of rest, she will outgrow it in a year or two."

And she did.

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famous Authority

TOAD HAS LOTS OF WARTS, BUT HE CAN'T GIVE THEM TO ANYONE

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Some people believe that if one touches a toad, one will get warts. The back of a toad appears to be full of warts. Much has been said in previous articles in this series about symbolical magic. The whole idea is to get something that resembles the condition of the body that is concerned in the disease and to transfer the disease to the resembling substance.

There used to be a patent medicine for coughs called "Frog-in-the-Throat." It sold well with the picture of a frog on the box because the idea was so easy to assimilate. In Cheshire, in England, it is customary to treat laryngitis in children by holding the head of a young frog in the child's mouth for a few moments.

In a previous article some of the many superstitions related to the removal of warts were carefully considered. Most of those were likewise of the order of symbolical magic. The scientific books on diseases of the skin recognize the fact that the cause of warts is unknown. It is known that the wart represents a thickening of certain layers of the skin with projection upward and that this process is initiated by an irritation which may be due to poison, to bacteria, to mechanical action, or possibly to nerve disturbances.

There is one excellent way, however, of proving promptly that touching a toad will not produce warts—that is to get a toad and touch it. It is a safe bet that the warts will not appear in the vast majority of cases when this experiment is tried.

The toad and frog have always had great interest for the magician. According to one legend of the past, if the tongue of a live frog was removed and placed on the heart of a woman who was sleeping, one could ask her any question and she would give a true answer. That chance is just about as good a chance as the chance of producing a wart.

The magicians also attach tremendous virtues to the toadstone. These toadstones were really fossil teeth of fish, but the belief was that they grew inside the heads of old and great toads. In the middle ages it was believed that a toadstone worn in a finger ring would give warning of the presence of poison by changing its color. In the days of the Borgias this was a useful warning.

An eminent magician of the twelfth century told how to tell a real toadstone from a false one. He suggested that the stone be held before the toad so that the toad could see it.

"If it is a right and true stone," he said, "the toad will leap towards it as though he would snatch it."

Since the toad and frog are very much nearsighted, it is doubtful that they ever saw the stone in the first place. The toadstone was believed to have marvelous powers in charming away disease. Modern scientific knowledge has largely dispelled such beliefs in ancient preventive medicine.

The WOMAN'S DAY

It's hard to believe. But Dr. Alfred Hall-Quest says that it's so in his new book, "It's Not Our Fault, or Why We Can't Be Good."

Perhaps the absurd laws aren't enforced, or perhaps the bachelors play fair and safe.

AT THE STATE.

"The Leatherneck," Stafford's Orchestra.
Not since "The Volga Boatman," has William Boyd had as fine a stellar vehicle as he has in "The Leatherneck," a Pathe Photophone picture synchronized with dialogue and sound in which he is starred at the State theater today and Saturday.

As a U. S. Marine private who is court-martialed for desertion in this new talking film, he has a role that will vastly enhance his vogue with fans. There is considerable romance suggested by the United States Marines and in "The Leatherneck" the producers have centered their drama on the human adventures of three "Devil Dogs." The result is screen entertainment that grips because of its drama, thrills because of the adventures through which its characters are carried and holds unusual interest because of its beautiful love theme and the humorous situations woven into its plot.

Besides Boyd, the cast includes such prominent screen players as Alan Hale, Robert Armstrong, Diane Ellis, Joseph Girard, Fred Kohler and Mitchell Lewis. Howard Higgins directed.

Jesse Stafford and his Columbia Recording orchestra head the Vitaphone Vaudeville program at the State for today and tomorrow, which includes two acts. The Stafford band is considered by musical authorities to be one of the most popular organizations of its kind now touring America. They have played in nearly every principal city and country throughout the world. Stafford himself, has earned the distinction of being America's greatest trombone artist. In their Vitaphone debut, the orchestra offers a routine of tune-orchestra selections presented in a modern symphonic-jazz style.

Audrey Ferris, the charming little Warner Brothers star, is seen in the second Vitaphone offering. It is a short comedy sketch entitled, "The Quest of Today" and presents Miss Ferris in a pleasing bit of dialogue efficiency. She is supported by a capable cast of players.

The usual snappy variety of State Short Subjects will be shown in conjunction with the sound and dialogue program.

HOME BREW BEER NOT AGAINST LAW

Providence, R. I., May 10.—While prohibition enforcement officers admitted they had received a setback, makers of "home brew" beer in this section today hailed with joy the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston that it could not take "judicial notice that home brew beer which an undercover agent stated he purchased was intoxicating liquor within the meaning of the national prohibition law." The decision grew out of the arrest of Clovice Proulx, Pawtucket Valley near-beer saloonkeeper who was found guilty in the Federal District Court here but appealed to the higher court.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

ALLEN AT TICONDEROGA.

How the lack of rapid means of communication helped the American colonists in their struggle for freedom is graphically illustrated by the Revolutionary War episode of which today is the anniversary—the capture of Ticonderoga by Ethan Allen on May 10, 1775.

This isolated, but important, storehouse of British supplies surrendered to the Americans before the garrison stationed there knew that a war was in progress, although the battle of Lexington had been fought more than three weeks before.

The strength of Allen's attack lay in the fact that it was such a complete surprise, for his "army" consisted of less than 100 "Green Mountain boys." Benedict Arnold, who later was to become a traitor, played a valiant part under Allen in the attack.

The next day Allen sent a note to the governor of Connecticut, telling him in his whimsical fashion of the prisoners he had taken: "I make you a present of a major, a captain and two Lieutenants in the regular establishment of George the Third. I hope they may serve as ransom for some of our friends at Boston."

Browns And Braves Are Faltering Now

Teams That Startled Baseball World at Beginning of Season Are Dropping Back to Proper Elevation.

By DAVIS J. WALSH.

New York, May 10.—That baseball fortunes can and do change a trifle more rapidly than the average man can change his mind is a belief that needs no further ratification today after what has happened in the major leagues, notably the St. Louis Browns and the Boston Braves, since no longer ago than Sunday last. The Browns and Braves, having shown a lot of what is known as early speed, were riding hard on the two major league fields five days ago and the fact occasioned a great deal of comment. I don't have to add that this was largely favorable. Somehow, the boys usually find it convenient to approve of a winner.

But the current week has gone very hard with these outfits of great hope and, at least in the case of the Browns, of great promise. Since Monday, when they were leading the league with 11 victories and 4 defeats for a percentage of .733, the Browns met their arch-rivals, the Athletics and Yankees, in successive series and have lived to regret it. Two games of the Philadelphia series were rained out; the other resulted in a shut-out victory for Walberg, who beat Gray, the ace of Howley's staff. Yesterday, the Yankees also took gray to the washerman's to make it three straight over the Browns. Young Crowder, another good one, having been knocked off in the opener.

In consequence, the Browns have dropped in the percentage table a matter of 164 points in five days and now are in third place behind the Yankees, who found their hitting in the west to win six straight, and the Athletics, who also are enjoying a prosperous trip. The Browns, as a matter of fact, would have fallen into a virtual tie for fourth place yesterday if the Tigers hadn't lost to Washington.

The Braves won more ball games during the week than did the Browns, which wasn't difficult, but lost more points in the percentage table, 200 to be exact. It merely happened that they had more to lose. They were away out in front on Sunday, having beaten the Pirates in the first game of the western invasion to bring their percentage up to .800. Since then, the Pirates took two straight and then the Cardinals moved in to win two out of three.

When British Won Ryder Cup Matches

M. H. S. Track Team Faces Rival Today

Manchester Slight Favorite Because of All-Around Strength But Meriden Will Probably Take More Firsts; Margin Must Be Decisive to Indicate Outcome of League Meet.

What may or may not prove which school will win the Central Connecticut Interscholastic League track and field meet is taking place in Meriden this afternoon, weather permitting. It is necessary to include the latter clause with the weather we have been having lately. Manchester and Meriden High schools are slated to engage in a dual meet this afternoon at Handover Park beginning at 3 o'clock. It is a toss up which school will win, but unless one comes out on top by fifteen or twenty points, it will be hard telling which will emerge the winner in the league meet to be held at Wesleyan University in Middletown.

Hard to Forecast

For example, Meriden beat Manchester by three points in the dual meet last year but triumphed in the league meet by the narrow margin of only three points. It is almost impossible to predict the outcome of a league meet when the dual encounter between the two schools which are admitted to be the cream of the circuit are evenly matched because no one can tell which will suffer more from added competition.

Meriden will probably take more first places than Manchester this afternoon but that is no indication that it will win the meet. Manchester is believed to have a better balanced team so far as all-around strength is concerned. In case Meriden gets more firsts, Coach Charles L. Wigren has hopes of winning enough seconds and thirds to overcome the difference. Meriden has a chap named Hilding who is said to be a flash in the dashes and he is figured to beat Ernie Dowd in both the 100 and 220 although the local ace may spring a surprise. Meriden also figures to take the quarter mile pole vault and high jump with the half-mile and javelin being a toss-up. Of course, upsets are not entirely improbable.

May Sweep Events

Manchester is especially strong in the mile, shot, discus, and broad jump and there exists a possibility that it may obtain a clean sweep in at least two of these. If so, Meriden would find these points hard to overcome. Captain Joe McCluskey of the local team is considered a sure bet in the mile and Captain Reinhart and Ennerling of Meriden will be hard to dislodge in the quarter. Fred Marks, a lad who has been laid up with an injury, took part in the meet with West Hartford and grabbed third in the half mile although handicapped by lack of training. He may prove a hero in today's race.

There will be eleven events on the program with points for the first three places. On the basis of five, three and one, this makes a grand total of 99 possible points. The chances are that both schools will score 35 points. Manchester won its two meets with ease, beating Chapman Tech of New London 77 to 13 and West Hartford 77 to 22.

POPULAR, BECAUSE HE FIGHTS. His Chocolate popularity as a fighter is attributed to the fact that he is willing to fight any fighter at any time.

Games Next Week

Tuesday, May 14—Athletics vs. Dodgers.
Thursday, May 16—Braves vs. Cubs.

The Dodgers made a rather inauspicious start by being buried by the Braves 26 to 0 in the American Legion junior baseball league yesterday afternoon at the West Side playgrounds.

Johnny Hedlund, star twirler for the Braves allowed only one hit while his teammates pounded the delivery of Neubauer and Eagleson for 15. Both Neubauer, who is the smallest twirler in the league, and Eagleson, who had pitched for his grammar school team in the afternoon, received wretched support.

It was the first appearance of the Dodgers and they were a little disorganized. After a couple of games, they should make it interesting for the other teams.

The Braves backed up Hedlund in fine style, not an error being made during the entire seven innings.

Prior to the game, Sylvester Jackmore was chosen as captain of the Dodgers. The summary:

KNOWLTON CALM

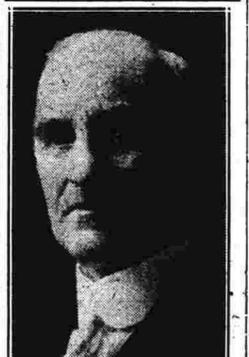

Boston, May 10—Sorrowful over the poor health of his father, Frederick Hinman Knowlton, Jr., owner of a battery station in Framingham, doomed to die in the electric chair next week for the slaying of Miss Marguerite Stewart, Beverly school teacher, today resigned to his fate. Knowlton, confined to the death house at Charlestown state prison, although calm and in perfect health, has expressed regret for his family. His aged father, who has not learned of his son's impending death in the electric chair, suffered a shock, and physicians said he may die.

The preparatory disarmament commission of the league forbids use of poison gas in the next war. Couldn't they also arrange to prevent shooting.

FRIGIDAIRE SALES BEAT ALL RECORDS

Although operating at twenty per cent above maximum rated capacity, plants of Frigidaire Corporation at Dayton, Ohio, are running behind orders, and sales for the year to date have exceeded by far all previous records, according to information received by The Home Electric Appliance Corp., local representatives.

April shipments of finished products totaled 1501 carloads, he said. Compared with the same month last year, these shipments showed an increase of 129 per cent in household electric refrigerators, 85 per cent in compressors, and 33 per cent in cooling coils. Present indications are that May will be another peak month in the company's history.

So great has been the factory's effort to meet this unprecedented increase in business that a Frigidaire compressor is finished and ready for shipment every 12 seconds of the working day. The present plants, comprising 53 acres of floor space, which were placed into operation in 1927, were considered at that time adequate for the requirements of the business for a long time. Already it is said, the absolute limit of production with present factory facilities has been reached.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

The try-outs for membership in Sock and Buskin club for the year 1929-30 will be held next Wednesday. As in past years those who try out will be required to give from memory one of several selections selected by the faculty advisor Miss M. A. Gist. The judges will be Miss Gist, Miss Estes and Miss McDonald, of the faculty, and three members of the class of 1930 who now hold membership in the club. Membership will be open only to members of the class of 1930 and 1931. Membership in the club is limited to 25 members, which means that almost twenty members will be selected from those trying-out next Wednesday.

Copy for the Commencement issue of Somanhis Events is now in the hands of the printer, and final pictures for the annual will be taken next week. The issue this year will contain 96 pages which is slightly larger than that of preceding years. Several new features have been inaugurated this year among which are the using of a theme plan, prepared by the engravers, the use of leather covers, and having two-tone printing ef-that can be done in student-coached plays.

The second play, coached by Dorothy Armstrong, was in a much lighter vein. Florence Schilgde played the part of a dashing young moving picture "extra" and Miss Armstrong played a similar part. Miss Schilgde gave her usual fine performance, and Miss Armstrong gave what was probably the best piece of acting ever given at a high school assembly. James Wilson although having only a small part, caused much laughter by his frequent but all too brief appearances on the stage.

The South Manchester Fire District Board of Relief will be in session next Tuesday from 4:15 to 5:15, standard time. As the South Manchester Fire District includes parts of several other school districts as well as all the settled part of the Ninth, the item of its boundaries is sometimes not always understood in detail and there is occasionally a question as to whether properties on the edge of the fire district are properly taxed. It is to give persons who doubt the correctness of their inclusion in the district tax lists opportunity to be heard that these sessions are held. Tuesday's meeting will be held at the Selectmen's office. The tax was voted last November.

St. Mary's Junior choir members are reminded of the rehearsal at 8:30 tonight at the parish house. The choir will assemble tomorrow at 9:45 to take part in the communion service at 10 o'clock. Girls Friendly societies from the Connecticut Diocese will be represented at the semi-annual meeting here tomorrow. The committee in charge of the convention arrangements includes Miss Agatha Wright, Miss Evaline Penland, Miss Dorothy Norris and Miss Helen Crawford.

Ever Ready Circle of Kings Daughters will hold its May meeting at the home of Mrs. A. P. Lydall, 22 Hudson street, Tuesday evening at 7:45.

Friends in town received news yesterday of the death of Mrs. John Fickett, mother of Mrs. Edward W. Urquhart of Boston, formerly of this town. Mrs. Fickett frequently visited her daughter here and was favorably impressed with Manchester.

The regular Friday evening class meeting will be held at the Church of the Nazarene this evening at 7:30.

Dilworth Cornell Post American Legion and auxiliary members will hold a joint meeting Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the State Armory. The entertainment and refreshments will be arranged for by a committee headed by Mrs. Mary Dannaher.

The Manchester Mothers Club will hold this evening at the South Methodist church its regular month business meeting and program. The speaker of the evening will be Philip Hansling, Jr., of Hartford. His subject will be "Trees." Mrs. George F. Borst, contralto, will sing Joyce Kilmer's poem, "To A Tree," with music by Carl Hahn. Mrs. Hayden Griswold is chairman of the committee of hostesses.

Manchester Grange, P.O.H., will conduct a whist party at the hall this evening at 8 o'clock. Six prizes will be awarded the winners. Refreshments and a social period will be followed by dancing.

AUTO SMASHES WINDOWS
 One hour after he had purchased a new Ford cabriolet, George Torrance, of 146 Walnut street, got into the car which was parked in front of the Manchester Motor Sales Company, stepped on the gas before releasing the clutch and smashed two plate glass windows in the Ford salesroom. In backing off the sidewalk the Ford scraped the running board of Dr. A. B. Moran's car, tearing the rubber covering slightly. Damage to the Ford was no more than a bent bumper and a flat rear tire. Torrance has been accustomed to an old style Ford and not a shift car.
