

GRAF PREPARED TO START HOP THURSDAY A. M.

Passengers Notified to Be Ready at Midnight To- morrow Night for the Trip to Tokio, Japan.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Aug. 13.—The round-the-world passengers on the Graf Zeppelin were notified this afternoon to be ready to start on continuation of the 21,700 mile flight between midnight tomorrow night and 5 o'clock Thursday morning.

According to present arrangements there will be 20 passengers, a crew of 40, a consignment of mail and a bust of the late Baron von Huenefeld aboard when the air-liner puts off by way of Soviet Russia.

The Huenefeld bust, which was designed by Olat Lampke, is a gift to the Japanese emperor.

Carries No Freight

No freight will be carried to permit a maximum amount of fuel to be stowed aboard.

The Graf is expected to travel 6,000 miles over the next 20 days long voyage. It is estimated that this distance can be covered in 120 hours unless there are storms or motor troubles. Experts state that the Graf will carry sufficient fuel for 180 hours flying.

When she takes the air for Tokio the Zeppelin will contain 70,000 cubic metres of hydrogen, 30,000 cubic metres of blue gas and 12 tons of benzine.

An official of the Zeppelin Works said the Graf would be sufficient food to last for an extended period in case of a forced landing.

GROOMED FOR START

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Aug. 13.—Mechanically perfect after a complete grooming, the Graf Zeppelin today waited only for more favorable weather for the start of the second leg of her round-the-world flight.

Although it had been hoped that the air liner would be able to get away late tonight or early tomorrow morning reports of poor weather conditions in Russia resulted in an announcement that the start would not be made until four o'clock Thursday morning.

The announcement came as a disappointment to the 21 passengers and 41 crew members of the Graf. They had been eager to get away as soon as possible on the flight to Tokio.

Refueling of the huge craft has almost been completed. All minor adjustments deemed necessary by the commander, Prof. Eckener, after the Graf's flight from Lakehurst, have been made.

Storms Delay Start

Permission from the Soviet government allowing the Zeppelin to fly over Soviet territory has been received. Only threatening storms in the east now stand in the way of the start of the big hazardous journey over the Siberian wastelands to the Japanese capital.

On the flight to Tokio, the longest hop of the world flight, the Zeppelin will carry a capacity load of fuel. Dr. Eckener calculated that the ship will be in the air at least 120 hours on the 6,600 miles journey.

To Save Fuel

Every possible means will be taken to economize on fuel. To this end, Dr. Eckener indicated, only four of the Graf's five motors may be in use part of the time. Four motors, he estimated, would propel the Zeppelin through the air at a sufficiently fast rate, especially when favorable following winds were present.

Dr. Eckener has not decided definitely upon the route he will follow. He will not pick his route until the last minute before the start in order to take advantage of the most favorable weather conditions.

NIECE OF J. P. MORGAN THOUGHT SPY IN RUSSIA

Her Purse and Jewelry Stolen and Also Her Pass- ports as She Tours in Wilds of Caucasus.

Moscow, Aug. 13.—Miss Mary van Rensselaer Cogswell, niece of J. P. Morgan, and Mrs. Abbott S. Ingalls, two venturesome American women, are in Moscow today recuperating from the hardships of a trip through the isolated Caucasus country during which they were arrested as "British spies" and held two hours in a Soviet dungeon.

While touring Soviet Russia, Miss Cogswell and Mrs. Ingalls deserted the main body of American tourists to make a side trip through the Caucasus mountains to see some of the wild country of the beaten trails.

They came back to Moscow with a tale of adventure and hardship as vivid as an explorer's travelogue.

Sleep in Hut

They left their American companions at Tiflis traveling over a mountain trail nearly 10,000 feet high on horseback. The first night they spent in a little school house. The next night they slept in a peasant's hut.

When they reached Kutais they were arrested by the G. P. U. on suspicion of being British spies because they took some photographs without an official permit. Finally, after being locked up in a dungeon for two hours they convinced the secret police they were Americans. Upon their release they set their faces towards Moscow.

To make matters worse a thief stole Miss Cogswell's purse on the train, containing their combined "fortune" of $450. The loss of the money was bad enough, but the thief got away also with the passports. In addition the women lost their jewelry.

The women narrowly escaped arrest a second time when they asked a Red army general to bring them a glass of wine. Miss Cogswell explained they did not know he was a general "because he wore nothing but trousers."

Upon their arrival here the women were both "broke" but friends to their rescue and brought them a good meal, the first they had had in many days.

Miss Cogswell said she was afraid she could not get out of Russia without a passport, but was cabled to the State Department in Washington for assistance and advice.

Diplomatic relations do not exist between the two countries.

U. S. STEEL JUMPS 10 POINTS IN DAY

Has Advanced 26 Points Since Saturday in Great- est Rise in Market History

New York, United States Steel Common stock jumped ten points to 239 1/2 on the Stock Exchange today, adding $80,000,000 more to the market value of the outstanding shares of the big corporation.

Since last Saturday Steel Corporation stock has advanced 26 points in one of the most remarkable "bullish demonstrations" ever recorded in financial history. At current prices the $400,000,000 of common stock are worth $1,927,272,960.

At the end of July investment holdings of "big steel" stock totaled 9,000,767 or 14.73 per cent of the total. The remaining 25.27 per cent constituted the so-called "floating supply" held by brokerage houses and other agencies, either for their own account or the account of investors or speculators.

But They're "Dead Soldiers" Now

The mourners were the rum runners when prohibition agents descended on this hearse near Plattsburg, N. Y. There were casks instead of caskets—a lot of wine was found—and 720 quart bottles of assorted liquors that hadn't been killed yet. Uncle Sam's "pall bearers" are pictured above with the spirits.

Mountain Kid Presents Hoover With Raccoon

Tells President His Father Promised to Climb a Hickory Tree if He Was Elected.

Washington, Aug. 13.—A story involving President Hoover and an unexpected gift on the occasion of his 55th birthday, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh and his ability to fly and an 11-year-old mountain kid whose pappy vowed he'd climb a hickory tree if Hoover was elected, was brought back to Washington today from the President's fishing retreat near the headwaters of the Rapidan river.

The setting is the mountain in the Blue Ridge range upon which the President has located his now-famous week-end fishing camp. The date was last Sunday, the day following Mr. Hoover's 55th birthday.

Mrs. Hoover and most of the women guests at camp were returning from a horseback ride. Cutting into the trail leading to camp they came upon an 11-year-old product of the mountains, himself astride a horse. His face was gleaming from what probably was an unaccustomed scrubbing. Under his best Sunday overalls, which his arm was tucked a live raccoon.

Youngster Is Calm

"Young man," said Mrs. Hoover, reining in her mount with sudden severity, "why aren't you in Sunday school?"

The young mountaineer was entirely unabashed.

"I used to go to Sunday school," he replied amiably, "but maw told me to take this here raccoon down to the President for his birthday."

This, of course, interested the First Lady, and she took the lad in tow. As they rode toward the camp it was developed he and his family lived above the Hoover establishment at the top of the mountain. That he personally had snared the raccoon and placed it in a box with a wire screen and fattened it up, and that he intended to remain until he personally had proffered his gift to the chief executive.

Introduced to Hoover the camp was reached and the young man was given a group introduction to such notables as the President, Col. Lindbergh, Secretary of Agriculture Hyde and Surgeon General Cummings. Unfortunately, the lad didn't volunteer his name in return and he must, therefore, remain anonymous.

The raccoon was tendered and received with dignity.

Then the kid offered to sing a song. The camp party surrounded him and, in high piping voice, he rendered one of those inimitable mountain songs, receiving the applause stoically.

Suddenly he turned around and observed:

"My pappy said if you was elected he'd climb a hickory tree," the youngster advised the President, and before the laugh had subsided

SNOOK CALM WHEN CAUGHT CHIEF AVOWS

Police Head Tells How Pro- fessor Acted Before He Confessed to Killing Pret- ty Co-ed.

Courtroom, Columbus, O., Aug. 13.—Dr. James H. Snook was "highly self-possessed" and unruffled when he was undergoing a grilling after his arrest for the slaying of Theora Hix, young campus beauty. This was the testimony today of Harry E. French, chief of police of Columbus, at the trial of the ex-college professor for first degree murder.

"Snook was the most self-composed prisoner that I have ever helped interrogate in 29 years," testified French. "He seemed amused while he was being questioned. He wore a sneering smile. He was never ruffled. He tilted back in his chair and talked to us in a most unconcerned manner. He was highly self-possessed."

Finally Confessed

Police chief French testified that Snook finally confessed. He declared emphatically that Snook did say that after hitting the girl with the hammer that he slashed her jugular vein "to relieve her suffering."

French was listed as the final witness of the trial. Closing arguments will follow and then, after the court gives his instructions, the case will go to the jury—probably tomorrow.

Police Chief French told the jury that when Snook was ready to confess he was offered the use of a typewriter but declined, saying he preferred to dictate it to a stenographer. This he did, according to the witness.

No Threats Made

"Where any threats or promises made to Dr. Snook before he signed the confession?" French was asked by Assistant Prosecutor Paul C. Hicks.

"No," replied the police chief. "Chief French, didn't you say to Dr. Snook, 'Doctor, now that you have confessed, doesn't your conscience feel better' and didn't he say yes?"

"Yes, that's correct."

The chief, in pointing out that the confession was not obtained under duress, declared that after he confessed Snook shook hands with Prosecutor John J. Chester, Jr., who had slapped him when he had lost his patience. Snook also shook hands with Chief French.

The witness related that the prosecutor had apologized to Snook after he slapped him and that Snook said: "Oh, that's all right, Jack."

Chief French parried Defense Attorney Ricketts' questions so cleverly Ricketts said: "Are you

BIG POWERS SEEK COMPROMISE OVER WAR DEBT DISPUTE

A Fighter

Scarcely five feet tall, thin and frail of body, and a life-long cripple, Philip Snowden, above, British Chancellor of the Exchequer, has started a real row in European diplomacy. The "fighting man" of the British cabinet, shown above in his latest photo, has threatened a break-up in The Hague war debt conference by demanding revision of the Young plan.

The negotiators were seeking concessions all round so that the whole burden would not fall upon any particular power.

Seek Concessions

The negotiators were seeking concessions all round so that the whole burden would not fall upon any particular power.

The experts of the political commission were to renew their discussion of Rhineland evacuation during the afternoon. The British are supporting the German request for evacuation during the autumn, while the French are seeking delay. The divergent viewpoints upon Rhineland evacuation have already resulted in one sharp clash between foreign Minister Stresemann of Germany, and Foreign Minister Briand, of France.

SEEK EX-CONVICT IN MILFORD CASE

Police Checking Up All State Prisons and Jails in Child Murder Probe.

Milford, Aug. 13.—An ex-convict was being sought today as the fiend who slew three-year-old Albert Mikenas.

The tot's mangled body was found in a lonely swamp near here yesterday after he had been missing two weeks.

The police refuse to divulge the reason for their belief that a former prison inmate caused the boy's death, but a check-up of all Connecticut prisons and jails has been ordered by Assistant Coroner Joseph Corrigan.

A middle-aged mystery woman who was seen talking to the boy before his disappearance from a beach party on July 19 also entered into the case today. A pair of silk stockings found near the boy's body resulted in the search for the woman.

Was Walking Alone

Corrigan was scheduled to question Phelan, a clerk at the Milford post office, today. Phelan told Police Captain James Maher yesterday that he had seen the Mikenas boy less than a half hour after he was first missed by his mother. At that time the boy was walking alone in the direction of the murder scene, Phelan said.

The inquest into the murder yesterday was attended by the boy's parents, Mrs. Katherine Mikenas and Peter Mikenas, who had been estranged since Mikenas questioned Albert's parentage a short time after the murder victim was born.

TWO SCIENTISTS LOST IN SOUTH SEA ISLES

Started Out in Boat in April and Never Returned; Their Companion Tells Story on Arrival Here.

New York, Aug. 13.—Three went out and one came back.

Gustave Davidson, poet, author and explorer, today came back from the South Sea Isles with the tale of how his two scientific confederates, W. B. Hargrave, of Colfax, Wash., and P. E. Haskewitch, former resident of Paris, France, disappeared.

"They left the island of Raiavae in a native catamaran boat last April bound for Tubal and Paapa," said Davidson. "Perhaps the storm got them or perhaps the sharks know their fate. But they were never sighted, afterwards although I have searched every island in the Austral group."

Hargrave was a relative of Harriet Beecher Stowe and a trilateral of the late Jack London, the writer in the Klondike, Davidson said.

Brings Strange Tale

Davidson, who hurried home from his Polynesian studies when informed his aged father was very ill, also brought back strange tales of the customs and habits of the island natives. The expedition has been in these islands south of Hawaii since May, 1918, Davidson lived and learned among the natives and was the first white man ever to establish residency upon Maria Island.

"The Polynesian men are the most handsome in the world, tall, strong and golden-skinned," he asserted. "The women, however, are not very good looking although they sing like nightingales. They do

COAL MINE ABLAZE IN CITY'S CENTER

Fire Follows Triple Explo- sion; 40 Trapped Miners Rescued in Nick of Time.

Pottsville, Pa., Aug. 13.—Through the Primrose vein of the Sherman Coal Company's mine turned into a glowing volcanic bar, 15 feet thick and 350 feet under the center of the city, local fire companies and volunteer fire fighters, directed by state mine inspectors, today kept a steady stream of water pouring into the mine hoping to quench the fire that followed in the wake of a triple explosion last night.

Four men were burned severely about the face and body when they entered the mine to rescue forty comrades who were trapped by smoke and after-damp in the Primrose vein. The injured are Harry Hilbert, foreman; W. C. Short, engineer and Guy Irvin and Leo Bersht, rescue workers.

Miners Rescued

The forty trapped miners were rescued after an hour and a half of absolute horror and hopelessness. With characteristic stoicism, they had practically resigned themselves to their fate.

The Primrose vein is in the middle of three levels in the Sherman colliery which is in the heart of the city. At 7:40 o'clock last night, when a large face of the vein had been cleared, a "shot" of dynamite was fired. A dull rumble immediately followed the blast and suddenly a solid sheet of flame, shot from the gallery, sitting fire to the vein, much in the manner of

Rebels Seize German Ship And Try To Capture Town

Colon, C. Z., Aug. 13.—Venezuelan naval craft and airplanes today were scouring the seas for a group of revolutionists who seized an old German steamer and used it in a fruitless attempt to capture the town of Cumana, still flying the German flag and fired upon the town. Government forces retailed and a sharp clash followed in which three of the rebels were killed and a number wounded, according to the dispatches.

Gen. Emilio Fernandez, governor of the State of Sucre, was reported to have been killed by a rebel bullet while defending the town. The rebels were beaten off leaving a quantity of ammunition behind them.

The raid strongly resembled the recent attempt of revolutionists to take the town of Coro, capital of the State of Falcon, after commandeering an American ship and kidnapping the governor and police commissioner of Curacao.

COMMISSIONER WARREN, OF NEW YORK, IS DEAD

New York, Aug. 13.—Joseph A. Warren, former New York City police commissioner, who resigned his office under fire shortly after the murder of Arnold Rothstein, noted gambler, died today in his New York home.

Warren had been confined to his bed for the past three months and his death was attributed to a "complication of diseases."

Warren, who had been a lifelong friend of Mayor James J. Walker, was subjected to a merciless criticism by the press and public when he failed to solve the mystery of Rothstein's murder.

At the height of this criticism Warren resigned and was succeeded by the present police commissioner, Grover A. Whelan.

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverishness, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

POWER VALUATION

Washington, Aug. 13.—The Federal Power Commission has adopted a rule fixing the valuation of power companies at the "actual legitimate cost of construction of projects." It was announced today by Senator Couzens (R) of Michigan, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce committee.

Couzens made public a memorandum written by Charles A. Russell, solicitor to the power commission, setting forth the rule. He held that the Federal Power Act limited the valuation of power projects to the actual amount of money spent in constructing them.

BOLTON MAN, INSANE, THREATENS WIFE'S LIFE

August Sire, Former Inmate at Norwich, Returned There After Irrational Spell.

After threatening to kill his wife, August Sire, 53-year-old Bolton farmer, is back in the state hospital at Norwich again today after being rounded up by state police who searched the woods in that district for several hours last night before they were able to ferret him out.

Last May Sire escaped from the Norwich hospital but in view of the fact that he seemed recovered from the condition which brought about his confinement there a year ago, no effort was made to bring him back. Up until a couple of months ago, Sire had been working at the Manchester Green mill.

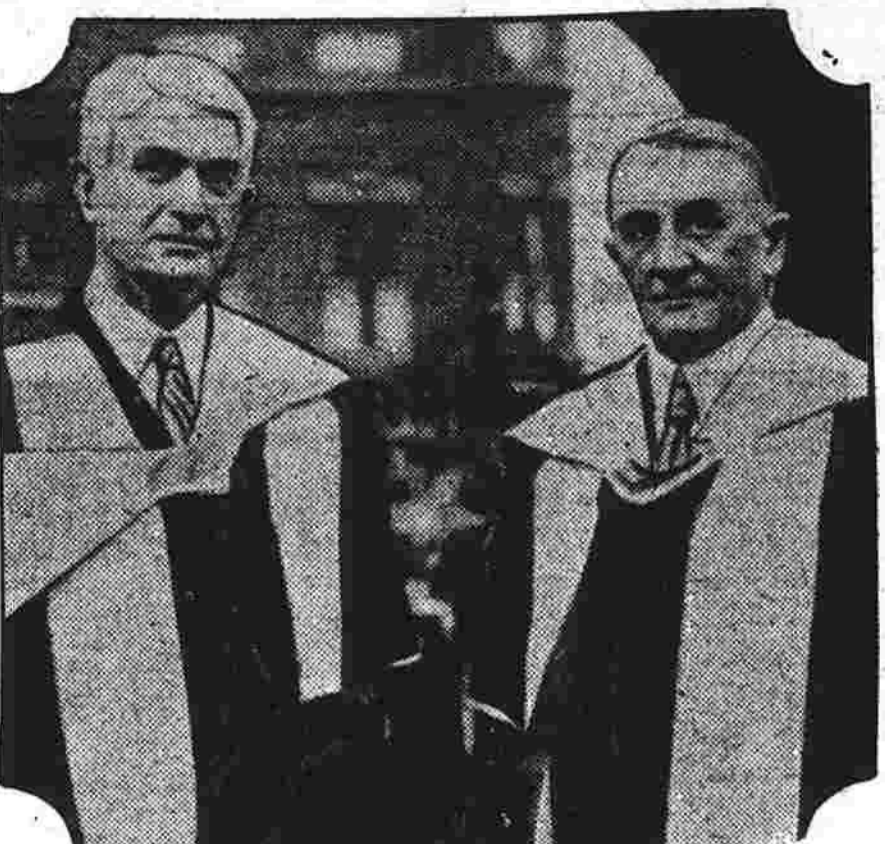

However, according to Constable Samuel R. Woodward, Sire has been troubled with occasional spells during which he is mentally unbalanced. Yesterday was one of those times and Mrs. Woodward saw Sire chasing his wife all over the lot during the morning. He finally caught her and struck her. Last night Mrs. Sire called the authorities at the Norwich state hospital and told them what had happened. They, in turn, notified state police who wasted no time in motoring to the Sire home which is located just over the Manchester town line on the main road to Bolton.

Meanwhile, Sire had learned about the police being upon his trail and fled in his automobile into the woods where he abandoned the car and hid. It was with difficulty that he was finally located but once he was caught he made no resistance to arrest and went back to Norwich peacefully. This is not the first time Sire had threatened his wife. It seems that Sire wanted $5,000 so that he could go in some sort of business and just because he couldn't get the money, he picked an argument with his wife. That was the trouble which led up to yesterday's episode. The Sires have a 20-acre farm and raise chickens.

probably more than any other, produce the ghastly spread in prices between producer and consumer which has been a scandal in this country for a great many years.

It is to be doubted if the establishment of this gigantic marketing organization will arouse the slightest opposition among the consumers themselves. There are very few people indeed, no matter how little they may know about economic conditions generally, who are not perfectly well aware of the extent to which the grower has been robbed and the public sandbagged by the system of sale and resale again and again—with a fat profit taken at every turn—that has insinuated itself between the market gardener and the orchardist on one hand and the ultimate purchaser on the other.

It is well known that it is not at all uncommon for the housewife to be compelled to pay, for the fruit or vegetables she obtains at the retail store, three, five, sometimes eight or ten times as much as the grower received for the same produce. Of course the costs of distribution of farm and orchard products, particularly when they are transported over long distances, must inevitably add importantly to the price as at the source of supply; it is not, to be expected that a cantaloupe for which the Arizona grower gets two cents can be sold in Manchester for two, or three or five cents. But transportation and the reasonable costs of distribution are not chargeable with anywhere near all the spread in prices that actually exists. Too many speculative handlers have a finger in the pie, and every one of them must have his bit. The result is that the farmer is victimized on the one hand, being paid whatever meagre amount the speculative produce machine sees fit to hand him, and the retailer on the other hand, is forced to pay prices out of all proportion to the legitimate value of the commodity.

It is probably true that in a good many directions these conditions are less burdensome than they were a few years ago, for already there are many co-operative marketing associations in operation and the "commission" houses and wildcat speculators haven't the complete control of the market they once did. But they still constitute a heavy burden on the consumer and the grower alike.

The scope of the United Growers is to be completely comprehensive. It is proposed to take in practically all the processes of distribution of shipped fruits and vegetables in the country, embracing not only succeeding the co-operatives, now in existence. It should become in a very short time an agency of immense benefit not only to the grower but to the consumer as well.

yearning for a "record" which is the state of mind of most American communities. But there's one thing we have had which, we confidently believe, will content every citizen of Manchester, young and old. We've had—and we had yesterday morning—just as big an earthquake as any of us want; and it was a tiny one at that.

Lisbon, San Francisco, Charleston—any of them is welcome to the blue ribbon, the red ribbon, the yellow ribbon and all the honorable mentions in that particular competition. We pass. We desire no distinction as an earthquake town. The sample received yesterday is sufficient and enough and plenty. Manchester will be entirely willing, in the phraseology of the race track, to run as a scratched horse in the race for tremor honors. No, not any more, thank you. It was very nice; but, really, earthquakes are not in Manchester's diet list and we are very sure they wouldn't agree with us.

FIFTY-FIFTY

Not up to yet has this newspaper's ardent pride of country prompted it to rub its hands in gratification over the fact that an American has attained to high celebrity in Spain by proving himself a first-class torero, dispatching bulls with as dainty a neatness as if his name were Juan Parnando Alphonso Almoravade y Cordoba y Aranda instead of just Sydney Franklin. We very much doubt that it ever will. And while we regret that the agile and graceful Sydney has had the hard luck to get himself mixed up with the business of a particularly tricky and actionable young brother of the cow, we are not at all sure but what is about fifty-fifty with us, whether, in any tereodoreal instance, it is the bull or the bull stabber who gets the prod.

That it takes a ghastly amount of cold nerve to face a charging and frenzied bull, armed with a bit of silk and a short and slender rapier is beyond all question. However, there are many things that involve a display of great courage but which are nevertheless entirely reprehensible, such as sticking up a bank that employs armed guards or spitting in your mother-in-law's eyes. And bull-fighting is a pretty nasty game.

Perhaps in the case of a Spanish boy, influenced by generations of tradition, there may be excuse for his ambition to become a hero of the bull ring. But when an American, whose name gives no indication of even a strain of Iberian blood, goes out of his way to star as a bull stabber, he becomes to us just one of two animals that are, without any sufficient reason whatever, trying to kill one another; and if he loses, our commiserations to the defeated man are about balanced by our congratulations to the victorious bull.

PLAY FAIR

Because a World War veteran committed suicide, "despairing of being able to secure the treatment he needed"—being tuberculous and somewhat disordered mentally—the New Haven Times, which has dropped the hyphen and the "Union" since Mr. Macfadden bought it, takes the opportunity to blame the "red tape" and callousness of government hospitals for the tragedy.

The tuberculous condition, it appears, did not develop until well within the last year and the veteran was sent to a hospital at Beacon, N. Y. "Separation from his family retarded progress," says the Times, "and he returned home to undergo treatment" but his money gave out and then he was sent to the State Hospital at Norwich. Here he became despondent and afterward cut his throat, though this latter action seems to have transpired at his New Haven home.

There is no doubt whatever that the people are earnestly anxious that in such cases as this veteran's the patient receive every possible consideration, all possible care. But it is a long jump to a conclusion, in this case and in hundreds of others like it, that the sick men are victims of either red tape or indifference.

It is one of the saddest and most complicating circumstances in connection with the care of veterans suffering from tuberculosis that the very nature of their disease makes it, sometimes, next to impossible to properly treat them. It appears to be symptomatic of certain phases of tuberculosis that the patient becomes extraordinarily self-willed and intolerant of advice, as well as restless and unreasonably demanding. The medical records of the Veterans Bureau would doubtless disclose, on examination, actually thousands of cases where veterans sent to the best possible available hospital have returned to their homes within a few days because they didn't like the doctors, or the food, or the location, or the personality of some attendant or patient, or the particular part of the institution to which they were assigned—and within the week applied for admission to some other hospital. We remember hearing of one such patient who was in four different institutions inside of six weeks and at the end of the time was demanding still another transfer.

The authorities have absolutely no end of such cases. It is doubtful if patients afflicted by this symptomatic restlessness could be happy or would contribute to their own recovery no matter what impossibly extravagant provision were made for each of them.

They are not to blame. Their unfortunate condition is the result of their illness. But it is submitted that their testimony as to the quality of Uncle Sam's interest in them is not to be accepted without at least some supporting evidence. If the newspapers of the country were to play up each case of discontent and unhappiness among the hospitalized veterans as though it were proof of inadequate service or of ungrateful indifference on the part of the government it is doubtful if we should have, in a year, any hospital service for veterans whatever; because the people engaged in this splendid work would simply be unable to stand up under such wholesale criticism and would abandon it in a body.

Suspicion and resentment will meet the announcement of the organization of the $50,000,000 co-operative marketing association, the United Growers of America—but they will emanate from just one quarter, the middlemen who, in the fruit and vegetable line,

Sometimes the people of an orderly, prosperous, busy but not spectacular community like Manchester feel a bit aggrieved that they can't boast of having the "biggest" object or the "biggest" experience or the "biggest" prospects. In a family of communities like the United States, where boasts of super-excellence of schools or super-hadness of gangs or super-size of pumpkins or super-bankruptcy of the community are all alike, so long as you can crow about the superlative degree, it is sometimes a little depressing, not to say exasperating, to have not more than one "biggest" thing to shout about. Particularly when that one thing has become a settled fact and an old story. Manchester has the biggest silk mills in America, but the time has long passed when she can get a kick out of that like St. Louis got out of the performances of Lindbergh and the Robin, or like Vermonters still get out of their food or Chicago used to get out of Al Capone.

We got dished out of a blue ribbon the other day when Hartford came across with bigger hallstones than fell here and when the town of South Windsor lost more tobacco than did Manchester. We can't even boast about the worst lot of road direction signboards in New England, because the town of Danbury, N. H., hasn't any at all and it takes a stranger half an hour to find his way out of that tiny hamlet. We haven't the tallest building nor quite the widest main street in the country—though we miss the latter by not much. We haven't the best nor the worst climate; we haven't the richest man in the world, nor the poorest; we haven't the most churches for the population; the biggest still hasn't been discovered here; we haven't the smallest police force for the size of the town—though that's another thing we miss out on by a narrow margin. We haven't very much in the way of superlatives, and naturally we all feel something of that sense of ungratified

By DR. FRANK MCCOY

Everyone desires happiness, and yet how few actually feel happy for more than a few moments at a time. With most people, the happy moments are interspersed with a pendulum-like swing into the deepest gloom or misery. Why is it that in our incessant search for happiness we so rarely attain it in a permanent form? Is it not because we pursue things which lead to a temporary enjoyment rather than the basic causes of lasting satisfaction? Let us consider some of the things which bring happiness.

The first great desire is a feeling of self-security (the law of self preservation). We desire the comforts of the body—health, plenty of tasty, nourishing food, comfortable living quarters, all of life's necessities and some of its luxuries, as well as a protection against enemies and dangers.

The second great desire is for the preservation of the race. This comes in a variety of forms, often finely disguised and camouflaged by nature. It usually manifests itself in a desire to love, or be loved and admired, in the love of children, in protecting others, in protecting our country or race, and any variety of other forms. No one can be really happy who has not found a desirable mate with whom to travel along life's highway, one to encourage and to share the sorrows and joys. There is no other desire or activity which can be successfully substituted for this mating instinct. It is a spur to accomplishment. Men and women achieve their greatest works by consciously or unconsciously desiring to show off to someone of the opposite sex.

The desire to grow and improve is the third great desire. No one is satisfied who feels that he is standing still or falling backward. We must be continually forging ahead.

One who desires to be most successful in this search for happiness must make a never ceasing study of the laws of nature. Learn to form the right kind of habits and you will be well repaid. Cultivate health, and sound financial policy, and try to do the happiness of others. Try to improve in every direction, and do not make the mis-

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Aug. 13 — Either the world is getting naughtier or Uncle Sam is getting much more particular.

Or, again, possibly the Postoffice Department and the Customs Bureau are merely vying in friendly rivalry to see which can censor literary material and get away with it.

At any rate, these two departments have been extraordinarily active within the last year in their efforts not only to keep from the citizenry such printed matter as might conceivably affect the morals of adolescents but also that which might put political or economic ideas in our heads.

In the latter type of censorship, the Postoffice Department is able to get a large edge on its rival, or the postal laws, with a little stretching of the imagination, allow it to bat from the mails books, pamphlets or envelopes which are regarded as disrespectful to constituted authority. They also cover cases of obscenity.

The customs laws, however, merely bat from the country printed matter which customs officials may decide to be obscene.

Of course many university professors and several senators, most recently Bronson Cutting of New Mexico, have protested against any extension of the customs censorship powers, but the customs boys on the wharves will doubtless ask how anyone expects them score while working under such terrific handicaps.

Nevertheless, a very short summary herewith will show that the customs service has been holding up its end and that these two arms of government between them have lately broken all previous records for banning books and whatnot from the mails and from the country at large.

The postoffice, most lately, has declared unmarketable 5000 pamphlets on the Mooney-Billings case because the envelopes said such things as "a terrific indictment," "justice California style," "the horror of 13 years imprisonment," and "Tom Mooney Framed."

Almost simultaneously customs collectors began to seize incoming copies of "Uncle Sam," a book from India purporting to expose vice and corruption in America. They called it "obscene." Efforts were made to explain to the customs service that even vilification of American life didn't constitute "obscenity." The point was finally perceived and the book comes in.

The last major exploit of the postoffice solicitor, Horace J. Donnelly, was the trial of Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett in New York for mailing her widely recommended sex hygiene pamphlet. One of Mr. Donnelly's assistants had acted as an agent provocateur by writing to Mrs. Dennett for a copy. When she was kind enough to comply she was pinched by the postoffice inspectors. Donnelly also ruled "The Well of Loneliness" was unfit for mailing and there is still a feverish demand for it every circulating library in the country. Two or three years ago he kicked an issue of the American Mercury from the mails because it contained the article "Hittrack," a review of the magazine promptly advanced to a premium. From time to time he pounces on some college funny magazine for printing a naughty picture, invariably causing an insatiable news stand demand.

Last year an Italian newspaper in New York had an editorial attacking the Fascist Italian representative at an aviation conference in Washington. The Postoffice Department promptly banned it.

Donnelly watches the envelopes closely. When some appeared with stickers inscribed "Protest Against Merit Rule in Nicaragua" he banned them "pru" under the law's provision against "libelous, obscene and lascivious" matter.

The customs boys last burst into a large type when they banned "Candide," the classic by Voltaire. For this they received such unremitting raspberries that after a few months they decided "Candide" could come in. Most books, however, are always carried in stock. On other recent occasions such works as Boccaccio, Rousseau, Balzac and the Arabian Nights have been denied admission to our gates.

Of course the people of Washington need not worry about the postoffice and customs censorship. The banned books are almost invariably to be found on the shelves of the library of Congress.

Approaching this city by train—or standing upon one of the many hills looking off into the miles of desert and plain—the story of their struggles is made doubly vivid. Watching an airplane speeding in from over the mountains with the mail; glimpsing the coils of dust which spit up behind the wheels of a speeding automobile; training a pair of glasses on the distant horizon where the colonizing dry farmers have caused the prairie to grow green with truck gardens—the part these folk have played in the westward march of progress cannot but command respect.

Agree or disagree with the faith, if you will—the sacrifices and martyrdoms made in the name of that faith must go marching on. Less than a century ago, trains of emigrant wagons were making their way over the rugged mountains, fording the rushing streams and slowly picking a way across the prairie. At such-and-such a spot, you will learn, they were beset by hostile Indians. At such-and-such a pass, other Indians stampeded their stock and women and children were trampled to death. Along such-and-such a trail, for some 2,500 miles, came the sturdiest of them all—the toilers of the hand carts—who carried their few worldly possessions and their food through the wilderness, leaving their dead by the roadside; administering to the exhausted and the wounded.

So this rich and lovely land of mountains and fertile valleys came into being. Take them or leave them, this is their land and this is the result of their handiwork—a truly gripping and inspiring work!

In the museum which stands just beyond the gateway of the temple block are many weather-marked relics of that struggle. There are, for instance, two venerable pianos which must have caused no end of trouble. The guide will tell you how they were preserved through fair and foul weather.

Winter overtaking the emigrants on their march, great holes were dug in the hills. The pianos were wrapped in animal skins and carefully preserved against the ravages of nature. Thus they were buried until the snows had passed and spring had come again. Then they were removed and brought into the new colony. Today they show little mark of wear and tear.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

(Prolapus.)
Question: Reader asks: "Can a dropped stomach be cured and how?"
Answer: A prolapsed stomach can always be raised to its proper position through taking the "sitting-up" exercise. If any adhesions exist which are holding the stomach down, these must be broken loose first by manipulative treatment.

(Diet in Asthma.)
Question: Mrs. A. D. writes: "Can asthma be cured by diet? If so, will you kindly tell me what it is?"
Answer: Please send for a special article on the subject of asthma, as the answer to your question is too long to be published in this column.

Going Places AND Seeing Things

Salt Lake City.—Sitting in the lovely park-like greenery of the Mormon temple block on a hot and lazy July morning, watching the flood of tourists stroll curiously about, it takes a bit of proding to stir the ghosts of the American epic which brought this spot into being.

Here the green grass plots are carefully landscaped; the flower beds blossom luxuriantly; fountains play; statues of sturdy-looking men are often half hid by heavy shrubbery; an assorted group of buildings are scattered over the grounds; in the tabernacle—where you actually can hear a pin drop—the daily organ recital is being given for the visitors. And here and there the guides are talking little herds of newcomers about, rapidly skipping over the story of the Mormon church.

This, then, is the "new Zion" which sent tens of thousands of faith-bound folks from their eastern homes into hardships and hazardous adventures which have few, if any, parallels in the history of this country.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Molly BURNHAM, wealthy young playwright has returned from Europe to take care of little RITA NEWTON, the child of her dead roommate. Molly has rented a gorgeous apartment, and is anxious to take the child from her father's flat as soon as possible, because of the presence there of a frowsy young woman known as ELISIE SMITH. Miss Smith seems to have been an ex-sweetheart of BOB NEWTON, Rita's father.

While Molly is getting settled in Boston, preparations are being made in New York for the presentation of her second play, "Sacrifice." Meanwhile, Elsie Smith comes to call.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXX

Miss Smith was wearing an ensemble of orchid chiffon embellished with flowing scarfs and a wash of purple. Her hat was violet, and so were her satin pumps. She fitted, self-consciously, an enormous square of georgette, pressing it against her mouth and her nose. And toyed nervously with a long string of mauve-colored pearl beads.

She looked rather pretty in a conspicuous, flashy fashion. Like a show girl dolled up for a date.

Molly, with prosperity, had acquired distinction in clothes. She was wearing now a dark tall collar of silk tweed, with a little tri-cornered hat, and kid walking shoes.

They stood side by side, in the lobby of the Copley, and looked like models illustrating "What the Well-Dressed Girl Will and Will Not Wear."

Miss Smith flounced her georgette handkerchief.

"I've something important to say to you," she repeated.

"Where shall we go?" Molly looked up and down Peacock Alley. The seats were all taken.

"Would you like to go up to my room?" she invited cordially. "Or shall we have tea down here?"

Miss Smith softened.

"It's all the same by me."

"Then let's go to my room."

Molly led the way to the elevator. She had a disagreeable conviction that the girl was going to make a scene.

"I found an apartment today," she remarked conversationally. "It's ever so attractive. There's a beautiful sunny nursery for Rita."

By the way, Miss Smith was going to call Bob later—will it be convenient to send Rita over tomorrow? I'm planning to move right in—it's furnished, you see. We might as well get settled."

Miss Smith's straight mouth tightened at the end of the responsibility you've undertaken so generously."

"I don't know as it will," she said.

"Well, it doesn't really make any difference," assented Molly tactfully. "I only wanted to relieve you as soon as possible of the responsibilities you've undertaken so generously."

They were in Molly's room now. Miss Smith lit a cigaret.

"What I did wasn't anything," she declared airily. "It's what I'm going to do."

"Indeed?"

Molly raised her eyebrows.

"Don't pull any of your stagey airs on me!" warned Miss Smith. "I don't know what you're talking about," declared Molly angrily. "If you've anything to say to me, why don't you say it?"

The other girl flicked the ashes from her cigaret.

"It's about Bob," she said. "Maybe you've been giving him an earful, and then again maybe you haven't. But all I got to say is Bob's going to marry me. See?"

Molly was genuine shocked.

"Mary you're kidding me. Why his wife hasn't been dead a month. Haven't you any decency?"

"I don't know as I have," conceded Miss Smith. "But I got an awful pile of determination, dearie."

"But why have you come to me? I'm not Mr. Newton's keeper. If he has the execrable taste to marry you, it isn't after all, any of my business."

"No!" Miss Smith blew insolent rings.

"You don't think I've anything to say about it, do you?" demanded Molly.

"I think just this," Elsie propped her feet up comfortably on the bed. "I think he'd marry you tomorrow, if he got the chance."

Molly rose furiously to her feet.

"Stop it!" she commanded.

"Well, I do," pursued Miss Smith calmly. "I got a right to my own opinion, I suppose?"

Molly's tone was icy. "So long as you keep it to yourself."

"Oh, all right. I'm not one to talk anyhow. What I got to say is this, Miss Burnham—you want Rita—don't you?"

Molly nodded stiffly.

"And I want Bob. Well, here's my proposition. You use your influence with Bob. And when we're married, I'll make him move away from Boston. You're going to have a lot of trouble with the man, Miss Burnham, if you don't do what I say. When he gets lit, he's the wildest thing you ever saw. He'd steal little Rita on you, like as not. And run away somewhere with her. He's always talkin' of going to South America."

"Maybe you think I'm kidding you. But Bob carries a revolver these days, Miss Burnham, and that's no kid. He'd think no more of poppin' you off than he would of takin' another drink. I'm the only one that can manage him, when he gets goin'."

"If you're telling the truth," asked Molly coolly, "why do you want to marry him?"

Miss Smith scuffed her cigaret on the bedside table.

"That's my business," she retorted.

"I suppose he's refused already?"

"If he hadn't," admitted Elsie sourly, "I wouldn't be here."

"I don't know what you think I can do."

Miss Smith shrugged.

"I'll give you time to think it over," she offered. "If Bob gets to drinking you'll be glad enough to come to terms. Boston won't be big enough for you and him. He'll pester the life out of you. And you can't shut your door on him, nor call the police, because you want his daughter."

Molly vouchsafed no reply.

"Well, you heard me think it over," Miss Smith took out her purple scarfs, and preened in the long mirror. "I'm going up to Montreal for a while, to visit a girl friend. You have your answer ready, when I come back."

She stopped at the mirror, to touch her lips, and smear a bit of blue shadow under her eyes.

"No hard feelin's, I hope? You'll be glad enough, dearie, to get rid of the boy friend. Take it from a little girl that knows."

She was at the door, when Molly cried sharply, "How about Rita?"

"There's a high school girl that takes care of her day-times," explained Miss Smith. "She's a good deal of a real fond of Rita. I've spoken to her already. She'll be at the flat, waiting to hear from you."

"Does Mr. Newton know what arrangements you've made?"

"Mr. Newton?" Elsie's shrill voice took on the affected tones of a society woman. "Oh, Mr. Newton is otherwise engaged."

"He hasn't gone away?"

"Well, not far," Elsie smiled maliciously. "Mr. Newton got bloated last night. It's a habit with Mr. Newton."

When the door closed behind her caller, Molly sniffed distastefully, and opened the windows.

That afternoon she telephoned Bob's flat. It was as Elsie had said. A girlish voice told her that Miss Smith was away. Mr. Newton was out of town too, she thought. But Rita would be ready any time Miss Burnham wished. Her clothes were packed, and her toys.

Before dark everything was settled. The baby had her supper that night in the blue and buttercup nursery. And Molly undressed and bathed her, and tucked her in the feiry bed, that had Alice in Wonderland on the headboard. And the Mad Hare, with his tall silk hat and his white kid gloves in his hand, scurrying across the footboard.

Then she telephoned Mr. Durbin. By the way, she had Alice in Wonderland on the headboard. And the Mad Hare, with his tall silk hat and his white kid gloves in his hand, scurrying across the footboard.

"But what could they object to?" she asked in astonishment.

"Well, the suicide. The motive's not what you'd call simon-pure, you know."

"But, my goodness, they can't expect me to commit suicide for only exemplary purposes? A man's got to have some reason for shooting himself. And it isn't always a pretty reason, is it?"

Durbin laughed.

"Nine times out of ten it's a pretty ugly one," he admitted. "But the censors are nice, cheery little boys, who like to have us look on the bright side of life. Besides, if they didn't censure, they wouldn't be censors, would they? Naturally, they've got to find something to kick about. But don't you worry about that. They won't be able to close us. And all their chattering will be just so much advertising."

Bob was in town, but Molly did not care to invite him. She hoped, in fact, that he would not attend.

For the first night of "Delphine" she had sent Jack a ticket, and asked him to sit with her father and mother. She would never be able to forget that evening and its hideous aftermath. In very recollection it could make Molly ill with the poignant memory of her misery and humiliation.

She had considered sending Jack a ticket for "sacrifice," but decided, at the last moment, that it would be undignified—as though she were soliciting his attendance.

But Jack was there. She saw him from the wings. With him was a woman, a stout, florid creature in red. Molly had never in her life seen so many diamonds on one woman as that fat lady wore. They were even in her hair, which was not at all fashionable, but certainly conspicuous in color.

They sat in the very front row. And Molly noticed that the woman kept her hand on Jack's arm.

If We Meant What We Said

© 1929, BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton © 1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

Speaking of moral responsibility in bringing up children, and slacker of parents who shift all the burden of the more serious things on their long-suffering partners, how's this for an example?

A mother was told that her boy would never be well until he had a certain operation. The father protested. He couldn't afford it, he said, the boy would outgrow it—he's had something like it himself when he was little and he got over it without all this fussing.

His wife answered that another chronic illness had taken its place as a direct result, he knew very well, and that that was exactly what she wished to avoid in her son.

He Grew Worse

She waited another year. John kept on getting worse and finally she said, "We'll just have to do something about it. Charles. He'll have to go to the hospital soon."

"We can't afford it," repeated Charles.

"You bought a new radio."

"That's right. Bring that up. Very well! We'll send him, but remember, if anything goes wrong, it's your fault. I won't be responsible."

She put in another miserable month but finally John was sent off. It had become too serious to be put off.

By this time there was a complication and a few days after the operation the doctor began to look grave. John had a temperature and it was going up.

Then Charles rose manfully to the occasion and accused his wife. "I told you so. If anything happens to the boy it's your fault. I didn't want to have this done and you know it."

John was home in two weeks' time and in a month better than he had been for years.

A Tortuous Week

But that first week was torture for his poor mother until she knew he was going to get well.

The WOMAN'S DAY

By ALLEN SCAINER

Women are the impulsive sex, they say, also the least well-informed on matters of general information. But the other day one A. E. Dean, of Fort Worth, Texas, read in the papers of a divorce granted a woman of the same name as his wife's, Estelle Evington Dean. He killed himself. His widow learned that another woman by the same name had obtained the divorce.

Truancy is one great result of divorce and broken homes, according to the attendance director (as the modern "truant officer" prefers to be called) of one of our large city school systems.

The other day, after months of bitter wrangling between her maternal and paternal grand-parents, little nine-year-old Irene Vivian Beyer heard a judge decree that one set of grandparents should have her during the school year, and the other set for summer vacations and all holidays.

Tales of how one grandmother criticized the other grandmother to the child, even refusing to let her appear in any of the clothes she wore when she came, and so on, were told.

GRAND OLD LADY!

Madame Poincare defied the French government, when it begged her husband, the former premier, to reconsider his plea to resign because of his health and age and his desire to have freedom from responsibility in his later years.

"A wife has a right to some of her husband's life," ultimaded the madame to the criticism of many who urged that a really great wife would yield up her personal life to her country.

This is just some more of that bunk women have been fed from time immemorial so that the male could the more do as he pleased. It's in the same category as "I could not love thee, dear, so much, loved I old honor more."

I'm glad this old lady showed her pin feathers!

EASY WAY OUT

Because so many modern adults are caught in the grip of divorce, human sophistry finds us refusing to find flaws in it. One modern viewpoint coming to the fore more and more is that children really suffer very little from the broken home, and that all our bugaboos on that subject are needless.

But more often we realize how true this real argument about divorce really is!

SHE JUMPED!

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Earick, of Shiloh, Ohio, quarreled as they were driving along the road in their car. They quarreled so vigorously and well that the wife jumped from the auto. It seems that the wife threatened to jump if he didn't do something or other, and jump she did.

While there are few human actions which can be described as typically male or female, this is one of the very few dyed-in-the-wool female tricks.

MOGUL'S NAMES

Anna Pennybaker, daughter of the former governor of Pennsylvania, was arrested in a strike demonstration the other day which results us of the many famous persons arrested in Sacco-Vanzetti demonstrations. A big name is sure-fire publicity stuff for the workers' cause, being a bit inconsistent with our general idea that "big guns" never get arrested.

STATISTICS SHOW DECREASE IN LIFE EXPECTANCY AFTER REACHING FORTY

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN. Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Figures just made available in an article published in "Science" and the records of the state of Illinois for the last ten years show that the life expectancy of men in the United States after reaching forty years has decreased by one year during the last decade.

The figures are of the greatest significance. We have been saying much about the increased years that have been granted to man by the progress of medical science.

It is definitely proved that whereas the child born in the United States in 1825 could expect to live only 33 years, the child born in the United States today may expect to live to 58 years.

However, the man who reached 50 years of age in 1825 had an expectancy of 21.2 years and the one who reaches 50 years today has a life expectancy of approximately 21.5 years. Indeed, the latest figures, as have been mentioned, indicate that the man of 40 may now reasonably expect only 29 years, whereas 10 years ago his expectancy was calculated at 30 years. Obviously the gain that has been made is in the first three decades of life and represents the acute infectious diseases of childhood.

The diseases most prominent in the causes of death are now heart disease, high blood pressure, diabetes, cancer and pneumonia. Most of these are degenerative diseases. They represent wear and tear on the human body. The tissues that have broken down and die are not to be given new life and rejuvenation.

BLUE BERET

They are crippled cells and the only hope of saving them seems to lie in giving them less to do. Hence the control of the degenerative diseases includes control of the diet primarily, limiting it in amount and in quality so that too great a burden will not be thrown on the organs of assimilation and elimination.

In order not to put too great a burden on the heart and on the blood vessels the individual must get enough rest and limit his exercise to what his tissues can stand. One of the greatest causes of degenerative diseases is constant strain or worry. We live at fever pitch. Everybody is going somewhere and the element of human nature that the German wisely calls "Stitzfleisch" seems to be disappearing entirely.

The philosophers despair of any great increase in life expectancy after middle age in view of the trend of the times. All that they and the physicians can do is to stand by the side of the road and shout "SLOW DOWN!" What can they do if a speed-mad public refuses to heed the call?

TOWN CHAMPIONSHIP QUOT TOWNSHIP BEING FORMED

Entry List Closes Friday Night; Winner to Compete at Eastern States Exposition in Springfield.

Announcement was made today by Herbert L. Carlson, recreational playground instructor here, that a town championship horseshoe pitching tournament is to be formed this week. Anyone in town, whether or not a member of the Recreation Centers, is eligible to compete.

All matches will be played on the East and West Side playgrounds. The tournament will be operated similar to the town tennis tournaments, being conducted on an elimination basis—one defeat and you go. All matches will be the best out of three games, each of which will be for 21 points.

The winner of the tournament will have all expenses paid for a trip to the Eastern States Exposition in Springfield where he will battle for the New England championship. That Manchester has players of sufficient caliber for this competition may be seen in the fact that Jimmy Fallon soundly trounced Mike Ryan of Rockville here recently. Ryan finished second at Springfield last fall. The only good horseshoe pitcher in town. Others who can handle ringers and close in with amazing ability are Guido Giorgetti, "Punk" Lamprecht, Jim Thompson, Dan Ryan, Pat Furber, Jim Schab and Bill Brennan. There are other dark-horse entries who may spring a surprise. The north end is reported as having a couple of good men it is planning to enter in the tournament.

A gold medal will also be given the winning player as well as the trip to Springfield. All entries must be in by Friday night. They can be submitted at either of the Recreation Centers, personally or by telephone or to Mr. Carlson at the playgrounds. Street address and telephone numbers should be left with the name. Players may use their own shoes in the matches in case they prefer.

Due to the lateness of the playground season which closes the end of this month, Carlson is planning to rush the tournament through with all possible speed and players are asked to lend their cooperation in the matter.

CHOP AND SLICE HELP IN TENNIS

Lott Tells Local Players That This Stroke Are of Inestimable Value.

The chop and slice, when used correctly, is of inestimable value. Many matches have been won through intelligent use of these shots. First of all, these spin shots are effective when used as a change of pace. If applied alone, they are practically useless. But if used to confuse your opponent they are of great value.

This method of play was one of the main causes of Lacoste's defeat by Tilden at Paris in the 1927 Davis Cup matches. At the start of that memorable match Tilden relied on a driving game, that was successful to the extent of his winning the first set.

He confided to me after the match that it was at this point that he turned to his chop in desperation. Seeing that his chop threw the French man off his timing, he also started to use his slice, which is a form of the chop, only it is more slow and tantalizing shot.

Spools His Timing.
Employing these tactics, using his drive only occasionally, yet often enough to keep Lacoste guessing, he completely ruined the timing of the great Frenchman.

Lacoste lost his confidence, failing to understand why he didn't have his usual deadly accuracy. He was never allowed to get set for a shot, as first he would have to handle a fast drive, then a skidding chop, next a teasing, floating lob-chop, only to have this procedure repeated, never being able to guess their order. It was an unusual sight to see the usually calm and steady Frenchman grow wilder and wilder as the match progressed.

Mixing 'Em Up.
It was the clever mixing of his shots that accomplished this for Tilden. If, instead of using his drive occasionally, he had used the chop and nothing else, the result would have been the same if he had used only his drive. Used alone, the chop is not a successful weapon. Certain players have become champions with the use of a drive entirely, but never with the exclusive use of a chop.

I would advise players to learn a chop, but only after they have the drive mastered. The chop's main function is that of adding variety to the game and even then it is purely a defensive shot. It is a great thing to have in your repertoire and a shot well worth learning.

A'S HURLERS ARE SHOWING CLASS AGAIN

Rube Walberg Pitches Shut-out Against Tigers and Connie Mack is Greatly Encouraged.

By DAVIS J. WALSH
New York, Aug. 13.—After thinking things over, there probably was nothing for Connie Mack to do this morning but to break right down pitiously—and laugh. No doubt he disliked losing all self-control in this unmanly way but the provocation was great. He had seen Rube Walberg pitch a five-hit shutout against the Detroit Tigers the day before and, if this wasn't manna for the mailman, then Mr. Mack is willing to wait until another delivery is made. It was the first ball game Walberg even had gone so far as to finish in his last four starts and, in the light of later developments, the circumstance might very well furnish the great convincer of the 1929 pennant race.

Pennant races? About the only people who realize that a race still is on are the Athletics and Yankees but, if you think both of them aren't avidly aware of the fact, that is your error.

Indeed, the way the Philadelphia pitchers were pitching, some had begun to suspect that, among those scheduled to stagger home, would be father on Saturday night and the Athletic ball club. Grove has turned in one winning start in the last two weeks and the only way he can finish nine innings is under a shower. He was knocked out in Detroit again last Saturday but Simmons blew two homers off the playground and the game was won. Yes, the club still is winning but two weeks or more it has been doing it, not because of its pitchers, in spite of them.

They gave Earnshaw five runs the other day before he pitched ball and he couldn't win. He has turned in one sound effort since late July—his defeat of the Yanks in Philadelphia. Quinn never recovered from his fourteen-inning game with the Yanks back in June and Rommel no longer gets the nod when called in. Earnshaw, by the way, has the name of Shores now fills that role with no great distinction. As for Ehmske, he was left behind in Philadelphia after the jouncing he took from the Yankees last week.

No reason for it. In brief, the boys seem to be shot full of horsehair and there isn't any accounting for it, either. Until recently, they formed quite a pitching staff, composed of three stars—Grove, Earnshaw and Egan—and the rest of them for day to day emergency. Now, it is a staff that has no stars and all emergency. Add the fact that its collapse came at a time when Bishop and Dykes were out of the infield and you have a trial balance of the burden the rest of the outfit has been carrying.

It couldn't have carried it indefinitely. It doesn't look now as though it will have to. Walberg's performance yesterday took some of the weight off the Athletics and put it on the other club, for it was the Old McCoy in every respect. A pitcher can have an ordinary day and shut out a few clubs. But the only one that he can't shut out is the Athletics and he can't shut out the Athletics and he can't shut out the Athletics.

MACK FIGURES HIS A'S ARE IN

And Who Doesn't for That Matter With Yanks More Than Ten Behind.

Editor's Note: This is the second of a series of six articles on the personality of Connie Mack, who is leading the Athletics to another American League pennant.

By HENRY L. FARRELL
Philadelphia, Aug. 13.—Connie Mack thinks his Philadelphia Athletics are in. To interpret this for those who are not conversant with a pretty cross-court drive with a good service and a steady defense, Dexter was having considerable difficulty in keeping his roller within bounds. Greer's next opponent will be the winner of the Paul Cervini-Louie Farr match tomorrow night at the Nathan Hale courts.

One other match was played last night and that proved to be more or less of an upset. Lawrence Babe Ruth, ambitious to a fault, was favored to "take" Hudson Lyons, but his youthful opponent was too steady for him and overcame a set lead to win out 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Paisley outlasted Lyons in the first set with a beautiful forward drive and effective serve that repeatedly caught him either out of position or off balance. Lyons came back strongly in the second set and reversed the score after a hot battle. This seemed to give him confidence and he slashed his way to a well deserved triumph in the deciding set. Lyon's next opponent will be the winner of the "Cap" Bissell-Jimmy O'Leary match.

Two more matches are scheduled for tonight. Both are on the high school courts. Jimmy Quinn and Johnny McCavanaugh start at 5:30 with Bill Hand and Bob deVeille taking the other court about the same time. Hand's opponent is one of the several promising players who may eliminate some of the favorites before the tournament is many days old. He has had a great deal of experience and plays a hard steady driving game that in variously leads him to victory. Hand, by the way, is no soft picking.

Tomorrow night there are several matches on tap. Paul Jesanis, one of the favorites to win the tournament, meets Tom Hawley at the Nathan Hale at 5 o'clock. Joe McCluskey and Mike Cordera clash at the high school at 6 o'clock. Louie Farr and Paul Cervini meet at the Nathan Hale at 6 o'clock. Donald Jesanis and Fred Mack meet at the Nathan Hale at 6 o'clock. Bob Smith and Francis Burr play at the High school at 7 o'clock. Grace Giglio and Elizabeth Washkewich meet at the Nathan Hale at 7 o'clock.

Cochrane also is a great influence on the ball club. The players all like him and respect him and they seem to be more steady when he is behind the bat. His Favorites.

"I suppose you know that it would be a very popular victory if your ball club won the pennant," we said.

Dividing the Honor.

LOCAL SPORT CHATTER

Ritchie Biggio was not inclined to be as talkative as usual today at the Valvoline Oil Company where he works. The former New Yorker who claims he was a crack shot had a bad showing in his much-ballyhooped shooting match with Joe Cavagnaro yesterday afternoon. At a range of a hundred yards Cavagnaro hit the bull's eye four out of five times while Biggio hit nothing but the wind—according to the information telephoned the sports department this morning by—no, that would be equalizing.

The West Side volleyball team is still looking for matches with any good aggregation in town according to Manager Fritz Wilkinson.

Ernest Brown and Francis Hart are reported to be outdoing Joe Humphries in broadcasting their ability at quoits. What's more, it is rumored they can back up their arguments with ringers. However, seeing's believing, as Dr. Moran says.

MISSED HIS SHOT

"Did it hit you?"
"No."
"Then it wasn't me."—Glasgow Citizen.

GREER BEATS DEXTER 6-1, 6-3; LYONS IS VICTOR, 4-6, 6-4, 6-1

Methodist Pastor Impressive; Paisley's Defeat an Upset; Two Matches Tonight, Six Tomorrow.

Rev. James Greer, assistant pastor of the South Methodist Episcopal church, scored an impressive victory over Allan L. Dexter in a first round tennis match in the men's singles elimination tournament last night at the Manchester Country Club court. He won in straight sets at 6-1, 6-3, displaying a pretty cross-court drive with a good service and a steady defense. Dexter was having considerable difficulty in keeping his roller within bounds. Greer's next opponent will be the winner of the Paul Cervini-Louie Farr match tomorrow night at the Nathan Hale courts.

One other match was played last night and that proved to be more or less of an upset. Lawrence Babe Ruth, ambitious to a fault, was favored to "take" Hudson Lyons, but his youthful opponent was too steady for him and overcame a set lead to win out 4-6, 6-4, 6-1. Paisley outlasted Lyons in the first set with a beautiful forward drive and effective serve that repeatedly caught him either out of position or off balance. Lyons came back strongly in the second set and reversed the score after a hot battle. This seemed to give him confidence and he slashed his way to a well deserved triumph in the deciding set. Lyon's next opponent will be the winner of the "Cap" Bissell-Jimmy O'Leary match.

Two more matches are scheduled for tonight. Both are on the high school courts. Jimmy Quinn and Johnny McCavanaugh start at 5:30 with Bill Hand and Bob deVeille taking the other court about the same time. Hand's opponent is one of the several promising players who may eliminate some of the favorites before the tournament is many days old. He has had a great deal of experience and plays a hard steady driving game that in variously leads him to victory. Hand, by the way, is no soft picking.

Tomorrow night there are several matches on tap. Paul Jesanis, one of the favorites to win the tournament, meets Tom Hawley at the Nathan Hale at 5 o'clock. Joe McCluskey and Mike Cordera clash at the high school at 6 o'clock. Louie Farr and Paul Cervini meet at the Nathan Hale at 6 o'clock. Donald Jesanis and Fred Mack meet at the Nathan Hale at 6 o'clock. Bob Smith and Francis Burr play at the High school at 7 o'clock. Grace Giglio and Elizabeth Washkewich meet at the Nathan Hale at 7 o'clock.

The old gentleman's eyes sparkled when he spoke to Mule Haas, Jimmy Foxx.

"To think that I was an emergency call for Cochrane to come back to the team, crippled or not."

"I did call him back to the team," he said, "but not exactly for that reason. I was figuring on an emergency that would arise if Perkins had the misfortune to meet with injury. Cochrane also is a great influence on the ball club. The players all like him and respect him and they seem to be more steady when he is behind the bat. His Favorites.

The old gentleman's eyes sparkled when he spoke to Mule Haas, Jimmy Foxx.

"The impression was easily acquired that they are his particular pets."

"Don't you believe that Foxx is hitting over his head?" we asked.

"Not at all. Not at all," he answered. "To the contrary the boy is hitting under his head."

"I suppose you know that it would be a very popular victory if your ball club won the pennant," we said.

Dividing the Honor.

"Well," he said, with a hint of a smile, "I suppose it would. By that I mean the public wouldn't object if the Yankees didn't win again. I am saying this impersonally. A Yankee manager and his players are my friends, but the public tires of seeing the same team winning all the time. I think I am qualified to speak from experience. I had a team once that won a number of championships and I had to break

Last Night Fights

At New York—Arthur De Kuk, light heavyweight, knocked out George Cook, Australia, in eight round (10).

At New York—Joe Sekyra, Dayton heavyweight, given decision over George Larooco, Greenwich Village, in ten rounds.

At Little Rock—W. L. (Young) Villaring, Georgia, scored technical knockout over Harry Fay, Louisville, fifth round (10).

The players had become pennant rich, if I might put it that way. They had become sated with victories and didn't care much.

"Don't believe it would hurt baseball if the Yankees did not win this year. I'm not putting my ball club forward. I think it would be the same of the Browns, or the Tigers, or the Indians, or any other club finished first."

Interesting Game Expected to Develop at West Side When Three-Time Niantic Champs Display Wares.

Company G, three-time winners of the baseball championship of 189th Infantry, C. N. G., during summer encampments at Niantic, will make its first appearance on a Manchester diamond this evening when it tries conclusions with the strong Playground All-Star team which instructor "Pat" Carlson has banded together for the occasion.

The game will be played at the West Side playgrounds and will get underway promptly at 6 o'clock. Ralph Russell will umpire behind the plate and Harry White will work on the bases. Both teams boast strong lineups and an interesting battle should develop. Indications point to a good sized crowd. Many fans are anxious to see the caller of the soldier team that took the title three years in succession.

Both teams will present strong lineups. Walter Kearns, the lad who turned a no-hit no-run performance at Camp Trumbull—or Tommy Faulkner will work on the mound for the All-Stars with Ray Holland, the speed artist, or Harry Bellucci on the hill for the Champs. Kearns' reason for not playing with G is that he doesn't want to play against the West Side—and that's practically what the All-Stars represent.

Coach Pat Carlson may catch for the playground team but if he doesn't, the job will fall on the shoulders of Larry Maloney, Dick Kerr or Bill Brennan will be at first, Dahlquist at second, Hewitt at short, Wiley at third, Dowd in left, Holland in center and Armstrong in right field.

As for the Co. G team, Charlie Bycholski or Jim Benevento will catch, with DeWitt, Ib, Penttila, 2b, Vince, ss, McCavanaugh, 3b, Frey, lf, Wolff, cf, Gobbs, rf. Of course, there may be changes. Manager Culotta is keeping two or three dark horse stars ready for last minute use and it is probably plenty of fireworks this evening. All in all, it ought to be a game well worth watching.

INDIANS CLINCH 11 OF 16 GAMES

That's the Reason Yankees Cannot Keep Up With Athletics; Lose Yesterday

New York, Aug. 13.—In listing your reasons why the Yankees are some 11-2 games in arrears of the Athletics please put Cleveland somewhere near the top.

For the rejuvenated Indians have taken 11 of the 16 games played between the two clubs this season and judging from latest reports seem in no hurry to stop.

The latest of the Indians' triumphs came yesterday when, in a somewhat farcial game, they trounced the Yanks 11 to 7. Four New York errors made the way a life easier for Peckinpaugh's outfit. Babe Ruth, ambitious to a fault, started off on a hunt for 1,000 home runs by poling out the 501st of his career and the 31st of the year.

Thanks to a splendid performance by Rube Walberg, who announced his return to form by shutting out the heavy-hitting Tigers, the Athletics picked up another game on their rivals. Walberg allowed but five hits. Al Simmons kept pace with the home run hitters by connecting for his 27th.

The White Sox suffered from too many Danny MacFaydens and they lost the third of the series to the Red Sox, 3 to 0. MacFadden allowed but three hits in a fast 1 hour and 55 minutes game.

Good pitching being the order of the day in the American, Garland Braxton held the Browns to five hits and the Senators made it three in a row, this time by 3 to 2.

The first three clubs in the National all took a fall yesterday, Chicago losing to the Braves, New York to Cincinnati and the Pirates to the Robins.

Guy Bush, leading pitcher in the National League, suffered his second defeat of the year when the Braves humbled the leaders in ten innings. Ben Cantwell held the Cubs to six hits and paved the way for the winning run when he singled in the tenth.

Pete Donohue showing no ill effects from his late encounter with Hack Wilson, limited the Giants to five hits as the Reds won, 5 to 2.

Johnny Frederick, sensational rookie outfielder of the Robins, lifted a homer over the right field wall in the tenth with one on base to scuttle the Pirates, 4 to 2.

The cards staged a three-run rally in the fifth to whip the Phillies, 7 to 5.

RAMBLERS DEFEAT ATLAS NINE 10-5

Eight Run Rally in Second Inning Settles Outcome; Hits Even.

The Ramblers defeated the Atlas 10 to 5 in a senior league baseball game last night at the west side playgrounds. Both teams hit about the same but the winners fielded much better.

An eight run rally in the second inning settled the outcome. The box score:

SINGER FIGHTS TONIGHT

New York, Aug. 13.—Al Singer, Bronx junior lightweight, goes to the post again tonight at the Queensboro Stadium in his final tune up before his important match with Kid Chocolate at the Polo Grounds late this month.

Gaston Charles, rugged little Frenchman, will be Singer's opponent. Charles isn't much of a threat, but he expects to be on his feet at the end of ten rounds.

MARDI GRAS CARNIVAL AT SANDY BEACH BAL

Plans have been completed for the elaborate Mardi Gras Carnival that is to take place at Sandy Beach ballroom, Crystal Lake tomorrow evening. Seemingly not a single detail has been overlooked to make this the biggest and most pretentious carnival event ever held in this section of the state.

In order to give the affair the proper spirit of a typical Mardi Gras elaborate and appropriate decorations have made an entirely new and novel setting at the ballroom and the Champion Commanders of twelve pieces will provide a special carnival dance program featuring the very latest dances and novelties. This will be the Commanders' first return engagement at Sandy Beach since their triumphal engagement at Riverside where they took the Massachusetts crowd by storm.

Free noise makers, caps, hats, streamers and confetti will be freely distributed to all who attend the Mardi Gras at Sandy Beach ballroom tomorrow evening and judging from the interest and enthusiasm the event has aroused there will be a recordbreaking crowd in attendance.

Saturday evening the 17th, there will be a special feature attraction with a big Battle of Music between The Commanders and Marc Barthello's orchestra of Holyoke, Mass., for a purse of $250. Each orchestra has named its twelve players and posted their wagers and the contest has aroused a lot of excitement throughout Eastern Connecticut.

MORGAN IN LONDON.

London, Eng., Aug. 12.—J. P. Morgan, the New York banker, who has been mentioned as a possible mediator in the reparations dispute between the British and other allied Ydelegates in the Hague conference, was in London this afternoon. While it was admitted at Mr. Morgan's home and office that he is here, it was stated that none of his business colleagues have any information about his plans in the immediate future.

Yosemite National Park.—An aerial cableways system may soon link the far-famed and lofty Glacier Point, the most celebrated and picturesque of the Yosemite, with the floor of the valley 3,234 feet below.

While no action has yet been taken, officials of the park, the chief scenic wonder of the Pacific coast, said that they have been studying the various tramways in an effort to settle upon a safe, inexpensive means of transportation between the two places.

At present, Glacier Point is only reached by a steep zig-zag and somewhat perilous trail, or by a roundabout mountain road for autoists.

An aerial cableway, first used in the higher regions of Germany in 1925, and now installed in the Alps in Switzerland, in Spain, in Sweden and South Africa, has been suggested as the most logical for autoists.

NEW BOSTON-NEW YORK FAST TRAIN PLANNED

The management of the New Haven Railroad announces plans for a new limited extra fare train on the fastest schedule ever to be in effect between Boston and New York which will begin operation in each direction sometime this fall.

The announcement follows closely the inauguration of service by the new "Senator" which already is becoming popular with those who travel between Boston and Washington and intermediate points.

The new train will make the run in less than five hours, the time of the Knickerbocker and Merchants Limiteds, which for years have been the New Haven's premier trains. Its route will be over the shore line to the Grand Central Terminal.

The Pullman Company shops at Chicago are at present building two sets of special equipment for these trains which will make their initial run as soon as it is received. Officers of the New Haven who recently returned from Chicago, where they went over the last details of the plans for the new cars, say the train will represent "absolutely the latest thing in passenger transportation and will give the New Haven Road the distinction of operating the finest day train in America."

While the schedule for the train has not yet been decided upon it is tentatively contemplated to have it leave either city at 4:00 p. m., one hour ahead of the leaving time of the Merchants.

The extra fare charge will be more than that of the other limited trains because of the faster running time and the deluxe character of the equipment.

Details concerning the schedule, description of the equipment and name of the train will be announced later.

KEITH'S VACATION BEGINS SATURDAY

Local Store Follows Policy of Last Seven Years in Closing for Two Weeks.

Saturday at 9 o'clock both stores of the G. E. Keith Furniture Company will close until Labor Day, September 2, opening on Tuesday morning, September 3. During this time there will be no sales, no deliveries, nor money taken in. It's what you might call a wholesale vacation—everyone gets two weeks with full pay right in the midst of the vacation season.

Seven years ago this month, the G. E. Keith Furniture Co. made a startling announcement that their stores would close for two weeks in order that all employees might enjoy a real vacation. They felt that everyone should have a rest and did not like the idea of doing business short handed during the summer months because it impaired efficiency and the good service they desired to give.

It had been customary for clerks and office help who worked day and evenings to receive a vacation at the company's expense, but no provision was made for delivery men, repairmen, etc. It was with the intention of providing for these that the novel plan of closing down everything at once was conceived.

Nowhere had this plan been tried in an establishment as large as Keith's, and the outcome was watched with considerable interest far and wide. In fact so keen was the interest that many kinds and quantities of articles in trade magazines and even in European newspapers. It was, indeed a bold attempt to meet a common problem in a radical and novel manner. Dr. Green advertised for the dog last night in The Herald and when Warden Luettgens saw it he got in touch with the owner and returned the dog.

H. S. MUSIC SUPERVISOR ON INSTITUTE FACULTY

Miss C. Marion Dorward Returns from Summer Session at Skidmore College.

Miss C. Marion Dorward, supervisor of music in the schools of the Ninth District and the High school, has returned to her home on Main street after six weeks spent at the Institute of Musical Pedagogy, Skidmore college, Saratoga. This summer school of music has been conducted at Smith college, Northampton, for the past 20 years. A year ago Dr. Moore, president of Skidmore, invited the director for several seasons, Ralph Baldwin, to transfer the school to Skidmore, and extend the intensive course of three weeks to six weeks, enabling the students to earn the necessary credits for a New York state certificate, leading to a college degree.

Miss Dorward was one of the 11 teachers on the faculty. The school is conducted exclusively for the training of public school music supervisors. Private lessons are given in voice, organ and musical piano of many kinds, and teaching methods for both high and grade schools. This first year at Skidmore has proved most successful. One hundred and thirty students from all parts of the country have taken the six weeks' course.

The students have more time to study between recitations and in the final examinations there have been fewer failures. Director Baldwin has always maintained a high standard of scholarship and is well pleased with the accomplishments of the school this year. His name is almost a household word, so well known is he through his work in the public schools and choral societies in Hartford, and his connection as conductor of part of the program of the associated glee clubs in New York at their annual convocations.

In Miss Dorward's opinion Saratoga is an ideal situation for a summer school. The climate is invigorating, and although it was a hot summer for Saratoga, the nights were cool and refreshing and they enjoyed more rain than we had here in Connecticut. Delightful excursions were taken to Lake George and other places in the Adirondack region.

Asked about Skidmore college, Miss Dorward replied that it was a young institution, established in 1911 as a school of industrial art for local girls. In 1922 it was chartered as a college and since then specialized in domestic science, music or art. At present the student body is over 500 and the faculty numbers about 60. Dr. Henry T. Moore was formerly professor of chemistry at Dartmouth and since coming to Skidmore four years ago has raised the standard of college requirements, and the standing of the institution to a high degree.

TALCOTTVILLE P. O. ROBBED, IS REPORT

Sum of $50 Lifted from Drawer; Thief Known to Authorities, It Is Said.

It was learned today that about $50 was stolen from the Talcottville post office several days ago. However, as yet, no official action has been taken on the matter pending the return of John G. Talcott of the firm of Talcott Brothers who is away on his vacation.

It is understood that the post office authorities know who took the money. One report is that it was used in the purchase of a second-hand automobile. The money was taken from a drawer while James Wood, who runs the combination general store and post office, was home for lunch and his assistant was unloading bags of grain in the rear of the building.
