

DI BATTISTA LIVED HERE SHORT TIME

Resided on Birch Street;
Worked as Teamster and Tried for Place on Old
Major Football Team.

Frank Di Battista, 25 years old son of a Bedford street shoemaker in Hartford, who was yesterday convicted on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the killing of Samuel Kassaroff, proprietor of a grocery store the first day of April last, at one time lived in Manchester. It became known today.

Arrested Here
Chief of Police Samuel G. Gorton was the authority for the information. It was he who arrested Di Battista, then only 16 years of age, for robbery nine years ago. At that time, Di Battista lived in the old Princess theater building on Birch street and was known better by the nickname "Cowboy" attributed to him because he always wore a thick blue shirt, a handkerchief around his neck and a soft slouch hat. He was tried before Judge Alexander Arnott at that time and served a 90 days sentence. Di Battista only lived here a short time.

John E. Dwyer, former sports editor of The Herald and well known football coach, also recalled Di Battista's presence here. Dwyer said this morning that the young man "tried out" for a berth on the old Major team at the north end back in 1919. He gave up after reporting four times. So far as Dwyer could recollect, Di Battista worked as a teamster during the short time he lived here.

Speedy Decision
It took only forty minutes for the three judges, Avery, Baldwin and Wolfe, to make up their minds as to Di Battista's guilt. They retired at 2:54 and came back into the court room at 3:34. Their decision brought to a close the speediest murder trial in the history of Hartford county, if not the state. But ten hours and 34 minutes were required for the entire court proceedings.

Once on the bench Judge Avery turned to Judge Baldwin and put the question: "What is your judgment?"

Judge Baldwin replied: "Guilty as charged, of murder in the first degree."

Then Judge Avery put the same question to Judge Wolfe whose reply was also "guilty, as charged, of murder in the first degree."

Finally Judge Avery declared that he himself was of the same opinion, and also declared Di Battista had been found guilty of the crime charged against him.

Routine Motion
John F. Forward, counsel for Di Battista, immediately handed up a motion to rescind the decision. His motion was promptly set aside. Then Di Battista was called up for sentence. He merely shook his head when asked if he had anything to say.

Judge Avery thereupon sentenced him to be hanged on August 15, next.

Step-mother Collapses
Di Battista was entirely unmoved. His step-mother, who had been in the court room throughout the trial, collapsed. Assisted from the court room, she fell on the lobby floor and broke into a storm of cries that rang through the building.

Mrs. Kassaroff, who previously had been in a state of hysterics, declared that she previously had been

PLANE WRECKAGE MAY BE SPANIARDS'

Steamer Reports Sighting
Piece of Wing 72 Miles
Off of Vigo, Spain.

London, June 27.—A wireless message was received at Coruna, Spain from the Ellerman liner City of York stating that the vessel had sighted a piece of airplane wreckage believed to be part of Major Ramon Franco's hydroplane Numancia about 72 miles southwest of Vigo, Spain, according to a Central News dispatch received from Madrid today. (Vigo is a port near the northwest tip of the Iberian peninsula.)

The place where the debris was reported sighted was far from the course which Franco and his three companions were expected to follow on their flight to the Azores.

Officials at the offices of the Ellerman line here could not confirm the report of the wireless from the City of York. The vessel is en route from Bombay and is due at Liverpool Saturday.

The British admiralty issued a flat denial of reports that Primo De Rivera had been advised that a seaplane from the British airplane carrier had reported seeing wreckage of the Numancia.

SNUFF DRUNK, HE LOSES HIS DRIVER'S LICENSE

Trenton, N. J., June 27.—John W. Norton of Newark can't drive his car any more. His driver's license has been revoked by State Motor Vehicle Commissioner William L. Dill. Norton was arrested at Milburn recently and found guilty by a Justice of Peace of "driving while under the influence of snuff."

DRYS AGAINST PROPAGANDA FOR SCHOOLS

White House Vetoes the Idea; No One Seems to Know Where the Rumors
Started; Doran Against It

Washington, June 27.—If the prohibition higher ups ever had any idea of attempting to have prohibition courses introduced in the public schools, that plan has been definitely vetoed at the White House, it was learned today. President Hoover was not impressed with that form of educational activity and so expressed himself. The same view has been adopted by high officials of the Treasury and Prohibition Commissioner J. M. Doran, who not only repudiated the school drive but decided not to permit the distribution of the educational pamphlets until he had time to pursue them thoroughly.

On whose authority the prohibition pamphlets were prepared has not been disclosed. It appeared certain, however, that their issuance came as a complete surprise to Secretary Mellon, under-Secretary of the Treasury Owen L. Mills and Assistant Secretary Seymour Lowman, in charge of prohibition.

Announcement of the propaganda campaign was made by a subcommittee of the Prohibition Bureau while Commissioner Doran was out of the city. Immediately on his return a formal statement was issued explaining the Treasury's position, with only indefinite reference to the use of the word "rumors" to designate the public as to the advantages of prohibition.

Against Campaign
In this connection it also was learned that the Treasury was not in favor of the $50,000 educational campaign appropriation, feeling that little benefit from the enforcement standpoint would accrue. Now that the money is available it probably will be spent although just

DAWES TO APPEAR AT ROYAL COURT

Will Again Wear Evening
Clothes Tonight When He Presents Americans.

London, June 27.—Having shattered the precedent set by his two immediate predecessors by showing the silk knicker breeches prescribed by court custom at the third royal court last night, Ambassador Charles G. Dawes will appear at the fourth court of the season tonight again wearing ordinary evening clothes.

Col. Thomas R. Thomas, Jr., military attaché of the American Embassy, and Mrs. Thomas will accompany the ambassador and Mrs. Dawes. The ambassador will be accompanied by Mrs. Thomas, Vice Admiral and Mrs. John H. Dayton and Lieut. Commander and Mrs. John O. Huse in the diplomatic circle.

Mrs. Dawes will then present in the general circle Mrs. Ernest Dorritt of Pennsylvania, Miss Annie E. Nourse of Boston, Mrs. Walter Mangum of South Carolina, Mrs. Francis Neilson of Chicago, Miss Mary E. Riddle of Tennessee, Miss Elizabeth Stuart of Massachusetts, Mrs. Andrew Wheeler of Pennsylvania and Mrs. John B. Seymour of Georgia.

Prince Escorts Queen.
The Prince of Wales acted as escort to his mother, Queen Mary, in the brilliant procession from the drawing room to the ballroom of Buckingham Palace. The queen wore a beautiful gown of green and gold. The prince wore the scarlet uniform of a colonel of the Welsh Guards. They chatted with Princess Ingrid of Sweden who made a fetching picture in a dress of a soft pastel shade.

Eight American women were among the 400 presented to the queen last night. They were: Mrs. Francis Barclay, of New York, Miss Natalie Coe of New York, Miss Lillian S. Snanger of New York, Miss Rosemary Baur of Chicago, Miss Pauline Fenno of Rowley, Mass., Miss Dorothy Chase of Waterbury, Conn., Mrs. Maymar Johnson of New York, and Mrs. Edward F. Hutton of New York.

No Broadcast Of Tonight's Big Fight; Herald To Give Blow By Blow Story

The only opportunity for Manchester boxing followers to hear the returns of the Max Schmeling-Paulino Uzcudun prizefight in the Yankee Stadium this evening will be provided by The Manchester Evening Herald. Madison Square Garden officials promoting the world's title semi-final fight have definitely announced that there will positively be no radio broadcast of the contest.

Blow by Blow Description.
In effort to provide its Manchester readers and sport enthusiasts with the blow by blow description of the contest, arrangements were completed late this afternoon with the International News Service to have a running description of the fight from its sports writer Davis J. Walsh on a direct wire from the baseball park. The Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford informed The Herald this morning and again late this afternoon that there would be no radio broadcast.

Big Fight at 10 o'clock.
The description of the fight will come over the telegraph machines and will be relayed through a power magnavox by The Herald's sports writer. The main bout of the evening is scheduled to get under way about 10 o'clock, Eastern Daylight Saving Time, with the preliminaries starting shortly after 8:15. At the official weighing in ceremonies late this afternoon, Paulino tipped the scales at 192½ compared to 187 for Schmeling. The Herald will receive returns starting at 9 o'clock, one hour before the big fight goes on.

Space Enough for All.
There is ample space for a crowd of several hundreds of persons in the vacant space opposite The Herald plant on Bissell street adjoining the State Theater building. The fact that this site is back from Main street will lessen any outside disturbance from traffic. Surrounding buildings make it a cozy shelter for persons to stand or sit and listen to the returns. Thursday night being "store night," expectations are that an unusually large crowd of persons will be on hand. Interest in the fight runs high and with the radio broadcast denied, The Herald's service will be the only means of getting the results locally.

FULL COLOR TELEVISION IS NOW A POSSIBILITY

Bell Telephone Experts Flash
Pictures from One End of Laboratory to the Other;
Will Soon Be on Market.

New York, June 27.—It looked much like one of those cabinets into which you drop a penny and see pictures of pretty girls.

But in this cabinet you didn't drop a penny. You just put your eye to the peep-hole and there projected on an illuminated screen you saw life and color and movement that was an exact counterpart of nature.

It was a demonstration by the Bell telephone laboratories of the first successful experiment in full color television, and, according to scientists of the company was the forerunner of an instrument soon to be constructed which will enable one to see every detail of the other party to a telephone conversation.

For purposes of demonstration pictures were flashed only from one end of the laboratory to the other, but the same pictures could have been easily flashed in California or even to Europe with few changes in the apparatus.

Carried Over Wires
Just an ordinary telephone wire carried the colored images from the transmitting apparatus to the receiving cabinet.

It was the same apparatus, altered in a few details, that was used April, 1927, when laboratory technicians first demonstrated monochromatic television between New York and Washington, D. C.

At the transmitting end of the apparatus in today's demonstration sat pretty Charlotte Pupillon, a member of the Bell laboratory staff.

She wore a brightly colored paper hat, and waved a colored fan as a bright beam of light raced down rapidly across her face.

The effect of the light beam was observed by three separate tests of electric eyes, each set arranged to transmit one of the three primary colors. The result was focused by a series of mirrors in the receiving cabinet on a single screen.

Other pictures were transmitted by the apparatus during the demonstration. A man ate a piece of watermelon in front of the transmitter, and reporters felt their mouths watering as they looked into the peep-hole.

Then fruit and bowls of flowers were telephoned to the other end of the room.

SWEDISH FLYERS FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO START

For Fifth Time They Are Forced to Return to Iceland
After Hop Off.

Reykjavik, Iceland, June 27.—The fifth attempt within three weeks of Captain Albin Ahrensberg and his two companions to fly from Reykjavik to Iqvitut, Greenland, on the third leg of a trans-Atlantic flight ended in failure today when the airmen returned here after 45 minutes in the air.

After arriving at Reykjavik from Stockholm by way of Bergen, Norway, Captain Ahrensberg and his two companions have been detained for several weeks by unfavorable weather and engine trouble.

Their ultimate destination is New York. After leaving Iqvitut, a stop is planned at Anticosti, in the St. Lawrence river.

SOCIETY BACKS MITCHELL ON AIR DEFENSE

Aeronautical C. of C. Wants
Separate Department
Ranking Equally With the U. S. Army and Navy.

New York, June 27.—The American Society for the Promotion of Aviation today revealed the contents of a letter written by Thomas L. Hill, president of the society, to the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce in which the Chamber is requested to urge establishment of a separate governmental Department of Aeronautics ranking equally with the Army and Navy as a defense unit.

The Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce recently completed arrangements for inauguration of a national radio broadcast in the interest of aviation.

"This broadcast not only should serve to enlighten the great American public in matters aeronautical," Hill wrote, "but should operate to offset the invidious and consistent propaganda of both Army and Navy departments which has encouraged the public to believe that aviation must always remain an auxiliary arm of these departments."

Uses Mitchell's Argument.
Hill then pointed out that arguments similar to this were employed during the court-martial of General William Mitchell in 1925 in an effort to stem the growing demand for a separate department for aeronautics.

"During the Mitchell trial and ever since," the letter continued, "The American Society for the Promotion of Aviation has consistently urged that a separate department for aeronautics be created and we now feel that any one, professing to be of, and for, aeronautics must wholeheartedly support this measure or suffer the suspicion of being in the class with those who 'run with the hare and hunt with the hounds.'"

Against Defense Plan.
"We trust you will actively agitate against the proposed Army ex-

KEEPING WELL IN SPITE OF THE SUMMER HEAT

DO YOU KNOW how to eat in hot weather? Sure, you know what tastes good—but do you know what's good for you? Do you eat a big breakfast in summer as in winter? Do you make a heavy lunch when the thermometer stands at 85? Do you eat a big dinner at night even when the day is sweltering?

If you're like most people, you follow your appetite and trust to luck that you're doing the right thing.

But there isn't any reason why you should be in the dark about the health problems that hot weather brings.

Beginning today The Herald prints the first of a series of articles by Dr. Morris Fishbein, one of the country's foremost medical authorities on "Health in Hot Weather."

These articles will help you to keep your physical efficiency up to par in the trying days of July and August.

They'll not only tell you how to regulate your diet; they'll give you some valuable pointers about all of your summer activities—vacation, recreation, swimming and the like. And you can have perfect confidence in them. Dr. Fishbein, the editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association, is one of the best informed men in the entire medical profession.

Turn now to the first article in today's Herald.

MINTOSH CASE STARTS MOVE FOR NEW LAWS

Liberals in Congress Say
Senators Who Voted for
Kellogg Pact Should Lose
Their Citizenship.

Washington, June 27.—The denial of citizenship to Dr. Douglas C. Macintosh, former Army chaplain and professor at Yale Divinity School, coming on the heels of the Roska Schwimmer case, today provoked a movement among Liberals in Congress to provide a guarantee for "freedom of thought" in the naturalization laws.

Senator Robert M. La Follette, Jr. (R) of Wisconsin, and Senator H. Caraway (D) of Arkansas, both declared the barring of Dr. Macintosh should lead to a revision of the naturalization laws. They decried the exclusion from citizenship of persons opposed to war after Congress set an example by providing for "consentient objectors" during the World War.

La Follette's Suggestion.
La Follette facetiously proposed that citizenship rights be taken away from all Senators who ratified the Kellogg-Briand treaty renouncing war as a method of settling international disputes. Caraway, in the same vein, suggested that Senators and Representatives, who voted against the war with Germany, could have their citizenship taken away if the ruling against Madame Schwimmer and Prof. Macintosh were carried to its logical conclusion.

Constitution Violated.
"The provision of the Constitution guaranteeing religious liberty and freedom of thought has been violated by this decision against Prof. Macintosh," said La Follette. Even during the war, when this country was in the throes of hysteria, we provided that those whose teachings or religious affiliations forbade them to bear arms, were given non-combatant status under the Draft Act.

"It certainly is a violation of the theories upon which this government was founded, when a man of learning can be excluded from citizenship because he resented the settlement of international disputes through the medium of war. As a matter of fact, this government has renounced war by ratifying the Kellogg-Briand treaty. Perhaps efforts will now be made to rescind the citizenship of the Senators who voted to ratify that pact."

Certainly it is no more a crime for an applicant for citizenship to declare he doesn't believe in war than for a citizen to discharge his official duties by binding his country to the renunciation of war.

AVIATION AFFAIRS FILL TODAY'S NEWS

Dispatches from All Parts of World Show That Flying is in the Limelight.

Aviation activities throughout the world were many and sundry today, according to International News Service dispatches.

The largest aviation holding company in America was formed in New York today through the amalgamation of the Wright Aeronautical Corporation, the Curtiss Aeroplane & Motor Co., and the Keystone Aircraft Co. The new organization, to be known as the Curtiss-Wright Corporation, has assets of more than $7,000,000.

Captain Frank Hawks was winging his way somewhere over the United States after hopping off from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., on an attempt to fly to Los Angeles and return in 36 hours.

The Miami Maid, amphibian, which was forced down at Cape Charles, Va., on a non-stop flight to New York from Miami was preparing today to continue its hop to the Metropolis.

Francis Phillips, 21-year-old son of John M. Phillips, late sewer king of New York, and Henry Goldsmith, 21, Freeport, L. I., parachute salesman, were burned to death when the De Havilland Moth plane in which they were riding crashed at Roosevelt Field, N. Y.

Martin Jensen, Dole flyer, his wife Mrs. Marguerite Jensen, and William Uffrich, were competing their first day in the air after taking off from Roosevelt Field, N. Y., last night in an attempt to capture the world record for an endurance refueling flight.

Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his bride were in Indianapolis after flying from Columbus on their inspection tour of airports. A small group was making the first complete trip from coast to coast on the 48-hour all-air system of the trans-continental air transport.

SAYS U. S. DRY AGENTS STOLE CANADIAN BOOZE

Cover Watchman With Guns,
Take 15 Cases of Liquor and Then Speed to American Side.

Detroit, June 27.—Five men, whom Canadian officials claim were U. S. dry agents, raided a Canadian export dock Monday night and seized 15 cases of liquor, according to reports received here today.

The export dock, located at Port Lampton, Ont., was owned by Joseph Thibodeau.

Thibodeau charged that his dock watchman was covered with guns while the dry raiders loaded the liquor loot aboard their launch and made away for American shores. He claimed he had learned that 15 cases of liquor of the same description were turned over to government dry heads on the American side that same night.

The matter has not been officially reported to U. S. authorities, Walter S. Pett, acting collector of customs here said today.

COSTLY YACHT BURNS

New Bedford, Mass., June 27.—The $20,000 auxiliary yacht, Aretha, property of A. Atwater Kent, Jr., son of the millionaire radio manufacturer, was a mass of wreckage off Red Wing Light, Buzzards Bay, today following a fire that burned the handsome craft to the water's edge.

Young Kent, together with the two members of his crew were rescued by Coast Guardmen and brought here. They had been forced to take to a small boat.

It was believed that engine trouble caused an explosion, which started a fire aboard the Aretha.

Will Handle $500,000,000
Agricultural Relief Fund,
If Chosen; Has Long Conference With President
But Declines to Affirm or

Harvester Company.

Washington, June 27.—Alexander Legg, president of the International Harvester Company, probably will be chairman of the new Federal Farm Board, which is to administer the $500,000,000 agricultural relief program, it was reported here today.

Legg had a conference with President Hoover that lasted more than an hour. However, he declined to affirm or deny that he had accepted the chairmanship after the conference, and the White House was similarly silent.

No Information
"I'm sorry, you'll have to get all information from the President," said Legg upon leaving.

In other quarters, however, it was said that President Hoover had offered the post to the Chicago financier, who is actively interested in all phases of the agricultural problem.

NO OFFICIAL AID TO PAY WAR DEBT

Members of Our Reserve Boards Will Not Be Permitted to Assist Europe.

Washington, June 27.—American support of the Young reparations plan will be moral rather than concrete, and participation of this government will be limited to negotiating a treaty with Germany for a reduction of no more than ten per cent of claims against the Berlin government for Rhine army costs, it was apparent in official circles today.

Speculation over possibility that American financial interests would participate in the international bank for handling reparations bonds and fiscal transactions, was said to be based on a European hope rather than a probability.

Secretary of State Stimson declared members of the Federal Reserve Board would not be permitted to serve nor would this government propose or endorse unofficial representatives.

No Interference.
Recognizing the right of private individuals to transact their business without government interference with reference to reparations bonds that might be put on the American market, or even accept membership on the international bank if they were asked, officials believe that the fact that the government frowns on the latter would be sufficient to make them hesitate.

The White House and State Department stood up on Stimson's statement, declaring that it was "perfectly clear as to meaning."

That meaning is interpreted in official and diplomatic circles as being in effect a hint for private banks and bankers to remain aloof.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 27.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's pause here was saddened today by the death of his intimate friend, James A. Perry, 34, millionaire, aviation and baseball magnate. Perry ascended to "meet Lindy as he comes in" and died a minute later when his plane his Curtiss Robin crashed from a height of about 100 feet.

Arriving from Columbus, O., shortly afterward, Col. Lindbergh was deeply affected when he was told Perry had been killed while on the way to welcome him and Mrs. Lindbergh. Neither of the Lindberghs would grant an interview and went at once to a hotel.

Today the Lindberghs were to fly to St. Louis, Mo.

QUIZ BOSTON MAN IN MARLOW CASE

"Mickey the Wise Guy" Says He Was in Hub When New York Man Was Killed

Boston, June 27.—"What to do they want with me? I was in Boston the night Frank Marlow was shot in New York," exclaimed Michael Rocco, alias "Mickey the Wise Guy" when located in a Washington street barber shop near Adams Square this afternoon by two Boston police detectives.

Found After Search Rocco was discovered by Inspector Joseph Cavagnaro and Special Inspector Martin Conroy, attached to the district attorney's office. He was found after special armed squads of plainclothes officers—two from New York—had combed hotels, night clubs and restaurants without success.

White Rocco was being located in the barber's chair here, two New York police officers in Sharon seeking Phil Buccolo, trainer for Ricardo Bertazzolo, who recently fought Jim Maloney here. The trainer, however and others who had been at a resort in Sharon used as a training camp had left for New York yesterday. The New York detectives were understood to be checking statements made in New York to police yesterday by Johnny Wilson, ex-midweight champion, of Boston, and Edward M. Lewus.

Hundreds of airfields in the metropolitan area would produce thousands of pilots and planes ready for an emergency, and would most certainly provide the only reasonable defense against enemy aircraft.

"The writer is encouraged to ask the above, knowing that members of your association have profited in the past through the securing of aircraft contracts from both Army and Navy air services. It is fair to presume that the letting of these contracts provides both Army and Navy officials with a means of pressure that they will not be slow to use in the event the tone of your broadcast does not meet with their approval."

TAKEN TO WETHERSFIELD Hartford, June 27.—Frank Di Battista went down the river today. The youth who yesterday admitted firing the shot that killed Samuel Kamaroff, grocer, here on April 1, and then was found guilty of first degree murder and sentenced to hang August 15, first said farewell to his relatives in the county jail, and then turned to the group of deputies who were to escort him to the state's prison at Wethersfield.

Di Battista received more than twenty people in the county jail, being as calm as if the event were entirely a social affair.

Meanwhile the youth's counsel, John F. Forward, public defender, was planning today to appeal the decision of Judges Avery, Baldwin and Wolfe, reached yesterday after a two-day trial, and was expected to ask for a reprieve to establish his position in the Supreme Court of Errors.

SUB PASSES TESTS

New London, June 27.—Simon Lake's 25-year-old submarine, Defender, passed the navy test in a deep sea dive off Block Island yesterday and today was being lauded in naval circles everywhere.

With Captain Sloan Danenhower and a crew of eight experienced divers and seaman aboard, the submarine started submerging at 4:15 and came to the surface at 5:30 o'clock. The Defender with a 2 1/2 ton mushroom anchor attached to it, pulled itself slowly downward by winding the anchor chain until it reached the sea bottom at a depth of 150 feet.

CHILD BORN AT SEA.

Hoboken, N. J., June 21.—Mrs. John H. Lane and her husband traveled all the way from Turkey in the hope that their child would be born on American soil, where expert medical attention would be available, only to have the child born while their ship, the President Harding, was off Nantucket lightship, less than a day's journey from land. Both the child—a 7-pound boy—and the mother were reported doing fine when the ship docked here today.

URGE BASS FISHERMEN TO JOIN LOCAL CLUB

Costs But Extra Dollar and Anglers Have Chance to Win Some Fine Prizes.

The Manchester Bass Club this year is being conducted under the auspices of the Manchester Fish and Game Club and any person who wishes to take part in the prize winning must be a member of the Manchester Fish and Game Club and must also enroll in the Manchester Bass Club. This will cost them $1 extra for a membership.

A person must be enrolled for at least ten days before any fish caught can be weighed and entered for one of the prizes. In order to have it convenient to weigh in catches and join the club, headquarters have been established where enrollments can be made both day and evening and also on Sunday at the South Manchester Auto Supply Company's place on Center street, where Ernest Bantley has arranged to take care of this work free of charge. A person can enroll there in the evening and any fish caught can be weighed in during the evening or on Sunday, which will make it better for the fisherman as a bass will lose weight after being out of water.

As bass fishing opens on July 1, attention is called to the fact that fishing is limited to once if they are to take part in the prize contests.

MASS. RUM RUNNERS ARE HELD IN HARTFORD

Springfield Men Arrested While Unloading 25 Cases of Canadian Beer.

Hartford, June 27.—Five men and a woman, all residents of the Springfield, Mass., section, were in county jail here today awaiting bondsmen to furnish bail of $20,000, required by the Police Court pending their trial on charges of liquor law violation. The prisoners are Mr. and Mrs. James Almsworth, of Longmeadow, Mass., and Gerard Roberts, George Hines, Frank DiSanti, and Zephir Quinter, Jr., of Springfield. Acting Justice Nicholas Rago, presiding over Police Court when their cases were presented granted continuances until July 2, and set bail at $2,000 per person.

The group was arrested here last evening while they were unloading 25 cases of beer, bearing Canadian labels, at a wholesale bottling plant on Pleasant street.

$50,000 IN JEWELRY STOLEN IN MINEOLA

Mineola, L. I., June 27.—Captain Harold R. King of the Nassau county detective force, revealed today that $50,000 worth of jewelry was stolen last night from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Norman De B. Whitehouse, in the exclusive colony of Brookville, a mile south of Oyster Bay.

The Whitehouse estate is one of the show places of Brookville. The robbery was the first one of major importance to occur in this vicinity since 1927 when "Boston" Billy Williams and several henchmen robbed the home of Jessie L. Livermore, at Kings Point, of $85,000 in jewels and also led rans in other homes.

Whitehouse is a prominent financier, while his wife Mrs. Virginia Whitehouse, is well known as a Suffragist. Mrs. Whitehouse was one of the leading factors in securing woman suffrage for New York state in 1917 and in 1918 was sent to Europe by the United States government on a special mission to organize publicity to combat the German propaganda and make plain the aims of the American people.

Details of the robbery were withheld.

HARD LUCK FOLLOWS THIS NORWALK FAMILY

Child Burned to Death; Parents Ill—Six Children Hungry—To Be Dispossessed.

Norwalk, June 27.—Trouble lies heavily on the family of James Hope today. Ellen E. is dead of burns received while playing with matches yesterday. The mother is about to have another baby. The father is ill. The family is to be dispossessed. And there are six small children in the family to be cared for.

Ellen, playing with children in the dooryard at 9 Spruce street, last evening, ran into the house, seized matches, and returning to the yard set fire to a pile of papers. She became conscious right away, and our friendship lasted through the years.

"He saw me off at the boat when I left New York for Europe four months ago. I heard from him often. Only Monday morning I had a cable from him which he had sent Sunday night. He seemed happy."

Miss Farris' dancing in "The New Moon," one of the most successful shows running in London, has proved a sensation. When Miss Farris first revealed to newspaper men that she was engaged to the slain Broadway racketeer, interest in the murder reached a high pitch here, and one of the London newspapers today put a trans-Atlantic telephone call through to Grover A. Whalen, New York police commissioner, in an effort to obtain additional information on the case.

Talks To New York The trans-Atlantic call, which was handled by International News Service for its client newspaper, the London Evening Standard, was effected in a few minutes. Sitting in his office at the New York police headquarters, Commissioner Whalen said he was hopeful of being able to announce the name of the murderer or murderers "before many hours."

"This will not be another Rothstein case—I can tell you that," the commissioner declared.

Whalen said it was extremely unlikely that Miss Farris would be able to throw any light on the case. "Marlow had many lady friends," he said, "Dolores Farris was not the only woman he misled. Marlow was one of those men who told few of his secrets to his women folk."

Asked if he thought there might be any connection between the Marlow murder and that of Arnold Rothstein, millionaire gambler, Whalen said:

"Not the slightest. They moved in entirely different circles."

LONDON SHOWGIRL MARLOW'S FRIEND

Dolores Farris Says That Slain Racketeer Was the Best Pal She Ever Had.

London, June 27.—Her eyes filled with tears and obviously deeply affected by the tragedy, Dolores Farris, beautiful New York showgirl who came to London recently in the belief she would soon marry Frankie Marlow, slain New York night club owner and racketeer, poured out her heart today.

In the course of an interview in the modest home where she is living with her parents here, Miss Farris revealed that she will play a Pagliacci role and return to her gay part in "The New Moon." A joyous musical revue playing at the historic Drury Lane theater here.

But while she will be dancing before the footlights, her heart will be breaking over the death of the man she considered her fiancé, and whom she characterizes as "the best pal any girl ever had."

"It will be terrible," Miss Farris said, "but I will go on with my part tonight. Frank would have wished it so."

Was a Straight Man The beautiful show-girl recalls the newspaper descriptions of Marlow as a gambler and a bootlegger. "That is not fair," she said. "He was a staunch friend and a straight man."

"I met him four years ago when I was dancing in one of his cabarets. We became friends right away, and our friendship lasted through the years."

"He saw me off at the boat when I left New York for Europe four months ago. I heard from him often. Only Monday morning I had a cable from him which he had sent Sunday night. He seemed happy."

LONDON SHOWGIRL MARLOW'S FRIEND

Dolores Farris Says That Slain Racketeer Was the Best Pal She Ever Had. London, June 27.—Her eyes filled with tears and obviously deeply affected by the tragedy, Dolores Farris, beautiful New York showgirl who came to London recently in the belief she would soon marry Frankie Marlow, slain New York night club owner and racketeer, poured out her heart today. In the course of an interview in the modest home where she is living with her parents here, Miss Farris revealed that she will play a Pagliacci role and return to her gay part in "The New Moon." A joyous musical revue playing at the historic Drury Lane theater here. But while she will be dancing before the footlights, her heart will be breaking over the death of the man she considered her fiancé, and whom she characterizes as "the best pal any girl ever had." "It will be terrible," Miss Farris said, "but I will go on with my part tonight. Frank would have wished it so."

WAS A STRAIGHT MAN

The beautiful show-girl recalls the newspaper descriptions of Marlow as a gambler and a bootlegger. "That is not fair," she said. "He was a staunch friend and a straight man. "I met him four years ago when I was dancing in one of his cabarets. He became a friend right away, and our friendship lasted through the years. "He saw me off at the boat when I left New York for Europe four months ago. I heard from him often. Only Monday morning I had a cable from him which was sent Sunday night. He seemed happy. "Miss Farris' dancing in "The New Moon," one of the most successful shows running in London, has proved a sensation. When Miss Farris first revealed her fiancé's name that she was engaged to the slain Broadway racketeer, interest in the murder reached a high pitch here, and one of the London newspapers today put a trans-Atlantic telephone call through to Grover A. Whalen, New York police commissioner in an effort to obtain additional information on the case. Talks to New York The trans-Atlantic call, which was handled by International News Service for its client newspaper, the London Evening Standard, was effected in a few minutes. Sitting in his office at the New York police headquarters, Commissioner Whalen said he was hopeful of being able to announce the name of the murderer or murderers "before many hours." "This will not be another Rothstein case—I can tell you that," the commissioner declared. Whalen said it was extremely unlikely that Miss Farris would be able to throw any light on the case. "Marlow had many friends," he said. "Dolores Farris was not the only woman he misled. Marlow was one of those men who told few of his secrets to his women folk." Asked if he thought there might be any connection between the Marlow murder and that of Arnold Rothstein, millionaire gambler, Whalen said: "Not the slightest. They moved in entirely different circles."

Poor Golf Is Shot As U. S. Open Starts

Most of Stars Get Off to Poor Start; Detroit Amateur and Burke Well Up.

By DAVIS J. WALSH

Winged Foot Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 27.—Summaries: Bobby Jones, the golfer incomparable, shot a dreaded Winged Foot in a scandalous 38-31-69 to break the competitive course record today and take the lead by three strokes over the field competing in the first round of the national open golf championship.

The performance at once was one of Jones' most magnificent gestures and the answer to those who predicted weeks ago that 70 wouldn't be broken during the championship. He broke it today without apparently extending himself; in fact he did it the hard way by conceding two strokes to par on the outgoing journey and then lopping five strokes from perfection for the final nine, the greatest score ever made on this particular stretch.

Winged Foot Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 27.—While Bobby Jones, Johnny Farrell, Horton Smith and others of the ranking stars were fighting a losing battle with par, it remained for Charles Hilgendorf, an absolute outsider from Detroit to furnish the dramatic in the first round of the National Open championship today by taking a 37 and a 35 for a par 72 and the lead over the early finishers in the event.

Jones, meantime, had turned for home in 38, two strokes over par, while Farrell, the 1928 champion, all but committed competitive suicide by taking no less than 46 strokes for the first nine.

Willie MacFarlane, a champion of the past, was none too good either, shooting a 79 for the complete distance. Bob McDonald, Chicago veteran, had an 82, George Von Elm, the ranking amateur, a 79 and while Horton Smith did better, he didn't do well enough. He had a 76, giving way not only to Hilgendorf, the surprise leader, but to Billy Burke and George Dawson, with 75's each.

Meantime, Leo Diegel had retrieved a shoddy start by a typical Diegel rush to the turn in 45 one under-par, and was exactly even 4's going to the sixteenth.

Horton Smith's two 38's for a 76 were uninspired and not particularly eventful. One couldn't say the same for Jess Stuttle, Kansas City, his partner, who scored 43-41-84 was just one event after another.

Diegel's 74 Second Leo Diegel, finally came home in 39 strokes for a 74 to take second place in the early going, two strokes behind Hilgendorf.

Their cards: Diegel out 553 444 244-35. Hilgendorf out 444 553 345-37. Diegel in 344 455 545 39-74. Hilgendorf in 454 243 445-39-72.

Hilgendorf's final nine which carried him into the lead, was a stroke under par, the only occasion thus far which par had been flouted on this nine.

Diegel had a chance for a tie on the last three holes but couldn't better par on the sixteenth and seventeenth although he mostly was on the line at both, while at the home hole, he took a buzzard. Here his drive hit a tree and bounced back into the fairway only 100 yards from the tee. He played a long second but it, perforce, was short of the green and his pitch was four far off the pin to get him a 4.

Von Elm couldn't put a lick, having no less than six putts to get in. Otherwise, his golf was good and of necessity, had to be to get him a 79.

A lot of big timers finished in a stampede at this time, the list including Bill Mehlhorn, the Waldone. Mac Smith had a 77, Freddie McLeod an 82, Roland Hancock, who almost stole the show last year, an 80; Frank Ball, a 79 and Mehlhorn an 81, not so bad considering that 10 of his on the sixth hole.

The story of how Bill took his double figures and Johnny Farrell his 8 on the eighth might have been funny if it wasn't tragic. Bill started the dementia with a drive that he pulled deep in the woods. He found the ball playing innocently with a lot of rocks. Bill tried to play out. He didn't succeed. He decided to lift out. This was the best shot he made on the hole. He finally got home with his seventh and took three putts, just to make it unanimous.

Farrell played the eighth as follows: Farrell was in a trap his third still was in, his fourth still was in. Whereupon he shifted tactics with the following result: His fifth was over the green, his sixth still was over the green. It began to look like an all-day contest at this point but John was going to win. His seventh, was clipped on and, by way of novelty it stayed on. Then he made a fighting finish by sinking a 6 footer for his 8.

MAKE POOR STARTS Winged Foot Golf Club, Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 27 — Perfect weather—sunny, cool, and delightful—and imperfect golf—bad, worse and terrible—featured the opening of the National Open Golf championship today, the early starters finding Winged Foot's reputed terrors to be far from exaggerated. MacDonald Smith, N. Y. 38-38-77 Fred McLeod, Wash., 40-42-82 R. Heihorn, N. Y., 42-39-81 R. Hancock, Lynchburg, Va., 39-41-80 Leo Diegel, N. Y., 35-39-74 E. Spicer, Belle Mead, Tenn., 40-41-81 J. A. Beaupre, Utica, Mich., 43-44-83 John Mantion, St. L., 43-40-83 Frank Ball, Atlanta, 38-41-79

Diegel, Horton Smith and the other head-liners were not among the early worms that failed to catch the birdie, however.

Ira Couch, Lake Forest, Ill., amateur, was in the first pair and went to the ninth in 45 strokes, including a 7 at the sixth and a 6 at the eighth. He played with Kean Donnelly, Philadelphia, who shot a 40 to the ninth.

Bob McDonald, Chicago veteran was not so torrid, either. He needed 39 strokes for the first 9, but his partner, Arthur Andrews, Davenport, Iowa, was everything the doctor ordered. Andrews shot the first 9 in a par 38, his card showing a sequence of nine 4's that looked most handsome. Indeed, his performance included birdies at the fifth and ninth but also buzzards at the short third and seventh.

William MacFarlane, the 1925 champion, was one of those who burned no fairways with the speed of his inaugural effort. William took 49 strokes to the turn, while Lew Goldbeck, his partner from Philadelphia, was two strokes under that score.

Harry Cooper, the ex-Californian now playing out of Buffalo also took 38 to the turn and a lot of howls at the green. Here he got an eagle 3 by sinking his chip shot from a spot well off the green. Harry is like that sometimes.

Roland Mackenzie, Washington amateur, joined Andrews with a 38 over the first nine, being even pars for the fourth, even again at the fifth, sixth and seventh, one over again, one under at the eighth and even par at the ninth.

Horton Smith, the Joplin kid, seemed far from demoralized as he faced the gallery at the first tee. In fact he plainly was nervous, with the result that he right-handed his drive badly. The ball brought up deep in the rough and he couldn't get his second home with a carrier's play. So he played short and took a 5. He followed with a par 4 and a 3 respectively at the second and third, however.

George Dawson, Chicago amateur and brother of Johnny, the British birdie, got 38 for the first nine. He played with Eugene Larkin, Chevy Chase, Md., who needed all of 45 strokes to the turn. Fred Baroni, Connaught Lake, Pa., had a 37; Jack Forrester, Oradell, N. J., a 40; and Billy Burke, Westport, Conn., a par 38 at this point. Dawson and Mackenzie, both amateurs, were the only contestants to get birdies at the fearsome eighth hole. Mackenzie was hitting them far and handsome but not wide.

Propagandizing by officials of the Prohibition Bureau on the morality of the dry law has been taboed definitely by high Treasury authorities. During the old Haynes dry regime, reams of information relative to enforcement conditions were issued every week by a publicist man for the bureau. SCHUTTE ALSO STOLE MURPHY AUTOMOBILE

Was One of Last Cars Middletown Thief Took Before Skipping to New York State

Perhaps one of the last automobiles stolen in Connecticut by Schutte and the gang that operated with him in stealing automobiles, was one owned by Howard Murphy as it was in Schutte's garage that the car was found. Schutte is to be tried in this state for several automobile thefts. Murphy had purchased the car from an East Hartford dealer and was going to have it registered as a 'Drive car. He drove from East Hartford to the capitol and going upstairs to the motor vehicle department left the car, with several state policemen standing around, on the south drive of the capitol grounds.

On securing the necessary license and license plates he again came down stairs and was looking for his automobile. It could not be found and a search was started. Other new cars had been stolen a few days before and chase led to Middletown where the car was found, along with a lot of others. Schutte had left the state by that time but was arrested soon after in New York state where he was sentenced. He has just completed his term there.

Public Utility Gas and Electric Light stocks held the center of their bid in a buying movement which sent prices of a few popular stocks 1 to 3 points higher. According to Wall street soothsayers the utility merger to be put through by the Morgan-Mellon interests will dwarf anything ever attempted in this line, bringing under one control the Light, heat and power producers for New York City, Philadelphia and a dozen or more big cities in the two states.

Public Service of New Jersey, which is to join United Corporation in a holding company agreement, according to Wall street, was the star attraction on the big board, reaching a new peak price above 112, a new gain of 4 points.

Consolidated Gas, key to New York metropolitan gas light industry, was as eagerly bought at 128 as at 20 points lower and the stock moved up 4 points in a steady stream of speculative buying. American and Foreign Power jumped 6 points to 113 and new advances of 1 to 3 points were scored by United Corporation, Electric Light and Power, National Power and Light, Columbia Gas, etc.

The Oils made their best response of the week to the vigorous efforts of the California natural resources bureau to cut down crude oil production in that state, by fixing August 31 as the deadline for blowing natural gas into the air. Standard of California jumped 4 points to 75 1/4; Pan American, Sinclair and other oils sold up 1 to 2 1/2 points.

DRESS OF BRIDE NOT TOO SHORT

Mother of Meriden Girl Gives Her Side of Story; Priest Halted Wedding Party.

Meriden, June 27.—Gerald Fighloli of 67 Yale parkway, father of Mrs. Sebastian Millardo, and Mrs. John Mule of 156 Foster street, mother of Mrs. John J. Cusano today commented on the action of the Rev. Domenico Ricci, pastor of Our Lady of Mount Carmel church, in halting the wedding parties of their daughters in front of the church Monday morning. Both gave out statements taking exception to Father Ricci's stand against the gowns worn by their daughters' attendants.

Mr. Fighloli said: "My daughter, her matron of honor and bridesmaids wore dresses of decent length, which had box sleeves, and the necks and backs of the gowns were not too low."

Mrs. Mule's statement follows: "The dresses worn by my daughter, her maid of honor and six bridesmaids were not short. It is true that six of the gowns were sleeveless."

"I do not know why Father Ricci acted as he did. He never told the girls at a rehearsal a week ago about his rule and I saw him Monday before the wedding and he never mentioned it to me. I do not understand why he waited until the last minute and then made the demonstration he did in front of the church. I believe he could have avoided all the trouble if he had said on Sundays when he spoke in church about women's gowns that his rule would also apply to weddings."

"I hope that no other wedding parties will have the experience that my daughter and her attendants had."

MILK BOTTLES FLY AS TRUCKS CRASH

Rockville Dealer's Machine and Arthur Wilkie's Reo Come Together Early on Main Street.

Because the drivers did not see each other until it was too late, two milk trucks, a Reo and a Ford, came together at the intersection of Main and Bissell streets at 5:20 o'clock this morning with a great deal of damage to the Ford. Both drivers escaped injury.

The Ford truck, driven by Castner Hill of Rockville, was going north on Main street when the Reo driven by Arthur Wilkie of 16 Walker street, coming from behind the milk truck of Clarence Peterson, swung southward onto Main street from Bissell street, directly in front of the northbound truck.

Unable to stop at such close quarters the Ford crashed into the left rear fender of the Reo, crushing it and sending milk bottles flying in all directions over the road. Damage to the Ford included a smashed left front fender, a broken windshield on the driver's side, left front wheel demolished, front body post broken and a tire blown. The Ford proceeded to a point almost in front of the store of G. H. Williams before the wheel veered in.

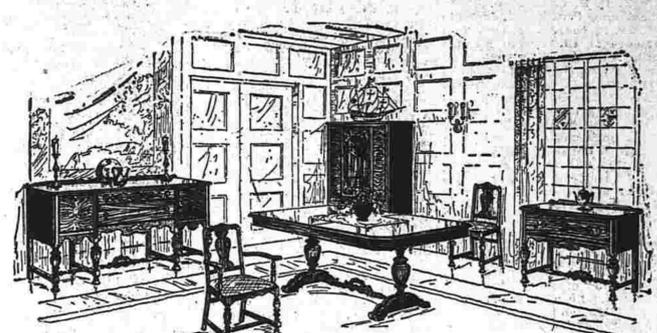

Both milk dealers were fully insured. Officer Edwin Donaldson investigated but made no arrests. The Ford was towed to Smith's garage on Bissell street for repairs.

BUS AND TRUCK LOCK BUMPERS, WON'T PART

Drivers Forced to Jack Up Cars to Separate Big Machines—Bus Out of Gas.

A Connecticut Company bus and a five-ton truck, owned by E. P. Winward & Son of Fall River, locked bumpers at 11:15 o'clock last night and for nearly fifteen minutes engaged in a tug-of-war that resulted in a draw.

The bus was proceeding along Center street towards the Green. Nearing Walker street it stopped suddenly. The truck, directly in back of the bus, also stopped. The driver tooted his horn. The bus started, rolled backwards and got a neat hold on the truck's bumper. All efforts to break the hold were unavailing. Finally a jack was brought and placed underneath the bumper. The car was jacked up disengaging the cars.

Trying to start again it was found the bus was out of gas. The driver, a new man, had forgot to fill the tank for the night shift. One run was lost.

TRUE FEMININE SCRAP.

Waukesha, Wis.—Hair pulling contests are games indulged in by irate members of the feminine sex. Mrs. Harriet Grube and Leora Welsie recently engaged in one and Mrs. Grube won the battle and lost $20. Mrs. Grube accused Leora of unfairness to her child. In court the judge awarded the teacher $20 damages.

AN IMPORTANT STATEMENT

To Telephone Subscribers in the Manchester Exchange

PRACTICALLY every telephone in the Manchester exchange area will be changed to the dial method of operation next month. You are entitled to know why this change is being made.

New Equipment Essential

Manchester's present telephone switchboard has served the area faithfully for many years and is reaching the end of its useful life. Therefore, to replace the present switchboard some sort of new equipment had to be provided. In addition, the building in which the present equipment is located is not suitable for housing the additional facilities that will be required to take care of future demands.

More than two years ago our engineers began an intensive study of the situation, to determine which type of equipment would best serve the community's needs. A comparison of all types of modern telephone mechanisms, and a careful consideration of both economic and service advantages, led to the recommendation that the dial telephone system be installed in the Manchester exchange.

Larger Quarters Required

In order to provide adequate space for the new equipment as well as for our forces in Manchester, the new building at 52 East Center Street was designed and constructed. Our business office has been located in the new building for some time and for several months the installation of the dial equipment has been under way. The whole project, involving nearly half a million dollars, when completed will furnish Manchester exchange telephone subscribers with the most up-to-date telephone service available.

The Dial System—A Proven Method

The dial system is by no means an experiment. It is thoroughly standardized, and is in successful use in Hartford and New London as well as in more than 500 other cities and towns throughout the country. We are confident that telephone users in the Manchester exchange will find the dial method of operation to be simple, efficient and satisfactory.

Your Part in the Change

There is nothing complicated about using a dial telephone. But before the change from the present method to the dial system is made, we earnestly request telephone subscribers in the Manchester exchange area to cooperate with us by learning the few easy steps in making a dial telephone call.

We intend to use every means to get this information to you. We ask you to do your share by reading carefully the informative material which will be sent to you by mail, and to watch for the further announcements which will appear in this paper from time to time during the next few weeks.

WILLIAM B. HALSTED,
Exchange Manager

THE SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND TELEPHONE COMPANY

The second in a series of advertisements explaining an important change in Manchester's telephone service. The next announcement will appear on July 1.

NOT TO RELEASE OPERATORS HERE

Regular Employees to Be Retained; Temporary Workers to Be Dropped.

"The erroneous impression seems to prevail in Manchester," said Exchange Manager Halsted of the Telephone company today, "that with the introduction here next month of the dial telephone our entire force of telephone operators will be released and that our subscribers will no longer have the valuable aid and service in emergencies of these young ladies. That is far, very far from the truth."

"I have just received one of the numerous letters which come to me commending some operator for a gracious act of service beyond the routine of her work and expressing, respectfully, the fact that operators are no longer to be on duty to aid subscribers."

"As a matter of fact," continued Mr. Halsted, "we have a force of about 21 telephone operators in this city. When the dial telephone goes into service next month, more than half that number will be continued in service, ready at the call of the subscriber to give any emergency service, or any of the routine services such as toll calls, information, etc., which operators are required to give even with the dial system in operation."

Telephone operators will never be completely replaced by any form of dial service. It is an established policy of this company to provide employment for its permanent employees in a change of this character by a program planned sufficiently in advance.

Fourteen of the present force of twenty-one operators in Manchester will be required for assistance, information and a major portion of the out of town calls after dial operation is effected. For nearly two years the losses by resignations of operators have been covered by engaging temporary operators, with whom arrangements have been made to work until the conversion to dial operation. At that time the service of these temporary operators will terminate according to agreement.

Thus an adequate operating personnel will be available when dial service becomes effective, and it will not be necessary to release any regular operators who wish permanent employment.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

"MISSISSIPPI BUBBLE."

On June 27, 1720, the gigantic banking and commercial scheme, the "Mississippi Bubble," burst. The scheme was projected in France by the celebrated Scottish financier, John Law, to resuscitate the French finances by removing some of the debt which followed the wars of Louis XIV.

Money was to flow into France by developing the resources of the province of Louisiana and the country bordering on the Mississippi—a tract at that time believed to abound in precious metals.

A company was incorporated in 1717 and started with a capital of 100,000,000 livres. Two hundred thousand shares were placed on the market and eagerly bought up. In 1719, the company changed its name and obtained a monopoly of trading to the East Indies, China and the South Seas and all the possessions of the French East India company. The brilliant visions opened up to the public gaze was irresistible.

Public enthusiasm became an absolute frenzy. A fictitious impulse was given trade in Paris; paper currency to the face value of $2,700,000,000 livres flooded the country.

Many wary investors, foreseeing a crisis, secretly converted their paper and shares into gold. Scarcity of gold and silver in France becoming acute, a general run on the government issued an order reducing the value of bank notes and shares in the company by one-half.

The final crisis came in 1720, when the bank stopped payment and Law was compelled to flee the country. A share in the Mississippi now brought with difficulty 24 livres.

COOKING EXHIBITION IN WATKINS WINDOW

Chambers Fireless Gas Ranges Demonstrated by Representative of Factory.

The much dreamed of day of automatic cooking is here. This afternoon Josephine Taylor, a representative of the Chambers Manufacturing company, makers of the time-tested Chambers Fireless gas range which now has the improved automatic Autostat, cooked and baked delicious foods in Watkins Brothers show window without once touching the range after the foods were placed in it.

The Chambers range has always been known as the "fireless gas range" for it is equipped with an unusually heavy insulated oven which can be sealed-up when the proper degrees of heat has been reached to properly continue the cooking or baking with heat that is retained inside the oven. Now Watkins Brothers announce that this range is equipped with a new improvement, the Autostat, which makes cooking absolutely automatic.

The Autostat, found exclusively on the Chambers gas range, comprises a chartered dial of heats which have been approved by actual kitchen tests. When the oven is lighted for either cooking or baking, for in this range whole meals can be cooked inside the oven instead of on the outside burners as in the ordinary gas range, the dial is set at the proper heat. When this heat is reached, the gas is automatically shut off, and the insulated oven sealed, so that the retained heat which continues to cook the food does not escape.

Miss Taylor will continue to demonstrate the Chambers tonight, Friday and Saturday, and invites those who watch the demonstrations of automatic cooking, either from the street or from the store, to taste the delicious foods that she cooks and bakes.

PLANS ROCKET SHIP.
Berlin.—Max Valler, German inventor, plans the construction of rocket-propelled ships to cross the English channel from France. With a machine similar to the type he has in mind, the scientist recently attained a speed of 235 miles an hour on a lake. The attempt at crossing the channel thusly will be made this summer.

SPANS THE WORLD.
Oslo, Norway.—Probably the longest radio connection in the world is kept between the wireless operator of the Hobbs Arctic Expedition around the North Pole and Commander Byrd's South Polar base. The distance separating them is 12,000 miles.

tello that with the wounds inflicted Huntington became instantly unconscious, maintains that the Harvard student took his own life. No powder marks were about the wound but such conclusive evidence that the gun had been held as close to the head as would have been necessary had the victim fired the shot himself, disturbs the detective not a bit. Suicide, he says is the probable answer.

After a month and a half Coroner J. Gilbert Calhoun has made public his finding in which he reports that he is reluctantly forced to "conclude he either shot himself or was killed by some person of persons unknown." The coroner is by no means satisfied. The public most certainly is not. We had hoped that District Attorney Alcorn, who was absent from the state at the time of the discovery of the body, would be able to inject into the investigation some hope of a solution. So many questions occur even to the layman that were never answered, in public at any rate, that there remains the belief that some elements of this case are known to the authorities that have been withheld from the public.

as lost in the latest attempt a total of 25 lives has been claimed as the result of such attempts, all but two of which were the toll of the water. Two companions of Capt. Rene Fonck met death as their plane crashed in 1926 in attempting to take off for a cross-Atlantic flight from Roosevelt field. Six planes and their crews disappeared from land over the water in 1927 and never were heard of again. In March of last year another was lost. Now the Spanish fliers have met a like fate. Such disasters might be of service to promote greater measure of safety in aviation were the planes salvaged and experts able to determine the cause of failure. But the Atlantic claims the evidence.

Health and Diet Advice
 By DR. FRANK MCCOY

FLOATING KIDNEYS

Floating kidneys were more often found during the period when corsets were fashionable, but they are by no means rare even today. Approximately seven times as many women as men are affected by floating kidneys, probably because a floating kidney is usually associated with other abdominal prolapses, a condition most frequently found in women because their muscles are usually less developed than those of the sterner sex.

Many people have floating kidneys without noticing any symptoms of distress, and the floating kidney is often discovered during the doctor's examination for other troubles. A patient who has been told that he has a floating kidney may worry a great deal about the condition, but there usually is little harm produced by the displacement of either one of the kidneys.

In most text books of anatomy, the kidneys are described as being about even with the space between the twelfth thoracic and the third lumbar vertebrae, with the right kidney on a little lower level than the left, just in front of the lowest ribs. Having examined many thousands of cases, my experience has convinced me that the right kidney is naturally located two or three inches below the place assigned to it by anatomists. Out of thousands of cases examined, I have found this to be the rule except with those who are abnormally fat, in which case both kidneys may be out of their normal positions.

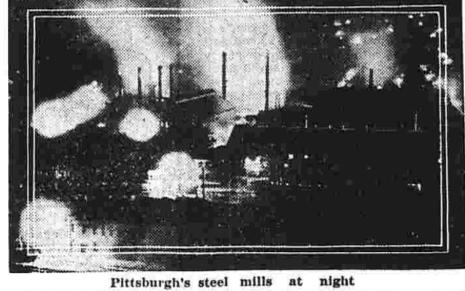

Sometimes a kidney may descend as low as the hip bone, so that there is danger of a serious blocking of the ureter because of the twisting of the ureter which carries the urine because of the twisting of the ureter which carries the urine to the bladder. This does not usually happen, but should it occur, a surgical operation is usually advised and the kidney is anchored into what is considered its proper position. The danger of having this kind of the ureter occur as a result of a prolapsed kidney is entirely unnecessary if the patient is willing to devote a moderate amount of time and energy in systematically developing the muscles of the abdomen.

If either kidney is found to be very low, the proper treatment is to go to bed for two or three weeks, keeping the hips slightly elevated and, while in this position, doing all of the different exercises which will develop the abdominal muscles. It is a good plan to use a milk diet during this time, using as much as six quarts daily. This will keep the intestines filled and will assist in the formation of fat around the kidneys which assists in holding them in their proper position. I would not advise a milk diet for this purpose unless the patient is also willing to take the abdominal muscle-developing exercises. If the floating kidney patient is unable to

GOING PLACES AND SEEING THINGS

Nearing Pittsburgh — Manhattan lies far behind. Fireflies blink against indistinct masses of trees. Approaching dawn is signaled by ribbons of mist crawling along the ground. . . . Industrial towns squat on hillsides. . . . A stream runs by, stained a pleasant orange-yellow by chemicals from the plants. . . . And there are intermittent shots of squalid looking gullies, dotted with cheap shacks.

Pittsburgh—Big excursion signs announcing rates to Chicago, and from Altoona. No mention of New York! Perhaps Manhattan isn't so much of a match after all!

Pittsburgh's steel mills at night

Those red glass signs associated with most depots. The depot is packed with the sort of people who look as though "they had come in to town." They have that "going shopping" look upon their faces.

Shopping baskets! Hundreds of them, spilling over with vegetables and fruits. It's been years since I've seen a good old-fashioned shopping basket. This must be a homey town. The people walk briskly as though they really were going somewhere. Los Angeles is the town that crowds its thoroughfares with people who seem to have no destination. Fifth Avenue, New York, runs a close second. And sometimes Broadway.

Being Saturday, I am told that most of the passers-by are from out of town. This gives an air of rural marketing center to a bustling metropolis. The shoppers come from three directions—West Virginia, southern Ohio and sections of Pennsylvania.

The mist, thickened by smoke, which hangs against the hills and the sky is called "smog"—a Pittsburgh word which means half smoke and half fog.

The fanciful railroad, which reminds one a bit of Lookout Mountain, Chattanooga. That is until you get up on it. Then the significance of Pittsburgh as a "mill town" strikes home.

The inescapable angles of the streets. Nothing that the town can take this rest in bed, some good results may be obtained by living on a well balanced diet and endeavoring to strengthen the abdominal muscles from exercising.

Although a wandering kidney can be benefited by any kind of "stuffed diet" taken while lying in bed, this condition will not be permanently remedied unless the patient keeps his abdominal muscles strong by using exercises while lying on the back. When the fatiguing treatment, alone, has been used, the patient will be in a weakened condition when he finally gets up, and the kidney will finally slip back into its prolapsed condition.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Whiskey for the Lungs)
 Question: Mrs. C. L. asks: "Will you please tell me if a combination of good whiskey and salt is healing to the lungs if taken as a medicine? And if anyone taking this will show it in the blood test?"

Answer: There are no kind of medicinal preparations which have any definite effect upon healing the lungs. If large amounts of either whiskey or salt are used it might be determined by a blood test, but such tests would have to be made of the patient's blood both on the days when he is taking the whiskey and salt and on the other days when he was not; then some difference can be seen by comparison.

The last straw, of course, would be an interview with Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, in which she'd say Augustus snored.

GILBERT SWAN.

THE TRICENTENARY

The enormity of the task of properly preparing for a fitting observance of Connecticut's tercentenary of her founding makes it highly essential that the commission appointed by Governor Trumbull should begin its labors thus early. It is a tremendous task faced by Dr. G. C. F. Williams and the fellow members of the commission to so co-ordinate the various elements required to make a success of such an occasion. They have announced as the result of the first meeting that particular attention is to be paid to the adoption of the Fundamental Orders, the world's first written constitution for the government of a free people. This is as it should be. First things are the basis for the entire observance. Of vast importance among first things of Connecticut were these Fundamental Orders because the signing of these launched the colonists along the highway to self-government and served as a model for the world at large.

No definite dates for the state-wide celebration were decided upon by the commission. The seven members are to submit within two weeks individual outlines of plans for the observance. These seven plans with those which may be offered by others interested in the occasion are to be studied by the commission during the summer and in September the general program will be drawn up from these preliminary suggestions, embodying, of course what are considered the best points of each. This draft will be submitted to the Governor after the next meeting of the commission in the Fall.

At first glance this seems a long time to devote to a study of preliminary plans but it is not. This tercentenary observance is nothing that can be discussed over a weekend and set in motion the following Tuesday. It is more than nation-wide in importance. It is world-wide. It involves long and careful preparation on the part not only of the state but of the towns and cities that are component parts of the state. Each of these units in the whole is expected to have individual celebrations.

The historical societies have been selected by the commission as the first means of bringing this 300th anniversary before the people generally and getting thereby the co-operation of all residents. They will be asked to co-operate with the commission, appointing committees to work directly with the governor's appointees and to suggest to the commission a list of all persons, agencies and other groups who should be included as participants in the celebration.

Whether regarded as a state program or as a celebration, the component parts of which will be those provided by each town and city, it means a tremendous amount of work. And it is not too early for towns and cities to begin serious consideration of the parts they are to play in it.

STILL A MYSTERY

The Huntington murder case is officially closed. Unless the murderer voluntarily confesses this death of Walter Treadway Huntington, Harvard student, will be added to the long list of unsolved crime mysteries. More's the pity. We refer to the murder because we, like the great majority, have not been convinced that young Huntington shot himself in the head, disposed of the revolver so that intensive search failed to find it, wiped the blood from his face and head, stuffed the handkerchiefs in a pocket, folded his hands across his breast and disposed his body for death. Yet Detective Hickey, in spite of positive assertion by Medical Examiner Henry H. Coe-

ANOTHER YEAR

Criticism after a big sporting event is almost invariable. Not always is it justifiable, the basis too often being partisanship or prejudiced personal beliefs. This, however, does not appear to be entirely the case with the criticism of the action of two of three Cornell crews that participated in the big regatta Monday afternoon and evening at Poughkeepsie. In each of the last two races the other crews were compelled to wait from 15 to 20 minutes for the Cornell crews to appear at the starting line. This delayed the start of the varsity race until dusk had fallen and until the river had been kicked up by a storm wind to a degree of turbulence that swamped four of the crews. The rules plainly state that the crews shall be at the starting line at the specified time. It was well within the authority of the referee to have started the race without waiting for Cornell. We can appreciate his unwillingness to do this in view of the tremendous amount of work the boys had done in preparation for the event. But that doesn't make the action of Cornell any the less regrettable. It will be easy to take the proper steps to prevent a repetition of such delays next year.

PROGRESS

Telephoning from an airplane over New Jersey to London, on the face of the returns, was not entirely a success. Communication was established and some little conversation was understandable at the other end of the "line." There are those who will refer slightly to the effort. Yet they think nothing of talking from New York to Chicago at any hour of the day or night. But we can remember when to talk over the telephone wires for a distance of half a mile was equally unsatisfactory with the effort of Tuesday to talk from the air over the air to London. We can even remember in our home town when, if necessarily compelled to use of the phone after, say, 10 o'clock, there was only one way to accomplish it; to go to the central office, wake up the night man and then, if you could calm down sufficiently, to make the necessary call. Since that time we have progressed. Telephoning from the air to London or any other place will soon be done as easily as calling from the office to announce you have been detained and will not be home to dinner. FIREMEN VOLUNTEERS

Ten Waterbury firemen gave of their blood for ten separate cases requiring blood transfusions in one day recently in two Waterbury hospitals. Some time ago at the request of the health department persons willing to give of their blood in emergency cases were tested to determine their types of blood and listed for sudden call. Most of the firemen of the city were among those on the hospital lists. The other day the hospitals had an unusually long list of patients requiring blood transfusions to prolong or save their lives. The civilian volunteers called upon were unable or unwilling at the time to submit. But the firemen were available. We mention this as corroborative evidence of a comment in this column recently that all over the country men are giving of their blood without publicity or remuneration to help others. Waterbury's firemen are among them.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER.

Washington, June 27.—You could never guess, without being told, why the House decided to place a tariff on snake skins and to continue to give angostura bitters a preferential rate over other bitters.

Snake skins have recently come to be used for shoes, handbags and other women's articles, as well as finished and dressed snake leather for other purposes than use in making footwear, snake leather for that purpose being taxed only 10 per cent.

Huge Quantities Are Imported. This duty goes for all kinds of snakes, lizards, pythons, boa constrictors and other mean animals whose hides are used for wear or adornment. It is estimated that about $6,000,000 worth of this leather was being imported each year.

The main sources of supply are in India, Asiatic islands and northern Africa. It was contended before the Ways and Means Committee that when one of the large American firms went into the reptile-importing business last year foreign reptile tanners reduced their prices here 25 or 30 per cent., indicating that they had been gouging our consumers.

American snakes have not yet been developed to the point where they are fit for tanning because their scales drop off when the skins are folded, so nearly all snake skins now being worn are brought in from India.

One learns with pride, however, that the American snake may yet demonstrate his utility. Experiments are being made on snake farms in Florida, Texas and Oklahoma with 100 per cent. American rattlers and moccasins to see if they can't make themselves as valuable as the Indian variety. Similar experiments are being carried out on frogs.

Of course, as long as they must depend on India for snakes, our own reptile tanners do not want any duty on raw snake skins, but only on the cured ones. Inasmuch as our snake farms have not yet developed snakes which can be guaranteed not to shed after skinning, no representatives of that infant industry have come to Washington to demand protection. If the experiments succeed the next tariff revision doubtless will produce a battle between the snake raisers and the snake tanners.

Now to jump from snake skins to angostura bitters: It will doubtless be interesting to all users of these bitters and instructive to others to learn that they do not contain angostura bark but are only named from the town in which they were first made, Angostura, Venezuela.

A representative of another bitters importing company went before the Ways and Means Committee and protested because in the present Tariff Act it is provided that all alcoholic bitters except angostura bitters shall pay duty of $5 a gallon and angostura bitters only $2.50 a gallon.

Mr. A. Edward Wupperman, representing J. W. Wupperman, Inc., replied that their angostura bitters were the most expensive bitters in the world and hence did not compete with American bitters as other imported bitters did.

They Aren't Made There Now. Once these bitters were manufactured in the place of their birth, Angostura, but the factory was moved over to Trinidad because of Venezuela's turbulent politics and her tendency to impose high taxes. The bitters kept their name, of course.

The Ways and Means Committee, whose tariff bill was passed by the House, accepted Mr. Wupperman's argument that classing other bitters with angostura bitters would provide new cheap competition for American bitters. And it saw no reason why angostura bitters should be taxed $5 a gallon like the others.

Thus Congress magnanimously refrained from increasing the cost of stomach aches and cocktails.

Among the people you could hate easily is the man who sits in the only occupied car in a line of parked autos eight blocks long and replies to you that he isn't going out tonight.

Auto Editorial TELL-TALE FENDERS

Traffic policemen who stand by will cause him to be regardless of their motorcycles on the lookout for possible offenders have one almost certain tell-tale to guide them. That is the dented fender. The dented fender has a sort of psychological effect not only on the policeman but on the occupants of other automobiles. The policeman is suspicious of the man who drives with his fenders mashed in. The other motorists are wary of him for fear that his neglect of his own car

But not for long. He will consider his own respectability and have those fenders repaired early. For to him an unsightly automobile has a different psychological effect. It makes him feel like a gentleman with baggy trousers. So between the self-respecting driver and the suspicious traffic cop, the dented fender has no place in the realm of motordom. It is easy to repair.

Proof that motor trucks are aiding railroads in rendering transportation services is in the increased number of companies employing them. The National Automobile Chamber of Commerce reports that 70 railroads are employing trucks.

ROADS MADE SAFER FOR SPEEDING CARS

San Francisco, June 27.—Increased speed, mechanical improvements and the rapid growth in car registration have necessitated and has been responsible for improvements in modern highways, according to C. C. Cottrell, manager of the Highway Bureau of the California State Automobile Association. In 1920 there were 3,000,000 cars. Today there are 24,000,000. In 1920 only three states had speed limits of from 35 to 45 miles an hour. Today there are 26. In 1922 there were no four-wheel brakes. Today they are part of every car, together with other safety devices which permit greater speed. "Today the policy of the federal bureau of public roads is to secure wide right of way which is the primary basis of adequate roads," says Cottrell. "No federal highway builder would think of creating a road, even in the most remote sections of the country, that would be less than 20 feet wide. Researches made by the bureau indicate that the old 16 and 18-foot strips are too narrow for cars to pass each other with a due margin of safety. "Ten years ago one rarely saw a banked curve, unless it was on a race track. Today all curves on open highways are banked to a degree that permits a car to be driven on them without lessening its speed. Likewise the radius of curves has been increased. "Where the country is level the federal engineers make every effort to keep the radius of necessary curves in the neighborhood of 1,000 feet. Such a curve is quite gradual and may be negotiated safely at most touring speeds. "During the past year the federal road bureau regarded a 500-foot radius as the minimum that would be compatible with safety, with the exception of curves in mountainous regions where the radius might be reduced to 100 feet when construction problems were grave enough to warrant such a quick turn."

The Boomerang

How She Hides Her Lines on Her Face

By Israel Klein, Science Editor, NEA Service.

A study of cooling fluids for automotive and airplane engines made by naval engineers has brought out the point that use of a commercial anti-freeze entirely in the cooling system would increase the efficiency and economy of the motor.

The anti-freeze found so beneficial is ethylene glycol and is sold commercially under a trade name. It has been sold for the last two winters at perhaps the most efficient anti-freeze solution on the market. Now it may be used entirely for cooling of smaller and more efficient engines.

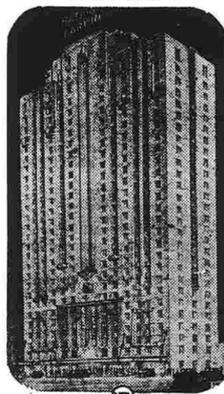

According to the engineers who studied the practicability of this chemical, much less if it is needed for proper cooling of an engine than is required of water. Therefore the size of the engine can be reduced and, most significant, its frontal area cut down considerably. Less frontal area, particularly in airplanes, means less air resistance and therefore greater speed and power of the plane.

In the case of automobiles, this ethylene glycol cooling chemical enables the engine to operate at a much higher and more efficient temperature than it could with the use of water, resulting in greater economy of gasoline as well as greater efficiency.

Ethylene glycol doesn't boil until at a much higher temperature than water. Therefore it can dissipate the heat of the motor more rapidly than water and less of it is needed for cooling. And its freezing point is far below that of water. It can be mixed easily with water in any proportion. It prevents rust and doesn't seem to have any bad effect on rubber connections in the cooling system. The engineers placed rubber tubing into a solution of this chemical and kept it there for three months. It showed no swelling or deterioration, they say.

Yet, if this is to be used in a cooling system, whether in winter or summer, care should be taken that all connections to the water system are tight. For this fluid has the habit of seeping through joints that for water would be tight enough. The packing and nut in front of the water pump especially is a place through which such fluid finds its way. This therefore requires tightening and watching. The nuts on the cylinder head must be tightened down evenly, and all other connections tightened accordingly.

Ethylene glycol, and for that matter pure glycerine, should be an effective cooling medium for summer as well as winter. In fact, if used during summer, there will be less worry about filling the radiator than when water alone is used. The reason is very little of it, if any at all, will boil away since its boiling point is so high, while water boils away easily at this time.

ANTIQUATE MAMMOTH CAVE RAILWAY GIVES WAY TO BUS—THEN PLANE

Louisville, Ky.—The evolution of transportation was illustrated recently with the announcement here that the Mammoth Cave railroad line connecting Glasgow Junction and the famous cavern, soon to become another link in the chain of national parks, had been discontinued and the tourist traffic taken up by a fleet of motor buses.

The antiquated engine purchased in 1874, has been consigned to the scrap heap. And even now, within a few weeks of this change, there is talk of the next step—an air line connecting the Louisville & Nashville line of railroad with the cave region when it has finally been taken over by the government.

With the utilization of the airplane the progress of evolution will be completed, for a time at least.

The old and the new transportation to Mammoth Cave in Kentucky. Yet the new, still on rails, may soon make room for the latest—airplanes.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

NAN CARROLL, secretary, is in love with her employer, JOHN CURTIS MORGAN, successful lawyer, and decides to resign. She lingers however when she learns Morgan is to be married to his former friend, BERT CRAWFORD. Nan suspects Crawford and IRIS MORGAN, the adored wife of John.

Morgan wins Crawford's acquittal. He leaves town at once, followed by Iris. She writes Morgan she will never return, cleverly omitting reference to Crawford. Nan saves Morgan from despair by directing him more deeply into his work. For six months she acts as a supplanting housekeeper for him, winning the love of little CURTIS, his son, and bringing comfort to a man who ironically thinks only of another.

Nan returns from her bar excursion and Morgan tells her he is divorcing Iris. He proposes to her. After their marriage they are prevented from going on their honeymoon by the unexpected arrival of a pleading client. Three months later the marriage continues and Nan is on the verge of despair. Nan realizes she can stand no more, and hysterically goes to her room to pack her bag. Morgan finds her there, and confesses that he loves her but has believed the married man out of pity and love of the boy. She tells him she thought the ghost of Iris had prevented his coming to her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXV

"Good morning, Father. Good morning, Nan," Curtis said, painting a little as usual from his hurried efforts to bathe, dress himself and reach the breakfast table on time, slipped into his chair the next morning and was making a dive for the cream pitcher when something about his stepmother halted his greedy hand in mid-air. "My gosh, Nan! Whassa matter with you? You look all—glory! Don't she, Father—don't she?"

He stared at Nan's vivid, sparkling little face with dazed curiosity. He groped in his small vocabulary for more potent words of description. "I never saw you look so—so sparkly, Nan. You look like you got about a million 'lectric lights turned on inside you. Don't she, Father?" He turned to his father eagerly for confirmation, then his black eyes blazed even wider. "Golly! Father, you look the same way! Whassa matter with you two? You look like it was already Christmas—"

John Curtis Morgan laughed aloud, so unrestrainedly, so joyously that his son's bewilderment increased. "You're right, Curtis. Nan and I simply couldn't wait another minute for Christmas. We gave each other our Christmas presents last night."

Nan blushed vividly, but laughed, too, a throaty little sound that was rather tremulous, but rich with happiness.

"Aw—no fair!" Curtis accused them, his expressive black eyes clouding sulkily. Then he brightened. "What did you give each other? Don't you grown-ups have a Santa Claus like kids do? Did Father give you a swell present, Nan? Can I see it?"

Nan and John glanced at each other, then their eyes caught and wonder of their happiness they got the child who was watching them so intently. Laughter fled from their faces; a solemn, almost prayerful exultation took its place.

"Aw!" Curtis exclaimed at last, in deep chagrin, "I'm frightened. Grown folks are always having secrets from kids. It ain't fair."

That broke the spell. Laughter returned with bright blushes of embarrassment. Nan was about to attempt to make some sort of answer to the child when Estelle pushed in from the kitchen with a plate of bran muffins.

"Hi! Muffins! Have they got raisins in 'em, Estelle? Get 'em!" Curtis looked up again; his eyes sparkled greedily. "Currants," Estelle grinned. Then, "Oh, there's the doorbell. Excuse me, ma'am. Wonder who it can be at the front door this time of the morning? Looks like they wouldn't let a family have their breakfast in peace—"

Nan wondered, too—aloud. "Oh," her husband shrugged, "probably a magazine subscription solicitor whose future college course depends on our kindness of heart—Why, Estelle! What's the matter?" he broke off to demand of the maid who had run into the dining room, her hands clasping and unclasping in pitiful distress.

With a fearful glance over her shoulder toward the hall door which she has just closed upon herself, Estelle darted to the breakfast table, her face quite white, her pale blue eyes rolling.

"She—she's back, sir!" the maid gasped hoarsely.

Both Nan and her husband rose from their chairs, like a pair of marionettes jerked by unseen wires. No need to ask who "she" was. Again their eyes met, but this time they did not cling. Simultaneously they glanced away, neither able to bear what was to be read in the other's eyes. But as Nan's eyes tore themselves away from her husband's, they swept downward over his face. It was like the face of a man suddenly smitten with death—gray, pale, pinched lips, daunt and frozen in 'the whimsical smile with which he had speculated on who his caller might be, had gone blue-gray in that sudden draining of blood from his face.

Nan saw that for the moment she was unable to speak. Estelle's eyes were rolling wildly from one to the other, imploring help in such a crisis as no maid had ever had to deal with before.

"Show Mrs. Morgan into the drawing room and tell her that Mr. Morgan will join her—" in a queer, strained voice that seemed to come from a great distance. But she was not allowed to finish. Before the frightened maid could stir to carry out the order the door into the hall was torn open and Iris Morgan was swept into the room on the rising tide of her own anger.

"How dare you try to keep me from seeing my own husband, Estelle!" The insolent voice, usually so musical, now shrill with anger, curled like a whip about the cowering maid. "I certainly shan't keep you another day! You never heard anything so impudent in your life, Jack! I rushed on, as if she had seen Morgan not longer ago than the day before."

Nan gasped her amazement, then realized that the tall body of her husband formed an effectual screen between herself and the woman who had been his wife. Iris had not seen her—yet.

"Leave the room, Estelle!" Iris commanded imperiously. Then her voice changed, became arch, laughter-rippled: "Dear Jack! Are you too stunned to speak? It's Iris, darling, come home again! And there's my little lover! You haven't forgotten Mother, have you, sweetheart? Naughty mother, but she didn't mean to be gone so long—Oh! Why—It's Nan Carroll, isn't it?"

Arrested in the act of stretching out one lovely hand to her former husband and the other to her son, Iris Morgan stared blankly at the girl whose presence there was apparently the last thing she had dreamed of. Blue-green eyes grew wider and wider, then suddenly narrowed until the thick bronze lashes almost touched. Drooping her hands, which had not yet touched either husband or son, Iris's tall, slim body straightened, stiffened.

"I—see!" she said slowly, listlessly. "No wonder Estelle tried to keep me out of my own house. Apparently it's high time I came home! So this is what the saintly Sir Galahad has come to!"

Nan's head jerked up. Her brown eyes blazed. Involuntarily she took a step forward, but Morgan halted her and commanded her to silence with one imperative gesture. His task to explain to Curtis was divided into two very distinct categories—sports clothes and feminine, wearable ensembles.

For her sports dresses, she refuses to consider anything but the plainest of styles. In this she is in complete accord with Jean Patou, who, by the way, makes most of Miss Wills' dresses. Freedom of movement and nothing but an inconspicuous monogram as trimming characterize her tennis dresses.

Although more mature-looking than many debutante's gowns, its sobriety set off Helen Wills' personality to great advantage.

According to Jean Patou, Helen Wills has the faculty of imparting an air of youthfulness and unsophistication to all the clothes she selects, regardless of the fact that her choice lies in the direction of those styles designed for the young person rather than for the young girl.

Another proof. Albion, Mich.—Another proof that women are more talkative than men is shown in a report from Albion College. The social conversation of co-eds at the school takes up 10 hours a week. Male conversation averages only 8 1/2 hours. One woman student is said to have used 40 hours a week in conversation. The average male student spends 5 1/2 hours in bed, the report states, while the average co-ed spends 5 1/2.

London.—There's something funny about the names picked for ships. Sailors have a passion for naming their crafts after some star, Venus, Jupiter, Sirius, and others. Twenty-eight merchant ships of over 100 tons bear the name of Jupiter. Probably the longest name conferred in a ship is "Venayagasowakialistehemy," borne by a bark registered in Ceylon.

Champaign, Ill.—E. I. Serlin and I. W. Zelger, transfer students at the University of Illinois, recently pleaded not guilty to a charge of disorderly conduct. They were arrested for exposing their bodies "in a nude condition to the public view." Police stood outside the boys' home at night and said they undressed without pulling down the blinds.

Blindly, but with odd dignity, Nan made a slight gesture of dismissal toward the maid, then walked with stiff jerkiness toward the dining room door. Her groping hand found the knob, and about to turn it, before Estelle's words penetrated into her dazed mind. "You're his wife now—"

She passed an uncertain hand before her eyes as if to dispel the mists through which she had been moving. Of course! What a fool she was to be so frightened! She was John Curtis Morgan's wife!

Estelle, watching from the stairs, saw the little brown head go up, the slim, boyish shoulders straighten, before Nan turned the knob. With a sob of relief, the maid darted around the staircase to the kitchen, to pour the latest news bulletin into Maude O'Brien's avid ears.

She's going to fight for her man, Maude—God bless her! Estelle exulted. "Fair knocked her out, did it. I thought for a minute that the poor little dear would pack her things and beat it, leaving that hell-cat to get her claws into the poor mister again."

"What stumps me," Maude O'Brien marveled, scowling prodigiously and clattering the dishes in the sink to keep her words from penetrating to the dining room. "Is that the high and mighty Lady Iris come back? Anyone that was blind in one eye and couldn't see out of the other could see she didn't care a snap of her finger for the poor dear man when she had him."

"Huh!" Estelle snorted, dabbing the tears from her eyes with her apron. "That's don't bother me none, Maude! That crook Crawford that she runs off with give her the air—Oh, Lordy! Listen!" she gasped, as a scream rose and rose till it reached nerve-shattering crescendo, then broke abruptly.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton
©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

In the summer time, children learn more about life at first hand than they do in all the long months of winter.

In winter they get impressions more or less by proxy—living in a world of books and instruction. They are part of a system and live by schedule at home and at school.

But in summer, with no responsibility, and no clock to watch, they do pretty much as they please. And they please to play most of the time.

Now it puzzles many a mother to know how it happens that John, who never gives her the least bit of trouble during the school year, in vacation suddenly becomes embroiled in all sorts of mix-ups with his friends, turns scrapper and gets a bit out of hand all around. She doesn't realize that it is during the seemingly careless days of vacation that he is learning some of his bitterest lessons. He is making contacts with society at large, that is not controlled by older people, establishing his place as an independent human being, and learning what all of us must learn as we go along—adjustment to the varying moods of different people under all sorts of conditions.

Learn First Hand
No boy or girl can learn these things by telling. The only way too, she selected a style that had to show off the perfection of its cut and lines. Although more mature-looking than many debutante's gowns, its sobriety set off Helen Wills' personality to great advantage.

Which one of us wouldn't be a saint if he lived alone? Haloes would be as common as noses. It is when we come into conflict with other wills and other rights beside what we consider our own, that we begin to grow temper, develop jealousy and go through the entire gamut of human emotions. It's our little job to overcome them as we go along and to make the best of things. That's what John is doing—trying to get oriented, as they say in the army, in this big world of mix-ups. They will have disputes, of course, but boys have a way of learning fairness very quickly. In some unknown way, which a mother can never fathom, they learn lessons in sportsmanship from each other.

John will make mistakes but he'll learn in time, with a little guidance on the side. I shouldn't take summer disputes too seriously. As far as possible let him work out his own salvation.

If John is only a very little boy, say under seven, I shouldn't let him play outdoors all day long with other children. His nerves get tired and he needs a quiet rest—alone—part of each afternoon. Tired nerves are responsible for a lot of quarrels.

DOG FOOLS COPS.

New York.—The burglar siren at the Elizabeth Sash Store plant rang frantically. People for blocks around were aroused in the night and hurried to the sound of the alarm. Cops came. The siren continued to ring. The cop entered the plant and found the watchman's dog fast asleep. He was fast asleep. He was sleeping on top of the buzzer that operates the siren.

ALL TIRED OUT.

Vienna.—Geza Ledopsky, tired but happy, recently broke the world's record for continuous piano playing. He sat down at a piano one day and 76 hours later finished as title holder. The former record was 72 hours.

The WOMAN'S DAY

BY ALLEN S. SWAN

All little girl babies of England are wearing yellow, if their mamma can afford to keep in the style, because Princess Elizabeth, infant daughter of the Duke and Duchess of York, is decked out in yellow this summer.

Thus, in the very cradle, does royalty start its job of being aped. Still, why pity them? Most of us, being royal and being "aped" for every word and gesture and even the color of our garments would not be half bad.

CATS SCRATCH, TOO.
Mrs. Hoover hasn't had to wait long to learn the pitfalls that do hedge a queen, and that cats not only look at them, and dare anyone to stop 'em, but that they get their claws out, too.

Mrs. Hoover extended the same social obligations to the wife of a colored congressman that she would extend to any congressional woman.

A storm of protest followed. Resolutions condemning her action were even taken in the Senate. And sure it is, that if she had discriminated between the Afromerican woman of officialdom and other congressional woman, the storm of protest would have been equally vigorous and bitter.

Being a woman in the public eye isn't entirely all the pleasant matter of having all the world copy one's yellow dresses.

HER RIDE.
Margaret Plattermeyer, 24, was taken up in a plane the other day and "squealed" silently when the plane suddenly dropped a thousand feet. She "squealed" silently, for she had been a mute for many months and the stunt ride in the airplane was one more attempt to help her regain her speech. She did—for an hour or so, but regained her old speechlessness in a few hours.

The airplane has made marvelous progress since "Lady" flew the Atlantic, but with all the lure it has made the commercial world, it will not be counted nearly so huge a proof of the value of the airplane as when it can cure or save the human individual.

Trans-Atlantic telephone service officials say that by far the bulk of the business is purely social—emotional—relatives and friends calling one another.

Society dames the country over are attempting to follow the president's suggestion and make it fashionable to frown upon the cocktail and highball glass. Perhaps this will become a real test of social vigor and bite.

Accustomed to coffee; if not, he can have milk, water or any other safe beverage. The luncheon and the dinner in hot weather should be somewhat lighter than are commonly eaten in the cold weather. Much of the energy of the food taken into the body goes to produce heat. In the summer this heat is not required.

The clothing in hot weather should be as thin as is convenient and modest in the community in which one happens to reside. Porous material permits the passage of air to the body and the evaporation of water from the surface of the body. In tropical countries this woolen material is considered best for underwear, except that it is likely to shrink greatly unless washed with care.

Avoid Damp Clothing.
Modern mixtures of cotton and wool, or of silk and wool have special advantages. When clothing becomes damp, it becomes a better conductor of heat and the risk of remaining in damp clothing may be just as great in summer as in winter.

Many people suffer with eyestrain in the summer because of the inability to stand the glare of the sun. For such people dark glasses may be advisable. It should be remembered that a person may be quite comfortable during the day but may be chilled at night when lying quietly and the question of proper covering at night should always be borne in mind, particularly by the mother who is responsible for the care of children in hot weather.

St. John's Great Catch Saves Day For Locals

Snarers Meska's Drive Against Fence; Manchester and New London In 3-3 Deadlock.

By TOM STOWE

"Lefty" St. John may be an "in and out" but he was decidedly "in" yesterday afternoon, his brilliant all-around work being one of the outstanding features of the 3-3 ten-inning deadlock between the Manchester Baseball Club and the United States Coast Guard at Mercer Field in New London.

The chunky local center fielder contributed one of the best catches of his career when he robbed Art Meska, brilliant New London pitcher, of a sure triple that would have chased in a run and decided the issue in the ninth. Meska smote the ball far over St. John's head, but "Lefty" turned and raced back. Just as he was turning around, the ball descended. St. John struck out his gloved hand and just managed to grasp the ball, crashing into the center-field fence as he did, but clinging to the ball. Wise was on second on the play with two out and if the ball had been missed, the Coast Guard would have won 4 to 3.

Only the change in the St. John came in fast to take Meska's drive off his shoe-tops turning over on the ground after making the catch. It was his second catch, however, that was the fielding gem of the game; in fact, the best he has ever made. He was accorded a hearty ovation when he came in at the completion of the inning and responded at bat by socking a triple to deep right with two outs. A moment before, he had walked one of Meska's slow balls over the right field fence—but in foul territory. There were two out when he made his triple in the opening of the tenth but Manchester couldn't bring him in. Freddie Burkhardt was hit by a pitched ball and Cliff Massey grounded to second who fumbled but got him by a hair's breadth at first. It was the second time "Lefty" had "died" on third during the game.

The other instance was in the sixth inning when Manchester batted in three runs to even the count, the home club having scored three different times due largely to local misplays. Ding Farr, playing his fifth game this season, slipped a grounder inside the first base bag—his own position for the day. It was the first hit for Manchester but served as the signal for a barrage that nearly spelled Meska's doom. Wallitt tied to center but Varrick was hit. Farr took third on a passed ball and scored on a wild pitch. Hewitt fanned but Sam Massey came through with a timely double to center that brought in Varrick.

The Coast Guard was 1 to 0 on a run up as St. John tripped to the plate. Picking out one of his likings, "Lefty" cuffed a line drive to center for a single scoring Massey and knotting the count. Burkhardt followed with a single and C. Massey was safe on an error. Hitting the bases but Ty Holland was a victim on strikes. After tying the score, Manchester had more chances to score than New London and outplayed the home club. The bases had a big chance in the eighth when Hewitt, St. John and Burkhardt crowded the bases with one out, but Cliff Massey hit into a double killing.

Both Varrick and Meska pitched splendid ball. It would have been a tough game for either to lose. However, it must be said that Manchester earned its runs far more than the Coast Guards. Allen scored the first run for the Whaling city outfit, reaching first after Hewitt dropped his pop fly. Meska got the second when he singled, stole second, took third on an error by St. John, and scored on a well executed squeeze play. A bad throw to first with two out by Varrick gave the visitors another run in the fifth.

Varrick improved. In justice to Varrick, however, it must be stated that he injured a finger stopping the grounder on which he made the inaccurate throw. Outside of this lone misplay, Varrick played the best fielding game ever. He backed up the bases exceptionally well—a decided contrast to his recent style of playing. Once he saved a sure run by backing up third and catching a high overthrow. Meska retired the first 15 men who faced him but got in Dutch in the sixth and was never his real self thereafter.

YANKS-ATHLETICS IN A NEW SERIES

Start Today in One of Those Allegedly Crucial Affairs; Yanks Are Improving.

By LES CONKLIN

New York, June 27.—John Heydler's ten-man ball team idea will be tried out by the Athletics when they face the Yankees in Philadelphia today in the first game of another one of those allegedly crucial series. Old Man Pincusology will be the tenth player in the Macklin lineup, for the A's have bested their erstwhile Nemesis six times out of ten this season and are boasting a lead of ten and a half games over the champions.

Babe Ruth says the Mack's are bound to crack but all they have been cracking lately is two-baggers, triples and home runs. They washed the Red Sox for the fifth successive time yesterday, 6 to 5, while the Yankees lost to Washington, 4 to 3, in the second half of a bargain bill after winning the opener 7 to 0. Mack's hired men can blow the entire three-game series to New York and still leave it off, while the Yanks can only three points in front of the Browns, are very likely to flop into third place if they lose the series. The Browns slipped Cleveland yesterday, 6 to 2.

The Yanks are looking more like their old selves, however. Ruth, Meusel and Lazzari put on a home run barrage yesterday. Ruth's round-tripper being his thirteenth of the campaign, and in the first game. Herb Pennock easily outpitched Firpo Marberry, who had won five straight.

The series opened between Chicago and St. Louis is the highlight of the National League schedule today, the Cubs recently slaughtered the Cardinals in Chicago, but the Cards may turn the tables on their own lot. Both teams got a break yesterday when Luque of Cincinnati beat the Huggens only three points in front of the Browns, are very likely to flop into third place if they lose the series. The Browns slipped Cleveland yesterday, 6 to 2.

PLENTY OF ACTION IN STADIUM BOUTS

By ROBERT E. CARNEY

While the Milk Fund bouts are generally measured in beef tons, the bouts staged by Ed Hurley at the Hartford Baseball Stadium last night had to be measured in action for the small crowd was given action from the time that Al Dowd, Manchester's entry in the fist game hopped out at the sound of the bell, until the final curtain went down on the tenth stanza of the Leto-Esposito star bout of the evening.

There was action, good punching and blocking in all of the bouts and while the ten rounder might have been announced as the star bout of the evening, there was plenty of others replete with action, especially the Eddie Reed-Charley Von Redden go, which was not a boxing match but a fight. In this contest, Eddie received the short end of the decision after a string of 14 victories. He kept on fighting to try and keep his record intact but it was the last two rounds of whirling punching, together with an earlier knockdown, that gave an undoubted decision against the Hartford boy who has given to the fight fans many a good fight with his arm pointing skyward at the finish.

Esposito outboxed and outfought Leto to win a popular ten round decision. Leto took seven of the rounds, two went to Esposito and one was even.

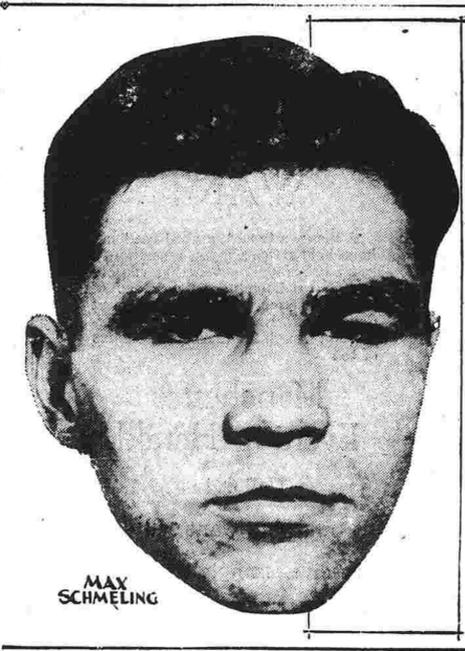

Esposito started off strong and won the first round by a small margin. Both fighters were extremely cautious during the opening round and there was little action. Leto took the lead in the second and scored enough with his left to take the round. Von Redden was very wild and erratic during the first few rounds and missed repeatedly. Leto profited to force the fighting and gained a clear edge in the next three rounds.

Walter Bill Conway was the third man in the ring and he kept things going and even took occasion to warn two men as a round closed because Mike Flahive, with a badly cut split, grinned at Larry Roach. Both fighters were extremely cautious during the opening round and there was little action. Leto took the lead in the second and scored enough with his left to take the round.

One Tough Hombre. Let it be said right here that when a gamer fighter is made they will have to compare him with Dalton, for in addition to being knocked out of the ring in the fourth, climbing back at the count of seven, and being knocked down again for a count of two as the bell saved him, he returned to the center, willing to fight, only to take a real licking that his lacker, saw meant defeat and accordingly tossed in the towel. Dan was still willing to fight. Although the win meant much to Christy, who has been sent out of his class to meet fighters in the past, it was also a fight that fans stood on their feet to watch and gave to the vanishes as great a hand as they did the victor.

The only decision that brought a groan was the uplifting of Mickey Flahive's arm in the eight rounds with Larry Roach.

MAX SCHMELING
HERE'S THE DOPE by Tom Stowe
BROADCASTING BOAT RACES.

The broadcast of boat races is far from a state of perfection. Those who tuned in on the Poughkeepsie regatta Monday will attest to this fact. There can be no denial that Graham McNamee and his staff of assistants were greatly handicapped by darkness; that no one else could have done a better job under similar conditions.

However, the point I am driving at is that only a comparatively small degree of satisfaction can be obtained by listening to the broadcast of a college regatta by men stationed at mile intervals along a four-mile course. With nine crews competing, it is practically a foregone conclusion that efforts to describe the race from such positions will be more or less jumbled, darkness or no darkness.

It seems to me that until such time as arrangements can be perfected whereby the progress of the race can be described from either an observation train or overhead, the results will be anything but appreciable and interesting. Certainly, the Poughkeepsie broadcast was little short of disgusting. It wasn't entirely due to darkness caused by the late start of the race either. Past daylight regattas backed up that statement.

The observation train which runs along the bank of the river affords an excellent position from which to authentically describe the progress of the regatta inasmuch as they keep side by side with the crews from start to finish. Airplanes would no doubt find it difficult to travel slowly enough to keep even with the shells, but they could probably offset this by circling around the crews. However, according to law, they are supposed to keep at an altitude which would be another handicap to be considered.

A small non-rigid dirigible might be practicable for the purpose under favorable weather conditions if one were available. They could travel low and slow enough to afford an excellent view, providing there was no stiff head-on or quartering winds that would make it a difficult task to keep on the course. And so, by process of elimination, this leaves only the observation train broadcast as the most feasible. However, this is not yet practicable. But with scientists making such amazing progress as they are today, it is only a question of time before such a feat will become economically possible. Already, it has been done on a small scale.

German's Greater Punch May Carry Him to Victory; Odds Dwindle and Paulino May Be Installed Last Minute Favorite; Weights to Be Important Factor; Main Bout Starts About 10 O'Clock.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

New York, June 27.—Without the tiny acorns of this world, the great oak could not be and so it will be tonight at the Yankee Stadium where the heavyweight division will plant its family tree for a new line of champions with a 15-round fight between Paulino Uzcudun, the Spaniard, and Max Schmeling, of Germany. The old line, of course, is dead. It died with Tunney, who may or may not be even a good guy to die with, anyhow, the moment that a Spaniard goes in there with a German in a major heavyweight fight quite evidently marks the death of the old and the birth of the new. It fairly mocks the memory of John L. Corbett, Jeffries, Dempsey, Tunney and others who made the American heavyweight the greatest of all fighters.

The winner tonight won't acquire the title, per se. He will have to go on to a September meeting with Jack Sharkey and perhaps an ultimate fight with Dempsey himself but, if a man is coming champion and knows it, all he asks is the right to bash the nearest contender. Dempsey had to lick Fulton before he could get Willard. He was glad to accommodate everybody because he knew himself to be a man of destiny.

No doubt Paulino and Schmeling feel likewise. They came to this country as champs but today they have the eyes of the world upon them and thousands clamoring for choice seats, so good are they. Destiny and his blind darts cannot have missed by far a couple of men who achieved the multiple of victory in so short a time. Schmeling has been unbeaten in America and probably has the greatest punch in all the world today. Paulino has lost some fights in the last two years but he is tougher than the street below the gas house and nobody ever has passed him for a sap.

They are a pair who ought to draw something beside attention but the fight isn't a sell out and won't be. Present indications are that a crowd of 45,000 and a gate of $400,000 will give everybody a break. The promoters, laboring only in their own interest of the charitable Milk Fund, had visions of a million dollar sale when they first made the match but they admit now that they blew their chances when they priced the so-called "patron ringside" seats at $50. The man who has fifty dollars only once a week was scared so badly by this gesture that he went home, hid in the cellar behind the barrel of Lithia water and since then hasn't been seen in his accustomed haunts.

However, the charity will make money, as it always does. So will the fighters, this thought being inserted for no other reason than to allay the fears of those who no doubt were distressed about that point. Each will get about $70,000. They have finished their training, Schmeling at Lakewood, N. Y., and will start early for the scene of their duello. Anyhow, they promise to be early but there is nothing in the articles of agreement about being bright. These are prize fighters.

Paulino will come to the weighing in at 2 o'clock by airplane from Albany, an innovation, indeed. Mr. Tunney used to keep his engagements that way but he mustn't be confused with the fighter fellow of the same name. Herr Schmeling will be content to approach in a motor car. His appearance on the scales may serve to change the odds which hovered around even money for a week, the gross-weight addicts having placed his poundage anywhere between 178 and 187. Paulino probably will Fair-bank the situation around 193. You don't do any surmising in connection with this fight. He is as rugged as the coast line off Old Hatteras.

This is the angle that has most of the professional gamblers lying behind him with a skull cracker. They claim to have a lot of course money to send in on him and apparently are only waiting for a break on the prize. If this is true, the late odds are likely to install Paulino as the favorite. It happens, however, to be one of those fights in which one can call his shots with frightful perfection, as we say at the horse trough. Now, how would it be? Favoured as tough as they think he is since going ten rounds with Godfrey; nobody knows whether Schmeling is going to win with his punch or lose with his chin. Schmeling, the man who rode from poverty to fame in a few months, has the power and speed of his right hand, the idol of the hour in flatland, a fighter who knocks them naked in the immortal manner so pleasing to the multitude. Paulino is as fast as one of the oak leaves he bowed as a woodchopper in his native Puenras. PUNCHES BOUND gleefully off his countenance as he tears into the conflict, swinging both hands with venom and with- adroit light-weight champion, 10. At Champaign, Ill., Eddie Anderson, Champaign light-weight, stopping Paul Allen, Cleveland, 8.

"BUD" GEOGHEGAN SECOND IN AMATEUR QUALIFYING ROUND

New Haven, June 27.—Thirty-six golfers representing nineteen clubs in Connecticut were left in the field at New Haven Country Club today to compete for the state amateur championship, after elimination yesterday, in which 170 started. The staying competitors were to start during the morning for the qualifying round.

Mamaroneck, N. Y., June 27.—The 1925 National Open Golf Championship, with a field of 145 starters that includes the greatest amateur and professional sharpshooters in the United States, got under way on the links of the Winged Foot Golf Club this morning. Experts generally agreed that a total of anywhere from 292 to 294 strokes for the 72 holes of medal play would be low enough to win the prize. Eighteen holes will be played today, 18 tomorrow and 18 on Saturday for the low sixty players and those tied for sixtieth place after 36 holes.

WIMBLEDON, ENGL., JUNE 27.—

Four out of the eight original American entrants in the men's singles of the Wimbledon tennis championships emerged successfully from the third round of play yesterday.

Five of the original eight were among the contenders when play started in beautiful weather this afternoon, and at the end of the day's play one of this number, Wilbur Coen, William T. Tilden's youthful protege, had fallen by the wayside. Coen went down to defeat at the hands of Christian Bousous of France 6-1, 10-8, 7-5. The only other American eliminated was Miss Margie Morrill, who lost to Eileen Bennett, 6-3, 6-3 in the second round of the women's singles. Tilden came through successfully by defeating Dr. Prentz of Germany, 6-0, 6-0, 8-6; John Hennessey survived the round by defeating Capt. J. H. Frowen, the Indian army winner, 6-2, 6-1, 7-5; Wilmer Allison entered the fourth round by eliminating J. D. P. Wheatley of England 6-1, 6-1, 6-1, and George M. Lott, Jr., joined the other victorious Americans by defeating L. Bonzi of Italy, 6-1, 6-0, 6-3.

Last Night Fights

At Cleveland—George Godfrey, Philadelphia negro heavyweight, scored technical knockout over Chuck Wiggins, of Indianapolis, 7. At New York—Al Singer, New York junior lightweight, won decision over Dominick Perone, also of New York, 10.

"What kind is that?" "The kind that goes to the front."

"That young fellow upstairs must be tremendously popular, postman, you always have mail for him."

BUCKLAND DISTRICT AHEAD IN PAYMENTS

Paying for Its School Building Faster Than Expected; Officers Are Re-Elected.

The Seventh School District has paid just one half of its school debt which now amounts to $15,000 and at the annual meeting last night laid a tax of 4 mills, which will make possible the paying off of $2,500 more, showing that the district is well ahead of its schedule in payments. When the building was first erected and a tax laid it was expected that it would take thirteen years to pay for it, but the way the taxes are coming in now makes it appear that the debt will be paid in less time.

Last year the tax collector collected and turned over to the district $2,856.23. This was due as of September 1 and payable by October 1.

Andrew Healey was the moderator. All of the reports of the officers were made and accepted. Andrew J. Healey, David C. Armstrong and Edward Stein were re-elected as committee. Mrs. Andrew Healey, clerk and treasurer, W. W. Keeney as collector and Frank E. Smith and Gustave Magnuson as auditors.

It was voted to authorize the treasurer to borrow in the name of the district a sum not to exceed $1,000 for district expenses during the coming year.

JOURNALISM COURSE AT LOCAL LIBRARY

The lure of the newspaper profession, which has caused the overflow of old and the creation of new schools of journalism, has now enlisted the services of the South Manchester Public Library. Journalism, a reading course by W. Lard Grosvenor Bleyer of the University of Wisconsin, has just been received, according to Miss Jessamine M. Smith, librarian. The booklet is planned for those interested in journalism as a profession. Miss Smith stated, but it will be found stimulating by others who are interested in the growth and significance of the American newspaper.

"If your ambition in life is to become rich, don't plan to be a daily newspaper writer or editor," warns Professor Bleyer in his reading course. "Writers and editors may be classed with teachers, preachers, scientists and authors of significant books. No college professor, no minister of the gospel, no school teacher, no man of science, no author of anything but 'best sellers' ever expects to get rich; many of them would not know what to do with wealth if they possessed it. They are interested in ideas, not in dollars and cents."

The qualifications for newspaper work, how a newspaper is run, why it is what it is and how it can be changed, the opportunities and rewards to be expected are all discussed in the essay. Eight books are suggested to give practical help in writing for newspapers and magazines, management of newspapers, ethics, history, and the choice of journalism as a vocation.

Journalism is one of the Reading with a Purpose series published by the American Library Association. It is the first course of a vocational nature to be published in the series. The entire series will be found at the South Manchester Library.

DISTRICT 3 CONTINUES ITS 5 MILL TAX RATE

Collector Purinton Gets All But Seven-Tenths of One Per Cent—Officers Are Re-Elected.

Only seven-tenths of one per cent of the five mill tax levied on the Third School District last year remains uncollected according to the report of Collector Robert E. Purinton at the annual meeting of the district in the Highland Park school last night. Fred Carpenter acted as moderator.

It was voted by the fifteen taxpayers present to levy the same tax rate this year, payable on or before November first. Because of the increasing size of the district it was found that it will be necessary to fit up another room in the school. All seventh grade pupils will remain at the Highland Park school. The town has already appropriated the salary for another teacher.

All officers of the past year were re-elected. The school committee is A. N. Potter, James H. Johnston and George H. Wilcox; Mabel Carpenter, clerk; William Pitkin, treasurer; Robert E. Purinton, collector; Lucius M. Foster, auditor. The meeting lasted one-half hour, business being transacted smoothly and efficiently.

"CONFIDENCE"

Here is a suggestion for you, whether you are one of our regular patrons or not. Place your next winter's coal order on the basis of Confidence.

Select a reliable coal dealer... one with a reputation, that extends back reasonably, for selling only dependable coal... and say to him: "Here I need coal, attend to my order, give me the benefit of your experience and charge me whatever is fair and right."

The dealer will appreciate your confidence and will exert himself to show his appreciation. Paring the price often sacrifices quality and service.

We have many patrons dealing with us on the basis of Confidence... some since 1879! They buy coal, oil and masons' supplies. May we add your name to our list of satisfied customers?
