

TARIFF RATES START STREAM OF PROTESTS

Eight Nations Complain Over High Rates in New Bill; United States is Prepar- ing Answers.

Washington, June 4.—The high tide of foreign protest against the new tariff wall which is being erected through the Hawley bill has reached a stage where formal notes have been received from eight nations and informal representatives from five others.

None of these, it developed at the State Department today, have been answered.

The seven specific notes of protest over rates came from Cuba, Spain, Italy, Persia, Turkey, Australia and Egypt, while France has thus far contented herself with a protest against the American system of arriving at production costs.

Preparing Answer.

A note is understood to be in preparation by the State Department experts replying to the French complaint against evaluation of her commodities for customs purposes. Several notes have been exchanged on the subject, but the American government has not shown a tendency to accept the Quai d'Orsay point of view.

Cuba's protest is against the increased sugar tariff.

Other Protests.

Persia and Turkey would like to see the rug schedules pared down, while Italy is interested in bats and artificial silks. Australia's complaint is more or less general. She called to the attention of this government the effect on her trade balance if the tariff were increased on hides, wool and other commodities listed as necessities.

Egypt has an interest in cotton. Spain would like to have the United States repeal the law which required each article, no matter how small, to be stamped with the name of the country of origin.

Corks and stoppers would be affected by the repeal.

WEATHER CLEARING FOR OCEAN HOPS

Test Flights of Two Planes Finished—May Start To- morrow Morning.

Old Orchard Beach, Me., June 4.—The Yankee crew of the Remond monoplane "Green Flash," dine their friendly rivals, the French flyers of the Yellow Bird, here tonight.

The two tests and their three principle guests will have much on their minds. Not the least of their concerns will be prospects for a Wednesday morning hop-off on their respective trans-Atlantic ventures.

Weather reports early today indicated that mid-ocean storms were fast clearing and that the epochal air "race" to Europe, might start within 24 hours.

Finish Test Flights.

The test flights required by the two trans-Atlantic planes were completed today. The Yellow Bird made the last two brief air jaunts. Upon the first, the big French plane's motor was crippled by two non-functioning cylinders. Pilot Jean Assolant, bringing his ship safely back to the beach, set mechanics to work on the engine at once. They discovered that a small piece of rag, dropped by workmen, had been sucked into the intake valve and clogged one of the motor's six carburetors. The damage was promptly remedied.

The second flight took the French plane to a height of more than 7,000 feet. Snow and hail were encountered, but the ship came through the squalls successfully. Anti-ice devices functioned well.

TRIAL OF MRS. ADAMS TO START THIS TERM

Charged With Slaughtering Hus- band in Hartford—Other Cases in Court.

Hartford, June 4.—The Superior Court today opened its June term with a docket containing 225 cases. Court officials expected a Grand Jury to convene here on June 11 to consider the cases of two persons now being held as murderers. One is Mrs. Olive P. Adams, whose husband, Harry A. Adams, former head of the local Federal Weather office, was killed by chloroform last winter. The other is Frank di Battista, who is charged with having shot and killed Samuel Kamoroff, Hartford grocer, during an attempted hold-up late in March. Both have been held without bail since they were arrested.

INDIANA CRAB TREE HAS ROSE IN BLOOM.

Columbus, Ind., June 4.—A large white rose in full bloom and with perfect formation has grown out of a crabapple tree at the home of Enoch Magaw here.

The rose had no vine or plant and apparently obtained sustenance from the tree. Its fragrance was much stronger than that of the ordinary white rose. The flower was as large as a baseball.

CONGRESS MUST HELP FARMERS BEFORE RECESS

President Insists on This; Leaders Confer on Pro- gram to Give Members a Summer Vacation.

Washington, June 4.—A program for passing the new tariff bill through the Senate by November 1 and of finally enacting it into law by November 20 was proposed today by administration leaders as the next step in giving Congress an all-summer vacation.

If this program is accepted by insurgents and Democrats—which is entirely likely—Congress will go home from about June 11 to September 9, while the Senate finance committee worries with the tariff. The new farm relief bill, however, must be placed on the statute books before the curtain rings down on the first half of the special session, which President Hoover called to solve the farm and tariff problems.

Senate Called Back.

If the tariff program is rejected, Congress will recess during a part of the summer but the Senate will be brought back about August 15 in order to insure a final vote on the tariff before the special session ends next November. The House probably will be given a vacation, in that event, until September 15.

Public hearings on the tariff, which the Senate finance committee already has ordered, will begin June 12 and continue until July 10. The committee will divide into several sub-committees, which will conduct hearings simultaneously. When the hearings are closed, there will be several weeks of secret discussion by the full committee, after which the Republicans will draw up a bill and the Democrats will unite to propose various amendments.

POWER MEN'S REPLY TO FEDERAL PROBE

Speaker Urges Members to Adopt Reforms in At- titude Toward Public.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 4.—An echo of the Federal Trade Commission's recent probe into power company activities was seen here today in a speech delivered before the convention of the National Electric Light Association by J. F. Owens, vice-president of the Oklahoma Gas & Electric Company.

Owens, who is chairman of the Public Relations, National Section of the Association, urged the delegates to adopt four reforms in their attitude toward the public.

These are:

1.—The creation of measures designed to bring about the appointment in each state of a representative of the power industry who will pass upon all proposed measures of cooperation between schools and power industry.

2.—The discontinuance of information bureaus which have been in charge of distribution of all news relating to the power industry.

3.—More efficient cooperation within our organization to assure sound development of relations with educational institutions, free from legitimate criticism.

4.—Encouragement of managers which will lead to the pronouncement of "educational administrators" of national prominence and standing of guiding principles to control future cooperative activities involving educational institutions.

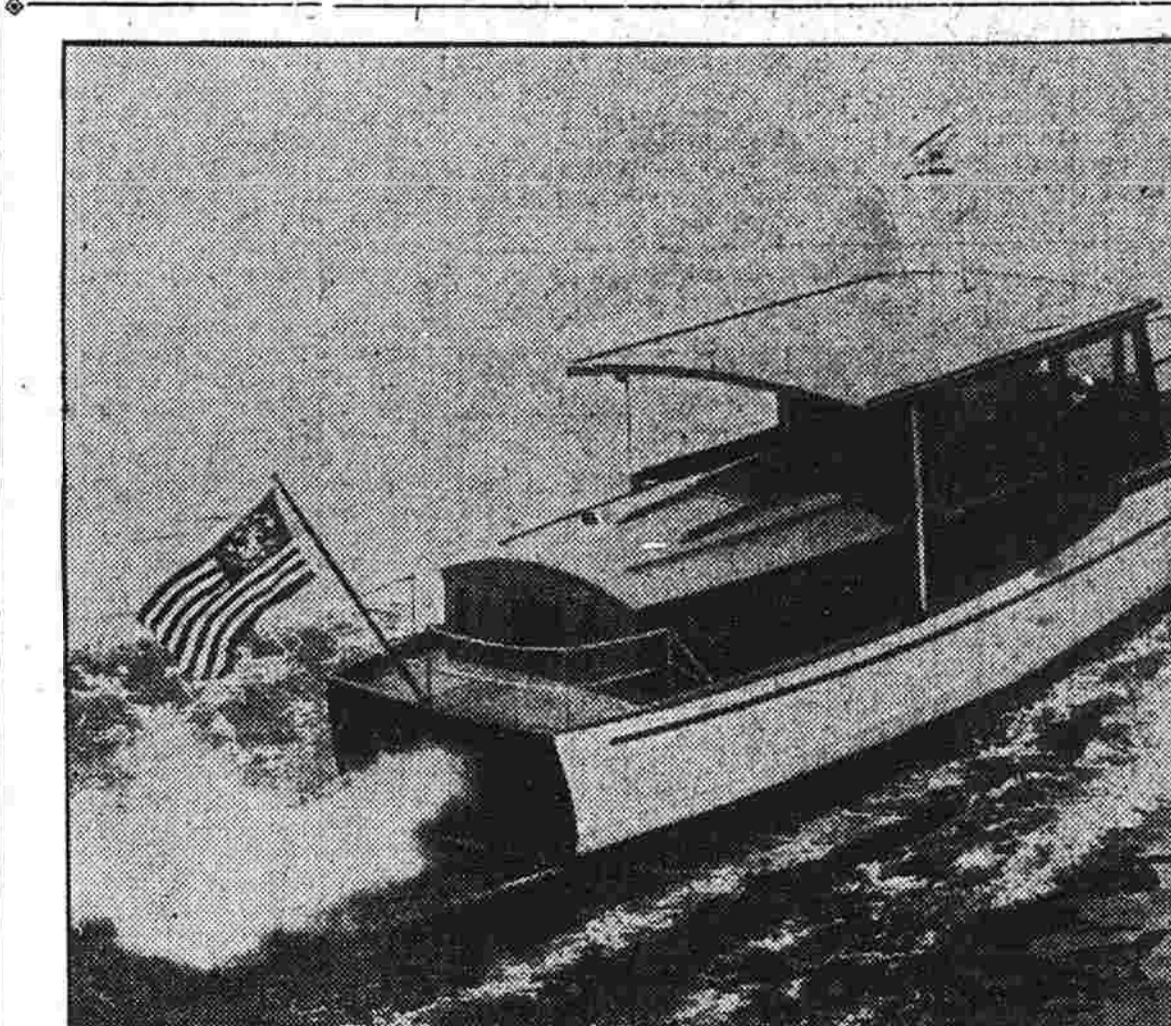

The proposed reforms were part of a program proposed by Owens which is designated to meet the criticism leveled at the power industry during the past year.

DIVORCEE WEDS

Newport, R. I., June 4.—Mrs. Cathine Livingston Hamersley Drayton, wealthy divorcee was married to C. Whitney Carpenter, coffee magnate and a member of the New York Stock Exchange here today less than two hours after the bride's final decree of divorce was signed.

This is the bride's third matrimonial venture and the bridegroom's second.

IS THIS LINDY'S HONEYMOON BOAT?

This may be the elusive Lindbergh's honeymoon boat. For a "tall blond young man"—virtually identified as the flying colonel—stopped at Block Island, off Newport, R. I., "didn't talk much," just ordered gasoline for this motor launch and then sailed away. The speedy, 35-foot, two-cabin cruiser "Mouette" pictured here was bought recently by Colonel Lindbergh and it was believed that he and his bride have been spending their honeymoon on the waters of Long Island Sound.

LINDYS REPORTED OFF WOODS HOLE

Motor Yacht Said to Be Home of Honeymooners Slips Out of Harbor.

Woods Hole, Mass., June 4.—As mysteriously as it came, a motor yacht said by Coast Guardsmen to be the "Mouette," the supposed honeymoon craft of Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, slipped out of the harbor here today.

The destination of the yacht or whether the famous "We" were aboard were not known.

The cabin motor yacht entered the harbor here under cover of darkness last evening about 9 p. m. When the haze cleared and today the look-out in the tower at the Coast Guard base picked out the word "Mouette" on the yacht through his glasses.

The craft was anchored about a mile off shore. No one came ashore from the yacht.

One Man on Deck.

The look-out said he could see one man on the deck. The look-out said he thought that the man on the deck of the yacht, somewhat resembled Lindbergh, but he was not sure. Before small boat's could be put out to the craft, the lone man aboard weighed anchor and left the harbor. He headed toward the sea and the direction he took after going out of sight of land was not known.

While the yacht was leaving port here watch was being kept on Cape Cod Canal from Buzzard's Bay to Sanwich by persons who hope to catch a glimpse of the honeymooners. Hundreds of motorists had kept nearly an all night vigil seated in automobiles along both banks of the canal, ready to give Lindy and Anne a joyous serenade.

The presence of the yacht here, identified by the Coast Guardsmen as Lindbergh's "Mouette," followed reports yesterday that the "honeymooners" had called at Block Island on Saturday for gasoline, water and ginger ale.

However another report had placed the famous bride couple in Norfolk, Conn., in the foothills of the Berkshire hills, Saturday afternoon and Sunday.

ELECTRIC LIGHT MEN LAUD THOMAS EDISON

Speaker Urges Industry to Follow the Example Set by Noted Inventor.

Atlantic City, N. J., June 4.—With approximately 10,000 persons attending, representing electrical enterprises from all over the United States and Canada, the first general business session of the National Electric Light Association opened today in the new Atlantic City auditorium here.

The session was opened by Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Co., who paid a tribute to Thomas A. Edison. He urged that Mr. Edison's example of patience and perseverance be followed by all men of the industry and that industry be patient with its critics.

An innovation was the address by Sir Ernest Benn, of London, England, noted economist and publicist, who appeared in a talkie picture, which he might be tempted to put upon paper again and recount further adventures of Sherlock.

Zep Will Fly To The Pole From Alaska

Los Angeles, Cal., June 4.—That the Graf Zeppelin will make a flight to the North Pole next year, was revealed here today by Ernest W. Sawyer, executive assistant to Secretary of Interior Wilbur. The Graf Zeppelin will fly from Leningrad to Fairbanks, Alaska, where a mooring mast is to be erected. Fairbanks will be the base for the Graf Zeppelin in its Polar flights.

The International Society for the exploration of the Arctic regions has contracted for the use of the Graf Zeppelin for the Polar flights.

BUS SERVICE HERE TO START SUNDAY

Cross Town and Manchester Green Trolley Lines to Be Discontinued.

Trolley cars on the cross town and Manchester Green lines will be discontinued Saturday night and starting Sunday they will be replaced by Connecticut Company buses. It was not intended to make this change until July 1, but the work now being done by utility companies on Main street, convinced the Connecticut company after a few days trial that it was not going to be possible to continue to run the cars and allow the work to be carried on.

Break in Motormen.

The first information that there was likely to be a change soon came yesterday when two of the trolley men, Henry Slayden, the extra day man on the cross town and the Manchester Green line, was called to Hartford to start to learn the operation of the Connecticut company buses. George Cleveland, another man on the cross town line at nights was also called in.

Two Busses.

This noon Superintendent N. J. Scott of the Hartford division told The Herald that starting Sunday buses would be sent to Manchester to take care of the passengers on the "cross town and Manchester Green line. The company, Mr. Scott said, would have two busses here on Sunday.

Sherlock Holmes Is Dead, Famous Novelist Asserts

London, June 4.—Sherlock Holmes is dead—absolutely, irrevocably dead. Never again will poor Watson murmur his bewilderment.

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, creator of the most famous character in detective fiction, is authority for this statement. In an interview with the International News Service on his seventieth birthday, Sir Arthur declared the world must expect no further Sherlock Holmes fiction.

"No, Holmes is dead this time," the famous author said when asked whether he might be tempted to put upon paper again and recount further adventures of Sherlock.

SINCLAIR TO HAVE COMPANY IN JAIL

Henry Day to Join His Boss; Younger Burns is Fined $1,000.

Washington, June 4.—The "auto a block long" is going to roll up to the district jailhouse about a month from today and unload some company for Harry F. Sinclair, pharmacist-extraordinary to the institution. The visit is to be a four-month affair.

For that dashing soldier of fortune, Henry Day, is going to join his boss. It will take 25 days, not counting Sundays, for the Supreme Court's mandate to reach the court that originally sentenced him.

More Company.

Day will have company as far as the marshal's office in the person of W. Sherman Burns, who is to be relieved of $1,000 under the same mandate, but he will have to get along without the presence of William J. Burns. The Supreme Court ruled the 15-day sentence on the elder detective out on the ground no evidence had been adduced that he actually participated in the jury-shadowing episode that resulted in the downfall of Day and young Burns.

Sentence Increased.

And, by token of the privilege of his lieutenant's company, Sinclair's own stay in the jail is going to be increased a matter of from four to six months, depending upon the court's interpretation of the verdict. He was to have gotten out on July 20, but Thanksgiving turkeys will be on sale before he sees the unblemished light of day again.

It all grew out of Sinclair's over-anxiety when he and former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall were standing trial for criminal conspiracy in connection with the leasing of the Naval oil reserves. The oil baron called in Day and instructed him to have the jury shadowed. Day put the William J. Burns detective agency on the job.

Reporter Gives Tip.

Messrs. Roberts and Pomerene, the Federal prosecutors, found it out, and almost simultaneously a newspaper reporter came forward and told of a conversation he had with one of the jurors in a local speakeasy in which the juror speculated on the possibility of "releasing an auto a block long" out of the case.

Justice F. L. Siddons immediately declared a mistrial and U. S. Attorney Leo Rover successfully prosecuted them for criminal contempt of court, Sinclair drawing six months, Day four months, W. J.

KING GEORGE ACCEPTS BALDWIN RESIGNATION

Two Killed, 3 Hurt By Dynamite Blast

North Bergen, N. J., June 4.—Two men were killed and three injured, one seriously, in a premature explosion of dynamite today in the stone quarry of the Belmont-Gurnee Stone Company, in the Granton section of North Bergen, Hudson County, N. J.

The dead: J. Palmisano, and P. Palmisano, his brother.

The victims of the explosion were taken into the North Hudson hospital, Union City. They were unconscious and badly mutilated and cut by the blast. Hospital authorities did not know their names.

Windows in homes and industrial plants in the little community of Granton, where the quarry is located, were shattered by the explosion. Families in the 300 houses clustered near the quarry fled in panic into the open, believing, at first that they were manacled by an earthquake, so violent was the shock.

Smoke belched out over the Haskensack river and could be seen for miles.

Jersey City, Secaucus, Weehawken, Hoboken, Ridgewood Park and Little Ferry all reported feeling the shock.

WOMEN TO GET CONTROL OF HOUSE IN 25 YEARS

Congresswoman McCormick So Predicts; Encouraged by Success of Women in the British Elections.

Washington, June 4.—Feminine control of the House in 25 years! American women, keenly alive to their political responsibilities and vitally interested in their government, will move steadily forward in the arena of public affairs and in 25 years will either have more than fifty per cent of the membership at the House of Representatives—or very close to it—Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican Congresswoman from Illinois, predicted today.

They then would be in position to control the purse strings of the nation and dictate its legislative course.

The prediction comes just after the British elections in which women candidates for Parliament scored tremendous gains, and the commencement of a fight in Pennsylvania to elect Mrs. John J. Casey to her late husband's seat in the House.

Represents Whole State.

Mrs. McCormick, who is the only member of the House "Feminine Bloc" to represent an entire state—she being a Congresswoman at large—is not more enthusiastic than other Congresswomen over woman's share in the government.

She is Mrs. Florence Kahn, California Congresswoman, who believes that the present "Feminine Bloc" of eight will not exceed 25 in the next ten or twenty years.

"I fully believe that more than 50 per cent of the members of the House 25 years from now will be women," said Mrs. McCormick.

"I believe this because of the vast interest which women now are taking in politics and in public life, and because of the manner in which their participation has been welcomed."

"It is only a few years since women were given the ballot and first appeared extensively in public life. Each year sees further progress made. The first woman member of the House broke a great barrier."

Courtesy Shown.

"In my experience in the House I cannot find the least trace of resistance to the presence of women members. Every courtesy and consideration is shown the women members."

"In my own state there has been a noticeable change. The leaders of the party counsel and they are very anxious that appointments meet with the approval of the women because they are learning to value their judgment."

"Women are very well adapted to politics and public life. They are conscientious and they are aggressive. Through the women's organization they are learning to become ready debaters and acquire mastery of the art of terse presentation of public questions."

No Sex Difference.

"I do not believe in considering sex differences in politics. Women should and must seek preferment which deals in millions and billions. Woman handle the purse strings of the home and know the value of money, she says."

A. E. BOUNTY DEAD

Premier and His Conserva- tive Cabinet Quit Posts; Monarch Summons J. Ramsay MacDonald to Form a New Government; Much Conjecture as to Make-up of New Cabinet.

Windsor, England, June 4.—Premier Stanley Baldwin presented his resignation and that of his Conservative Cabinet to King George today. The king accepted it.

The Conservative Party had been in power for slightly more than four and one-half years. The Labor Party will now come into control by virtue of the big gain in parliamentary power made by that party in Thursday's general election. While the Laborites will not have a clear cut majority in the new House of Commons, they will have more seats than any other party.

It was expected that King would summon J. Ramsay MacDonald, leader of the Labor Party, and commission him to form a new government, with himself as premier.

However, it was understood that the King's medical advisors believed it would not be advisable for the ailing monarch to bear the strain of a second interview today. It was regarded as probable that Mr. MacDonald would not be received by King George until tomorrow.

Mr. MacDonald was premier of the Labor government that was ousted from power by the Conservatives in 1924 when Stanley Baldwin was appointed prime minister. Woman Minister.

It is confidently believed that there will be a woman minister in the new government, thus setting a precedent in British politics.

Reports were current during the political campaign that, if the Laborites came into power, Miss Susan Lawrence might become England's first woman Cabinet minister. She is slated, it is said, for the post of Minister of Health. However, another woman was mentioned with equal prominence. She is Mrs. Margaret Bondfield, long a prominent figure in labor circles and a member of the last House of Commons. She was re-elected in the recent general election.

As to the Cabinet.

There is much speculation as to the make-up of the new government.

It is believed in some quarters that the post of foreign secretary will be offered to Arthur Henderson and that Philip Snowden will return to the portfolio he held in the previous Labor government—the Chancellorship of the Exchequer.

The chief policies of the Labor government are expected to follow more or less closely the principles laid down by Mr. MacDonald on election day at International News Service. They include:

Furtherance of world disarmament; Britain to abide by the war debt agreement with the United States; speedy withdrawal of the British occupational troops from German soil and a general policy of world peace.

Miss Wills' Statement.

Miss Wills has been appearing in bare legs upon the French courts. "I have been playing regularly in California without stockings," said Helen while she was in London. "All the girls do so there and think nothing of it. In warm weather it is much more comfortable. I haven't and discharge the duties of public office as representatives of all."

Mrs. McCormick declines to agree with the frequent prediction that women's lack of knowledge of finance handicaps her in a government which deals in millions and billions. Woman handle the purse strings of the home and know the value of money, she says.

HIT, RUN DRIVER KILLED KERISKI

So Finds Coroner G. Gilbert Calhoun Whose Report Is Made Today.

Coroner S. Gilbert Calhoun of Hartford County, to whom was referred all findings in connection with the unexplained death of Bruno Keriski, who was found between the trolley rails west of the former home of Justice Olin R. Wood in Buckland early on the morning of Sunday, May 5, today concluded the case. He finds the death caused by persons unknown and attributes the cause to a hit and run automobile driver.

A trolley car in charge of George Tedford, motorman, was returning to Hartford at 1:10 on Sunday morning when Mr. Tedford noticed what he thought was an old bag in the center of the trolley rails. He applied his brakes, but the rails were wet and the car traveled over 100 feet before it could be brought to a stop. When the car did stop the body was found twenty-five feet to the rear of it.

RUNNERS TRY TO BURN SHIP TO FLEE GUARD

New Bedford, Mass., June 4.—How a crew of six alleged liquor smugglers applied a torch to the well-known fishing schooner John M. Hathaway of Nantucket when she was taken to the United States Coast Guard destroyer Wilkes, when the Coast Guardmen put out the blaze and captured the men from the Hathaway after they had put off in dories was the story that came today from the Coast Guard base at New London, Conn.

ABOUT TOWN

A complaint was received by the police last night that a pair of calves which had already been butchered and had been brought to Manchester, were being dressed in front of Gordon's store on North Main street. Officer Michael Fitzgerald, who was delegated to make an investigation arrived after the calves had been taken away. He found that blood on the sidewalk had been cleaned with sawdust. The officer gave orders that the walk be scrubbed and advised against further beef dressing on the sidewalks of Manchester.

TOURISTS FIND IMPROVEMENT IN FRENCH HOTELS

Paris — American visitors to France this summer will not be obliged to grumble too loudly at the inconveniences of French hotels in as well as large centers.

The celebrated Hotel de la Cite at Carcassonne, one of the finest in Europe, housed 13,000 people last year, although the minimum price is five dollars per day, and there are many small but clean hotels in the village. One at Tours registered 35,000 and another in Avignon 23,000.

It is interesting to notice that in recent years, French hotels which were formerly mostly run by foreigners, are now chiefly in the hands of Frenchmen who are learning the psychology of hotel-keeping and how to please every nationality which comes to them.

French women read far more than the men, according to recent observations made in the Paris subways. At the midday and evening business rush-hours, almost every woman has her eyes in a book, usually carried in a fancy leather protector and she reads it incessantly all during her underground journey.

MABEL EDGED OUT

And now it is reported that it was Attorney-General Mitchell, definitely backed by President Hoover, who edged Mabel Walker Willebrandt out of her job, and not alone Mrs. Willebrandt's desire for more money that led to her resignation. Mrs. Willebrandt, with the joyous forces of the Anti-Saloon League and the W. C. T. U. cheering her on, had firmly expected to be placed in full control of all prohibition activities when the Prohibition Bureau is transferred from the Treasury Department to the Department of Justice according to Mr. Hoover's plan. No other issue had been anticipated. But neither Mr. Hoover nor Mr. Mitchell had any such idea in mind. On the contrary, it is stated on very reliable authority, they had completely different plans. And so occasion was taken by Mr. Mitchell to let Mrs. Willebrandt know that when the prohibition merger came somebody else was going to sit at its wheel. As was to have been expected, with her soaring ambition thus suddenly dashed in ice water, she resigned. Which is said to have suited not only Mr. Mitchell but Mr. Hoover perfectly.

Attorney-General Mitchell is a dry. He is anxious to achieve as full a measure of prohibition enforcement as possible. And he does not conceive it to make for better enforcement to have the administration of prohibitory law hand-capped by the perpetual buzzing around the throne of a swarm of small calibre and noisy fanatics far more interested in the pleasurable excitement of conflict and in shining in the spotlight than in an effective reduction of the liquor habit among the people of the country. To the perpetual exasperation of millions of good citizens and to the effect of being a constant challenge to all liberal minded persons. The extent to which prohibition can be enforced is, of course, problematical. Nobody would be quicker than Mr. Hoover to agree with that. But that a far more effectual attempt at enforcement than has been made is possible will hardly be denied by the most opinionated enemy of prohibition—provided there can be eliminated from the situation the shouting fanatics who have been permitted so loud a voice in the undertaking up to this time. And precisely such a course of elimination is believed by the well-informed to be the policy of this administration. Getting rid of Mabel was, in all probability, only the first step.

AUTOCRATIC

Suit brought by a Branford lawyer against Highway Commissioner Macdonald is astonishing only in the fact that it isn't the thousandth of such actions as a result of the arbitrary attitude of the Highway Department in its relations with property owners affected by alteration of road layouts. If the state is to build first class roads it is, of course, inevitable that private individuals shall be inconvenienced now and then and even that occasionally sentimental values shall be encroached upon without the possibility of full compensation. But the sufferer by road improvement is entitled to the last degree of proper payment when his property is taken and the state of Connecticut should be the last entity to assume an autocratic and unfair position toward its citizens in such matters. If the state can afford to build highways practically without regard to construction costs it can afford to pay for property seized in the process—and to pay neither recklessly nor meagrely but fairly and with any margin of error on the side of liberality. There have been plenty of instances, however, when the Highway Department has treated property owners whose land has been taken not only with scant generosity but in a brusque and cavalier manner well calculated to arouse resentment and animosity. It is a wonder that there has been such general submission without recourse to the courts. We know nothing about the merits of the Branford case, but it is something of a commentary on the reputation of the Highway Department that there is a very general inclination to boost for the suit, who is attacking the validity of the statute giving the commissioner the right to lay out boundaries for trunk lines or state aid roads whenever he believes the boundaries to have been lost or to be uncertain.

MME. SCHWIMMER

A rather sickening lot of raving has been done within the last week by pacifist extremists over the decision of the United States Supreme Court denying the right of American citizenship to Rosika Schwimmer, Hungarian agitator for pacifism. It is extraordinary how violent and unpacific some of these peace lovers can become on occasion. We can almost envision any one of several of them punching the honorable supreme court on its collective nose for this ruling, they are so angry.

Unhappily, they are as wrong as they are angry. They quite forget that Mme. Schwimmer, through the fact of her being born elsewhere, missed a certain privilege, which they themselves enjoy—that of being citizens without being required to take an oath to support the Constitution of the United States. It is entirely competent for an American-born citizen to be a pacifist and a good citizen at the same time, because he has never, perhaps, sworn to uphold the Constitution. But the alien who becomes a citizen of this country must, according to American naturalization law, take an oath to do so. And the alien who comes here and preaches that it is a laudable thing to refuse to do military duty is not upholding or even subscribing to the Constitution, because the Constitution of the United States provides for the maintenance of a militia and a standing army.

It is the height of impertinence for an alien to demand, as a right, American citizenship or citizenship in any country other than the one in which he or she is born. American citizenship is not, to an alien, a right, it is a gift, it is a privilege. And it just happens that this particular alien is a mischief maker as well as being cheeky. Her record may endeavor her to a bunch of sensation seeking New York City pulpsters, but we are quite as well pleased that she is to remain in law what she would always be in fact, an alien.

"QUEER" MONEY

The new nuisance currency, which some economical genius in the Treasury department has succeeded in wishing on the country, to its inevitable harassment and at a probable net expense many times greater than the saving in paper, is to be sprung July 10, so it is now announced. National bank notes will still continue to be of their present size for a little while longer. And the two conflicting currencies, one little and the other big, will travel together, to the vexation of souls, for goodness knows how long. Nobody can even guess how many years it will be before the last of the present size paper money comes out of its hiding places. Redemption cannot be forced by law or in any other way. Meantime, there is scarcely a doubt that counterfeiters will make haste to get in their work. The new money will look queer at first, to all of us. And with a floor of queer looking money emerging and pouring over the country the loveliest of possible opportunities will exist to add to it a considerable volume or money just a little queerer. Favorably disposed statisticians have loaded us all up with figures showing how many hundreds of millions of dollars the government is going to save in paper, ink, etc., by making the new money smaller all around—during the next thousand years. If they could weigh the damage to public manners and temples that is going to result from the infliction of this stupendous inconvenience, and compare the gain with the loss, the result would be edifying, we expect, to his Satanic Majesty.

HER SECURITIES

The fact that the fire department of Brooklyn, N. Y., answered forty alarms in three hours on Sunday is a matter which will primarily interest, more than anybody else in these parts, those enthusiastic fire fighters of our own department who wait for months, almost for years, for a blaze which is capable of giving them one of those delightful battles for which the soul of the true smoke eater yearns. Or very general interest, however, is a circumstance connected with one of these fires because it is illustrative of a phase of human nature extremely common. An apartment house was aflame and a two-story wooden dwelling next door was in imminent peril of falling walls. A woman, a tenant in the wooden house, who with the others had been evicted by the firemen, insisted on returning to get some valuable securities which she said, she had left inside. She made such a fuss that finally firemen accompanied her into the dwelling, above which leaned the apartment house wall already three feet out of plumb. When she came out, alive, with her "securities," they proved to consist of a $10 bill and two strawberry shortcakes.

For these this woman was willing to hazard not only her own life but those of two firemen. She was exactly like a huge number of other people in that she utterly lacked that quality without which civilization will always go a-limping—a sense of proportion.

IN NEW YORK

New York, June 4.—Recently I have been permitted to scan the diary of a youngster who, for about two weeks, has been "on her own" in Manhattan.

And it has told me a lot about the city of which I try to write for, it seems to me, that this may be a more-or-less typical experience of a girl of intelligence who has come to the big city. Her home is Texas and her background sound. Of course she wants to "get along" and she has a certain amount of timidity, and even fear. But she also has courage and good sense. But what got me was the manner in which people from every place under the globe somehow or other find each other here. In my own case, for instance, any number of ex-San Franciscans live within a few blocks of each other, and I feel close to them than anyone I have known since coming east.

However—to get back to the diary. I have permission to use a few of the more impersonal extracts. "Three days in New York. And already I am living with an old Houstonian. Funny how small this town can be—and yet seem so large and foreboding. She's a woman who ran a cafeteria in Houston and I used to eat there. "Quite by accident I dropped into a restaurant here—and she was running it. Funny, too, I should have been looking for a place to live at the time. I couldn't afford most of the rooms I saw. And I didn't want to live alone if I could help it. And I have no close friends. We were so glad to see each other's necks. I used to talk with her a lot in Houston, but she had come from Dallas, and so had I. "A very intelligent—and motherly person. She has a good college background and went into business. She let me rent a room in her apartment. And it's amusing the way she looks after me—and broods like a mother hen. "That's another funny thing about New York—the way people want to look after you when they find you're a girl alone, just starting out. I hardly know what to do about it. I'm really gullible. I believe people. And I've been warned so much about New York and its people. I won't want to hurt people who really want to help me, and I don't want to be taken in. I wonder how many of them really want to take me in. "Seems as though I was always running across Texans. I got a note from a young man I know on the Houston Press to one of the editors of the New York Telegram. When I went to present it, I saw a reporter who had worked in Houston. Out there, he didn't know I was alive. But when he saw me standing there he seemed so tickled that he all but kissed me. I'm going out to dinner with him tonight. "It's funny, too, how middle-aged women here get motherly. If this is the hard-boiled town I was told, I have yet to find it out. I'm sure it doesn't mean to be—it must just "get" that way. I was recommended to an advertising agency. And the woman I talked to insisted that she had "discovered" me—whatever that may mean—and she couldn't rest until she had tried to get me a job with a house organ of the firm which promised to pay considerably more money than I thought could be made here. There seems to be a notion around New York that people from out-of-town are fresher and fuller of promise than those in town—I always had the notion that an outsider had no chance—yet I find them really bothered less a prospective "find" get away from them. . . . Not that I'm a find. . . . "And so it goes. Everyone presenting a protecting wing. Not a city slicker or a villain to date. And human kindness pouring out at every hand. . . . Yet I've heard stories that sound strangely different. Or it may all be in the girl. GILBERT SWAN.

Among other unbecoming costumes was the cloak of secrecy the United States Senate tried to wear in the LeRoux case. Reporters are fighting to have the garment checked at the door. The MARQUETTE is the wonder car of the year. A BUICK-built six of such beauty of design and excellent performance that it will be an outstanding favorite over cars of comparable price. Birds of a Different Feather!

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, June 4.—The Interstate Commerce Commission presumably will have to shoot in the dark with its railroad valuation decisions until it finally hits a scheme of valuation which a majority of the United States supreme court can approve. The court's recent decision in the case of the St. Louis & O'Fallon railroad, while it doubtless has encouraged railroad and other public utilities owners who always yearn for higher rates and greater profits, probably will not in itself affect the railroad rate structures at this time. Nevertheless, the decision has forced the I. C. C. to do a lot of work all over again and has put off the day which will determine whether the railroad must surrender or be permitted to retain millions of dollars which is claimed by the government under the recapture provisions of the Transportation Act which allow them a profit of 2 1/2 per cent. Some of the recapture money has been paid, but railroad have held out a lot more. It's Still Unsettled Those are the immediate results of the O'Fallon decision, in case anyone has been confused. The supreme court has left up in the air the question of how a regulating body should value a public utility for rate-making purposes. It said the I. C. C. decision in the O'Fallon case was wrong because it didn't take in the cost of reproduction factor, but failed to say to what extent that factor should be allowed to count. The court has been leaving the issue up in the air for 30 years. In 1898, the famous case of Smyth v. Ames, it enumerated several factors, including "the present as compared with the original cost of construction" and said that these were "all matters for consideration, and are to be given such weight as may be just and right in each case." That decision, of course, left it up to the court in the event of final appeal to determine whether or not each of these factors had been given proper weight. It gave rate-fixing commissions no yardstick to go by and they had to make up their own. In the O'Fallon decision the court devoted itself principally to rebuking the I. C. C. for not taking the reproduction cost factor into account. Justice Stone, in his dissenting opinion, suggested in effect that the I. C. C., by wording its decision differently, could have avoided this objection, but it appears to have been the idea of the commission that the problem ought to be publicly threshed out. If so, it was an admirable aim. But the court now virtually leaves the I. C. C. back in 1898 with Smyth vs. Ames. Justice Brandeis, in his dissenting opinion, says that the majority of the court held that the rate base should be the actual value and his conception of its idea has not been contradicted. Members of the I. C. C. point out, however, that actual value fluctuates from year to year and that it is always a terrific job to determine it. The court's majority opinion went out of its way, incidentally, to admit that no doubt the actual value of some railroads would have to be placed "far below the cost of reproduction."

A Tough Problem As long as the supreme court continues to lay down no general rule as to the relative weight which rate-making bodies should give to various valuation factors, it is likely to be up against such a problem as would be presented if a state commission in one state gave reproduction cost 60 per cent weight in determining a utility valuation and another in another state gave a similar utility's reproduction cost only five per cent weight—and both cases were carried to the supreme court. Such an occurrence would make it much more difficult for the court to maintain its present position.

But the court has changed its attitude before. Away back in the seventies, in the case of Munn vs. Illinois, one of the Granger cases, it held that it wasn't up to the courts to determine the fairness of utility rates, but to the legislatures.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY
 THE MEANING OF ACIDOSIS
 The blood of the human body must remain alkaline during life, and serious illness result when the presence of acids in the blood stream reduce it toward a neutral chemical reaction. Actual acidity of the blood stream never occurs during life, for if it did it would quickly result in death. The term "acidosis" covers a number of things, but it frequently is used to indicate a lessened alkalinity of the blood. We know that the blood is formed out of what we eat, drink, and breathe. Some foods leave more alkaline and some leave more acid end products to be eliminated. The acidity or alkalinity of the food before it is eaten has no connection with the reaction after it is consumed. The fruit acids, for instance, are converted into carbonic acid just as are the sugars, and this acid is thrown out by the lungs as carbon dioxide and does not make the body acid. On the other hand, other foods containing an abundance of phosphorus, sulphur, nitrogen, or chlorine, may leave an acid reaction after being consumed, even though they are alkaline before being eaten. Many doctors are coming to the belief that a strong alkaline reaction of the blood is one of the best defenses of the body against many diseases. This can only be accomplished by eating a large quantity of the alkaline-forming foods. Some acid-forming foods may be eaten and are in fact necessary, but they should be less abundant. When acidosis occurs from eating too much acid-forming food, we observe a strongly acid urine, acid sweat, acid mouth and sour stomach. Some of the symptoms may be headache, biliousness, heart burn, insomnia, and irritability. Often some disease is produced, usually heart trouble, kidney disease, liver congestion, high blood pressure, hardening of the arteries, apoplexy, and poor circulation. The human race has existed for a long time, even without knowing anything about the chemistry of foods. This is because the eliminative organs maintain a delicate adjustment of the blood's chemistry and eliminate an excess of alkali or acid. It is difficult for one who is not an expert chemist to understand the exact changes which take place with food substances in the body while they are undergoing assimilation. It is my desire to give my readers the benefit of scientific research in the chemical laboratories, but I do not think it wise to use too many scientific terms which may prove confusing. In tomorrow's article I will give my readers a list of the alkaline-forming and acid-forming foods and the proportion of each that should be used. You will then realize from another viewpoint why I recommend so many of the leafy green vegetables. QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Mustard) Question: I. E. R. writes: "I am very fond of mustard and would

CONVICT SHIP TO STAY IN HARTFORD 2 WEEKS

Open for Inspection Daily, Including Sunday, Between 10 a. m. and 11 p. m.

The old British convict ship, "Success," oldest ship afloat, is now an exhibition at the foot of State street, Hartford. She will remain there another ten days or two weeks, open daily, including Sunday, from 10 a. m. to 11 p. m. Last remnant of the vast fleet of proud East India merchant vessels which carried rare spices, silks and incense from the decadent East to Europe, the "Success" is also the sole remaining relic of the grim fleet of hellships which bore 167,000 men, women and children to torture in the Antipodes, and the oldest and most interesting ship afloat in the world.

Today, a museum graphically illustrating the tale of man's inhumanity to man, in her 139th year, the old vessel is fulfilling the last years of her life educating mankind to greater gentleness to mankind. The famous vessel, built in 1790 in the shadow of Kipling's Moulmein pagoda in British Burma, has been fitted with hundreds of electric lights which enable visitors to see and examine her many exhibits by night as well as by day. A corps of expert lecturers and guides accompany visitors throughout the three decks of the ship explaining the many points of interest at length.

A trip through the old yellow hulk which crossed the broad Atlantic under her own sail in 96 days, seems to turn back the clock to the Middle Ages. Here, in their original state, are preserved the cells and dungeons in which men and women were confined; the instruments used to torture them and the official records of their crimes, trials and sufferings. Visitors are first directed into the officers' quarters beneath the high quarter deck. Here are old handcuffs, locks, keys and scores of priceless original documents relative to the trial, deportation and confinement of famous prisoners. Here, too, are autographs of kings and Queen Victoria of England, etchings and rare woodcuts showing the treatment of prisoners in the older days and ancient muskets and weapons of assault.

On the main deck, immediately outside the officers' quarters, visitors are shown the original leg irons used aboard the Convict Ship when she was engaged in transporting men, women and children from England and Ireland to the far shores of Australia for terms of exile that were never less than seven years and ranged to the dreaded "term of their natural lives." These leg irons vary in weight from seven to 55 pounds. Some are attached to heavy punishment balls which refractory prisoners were forced to drag around the deck during their one hour's exercise out of each twenty-four. The original pumps of the ship, still used to keep her free from water, and utilized with remarkable success during her memorable trip across the Atlantic, may be seen a few feet away. The original mainmast, of solid Burmes teak—like the other timbers of the ship—still stands, even though it is scarred with the indentation of a pirate's cannon ball way back in 1800. The giant ringed stone, to which a score or more convicts from the "Success" were chained while quarrying stone in Australia occupies a position amidships. Many of the public buildings in Australia today are monuments to convict labor.

The shot marked massive armor, fashioned and worn by New Kelly, the Australian prototype of Jesse James, hangs a bit forward. Though protected by his armor Kelly was shot through the arms and legs and captured, later to be hung. The old and original hogging frame and triangle to which hundreds of unfortunates were manacled, and the cat of nine tails used to whip them, as well as the "cotton bath," into which they were dipped in brine, occupy other parts of the main deck. The fore hatchway, where a primitive elevator was used to raise the heavily shackled prisoners to the upper deck, and the ancient windless, still in working order, are compelling exhibits.

Relics of the middle ages, torture instruments from continental bastilles, a door from Newgate prison, London, and, on the quarter deck, the famous iron Maiden of medieval history, are fascinating sights before going below. On the two lower decks are cells, rows of them, and each cell has its own story from the lips of the guide. If the cells could but talk, each could undoubtedly tell a hundred or more stories. On the 'tween deck are the prison chapel and the prison dispensary—merely larger cells into which the prisoners were taken for their spiritual and physical ills. Also on this deck is the "Tigers Den," where the most ferocious of the prisoners were herded "to fight it out among themselves."

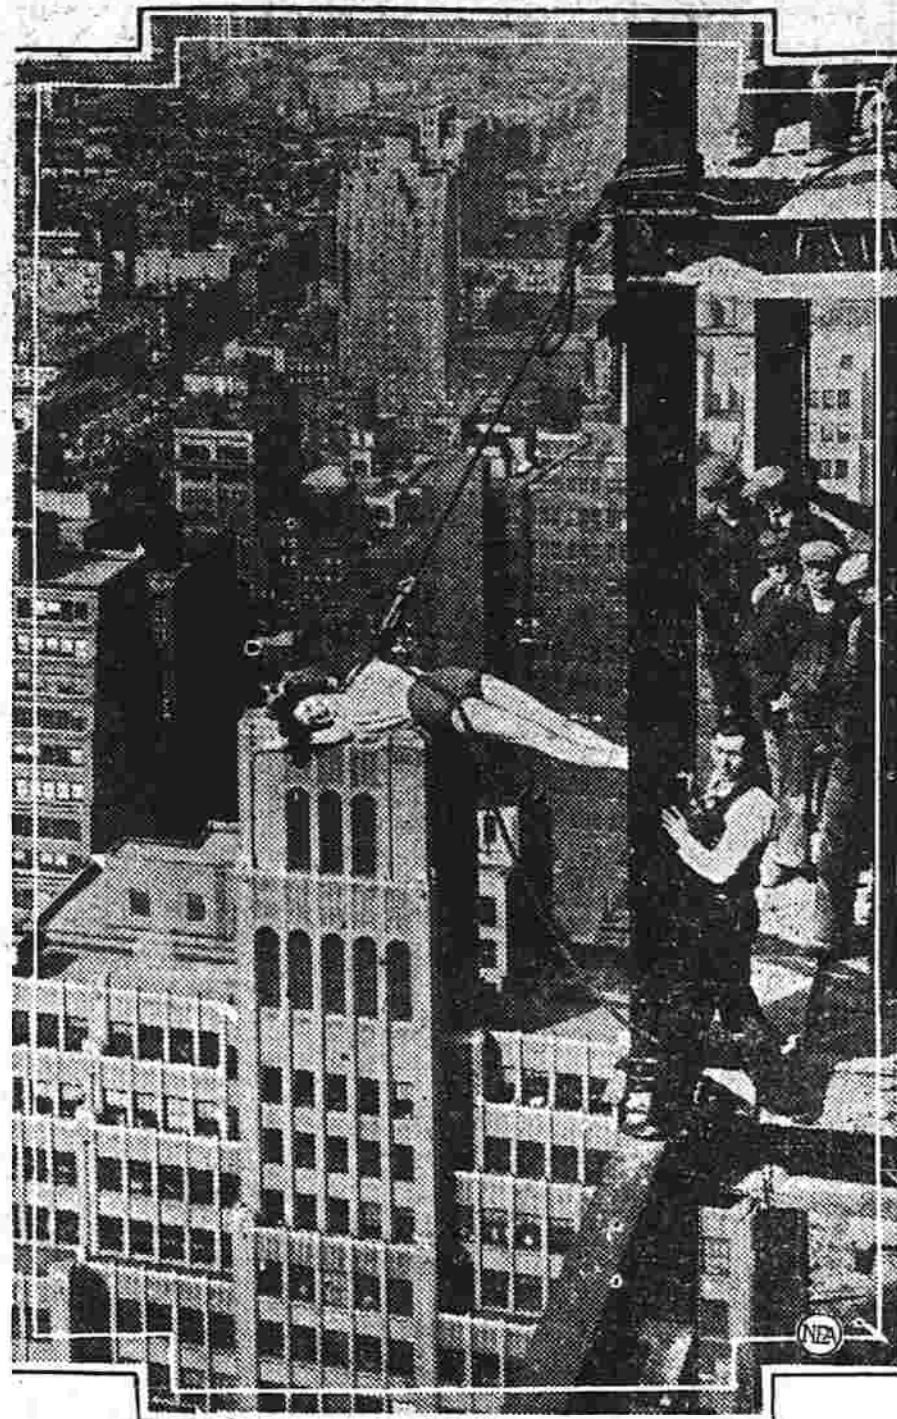

On the lowest deck, used for solitary confinement prisoners, are the infamous "black holes." In these airless, lightless, slope sided cubicles, the most refractory prisoners were chained to a ring bolt, unable to sit down or stand up. The deep grooves in the floor show where the men attempted to brace themselves against the rolling of the vessel. The majority of those confined here came out blind, insane or dead. Even the condemned cells, further along the same deck, to which those sentenced to be hanged were sent for a few hours' respite prior to their hanging at the yard were less feared than the black holes.

It was in 1802 that the "Success" was taken from the East India merchant service to be made the flagship of the infamous British penal fleet. She remained in the terrible business of transporting human freight until 1851 when, following the Australian gold rush, she was converted into a permanent receiving prison and anchored in Hobson's Bay of where now stands the city of Melbourne, Australia. In 1868, following the murder of her commander, Captain John Price, the transportation and floating hulk systems were abolished and she was used successively as a women's prison, a boys' reformatory and an ammunition dump.

Sunk in 1885 by Irish Australians who wanted to wipe out the last trace of the iniquitous system, she was raised five years later and sent on a voyage of education around the world. She circumnavigated the Australian colonies and then sailed for England where, after touring the British Isles and the continental coast line, she sailed for the United States. Since arrival here, she has visited almost every principal port. In New York, more than 1,400,000 visitors boarded her and in Chicago more than 500,000. It is estimated that she has been visited by more than 21,000,000 people and has thus done her work in behalf of prison reform.

A High Type of Acrobatics

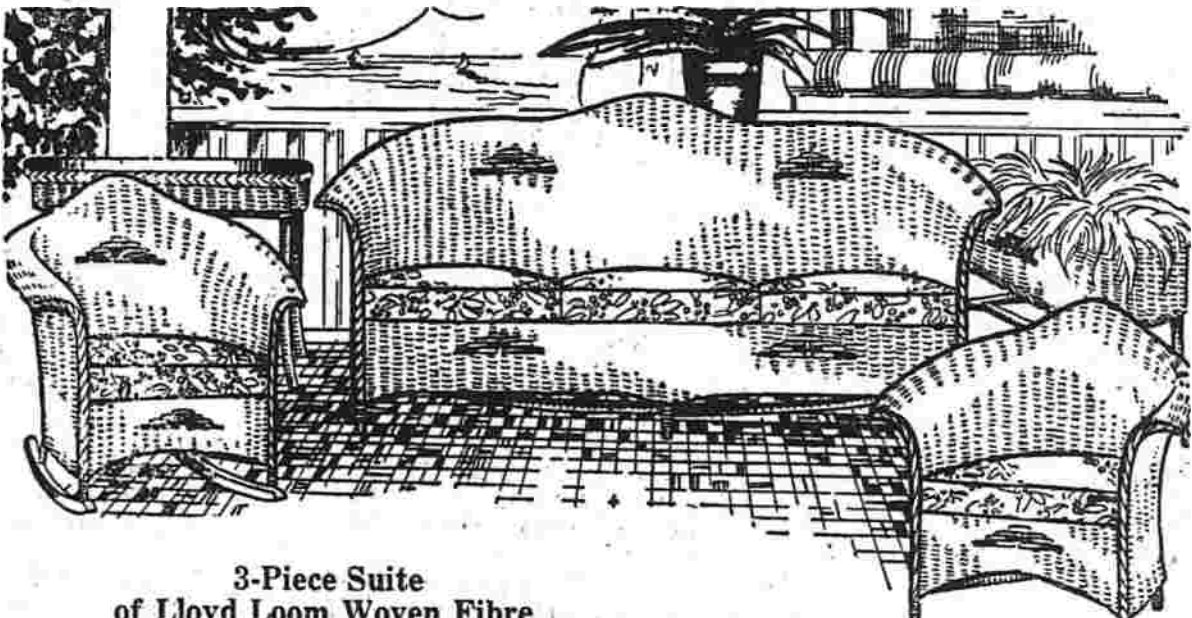

You've seen stories about women rising in the world. Well, here, you see the third story of the New Yorker hotel and a woman who has risen so far that she has come to the end of her rope. It was a long way down, but business was looking up for Anna Campol, comely young member of a "flying circus" who performed the highest type of acrobatics above the New York skyline while workmen stood on their beams and beamed upon her.

Theaters

AT THE STATE "Two Weeks Off"

What is termed as their farewell appearance in movies together, is the information that is given out in regards to Dorothy Mackall and Jack Mulhall, the ever-popular comedy stars, who will be seen and heard for the last time in "Two Weeks Off," their newest First National Vitaphone talking picture, coming to the State theater tomorrow.

Both Miss Mackall and Mr. Mulhall, through their untiring efforts, in many co-starring vehicles, have earned the individual right to stardom. Both are to still be seen playing in First National Vitaphone pictures, but not together. Each will be starred in a series of productions.

In "Two Weeks Off," this intangible comedy team are seen at their very best. Several of the scenes are marked with clever dialogues which affords one the opportunity of hearing the voices of not only the stars themselves, but the supporting cast as well.

The companion-feature at the State for tomorrow brings another well known team of favorites together. They are George O'Brien and Lois Moran and they will be presented in their latest William Fox picture, "True Heaven."

On Friday and Saturday the State will present the Fox Movie-tome all-talking picture, "Through Different Eyes."

The band is noted for its perfect dance rhythm, harmony and clever interpretation of the latest dances and their engagement Wednesday evening should be more popular than last season when they appeared twice at Sandy Beach and greatly pleased large crowds on both occasions, many of whom were loud in their praise of Boston's contribution to the dance lovers of the country and that it was the finest band booked last season was the opinion of many. It will be an interesting contest to see which orchestra of the big three, Mal Hallett, Percy Stevens or McEnelly's draws the largest crowd.

The TOWN DOCTOR

SAYS

CIVIC LOYALTY IS A FINE-SOUNDING PHRASE. It is a fine, high-sounding phrase. Civic Loyalty; it makes a good umbrella upon columns of newspaper editorials, but after all, there is no difference between Civic Loyalty and any other kind of loyalty. Whole books have been written on the subject; any number of sermons preached on and about it; hundreds of speakers have put thousands of people to sleep talking about it. Still, what is it—or perhaps it is better to say: "What isn't it?" The city in which you live is your city; its institutions are yours; its life your family's and your children's; and besides, you are a part of it, in fact, you are the city. Such being the case, you naturally do not want to be disloyal to it, for the worst of it is disloyalty to one's self. The man who is disloyal to his town is disloyal to himself and to all that is best in him. He is his own worst enemy, for he undermines his character and thus derails his efforts to do that which is the most powerful of all factors. Your loyalty or disloyalty makes the place where you live what it is or what it is not, and you can not pass the burden to "George," the weather or prohibition. You expect your city to be a good place in which to live,—in fact, you sometimes get "het-up" and demand that it be such a place. But it is a good place, only if you yourself do that which is necessary to make it so, and to do that you have to be loyal to it, stick up for it, boost it, and if necessary, fight for it. Loyalty reproduces a reciprocal effect in all with whom a loyal person comes in contact. A man who is loyal to his friends, family, town, country and loyal to his God will never be troubled with disloyalty on the part of others. There is no real success without loyalty. Whatever Civic Loyalty is, it isn't knocking your town, buying mail order, or going to the next nearest town to purchase when you can buy the same things at home, and usually for less money. Spending your money with out-of-town peddlers is not only disloyally but downright foolhardiness, if you value your money. Braggings that you bought it in the city and that, therefore, it must be better, when you could have purchased it from a local dealer, is not only disloyalty, but it is flaunting your lack of loyalty besides taking a chance on being laughed at behind your back by people who know. When a stranger says: "This looks like a pretty good town you have here, and you really say: "Oh, yes, it's all right, if you like it," or some other derogatory remark; or when you hear some unthinking native ridicule your community, and you turn it off as a joke, that is not only disloyal, but darned poor business. Preaching to others what they should do and then doing the opposite yourself is disloyalty, so "Try The Home Folks First." (Copyrighted, 1929, A. D. BRITAIN HAS YET TO MAKE 'TALKIE' American Competition Scars Foreign Movie Firms; They Remain Silent

By MILTON BRONNER London.—The talkie fever has swept all across America, and hit old England in the mid-riff. But so far it has brought endless talk about talkies instead of the real thing. The air is full of rumors about plans, but up to date, not a single feature talkie has been completed in Great Britain. A million words have been printed about talkies. More millions have been spoken about them. Producers, exhibitors, actors, theatrical managers, orchestras and the film critics talk about nothing else. Some of the writers describe the new thing in the film world as "squawkie" or "squeakies."

lament the government was asked: "Whether, in view of the rapid development of the sound and talking films, the government will cooperate with the Film Board of Censors in exercising vigilance over film sound and speech." A Slap at Uncle Sam This was, of course, directed not at American talkies. One of the big newspapers discussed the matter in its editorial columns, saying, among other things: "Complaint has already been made that the speech of our children is being corrupted by slang introduced in American film subtitles. That never seemed to be a serious matter. The talking film presents a very different problem. Our people will listen in effect to drama after drama in which the performers will deliver themselves in the accents of Vermont or Kansas." So far the government has not done anything to ensure that France shall be pronounced "Frahnts" as in England, as against "Frahnts" rhyming with "pans," as in America.

KANSAS U. FRESHMAN BREAKS SHOT RECORD

That the University of Kansas has a potential world record breaker in the 16-pound shot put was revealed recently when James A. Bausch, first year student from Wichita, Kas., heaved the "shot" fifty-one feet competing in the Big Six Conference freshman telegraphic meet. Bausch thereby broke the Kansas university shot put record of 47 feet 11 3/4 inches set by Melvin Thornhill in 1927. Athletic heads of K. U. are expecting big things from Bausch and many sport fans believe that this Jayhawk will develop into another Tom Churchhill, Oklahoma University star. Bausch is a star in basketball, baseball, track and football.

"Death Valley Scotty's" Million Dollar Shack.

Down in the depths of Death Valley, the nation's most desolate and heat-stricken area, 160 artisans are at work on the latest exploit of colorful "Death Valley Scotty"—erection of a "million-dollar shack." Scotty says it's "just a winter home for me and my partner, Albert Johnson, millionaire Chicago insurance magnate, and we're splitting the cost 50-50." Scotty's source of wealth has remained a mystery since the days 20 years ago when he first amused the nation with special limited trains and plain and fancy spending. Scotty and the house are pictured above.

MAWSON READY FOR AUSTRALIA'S ANTARCTIC HUNT

London.—The vision of a great Polar continent offering facilities for human settlement will never come true, but there is no reason why small communities shall not find life there tolerably advantageous. This is the considered opinion of Sir Douglas Mawson, leader of the Australasian Antarctic expedition of 1911-1914, who is to lead a new expedition into the Antarctic on behalf of the Federal Government of Australia this fall. In an interview given here, Sir Douglas outlined the nature of his forthcoming expedition, which will be his third voyage to chart the little-known icebound continent, lying to the far south of Australia. In Scott's Ship, He will make the journey in the vessel Discovery, which was used by the famous explorer Captain Scott, and will have with him in command, J. K. Harris, a second in command, his old and tried friend of the 1911-1914 expedition. The expedition, said Sir Douglas, was to be purely in the interests of science.

"There are," he explained, "great gaps along the coastline to be charted, the salinity and movements of the water to be studied, and perhaps of greater importance, the possibilities of such a stretch of the South Polar continent ever being able to support human life." "My own opinion is that the vision of a great Polar continent, offering facilities for human life on a big scale will never come true, but I see no reason why in the future small communities should not find life there tolerable and in some respects advantageous. "Even today, although women could not reasonably expect to take part in Polar exploration, I see no reason why they should not endure station or settlement life in the Antarctic regions."

Sir Douglas expects to take with him a crew of about 20. In addition there will be scientists accompanying the expedition. Neither the personnel of the ship's crew, nor the scientists, have yet been decided upon, Sir Douglas declared. He stated that already he had been inundated with requests from all over the world to join the expedition, although the fact that it was in formation was only announced a few weeks ago. Ship Now in London. Discovery is now at the London docks. She will shortly be taken over by Captain Davis, and will leave for Australia in the summer months. Sir Douglas will travel to Australia by another route, and will take over command of the expedition in the Fall. The port of embarkation for the Antarctic is likely to be Hobart, Tasmania. Sir Ernest Shackleton's scientific staff in was one of the party to climb Mount Erebus and locate the South Magnetic Pole, and in 1911-14, when he again ventured south. His party, who then spent three summers and two winters in the Antarctic, experienced terrible hardships and privations, two members losing their lives. On his return Sir Douglas, who was then Dr. Mawson, was knighted and decorated with the Polar Medal of Great Britain. He is now a professor of Geology at the University of Adelaide, Australia.

QUOTATIONS "People want to hear good music—stirring music that grips the heart. I find the marches I use liberally for encores count for a lot. They tend to rejuvenate the tired business man and weary housewife just as they cause troops to march with a quicker, springier step." —John Phillip Sousa. "I do not believe in denouncing salacious plays. This only serves to relieve the speaker and does not remedy the situation. Furthermore, it gives publicity to the very plays that should not have any." —Dr. S. Parker Cadman, president of the Church Drama Association of New York. "If the matter is important and you are sure of your ground, never fear to be in the minority. The world turns aside to let any man pass who knows where he is going." —David Starr Jordan, president emeritus Leland Stanford University. CHICAGO CLINIC AIMS TO LOWER DOCTORS' BILLS

You not only can be as sick as you can afford, in Chicago—you can be sicker. Heretofore the poor man has been unable to have expensive diseases. He simply couldn't afford to be diagnosed, say, for gout, or for chronic diurepsia. Those were rich men's diseases. If you mentioned feeling certain symptoms, the doctor said: "Well, it'll take a long series of treatments to cure that. Now first—"

And the patient's bill resembled Lithuania's war debt. The Chicago Medical Society is out to reduce the cost of being ill, for the man of modest means. Suggestions of free clinics in the past have met with a chilly shoulder. One prominent physician was expelled from the sacred medical circle, and it was mentioned in protest against his dismissal that he was because of his connections with a clinic. To Fit Purse. The Medical Society heatedly denied the connection, but the clinic business suffered. Now the Medical Society announces a plan to make treatments, diagnoses, or even operations, fit the purse of the patient. No reduction in the usual cost of neuromyography for millionaires is contemplated, but the working man shortly will be able to have disorders unavaliable to his fellows in less fortunate cities. Dr. J. Y. Fowler, past president of the Society and one of its trustees is author of the new plan. A centralization of all clinical and diagnostic facilities into a series of community hospital centers throughout the city and through Cook county is the plan. Diagnostic facilities, advice of staff doctors, and treatment opportunities would be offered at these centers, at a moderate cost, thereby reducing the cost of being ill. "For those unable to meet the regular costs of diagnosis and treatment, a philanthropic fund would be available from which they could obtain money to pay the needed bills," Dr. Fowler explained. The spectacle of men of moderate means saddled with installment payments on operations, along with their radio and automobile installment payments, affected the citizens of Chicago with shudders that were in due time passed along to the physicians in the form of public opinion, expressed by daily papers. In the future, when and if the plan is adopted, medical attention will be paid in cash, at the time, and in accordance with the patient's financial standing. Even hospital bills would be influenced by the new policy.

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, lawyer, who is madly in love with his wife, IRIS, does not suspect that his secretary, NAN CARROLL, loves him. Nan, being honorable, determines to resign but postpones her resignation because she believes Morgan is going to fight a faithful secretary during his defense of BERT CRAWFORD, supposed friend, who is indicted for embezzlement.

Nan distrusts Crawford and Iris. She overhears Crawford "fix" a witness and she forces from him a promise to give up Iris.

Nan prepares to go to the courtroom on the last day of the trial when Iris Morgan comes in with her small son, CURTIS. She leaves him on Nan's hands while she hurries to the courtroom. When the boy falls asleep, Nan finds beside him a note, evidently stolen from his mother's handbag, in which Crawford admits his love for Iris, admits his guilt, and lays plans for their elopement after the trial.

Nan is faced with a bitter conflict, but at last decides to hurry to the courtroom with the letter. She arrives there to late. The jury has reached a verdict of "not guilty." Outside the courthouse she meets an old suitor, WILLIS TODD, with whom she has lunch. She shows him the note from Crawford and he advises her to destroy it. She tucks it in her bag.

Over the Christmas holidays Nan is sick with anguish over the disappointment and sorrow which she knows await Morgan. When he comes into the office happy and gay, she is immensely relieved. Crawford calls and presents Morgan with a check for $20,000 as his fee, and when Morgan refuses, Crawford suggests he give it to Iris. He tells Morgan he is leaving town. Nan waits, frightened, nervous, until Crawford's train leaves, wondering if Iris will go with him.

CHAPTER XV.

On Monday, the ninth of January, the day Iris Morgan had chosen for her departure for New York to what her husband believed to be a short pleasure trip, John Curtis Morgan had a restless night as defense counsel for Lois Downs, a pretty young nurse accused of the murder by poisoning of her patient, a middle-aged chronic invalid whose husband and fortune she was supposed to have twice set for. The case had been twice set for hearing and twice postponed, but now a jury was being impaneled.

"He doesn't come soon I shall have to leave without telling him good-by," and it will serve him right," Iris protested petulantly to Nan for the third or fourth time. "I have only half an hour to make my train. Careful, Curt, lover, you're mashing the pleats in mother's skirt."

"I wanna go to New York, too," the little boy pleaded. "Mother explained over and over, sweetheart, that New York's a horrid big place, not at all nice for little boys," Iris answered cajolingly. Nan, steeling his glance at the two, saw the mother's arm thin nervously about the child's little body that leaned forlornly against her knees.

"I suppose she has got something that passes for a heart," Nan admitted grudgingly to herself. "And I hope it hurts her so bad tonight she can't sleep—running away to New York in a drawing room that her husband has paid for, to join a lover who owes his freedom to her husband. Oh, how can she do it? And how can she love her so much, when she's rotten, rotten! Just because she's beautiful—"

"Well! At last! I was just leaving without telling you good-by," Iris greeted her husband's cross, "There's hardly time to make my train."

"I'm coming down, too," Morgan's voice was saying. "It's lonesome at home, with Iris gone."

petulantly; then she must have remembered that that house would no longer be any concern of hers, for her voice softened, grew a little husky: "Oh, all right, lover! You can have any kind of a dog you want. Just be sure he isn't vicious, Jack. But we must be going," and she rose abruptly, disengaging her slim body from her husband's embrace.

"Isn't she the most beautiful thing you ever saw, Nan?" Morgan asked as he rose and stood beside his wife. "Don't you think I'm foolish to let her off to New York without me along to see that no one steals her?"

"I certainly do," Nan made her voice sound gay, but in her heart was a rage of anger against the woman and pity for the man. "Silly Jack!" Iris laughed, and Nan heard fiercely that she would never hear those scornful lips utter that phrase again—those two words with which Iris Morgan always answered her husband's adoration and reduced him to absurdity for a moment before turning to her lover. "Tell Nan good-by, lover. Good-by. Nan, you'll look after those two bad boys of mine while I'm gone, won't you?"

Nan flinched from the kiss which Iris' velvety red lips laid on her cheek, but her brown eyes were very steady as they met and held the moment the blue-green eyes of John Curtis Morgan's wife. "I'll do my best," she said clearly, but no one else in the room realized that a solemn promise had been given.

When they were gone, Nan sat idle at her typewriter, her frightened eyes fixed on the little desk clock. Had she committed an unforgivable crime in not warning Morgan that his wife was leaving him for Crawford? But, as she had told Willis Todd, she would rather have died than to have shown him that letter of Bert Crawford's, which proved that Iris Morgan's lover. And as Willis had pointed out to her, Morgan's knowing would not have stopped Iris and, if it could have, Morgan would not or should not want her. . . . But Willis didn't know how much Morgan loved her.

The minute hand of the clock moved slowly and inexorably. Train time! Two late now! Five minutes past train time now! John Curtis Morgan and his child, happily ignorant of the fact that they were deserted, were to be turning toward the movie theater now, Curtis shrilling excitedly about his police dog.

"Will he know tonight? Did she leave a letter? Surely she wouldn't go away, leaving no word behind. . . . I wish I could write! I feel as if I'm going mad," Nan moaned. At last she forced herself to concentrate on the Lois Downs case, which had opened that day in Judge Trimble's court. It proved to be one of the hardest fights that John Curtis Morgan had ever waged for the life of an accused murderer.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

INCREASE IN CLINICS SHOWS TREND TO SPECIALIZATION

By DR. MORRIS FISHBURN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

With the advance in medical science and the increase of specialization, it became increasingly difficult for one physician to provide the best type of medical care to his clientele at a price that they could afford to pay.

There are many reasons for this: As has been pointed out by many observers, the vast majority of human ailments seen early can be taken care of by a general practitioner with the amount of equipment that he can carry in his handbag.

In the difficult case, however, it may be necessary to use the X-ray, to have blood counts, to examine the excretions of the body, to use all of the machinery that is today available only in the offices of specialists, in clinics and in hospitals.

The hospitals of the nation have increased in number until today there are almost 8,000 as contrasted with hardly 25 years ago. Whereas some three or four hundred nurses were graduated from hospital training schools in 1890, this year approximately 18,000 nurses were graduated and the cost of operating the training schools is a part of the cost of hospital care.

Approximately one attendant was required for each person in a hospital in 1910, while today there are from three to four attendants for each person in the hospital, including doctors, nurses, orderlies, staff clerks, laboratory workers, engineers, maids, cooks, laundry workers and what not. These also must be included in the cost of medical care.

It may be argued that the only portion of this problem that concerns the physician is his own fee. Such an argument would not be true to the ideals or the nature of the medical profession, and it is the sick who are the sufferers.

Group Associations To save in the cost of overhead associated with the refinements of modern medical practice, specialists soon began to associate themselves in groups, so that they might jointly use the expensive instruments and the services of the specialists.

Such associations have been made in group clinics, hospital centers, or in office units. Sooner or later patients began to go directly to specialists. There are physicians who feel today that the general practitioner is a fast disappearing species of the genus medicus.

Such a public undoubted: suffer for many reasons, but primarily because his service can be rendered at a reasonable cost and for the vast majority of ailments is quite satisfactory.

The commission on medical education in its first survey of the nation of medical practice in 1927 pointed out that the work of a general practitioner in a town of 50,000 included 55 per cent of practice in the home, 35 per cent in the office and the remaining 10 per cent in the hospital.

A study of the kind of work done by physicians revealed the fact that 90 per cent of the diseases seen by general practitioners were found to concern conditions which could not be controlled on a community basis but which demanded individual, personal attention.

For five days those questions hammered at Nan Carroll's brain. And then, when she was beginning to believe that all of her agony of suspense for Morgan had been wasted and foolish, and that Iris would come back to the security and honor of being John Curtis Morgan's wife, those questions were answered as she had known in her heart that they would be.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

President Hoover asserted in his Memorial Day speech that the "deadliest human calamity is fear."

Dr. George A. Dorsey, one of America's leading scientists and behaviorists, and author of "Why We Behave Like Human Beings," declares in his recent article, "You can't do, act, or look your best if you don't feel right inside; and you can't feel right if you're scared."

These two statements are the sum and substance of the new principle in child training. And yet I receive many protests from mothers who cannot relinquish the old idea of "sparing the rod and spoiling the child" although the rod, of course, may take many other varieties of form than the switch of the birch tree. Parliaments, scolding, if-you-do-this-you'll-get-that sort of discipline are all rods of the old tree.

The Penalty of Fear And as long as they compose about 90 per cent of child training as in the past, we'll continue to see the rise of adolescents and nervous disorders, "dyspepsia," heart trouble, and other vital physical ailments, due to emotional unhappiness in childhood, chiefly fear, that becomes a habit and continues to ride us like an Old Man of the Sea through adolescence and maturity. This is only a part of it at that. No man or woman who hasn't been freed from the soul-destroying element of fear in youth ever can be wholly efficient in his work afterward. He loses not only her throaty contralto voice and her red-brown hair can be heard and seen to good advantage.

Lady Astor, digging up votes for re-election to Parliament, has to drag her chauffeur Bert off from ruffians who heckle her. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, pointed out as perhaps our nation's outstanding woman, resigns in order to rest, have the privacy of a non-public individual and, no doubt, to make much money.

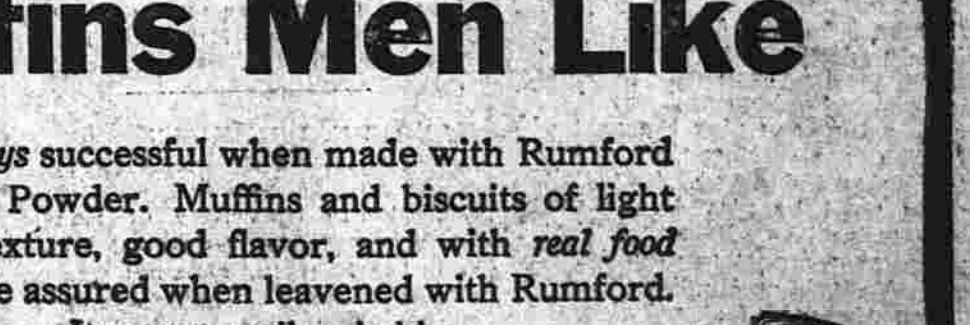

And Mrs. Charles Salin, former member of the New York state national Republican committee, is forming a woman's organization for the repeal of prohibition. Oh, yes, and Anne Morrow Lindbergh is honeymooning with the world's most popular young man.

Over 15 Million Dollars Invested In Epsom Derby

World Wide Blind Betting in Historic English Horse Race Tomorrow; The Favorites.

Lord Astor's Horse Favorite Tomorrow

By CHARLES A. SMITH.

London, June 4.—The Epsom Derby classic, tomorrow, asserted by Englishmen to be the greatest horse-race in the world, is looming large in the public eye now that the opening classic flat races have been decided.

The outlook for the race this year is generally considered to be extremely open. Little advance betting is being done, while trainers are chary about expressing confidence in their charges in view of the unprecedented weather, which has hindered training.

Even at this late stage—the race is run in June—stable plans remain in abeyance, and much rain is required before owners and trainers will definitely decide to run their horses.

Kirk George, who for the first time for many years will not view the race, is running a fast colt named Glastonbury. Craxador, at present favorite in the advance betting, is owned by Lord Astor, husband of Lady Astor, the American-born woman member of Parliament.

His lordship has had such tantalizing luck in previous Derbies, the race having eluded him on many occasions, that he is determined to give his classic colt a thorough preparation, and is sending him to Newmarket, the headquarters for the English racing world, where he will be put out against other Derby entrants.

French owners will be well represented in this year's race, while His Highness the Aga Khan has three entries listed.

On the winner of the derby, fortunes are at stake. An 8-year-old boy holds the Liverpool Stock Exchange sweepstake ticket on Craxador, and the owner of the second ticket on him in the same pool will also draw the same amount—$25,000. The great Calcutta pool is nearly as rich, and in addition millions will be wagered on the favorite.

Conservative estimates today place $15,000,000 as the amount of money that has been invested in the Calcutta and London Stock Exchange sweepstakes, with possibly $5,000,000 more placed in the hands of those who operate the lesser known lotteries. Many Americans have gone for this blind stab in the dark that either loses you your nominal ante or makes you rich on the rising of one sun and the setting of another.

The alleged buyer, too, possibly contributed the major portion of the millions that will ride on the race, for the English lower and middle classes regard the lotteries as an investment and not without reason. The allegorical cases of Dr. Dokes, Mrs. McGuffey and Miss Hicks are typical past performances in the Derby "weeds." To the English public, they represent the answer on how to get rich in five easy lessons.

Unofficial Figures

Unofficial figures declare that about $25,000 in prize money will be distributed to holders of winning tickets in each of the big lotteries. Many of those who draw likely winners already have sold out for a fortune, there being the story about the disposal of a tenth interest in Viscount Astor's Craxador, the public favorite, for $100,000. This is excellent money, even if the alleged seller never gets it.

The alleged buyer, too, probably "pleaded" out some of that ten per cent wherever he figured he could do himself some good, so that by the time Craxador goes to the post you probably wouldn't be able to get all of his "paper proprietors" into the waiting room at Charing Cross station. Kipling, who made choice in the English books, has undergone something of the same buying and selling campaign, as have Lord Derby's Bosworth, Lord Dewar's Aristotle, Aga Khan's Le Veaur and other entries that are more or less esteemed among the 32 eligibles remaining.

The world's greatest gamble, indeed, and like all gambles, it will mean that, for the few who come into overnight wealth, there must be the many who will go on a diet for the remainder of the week.

However, I shall be glad to hear about Mr. Dokes, Mrs. McGuffey and Miss Hicks. If I remember them correctly, they were all pretty good guys even before they had it.

ED WELLS STAGES A GREAT COMEBACK

By LES CONKLIN.

New York, June 4.—Rescued from the minors by the Yankees, Ed Wells, veteran southpaw of Ashland, Ohio, today enjoys a new lease on life. Manager Huggins has been nursing Dead Pan Eddie along all spring, looking for a soft spot where the former Detroit hurler might negotiate a comeback.

He found it yesterday against the Chicago White Sox, Wells hitting out the pale horse with two hits.

Following impressive performances by Hoyt and Pipgras, Eddie's work has given the reorganized champions new life in their effort to catch up with the flying Athletics. Only 29 batters faced him and the game was played in the remarkable short time of an hour and twenty minutes, believed to be a record for the Yanks.

Gene Robertson, subbing for Kenig, pitched three doubles off Lyons, the first one sending in the only tally of the game. It was New York's third straight victory over the Sox.

13 Inning Duel.

George Thib's winning streak of nine victories, including a 13-inning duel with Lefty Grove, and the game was played in the remarkable short time of an hour and twenty minutes, believed to be a record for the Yanks.

JONES AGAIN BEATS MELLO; KAYO IN 6TH

Boston, June 4.—Gorilla Jones, a good looking colored boy from Akron, Ohio, outboxed, outslugged, but not outaged Al Mello, holder of both the welterweight and middleweight titles in New England, to win by a technical knockout in the sixth round of their scheduled ten round encounter at the Garden last night.

A capacity house saw Jones hammer the pride of Lowell to the mat in the fourth round for a nine count and dropped him again in the sixth which caused his seconds to toss in the towel.

In a ten-round semi-final Lope Tereno, sensational Cuban, demolished a boring lesser to Jimmy Sacco of East Boston. The fight was the Cuban's by a big majority and he was awarded the decision.

PREDICTS KAYO VICTORY

"Bat" Battalino

But Eddie Lord Laughs At Bat's Punching Power

Bat Battalino, his bout with Eddie Lord but 24 hours away, today predicted a win on a kayo over the former Waterbury high school track star in the feature bout at Bulkeley Stadium Wednesday night.

Battalino's career, both as an amateur and as a pro, has been strewn with K. O. triumphs. First he swept through the amateur ranks, wiping all opposition before him with his devastating right hand and climaxed a sensational career as an amateur by winning the national title up at Boston. Then he crossed the bridge over into the more exacting professional end of the sport and there too he has won all of his fights, most of them on knockouts.

So he can be pardoned for what might be interpreted as a bit of bravado. Knockouts have been so frequent in his ring career that he was forced to use old balls in the danger zone.

Other birds—alprines—offer an amusing hazard to links around the Garden City, Long Island, where numerous aviation schools are located. Tyro birdmen seem to enjoy swooping down over the spot where a nervous golfer is sighting a crucial putt.

The action of a squirrel in stealing a ball in a tournament at Hill-Crest, N. Y., last year, cost the enraged owner of the ball a stroke. The chief hazards on the public links are the ham-and-egg golfers—of both sexes—who count that day lost when they do not pick up at least one dozen golf balls being lost to somebody else. The only safeguard is to mount a bicyclist after driving off and pedal down the fairway after the ball at top speed.

Golfers Complain of Cows, Birds, As New Hazards on U. S. Course

Birds of the air and beasts of the field are rapidly being added to the hazards which face the duffer as he winds his torturous way through the bunkers and sand traps of these United States.

The latest menace to the golfer is the cow—So, gentle, inoffensive cow. It has been discovered that she has a fondness for golf balls. This amazing fact came to light recently at Pittsfield, Mass., when a cow was butchered. In her stomach were twenty-nine balls. Investigation revealed that she had been pastured in a field adjoining a course in Pittsfield, and for years had been deriving sustenance from the slices and hoots of golfers.

Cow As Culprit.

So when you smack a ball straight and true over a hill but can't find it, the thing to do may be to look for So-Soos as the culprit. Even as she chews her cud and contemplates you with a benign and innocent gaze, she may be munching that new Dunlop which set you back six bits an hour earlier.

The cow's husband was added to the list of golf hazards during the winter. A golfer was playing a snow-covered course in New Jersey, using a r. d. ball. It is stated that bull in an adjoining field became enraged at the sight of the crimson gutta percha and chased the golfer right off the course.

In Crow's Nest.

Golfers at the St. Albans course on Long Island were puzzled last week by the frequency with which balls disappeared after being driven over a certain hill. The chairman of the executive committee laughed at these strange reports until one day when he got off a 250-yard drive and was unable to find it. He immediately launched an investigation which also failed to locate the ball. It was not until he went to a nearby tree where found seven new balls, left there in storage or to hatch.

Linksmen in South Wales also were harassed last year by crows which stole balls at the rate of a hundred a week. The golfers finally

SPIESS ENTERED HEARST CONTEST

Local Man Suggested Plan for Solution of Prohibition Law Problem.

One Manchester man, at least, was entered in the Hearst $25,000 prohibition plan essay contest. Mathias Spiess of 28 West Center street, wrote his suggestions for the solution of the prohibition problem on January 30 of this year. His plan just as entered in the contest follows:

"National Prohibition is no longer an experiment. After nine years, the average American finds that it reflects a fiction, not a reality, and that it brought on a greater danger than it sought to cure. 'It is responsible for the disrespect for our Constitution; it gave birth to the spirit of anarchy in America. It has undermined the fundamental stones of the republic and torn down the integrity of the nation. It has instituted a Kaiserism which dictates over the tastes and appetites of a free born people, who now know that totalitarianism does not make for human happiness and that the appetite of a nation cannot be changed by an act of Congress. 'Assuming that the principles of Prohibition were golden, the true American refuses to be a 'bird in a gilded cage,' but rather chooses the eagle in the air as a symbol of American life. He now regards the Eighteenth Amendment as an enormous mistake and does not hesitate to suggest and submit new plans that may be adopted in place of the Volstead law which always seemed to smack of tyranny to him. 'My personal temperance plan as a substitute for national prohibition follows:

"The Eighteenth Constitutional Amendment can be amended to read substantially to the effect that the Government reserves the right to manufacture intoxicating liquors for general consumption and to sell such liquors at cost, to such individuals only, whose reputation and character is unimpaired. Habitual drunkards or any having been arrested for drunkenness cannot purchase hard liquors. Licenses to purchase should be issued as we now issue automobile licenses and these to be cancelled at any time, if abused. Delinquents may, after a period of probation, apply again for a new license to purchase intoxicating liquors.

"In addition to such a system, by making the standard of beer 1-2 percent of alcohol it would be possible to give the working class of people a beer that would keep its flavor well and would be otherwise perfectly satisfactory, yet not intoxicating. This would satisfy the appetite of the average drinker, and with the privilege to purchase light wines, very little hard liquors would (comparatively speaking) be consumed.

"With the profits taken out of $500 A YEAR to your mother is better than $99,990 a day. Many a son who intended to leave the former actually left the latter. A Life Annuity will begin at once and will last as long as Mother needs it.

the liquor trade, the incentive of the bootlegger and the moonshiner would vanish, and with it, the manufacture of all unlawful liquors. "The Constitution of the United States would once more command the respect and the support of not only the American people, but the whole civilized world."

BIG PARTY CELEBRATES WILSON ANNIVERSARY

Under the pretense of an unexpected visitor, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wilson of 36 Madison street, visiting Mr. and Mrs. George Patten, last night, were called home by their daughter, Elinor, and were astonished to find fifty people gathered there to celebrate the Wilson's fifteenth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Arthur Burr on behalf of those present gave Mr. and Mrs. Wilson a purse of money. Various kinds of entertainment filled out the evening, including piano solos by Mr. and Mrs. George Hanington, who also accompanied some fine singing. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of the entertainment. Those present were from Hartford, Littleton, New York, East Hartford and Manchester. Mr. Wilson is the proprietor of the Wilson auto wash stand on Brainard Place.

There will be a bridge and whist card party in the basement of St. Bridget's church tonight under the auspices of the Holy Name society.

Albert R. Roberts, of the Manchester police force has left for Lincoln, N. H., where he will spend a few days with relatives.

PHONES Pinehurst "GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

WHY SUPERFINE CORNED BEEF

It's a wonderful lot of cuts that goes into the Corned Vats at Pinehurst! It happens that our line of custom uses proportionately fewer of certain excellent cuts of fresh beef—perhaps being a shade choosier than the customers of some other markets—and we know from experience when the sides are cut up just about what the demand is going to be; so, plump into the brine go many of these splendid, sweet, fresh cuts.

Of course Pinehurst's famous particularity about the corning process has a lot to do with making PINEHURST CORNED BEEF distinctively good, but the grade and perfect condition of the beef itself is an important factor.

In the present Corned Beef offering are a fine lot of lean cuts—Chuck pieces, Middle Ribs (26 cents a pound) and some wonderfully nice Briskets. Couldn't be a better time to order Corned Beef.

Also we have some particularly fine Cabbage for the Boiled Dinner.

Before long it will be too hot for making Stews, but right now they fit the weather admirably. We have an especially nice lot of Stewing Lamb and Veal.

Let us call your attention to some of the freshest, crispest of Spinach—at a price. It's 19 cents a peck, as a special.

Wednesday afternoon, please do not forget, is Pinehurst's playtime. Store closes at noon. Use the phone and we'll be sure and see that your advance order is delivered before closing time. The number is 2000.
