

GRADUATION FESTIVITIES START TODAY

High School Commencement Program Opens With An- nual Class Day; To Award Diplomas Tomorrow Eve.

Manchester High school will graduate a class of 139 students tomorrow evening thus bringing another school year to an end. Today, however, the chief point of interest is the annual Class Day ceremonies. The program started this afternoon and will come to a conclusion this evening in the school assembly hall. History and gifts.

William Johanson.

The reading of the class history by Miss Florence Schledge, but adjourned to the High school when rain fell. This was followed by the presentation of the gifts to the members of the senior class. The latter feature is one always awaited with eager interest by the students as it affords them an opportunity of setting off scores of public through the presentation of most "appropriate" gifts.

This was followed by the presentation of letters and medals to nearly fifty athletes who have done good work during the past season. One of the biggest honors of the day fell upon the shoulders of Horace Burr, son of Dr. and Mrs. N. A. Burr of Park street, who was awarded the Harvard Book Prize. This is awarded each year by the Harvard Club of Connecticut to a member of the Junior Class who in the opinion of his teachers and members of his class, excels in leadership, scholarship and character.

Orations. Following the awards, the classes

SCHREIBER LEAVES FRANCE FOR U. S.

Stowaway Starts Tomorrow for Home—Buys Third Class Ticket for $125.

Paris, June 19.—"Gee—coming over I was thousands of feet above the waves. On the way back I'll be at water level."

This was the comment made today by Arthur Schreiber, 22-year-old stowaway aboard the trans-Atlantic monoplane "Yellow Bird," when he visited offices of the United States lines and bought himself a "tourist third" ticket aboard the Leviathan, sailing for New York tomorrow.

Schreiber paid out $125 for the passage, saying the money had been advanced by Armano Lotti, Jr., sponsor of the "Yellow Bird's" flight, who has constituted himself the stowaway's business manager. He has promised to reimburse Lotti for the expenditure, Schreiber said.

The stowaway's comment about "water level" was occasioned by the act that "tourist third" class accommodations aboard the Leviathan are on "D" deck.

Leaves Paris at eight o'clock tomorrow morning for Cherbourg, where he will board the liner. He spent last evening in a downtown bar, singing and enjoying himself. He was not recognized by anyone in the cafe.

The United States embassy denied today that Schreiber's departure had been requested because of his lack of a passport. The stowaway is returning of his own volition. It was said, being anxious to rejoin his parents in Portland, Me.

TREASURY BALANCE

Washington, June 19.—Treasury balance June 17: $347,288,882.63.

QUEER MALADY MENACES SEVEN

Three Dead and Four Seriously Ill—Fifteen Doctors Studying the Case.

Chicago, June 19.—Three-year-old Lorraine Markowski died today, the third victim of a mysterious poison that is threatening to claim the lives of a family of seven.

Fifteen physicians, including several specialists, were studying the case as Lorraine succumbed. The other dead were Chester Kwiatkowski, 7, and his sister, Agnes, 8. These two were children of Mrs. Irving Markowski by a former marriage.

Two other children and Markowski and his wife are fighting for their lives in the county and psychopathic hospitals.

Doctors who examined the stomach contents of the dead and living said the poison appeared to have a metallic base and may have been caused by canned food. It was said it also may have been due to ingredients of paint, which Markowski used in his occupation.

WAR EXPENSES BIGGEST ITEM, REPORT SHOWS

Out of Three Billions Spent by Government Two Were for War or Preparations for War—The Items.

Washington, June 19.—Out of $3,427,890,000 spent by the government the first eleven months of the 1929 fiscal year, $2,056,734,000 represented costs directly attributable to the World War, or preparations for future wars.

Treasury figures today showed that about $1,371,244,000 of the total outlay for government in this period was for the War and Navy Departments, Veterans Bureau, and financing of the public debt. These accounts were $31,750,000 heavier than in the same period of last year, despite a $58,000,000 decrease in interest costs. While there were some civil activities in the War and Navy Departments, the large portion of the following items of government cost may be charged up to the war or preparation:

War Department, $358,071,000, increase of $27,239,000.
Navy Department, $334,839,000, increase of $31,048,000.
Veterans Bureau, $382,613,000, increase of $15,911,000.
Interest, $583,941,000, decrease of $58,000,000.
Sinking fund to retire public debt, $379,277,000, increase of $15,356,000.

Cost of War
The gross cost of the war to the end of the present fiscal year will be nearly $50,000,000,000. Deductions from that, provided the war debts are paid, and including war supplies sales and minor items will reduce the net cost by more than $19,000,000,000.

All other government departments, excepting the executive establishment proper, showed increased expenditures during the first eleven months of the year, with about the same ratios probable for the 12 months ending June 30.

White House Expenses
For eleven months operations of the White House cost $455,420, a reduction of $110,000. Congressional costs of $16,074,000 were $1,158,000 higher. The heaviest increase was in the Navy Department, followed by the War Department and then the Treasury, operations of which amounted to $186,991,000, a gain of $24,239,000.

The government expended $161,769,000 in the eleven months in the Agricultural Department. That was an increase of $17,051,000 over the preceding year.

Income tax collections were pouring into the Treasury today by the millions. There was a big gain over last year, particularly on Monday because of the intervening Sunday following the date upon which the June installment was due.

Figures still indicated a surplus of approximately $200,000,000 unless heavy expenditures are made before June 30 for farm relief or other unusual items.

PENNSYLVANIA VALUATION
Washington, June 19.—The astonishing growth of big capital in American business was strikingly revealed today when the Interstate Commerce Commission placed a final valuation of $1,612,114,391 on the Pennsylvania railroad.

The valuation dates between June 30, 1916, and June 30, 1919, so that today's valuation of the Pennsylvania system is probably over the $2,000,000,000 mark.

The valuation figure included $53,605,168 classed as "working capital."

Stowaway Coming Home

They're proud of that stowaway son of theirs, you bet! "He's a hero" to Mr. and Mrs. Morris Schreiber, above, of Portland, Me., even if young Arthur Schreiber's extra weight in the "Yellow Bird" did jeopardize the lives of three flyers and cause the big plane to fall short of its trans-Atlantic goal. They're overjoyed by the financial aspects of their boy's exploit, too. At the right is young Schreiber.

"GREEN" MEN TO BLAME FOR BORDER KILLINGS

Resigned Patrol Leader De- scribes Rum War Around Detroit—Is Tired of Kill- ing Innocent People.

Washington, June 19.—"They don't tell you to shoot but they might as well—they tell you to stop 'em at any cost."

This is the charge against his superior officers which Louis H. Jacques, former patrol leader in the Customs service at Detroit, is in Washington to present to Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Lowman today.

Jacques, who resigned after the shooting of Archibald Eugster in Detroit, June 12 by a dry officer, came to Washington in an effort to persuade the directors of the prohibition drive to stop killings by dry officers.

He said he resigned solely because he "couldn't stand for the promiscuous shooting which already has cost the lives of many innocent people."

An ex-service man and the father of a family, Jacques revealed an amazing picture of the "rum war" now being waged on the Detroit

ANTI-SMITHITES FORM NEW PARTY

Virginia Democrats Adopt Platform and Nominate Candidates for Election.

Roanoke, Va., June 19.—Nearly 800 anti-Smith Virginia Democrats scattered to their homes today after perfecting here a Dry, Protestant organization which will endeavor, with Republican help, to wrest the state government from the control of the regular Democratic organization next November.

The bolters nominated a candidate for governor, Prof. William Mosley Brown; adopted a platform of 6,000 words written by Bishop James Cannon, Jr.; raised the Hoover law enforcement program, and departed for home vowing to spread the embers of party discord throughout the south.

G. O. P. To Help
The Republican state convention ten days hence is expected to also nominate Prof. Brown. The anti-Smith Democrats conveniently left open so that the Republicans in their convention may have some of the nominating to do.

Bitter criticism of Gov. Smith, John J. Raskob, and the Virginia state leaders like Senator Carter Glass, Senator Swanson, and Gov. Harry E. Byrd, all of whom supported Smith last year, featured the speeches of the bolters.

Bishop Cannon, who did not open in person, sent the convention its platform and a message, stating that the issue is "Raskobism versus Southern Democracy."

Prohibition was made the main theme of the platform.

LINDY'S BACK IN LIMELIGHT AND HE TALKS

Famous Newlyweds Pose for Pictures and Talk With Reporters—Lone Eagle Back to Work.

Mitchell Field, N. Y., June 19.—The honeymoon was over for Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride, joy and grief of newspaper cameramen, as the famous newlyweds stepped back into the picture today.

The colonel was back on the job acting as a judge at the safe aircraft competition under the auspices of the Guggenheim Foundation for the promotion of Aviation.

He scanned the sky expertly and perhaps a trifle longingly, as myraid planes scintillated in the sunlight.

As usual, Lindbergh was without a hat. As usual, he wore a dark blue suit, but contrary to the usual, the colonel chatted volubly—with his bride.

Both sunburned
For almost the first hour, the returned bridal couple kept to the protection of their automobile, sitting together and commenting in overlapping dialogue on things aeronautical.

Mrs. Lindbergh, the former Anne Morrow, wore a summery costume of light blue.

Both were sun-tinted from their honeymoon yachting excursion. The newspaper photographers were also back on the job.

They surrounded the automobile and "shot" the ex-honeymooners from more positions than an aeroplane ever hoped to attain.

The couple held an informal salon while remaining in their auto and chatted with various friends including Harry Guggenheim, president of the Guggenheim Foundation, Edward Warner, former assistant secretary of the navy for aviation, and Captain Emory S. Lamb.

Posed for Cameramen
Under insistent urging, Col. Lindbergh surprised the cameramen by consenting to pose for a picture with his bride.

The couple stood beside an airplane. They both looked somewhat solemn as they faced the battery of cameras.

Then Lindbergh posed with a group of officials, and sitting at a desk in the offices of the Guggenheim fund gave his first interview since his marriage.

He talked about aviation and its problems and personal questions did not enter into the conversation. Lindbergh said that the prime purpose of the safety competition was to encourage the development of airplanes which anybody could fly.

"We hope to make airplanes which anybody could fly."

DR. SNOOK BLAMES "SHEIK MOTORIST"

Says Slain Woman Often Ac- cepted, in Past, Auto Rides from Strangers.

Columbus, O., June 19.—Discrepancies in the story of the whereabouts of Dr. James H. Snook, 40, on the night that Miss Theora Hix, Ohio State University co-ed, was brutally beaten and slashed to death, were discovered by police and newspapermen today.

Dr. Snook, a former professor in the veterinary department at the college, and Martin T. Meyers, 36, another faculty member, are being held without bond for investigation in connection with the most brutal crime that has been written into the criminal annals of Columbus.

In an interview with newspapermen just as the rising sun peeped through the iron barred window of his cell, Dr. Snook told newspapermen his version of the murder. He also repeated his alibi and traced his movements during the night.

Describes Miss Hix
Dr. Snook describes Miss Hix as "the kind of a girl who would accept automobile rides from strangers," and declared he believed she had been murdered by a "sheik motorist."

"She was of the lonely type—very nice and dignified. She went to the movies alone. I often cautioned her about accepting rides from strangers."

"Once," Snook asserted, "Miss Hix told me she would not marry me on a bet. I never suspected her of going out with anyone other than Meyers however."

Was Willing to Quit
"I was willing to quit any time she said, so I did everything for her own good. I know no more."

WORLD PEACE NEARER; DAWES SPEECH SCORES

Heat Wave Continues All Over The Nation

The gods of heat continued to report 108 and 110 degrees respectively.

The mid-west after a scorching yesterday saw no prospects of a let-up today. Chicago, Cleveland, Cincinnati, St. Louis and Kansas City all reported temperatures in the neighborhood of 90.

Further west found the weather slightly more endurable. Bismarck, N. D., boasted a temperature of 76; Denver, 78; Salt Lake City, 76; San Francisco 70; Portland, Oregon, 64 and Helena, Mont., 62. Phoenix, Arizona however, was 90.

The south stood on a par with the mid-west. San Antonio reported 90 degrees; New Orleans, 86; Jacksonville, 80; Galveston, 84; Charleston, 86; Atlanta, 84; Baltimore, 80; Savannah, 88, and Tampa, 88.

"Burden Of Presidency Appaling"—Coolidge

New York, June 19.—The president of the United States gives his possessor more power than kings and emperors, Calvin Coolidge declared in his latest literary article which will appear tomorrow in the American magazine. In addition to this, he states, the burden of the presidency is "appalling."

"While it is wise for the President to get all the competent advice possible," Mr. Coolidge says, "final judgments are necessarily his own. No one can share with him the responsibility for them. His decisions are final and usually irrevocable. This constitutes the appalling burden of the office."

ARCHDUKE LEOPOLD IS GOING TO WORK

Austrian Nobleman Plans to Open Up a Shop on Broad- way, New York.

Paris, June 19.—The Archduke Leopold of Austria is going to punch a time-clock.

This scion of the former royal family of Austria is leaving for the United States shortly, planning to go to work in New York. He will be his own boss, but he plans to labor with "nine to five" regularity.

The archduke intends to open an office of his own on Broadway, to be known as "Ideas, Inc." Wholesale traffic in ideas will be the nature of the business.

The archduke will buy whatever he considers worth while notions from those who have them but can't use them, and will sell them at a profit to those who can make money on them. It's as simple as that.

Reason for Working
A great boredom with the tea and social amenities of life in Barcelona where the exiled royal Austrian family is domiciled has led to this decision to be a business man. The archduke is now in Paris. He plans to quit Europe and idleness simultaneously in September when he goes to New York, accompanied by his business manager.

The project is a complete secret from the family of the archduke. They are not to be informed of his determination to get a job until he leaves, he says. And perhaps not even then.

Era of Changes
This is the era of kings in cashier cases and counts in the counting houses; the royal Leopold believes, and he wishes to be one of the first among them. Society is empty of interest for him, he claims, and the active world of bustle, bustle, quick lunch, hard work, lots of money, and big parties at night—in other words, the life of the man of affairs in New York—is irresistible.

Having spent two years previously in New York, the Archduke Leopold knows whereof he speaks.

Ambassador to Great Brit- ain Struck Keynote of Nation's Policy Toward Naval Disarmament; Brit- ish Press Unanimous in Praising Maiden Address of New Envoy.

Washington, June 19.—General Charles G. Dawes struck the keynote of the Hoover administration's whole policy toward world peace and naval disarmament in his first speech as ambassador to Great Britain. Nothing but praise of the speech was heard today in administration quarters.

That policy, briefly summed up, contemplates a naval understanding between the United States and Great Britain—an understanding based upon equality—which can serve as a foundation for a broader world understanding that will take in the other principal naval powers, Japan, France and Italy.

Carried "Yardstick"
Moreover, the "yardstick" for the measuring relative naval needs, which the general emphasized so heavily in his speech, reposed in his hip-pocket while he spoke. He carried it away from Washington with him two weeks ago, and if it is not already under British scrutiny it is only because the volatile general has not found time, in the hectic few days he has been in England, to present it to his hosts.

This "yardstick" is of American design and structure, evolved by American technical experts under Mr. Hoover's directions, over a period of several months. It aims to reconcile the differences—principally cruiser differences—between the American and British experts.

Gen. Dawes proposed to take these differences out of the hands of the experts and the technicians and put them in the hands of the men who are more used to the philosophy of "give and take" in international negotiation.

The new American "yardstick" would discard the hard-and-fast rule of tonnage in figuring relative naval needs, and propose instead a more elastic formula by which fighting strength would be the unit of measurement.

An Example
For example, Britain, with her far-flung coaling stations and naval bases, can utilize smaller cruisers to better advantage than the United States. American requirements call for larger cruisers. That was the rock upon which the Geneva conference split. What the American "yardstick" now contemplates is to have the technical experts figure out how many tons of small cruisers, say with 6-inch guns, will equal how many tons of larger cruisers, armed with 8-inch guns. In this manner, Great Britain might be allowed, for example, 350,000 tons of 6-inch gun cruisers as compared with 300,000 tons of 8-inch gun cruisers for the United States, the tonnage superiority for Britain being offset by the gun superiority for America.

Dawes' Suggestion
"It would seem," said Gen. Dawes, "that each government might negotiate with the other to experts their definition of the yardstick, and then the inevitable compromise between these differing definitions by statesmen."

In short, let the experts and the technicians provide the yardsticks, and the five-and-ten kind of statesmanship will do the rest.

However, there is no disposition either in Washington or in London of strictly limiting the American and British fleets, and at the same time permitting the other powers, Japan, Italy and France, to go grandly ahead with unrestricted building. They are parties to the existing 5-5-3 limitation treaty, which is to come up for revision two years hence.

Before the revision becomes necessary, it is the present intention of the Hoover administration, and seemingly of the labor government in England as well, to arrive at an Anglo-American understanding which will afford the basis upon which the smaller powers can correspondingly reduce or limit their naval structures.

LONDON'S REACTION

London, June 19.—Unanimous praise of the speech of General Charles G. Dawes, American ambassador to Great Britain, before the Pilgrim's Society last night, is expressed in the London press today.

Newspapers of widely divergent political tendencies unite in acclaiming the outspoken appeal of the new ambassador for a world disarmament conference, and his suggestions for a change in the methods of disarmament negotiations are favorably commented upon.

In highly authoritative circles today, belief was expressed that the speech of General Dawes and that of Premier Ramsay MacDonald, in which the desires of the American ambassador for world peace were echoed, would go a long way toward directing the great body of world opinion toward naval reduction. Will Take Time. Immediate action is not expected, but it is hoped that the naval technicians of each nation will shortly begin work on the formulation of the "yard-sticks" Ambassador Dawes suggested. These "yard-sticks" would later be examined jointly by the statement of the world in an effort to reach a compromise to make disarmament possible.

In his first public utterance as ambassador to the Court of St. James, made last night at the Filigree society dinner in his honor, General Dawes made it clear that only by first agreeing amicably on naval reduction could the world powers eventually attain lasting peace. Almost simultaneously, Premier Ramsay MacDonald, speaking at a dinner in his honor at Lossiemouth, Scotland, echoed similar sentiments in making a brief, matter-of-fact statement of Great Britain's plans for working toward the same object in conjunction with the United States.

CASE AGAINST POLITO IS NOT YET CLOSED

Prosecuting Attorney Charles R. Hathaway said today that the State had not closed its books in the case of Joseph Politto of 40 Irving street, driver of the automobile which struck and fatally injured four-year-old Samuel Poleu of Middle Turnpike West Monday night. The accident is being thoroughly investigated and if the facts warrant court action, such will be taken.

about the case than do many outside. Although United States District Attorney William B. Bartels declared he was investigating a report that Miss Hix was involved in a school narcotic ring, Prof. Snook declared the young woman was not a user of drugs. Police questioned Mrs. Snook, wife of the prisoner, for several hours, but released her, announcing she was able to throw no light on the mystery. Mrs. Snook admitted she planned to file suit for divorce against Dr. Snook. Practically every language under the sun is in daily use in the United States.

CONGRESS RESTS AS HOOVER WORKS

President to Remain at Capital for Another Month; Has Much to Do.

Washington, June 19.—President Hoover will remain in Washington "hard at work" while Congress plays for a month at least, and he may remain all summer, it was indicated at the White House today. Congress takes a recess today, the Senate until Aug. 19, and the House until Sept. 23, but the President has made no plans to take advantage of the two months offered by the Senate's absence from Washington.

Hoover changes his mind after he selects his farm board—a matter of two weeks—and clears the diplomatic slate. Ambassadors to France, Spain, Italy, Japan, Germany, and Cuba, must be appointed, and a few posts in South America, it is believed, will have new occupants. These appointments are expected to occupy the President several weeks, and at best he would have only a portion of the second month of the recess, it was explained.

To Keep Working. President Hoover, it was said, has felt that his first year in office should find him at his desk, feeling the personnel selections for his administration. There is a possibility, however, that because a trip across the continent is no unusual thing for him—he just packs up and goes—he may visit his Palo Alto, California home, some time before Aug. 19. The President's week-end camping and fishing trips may be extended, so that he will leave the White House for his camp in the headwaters of the Rapidan river in Shenandoah National Park, Va., Friday, returning Monday. The executive offices, busier under the Hoover regime than before and usually marking time during the summer, will hum with activity throughout the hot season. While vacations will be the rule as before, those who stayed on the job before found that almost like a vacation, but this year it will be a different story.

WOMEN RUM RUNNERS LATEST ALONG BORDER

Moors, N. Y., June 19.—Women rum runners are the latest troubles in the lives of the border patrol.

The women, a "liquor importer" revealed today, are being used as drivers of liquor in the United States in order to allow suspicion. Once they have passed the customs men, the cars are turned back to male drivers. Despite this new wrinkle in rum smuggling, it was said, the price of drivers is certain to rise as a result of the tightening-up process which has followed the shooting of Arthur Gordon. Whiskey now selling in the states for $8 a quart is expected to cost $12 within the next few days. Drivers who formerly brought "loads" across the border for $40 are now demanding $100 because of the possibility that they might be shot. MOTORCYCLIST KILLED. Ware, Mass., June 19.—Tossed from a motorcycle when he skidded in the soft dirt, Stanley Wojcik, 30, a sailor on furlough from the U. S. S. Ogala was killed today enroute home from a dance in Palmer.

S. M. E. ENTERTAINMENT KEEPS MINDS OFF HEAT

Interesting Program at Local Church Succeeds in Amusing 200 Men, Women and Children.

Lester Grimes, the mystery man, and former local boy who has made a name for himself as a magician, with the other artists on the program given last night at the South Methodist church succeeded in keeping the minds of more than 300 men, women and children, off the extreme heat by the variety and interest of their offerings. The work of the artists was enthusiastically received and the program was lengthened by many repeat numbers.

The Maxwell Mandolin club played four selections under the leadership of Thomas Maxwell. Miss Mildred Gibson of West Hartford, soprano, has a fresh, sweet voice and her numbers were chosen with taste. Miss Beatrice Hamilton's readings were also greatly enjoyed. The leaders on the entertainment program were unquestionably Lester Grimes and the Lawrence Sisters. Mr. Grimes performed for the greater part of an hour to the delight of all particularly the children who were present in large numbers as the entertainment was given for the benefit of the church vacation school. Mr. Grimes was assisted in his mystic feats by four young ladies from the audience.

The Lawrence sisters are members of an exceptionally clever musical family. They played on a great variety of instruments, but a new and clever skit was based on what appeared to be an ordinary lady's umbrella. They commented upon it, examined it and discovered that the handle would slide like a trombone. One sister played the slide while the other blew into the pointed end of the umbrella and the children were hilarious over the performance. When the mandolin club appeared for its final number, Leon Holmes entered and gave one of his humorous "Rube" monologues. During intervals in the entertainment, young girls of the Sunday school sold candy.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH GROUPS FESTIVAL

Strawberry Supper and Entertainment to Be Held on Friday Night at Church.

St. Mary's Ladies Guild, Girls Friendly society and Men's Bible Class will be busy at that hour evening on the Strawberry festival and entertainment, under the general chairmanship of Henry Marcham of the Bible class. The doors will open at six o'clock and the ladies will be ready at that hour to serve a variety of dishes containing the popular June berries. Homemade cake and candy, ice cream and ice cold soda or hot coffee will also be on sale. It will only cost a dime to enter but the managers hope everybody will come with full pocketbooks and keen appetites to insure the financial as well as social success of this annual event. The program will be given at 8 o'clock and Mrs. Ethel Davis is directing the sketch to be presented. There will also be vocal numbers. The candy committee consists of Mrs. William Mason, Evelyn Robinson and Clifford Wright. The refreshment committee, James McCullom, Joseph Corday, Walter Statham, Cakes committee, Joseph Miller, Mrs. Andrew Ferguson, Miss Viola Greenaway. Ticket Committee, Mrs. William Crawford, Violet Madden, Walter Gustafson. Miss Margaret Stratton and Miss Violet Madden will be in charge of music. Mrs. Ethel McKay will act as treasurer.

river in an exclusive interview with International News Service. "I went into the service to uphold the prohibition law, and I quit because I couldn't stand for the killing of innocent people," he said. "Every time they line a patrol up—which is every eight hours—the officers in charge ride you," said Jacques. "They tell you that the immigration officers are making seizures and they want to know why you're not doing something. When the boys go out they are ready to shoot anybody and anything."

Mostly Green youths. "It is an unfortunate situation. In Detroit the augmented force of dry officers is largely recruited from Michigan, Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee. Many of the agents are green youths from the hills of Kentucky and Tennessee. "They are frightened when they go out on the job. They are imbued with the idea that they are going into battle. They want to keep their jobs and make a record—and they shoot at the boys must be 'on the take' (accepting bribes). I know that the boys broke down because the men running them were inexperienced. But all this complaint makes them quick on the trigger."

Jacques, who is returning to the real estate business in Detroit, declared that he is interested only in bringing unnecessary killings by dry officers. His father is a retired sergeant of police in Detroit who says he never was forced to kill a man.

eventually as general in use as automobiles," he said. The Next Step. "Commercial aviation in charge of experienced operators is entirely practical today on a commercial basis," said the colonel. "The next step is to perfect planes and equipment that can be flown by inexperienced persons more or less in the manner in which the automobile is used today. Before that sort of flying is universal, planes will have to be more foolproof and generally safer than they are today, in the hands of inexperienced pilots."

Lindbergh declared that the day of planes for personal use on any large scale, was still in the future. He said that the present designed planes prevented a novice from always flying them safely. "There are two auto-gyro machines—one from Europe and one from the United States—entered in this safety competition," Lindbergh said. "The idea is to test out the revolutionary as well as the evolutionary with the idea of eventually developing the fool-proof machine."

30 DEAD IN JAPAN

Tokio, June 19.—A check-up was being made today of the toll of life taken and damage wrought by the eruption of the Volcano Komoro, take on the Island of Hokkaido. Active eruption has now ceased, although dense smoke is still issuing from the crater, darkening the sky for forty miles around. Ashes and lava covered virtually all the territory around the volcano for a radius of 150 miles to the depth of an inch. Sixty square miles at the base of the mountain suffered severely. Official computations show thirty dead, but many are missing, and it is feared the death toll will mount. The property damage is tremendous. EIGHT KILLED IN WRECK. Brussels, Belgium, June 19.—Eight persons were killed and many injured when a train carrying a number of railroad workmen collided with another train at Grammont today. All the dead and injured were on the workers' train. The Bodleian Library at Oxford, England, is the oldest public library in Europe. It was founded in 1444 by Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester.

WIMBLEDON TENNIS DRAWINGS ARE OUT

Tilden in With Cochet, Coen and Hennessy; Miss Willis Bracketted With Nuthall and Cross.

London, June 19.—Draw for the Wimbledon Championships, starting Monday, June 24, was announced here today. Henri Cochet and John Hennessy play in the first quarter, while William T. Tilden and Wilbur Coen fall in the second. Jean Borotra, Wilmer Allison and George M. Witt, are drawn in the third quarter, with Francis T. Hunter, Jacques Brugnon and John Van Ryn in the fourth.

Eliminating the possibility of a Cochet-Tilden final, the draw makes a final between Cochet and Hunter or Tilden and Borotra or Brugnon likely, although an all-American final is possible also. In the Ladies' play, the draw places Helen Willis, Betty Nuthall and Edith Cross in the top half. Senator Lili D'Alvarez, Elizabeth Ryan, Helen Jacobs, Elizabeth Morrill, Mrs. Mae Bundy, and Mrs. Molla Mallory in the bottom half. Despite the fact they are both in the top half, Miss Willis and Miss Nuthall cannot meet until the semi-finals. Miss Nuthall is considered the British hope for the championship.

The state subject was "Connecticut Seeks 200,000 Acres of Forest Land," discussed by Agnes Mayer. "New England Calls in the Summer Time," was discussed by Doris Bronkie, Ernest Berggren and Eleanor Werran.

Thomas McPartland, representing the Boys' Nature and Science Clubs, presented an aquarium to the next year's club. The gift was accepted by Fred Dey of the seventh grade representing next year's clubs. BIG DAM BURSTS. Waynesboro, Pa., June 19.—A bursting section of the Lake Royer dam near Camp Albert D. Ritchie, Maryland, today sent 40,000 gallons of water cascading down near-by gulleys to the patched farm lands near Rousersville, Pa., causing crop and property damage estimated at $50,000. No persons were directly in the path of the onrushing waters. Eight Waynesboro High school girls, camping in a bungalow 50 yards from where the torrent smashed through the dam, fled to safety when roused by a Waynesboro newspaperman.

AMBASSADOR DAWES

When Ambassador Dawes came back from Europe as General Dawes and appeared before a Congressional committee he made news. He was original in the answers he gave. When he was inducted into office as vice-president he followed his established custom of acting promptly and with originality. Having been made ambassador he is proceeding with his customary efficiency. When he spoke last night before the Pilgrims Society not the slightest of the members napped while he was on his feet. If they didn't know it before it is apparent to them now that the United States has sent to them not merely an ambassador but a man.

With his presentation of his credentials to the King and his man to man talk with Ramsay MacDonald, both before he was free from his sea legs, he has set a pace for going directly at the job for which there was no precedent. But there is no time for him to catch his breath. If there is one thing more than to be wealthy we require of our Ambassador to the Court of St. James it is to keep busy. No other official of the government, excepting only the President, pretends to hold the pace demanded of our Ambassador in England.

And he does much of it on his own money, which leaves quite a few of us out of the running as possibilities to succeed the General. One must be a fairly rich man to afford the appointment, a very rich man if he affords it without the necessity of worrying about the cost. Ambassador Dawes with all of his desire to hurry matters and get at the meat of the thing in hand will do some fast stepping to keep up with the appointments he must make. These more than would keep a small battalion moving at the double.

In London an Ambassador's first three months are his busiest. It takes him about that time to become initiated. And in this instance General Dawes lands there for two of the three busiest months of the year, May, June and July. He seldom may dine at home because of engagements he must make. When he does, at least once in every two weeks he gives a dinner of considerable size. Chambers of Commerce pursue him; sporting clubs open their houses and grounds to him; he is made an honorary member of London clubs. As the head of the American colony he is claimed for every possible occasion that is especially marked by Americans. He is a standing feature at city banquets and there are few unwellings or special ceremonies in which he does not participate. Merely reading the list of the engagements our Ambassador must make, without considering the tremendous amount of work he must concentrate on every morning, makes an ordinary mortal tired. It is no wonder that at seemingly frequent intervals our envoy to Great Britain is reported as returning to the United States for a vacation. For once General Dawes has a job that, doing it as he does everything, will require all of his energy and when he gets a chance for a vacation he'll need it.

GETTING EFFICIENCY

Many who voted for President Hoover did so primarily because they believed he would exercise his engineering abilities for the benefit of the country in general. Only close students of governmental affairs have appreciated how successful the President has been in "engineering" high salaried men from private business to take responsible positions under the government at mere pittance incomes. These are not "Dollar-men" whom Irvin Cobb declared, were "grossly overpaid." They are $100,000-a-year men in private business who, because of the representations made to them by President Hoover, have accepted positions in his administration at salaries ranging from $6,500 to $10,000 a year. In selecting these men "efficiency first" has been the rule which has left a long trail of disgruntled senators and congressmen who failed to land their men.

"You made sacrifices to serve your country in time of war; I ask you to show your patriotism again by making sacrifices for your country in time of peace." In effect this was the appeal made to Col. Earl D. Church of Hartford, Conn. Mr. Hoover long ago reached the conclusion that the Pension Bureau needed overhauling and that, as it was comparable in its business to an insurance company an insurance man was needed for the job. Insurance suggested Hartford. Hartford suggested a personal friend upon whose judgment the President could depend. Thus he heard of Col. Church. By an appeal to patriotism he got him.

Another case in point is that of Frederic A. Tilton of Detroit. To straighten out postal service affairs the President and Postmaster General decided they needed an expert public accountant—a good one; and an expert of experts in his line. Again the President did his own looking around and his eye lit on Mr. Tilton, a member of a firm with nation-wide business. Again there was the plea to sacrifice his personal interests for the benefit of the country. And Mr. Tilton finally yielded and has taken the job of third assistant postmaster general at an annual salary of $9,000.

These are just samples of the sort of men the President has reached out after—and landed. He wants efficiency. He evidently intends to get it if he has to rob every big business in the country of its $100,000-a-year men.

GEN. DAWES' SPEECH

It's a large order that Ambassador Dawes and Premier MacDonald have undertaken—to bring about an agreement between the world powers on naval disarmament as a necessary step to world peace. Two words in the speech of the Ambassador last evening before the Pilgrims Society are the answer: "Inevitable compromise." But this plan advanced by the Ambassador and the Premier gives something on which to compromise—the co-operative employment of naval technical experts whose first business will be to agree on a definition of abstract equality. With that as a basis for the evaluation of the fighting strength of ships "one might find a 'yardstick' with which to determine the military value of individual ships," General Dawes said.

Of equal importance was his declaration that any negotiations between the two English speaking nations would be carried on only as part of a general world movement for naval reduction and that any attempts of individual governments to formulate covenants without the participation of all the great powers would be frowned upon by the United States and England.

This plan appears to carry some hope of ultimate success but the Ambassador said, only by the "inevitable compromise."

MODERN HORSE THIEVES

In these days when horse thieves operate they do it differently than in the hey-days of such crimes. Back in the days when a horse was a horse, a thief broke into a barn, saddled and bridled and made his captive carry him to safety or until he felt the end of a rope about his neck. But the modern horse thief, it is reported from Greenwich, steals the horse and then transports the animal on a truck. Reports to date have not specified the value of the animal, either as a circus performer or a track animal with a record but if it has neither of those qualifications the only other reason we can think of for stealing the animal was to take it on an outing. It is plain that all concerned were city bred for the two thieves knew no better than to stop near a pond with boggy shore and lead the animal to drink. And the city bred animal with no acquaintance with uncertain footing, became mired and nearly died before a fire company managed to rescue it. Modern day thieves should stick to goods with which they are familiar.

A RESCUE FROM THE AIR

Score four for the seaplane. Pilot Wickes, who was giving passengers the sensations of an air fight over the sea at Revere, Mass., Sunday, sighted an upset sail boat with four youths clinging to it. He landed his plane, which has a capacity of only four passengers, on the water, assured the boys he would be back for them as soon as he could unload his passengers and in a few minutes had made the four rescues. Reports do not say whether his first passengers were taken up again to get their money's worth or whether they were satisfied to have their flight cut short and the sensation added. But it was a real rescue, well managed and saved four lives. No boat was near and no one had seen the upset craft until Wickes, who is a pilot in the naval reserve, sighted from his perch aloft the boys in trouble. You certainly can see things from up there.

A GOOD SIGN

Even those of us who have no direct interest in any particular college cannot but be impressed with the flood of substantial gifts that are made each Commencement, or announced then, to promote the work of the colleges and universities. A million here, half a million there, a quarter somewhere else with smaller amounts in innumerable instances. It is one of the periodical assurances we receive that all is not wrong with the world. These gifts are not always from grateful alumni who have been honored by their alma mater but in some instances by those who have never been permitted a college education but who believe in such benefit for others. It is one of the best signs of the age.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCUE

Chronic and Acute Bronchitis
 Acute bronchitis is sometimes known as a cold on the chest. It is not usually serious with healthy adults, but may turn into bronchial pneumonia in the very young or very old. Usually, it begins as a cold, but spreads into the large air passages to the lungs (the trachea and bronchial tubes) which become inflamed, congested, and covered with mucous and pus. In its acute form, bronchitis is quite contagious.

The disease seems to be predisposed by overheated rooms, bad air, or contact with fumes or dust. The bronchial tubes become less resistant when there are diseases of the heart, kidneys or liver, and almost always become inflamed during measles, typhoid fever, asthma and whooping cough.

The beginning spreads to the trachea and bronchi, producing a cough with a feeling of oppression and pain in the bones and back. The fever may be very mild, or range up to 103 degrees. There is also a constant desire to clear the throat. There may be a very intense oppressive feeling in the chest and the cough may be very distressing. The secretions are at first scanty and tenacious, but after a few days become softer and more abundant. As soon as a large amount of sputum can be raised, much relief is experienced. In healthy persons, the fever should subside by the end of a week and recovery should have taken place by the end of another few days.

In children and elderly people, the bronchial tubes do not seem to expel the mucous as readily, and it oozes into the lower parts, spreading inflammation throughout the lungs and smaller tubes. If you have had several attacks of acute bronchitis or are troubled with lung infections, heart or kidney disease or gout, the probability is that you will develop a chronic bronchitis, producing a shortness of breath, chronic cough, especially severe in Washington, June 19.—One of the largest pairs of pajamas in the United States has a color design of wide pink and white stripes. These pajamas are those of the Hon. William Howard Taft, chief justice of the United States, who has been dashing around so actively at the age of 71 that he was forced to retire to a local hospital room for a rest.

It probably is unnecessary to observe that Mr. Taft has never appeared in pajamas on the supreme bench—though one never really does know just what a justice wears under his big black robe—nor has he been seen in costume at any of Washington's fashionable pajama parties. In fact, Mr. Taft's incarceration at the hospital represents the first time the Taft pajamas have been on display here outside the Taft home.

Photographers have gone to the hospital hoping for a picture of Mr. Taft in his pink and white pajamas, only to be completely disappointed.

One of the attaches at the Cuban embassy, whose name will not be mentioned because he is otherwise a man of high and upright principle, does not take the prohibition laws with the utmost seriousness. At a small dinner party in the Willard hotel dining room he put a bottle on the table, which caused more commotion in that famous hostelry than anything since Will Rogers filmed a shooting scene in the lobby.

First came the waiter and politely asked him to remove the bottle; he must either put it on the floor or in his pocket.

"All right," said the attaché, "then you put that bottle of Apollinaris water in your pocket!" "Why should I do that?" demanded the waiter.

"Well, why should I put this bottle in my pocket?" demanded the attaché.

After some more conversation of that sort the head waiter came and explained that having the bottle on the table was against the rules. Furthermore, a man and a woman at a nearby table had complained about it.

"Well, you tell them to take their soup off the table!" insisted the attaché, and there was further

Symptoms of Poor Elimination
 Question—C. J. asks: "What causes a bad taste in my mouth in the morning and sometimes all day. Also, what causes my tongue and mouth and throat to be always coated? Does the fact that I don't drink very much water have anything to do with this?"

Answer—Insufficient elimination of toxins from the body is probably responsible for the coating of your tongue and throat to be always coated. You can increase kidney elimination through drinking large quantities of water, but you must also diet and exercise to overcome the sluggish condition of your colon, and to make the bile from your liver flow more readily.

Cereals and High Blood Pressure
 Question—J. L. B. asks: "Is flaxseed meal good to use as a cereal or breakfast food? And should a person with high blood pressure use cereals at all?"

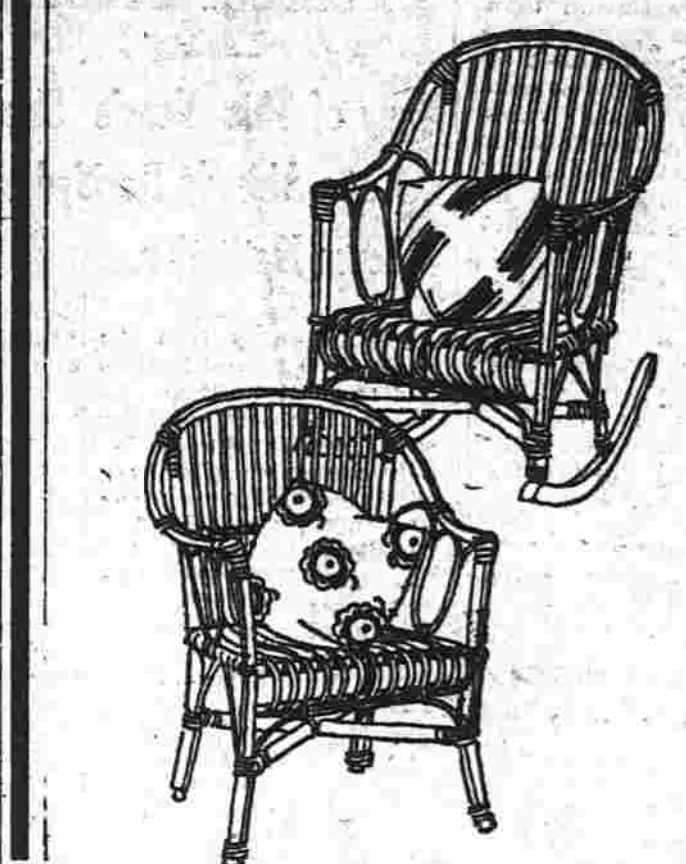

Answer—It is better to mix the flaxseed meal with some other breakfast food, such as real whole-wheat grain, or with one of the dextrinized flake breakfast foods. Those with a very high blood pressure should not use cereal foods at any time until they have well conquered the tendency to arterial tension or hardening of the arteries.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Hyperacidity
 Question—A. M. asks: "Will you please advise me what to do? I have an acid system."

Answer—What you probably mean is that you have hyperacidity of the stomach. This can be cured if you will learn to live on the proper food combinations. Follow

New York, June 19.—Attract want to beg a single nickel. He happened to get a crowd of Stunts, novelty, trickery—anything to grab a transient penny! Strange people engaged in strange antics! Such is the song of the sidewalk streets in mid-town Manhattan.

At a fireplug a fellow stops for a moment and pretends to tinker with the top. Soon he has a small crowd around him. They all gawk like stage yokels. A copper keeps a keen eye roving the outskirts for a doorway and whispers that he has a copper. Soon the fellow has whipped out a bit of felt and some polish. He begins to shine up the brass top of the hydrant. He's selling something, individuals in the crowd look foolish. They've been taken in.

Down street another fellow dressed like a musical comedy Frenchman—few Frenchmen really look like that—stops you and asks a polite question. He pretends not to understand your answer. He begins to argue in bad English. Suddenly he whips an envelope from his pocket and in the best, or worst, of Brooklyn English tries to sell you some dirty French postcards. You knew—at least I did—that he was a phoney from the moment he walked up. But I was curious about his racket.

Milling in the crowd on the Grand Central station floor—a furtive-eyed, excited-looking fellow who rushes up with the information that he has left his purse at home. Oh, no... no indeed, he doesn't there's an hour limit on parking. He takes a territory of several blocks and "works" the busy men of the office buildings. For fifty cents a day he sees to it that your car is moved at regular intervals and is back where it started by the end of the day. With ten or more customers he can make his $5 a day without working.

What a world!

The fellow dressed in sailor tops who displays a pair of trick parkies. They perform so amusingly, you're intrigued into buying them. But when you get home you find that, somehow or other, he switched cages on you. The birds you bought can't do a darn thing but squawk. Oh well, I come by it honestly! My grandfather bought one of the first gold bricks.

AT THE STATE

"His Captive Woman"
The famous "Black Beach" near Hilo, Hawaii, where the sand is as black as coal and the breaking of the surf over it is whiter than surf any place else in the world, is one of the beautiful and romantic backgrounds for "His Captive Woman," the new First National picture co-starring Dorothy Mackall and Milton Sills at the State theater.
Director George Fitzmaurice and the rest of the company traveled to the Hawaiian Islands to make scenes for this highly dramatic story, adapted from the story "Changing," from the pen of Donn Byrne. In the remote islands of the Hawaiian group they found some of the most beautiful settings ever used as background for a film.
"His Captive Woman" is a George Fitzmaurice production, and is the dramatic story of a New York "jazz baby" who murders a millionaire and flees to the South Seas on the yacht of another admirer.

She is returned to face trial by a New York policeman after the two have some thrilling experiences. Miss Mackall plays the pursued woman and Sills the policeman.
A fine cast is seen in support of the two featured players. It includes George Fawcett, Frank Reicher, Sidney Bracey, Gladden James, Marion Byron, Jed Prouty and many others.
The short subjects consist of two acts of Vitaphone vaudeville, comedy and novelty reel. Coming Friday and Saturday is Reginald Denney in "Clear the Decks" and "Simba," the picture you've wanted to see.

The Great Barrier Reef, fronting the coast of North Australia, is the largest coral reef in the world. It is 1,000 miles wide.

Future Edison?

Sixteen-year-old Burton Power, above, is Kansas' choice for Thomas A. Edison's successor, he having been chosen as that state's official entry in the Edison contest at the University of Kansas. Power will go to the Edison laboratories to stand final examinations with boys representing other states. Friends of the youth insist that he bears a strong facial resemblance to the inventor.

Worcester, Mass.—One good turn deserves another is an age-worn adage, but it was never more clearly proved than when Buckall Johnson, of Mill street, rescued E. W. Crandall from the waters of Lake Quinsigamond after the latter's motor-boat capsized.
About a year ago when Crandall was cruising about the placid waters of the lake in his boat he saw another capsized, and going to the rescue, pulled Johnson from the water.

THIS HAS HAPPENED.

NAN CARROLL, private secretary to JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, lawyer, is in love with Morgan. Morgan, however, is madly in love with his arrogant though beautiful wife, IRIS. Nan decides to resign, but lingers when she hears Morgan is to defend a supposed friend, BERT CRAWFORD.

Nan distrusts Crawford, and her suspicion that he and Iris are in love is confirmed by letters which little CURTIS MORGAN, age 6, innocently places in Nan's hands. He apparently has taken it from his mother's handbag. After his acquittal, Crawford leaves town and in a few days Iris departs. She writes her husband that he must not seek her, cleverly omitting reference to Crawford, whom Morgan trusts implicitly.

Morgan is broken-hearted and Nan saves him by diplomatic means. He returns, and she acts as long-distance housekeeper for him, winning the love of little Curtis, who adores her. Nan, who has been studying law, goes to the capitol to take bar exams. On her return, Morgan tells her of his intention of divorcing Iris. He stutters a proposal of marriage. She would rather have him that way than not at all. They are quietly married and go on once to the office, where Morgan was her long-distance president—an office for her with her new name on the door beside his.

They are leaving the office to catch a train for their honeymoon when a message comes from DAVID BLACKHILL, suggesting the murder of his wealthy father. He implores Morgan to wait for him. Nan insists that they wait, thus missing their train. Alone, Nan breaks into sobbing as she awaits Morgan's return. He is accompanied by David, who gives himself up to the police.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

At 1 o'clock on their wedding day, John Curtis Morgan telephoned his wife and law partner that important business would keep him away from the office until perhaps the middle of the afternoon.

"I'm awfully sorry, Nan dear," he apologized. "If you hadn't insisted on my—I mean on my—returning, I could have been here this very minute. . . Oh, he's in jail, of course. Preliminary hearing tomorrow. There's no question but that he will be remanded to jail without bail to await the trial of the grand jury, and no doubt at all I'm afraid, that a grand jury will indict him on a charge of first degree murder. We've got a stickler in this case, money. Better get out your wad man's intuition and polish it up. We'll need it."

"It's already working—John," Nan answered shakily. With all her heart she longed to make it "John dear," but she could not trust her voice. Later, when the time and place were propitious, she was glad that he could not see.

"By the way, Nan," his deep voice went on, now with a note of embarrassment in it, "you'll call up the house when you get home, will you, and Mrs. O'Brien that will be home this evening. Dinner, too, if Mrs. O'Brien can manage something a bit extra for us. We've got to celebrate somehow, or I doubt if the wedding will be legal."

Very slowly, Nan hung up the receiver, her heart pounding. "We'll be home this evening." Home! Why, it was her home now! Her home, with Iris Morgan's ghost haunting every corner of it. She took off the receiver again, gave the number of the house that was now her home and for which she had been since Iris Morgan had deserted her husband and child nine months and one week ago.

Estelle, the maid who was now almost fanatically devoted to Nan, answered the phone. The bride gave her message crisply, cutting short the amazed exclamations of the maid.

"Listen, Miss Carroll—excuse me, I mean Mrs. Morgan," Estelle begged earnestly, as Nan was about to hang up. "I forgot, to ask you when you were home today, but you want that picture of the man over the fireplace, don't you?"

Nan's heart almost stopped beating. As clearly as if it had suddenly been hung on the wall before her, "Nan dear," she heard the beautiful, insolent Iris Morgan—every detail of the exquisite profile, the limpid blue-green eye, its strange color almost perfectly matched in the turquoise velvet of the evening gown which flattered the perfection of Iris's tall, slender body, posed like a queen's in a throne chair.

"Yes, take it down, Estelle," she directed in an odd husky voice. "That's what I thought," Estelle agreed, with a slightly relieved expression. "The mister won't want to be reminded of her every time he comes into the drawing room."

Nan cut her short, giving rapid instructions as to the dinner menu, and was again about to hang up the receiver when the maid eagerly thrust in another question:

"Are you and the mister going to sleep in the double guest room tonight, Miss—I mean, Mrs. Morgan? Of course the decorators ain't had a chance to do it over yet, and Mr. Morgan's things are still in the little guest room."

"Leave them there," Nan ordered curtly, her face flaming. "I'll see about everything when I—when I get home. I'll have the express company get my trunk and take it out to the house this afternoon."

She felt no need of lunch, knew that she could not force herself to swallow a bite. Before settling down to the task of transcribing her shorthand notes of David Blackhill's story she leaned back in her swivel chair and let her eyes take in the office which her husband had furnished for her as one of his wedding gifts.

The furniture was beautiful, practical, but unmistakably feminine. A graceful desk of softly gleaming walnut, slightly smaller than would have been appropriate for a man. Beside it and matching in wood and workmanship, a new beloved machine ready for her expert touch. A small fireplace, fitted with life-like coals and emitting a soft glow of light. A later radiance purely for the sake later radiance purely for the sake of cutting; hers, too, the name on the glass panel of the door marked "Private"—Mrs. Morgan. Very different from the outer office of the old suite, where Nan Carroll, secretary, had been interrupted by every buzzing of the telephone, by every caller who had business with John Curtis Morgan, her employer. Oddly enough, Nan sighed.

Richness, beauty and comfort—and all hers; hers, too, the name on the glass panel of the door marked "Private"—Mrs. Morgan. Very different from the outer office of the old suite, where Nan Carroll, secretary, had been interrupted by every buzzing of the telephone, by every caller who had business with John Curtis Morgan, her employer. Oddly enough, Nan sighed.

The instant she realized that she had sighed longingly for what was gone and which she had not been to argue with herself:

"What are you sighing for, I'd like to know? You've earned all this by four years of terrific work. You wanted to be a lawyer. You are a lawyer! You loved John—got him! The Morgan deliberately stating the facts in the balddest manner, for some obscure need to ease the pain in her heart. Her offended conscience reminded her that she had not realized her love for the other woman had already forfeited all claim to her husband's love and respect. It insisted that she give herself credit for not having lifted a finger to win the man she loved and until his wife had deserted him and his child for another man. For the thousandth time, Nan wondered if Iris was happy with her embittered lover, Herbert S. Crawford, of those perfidy John Curtis Morgan still had not the faintest suspicion. Thank God—Nan cried in her heart—she had won her man without betraying the woman who so richly deserved to be betrayed. She had not shown the letter.

Better tear up Bert Crawford's letter now, she told herself. She was going to be living with Iris' husband now—no, no, not Iris' husband! Her husband—and he might accidentally run across it among her belongings.

The letter, she placed there was in the morning when she had turned the key upon the little apartment for the last time. Her hand was on the clasp of the bag when there came a knock at the door. Before she could get to the door, she was answered, Nan whirled to the lighted rapidly, to transcribe her notes. If it was Blake or Evans coming in to kid her about her marriage . . .

"Come in!" she called curtly, without interrupting her flying fingers.

"It's Kathleen O'Hara."

"I've just been out to lunch, Miss Carroll—I mean, Mrs. Morgan—and got this noon edition of the News. They've got the cutest picture of you and Mr. Morgan right on the front page."

"Of me?" Nan asked, startled, as she reached for the paper. "Oh, I see. It was the old snapshot her and John Curtis Morgan walking down the steps of the courthouse, smiling over the successful and dramatic conclusion of the trial of 'Big Joe' Connors for the murder of 'Boss' Popers. Throwing the little newspaper snapshot into the shade was a big, lovely studio portrait of Iris Morgan."

"Thank you, Miss O'Hara," Nan said so curtly that the Irish blue eyes clouded for a moment.

"I'm afraid I interrupted," Kathleen O'Hara said apologetically. "But can't I do that for you? My! I never saw anyone typewrite so fast in my life!" she added, with ingenious admiration. "You could dictate it to me. I'll bet, it is hard for you to remember you're one of the bosses now, and don't have to do your own typing, and I'm just crazy to get really into this work. It must be absolutely fascinating, and a girl has a real chance to advance herself. You've proved that, Miss—Mrs. Morgan—The girl stopped suddenly, her pretty young face scarlet with embarrassment.

Nan dropped her own eyes to her machine, her cheeks as red as the stenographer's. "Thank you very much, Miss O'Hara, but I'll finish this myself. But don't worry—I'll give you plenty of work in the future. I'm afraid, however, you won't find it all absolutely fascinating. We don't get a sensational murder case every day. Let me know when Mr. Morgan returns, please," she added, in a tone that was unmistakably carried dismissal.

When Nan was alone again she forced her fingers to finish the page she was working on. Then, drawn irresistibly, though she knew she would inevitably be hurt, she took up the paper which Kathleen O'Hara had brought her.

"FAMOUS LAWYER WEDS SECRETARY" was the headline across the front page layout of type and pictures. Smaller headlines proclaimed: "John Curtis Morgan, state's foremost criminal lawyer, secretly divorced from beautiful Iris Morgan, makes Nancy Carroll, secretary, his wife and law partner on the same day."

Her flush deepening until her cheeks burned painfully, Nan read the first paragraphs of the "story": "Not until the City Hall reporter was tipped off this morning that a wedding of unusual interest was being celebrated in the office of Justice of the Peace Aloysius Donnelly did it become a matter of public knowledge that John Curtis Morgan, foremost criminal lawyer in the state and former district attorney, had secured an uncontested divorce from beautiful Iris Morgan. The decree was granted on July 23 by Judge Benjamin Haskell, the case being presented by former Judge Charles Jeniffer, and heard by Judge Haskell 'in chambers,' the basis of the plea being desertion. A letter from Mrs. Iris Morgan, in which she announced her intention never to return to her husband's 'bed and board' formed the basis of the suit. A marriage license was secured last Saturday by John Curtis Morgan and Nancy Starr Carroll, but at the request of the couple, the reording of the license did not take place until today; hence the latter surprise with which the public learns today of the famous lawyer's second marriage."

The young bride has been employed as private secretary by Attorney Morgan for four years. Last week she was admitted to the bar, having taken her examinations in June, and today Miss Carroll becomes not only Mrs. John Curtis Morgan, but the junior partner in the new law firm of Morgan & Morgan. The bride gave her age as 25, the groom 37, in addition to her new duties as wife and law partner, the young bride takes on the job of stepmother to little Curtis Craig Morgan, 7-year-old son of—

There was another knock. The pretty, excited face of Kathleen O'Hara peeped in. "Oh, Mrs. Morgan, Mr. Morgan's just come in! He wants to dictate some letters to me first, and says will you please come in when he has finished?"

Alone again, Nan stared about her private office and suddenly asked it as if it had been a prison. Another girl, eager, pretty, young, hero-worshipping, had stolen her job from her—the most intimate contact with John Curtis Morgan that she had ever known. What was left to her? For a moment of sheer panic Nan Morgan would have given up everything she had gained that day to be in Kathleen O'Hara's place.

(To Be Continued.)

The WOMAN'S DAY

by ALLENE SUMNER

It's a safe wager that more people will be interested in the tale of two little children who fell out of the seventh and fifth story apartment windows in New York the other day and will live, than in any other items in the day's news.

The majority of adults are parents. The majority of parents have the normal instinctive concern for their children. Also the instinctive fears. Hope given any of these fears to the effect that little children can fall that far and still live means much.

MA WOULDN'T DO IT.
The father of eight children, an Ohio farmer, has been missing from his home for several days. If it were the mother of eight, no one would ever dream of interpreting her absence as perhaps a final putting into execution of the long simmering feeling that the responsibility was too great and she had to get out—couldn't stand it any longer. Deserting fathers are too common to wonder at. Deserting mothers are a rarity.

MAMMAS EXPLOITED.
Here is a picture of Paul Whiteman, jazz king, attired in chef's apron, handing his mother a sample of raw biscuit dough from the pan of mixture he has made in her kitchen of his old home where he is visiting.

It reminds us of demands put upon the mothers of illustrious sons these days. How they are plotted for those prevailing "human interest" pic. Still, to be the mother of an illustrious son makes one immune from pity. It's the one thing for which most women live.

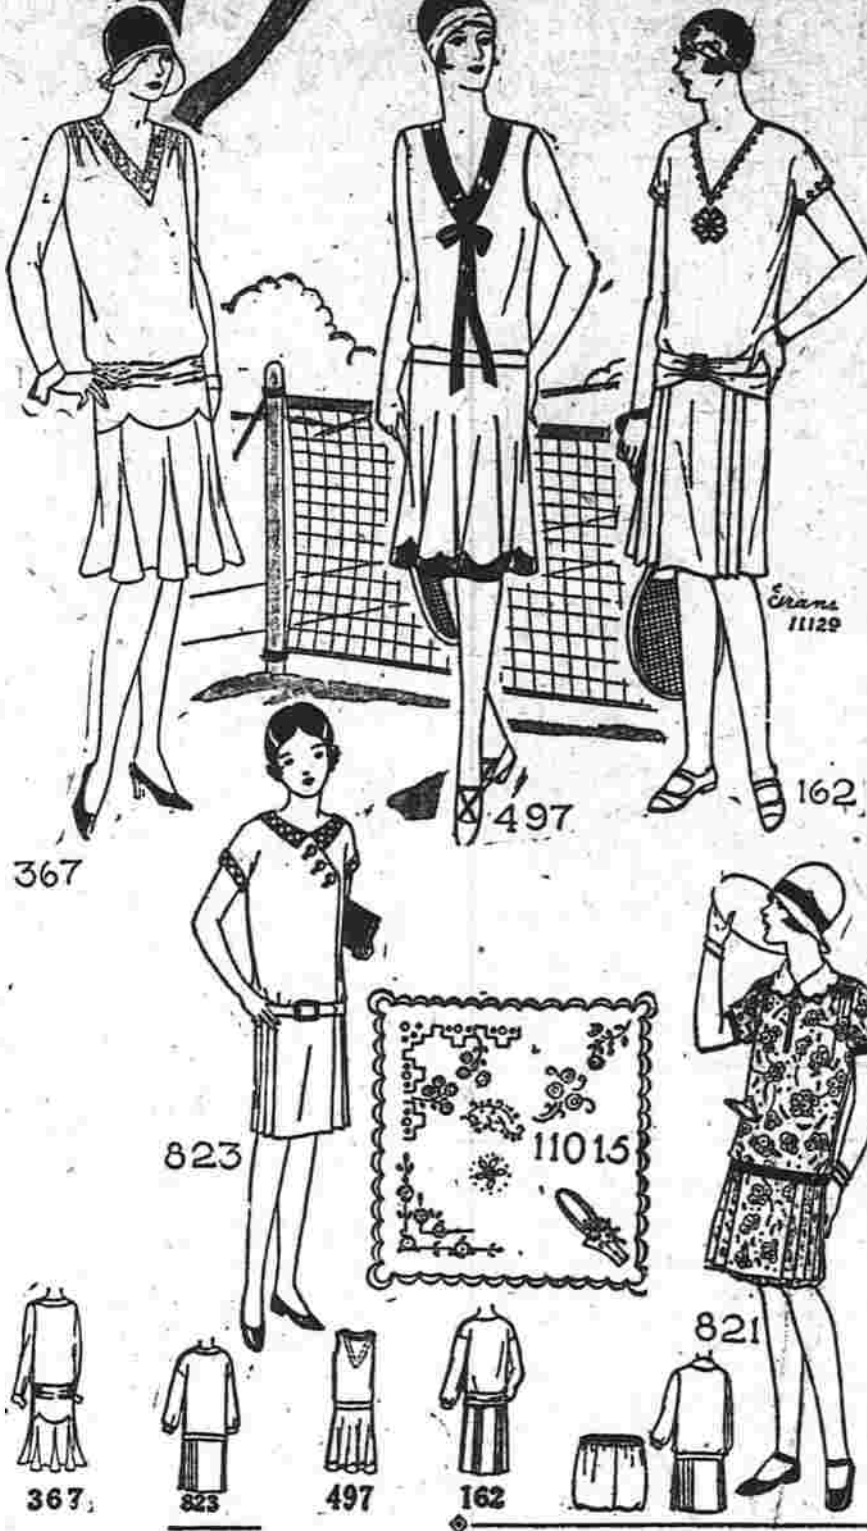

PITY OR ENVY.
And here's a picture of 15-year-old Mrs. Amy Hoffman of New York and her tiny Caesarian-born twins. The dyed-in-the-wool feminist will look upon Amy with pity because her life work, and a hard one, is mapped out for her at so young an age. The mother of children will envy her for her great happiness.

BLAME THE MAN!
And here's a picture of Eva Cofee, 21-year-old mountain lass, on trial for beating to death one Lee Athley of Georgetown, Tenn., who hugged her. I have little doubt that she'll be acquitted. We are still enough of an old-fashioned world to believe that the man is always to blame for daring to lay finger upon the fair person of a lass, and to do it she has been grossly insulted and abused by the happening and can never hold up her head in pride again.

CHILDREN'S DESSERTS.
Fresh fruit shortcakes are an excellent children's dessert when made with graham crackers instead of cake. Top the upper cracker with whipped cream and a single berry and the children will be delighted.

TASSEL TRIM.

A beige evening wrap of velvet is collarless and has its shoulder seams in a raglan cut. From both shoulders matching tassels fall in groups of three. Tassels finish the silken cord which ties the garment shut in front, also.

HANDKERCHIEF TIES.

Some new tennis frocks make much of using sports handkerchiefs for collars and knoting them in ties. A white frock has a plaided orange, brown and white kerchief cut and made into its collar and tie.

BLACK TIES.

The suntan neckless back for tennis frocks sometime causes the shoulder lines to slip. Many cute frocks, therefore, have ties that are stitched at either side and knob in the center. They are narrow enough to allow the sun free rein but do make the frock firmer.

QUAINT GOWN.

A flowered chiffon gown of infinite grace and beauty has a long-sleeved ecru lace bodice with tight waistline and peplum and a full, very uneven skirt of the chiffon. A little chiffon jacket makes it all flowered.

NEW RAINCOATS.

Tweed patterns in rubberized rayon fashion some snappy new raincoats for dull days. They are very lightweight and attractive.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

© 1929 by NEA Service, Inc.

Children under five like to have the same stories read to them over and over again.

Often when we are in the midst of reading them a new and, to us, exciting tale, they will rush off and return with some old delapidated love, demanding: "Read the one about 'Skilley Skallery Alligator,'" or "Tell me about the Wibble-wobble children again."

When we have read the old stories so often we could say them backwards in our sleep, we wonder how on earth any child belonging to us could be so deliberately eager to be unprogressive. Is Johnny unprogressive, is Johnny unprogressive, is Johnny unprogressive, incurious creatures who stolidly set their faces against the unexplored? We sigh a bit hopelessly as we open the worn-out volume and plod mechanically through the beloved little tales without much, I fear, of the pep or enthusiasm we managed so bravely in the first dozen or so readings.

Our duty done, very likely we will make another try and reach hopefully for that new bright book that intrigues our own not-too-adult fancies. "Oh Johnny, come now, do let's find out what became of the poor Balloon Man dangling up there in the clouds. Let me see—where were we?"

"No, read about Uncle Biggity some more. Read where he got lost."

"But I read that yesterday. Twice yesterday. Don't you remember?"

"No. How did he get home again? Read about how he got home."

No use! What in the world is such a child going to do when he starts to school? Are we going to have to go every few days and apologize to the teacher for him being such a dummy?

Parents who are going through this stage of the overand-over books will smile some day, and before so very long at that, when they recall these terrible forebodings.

Children may be different, but in this one thing they are almost exactly alike. The little boy or girl of three or four or even five will insist on the old stories. They will even resent it often if we so much as change a word. In time they will grow into the new story ideas, but while they are little we won't get much support on the brand new tale. Like shoes they improve with wearing, at least as fast as the children are concerned. They are not quite comfortable, the shoes, until they are read at least two or three times. After that they are old friends.

We don't know exactly why it is so. Perhaps, their little minds don't grasp the entire meaning at first and pick up a new thought with each reading. Whatever it is, it doesn't matter, as long as there is no need to worry. And there isn't, I assure you.

"Never make the mistake of overtaxing your body. You must realize that, although you may change your mind, which proves you have more than one, you will go through life with the same body, and you should not overtax yourself by working too hard."

"Four years ago Europe was still in a dangerous state of suspicion and antagonism. The nations were in two hostile camps, each essential unity was still unrecognized. HEALTH

EXTENSIVE USE OF BRAIN TENDS TO MAKE THE HEAD BIGGER

By DR. MORRIS FISHEEN
Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

It is a commonly recognized fact that doctors do not practice what they preach and that the absent-minded professor with a tremendous knowledge of calculus and logarithm is frequently unable to foot up the grocery bill.

This, of course, is a part of human nature. Physician who constantly teach other people the importance of eating slowly are driven by the amount of their practice to a hasty gulping of a sandwich and a glass of milk at lunch.

Largely because the professor of the past was a shut-in type, the cartoonists have come to depict him of dry body and tremendous head, wearing thick lenses because of his near-sightedness and eye strain, and utterly incapable of anything in the way of physical performance. There has, however, come about a considerable change in recent years.

In the first place, the nation's sport has changed from the strenuous activities of the past, such as baseball and tennis, to the milder golf and there has come a general recognition of the value of mild exercise and outdoor life for happiness and longevity. There is hardly a college or university in the country today that has not its golf course adjacent.

Recently Hrdlicka, in order to determine the condition of professors, measured one hundred members of the National Academy of Sciences, all of whom are recognized as high class brain workers. He found that these men were not inferior, but in general superior in physique, strength, health and longevity to old American types.

Moreover, the heads of these men did actually exceed in size not only the heads of the public at large, but even those of well educated and professional persons of old American classes. In other words, the highly talented men of science conformed, physically, to the races from which they were

The Food For All Ages MILK

A MPLE reward for years of healthful living, when grandfather and grandmother can tell the youngsters that plenty of exercise, sleep, and right foods have done to keep them well and happy. Milk and its products revive tired bodies and help to keep cheeks rosy and eyes sparkling.

You, too, can know the animation, the vigor and vitality that comes from regular use of milk in your diet. Order milk and cream for breakfast and for dinner. Use more milk in cooking supper. Let children who need food often than at meal time have milk for mid-morning or afternoon. A quart a day for every child, and at least a pint for every adult, is recommended by all leading dietary authorities.

FOR her latest serial novel, Eleanor Early has written a dramatic and spectacular tale of youth and love, romance and heartache, tragedy and triumph.

"The Shining Talent" is the story of Molly Burnham, a beautiful young college graduate who rose from the ranks of newspaper reporters to achieve an amazing success as a playwright and author . . . But early in her career Molly had had to make a momentous choice between love and ambition, and she had chosen the latter and sacrificed the first . . . So that in the hour of her greatest triumph she found life empty and achievement only a mockery.

This is the theme of "The Shining Talent," a story of compelling interest, with thrilling action and a very human heroine . . . An unusual serial, written by the author of "Orchid" and "Whirlwind"

PRIEST, HURT, GIVES RITES TO DYING KIN

Plymouth, Mass., June 19.—Despite his own injuries, Rev. Joseph J. Murphy, of St. Mary's church, Quincy, administered the last rites of the Catholic church to his brother, Francis Murphy, 40, of Dorchester, who was killed when the automobile in which the brothers and two sisters were riding struck a telegraph pole on the Plymouth road early today.

The sisters, Mrs. Helena Callanan, 62, and Mrs. Mary Crowley, 66, both of Dorchester, were reported as in a dying condition at the Jordan hospital here.

According to police, Father Murphy was driving the automobile, which was owned by Mrs. Callanan, when he became faint due to the excessive heat and lost control of the automobile. The big car crashed into a telegraph pole.

The brother of the priest was catapulted from the car and landed on his head. Father Murphy was the only one to regain his feet after the crash, and realizing the seriousness of his brother's injuries administered the last rites of the church.

WORLD WILL GO ON TWENTY MILLION YEARS
Indianapolis, Ind.—The end of the world is at least twenty million years away, according to Dr. Clyde Malott of the Indiana University department of geology.
"At the present rate of erosion our earth should last some twenty million years, even though 8,500,000,000 tons of material are being delivered each year to the sea," said Dr. Malott.

In 2,000 years any spot on the earth will be one foot lower according to past averages, according to Dr. Malott.

DOUBLE EDGE.
Isn't it hard," said the landlady, "to think this poor lamb was cut down in its youth to satisfy our appetites?"
"Yes," replied the unhappy boarder at the end of the table, "it IS tough."—Tit-Bits.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

You can always "settle" an argument with your wife by "giving in."

SENSE and NONSENSE

Lady: "How much are these chickens?"
Butcher: "A dollar and a half, ma'am."
Lady: "Did you raise them yourself?"
Butcher: "Yes, they were $1.25 yesterday."

She—Don't you think their wedding presents made a striking display?
He—They certainly would have if the eleven parlor clocks had all been going.

"Are your children thoughtful of you?" asked the neighbor.
"Oh, very," beamed the mother.
"When they get home in the morning they always bring in the milk and put it in the ice box for me."

"Well, I'm no longer engaged to that girl I've been going with for two years," said a youth. "You see, I married her."

"Marry me, Richard! I'm only a garbage man's daughter, but—"
"That's all right, baby. You ain't to be sniffed at."

Judge: You admit you murdered your father with a pick axe and your mother with a sash weight, and still you plead for mercy?
Prisoner: Yes, your honor, I throw myself on the mercy of the court.

Judge: On what grounds do you expect mercy, may I ask?
Prisoner: Please, your honor, I'm an orphan.

"Keep up the spirit of right and never die;
>You'll need it in life's battle in order to get by.
"and when the ice gets thin and something seems to dim the light,
"don't give up, you'll win, if you keep that same old fight."

LETTER GOLF

GET IN THE SWIM
Today's your chance to take a SWAN DIVE into the letter golf swim. Par is eight and one solution, which you may be able to beat, is on another page.

Letter Golf grid with words SWAN and DIVE.

THE RULES.

- 1-The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEW, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEEN.
2-You change only one letter at a time.
3-You must have a complete word, of common usage, for each jump. Slang words and abbreviations don't count.
4-The order of letters cannot be changed.
One solution is printed on another page.

"Why don't you send in your jokes to the joke editor?"
"Aw, what's the use? He'd only laugh at 'em."

Clerk—I want to get up in business, sir, very much.
Boss—Then you'll have to get down to business better than you do.

Poppa (at dinner): "Willy, you've reached for everything in sight. Now stop it; haven't you got a tongue?"
Willy: "Sure, Pop, but my arm's longer."

"That's what I call hard luck."
"Whatever that?"
"I've got a check for $40 and the only man in town that can identify me is the one I owe $50."

Passenger (to lady sitting on his hat): "Excuse me, Miss but do you know what you're sitting on?"
Lady: "I ought to, I've been sitting on it for twenty-five years."

Hot heads rush in' where cold feet fear to tread.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)
The scarecrow was a frightened man. He said, "I'll tell you if I can just why I left your cornfield. I was tired of staying there. So I got up and walked away. You see, I thought I needed play. I got real tired of hanging up out in the open air.
"oh, please don't take me back. I fear 'twould make me shed a great big tear. I've found some little friends and I just hate to leave them now. We've planned to run, and roam around to see what new things can be found."
The scarecrow eyed the farmer, as a frown spread on his brow.
The farmer stood and scratched his head, and then he very calmly said: "Well, say, who are these new-found friends? I'd like to meet them all. I think that you are fooling me and so these friends I'll have to see. If they are near at hand, I think they'll answer if you call."
The scarecrow smiled and said, "All right! I'll call to them with all my might." And then he shouted, "Hey, there, bunch, come out here if you please, I need your help to keep me free. I'm just as worried as can be." And then the Tinies rushed out from behind a great big tree.

In just a moment Scouty said, "Well, here we are. Now go ahead and introduce us to your friend, the kindly farmer man." The introduction then took place. A smile spread on the farmer's face. "To make you glad," the farmer said, "I'll do whatever I can."
"Then let the scarecrow play with us," cried Clowny. "Please don't make a fuss. It's our fault that he left his post to seek out funny lands." "All right," the farmer quickly said. "If you want fun, just go ahead." And then he grabbed the scarecrow and real heartily shook hands.
(The Tinymites and Scarecrow hop a ride in the next story.)
