Di Battista Is Found Guilty First Degree

BULLETIN!
Hartford, June 26.—Frank Di Battista was found guilty of murder in the first degree by Judges Avery, Wolfe and Baldwin in the Superior Court at 3:45 this afternoon.

Hartford, June 26.—Frank Di Battista, charged with first degree murder in connection with the slaying of Samuel Kamaroff, Jefferson street grocer, during an attempted hold-up on the night of April 1, last, related the tale of Kamaroff's death to the jury at the Superior Court today. In the midst of the recital, Mrs. Kamaroff, widow of the murder victim, went into hysterics, forcing adjournment of the court, and fainted.

Di Battista Life Story
Di Battista calmly told of his career in various cities and of buying a revolver in New York. With the gun on his person he worked in that city, Boston and Hartford. Calmly he told how his friend Arthur J. Trappoli needed money. Di Battista related his tour of the Jefferson street district on the night of April 1, telling how he observed various stores that seemed likely to furnish good results to a hold-up man, and how they were all lighted.

Finally, Di Battista said, he came to the Kamaroff store. There were no lights, and apparently the store was deserted.

Witness Faints
At this point Mrs. Kamaroff suddenly screamed and threw her arms about a city detective who sat alongside. The court room was in a hub-bub. The judges sensed the situation and Judge Avery, who had been seated on the bench, stepped to the door suddenly in a dead faint. She was carried out as the judges fled from the bench.

Before Di Battista had appeared as a witness in his own behalf, the three judges admitted a written confession from the man concerning the murder. His counsel, John F. Forward and Augustine Louzgan, protested vigorously. They contended the confession had been obtained by force. The judges overruled the objection and the confession went upon the records.

Di Battista's father was a witness in his son's behalf today. Louis Mercier, who had been a cell mate of the accused boy, also took the stand. The father testified that his son was "decent chap" and praised his character generally.

Mercier told of Di Battista's appearance in the cell after an examination by the police. Di Battista had declared he was being held by the police. Mercier applied for a writ of habeas corpus.

Resumes Stand
De Battista finally resumed the stand and told of the shooting of Kamaroff. He declared the grocer advanced and seized his hand. A struggle followed, and in the confusion the revolver which Di Battista held went off, and the bullet went through Kamaroff's head, killing him. Di Battista told how he fled.

ABANDON ALL HOPE FOR OCEAN FLYERS
Planes and Ships Comb Entire Route Without Finding a Trace of Spaniards.

Madrid, June 26.—Fears that Major Ramon Franco, famous Spanish aviator, and his three companions had met the fate of the many who braved the perils of trans-Atlantic flights and never were heard from again, grew stronger today as a continued widespread search of the sea between Portugal and the Azores by ships and aircraft proved fruitless.

Four Spanish destroyers and a squadron of seaplanes have been scouring the water surrounding the Azores for two days without finding a trace of the fliers or their plane. Similar search by Portuguese gunboats also has been in vain.

DAWES' PIPE SETS STYLE

Prince Pulls Out Own Pipe at Banquet and Every Man Present Follows Suit.

London, June 26.—After-attendance pipes at London banquets are expected to be the rage from now on, as the result of the example set last night by General Charles G. Dawes, American ambassador to Great Britain, and the Prince of Wales.

After coffee had been served at the dinner of the Empire Service League, Gen. Dawes produced his pipe and tobacco and asked the prince if he objected to his making use of them. The prince responded by withdrawing his own pipe from the tail-pocket of his evening coat, and filling it from the ambassador's pouch.

In a moment, almost every man in the banquet hall had a pipe between his teeth, and Gen. Dawes and the Prince were hidden for some time behind a smoke screen such as had never been seen before at the royally table of a big banquet.

Both Ambassador Dawes and the prince spoke, stressing friendly Anglo-American relations and paying tribute to the veterans of the war.

IS KILLED ON DAY HE MEANT TO SAIL

Planned for 12 Years to Visit Home in Belgium; Truck Crushes Him.

Lawrence, Mass., June 26.—With his dream of returning to Belgium almost realized after working here as a textile weaver for twelve years, Louis Van Der Hove, 37, was almost instantly killed today when he was crushed against the steps of his home on Water street here by the tail board of a furniture truck.

Van Der Hove with his wife was to leave today. The truck had called to take the baggage to the station, and the happy man was giving the driver, Arthur Desjardins, last minute instructions regarding the baggage.

Desjardins went to the front of the truck to crank the motor. Apparently it had been left in reverse gear and Van Der Hove was caught against the step of his home and the truck.

He died at Lawrence General Hospital. Desjardins was held by police for questioning.

CAPT. HAWKES SEEKS ROUND TRIP RECORD

To Fly to Pacific Coast from New York and Immediately Fly Back.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., June 26.—Frank M. Hawkes, who completed a non-stop flight from East St. Louis to Roosevelt Field late yesterday in six and one-half hours in a Lockheed air express plane, plans to take off at 4 a. m. tomorrow on a non-stop trans-continental flight to Los Angeles, and then to make the return trip here again.

His plane is the Texaco No. 5, the same with which he established the present west to east trans-continental record of 18 hours 22 minutes, last February. He is accompanied by Peter Clausen, his mechanic.

DOLLAR RATE SUGAR TARIFF IS PROPOSED

Sen. Smoot Suggests Sliding Scale to Help Housewives and at the Same Time Protect Industry.

Washington, June 26.—Taking cognizance of the "housewife rebellion" against high sugar tariffs, the Hoover administration now has under consideration a new "sliding scale" of tariff rates on sugar which is described as fair to the consumer and yet gives adequate protection to the domestic sugar industry.

With President Hoover reported as favoring a revision of the high flat rate of $3.00 a hundred pounds adopted by the House, Senator Reed Smoot, (R) of Utah, has prepared a tentative schedule of "adjustable" rates, which he will submit to the Senate finance committee later in the week.

Smoot also announced that his tentative sliding scale would lessen the differential between Philippine and Cuban sugar under the House bill. Philippine sugar would be admitted free while Cuban sugar would be given a flat rate of $2.40 a hundred pounds, a 60-cent differential against all other sugar imports except Philippine.

Sliding Scale
The new sliding scale would even out the old tariff commission's sugar report. In 1924, the fact-finding body recommended that President Coolidge that the tariff on Cuban sugar would be fixed at $1.23 per hundred pounds. Mr. Coolidge, while empowered to raise or lower the sugar tariff, never took any action on the commission's recommendation.

In the Smoot schedule, the dollar-rate would apply only when sugar is selling high on the American market while the high $3 rate would be invoked when sugar prices here were in a slump. In discussing his tentative plan, Smoot said:

"I am working out a tentative plan to be considered by the finance committee which will involve a sliding scale of rates on sugar. It will be fair to the consuming public."

EXPLOSIONS WRECK ANCIENT RESIDENCE

Norwalk Summer Residence 200 Years Old—Family Flee Fire in Nightclothes.

Norwalk, Conn., June 26.—Peculiar by an explosion that shook the district for a half mile, fire today destroyed the summer home of William Elliott, Second, New York business man, on West Norwalk avenue just over the New Canaan line, causing a loss estimated at more than forty thousand dollars.

Mr. and Mrs. Elliott, their son William, Third, aged four; a baby, less than a year old, and a maid, asleep on the second floor, fled in their bed clothing. Mr. and Mrs. Elliott each carried a child, and the entire family barely escaped the rushing flames. They were entirely unharmed.

Second Explosion.
Ten minutes later New Canaan firemen arrived and found no water near the premises. Directly afterward a second explosion occurred that blew a portion of the front of the house nearly two hundred feet into a pasture. Then the house was burned to the ground with all its contents.

Investigation indicated that the fire started when a gasoline stove in the kitchen exploded. The family were sleeping soundly at the time, and awakened, they fled without determining what was the matter. Smoke was seeping through the second floor at the time.

England's Worst Air Disaster

The worst aircraft disaster in the history of British flying is pictured here, for eight persons were killed when a twin-motored London to Paris and Zurich plane crashed in the English channel. Five others, including the pilot, were injured. A salvage boat that came to the rescue is shown above hoisting the plane from the water. In the lower photo you see the wreckage of the giant craft on the beach, where some of the bodies were removed.

SCHREIBER ON ARRIVAL IS A SHEEPISH "HERO"

Stowaway of Yellow Bird Feared His Father Would Spank Him for Act—Has Little to Say.

New York, June 26.—Arthur Schreiber, the Portland, Me., youth who stowed away on the French plane Yellow Bird on its dramatic flight across the Atlantic to Spain, was a sheepish "hero" when he arrived back home by boat today to be greeted by his father, Morris Schreiber, and a flock of reporters.

Young Schreiber looked at his father as if he did not know what to expect—a warm welcome or a spanking. He appeared to be waiting to see which way the cat would hop, so to speak. But only for a few seconds.

"Oh, oh," said the father, rushing to him and breaking into an excited string of Yiddish.

It must have been all right because Arthur, replying in English, said: "I never expected to see you here, father. I'm glad to see you. How's mother?"

No Demonstration
The meeting took place aboard the Leviathan. The elder Schreiber had gone down the bay on a revenue cutter to meet his son at Quarantine.

There was no demonstration for young Schreiber at the pier when the Leviathan docked. The father said they would leave at once for Portland.

Young Schreiber wore a blue suit which had been furnished him by the crew of the Yellow Bird. The riding outfit he wore when he stowed away on the plane was packed in his bag.

Father Stops Talk
Reporters started to question him but his father broke in saying he did not want his son to talk. Adding: "I want him to go away for a while and think over what he has done."

"I'll say this for him—he won't spoil his opportunities by accepting money for signing his name to cigarette testimonials," said the father.

LAWYERS FILE WRIT TO FREE "SCARFACE AL"

Petition Court to Reconsider Case Against Gangster; His Bodyguard is Not Mentioned.

Philadelphia, Pa., June 26.—"Scarface Al" Capone, notorious Chicago gangster, sentenced to a year in the county prison for carrying concealed deadly weapons, launched an attempt to gain his freedom today.

Attorney for the reputed beer baron filed a writ of error legally known as coram nobis with Judge John W. Walsh in the Municipal court. Judge Walsh is the jurist who gave Capone his prison sentence.

Wants Reconsideration.
The writ was filed by Congressman Benjamin Gold, law partner of Bernard L. Lemisch, who defended Capone at his trial. The writ contends judgment in the case was erroneous and seeks to have the court reconsider its own decision if error is proved.

His action is believed in court circles to be the forerunner of an attempt to secure a new trial for the convict. The name of Frankie Cline, Capone's bodyguard, who was arrested with him and also given a one-year sentence, was not included in the petition.

Gold refused to discuss the petition but it was learned that affidavits signed by Lemisch and Cornelius Haggerty, who was associated with him at the trial, accompanied the petition.

What Writ States
The application charged Capone was not allowed enough time to consult with counsel; that the jury drawn and dismissed when he pleaded guilty was prejudiced and that this with the crowded court virtually forced him to plead guilty. In other words, he is seeking a reversal of the verdict on the charge he was "railroaded" and if unable to obtain a reversal of the verdict, the petition will pave the way for a motion for a new trial, court observers said.

Launching of the effort to gain his freedom today set to rest the reports that have prevailed ever since his conviction that Capone sought the safety of a prison cell to escape his enemies.

He was sentenced on May 17 within 15 hours from the time of his arrest as he was leaving a motion picture playhouse here on Market street. Within 18 hours he began serving the sentence imposed in his brief trial.

Co-operating intensively with the police of Boston, Philadelphia, Detroit and other cities to solve quickly an underworld assassination, almost a deadly parallel to the bumping off of Arnold Rothstein, gambler king, New York police cornered five material witnesses, one of them a woman. It was the failure to break the Rothstein mystery which ousted the previous police administration.

Those Held
Edward M. ("Boston Louis") Lewis of Boston, well-known gambler; Mary Seiden, 19-year-old night club dancer; Johnny Wilson, former middleweight boxing champion, once managed by Marlow, now known as the "slot machine king"; Ignatius Coppa, owner of the La Tavernette restaurant, bodyguard of Marlow, and Al Siegel, an entertainer, friend of the Seiden girl.

The prisoners were taken to Long Island City today where District Attorney Newcomb was to swear out John Doe warrants against the missing murderers, presumably from information obtained by some of the material witnesses.

The theory was held by the authorities that Marlow had welched, like his friend Rothstein, on a gambling bet.

Before Marlow was taken for a ride and his bullet-riddled body dumped out on a lonely spot in Queens, there was a race track party.

NO EASIER TERMS FOR ALLIES' DEBTS

After Conference by President With Financial Experts, it is Announced That There Will Be No Alteration of America's Fixed Policy in Regard to What Europe Ows Us.

Washington, June 26.—European hopes for softer war debt terms from the United States—rekindled now that the reparations controversy has been settled on a new basis—are doomed to disappointment.

Nothing has occurred, either in the Paris conference or in yesterday's long talk between President Hoover and J. P. Morgan and Owen D. Young, which calls for any alteration of the fixed American policy with regard to the allied debts, it was stated officially today.

Messrs. Morgan and Young reported informally to Mr. Hoover the intimate details of the Paris settlement, and gave him their opinion of the outlook in Europe. The question of how large a chunk of the German reparations bonds the American investment market is going to be called upon to absorb was touched upon, but nothing apparently was decided.

Germany's Hope
It has been brought forth forcibly to Washington's attention, however, that Germany is now ranged alongside the allied nations in the incessant pressure—and hope—for cancellation or scaling down the amounts owed the United States. Germany's only hope of lessening her own load lies in American debt cancellation, which makes her a direct and interested party to the unceasing propaganda.

The somewhat bitter comment of the German foreign minister, Dr. Gustave Stresemann, that European nations are "colonies" and that they did all the sacrificing at Paris while "other nations," meaning the United States, did none, has been noted here. But a similar remark details chosen to ignore it. They know that Dr. Stresemann is facing a difficult political situation at home in "selling" the young plan to the Reichstag.

Congress in Same Mind
The temper of Congress on the matter of collecting the debts has not changed one iota, since the adoption of the Young plan. There has been any drift whatsoever it has been in the direction opposite to that which Europe desires: Republicans, Democrats and the other camps are united on the debt question.

Indicative of the attitude of the Senate in the matter was the comment today of Senator Reed (R) of Penn., who usually speaks for the Treasury in the Senate.

"I see no reason," Reed said, "why we should assume the responsibility for all the debt that Europe indulged in between 1914 and 1917 just because we entered the war near the end. That would be the effect of placing the burden of these debts on the American taxpayer. I have been and still am vigorously opposed to reduction."

Similar comment came from Sen. Watson of Indiana, the Republican leader, and Senator Smoot (R) of Utah, who was a member of the Commission that found the debts. At the same time, there will be no opposition, or negligible at least, to the proposition of granting Germany a 10 per cent reduction in the American claim for Rhine occupation costs. This amounting roughly to some $25,000,000. But on the other debts, Washington is adamant.

WOMAN FOILS HOLD-UP MEN

Knocks Out One Gunman With a Chair and Then Helps Police Capture Others.

New York, June 26.—William Ehrlich had just opened his delicatessen shop for the day. He was wondering if business would be good. Three young men entered. "Hands Up!" commanded one of them, whipping out a revolver. Ehrlich obeyed. One of the bandits reaved $70 from the till.

At this juncture, the delicatessen dealer's daughter, Mrs. Edna Probst, 23, a well-set-up young woman, emerged from the rear of the store. Quickly she sized up the situation.

ASSOLANT'S BRIDE ARRIVES AT HAVRE

Met by Aviator Husband as "Yellow Bird" Drops Flowers on Ship's Decks.

Havre, France, June 26.—With the trans-Atlantic airplane "Yellow Bird" circling overhead and dropping flowers, Mme. Jean Assolant, formerly Pauline Parker, American showgirl, arrived here today aboard the liner Ile de France.

Mrs. Assolant was met by her husband, whom she married a few days before he took off with Armino Lottl, Jr., and Rene Lefevre in the "Yellow Bird" from Old Orchard, N. Y., on a trans-Atlantic flight that ended at Comillas, Spain.

Need Interpreter.
Lottl was also on hand when the couple was reunited, and acted as interpreter. Assolant speaks only a few words of English, and his bride is equally deficient in knowledge of French.

A touching scene was enacted on the liner's deck when the flier grasped his bride in his arms as the plane which brought him last night fame flew overhead, piloted by M. Assolant's lifelong friend, Major Weiss of Le Bourget Air Field.

Through lanes of cheering people, Assolant and his bride were driven to the Havre City Hall for an official reception by the mayor.

NAVAL CUT PARLEY TO BE HELD SOON

MacDonald, Dawes and Gibson Converse for an Hour on Proposed Conference.

London, June 26.—Negotiations leading to a world conference on reduction of naval armaments had advanced another step forward today following a second conference between Premier Ramsay MacDonald, Ambassador Charles G. Dawes and Hugh S. Gibson, American ambassador to Belgium also attended.

The three distinguished statesmen met at the official residence of the premier at 10 Downing street and conversed for the better part of an hour.

Premier Optimistic
Later, addressing a group of Laborite members of Parliament at the Friends' Meeting House, MacDonald said:

"I am not a prophet and I'm not going to pose as one, but today I had a second conversation with Ambassador Dawes. This time with Ambassador Gibson present, and I am very hopeful.

"I hope that before many days have passed, we will be able to make a definite announcement as to how the negotiations may be conducted, where the conference is to be held, and what definite objects we are to aim at."

Personal Request
This disregard of court tradition is due to a personal preference on the part of the ambassador, who does not choose to wear knee breeches. He explained his reasons to the court chamberlain, who took the matter under advisement and then informed the ambassador that it would be quite "de rigeur" for General Dawes to appear in plain evening clothes.

SEE SOLAR HALO

New Haven, June 26.—A solar halo, visible from every part of the state, adorned the sun at noon today, and boded possible rain though the usual failure of all signs in dry weather worked against the prophecy being fulfilled.

The halo was described by the New Haven office of the Federal Weather Bureau as being circumscribed clouds filled with ice particles. Such formations are common in May and June. It was said, and twice this spring, more prominent ones had occurred.

The previous haloes had failed to develop rain.

AERONAUTICAL C. OF C. STANDARDIZING TESTS

New York, June 26.—The aeronautical Chamber of Commerce announced today six American universities equipped for research in aeronautical engineering have been selected to test commercial airplanes in accordance with a new code of procedure on standard performance.

The six universities are New York University, the University of Michigan, Purdue University, Stanford, the University of Washington and California Institute of Technology.

The new code, which was drawn up by a committee of the aeronautical Chamber headed by Prof. Alexandria Kleim of New York University, is expected to provide manufacturers with a standard basis upon which to compare speed, rate of climb, ceiling, landing speed and other performance data which characterize the capabilities of their planes.

Previously when there was no standard procedure in comparing this data there was a wide range of inaccuracies in the results obtained and advertised.

SOCIETY MEN AID IN BURGLAR HUNT

Capture Man in Swamp; Find $4,000 in Silverware in His Possession.

Swampscott, Mass., June 26.—Two pajama-clad men early today aided police in a burglar hunt which resulted in the capture of John Kenney, 45, of New York, in Palmer's pond swamp. Kenney was charged with breaking and entering and police alleged that loot taken from two homes was recovered.

The two men were Harold G. Cutler, son-in-law of the late Andrew G. Preston, head of the United Fruit Company, and the latter's grandson, Richard A. Preston, 18. Together with Captain James Kennedy, of the Swampscott police, Cutler plunged into the swamp and forced Kenney into the arms of young Preston and police officers.

Burglary Reported Mrs. H. Langley first reported that a burglar had entered her home. After a fruitless search of an hour, police returned to the station only to receive a report from the Cutler home, not far from that of Mrs. Langley, concerning a burglar.

Police answered the call, augmented by the two men clad in pajamas, the hunt began for the burglar and resulted in Kenney's capture. Police said that loot valued at $4,000 consisting of silverware from both homes was recovered.

When brought before Mrs. Langley, Kenney was identified as the man whom she had seen fleeing from her home.

As well as to the producers in this country, it will lessen the differential between Philippine sugar entering this country and that from Cuba in case the price of sugar advances from its present lower levels.

The new scale runs down as low as $1.00 per hundred pounds for refined sugar. The rate in no case will be higher than that provided in the House Bill ($3.00 a hundred pounds.)

Tariff Not to Blame. "If in the future, we had a runaway market (tremendously high prices) from whatever cause imaginable, the tariff could not be held responsible. The only reason that I do not suggest elimination of the duty entirely when the sugar market reaches low levels is that we need the revenue. The government cannot get along without the duty of at least one dollar per hundred pounds on imported sugar."

Although Smoot would not conform to the new scale probably will fix the dollar-rate when sugar is selling in New York at $7.00 a hundred pounds. The high rate, of $3 per hundred pounds, probably would apply when sugar prices had declined to $4 a hundred pounds on the New York market. The entire scale, however, will be given out later in the week, when Smoot has presented it to the finance committee.

The sugar hearings incidentally started this morning before a finance sub-committee, of which Smoot is chairman.

the store and how, as he went, the revolver "broke" and its cartridges fell out.

When Di Battista finished, Col. Roy B. Jones, of Springfield, a ballistic expert, was called for the defense to testify that even if Kamaroff held the arm that had the revolver, the cartridge could have entered Kamaroff's head as it did.

State's Opinion. The state had previously maintained Kamaroff was slain by a "free shot." The defense contended the shot was involuntary.

Before the defense rested its case this afternoon the state presented a note which Di Battista had written to Meric, his cellmate, in which Di Battista said: "I would be willing to die for this if that rat, Crapull, would get a few years for what he did." Crapull is being held as accessory to the murder.

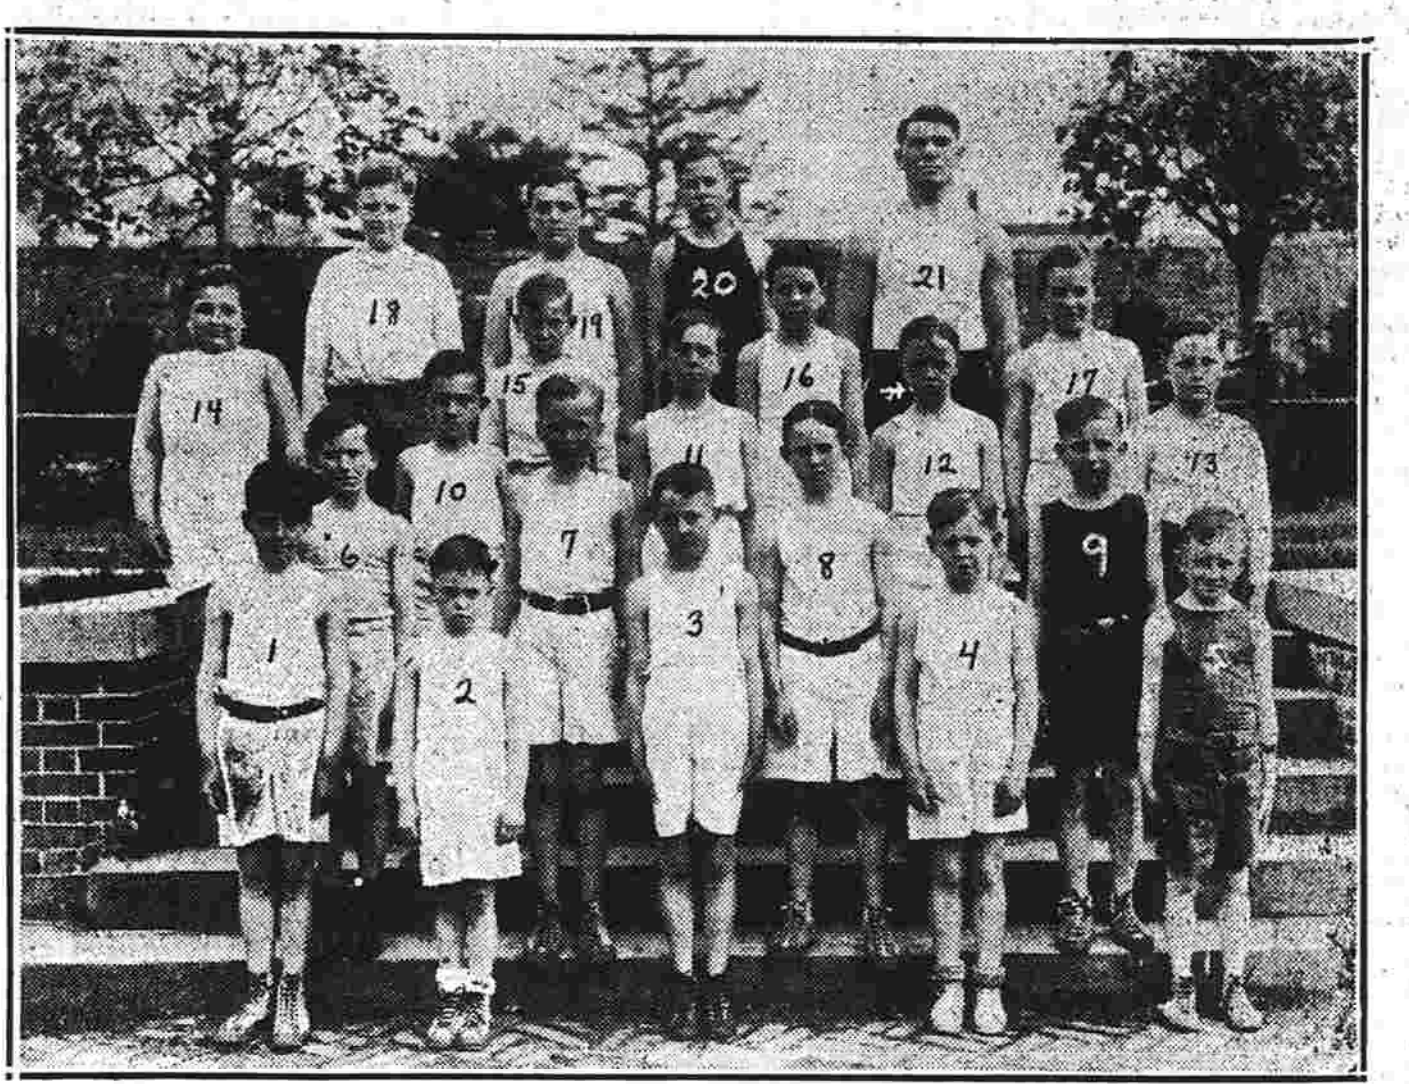

Immediately after the defense had rested Bernard Gaffney, assistant state's attorney, began to address the court for the state, and urged a first-degree murder decision.

Court recessed for lunch as he finished.

SCHUTTE, AUTO THIEF, STOLE A LOCAL CAR

Man Who Completes New York State Sentence Today Took Farr Automobile.

Julius Schutte of Middletown, who has just completed a two and a half year sentence in jail in New York state, is to be brought back to Connecticut today and will be tried on the charge of stealing automobiles. One of the cases is of interest to Manchester. An automobile owned by Joseph and Nicholas Farr was stolen by Schutte the day after they bought it.

The car was left standing on Wadsworth street in Hartford with all doors locked and the key taken out when the theft was planned. The car was missing. The Hartford police were notified, but the next noon it was found in the road leading into the Manchester Club grounds just to the south of the Globe Hollow ice pond, with the battery gone, tires stripped and the generator taken.

Schutte, it was afterwards claimed, had taken the trip to Manchester, was looking for a place to strip the car and then returned to Middletown. He had left Middletown without the switch. When the owner came for the car it was missing. The Farr car and other machines were found in his possession.

He was caught in New York for stealing automobiles, about twenty, and was first taken by the New York police. Now he is coming back to Connecticut to answer to other charges. Middletown is to have him first and other cities in the state will claim him in order, among those being Hartford where the Farr car was stolen.

that? When it's over, he'll be forgotten." Not a Hero Young Schreiber was quite modest. He said: "I don't regard myself as a hero. I only did it for a thrill. Any other boy could have done it. I'm more concerned now about seeing my mother than anything else. I can't get to Portland any too soon to suit me."

Only a few of the passengers on the Levithan knew that he was the stowaway. He had sailed in the tourist class but after the boat was at sea his father arranged to have him transferred to first class. It is understood he told one or two passengers he intended to take up aviation in a serious way.

En route young Schreiber received many wireless messages from his country, one of them from a girl. It read: "Be modest. Be careful." Asked if his son had a sweetheart, the father replied that the young chap was a "sheik."

Arthur has no particular girl," he explained. "He has one today and another tomorrow. He is a sheik."

ABOUT TOWN

The annual meeting of the voters and taxpayers of the third district will be held at the new school on Porter street this evening. Routine business such as election of officers, hearing reports and laying a tax to pay off the indebtedness will be transacted.

Rev. Stuart C. Haskins, recently called by the Glastonbury Congregational church, will be duly installed as its pastor at a meeting to be held there at 3 o'clock Friday by the Hartford East Association of Congregational churches. Manchester Congregational churches will be represented by their pastors and one delegate of each church.

POLICE HOLD FIVE IN MARLOW MURDER and were joined by Miss Seiden, Coppa, Wilson and Seigal. They went to the Acqueduct race track in Coppa's automobile, according to police, although Coppa denied this. In the second race, they placed heavy wagers on Marlow's "tip." The horse ran like a flat-footed dog and finished in the backwoods.

Later, the entire party went to La Tavernette restaurant, owned by Coppa. During the meal, one of the party made a telephone call. After finishing, Marlow left the party at 52nd street and 7th avenue.

Talked With Men Miss Seiden said she remembered she had not said goodbye to Marlow and turned to wave her handkerchief at him. She saw Marlow engaged in conversation with two men.

"They are the two men we want," said Police Commissioner Grover Whalen.

The street conversation was staged approximately 15 minutes before Marlow was found dying in Flushing, according to police checks.

Other theories being considered less favorably were that Marlow was slain because of a rum-running feud, because of a cut-rate dope war, or because of a woman.

Throughout Marlow's white-light career as a nightclub owner, boxing promoter, turf plunger and general racketeer he showed a weakness and strength for the fair sex.

His latest sweetheart was Dolores Farris, toe dancer, now appearing in London with a musical comedy. Marlow discovered the pretty blonde dancer for "The Silver Slipper," his nightclub. Her name was mentioned as a beneficiary in an insurance policy found among his papers.

A Waltham, Mass., girl, known to have been friendly with Marlow during a recent trip to Boston, was wanted for questioning as to previous threats on his life.

Other Girls Betty Farley and Myrtle Burke, her roommates, of Scranton, Pa., were questioned and released, concerning their friendship with Marlow. Both girls, in their twenties and pretty, denied they had been in Marlow's room. Miss Farley said that she had gone to visit a friend in the Victoria, Marlow's hotel, and asserted she had not seen the sporting man for several days.

Mrs. Minnie Curto, wife of the slain man, called Marlow a model husband "who was out of town great deal." Mrs. Curto lives at Patchogue, Long Island, with her two children, under the name Marlow bore when he was an east side boy.

Similar Murders

Here are the similarities between the murders of Arnold Rothstein and Frankie Marlow: Both were Broadway plungers. Both lived in Seventh avenue hotels in the Blooming Biltmores.

Both owed gambling debts, were fond of women and delved into underworld rackets.

A telephone call plays a part in both cases. Rothstein named Inez Norton, ex-Follies girl as beneficiary in his will. Marlow named Dolores Farris' showgirl, in his insurance policy.

Both were supposedly shot by hired gunmen.

On applying for the license in the Municipal building here, they did not say when or where they would be married. Mrs. Ashbrook was recently divorced.

TALCOTTVILLE

A very pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Rice on Saturday afternoon when their daughter, Irene May, became the bride of Kenneth H. Smith, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Smith of this place. Rev. Francis P. Bachelor, pastor of the Talcottville Congregational church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the families and a few friends. The Bridal Chorus from Logenhrgin was played by the bride's aunt, Mrs. William Dunlap of Rockville. The bride wore a gown of white georgette and her tulle veil was caught with orange blossoms and she carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and sweet peas. Miss Emily Rice, sister of the bride, who was bridesmaid, wore a gown of pink georgette and carried a bouquet of pink sweet peas. Harold Smith, brother of the groom, was best man. After the ceremony, luncheon was served. The bride and groom left on an unannounced wedding trip. The bride's traveling costume was a tan ensemble. George Marcus Cleveland, Alfred John Custer, Clifford Monaghan, Hazel Annette Talcott and Frederick James Wood from this place were among those graduated from the eighth grade schools at Rockville on Monday evening.

Miss Florence Resler of Bridgeport is visiting at the home of her sister, Mrs. Sumner Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thorp visited friends and relatives at Wickford and Belleville, R. I., on Sunday.

NOON STOCKS

New York, June 26.—Buying orders for high grade industrial and railroad stocks swamped the big board at the first tap of the bell today and most of the speculative favorites raced up the price scale in a half-hour of strenuous trading.

Nearly 600,000 shares changed hands in this period, double yesterday's turnover and the ticker lagged 11 minutes at the end of the period.

Merger talk, good business, increasing public interests in the market and prospects of easy money after the turn of July were principal factors inducing heavy buying of stocks today. Bulls made a strong point of the ability of the market to rise on comparatively small volume, which shows conclusively that stocks are in strong hands.

Wright Aero jumped 7 points to 139 1/2 on reports that directors, today, would announce merger terms with Curtiss, United Aircraft and perhaps a few other companies. United States Steel topped all former prices since the expiration of buying "rights" by selling at 187, at which price "big steel" has recovered 21 points since last week of May. Continental took the play in the "Can" stocks, with a new rise to 68 1/2 on a broadly tipped buying move.

New Advances were also scored in such prominent favorites as American Tel and Tel at 219 1/2; International Tel and Tel at 93 1/2; American Water Works at 143 1/2; General Electric above 312, new high; Republic Iron and Steel above 101; Timken at 103; Studebaker at 80. Missouri-Kansas-Texas common led the activity in speculative falls, with active buying above 64, up 3 points.

Katy has frequently been mentioned as a key road in one or more of the proposed southwestern railroad mergers and has made rapid strides in expanding its service and increasing net income in the last five years. New York Central marked up a new peak at 308 1/2, the highest price in its history.

Automobile manufacturers in public statements predict unusually heavy output of cars in the second half of the year. John N. Wyllys, returning today from Europe, said his company was completed the best six months in its history, with total sales of 200,000 cars in first half of 1929. Hudson jumped 4 points to 89 1/2 and Studebaker was in good demand above 80.

Call money renewed at 10 per cent, unchanged from yesterday, cotton sold up 5 to 10 points, while wheat reacted about a cent a bushel.

ADVERTISE IN THE HERALD—IT PAYS

U. S. TROOPS IN FRANCE.

On June 26, 1917, the first contingents of American troops landed in France in the World War. Within four weeks after the president's order, transports had departed from the Atlantic seaports of the United States. Never before had a military expedition of such size been assembled, transported and landed without mishap, in so short a time. Although the first contingents reached their destination in safety, they were twice attacked by German submarines, which were beaten off each time. The arrival in France of the first troops, which were under the command of Maj.-Gen. William L. Sibert, was the occasion of a magnificent welcome by the French people. The transports, whose arrival had not been previously announced, steamed into the seaport (the name of which was withheld by censors at an early hour June 26. News of the arrival spread rapidly and by the time the troop ships drew along the quays where the men were to debark, thousands were on hand to greet them. Whistles of craft in the harbor shrieked a wild welcome and cries of "Vive la France!" and "Vivent les Etats Unis!" seemed to come from every throat in the crowd.

LADY ASTOR SURPRISED

London, June 25.—"What is the world coming to?" exclaimed Lady Nancy Astor, Great Britain's most noted woman member of Parliament, exclaimed today when she was told of the telephone conversations held between an airplane over New Jersey and a London business office. "This is a most marvelous feat!" she added.

KEMP'S, Inc.

GOING PLACES AND SEEING THINGS

New York, June 26.—A few weeks ago I was reading Sherwood Anderson's book "Hello Towns," which records that writer's experiences as a country editor in the south.

And I came upon these paragraphs: "I have been out of a small town too long. . . . These people have known each other always. They must know everything about each other. I could not bear to have anything known about me. . . . I do not want to be intimate with people. I have lived too long in the cities. In the cities I could go around the first corner and be lost. I was but one more figure moving through the city streets with thousands of other figures. . . . Here I can avoid no one. All will be found out about me."

I feel somewhat the same way about it. All my youth and some of my mid-years were passed in towns of from five to twenty-five thousand. The place of my birth and early childhood was even smaller—Imlay City, Mich. My father's store stood at "the corner," with a hitching post and a watering trough in front of it. There was a pump at the corner and the town hotel was kat-a-corner across the way. The fair grounds were just down the road and the forbidding, inaccessible fence about them was as the gates of paradise to a half dozen barefoot urchins. There was a pig-sty in our back yard and there were always baby chicks or ducks to play with.

Those were the days when a farmer drove in and exchanged so many crocks of butter for a pair of shoes. Unfortunately, the wholesaler from Detroit wanted to deal in cash. So we moved to a larger town.

In a different way Manhattan has this situation. But it relates to only a few. These have become so celebrated, through one reason or another, that their every move is known and watched. Perhaps they are very rich men, perhaps they are women or men whose names have been linked with national scandals or tragedies; perhaps they have become nationally known through political dealings or theatricals or music or art or writing. But that is pretty much the same the world over. Fame keeps the public eye upon them. They are never allowed to get far from the limelight. The average stranger can come and go unnoticed. He can die in his bedroom and his body may or may not be found within the week.

In the small town you face a distinct disadvantage. Anyone who cares to can find out about you and spread it to the next. Within a few hours most of a small community can get information through its various underground mediums. Whereas you know nothing about it, nor about the people who surround you. That takes time.

Yet there is a tremendous pleasure in being accepted; in being admitted to the community. And there is pleasure in being greeted upon any turn of the corner and asked about the wife and family. Who that has lived in such a community has forgotten the buzzing, gossiping crowd that gathered at the postoffice window at mail time, scanning the various announcements posted on the board; the giggling girls who whispered of their latest conquest; the hay rides, which perhaps are no more even in the country; the baseball lot and the race track; the mysteries of cellars and the lines of cookie jars.

GILBERT SWAN.

who appeared as his colleague's counsel, as an indication that the professor is not a coward, and as proof that that particular war met with the approval of the gentleman. His "Who's Who" record was submitted as evidence of his standing in the world, which may or may not be conclusive evidence.

Judge Burrows in declining the privilege to this alien to be the sole judge of his own actions if he were to become a legal citizen of the United States, said that "the nation would lose absolute control of its subjects who are brought in for naturalization." Prof. MacIntosh explained that in reference to the question whether he fully believed in the constitution of the United States that he did believe in the general form but did not consider it ideal in all respects. An adaptation, he believed, of the "City Manager Plan," would be better. In other words, with him nothing is quite right. But, right or wrong, we still believe, Professor, that an American citizen should subscribe to all of the laws of the country and one of those is backing the government in any legal act. Becoming a citizen of this country, Professor MacIntosh, calls for going whole hog.

who would merge with them. The difference may be that these mergers, completed and projected, are big propositions.

EMPHASIS
 The causes of week-end deaths in the state gives emphasis to the comment in this column recently on the certainty that many lives would be lost by drowning this summer. The accustomed first place of automobiles as the cause of deaths is disputed by water. Three lost their lives because of automobile accidents and many others were injured. Three were drowned and several nearly lost their lives in efforts to prevent those deaths.

THE BLAME
 It curves, especially sharp ones on roads strange to the motorist, were to be eliminated, we would stop the loss of lives that occur from taking curves too fast. Then motorists who take curves at too high a rate of speed could kill and die on straight roads. It is not the curves responsible for the accidents on them. The drivers are to blame and it will never be otherwise.

LOYALTY SUNDAY
 F. Scott McBride, superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America, has taken it upon himself to designate next Sunday, June 30, as "Loyalty Sunday." He asks that ministers and Sunday school teachers on that occasion teach the "patriotic lessons of loyalty to and respect for law." This sounds general but actually is directed entirely at loyalty to the provisions of the 18th amendment. Soon posters will blossom on our roadsides advocating the same thing. It is another form of a determined effort to awaken the country to the fact that, because of lack of general support, this amendment has been generally disregarded.

THE DANGEROUS FOURTH
 The not infrequent explosions of fireworks heard now is warning that the Fourth of July with its attendant dangers is just ahead. The exploding of fireworks in advance of the nation's birth date is illegal. But that makes no difference to the youngsters who, with them in their possession, cannot resist the temptation. Apparently it makes no difference either to the dealer. The danger from some of these high-powered packages is far greater than the ordinary celebrator believes. In Massachusetts where for nineteen years there has been a state law forbidding the sale of firecrackers above a certain size and otherwise regulating the destructive possibilities of the death dealing materials placed in the hands of children, they are exercised over some of the new varieties being imported into the state.

WASHINGTON LETTER
 By RODNEY DUTCHER
 Washington, June 26.—Mr. Herbert Hoover is entitled to sit back and contemplate the present state of American foreign relations with considerable satisfaction. On the whole, the international situation seems to be a more pleasant sight than at any time since war clouds first began to appear over Europe.

After ten years of more or less enthusiastic efforts on the part of some in authority to enforce this constitutional provision it is admitted, even by many most earnestly in favor of it, that lack of respect for it is the chief cause of lawlessness. The fundamental laws of the land, except for this, are generally accepted by the people. We recall no other instance in the history of our country where a call has been made to the American people to express their loyalty to any part of the constitution. The 18th amendment is the only one that is not really self-enforcing. Lack of general acceptance by the people is the reason for this.

State chemists in Boston, analyzing some of the samples that have been placed on sale there, pronounce them the most powerful and dangerous of any examined in the last fifteen years. Aluminum powder and chlorate of potash, two high explosives, are used to give some of the most dangerous the necessary kick. One of these was six inches in length, two inches in diameter. In the outside container were four five-inch crackers loaded with the two high explosives. It was named "Repeating cracker." On the authority of the state chemist it can be said that there would be no repeating on the part of any person unfortunate enough to hold one of those in his hand at the time of explosion. Some progress has been made in the last twenty years towards a safe and sane Fourth. But we can go a long way yet before we eliminate the ever present danger of our children being killed or mutilated in the noisy observance of July Fourth. From now until the last stray piece of explosive has been discharged eternal vigilance over children will be the price to be paid if many a home is not to be saddened.

Europe is Better Off.
 The value of the latest reparations agreement as a stabilizing factor seems already to be apparent in Europe. It must be a source of satisfaction to Hoover to observe that European statesmen are using more and more common sense in the milking of Germany. At the time of the Versailles peace conference Hoover and other American economist and financial experts on the spot agreed that Germany couldn't pay more than $450,000,000 a year and that her total reparations payments, based on capacity, ought to be around $9 or $2 billion dollars. But in those days France was demanding reparations of 200 billions and Lloyd George was promising to hang the kaiser.

We doubt that this effort will result in perceptible gain for the cause of the Anti-Saloon League or the 18th amendment generally, strongly as we believe in prohibition. Those who are reached by appeals from the pulpit will include some of those who believe in it and respect it and some of those who privately are regular patrons of bootleggers. Both of these classes have respect for the laws of the land, generally speaking, but the latter class, does not believe in the 18th amendment and never will. From the time the American people first heard of Herbert Hoover they have responded to every appeal he has ever made. But the men, and women too, who should respond to this one, will not do so. The bootleggers will be too busy supplying the demand for illegal stuff to attend church. They will be busy because men, and women too, who otherwise would respond with alacrity to an appeal in support of President Hoover, will utterly disregard it. "Loyalty Sunday" will not solve the problem presented by the 18th amendment but it does serve as an indication of the determination of the present administration to attempt to accomplish what for the last ten years has been found to be impossible.

DETERMINATION
 A Chicago attorney, determined to win a $5 bet, toiled for months under the tutelage of a professional golf instructor and paid him a large sum for being taught how he could break 80 over a golf course. It was an expensive job but the will to win is always expensive in time and strength.

Feeling in Latin-America has been more kindly toward us since Hoover's "Good Will Tour." A few points of international friction still exist, of course, and others may arise at any time. Quite a few nations have already made protests of one kind or another concerning our proposed tariff boosts. That's natural, and the results of any threatened foreign reprisals presumably will be of an economic rather than of a political nature.

WHOLE HOG OR NOTHING
 No other decision could be arrived at by Judge Warren B. Burrows sitting in the United States District Court in New Haven than to deny the right of citizenship to Rev. Dr. Douglas C. MacIntosh, Dwight professor of theology at Yale Divinity School. Dr. MacIntosh said he would be unwilling to agree to support the United States in the event of war if he, after due consideration, should decide that he was unjust. Prof. MacIntosh has appealed from the decision. The return from the United States Circuit Court of Appeals will get the Professor no nearer being a citizen of this country than he has been. A decision in his favor would result in chaos in our government. Every man would be in a position to decide for himself whether he would support the government. Unless, indeed, he learned gentleman considers that he would be the only man so privileged.

THE DIFFERENCE
 Great banks are merging. The two largest hotel systems in the country are on the eve of merging. The two largest aircraft concerns in the country are reported making arrangements for combining. And the Democratic leaders in Congress are beginning to "view with alarm." It seems to us we have heard that Democrats have been known to combine with anyone

The French have yet to ratify the Mellon-Berenger debt agreement, but the reparations agreement is expected to lead to that.

We still don't recognize the Russian government, but appear to be losing no dollars on account of our attitude. Russian-American business continues to expand just the same.

Some people profess to see possibilities of embarrassment over the question of extending diplomatic recognition to the Vatican. But the Hoover administration has no intention of crossing that bridge until somebody pushes the bridge into its front yard.

Here is the answer, to the Letter Golf puzzle on the comic page:

Strawberries, though an acid

fruit, do not cause acidosis. In fact, they are so alkaline forming as to be a valuable remedy.

While strawberries are wholesome, it must be remembered that they are an acid fruit and should never be used with starchy foods, but should be eaten along with milk, non-starchy vegetables or proteins. They should never be used as strawberry shortcake. Wrongly combining strawberries is largely responsible for their bad reputation of being poisonous to some people.

Those individuals who break out after eating strawberries suffer from a toxic condition, and it seems that the strawberries actually speed up elimination through the skin to such an extent as to

Health and Diet Advice
 By DR. FRANK McCUT

BERRIES ARE GOOD TONICS.
 Strawberries contain a larger amount of iron, sodium and silicon than any other fruits or berries. One should make use of this valuable berry while it is still plentiful. The strawberry flavor appeals to everyone, and it is better for one to use the fresh fruit rather than artificial flavoring in preparing foods.

Strawberries, though an acid cause itching or even inflammation. Care should also be used in not using the other berries with starches. All of the berry pies and berry shortcakes, while exceedingly palatable, are unwholesome for this reason.

Among the wholesome berries we find blackberries, blackberries, blueberries, cranberries, loganberries, mulberries, raspberries, roebuck berries, service berries, strawberries, and whortleberries.

Blackberries contain more magnesium than the others; cranberries more calcium and sulphur; huckleberries lead in potassium and phosphorus; and raspberries in chlorine. It is better to obtain the fully ripened berries so that no sugar is needed to make them palatable. The berries which do need the addition of sugar, such as cranberries, are not quite as valuable from a dietetic standpoint.

Here are two wholesome ways of preparing berries, but remember that no cake, bread nor potatoes should be used at the same meal with any of these preparations.

Berry Ice Cream.
 Measure into a dish half the contents of an envelope of unflavored gelatin and add to it cold water to soften. Crush the desired amount of any kind of berries and mix thoroughly with a half pint of cream. Into another bowl put a pint of whole milk into which has been thoroughly mixed about half a cupful of honey and add to the berries. Next add the gelatin which has been dissolved over hot water. Stir all together and pour into freezer and freeze until of the desired consistency. The amount makes about a quart, depending upon the quantity of berries used. The amount of honey will vary, according to the kind of berries used.

Berry Whip.
 Add crushed berries to the stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Do not stir, but fold the berries in lightly, and do not add sugar. Place in moderate oven until lightly browned on top. Do not leave in the oven too long or the whip will fall. This whip may also be eaten uncooked.

Berries and cream form a wholesome combination; also, the berries may be crushed and added to gelatin.

Once used for whisky is now used in making certain paints. People still drink it, however.

Theaters

AT THE STATE

"Hearts in Dixie"

"Hearts in Dixie," the sensational Fox Movietone all-talking, all-singing film production, which created a tremendous amount of praise during its long engagement on Broadway, opens at the State theater today for a special two days run.

"Hearts in Dixie" is a most unusual picture in that it features a cast of all negro stars, including the famous Billbrew Chorus of 80 voices. It is a vivid picturization of the old South with its mammoth cotton fields, its beautiful mansions and its winding rivers. The audience is given the opportunity of hearing those familiar and haunting melodies sung by the negroes on the river banks as they gather to make merry after a day of strenuous toil.

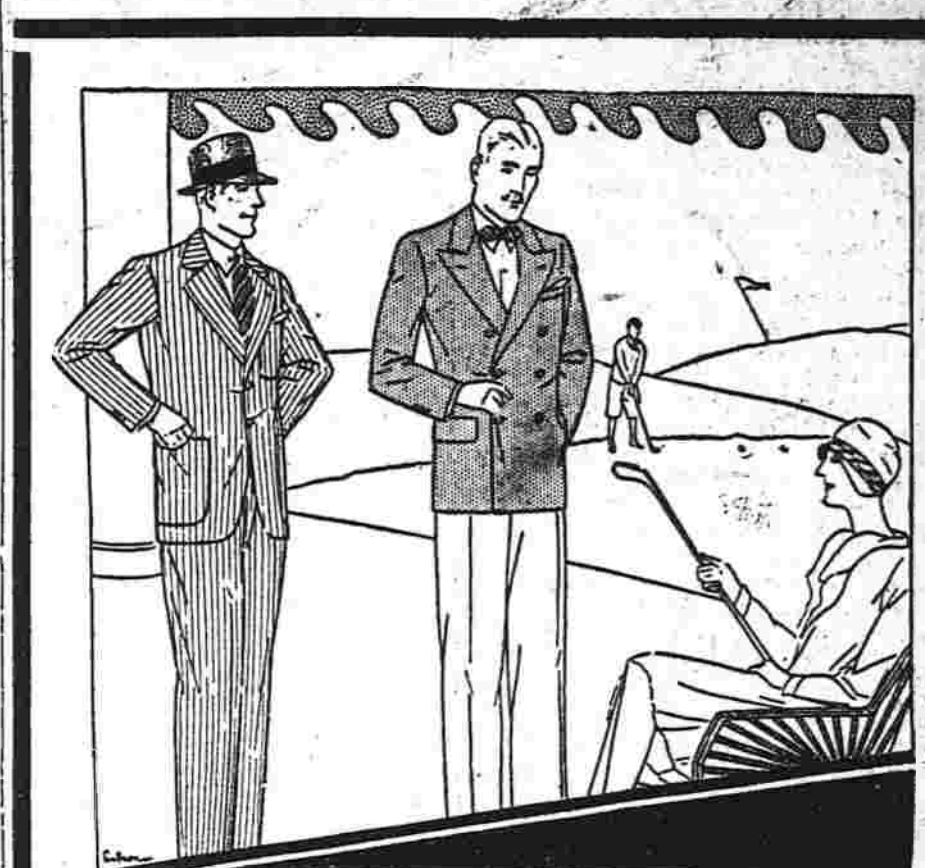

Intermingled with this spirit of song and dance is a simple story of human love and understanding that will appeal to the most particular of movie fans. Truly, it is a picture that is not to be forgotten.

The associate film feature for today and tomorrow is "Saturday's Children," a First National special production starring beautiful and fascinating Corinne Griffith.

Friday and Saturday of this week the State will present the sensational-talking melodramatic thriller, "Voice of the City."

Next Sunday brings Billie Dove in her first talking picture, "Careers" with Antonio Moreno and Thelma Todd.

Doctor Found What is Best for Thin, Constipated People

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of his 47 years' practice (he was graduated from Rush Medical College back in 1875), he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pspein. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of a medicine to be known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and in that year his prescription was first placed on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a success in the drug stores as it previously had in his private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. Millions of bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are being used a year. Its great success is based on merit, on repeated buying, on one satisfied user telling another. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have gotten many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us that it helped them when everything else failed. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Because she is in love with her employer, JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, successful lawyer, NAN CARROLL, secretary, decides to resign. She lingers however when she sees Morgan is to defend a supposed friend, BERT CRAWFORD. Nan suspects that Crawford and IRIS MORGAN, wife of John Curtis Morgan, are lovers.

After Crawford's acquittal, he leaves at once, followed closely by Iris. She writes Morgan she will never return to him, cleverly omitting reference to Crawford. Nan saves Morgan from despair by directing him more deeply into his work. For six months she acts as long-distance housekeeper for him winning the love of little Curtis, his son, and bringing comfort to a man who ironically thinks only of another.

Nan returns from her bar exams and Morgan tells her he has decided to divorce Iris. He proposes, and Nan marries him.

They are prevented from going on their honeymoon by the arrival of DAVID BLACKHULL, accused of the murder of a man who begs Morgan to defend him. Nan adds her entreaty and Morgan agrees.

For three months the farcical marriage continues. Nan believing Morgan cannot handle the case of Iris, and Morgan believing Nan married him out of pity and love for little Curtis. Nan tells herself she can go on no longer in this manner. Hysterically she goes to her room, the half-naked sultana; his black eyes bored into hers.

"Nan! Nan!" How thick and queer his voice was! "What did you mean when you said I was stupid, blind, and me?" he was saying with curious violence.

"I won't tell you anything!" she gasped, retreating from him until the door banged against the wall.

"I've got to know!" He was almost shouting at her, and the flush on his grim, lean face grew darker.

"Did you mean—could you possibly mean—that you—love me?"

Nan's hands released the door knob, flew to her cheeks, pressed hard into them, but she did not try to hide her face. She had never looked so proud as she did in her moment of supreme humiliation. "Of course I love you!" Her nostrils and lips quivered.

"Why did you think I married you?" he asked, staring at her so blankly, so incredulously? "And now that you've made me say it—go away, oh, go away! You might have left me my pride!"

She whirled sharply away from him, but the next instant her small body was spun about again, but this time not in obedience to her will, but by the strength of his arms, a strength that for a moment threatened to crush her ribs. Not that she felt the pain.

"I don't want your pity!" she gasped against his coat. "Let me go!"

"Pity?" he laughed, in a voice rough with emotion. "Oh, Nan, if I had my way I would kiss you until your head lay in the crook of his right arm. Above her, coming closer and closer, were his black eyes, liquidly brilliant, wider than she had ever seen them. It was like trying to face twin suns. Blinded, she closed her own eyes. "Let me go!"

A thousand times Nan had dreamed of his first kiss, and now she learned what pallid things dreams can be beside the ecstasy of reality. If he had released her when he lifted his head at last she would have fallen to the floor. But he did not release her. Oh, no, not she exulted, as he held her head against his breast, so that she heard the deep, quick throbbing of his heart.

"Was that pity, Nan? . . . At least," he laughed, his voice vibrating joyously. "we talk the same language. For three months I've been telling myself that I didn't want your pity—that until you learned to love me I'd not touch you—Oh, Nan, my darling, what stupid, blind fools we've both been! Two supposedly intelligent adults, sick with love for each other, keeping each other at a distance."

But a little later she had to defend herself against his charge, of course. "I don't see how you can say I kept you at a distance," she gasped, for her whole body was trembling.

"You locked me out on our wedding night," he reminded her gently. "I didn't reproach you. How could I? I thought you had married me out of pity—and because you wanted to be a mother to the boy. All that day I had felt like an exiled king about to be led into a new kingdom—and then—I was banished again. I blamed only myself, not you. I tried to resign myself to the truth—that no woman could love me. I blamed you no more than I blamed—Iris—"

It was the first time that name had passed his lips since their wedding day. Nan turned in his arms and stared up at him, searching his eyes with the last fare-up of the old, sickening fear. No, thank God, the name had not brought back the shadow of pain to his beloved eyes.

Nan summoned all her courage. They must speak of Iris now, or the name would forever stand a barrier between them. "I thought you still loved Iris," she said steadily.

He answered, "I thought I did, too, until—I wanted to take my real wife in my arms and found the door locked against me."

"Oh!" The word was a little wail of pain. She forced herself to confess: "—that night—when you'd gone to see Nina Blackhall—"

"You made me go," he reminded her. "I didn't care a damn about a murder case that night, but you'd held yourself aloof all day, and at dinner poor, funny little Curtis had said terrible things unconsciously but so on—darling!"

"You hadn't kissed me," Nan accused him. "You hadn't even said you loved me, and—No, let me finish, John! When you had gone, I went into the library and there, among your law books, I found a book of poems. I read the one you'd been reading a few days before, for you'd left a marker in it—"

"A poem?" he frowned, in apparently genuine bewilderment.

Nan quoted that last dreadful stanza:

"And I shall find some girl, perhaps, And a better one than you, With eyes as blue as but kindlier, And lips as soft, but true, And I darest say she will do."

Her husband's puzzled frown did not clear. "I never read any such poem, darling Nan!"

"No, you don't remember these lines, either?" she challenged, and gave him the first stanza:

"Your hands, my dear, adorable, Your lips of tenderness— Oh, I've loved you faithfully and well, Three years, or a bit less—"

But Morgan interrupted, giving the last line himself: "It wasn't a success! Poor Nan! I read no further than that first verse and the beginning of the next: 'Thank God, that's done!' I echoed those words, Nan, with all my heart—'Thank God, that's done!'"

"You mean—?" Nan quivered.

"Oh, John, don't lie to me now! I can bear the truth, if you love me as well as Iris—"

"I'm trying to tell you the truth, Nan," he interrupted gravely. He held her away from him for a moment, then stooped and lifted her to his arms, carried her to the one big armchair that the room offered. But one was enough. She lay, child-small, in his lap, her head against his breast, so that she could listen to the beating of his heart as well as to his words. "You must know," he began haltingly, "how it was with me. You saw us together for three years. Would you have said that I was a—happy man, Nan?"

"No," she whispered. Her fingers took fierce hold on the lapel of his coat. It was still necessary to convince herself every now and then that it wasn't a dream.

"I was a slave in bondage, Nan. Lord! I don't mean to sound pathetic, but it's so necessary that I try to make you understand now, so that we can forget the past and be happy. You know, Nan, I used to get a dim sort of feeling that it made you angry to see us together—"

"It did!" she agreed, vehemently nodding her shining brown head against his breast. "She didn't love you, and saw you small, made you small when she was with you, I loved you, and saw you big—"

"And made me big," Morgan interrupted, laughing exultantly.

"Don't you think I realize that Nan has made me what I am today?—whether she's satisfied or not? But—did you really love me then?"

"Won't you leave me a shred of my pride?" Nan protested, blood rushing into her cheeks. "But—oh, what does pride matter now? I loved you from the first day I worked for you. I tried to be decent enough to resign, when I found out what was the matter with me—"

"When was that?" he demanded eagerly as a boy with his first sweetheart.

"Oh!—when Willis Todd wanted to marry me and was jealous of you, and tried to make me say I loved him and didn't love you," she answered.

"And for three months I've been tormented by the suspicion that you loved Willis Todd and married me only because I needed you more than he did," Morgan confessed.

"But—about Iris. It had better be said—all of it, and then we can talk about us. I did love her, Nan, with the most painful, shameful, degrading, enslaving love that a man ever felt for a woman who could not love him. She did try to pretend that she loved me. As I said a while ago, I don't blame her. But I used to pray to God, in my agony, to wake up the next morning and find myself free of my love."

"I knew Iris would be relieved, even if her vanity would have suffered. I must have bored her and annoyed her unbearably with my passion. It made her despise me and hurt me in thousands of little ways. But—I couldn't cure myself. My malady was so malignant that it required a surgeon's knife—and Iris elected to be the surgeon."

He paused and Nan's heart lunged sickeningly. Was he living again the agony worse than death which that major operation had caused him? She held her breath.

His arms tightened about her. One hand cupped her little face with such infinite tenderness that tears sprang into the girl's eyes. "I had a marvelous nurse after the operation," he pursued, the metaphor whimsically. "It was her devoted care which made the operation a success, more than the surgeon's knife. And as most patients do, I—fell in love with my nurse. And, oh, Nan! The wonder of it— to be free of the malady!"

"Are you—sure—you're cured?" Nan whispered. "Sometimes such maladies break out—again—"

"You can't frighten me," Morgan laughed, bending his head to kiss her again. "Of course, if you want to torture yourself— You see, darling, the whole thing was so purely physical. I never loved Iris' mind or her soul. . . . I don't even know whether she had either. I loved her beauty. With you, it was so different. No, wait, you little devil!" he commanded sternly as she was about to take him up on that. "It was going to say that I loved your mind and your brave, fine soul long before I loved your body. I loved you in those ways from the very first, but physically I was enslaved to another woman. When she was gone, I was free to discover and fall in love with your beauty—"

"I'm not beautiful," Nan protested, a little forlorn note creeping into her voice. "Not—like Iris—"

"No, thank God!" he agreed fervently. "Not like Iris. Her beauty is devilish, yours is—divine. Now—is it all said? Can we be—happy?"

But, womanlike, Nan could not forbear to ask the forbidden question, the one question which she should have avoided above all others. "But John—what if you saw Iris again?"

He did not try to lie to her. Perhaps she would have been better if he had lied. Certainly a great deal that happened later might have been very different if he had. His answer came slowly, conscientiously: "I—don't know. I can only say, 'Nan, I love you with all my heart and soul and mind. I hope I shall never see Iris again.'"

"I—see," she said very quietly. Then, raising her head, she looked at him with wide, solemn eyes.

"John Curtis Morgan, I love you with all my heart and soul and mind," she added childishly, as she flung her arms about his neck.

YOUR CHILDREN

Mothers are likely to choose play—"spirit" of the other little girl mates for children for almost any other reasons than the right ones. We prefer them to play with children near home, or the children of our friends, or—with children we admire and whom we wish our children to imitate. These are all good reasons, but they are not good enough.

I hear a few million voices exclaiming, "Don't we know that good example is one of the best influences in the world for training children? Don't we read them the childhood stories of great and good men and women and point out all sorts of famous people and good copy? Of course we do, and if we choose a boy or girl we admire and want our children to become intimate with him, you can't tell us it's a mistake."

Yes, that's all true, but only partly so.

Different Influences.

To begin with, it isn't possible to compare the influence of biography with the influence of personal contact. Nor is there any more basis for comparison in pointing out the good qualities of a person, and having actual personal contact with him.

Personal contact is a different thing entirely from personal example. It gets down to cases. It is will against will, and a constant conflict of emotions. All our behavior is influenced by our contact with other people. We are encouraged or depressed, happy or miserable, according to the way we react to their treatment. It is the same with children. I have seen a child trying to play with a playmate chosen for her good qualities, and trying to emulate her, who soon became the most miserable little person in the world.

I knew one little girl, smart, but highly sensitive and cursed with a pitiful inferiority complex, whose mother insisted on her playing with a neighbor child whom she admired very much. She hoped that the

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

SMOKING TOO MUCH MAY CAUSE AN ATTACK OF BLINDNESS

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Almost everyone knows now that it is possible to lose the eyesight from drinking or even from inhaling too much wood alcohol. This alcohol is methyl alcohol in contrast to the alcohol used in whiskey, brandy, wine or beer—which is grain or ethyl alcohol.

In 1920 a method was found for removing the odor from wood alcohol, which had formerly been used only in the manufacture of shellac and similar preparations. It was then put on the market and began to be advertised as a substitute for grain alcohol in the making of bay rum, violet water and similar preparations.

The coming of this preparation induced many persons with a craving for alcohol to drink wood alcohol when they could not get any other.

The appearance of numerous cases of blindness among painters, makers of shellac articles and hat workers finally made the majority of people realize that wood alcohol is dangerous. In addition to blindness, there may be headache, vomiting, severe pain, blueness, shortness of breath and convulsions following the taking of wood alcohol.

This is not, however, the only substance that can produce blindness. Some people are sensitive to tobacco and may become blind as the result of smoking too much. Usually dulness of vision with a loss of the muscle sense are the first symptoms observed. The eyes will fatigue easily and there may be headache.

Apparently 20 cigarettes a day is the limit of safety for most men and anything over this may produce the eye symptoms that have been mentioned. Such symptoms do not occur with a moderate use of cigars or cigarettes.

Quinine is another drug that can produce blindness, in case too large a dose is taken. Usually ringing in the ears, partial deafness, fullness and aching of the head may precede the temporary loss of vision. Of course, the ordinary dose of quinine will not produce these symptoms, but in some cases people have misunderstood the amount they were to take and have taken so much that blindness followed.

Arsenic, lead and various preparations of these two elements may also produce disturbances of vision and blindness if taken in overdoses or if taken in small doses over long periods of time. These facts should be sufficient to indicate to everyone the danger of taking remedies of which the composition is not known, or of drinking "bootleg" or other liquors of unknown parentage. The moment's pleasure can hardly suffice to repay for the terrible loss represented by partial or total blindness.

THE FIGHTS ON.

Beauty contests have been called "immoral" often enough, but not on the ground that they lead to deceit and treachery. But if a beauty contest has ever been held which did not include some entrants breaking the rules, I never heard of it.

Now come charges that in the recent international beauty contest at Galveston, a girl who graced the contest several years ago was re-entered under another name, contrary to rules.

SHE HAS TO.

The trouble with a beauty is that her field of operation is so limited and brief. Beauty contests are to her what a good typing job is to her plunger sister. She'll commit mayhem to get in. Then, too, her hours are brief, even as are those of the butterfly. She must make hay while the sun shines.

Most any contest, strictly speaking, is "immoral" inasmuch as it is humanly impossible for "the best" of anything ever to be selected.

BOTH WRONGED.

A 27-year-old girl was recently found practically buried from the world in Moscow. Her parents had kept her in solitary confinement for over a quarter of a century because she was suspected of being a leper. When officials found her buried in straw in an old barn she had the haggard, joyless face of an old woman.

But the crime of keeping their daughter living in horror, to be spared the stones of neighbors if they learned she was a leper, is no greater a crime than the way enlightenment was kept from her parents should have been told that leprosy today is not the horror it once was!

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLEN S. JAMES

"Big Joe" Lonardo was a bootleg king. He was slain. The taken-for-granted luxuries of the Lonardo family were gone, and even bare necessities became a problem. The successor to the throne of Lonardo was killed the other day. "Big Joe's" widow, Mrs. Concetta Lonardo, is indicted with her son for the slaying.

The story books are crammed with the drama which pervades the lives of women in reeking pioneer days. But today's news is crammed with the drama of modern women's lives, drama never dreamed of as possible for women in the days when our maternal forebears shot bears and Indians with a shotgun.

"HOODEY"?

Mrs. Lohardo killed, the law says, because "things" could not be so plentiful with "a bootleg king" husband dead. Authorities say that "the woman" she tempted me. Men, I have observed, seem to like their luxuries even as do women. They may be different, but a club membership generally costs more than a permanent wave.

HEYWOOD KNOWS.

Speaking of the waves that endure, hail to Heywood Brown who has the courage to be unmale-like enough to affirm that bobbed heads are infinitely more beautiful than haircuts ones all littered up with swirls and coils and puffs and braids.

He explains that the contour of the head is its most beautiful part, and that the only really aesthetic coiffure is one like the bob, which reveals the contour.

Most men like long hair for the same reason that, in speech, at least, they like mother's pies. The male is infinitely more conservative and sentimental about the past than is the female. Accustomed things are the only good things, to their way of thinking.

At Least A Quart of Milk per Day per Child

That is the correct amount, recommended by leading doctors and child specialists, for proper growth and health of every boy or girl. Every mother wants her children to lead in play, to be smart in school, and "bubbling over" with health and happiness. Give them milk and cream at every meal, to drink, in cooking, with vegetables and fruits, on their cereals, or after school.

Milk is the most economical food you can buy. It contains proteins, carbohydrates and fats, in the right proportions, minerals for building bones and teeth, vitamins for growth and to build disease resistance. Not only is it wholesome and good for them, but they like it!

"Every household should have milk in abundance," says the U. S. Government. At least a pint every day for father and mother is required for proper health, vigor and vitality. Milk is easily digested. Nature made it good for you. Let us serve you.

DAILY RADIO PROGRAM

Wednesday, June 26. Wednesday will be a great day for the Irish. "Garry Owen," a comedy-drama of old Ireland, has been selected by Hank Simmons for broadcasting from 8:30 to 9:00 p.m. on WJZ and the Columbia stations at 8 o'clock. The play combines laughter, tears and hair-raising climaxes, with the romance between the noble Garry Owen and Eileen Aroon, an attractive colleen, providing the love interest. The hero is the leader of the Irish cause in the struggle waged against England for the freedom of the Emerald Isle and, as such, experiences many thrilling adventures. Ireland will be visited by the Voyagers on their musical travels to be broadcast over WJZ and associated stations at 10. When they reach Kells, in County Meath, they will hear a stirring tale of Shane, the Proud, King of Ulster, from the lips of a picturesque local antiquarian, as an interlude in the program of authentic Irish music. The concert will include "The Minstrel Boy," "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and "Come Back to Erin."

TILDEN CONQUERS GERMAN NET STAR

Beats Prens 6-0, 6-0, 8-6; Allison and Miss Ryan Also Win Today.

By F. A. WRAY

Wimbledon, Eng., June 26.—"Big Bill" Tilden took another step toward the finals of the men's singles in the Wimbledon tennis championships today when he eliminated D. Prens, one of the best of the German contingent of invaders, in straight sets 6-0, 6-0, 8-6.

After Tilden had romped through the first two sets with such consummate ease that he had time to amuse the spectators by tricky strokes that completely baffled his opponent, Prens drew upon his reserve in the final frame and forced the lanky American to extra games before the match could be won.

Centering about the court more as if it were a practise match than an international tournament, Tilden gave the spectators a great show for their money by returning one after another of the German's high-kicking services with swift cross-court winning shots that left Prens wondering what it was all about.

By virtue of this victory Tilden enters the fourth round of play.

Wilmer Allison, another of the five Americans remaining in the men's singles when play was resumed today, also came through the third round successfully by defeating J. D. P. Winesley, the English International, 6-1, 6-1, 6-1.

An early American victory was also chalked up today in the women's singles when Miss Elizabeth Ryan defeated Mrs. John Hill of England 6-0, 6-2 in a second round match.

J. Kozeluh, Czech-Slovakia, defeated the Hon. Cecil Campbell, Irish Davis Cup player, 6-3, 6-4, 6-2.

Several metropolitan newspapers have criticized British Ambassador Sir Esme Howard for offering to give up liquor privileges. Maybe we had better give Sir Esme another chance, however, as he probably is not familiar with the customs of the country.

Max's Record Not So Hot; Paulino Tough But That's All; Winner vs. Sharkey.

Making guesses about the outcome of the Schmeling-Paulino fracas scheduled for tomorrow night is about as rash a venture as taking a dime and your best girl to a church bazaar.

But with a heavyweight situation like this on our hands, surely one should be permitted to say almost anything, and even to seek out a quiet corner for a fairly enjoyable titter or two.

Let us take up the details one by one. Watson, however gruesome they be, and deduce whatever things possibly can be deduced.

The Major Premise To begin with, there is the good burghomaster Max Schmeling. Recently the public prints took considerable notice of the fact that the young man looked and acted like Jack Dempsey. This is a not unfortunate selling quality and it has been clamored all over the place. Max, himself, falls in with the idea nicely, and you might gather the impression from his style in raining camp that he was the Manassa gent in person.

Those weaving and bobbing qualities, however, need more punch than scowl to back them at trifling dumb about his point.

If Max is a second Jack Dempsey, he'll have to prove that fact when he meets Paulino, for otherwise, as far as we are concerned, he is just another rankfurter.

About Risko The fight on which Schmeling's followers are basing their shouts is that in which he beat Johnny Risko, but it's getting to be that a victory over Risko doesn't mean a thing except that Johnny attended a Czechoslovakian wedding the night before.

Schmeling started his boxing career by rocking to slumber a young man named Czapp in four rounds. That was four years ago and Max has met quite a few Czapps since then, most of whom you could have no interest in. Larry Gains, a Canadian negro, inflicted so much body punishment on Herr Max that the German had to quit.

And only last year an English boxer named Gypsy Daniels stopped your "second Dempsey" in the first round. Schmeling says he was looking over the ropes at a friend of his this terrible thing happened, but it's not impossible he may have a friend or two at the bout with Paulino.

Tough, but That's All Let us turn to the other half of the problem and see what we can deduce. We have in Mister Paulino as tough a hombre as ever slapped his granddaddy. People who think he is easy would be interested to know that George Godfrey deems the Basque the hardest gent he ever came across.

Paulino can take them on the whiskers, in the tum-tum or anywhere, and he keeps coming into close quarters. He packs a rib-crushing jolt. He has been mixed up with plenty of toncuchers and while some of his fights have been terrible, his ability to absorb has always been marvelous. Of course he lost to Risko, but that's that.

Mister Paulino, however, doesn't sail very well. He seems muscle-bound. He is unspectacular. There is nothing in his record to indicate championship class. To rate him as a possible successor to Dempsey and Tunney would mark you as a fellow just a trifle off base.

J. Sharkey, Esq. Now, let's see the third part of this terrible triangle, the Boston squire, who lurks in the background as the fellow one of the two aforementioned bruisers is expected to meet.

Here, to begin with, is another young man Mr. Risko beat. He also is the same person who all but fell victim to the telegraphed punches of Old Man Christian. Mr. Sharkey is the same one who clambered past the Young Stripling with not many shades to spare.

Schmeling can beat the Basque he gets to Sharkey, and if he gets past Sharkey he will be the heavyweight IT. On the other hand, if the Basque beats Schmeling, you will have a prospect that Tex Rickard would have wept over.

A gate for Sharkey-Paulino? You couldn't even get One-Eye Connolly to go.

What shall we deduce from all this?

Only that this is a lovely spot for some young man to step in and make himself a couple of million dollars. And he wouldn't have to be too good, either.

COLLEGE GOLF TOURNEY Deal, N. J., June 26.—Match play begins today in the National Intercollegiate golf tournament being held on the Hollywood Golf Club course here. The match play will continue until Friday when the championship round will be played over a 36-hole route.

George T. Dunlap, Jr., of Princeton and Maurice McCarthy, Jr., of Georgetown, present holder of the title, were favored to win the tournament.

Princeton won the team play honors yesterday by beating Yale, 184 to 178, in a 9-hole playoff after they had finished the regular 36 holes tied at 43 strokes.

A man advertises in the papers for a girl who is domesticated, pretty, loving, economical and good natured, with the idea of marrying. Some fellow planning bigamy?

HERALD TO GIVE FIGHT BROADCAST

The Herald will have a radio installed for the purpose of broadcasting the blow-by-blow description of the Schmeling-Uzudun heavyweight fight in the Yankee Stadium tomorrow night. Due largely to the fact that there appears some danger that the title will go out of the country, interest in the scrap between the two European contenders runs high.

Al Grezel will install one of his high-powered Radiolas with a dynamic speaker. The set will be located in the sports department of the reportorial rooms on the second floor of the building on Bissell street. There will be ample space for listeners to stand in the vacant space adjoining the State theater.

PRO. CASH FAVORS BOUNDING BASQUE

Wise Money Waiting for Better Odds Before Plunging On Paulino; Even Money Now.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, June 26.—Nobody has the faintest idea which of two things is going to land first—Schmeling's punch on the chin or Schmeling's chin on the floor—but everybody seems to be betting it one way or the other today while Paulino and Schmeling, their work done, try to out-wait the last 24 hours before what Pat Frazer calls the battle of broken English at the Yankee Stadium tomorrow night.

This pair may fail to sell the house out, although they figure to furnish New York with its first good heavyweight fight since Dempsey and Sharkey; they even may fail to become sufficiently abrupt and resolute with each other. But the following are two things that won't fail.

There will be thousands upon thousands of dollars riding in bets on the result; they will be viewed by an assortment of people, no more strangely contrasted than the occupants of the average lifeboat.

As to the former, even money was in order today with a slight leaning toward Paulino, the latter getting the play from most of the professional gamblers who, after all, make the odds. They feel that he is entirely too obdurate for the fragile Schmeling over the 15-round distance and their notion is likely to swing the odds in Paulino's favor after he reaches town for the weighing in tomorrow afternoon. This he will do by means of an airplane trip from his camp at Hoosick Falls.

The Tunney influence seems to be an enduring legacy.

The fight, in brief, has many of the elements of a genuine heavyweight championship, except that the receipts will not be what the promoters originally hoped. They will be more than a half million dollars in the house; how much more rests with overnight developments. Each of the fighters will get about $80,000 and I am beginning to suspect that at least one of them will earn it. He is the man who carries too deftly with the aid of his chin. Circumstances being what they are, this is almost certain to happen to one or the other of them before the fifteenth round.

The gamblers usually string with the puncher but never if the man in question has a dubious chin. It was for this reason that one of the biggest bookmakers in town announced today that he held $30,000 in Paulino commissions to be sent in "at the proper price." This he intimated, would be 5 to 6. Although actually he probably was putting out a feeler for even money. It was gathered that he didn't want Schmeling at any price. However, there were plenty of others who did.

PAULINO'S CAMP Hoosick Falls, N. Y., June 26.—A day of complete rest was prescribed today for Paulino Uzudun before the Basque heavyweight flies to New York tomorrow in his air chariot for his bout with Max Schmeling tomorrow night at Yankee Stadium, New York.

Yesterday the Basque took a light workout, thumping the light and heavy punching bag for 15 minutes, and finishing with some shadow boxing and rope skipping. He is down to 193 pounds.

SCHMELING'S CAMP Lakewood, N. J., June 26.—Max Schmeling did a few miles on the road this morning as his final preparation for the Milk Fund bout with Paulino in New York tomorrow night. He didn't need much work after his torrid workout yesterday before a big crowd of experts.

Schmeling will leave for New York by automobile at ten o'clock tomorrow morning and go directly to the offices of the boxing commission to weigh in.

Last Night Fights At Boston—Gorilla Jones, Akron, Ohio Negro, won decision over Jack McVey, New York middleweight, 10.

At Buffalo—Affanito, New York, former amateur star, knocked out Horatio Velha, of Gloucester, Mass., 2.

At Los Angeles—Earl Mastro, Chicago, won decision over Fidel La Barba, former featherweight champion, 10.

THE BUMPTIOUS BASQUE

BUSCH PICKS UZUDUN.

Frankie Busch, local light heavyweight is one of the comparatively few who is picking Paulino Uzudun (or Up-side-down which is much easier to pronounce) to defeat Herr Max Schmeling, the German edition, so called, of Jack Dempsey when they mingle for 15 rounds more or less tomorrow evening at the Yankee Stadium.

Busch, who by the way has just returned from a visit to Paulino's camp, bases his opinion on the grounds that the Bounding Basque has had more experience. Frank reports that Uzudun is full of confidence and determination and with so much at stake he believes Paulino will wear out Schmeling to win on Points. Busch believes the German is over-rated. He saw Uzudun beat Tom Heeney two years ago.

Frank is loud in his praise of the training camp at Hoosick Falls near Troy, N. Y., where the Spanish heavyweight has been preparing for his crucial battle. Busch was accompanied on the trip by his wife and daughter, Marguerite. They remained at the Warren Mansion together with numerous sports writers, boxers, other officials and their wives, the guests of William F. (Call me Bill) Carey and the Madison Square Garden Corporation.

The training camp is on the Warren Mansion which is owned by Hans Ehler. It was once the home of J. P. Morgan. Other notable to stay there in the past were Crown Prince Edward of England and President Grant. There are 320 acres in the estate which contains three cottages. The main building was turned over to the newspapermen and other persons affiliated in one way or another with the fight game. Carey assigned his own chef to see that the visitors were given plenty of good food.

One of the sites which impressed the Manchester man most was an artificial lake which is located near the main cottage. This body of water, about the size of Globe Hollow, is filled with various kinds of water lilies. Busch says that the beauty of these is beyond description; that he paid $40,000 for them and has since refused a $200,000 offer for the same.

Busch and his family went to the Paulino camp late Thursday night and returned to Manchester early Monday morning. Frank was anxious to get the opportunity to spar a few rounds with Paulino but his late arrival blocked this, the Spaniard's backers being reluctant to take any chances with a person who was a stranger to them. He did however work out with Buddy Howard of New Haven, one of Paulino's sparring partners. Busch also had several pictures taken with Paulino and another shot was made of Uzudun holding Busch's daughter, Marguerite, in his lap. This appeared in the Daily Record in New York yesterday.

During their stay at Paulino's camp, Mr. and Mrs. Busch met, among others, Sid Mercer, Wilbur Wood, Jack Farrell, Ed Dowling, Bill Grayson, Vince Traynor, George Underwood, Don Skene, John J. Romano, well known newspapermen, Jimmy Braddock, Tom McArdie and Dan Healey.

RAIN PUTS BOUTS OFF 'TILL TONIGHT

A heavy downpour of rain accompanied by vivid flashes of lightning and peals of thunder caused a postponement of the boxing bouts at the Bulkeley Stadium in Hartford last night. They will be held this evening.

Mike Esposito, Stamford featherweight had an advantage of two and a half pounds over Tony Loto, of Tampa, Fla., when the boys weighed in for their ten-round feature go.

The weights of the boxers on the card scaled well. Esposito tipped the scales at 126 1-2, Loto at 124. Mickey Flahive, weighing 135 1-4 was a half pound lighter than Larry Roach, his opponent. Eddie Reed tipped the beam at 119 1-4, while Charley Von Reppen, his opponent weighed 117 1-2. Young Dalton who meets Nick Christy, weighed 126 and the Bristol boy three-quarters of a pound less.

Joe Howard, meeting Young Powers in a bout at 163 pounds, weighed in at 158 1-2 while Powers was 162 1-2. Al Dowd, of Manchester weighed 129 3-4 while Homer Thibault, of Holyoke, who fights him, tipped the beam at 129 1-4.

We were handed some of the new smaller currency the other day. Thank goodness, our clothes won't be quite so baggy now.

Legion Ball Tossers Are Again Victors

Defeat Cardinals 8-4 by Hitting Opportunely Behind Mikoleit's Pitching.

A second victory fell to the American Legion Junior baseball team last evening at the West Side Playground when it took the Cardinals of the North End into camp by a score of 8 to 4.

Johnny Mikoleit toed the rubber for the Legion and pitched a clever game, passing no batters, whiffing 11 and yielding only six hits in five innings. The last two sessions were taken care of by Roy Fraser who breezed along without a hit or run.

Carter pitched a clever game for the Cardinals, but he could not keep the hits in the bag when they were needed by the Post boys.

The winners again hit with the bases occupied and that about shows the difference between the two clubs.

Ballon opened the game with a double to left center and rode home on Eells single after Spillane had fanned. Carter's single to center, his steal of second and Custer's drive produced another tally in the fourth. The final two Cardinals runs were unearned when Ballon struck at a wild pitch for his third strike and pulled up at second. "Red" Hadden just couldn't locate Spillane's grounder and Ballon crossed the plate in the confusion. Spillane solo second and came home on Hedlund's bad peg to third trying to catch him stealing.

It was not until the third inning that the Legion bats got busy. Johnson dropped Smith's fly and Mikoleit singled to center. After Mahoney had fanned, Jolly beat out a slow roller to third, all hands being safe. A base on balls to Dey sent Smith home and Hadden's sizzling single to right scored Mikoleit and Jolly. Billy Vince opened the fourth with a walk, stole second and scored on Segar's bad peg. Four runs were added in the fifth. Jolly, Hadden and Hedlund scoring on timely hitting of O'Leary and Smith.

The Legion will open its league

MOST OF NEW YORKERS LIVE IN APARTMENTS

Boston, June 26.—New York City has 1,300,000 apartment buildings, Oliver S. Turner, of Chicago, told the National Association of Real Estate Boards in convention here today. New York's first apartment building was built only 59 years ago, said Turner, who estimated that 70 per cent of the residents of New York now reside in apartments. Henry Wright, of Columbia University, gave the delegates a picturesque description of the probable suburban sections of the future. "Residences built and planned as a group, in super blocks of 30 to 40 acres, a center core open park land; residences with two fronts and no rear; byways for pedestrians running through garden cores and crossing motor highways only through underpasses," were some of the features of the description. "The co-operative apartment building is really a number of private houses under one roof, with the halls and stairs regarded as streets," declared David B. Sutton, of New York, adding: "It would not be surprising if before very long we should see co-operative and other building enterprises financed through a preferred stock issue rather than through a mortgage or bond issue." Cuba is one of the landlords of the United States; the Guantanamo area is leased from Cuba at an annual rental of $2,000. London's inhabitants, men, women and children, took an average of 510 bus, tube, and tram rides during 1928. Tobacco imports in the British Isles last year totaled over $95,000,000.

KEMP MUSIC FIRM NOW CORPORATION

Becomes Kemp's, Incorporated, Announcement Today States—7 Years Old.

An announcement was made today of the incorporating of Kemp's Music House, under the name of Kemp's, Incorporated.

This local music store was founded in 1922, and has been making steady and consistent gains since its beginning. Samuel J. Kemp, Jr., is president and treasurer of the new firm and Harold A. Turkington is secretary.

The first store was located in the old Johnson Block, where at present the Atlantic & Pacific Store is located. Here in a small way was opened Manchester's first exclusive music store. It was an innovation in the town, for up to that time there had been no exclusive music store, and practically everything in the musical line had to be purchased in Hartford.

S. J. Kemp, realizing that there were many people in Manchester who were interested in music, supplied the need of musical instruments and compositions, and also by the careful selection of teachers and instructors, has developed many instrumentalists, who might have never taken up the study of a musical instrument. He created a desire for music among the younger people of the Community by the formation of violin, ukulele, harmonica, and other classes. Hundreds of young people took part in these classes, who otherwise would have had no interest in these things. Among these developments in the way of musical organizations, has been the High School Band, which was organized three years ago, and which has rendered noble service to its school. This band not only takes part in practically all of the athletic engagements and other school activities, but for the past two years has been taking part in community parades and other activities.

Another organization which has been making rapid progress in its musical development is the Community Orchestra, an aggregation of 25 or more pieces, which was organized by W. B. Joyner, who is also in charge of the Violin School conducted at Kemp's, Inc. This splendid orchestra has been taking part in Music Week programs and today there cannot be found on any piano floor, a better line of instruments. Here will be found the Ivers & Pond, Brambach, Guhransen, Hobart M. Cable, Hazelton and others. The same can also be said of the Radio Department, for the most widely sold and most widely known line of radios are kept by the local music store. Majestic, Aikwater Kent, Bosch, Fada, Freshman, Victor and other radio sets will be found on sale at Kemp's, Inc. In the Musical Instruments line will be found such high grade instruments as Bacon Banjos, Washburn Mandolins, Buescher Band Instruments, Honer Harmonicas, Ludwig Drums, and many other famous names.

Recently Colonial furniture reproductions and artistic floor and table lamps have been added to the regular line, and here again will be found merchandise of the higher type, at the most reasonable prices. In the lamp department will be found a line of hand painted Colonial shades, which are not to be found in any other store in Manchester, together with a line of bases, which are representative of the finest lines made. The line of colonial reproductions are from the finest factories in this country, and are authentic in every detail. In this department will be found beautiful sewing tables, stands, Windsor chairs. Gov. Winthrop Desks, lowboys, highboys, Tip-top tables, ladder back chairs, butterfly tables, gateleg tables, and many other items of interest. These will be found in the mahogany, walnut and maple finishes.

Along with the colonial reproductions will be found a complete line of high-class bedroom furniture for every room in the house. A selected line of rugs are to be carried as well as distinctive davenport, occasional pieces, and odd chairs. This department has already been visited by a large number of people, and already many deliveries have been made to a very fine class of people.

Mr. Kemp has had a very wide experience in the furniture business, and has followed the trend of changes in style, design etc. He has always been very much interested in antiques, having a splendid collection of pieces in his home. Mr. Turkington who has been associated with Kemp's for the past seven years, has also had experience in the line of furniture selling, having spent three years in this capacity. The experience of both Mr. Kemp and Mr. Turkington, together with the connections with fine furniture manufacturers, assures the people of Manchester that the exclusive line of merchandise from which to choose their selections. Changes have been made in the store to make room for the added department, and along with the main floor, the basement finished off, which adds considerable value to the store for merchandise of this type.

In connection with the incorporating of the business, there is to be a sale in the music department, taking in Pianos, radios, musical instruments and other items. This sale affords an opportunity to those interested in anything musical, to make profitable purchases at this time. Mr. Kemp is very enthusiastic about the sale, knowing that in the past Manchester people have always been alert to take advantage of real values in musical merchandise.

SENSE and NONSENSE

LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP. Love has moments of ecstasy, Friendship has years of tranquil pleasure;

Model Young Men. "I'm so proud of my boys," said one of the happy mothers of this neighborhood.

"Tommy," said the teacher, "come to the map and point out Australia to the class."

Mrs. Crandle—Baby'll be able to walk soon. Crandle—D'you think it's worth the trouble of teaching her?

"Do you know Lord Heathmoor?" I often shot at his country seat? "And did you hit it?"

The Golfer: "What do you think I went round in?" His Wife: "Double."

"What made the teacher so angry?" asked Johnnie's father. "Oh!" said Johnnie, "he was talking about trees, and I asked him if he ever seen a pink palm."

Why was Solomon the wisest man in the world?" asked the teacher.

"Because he had so many wives to advise him," answered the bright boy.

"Well, that is not the answer in the book, but you may go to the head of the class," replied the teacher.

Man (having given up his seat in the street car): "I beg your pardon."

The Girl: "I didn't speak!" The Man: "Sorry, I'm sure. I thought you said 'thank you.'"

The modern girl isn't meticulous. Well, she's cosmeticulous.

A FRIENDLY GAME.

We'll all CLASP HANDS in today's march around the letter golf course.

Letter Golf grid with the word 'CLASP' in the top row and 'HANDS' in the bottom row.

THE RULES.

- 1—The idea of Letter Golf is to change one word to another and do it in par, a given number of strokes. Thus to change COW to HEN, in three strokes, COW, HOW, HEW, HEN.

The niftily dressed girl these days puts on step-ins and steps out.

The big grasshopper hopped along, and my, but his queer legs seemed strong. He'd bounce away up in the air just like a little spring. His hind legs were as big as him, and they kept him in jumping trim. If you have seen one, you know he's a funny looking thing.

was quite helpless at the task because the hopper hopped right over his head and soon left him behind. "Well, goodness me," the scarecrow cried, "I never thought that trick would be tried. If I am going to head him off some new way I must find."

BALCHUNAS IS GUILTY OF LIQUOR SALE INTENT

Parker Street Resident Pays $100 and Costs—Says He Used Booze Himself.

Alexander Balchunas of 899 Parker street, was convicted in the Manchester police court this morning of keeping liquor with intent to sell and paid a fine of $100 and costs. Balchunas was defended by Attorney William F. Shea.

Chief of Police Samuel G. Gordon with Lieut. William Barron and Officer John McGinn, visited the Balchunas home last Saturday night at 9:30 and found there more than 100 gallons of rye and corn mash, five gallons of liquor and a quart of alcohol; also a ten gallon still and a five gallon still. In the cellar of the house where this material was found were a number of bottles, the regular pocket flasks, 100 pound bag of sugar, and 18 quart bottles of home brew. According to the officers complaints have been received about the place for the past seven months. The mash was found in barrels which were covered with rags and burlap. Balchunas said he had lived in Manchester for 21 years and had worked for the Colonial Paper Co. He admitted that he made the liquor but always for his own use. He denied that he had ever sold any. The reason he made so much at a time was that he likes it aged and does not care to drink it until the stuff is at least three months old.

In summing up Prosecuting Attorney Hathaway admitted that the state's case was founded largely on circumstantial evidence, but that it was convincing evidence. The quantity of liquor found, the fact that the place was one that was resorted to, the pocket flasks, the complaints to the police was sufficient evidence to convict, he thought.

Attorney Shea maintained that not one single piece of evidence had been introduced to show that Balchunas had sold any of the liquor. The officers had visited the place on Saturday night at 9:30, and not a single person outside of the family was to be found there. The attorney believed that there was a reasonable doubt of the man's guilt and that he should be given the benefit of that doubt. Judge Johnson, however, maintained that the amount of liquor found together with all the paraphernalia, convinced him that the liquor was not all made for Balchunas's own use, but for the purpose of sale.

SWIMMING INSTRUCTION FOR WOMEN PLANNED

Miss Viola Lalonde Announces Special Classes on Tuesday and Wednesday Evenings.

Swimming instruction for women will be continued at the School street Recreation Center throughout the summer months. It was stated today by Associate Director Miss Viola Lalonde. Classes will be held every Tuesday and Wednesday evening and they are open to the public. Persons may join at any time. They do not have to wait for the beginning of a term.

Miss Lalonde stresses the importance of not only knowing how to swim but also being acquainted with at least the fundamental principles of life-saving. This comes in exceedingly handy for those who plan a vacation at the shore or lake. The class that has been held Thursday nights has been changed to Wednesday and goes into effect tonight. On Tuesday nights from 7 to 7:45 there will be instruction for beginners; from 7:45 to 8:30, intermediate and advanced classes; 8:30 to 9:15, private instruction. Wednesday nights from 7 to 7:45 will be for beginners with advanced class and life-saving work from 7:45 to 8:30 which will be followed by a private class until 9:15.

GREAT DOWNPOUR WELCOMED HERE

Intensity of Storm Means Naught Compared With Relief Brought to Crops.

The five weeks' drought which threatened great damage to crops here came to a sudden termination early last evening when Manchester's continued dry spell was broken by a downpour of rain accompanied by a heavy lightning and thunderstorm. Lightning entered the Connecticut Company's dispatcher's office at the Center narrowly missing James Duffy who was on duty there. Fire broke out but it was quickly extinguished. No other serious damage was reported about town. A tree was blown down opposite the Clarke home on Adams street and a couple of electric light transformers were blown out.

Storms of the intensity of the one last night usually cause considerable anxiety because of the danger from lightning but to a great extent this was overshadowed by the realization of the rain's value. Shortly before 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon, rain fell hard for exactly three minutes and then stopped entirely. The brief rainfall did little or no good. The water scarcely penetrated the surface of the ground. A little later the sun broke through the clouded sky again and it began to look as if Manchester was again destined to follow the dry weather jinx.

Hope was still at low ebb when dark black banks of clouds came up out of the west. Manchester had seen too many threatening storms of this kind drift toward here only to shift its course just before reaching the outskirts of the town. However, last night's warning proved no false alarm. Instead it was a general alarm, all departments being brought into play—lightning, thunder and rain. The electrical storm lasted about half an hour during which the rain fell in torrents. Rain continued to fall here until after midnight. The storm was even more severe in Hartford and towns near Manchester.

Running down both sides of Center street in streams three feet wide, with no outlet below Edgerton street, water formed a large pool underneath the bridge, opposite the Manchester Lumber Company. Automobiles passing by were hampered by the depth of the water, it being over the hub caps and the running boards. Nearly every heavy downpour creates a pool in this place but last night it was greater than ever before.
