GRAF REACHES ITS HOME PORT

Arrives at Friedrichshafen At 3:30 A. M. (Our Time)—Monster Reception by Populace.

Friedrichshafen, Germany, Sept. 4.—Safe at home once more after her epochal conquest of the world by air, the giant dirigible Graf Zeppelin arrives here shortly before 3:30 a. m. (3:30 a. m. New York Daylight Saving time) today.

A reception worthy of the mighty air conqueror was accorded the Zeppelin upon her arrival. Thousands of persons, many of whom had spent the night on camp stools on the landing field joined in a swelling chorus of "hooshs" as the huge air liner floated gracefully over the field at the end of her long journey around the world.

Under the command of Captain Ernst Lehmann, piloting the huge ship in place of Commander Dr. Hugo Eckener, the Graf easily eclipsed the round the world record established in the flight from Lakehurst to Lakehurst.

Another Record She covered the loop around the world from Friedrichshafen to Friedrichshafen in twenty days, four hours and thirteen minutes, against the 21 days, 7 hours and 33 minutes required to circle the globe from Lakehurst to Lakehurst.

This record was established in spite of the fact that the Graf maintained a more or less leisurely pace across Europe, and far from squalling her own trans-Atlantic record of a little more than 55 hours.

Within 25 minutes of the time the mammoth dirigible was sighted by keen-eyed observers perched at vantage-points about the landing area the Graf was brought down to earth by the accompaniment of mighty cheers.

The Graf was first sighted at 8:25 a. m., soared majestically over the field a few moments later, and at 8:48 a. m. (3:48 a. m. New York Daylight Saving time) had been safely guided to earth by the willing Paris, Sept. 4.—Gossipers are trying hard to wreck the romance of John Gilbert, the perfect lover of the films, and his Hollywood bride, Ina Claire, but take it from Gilbert himself they are not going to succeed.

Furthermore, the Hollywood Romeo wished to make it plain that a husband and wife may have different plans for the evening even if the echoes of the honeymoon bells are still audible.

Mystery Dispelled. A long distance telephone conversation with Gilbert at the Hotel Durbin, at Juan les Pins, on the Mediterranean coast, dispelled the so-called mystery which was said to surround the whereabouts of the honeymooners after they had driven away from their hotel in different motor cars and in different directions last night.

Later in the night both returned to their apartments and to all outward appearances perfect harmony prevailed.

When Gilbert was summoned on the long distance telephone he was told of a report from Cap D'Antibes, indicating that he and his bride had departed from their hotel in a huff.

"These continual queries about divorce have become very annoying," said the famous film exponent of unbreakable romance. "The wedding bells have scarcely been hushed before we were being asked when we would be divorcing each other. The gossipers appear to be trying to push us upon the rocks, but we will thwart them. We have enjoyed a marvellous vacation upon the Riviera.

"Now we are eager for a quiet ten days in Paris. Then we go to London and then we go home. And, believe me, we are going to arrive home together." The Gilberts were married May 10.

TO CRUSH OUT ALL PLANS FOR A "HOLY WAR"

British Military Authorities and Palestine Administration Act to Avert Trouble in Holy Land; Quiet Today

London, Sept. 4.—British military authorities and the Palestine administration moved vigorously today to crush out any plans for a Moslem "Holy War" against Jews and Christians in the Holy Land.

Hundreds of Arabs were arrested in connection with attacks upon Jews in Hebron and Jerusalem. Meetings by Moslems chiefs were forbidden.

Fresh British troops were sent towards Tiberias in Upper Galilee, one of the two danger spots in Northern Palestine. The exact situation in that district is obscure owing to the cutting of telegraph wires. It has been impossible to confirm reports of fighting, following Arab attacks upon Jewish settlements.

PALESTINE CALM Jerusalem, Sept. 4.—With the official British investigation continuing into the recent rioting between Moslems and Jews, Palestine was fairly calm today, with no new outbreaks reported.

Considerable dissatisfaction is expressed among Arabs in Jerusalem over the appointment of Sir John Chancellor, British high commissioner in Palestine, which placed entire blame for the disturbances on the Moslems.

Following the official protest of the Arab executive committee against the commissioner's proclamations, a special emergency meeting of this organization has been called for tomorrow to decide upon further action. Pamphlets are being distributed in the streets protesting the commissioner's attitude, and urging Moslems throughout the world to rise up against the Jews.

Hold Mass Meetings. The gathering of Arabs are being held throughout the land. British airplanes and troops are patrolling the gatherings to prevent outbreak, but observers are fearful that the Arabs may resort to further measures in defense of what they consider their rights.

Delegates to the Arab Congress are enroute to Jerusalem and all parts of Palestine to participate in the meeting.

As things stand at present, the

Premier Forced Down, But Lands Safely

Handling affairs of state in an airy manner, Premier Ramsay MacDonald of Great Britain here is pictured alighting from a plane which brought him to London for a war debt conference. Storms forced down his plane during a hazardous flight from Elgin, Scotland. The air-minded premier is to visit the United States next month for a meeting with President Hoover.

'LET MY BODY BE BURIED IN GERMANY'—EX-KAISER

Wilhelm Makes His Will; Requests That He Be Buried Beside His First Wife in Potsdam.

Berlin, Sept. 4.—To be buried in German soil, at Potsdam, if possible, beside his first wife, Kaiserin Augusta Victoria—this—according to all available information today, seems to be all there is left of the ex-Kaiser's once ambitious dream of being restored to the German throne.

Although the gates to Germany have been flung wide open to him after the repeal of the "protection of the republic law," the "Old Man at Doorn," as the ex-Kaiser has been frequently styled lately, does not contemplate a return to Germany while he is alive. He plans to spend the rest of his days in exile.

Emerson Denied. All reports to the contrary that sprang up once the barriers in the way of his return were torn down, have been denied categorically by the ex-Kaiser's representative in Berlin, whose residence is still in Unter den Linden, the famous Via Triumphalis of many of the ex-monarch's ancestors.

But, from reliable sources, it is understood that William II made a testament providing, among other personal bequests, that his body should be brought back to Germany over the frontier he once crossed in the darkest hour of his life, otherwise so resplendent with glamor and glory.

Provisions of Will. He is said to have laid down in his will the provision that he is to be buried by the side of his late first wife, Kaiserin Augusta, in the Antique Temple, in the beautiful park of Sans Souci Castle, now a

RED TROOPS RAID CHINESE FRONTIER

Kill Two Merchants, Wound Two Guards—Also Loot Considerable Property.

Harbin, Manchuria, Sept. 4.—Soviet troops crossed the Manchurian frontier on the Arguns River, raided Chinese property, killed five Chinese merchants and wounded two guards, according to information received here today from Hallar.

Six of the 18 Chinese stations in the Arguns River area were seized by the raiders.

The Chinese merchants, who tried to resist the raiders, were beaten to death, said reports received here.

The raid was reported by the Chinese commissioner for foreign affairs at Hallar. He added that, after killing the merchants and wounding the order guards, the Soviet troops looted considerable property.

Soviet naval craft are reported to have fired upon Chinese merchant boats, afterwards seizing the cargoes.

BIG AIR LINER WITH 8 ABOARD REPORTED LOST

Missing Since Noon Yesterday; Is Thought Down Somewhere in Arizona or New Mexico.

Winslow, Ariz., Sept. 4.—Lost since noon yesterday the Trans-Continental Air Transport plane "City of San Francisco" was being sought throughout Northern Arizona's storm swept mountains early today with the fate of five passengers and three crew members unknown.

The plane left Albuquerque, N. M., for Los Angeles and vanished after having been sighted at Grants, a small Santa Fe Railway station in the Navajo Reservation, 50 miles east of the Arizona-New Mexico border.

Two scouting planes sent from Winslow had reported the tri-motored air liner after circling far to the south of the Santa Fe main line, which parallels the airway of the Allied T. A. T.

Severe Storms Arizona points reported the most severe electrical and rain storms since 1927 to dispatches to the T. A. T. weather station here. Highways were practically impassable over vast stretches.

All other air passenger traffic had been suspended. A western Air Express plane, Los Angeles to Kansas City, was held at Holbrook, 60 miles east of here, rather than fly through the storm.

Passengers aboard the city of San Francisco were A. B. McGaffey, 1 memberman; Mrs. George B. Raymond, Glendale, Calif.; Wm. H. Bears, New York City; Harris Livermore, Boston, Mass.; M. M. Campbell, Cincinnati, Ohio.

J. E. Stowe was pilot, A. E. Dietel, assistant pilot and C. F. Canfield, courier of the plane.

Five hours fuel supply had been carried from Albuquerque, air line officials said.

As far south as Globe and Springville, gas, sheriffs and cowboys had been warned to search for the missing plane.

McGaffey, whose lumber interests covered practically the entire district in which the plane was last seen, was thought capable of guiding the party to safety in the event of a forced landing.

McGaffey's trading posts dot the Navajo and Zuni Indian reserves of northwestern New Mexico and southwestern Arizona.

Refuge for the passengers and crew was possible at scores of Indian villages and lumber and cattle camps in the water soaked pine and cedar forests of northern Arizona, according to air line officials here.

BODY OF MRS. DAVIS IS FOUND IN RIVER

Springfield, Mass., Sept. 4.—Recovery of the body of Mrs. Bertha Davis, 21, of Springfield, in the Farmington river, Windsor, Conn., three miles south of here, this afternoon solved a mystery prevailing about the body as it lay in underdelighting.

The young woman had been visiting friends in Windsor. She decided to go fishing. Police expressed the theory that, after fishing, she decided to swim, and was drowned. Her outer clothing and jewelry were found on the bank of the river.

FRED PROCTOR DEAD

New York, Sept. 4.—Fred F. Proctor, pioneer vaudeville theater owner, died today at his home in Larchmont. He was 78.

Proctor formerly was a partner of E. F. Keith and at one time, controlled many of the leading vaudeville theaters in the east. He built the well-known Proctor's theater in West 23rd street in 1888 and at one time owned six theaters in New York.

Milford's Boy Burglars Meant To Hunt Indians

Milford, Sept. 4.—Two small boys are being held in the Children's Detention Home at New Haven, awaiting a hearing on a charge of theft. The pair, thirteen and fourteen years old, had a few brief hours of triumph, according to police here, after they stole $450 from the home of David Hall, in Myrtle Beach.

Once they had secured the money the children decided to go west and hunt Indians. Then they set about outfitting, and in so doing spent their roll. They bought two automobiles, paying $30 for one and $40 for the other, cash down to a careless salesman here, and left the cars to be called for. Then they went to Bridgeport and there bought tents, camp cook outfits, bowie knives, and two rifles. They paid ten dollars each for the rifles, and then they were to be called for. They bought khaki suits and broad brimmed hats.

A store clerk finally became suspicious when the lads ordered goods and stripped $45 from a thinning roll to settle the bill. They agreed to call for the goods, and when they did a detective was lying in wait.

Meanwhile Milford police were leaving no stone unturned to find who stole the Hall's money. They finally learned who the burglars were through the Bridgeport police.

'NEW LIGHT ON DREAMS' IS EXPLAINED AT YALE

Scientist from India Tells How to Bring About Pleasant Ones—Male and Female Traits.

New Haven, Conn., Sept. 4.—Out of India today came "New Light on Dreams," brought by R. N. Sarma, of Madras, who addressed a section of the Ninth International Congress of Psychology in session here. "Cultivate the spirit of non-attachment and dreams pleasant and unpleasant are then unnecessary," he summed up his address.

David Sligh, of McGill University, Montreal, told of hallucinations in the same. Most of them, he said, were due to a person being over-tired, and "Sedative" drugs caused the disappearance of the hallucination.

Mabel Emsworth Goudge, of Chapel Hill, North Carolina, had a paper on abnormal psychology in general medical practice, using "Closest co-operation between psychologist and physician" and "establishment of psychological internships in general hospitals."

Child Development Why children behave as they do was the subject of a discussion by Florence L. Goodenough, of University of Minnesota, while S. H. Kirihara of Kurashiki, Japan, related the mental development of the Japanese from childhood to maturity.

Luton Ackerson, of Chicago, also contributed to the child development symposium.

MacDONALD OPTIMISTIC

Three Problems Still to Be Solved Before Five Power Conference Can Be Called, Washington Says; Cruisers Are Still the Bone of Contention.

Washington, Sept. 4.—The British-American naval agreement which is to be made the basis for calling a new five-power disarmament conference, is still "just around the corner."

Premier Ramsay MacDonald's highly optimistic speech before the League of Nations, in which he predicted the agreement would be consummated in three weeks, was distinctly dampened here today by Secretary of State Stimson's cautious rejoinder that "a considerable period of hard work on details is necessary before there can be final agreement on the knotty question of Anglo-American parity."

The apparent conflict between these two positions was explained here today by the statement of one diplomat that "MacDonald sees the mountain top, while Stimson is looking at the road that must be climbed to reach it."

The Situation Today. While Washington privately "deplored" the rosette optimism of the British premier, there nevertheless was no disposition anywhere to hint that the negotiations, having gone so far, would under any circumstances be allowed to fall through at this late stage.

The situation today appeared to be substantially this: 1. "The Statesmen" have agreed upon the broad principles of a naval agreement.

2. "The Experts" have run into disagreement as to how those principles are to be applied to actual tonnage questions.

The hitch lies, it is ever has, in the question of cruisers. On every other question concerned in the naval situation there is substantial agreement.

While officials here professed to be unable to define the "three questions" upon which MacDonald's optimism was based, it is known that they are: (1) the total cruiser tonnage to be maintained by each country; (2) the relation of the small 6-inch gun cruiser to the larger 8-inch gun cruiser; and (3) the allotment of cruiser units to each country in accordance with their relative needs.

Figures Too High. The British have set a total tonnage figure, as the minimum for empire needs, as considerably higher than President Hoover wants to go. They now have, built and building, some 407,000 tons of cruisers, which they require for protection of British sea-lanes and trade routes and interests. However, they have consented to come down somewhat from this figure, through the retirement of some old cruisers.

It was now being carefully guarded, it was reported that the British have never gone below 350,000 tons in their calculations.

This completely knocks out President Hoover's hope for an actual reduction in naval strength. He was hopeful of avoiding the completion of the 15 cruisers ordered by the last Congress, and on which special tracts are now being laid out with the completion of all these 15 vessels, the United States Navy would still be 50,000 tons short of the 350,000 mentioned by the British.

Hence Mr. Hoover's disappointment over this phase of the negotiations.

The question of total tonnage dove-tails into the question of different types of cruisers. Great Britain has forty cruisers, with her cooling inch guns, which, with her cooling stations and naval bases in all parts of the world, are admirable for her purposes. Her experts contend that these vessels "Really should be considered police vessels" because of their small size and armament, and offensive weakness as against the 10,000-ton 8-inch gun cruiser which the American Navy considers more applicable to American needs because of the great distances between American bases and coaling stations.

No Yardstick Yet. The experts have been trying—and not very successfully so far—to establish a yardstick that will measure the strength of these types, for example, two 4,000-ton cruisers, equal to one 10,000-ton cruiser.

At Geneva, two years ago, the American delegation took the blunt

TWO MORE JURORS NEEDED FOR TRIAL

Expect Gastonia Strike Case to Open This Afternoon; Call 150 Witnesses.

Charlotte, N. C., Sept. 4.—Through the testimony of eye-witness and a maze of circumstantial evidence the state will attempt to prove which one of the sixteen defendants charged with murder and conspiracy in the assassination of Police Chief O. F. Aderholt actually fired the fatal shot.

This revelation was made today by Solicitor John M. Carpenter, head of the prosecuting counsel, as he ordered 150 witnesses to report in the court room at 2:30 this afternoon for the opening of the state's case against Fred Irvin, Communist leader of the Gastonia strike and his 15 co-defendants.

Denies Report. In an interview the solicitor emphatically denied a report which gained wide credence that the state had no knowledge of who killed the Gastonia police chief and had no eye-witnesses who could actually identify the slayer.

Beal and the self-styled "class warrior" prisoners are under indictment for both murder and conspiracy to murder in the killing of Aderholt, slain in a police raid on Gastonia strike headquarters. The state will attempt to prove that all the defendants entered into the murder conspiracy.

Beal and the twelve other men it will demand a first degree verdict which automatically carries a death sentence; against the three women—Vera Bush, Amy Schechter and Sophie Melvin, all Communist organizers and propagandists—it will ask only a second degree conviction, which means long imprisonment.

The long procession of state's witnesses may start to stand today this afternoon or it may be tomorrow. It all depends upon when the two remaining jurors are chosen. Opposing counsel this morning buckled down to the task of filling empty seats No. 11 and 12 from a fresh venire of 150 ordered when two panels totaling 500 were exhausted yesterday.

As another day's ritualistic examination started, the state had only 13 of its peremptory challenges left and the defense, which originally held 168, had exhausted all but 59.

DEMONSTRATE VOTING MACHINE SATURDAY

Registrar R. N. Veitch to Aid New Voters Who Have Never Taken Part in Primary.

Registrar of Voters Robert N. Veitch today announced that he will demonstrate a voting machine at the Municipal building here Saturday, September 7, from 10 in the morning until 9 in the evening. The machine will be set up just as it will appear on Primary Day, Tuesday, September 10. Mr. Veitch explained that while it was not obligatory for the registrars to demonstrate voting machines previous to Primary Day he planned to do it as an accommodation for new voters. There are over 2,000 new voters on the lists this year who have never before voted at a Primary.

War to Continue. The tariff war will last throughout the remainder of the special session of Congress, which President Hoover called to solve the farm relief problem. It may even drag on into the next regular session, which starts in December, although administration leaders will direct all their efforts to enactment of the bill at the special session. The prospects of its early enactment were clouded with doubt and many Senators feared the bill would still be before the Senate in the new year despite the threats of some Republican leaders to abandon it next January 1, if it has not become a law by then.

MRS. HERT KEEPS POLITICAL POST

Vice President of Republican National Committee to Remain.

Washington, Sept. 4.—Mrs. Alvin T. Hert is going to remain as vice chairman of the Republican national committee, at least for the time being.

This much has been determined well in advance of the meeting of the Republican national committee next Monday, at which Dr. Hubert Work, the successful engineer of the 1928 campaign, is to lay down his chairmanship in favor of Claudius C. Huston, President Hoover's selection for the job.

Mrs. Hert telegraphed Dr. Work a withdrawal of her resignation as vice chairman, which she tendered some time ago. She did so, she stated, at President Hoover's request.

An Open Secret. While no reason was ascribed for the White House action in asking Mrs. Hert to remain, it is an open secret that party leaders have been greatly embarrassed by the scramble for Mrs. Hert's seat on the part of a number of ambitious Republican women. Candidates have bobbed up in many places since Mrs. Hert announced her intention of retiring, and while the male members of the committee may be brave enough in facing Democrats, they apparently have developed a distinct case of nerves over the prospect of trying to settle a feminine controversy within their own ranks.

Mrs. Worthington Scranton of Pennsylvania, has been one of the leading candidates for the post. She is wealthy, interested in politics, and was an indefatigable worker in the last campaign.

Mrs. Ruth B. Pratt, now Congresswoman from New York, has been considered Mrs. Scranton's chief opponent.

famous sightseeing place for tourists in Berlin.

There are many reasons why the ex-Kaiser might not want to return to the fatherland. He is credited with being too proud to live in a republic, high according to his own views and to those of many monarchists.

Heavy taxation in Germany would also mean an undesirable burden for the ex-Kaiser, who has to support many members of the Hohenzollern family.

FORMER BUCKLAND GIRL MARRIED IN NEW YORK

hands of the expert ground crew. The crowd of unnumbered thousands strained at the barriers thrown up around the hangar, and the special detachments of police assigned to augment the regular field guard encountered considerable difficulty in keeping the throngs back so the Graf could be maneuvered to the ground.

Strict orders had been issued beforehand that no outsiders, even newspapermen, were to be allowed to approach the dirigible until she had been placed in her hangar.

Upon her arrival home today, the Zeppelin and her 22 trans-Atlantic passengers were accorded a reception almost unparalleled in German history.

After passing Santander, the Zeppelin crossed over Bordeaux and then headed northwestward, soaring over Limoges and Dijon to her home base. At every city, village and hamlet, the population turned out in force to greet the mammoth ship.

There was only one factor to mar the triumphant homecoming—the absence in America of Dr. Eckener, who had piloted the great ship on its long and hazardous flight around the world.

Among the crowd, estimated at more than 100,000, which bid the Graf welcome to her homeland were many important government officials, on hand to extend an official reception to the passengers and crew of the liner.

No trip that the Graf ever made before has been less eventful than this flight from Lakehurst. With excellent weather prevailing virtually all the way across the Atlantic, the Zeppelin soared along an uninterrupted pace like a regular liner on a routine run.

Fair weather attended the flight over all of France and Switzerland, and little deviation from the pre-ordained course was rendered necessary.

The Zeppelin will now be overhauled and reconditioned in preparation for numerous other long distance flights which she will be called upon to perform in the near future.

stand that "a cruiser is a cruiser" and declined to admit of any such British argument that a 6,000-ton cruiser, mounting 6-inch guns, is "a police boat."

more hospitable view of the British argument has been taken in the current negotiations, but how far the American position has receded is a matter that thus far has been carefully guarded.

These are the essential points of controversy. Premier MacDonald thinks they will be reconciled in three weeks Secretary Stimson apparently thinks it will take longer. Probably there is some diplomatic jockeying in both camps.

President Hoover held a breakfast conference at the White House this morning with his principal naval advisers.

Present were Secretary Stimson, Secretary of the Navy Adams, Under Secretary of State Cotton, Assistant Secretary of the Navy Jahncke, and a group of admirals who are members of the Naval general board.

The conference lasted about two hours. The naval experts called into consultation included the following admirals: Hughes, chief of operations; Long, who was one of Hugh Gibson's chief advisers at the last Geneva conference; Jackson, Chase, Hough and Reeves; and Captain A. W. Johnson, chief of naval intelligence; Captain Allan Buchanan, White House naval aide; and Commander H. C. Gain, one of the technical advisers at Geneva.

The White House refused comment upon the significance or purpose of the conference.

GERMANY'S VIEWS Berlin, Sept. 4.—Nationalist newspapers, in commenting today upon Premier Ramsay MacDonald's navy disarmament speech in Geneva, maintained that "final peace is impossible without revision of the Versailles Treaty and restoration of German equality."

The whole German press praised MacDonald's speech.

Some newspapermen professed to see an attempt by the British premier to "ally European resentment over the bullying tactics of Philip Siden in the Hague reparations conference."

EARL BALLSIEPER WINS HOLIDAY GOLF MATCH

Earl Ballsieper was the winner of the 18th annual "gold tournament" at the Manchester Country Club course Labor Day. It was on a match play against par basis, three-quarters of the regular club handicap being allowed.

Erlich shot a gross of 79 which was even with his par while John Hyde's 76 was one down. These were the only two scores under eighty. Others finished as follows: J. C. Baker, one down; M. P. Rody, two down; Arthur Williams, three; John Lamenzo, four; Raymond Bowers, four; H. B. House, six; Dr. David Caldwell, seven; Ralph McNally, eight; Paul Ballsieper, eight; Thomas Clark, eight; Dr. Howard Boyd, nine; Dr. A. E. Friend, ten; Dr. Edwin C. APARO-VALENTI

Miss Rose Valenti, daughter of 130 So. Main street, and Anthony Aparo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sebastian Aparo of Washington street, New Britain, were married this morning at St. James's church by the Rev. W. P. Rody. They were attended by Miss Antonette Valenti, sister of the bride, and Joseph Urmano of this town, best man.

The bride wore a period gown of white satin trimmed with lace. Her veil of silk net and lace fell from a lace cap. She carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid wore a nile green chiffon dress and a leghorn hat. Her arm bouquet was of tea roses.

A dinner and reception for 50 followed the ceremony at the church. Guests were present from New Britain, Meriden, Hartford, Bristol, Middletown, and Manchester.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a white gold bracelet set with diamonds and the bride's gift to the bridegroom a white gold ring.

Mr. and Mrs. Aparo left today for a wedding trip to Canada. The bride's traveling costume was a brown crepe and chiffon affair with a brown velvet hat and coat with fox fur boa. On their return they will be at home to their friends after September 25 at their new home on Washington street, New Britain.

The bride has been employed in Cheney Brothers' ribbon mill office, and the bridegroom is an electrician.

BROKEN UP CONCRETE FOR PARK ENTRANCE

Discarded Stone from Main Street Being Unloaded at the End of Trotter Street.

Much of the concrete removed from along the trolley tracks, between the Center and Depot square, by the Edward Balf Company in the reconstruction of Main street, is being carted away by the Park Commission and used for a two-fold purpose.

The large blocks of broken stone are dumped into Center Spring Woods at the lower end of Trotter street to bolster up the sand bank that has been caving in gradually as a result of the severe rain storms.

At the same time the stone is piled to conform with the width of a regular road. This road when completed will meet the wagon road that circles Center Spring Woods and which is being used by the Park Commission when brush is being removed from the Park.

ABOUT TOWN

Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Findlay have returned to their home in Allston after spending a week with relatives in town.

Miss Gertrude Angell of Glenwood street who is to be married on Saturday to Raymond Hagedorn, was showered again last evening at the home of Miss Tillie Russell of 131 Maple street, which was prettily decorated in green.

Mrs. Paxson who is a great lover of flowers, and who cultivates many at her home, was presented with the lily last Easter. She has cared for it diligently and just recently noticed new buds. The blooms are large and perfect. Florists report that because of the excessive heat this evening many plants are blooming a second time.

HEAT CONTINUES

Another new hot weather record for September was forecast this morning when the mercury had risen to 90 degrees. The record here until yesterday was 94.6 degrees, while yesterday the mercury went to 96.2 degrees. Conditions were ripe at noon, the Weather Bureau said, for a decided increase during the afternoon.

For many here, it was the first day of school and the weather made it anything but agreeable. Despite the opening of school, it was reported that there was an unusually large crowd at Globe Hollow. There was a very light breeze, which added to the discomfort.

DEBTS OF CITIES ON THE INCREASE

counties, towns, cities, boroughs and fire districts in the state in 1928 was $123,014,472, the report shows. This figure includes current expenses and reduction of debt. The largest item of expenditure, $27,708,848, was for education. For roads and bridges, local governments spent $16,958,186, and payment of interest on debt required an outlay of $5,480,031.

For police protection of towns, cities, etc., there was spent $4,505,181, and for fire departments $4,933,761, while for recreation active expenses totaled $3,510,363. In charities, there was an outlay of $2,933,761, while for playgrounds, there was expended $2,102,249. In sanitation and health, $3,989,895 was spent, and the cost of maintenance and capital expenditures for public buildings was $5,700,105. The operation of municipal water works, it is shown that receipts $3,445,998, and expenses $4,366,597.

In taxes, there was paid to local governments $84,126,823 through the grand lists during the 1927-28 fiscal period. In addition, special assessments amounted to $1,052,912 and licenses and permit fees totaled $689,346. Court fines and penalties amounted to $492,164.

In anticipation of tax receipts, it is shown that local governments borrowed $28,357,488 and paid back only $23,447,733, resulting in a floating debt of about $5,000,000.

Four towns in the state have the enviable condition of being free from debt. They are Andover, Avon, Goshen, and Scotland. In addition, the boroughs of Bantam, Branford, Newtown, and Unionville and the counties of New London and Middlesex have no debt. Twenty-six fire districts are also in the same class.

MAY LOSE ONE EYE FROM ODD EXPLOSION

Young Russell Nyman Sets Fire to Contrivance That Resembles Army Bomb.

Russell Nyman, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Nyman of Russell street, will probably lose the sight of his left eye as the result of an unusual accident, it was admitted at his home today. The boy is in the Memorial hospital here and it is expected that one eye will have to be removed to save the sight of the other.

The boy met with the injury when some sort of a bomb contrivance exploded, a piece of metal striking him in the eye. A piece lodged in the pupil, three x-ray pictures disclose, and it will be necessary to take the eye from the socket to prevent the other eye from being affected.

Just what type of device exploded is not known. Apparently it was something thrown away by a soldier at the State Armory. At any rate, it was found by boys playing outside the building. They brought it home and the Nyman boy was playing with it. According to his mother it resembled a piece of copper tube. Russell broke it in two and applied a match, the resultant explosion injuring his eye.

MOSKE MAKES UP MIND TO PLAY AT NORTH END

Young Brunig, Star Footballer, Decides He'll Cast His Lot With New Majors.

Following a conference which lasted two hours, it was definitely decided this morning that Brunig Moske, star player on the Cloverleaves, will pasture with the Majors on the gridiron when the season opens within the next few weeks.

Moske had recently announced his intentions of playing with the Cubs, town champions, this season but influential north end supporters induced him to do an "about face" and trot back north again. This news will be of especial interest to football fans here as it assures them of a real battle for the town title at the end of the season.

Moske is considered the best prospect the north end has offered in years and without him their cause would be more or less hopeless. But with Moske back in harness, anything may happen. Moske and Business Manager Jack Copeland were in consultation with Peter J. Vendrillo and Peter J. Happenny, managers of the Cubs this morning and the meeting adjourned with all hands satisfied.

The Majors will practice at 7:30 tonight at Hickey's Grove. All members of the Cloverleaves and North Ends, also any newcomers, are eligible to report for a tryout.

NEW BOAT SCHEDULE BECAUSE OF ACCIDENT

Mention was made in yesterday's Herald of the accident to the Steamer Middletown of the Hartford line which will necessitate her remaining in dry dock for repairs for perhaps 10 days. In conversation with the officials at the State street office it was learned that the Steamer Hartford will leave for New York at the usual time this afternoon, Friday, and Sunday, the alternating days will sail from New York. Next week Tuesday afternoon the steamer will leave the dock at Hartford for New York, again on Thursday the 12th and Saturday the 14th.

They also informed the Herald at the Hartford headquarters that they are continuing to receive freight on the days the steamer doesn't sail, routing it by New Haven boat to Pier 40, and doing everything possible to accommodate patrons while the Middletown is undergoing repairs.

PUBLIC RECORDS

Among the papers filed for record in the town clerk's office this morning were two papers of incorporation for one concern. The first incorporates the Home Electric Appliance Company, Inc., of Manchester and the second was a certificate of change in name and owner. The owners and officers of the company are given as Paul Hillery and his wife and they have changed the name, through consent of the secretary of state to Paul Hillery, Inc.

Marriage Application. Application was filed today with the town clerk for a marriage license by Frank Corder of 35 Pleasant street and Sarah Thrasher of 99 Laurel street.

Mr. and Mrs. John Calve of East Middle Turnpike have been entertaining guests for the week-end and over Labor Day from Union City, N. J., and Long Island City.

TO CRUSH OUT ALL PLANS FOR A "HOLY WAR"

British authority, reinforced by heavy troops detachments, are in complete control of the situation, but the feeling of tension in Jewish colonies throughout Palestine has changed but little.

The British authorities, under the leadership of Sir John Chancellor, are directing their activities toward determining, if possible, whether the bloody outbreaks at Hebron, Safed and other towns were deliberately plotted.

If it is determined that the riots were part of a deep-laid conspiracy, no stone will be left unturned to discover the ring-leaders of the plot, and summary punishment will be meted out.

STORE REPORTS UNUSUAL DUO-DOLLAR BUSINESS

A Main street shoe dealer reported this afternoon that, on the first day of the Duo-Dollar trading enterprise in which a large number of Manchester merchants are sharing, he had sold, up to 2 o'clock this afternoon 197 pairs of shoes, an extraordinary large whole day's business for his establishment.

MERCHANTS PLAN MEETING FRIDAY

To Discuss Store Hours and Possibility of New Road to Glastonbury.

William Rubinow, chairman of the merchants' division of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, has called a meeting of the division for Friday evening at 7:30 in the C. O. rooms in the Dewey-Richman block.

Business to be transacted includes reports of the committee on the merchants' outing and the committee on the Duo-Dollar trading plan. Discussion of the fall and winter schedule of store hours is also on the program. There seems to be some misunderstanding about the schedule a majority of the merchants prefer and this will be settled definitely, it is hoped, at the Friday night meeting.

Another topic for discussion is the proposal to improve the road to Glastonbury. The Herald has long insisted that the prime duty of a Chamber of Commerce was to see that roads leading to the town's trading center from the outlying districts were in good condition. The division is anxious to have all interested in these projects offer their opinions to the meeting.

UP 285 HOURS

Chicago, Sept. 4.—The endurance flyers, Russell Mossman and C. E. Steele passed their 285th hour in the air here today in attempting to shatter the mark of 421 hours set by the pilots of the St. Louis Rob-in.

Notes dropped from the plane "Chicago We Will" indicated the pilots were bothered by the extreme heat. They stated their motor was running smoothly.

YOUNG NERON FREED IN TAXI OFFICE TRICK

Prosecutor Finds Absence of Real Crime Intent and Has Nolle Entered.

The mess into which young Louis J. Neron, then local manager of the City Taxicab Company, got himself recently when he tried to cover up a temporary shortage in his accounts by pretending that the taxi office had been robbed of $12.25 supposed to have been left in a desk, was cleared up this morning when his case was nolle in the police court.

Prosecutor Hathaway told the court that he had come to agree with the claim of Neron's lawyer, W. S. Hyde, that the offense was pretty technical in character and the result rather of over inventiveness than of wrongful intent on the part of the youthful manager.

It was not clear that Neron intended to defraud the taxi company but he was in a sort of muddle from having permitted customers to use taxis on credit when he himself had to make cash returns for all rides. The shortage had eventually been paid and nobody had lost anything.

In view of the circumstances and a doubt as to whether the charge of theft was the right one to apply to the case, even if it were to be prosecuted, the prosecutor had decided that a nolle was the best way to dispose of the matter.

Robert J. Donnelly of Cooper street was found guilty of breach of the peace in the Manchester police court this morning and given a jail sentence of 80 days. The sentence was suspended on condition that he keep away from his family. Donnelly was arrested two weeks ago on complaint of his wife.

SURPRISE PARTY ON SILVER ANNIVERSARY

Mrs. Alfred Anderson of Eldridge street was taken completely by surprise last night when she returned to her home from an auto ride to find about 20 of her friends from Helen Davidson Lodge, Daughters of Scotia, gathered to assist her in celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary of her marriage. Mrs. Anderson is one of the charter members and active in all lodge affairs.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cone, the present chief daughter, with a few appropriate words, presented to Mrs. Anderson a silver casserole with two silver spoons, the gift of her friends. Mrs. Anderson made a fitting response, warmly thanking the ladies for their beautiful gift and the kindly feeling which prompted it.

The evening passed pleasantly with singing, games and a buffet lunch.

RUBINOW'S NEW EVENING GOWNS ARE BACKLESS

According to William Rubinow when a young lady bemoans her fate and says she hasn't a thing on her back she isn't far from wrong, as the latest evening gowns are practically backless to the waist. Flowers and rhinestones, extending from one shoulder down and around the back waistline, are their saving grace. However, the clusters of flowers and bows are pretty enough to excuse this thrifty omission.

What the market affords in formal wear for the Miss, has been more or less thoroughly discussed in former reports on better dresses. Still, there is much to be said on this subject, and the following notations, which were jotted down during our numerous visits to the showrooms, bear us out in this statement.

With the tight, fitted lines so much in favor, it is only natural that the soft, pliable materials find themselves the first choice in this seasons offerings. As a result, Fawns and transparent velvets are to be seen most frequently, with Poir de Soir (both plain and printed) a good second. Flat Crepe and chiffon, of course, cannot be neglected, and they are also a target for the clinging, fitted-line vogue of the moment. They serve their purpose from the dignified formal evening gown, to the simple unadorned afternoon frock.

DEPRIEST

We are becoming increasingly doubtful whether the Negro race, from its single member of Congress, is receiving the best possible representation before the American public. Congressman DePriest, has assumed the very responsible task of speaking for the American Negro in the latter's political relations, and because the colored people of the country have not had so authoritative a spokesman in an official sense, in a long time, whatever he says is receiving very close attention. He was ably abetted, though unintentionally, by those persons who protested against the inclusion of the Negro representative's wife among the invited guests at Mrs. Hoover's reception to the women folk of members of Congress. Very few new representatives in Congress enter official life with such excellent breaks for the obtaining of public notice.

Mr. DePriest has made so many speeches in various parts of the country, since entering Congress, that it is possible to get a pretty good line on him. He is, quite obviously, a man of excellent intellect and of much more than the average amount of force. He is, moreover a clear and consecutive public speaker, if the published reports fairly represent his utterances, which we have no doubt they do.

DePriest is not in the least to be blamed for being, in his political outlook and purposes, very much Negro indeed. He is not to be blamed for a very frank streak of bitterness. He is hardly to be blamed for the ruthless way in which he proposes to sacrifice the happiness of boys of his own race by appointing them successively to West Point. If there were any real evidence that DePriest was an idealist, that he was animated by the single purpose of gaining for his people that measure of equal rights to which the Constitution entitles them but which they certainly do not receive, his bitter accentuation of racial feeling would be justified. But the trouble is that he does not appear to be urged on by quite such fine impulses as these. Every now and then he says something that indicates that there is a bit of the blatherskite about him; that he is a little less eager for even handed justice for Negroes than he is for political opportunity for DePriest; and that he isn't very logical.

The latter is not essentially a Negro falling; there is no more logical race than the Ethiopian. Perhaps it is the very considerable white strain in DePriest that is to blame for his shortcomings. At any rate, it sounded harshly on the ears of those who wish well to the Negro people to have their chief spokesman declare at Waterbury the other night, "To the victor belongs the spoils." This he asserted in justifying his policy of ignoring the whites in his own district because they had opposed his election. Whatever he can do in the getting of political rewards he proposes to get for Negroes, who have stood by him.

It comes with rather poor grace, from such an advocate of the devastating theory that minorities have no rights, to complain of the application of that theory to the Negroes of the country as a whole. They are a very decided minority. If the color line is to be drawn as DePriest seems to favor its drawing, then the political future of the Negro seems likely to remain just what it has been—very close to zero. In his district in Chicago, perhaps in one or two Congressional districts in New York City, the Negro is in the majority. Almost everywhere else in the North he is hopelessly outnumbered. All the white politician has to do is to turn DePriest's spoils creed back on him and he is all done and washed up as a gainer of recognition for the Negroes.

One other thing he does which is not going to increase his evaluation outside of his own district. He confesses himself a disciple of Big Bill Thompson. He could hardly have made any other admission which would more completely discredit him.

On the whole, it would seem rather unfortunate for the Negroes of the country that they haven't had the luck to elect some less "practical" politician to be their sole representative in Congress.

A LIVE ISSUE

If, in the present contest for nominations for membership in the Manchester Board of Selectmen there are candidates who seek an effective issue, the Herald will submit to them that there is an excellent one lying fallow—the attitude of the Connecticut Company toward its responsibilities as they relate to local transportation by motorbus on the lines abandoned as to trolley service.

This morning when the 8:15 o'clock bus from Depot Square reached the Center it contained 57 paying passengers.

It was designed to carry 29.

This in spite of the fact that the officials of the Connecticut Company could not possibly have failed to know that during the summer vacation this bus has been carrying passengers to the limit of its seating capacity and often a number of strap hangers, or that with the opening of the schools at the south end today there was certain to be a heavy addition to the amount of traffic.

The indifference of the Connecticut Company to the interests or well being of its traveling public has been so notorious for many years that there was nothing surprising about its allowing today's intolerable condition to create itself. There will be no surprise if it continues to run its buses, jammed to this outrageous and perilous extent, right along—if permitted to do so.

There is just one source to which the people of this community, in their relationships to the Connecticut Company, have a right to look for championship—the Board of Selectmen. Neither this town nor any other community in the state can expect to get proper service from the Connecticut Company except at the end of a fight. It is, in every case, up to the local government to make that fight. There is nobody else to do it.

The position of the Connecticut Company is not invulnerable. It is a very serious question whether it has any hard-and-fast right to a monopoly of the bus transportation business on the streets of Manchester. That it has a pretended right everybody knows—but the value of the pretense is open to interpretation by the Supreme Court of the State of Connecticut. There are inherencies at issue—and one of them is the right of the town to demand and receive adequate service in compensation for acquiescence in any monopoly.

SPEED—HOORAY!

Loud cheers greet every demonstration of increased speed. The world made a big noise over railroad trains; it is making a bigger one over the automobile, the 21-days-around-the-globe flight of Graf Zeppelin, the prospect of a 400-mile-an-hour plane, the outboard motor boat, lightning communication by radio from the poles, etc. When a machine does something in a minute that it used to take a man all day to do, that kind of speed is hailed with especial delight. We congratulate ourselves on the enrichment of life that comes through faster performance.

It is a bit to be wondered over, however, whether the same delighted acclaim will greet the assertion of Prof. Chester Hume Forsyth of Dartmouth that instead of rapidly growing longer the span of life in the United States is lessening at a really alarming rate—that, in other words, we are hustling through the world faster than ever before and getting done with life with a celerity in keeping with our improved methods of traveling over the ground or water or through the air.

Dr. Forsyth has figured out his statistics from about every possible angle and shows pretty conclusively that most of the tables of figures which have represented the span of life as increasing have gained all their strength from the inclusion of the vital statistics of young children. There has been, of course, in recent years, a tremendous saving of infant lives. This saving it is, and this alone, according to the Dartmouth professor, that has lent color of truth to the claims of improvement in the average length of life. The expectancy of life on the part of adults, however, is less than it was thirty years ago. The expectation between DePriest's spoils creed back on him and he is all done and washed up as a gainer of recognition for the Negroes.

One other thing he does which is not going to increase his evaluation outside of his own district. He confesses himself a disciple of Big Bill Thompson. He could hardly have made any other admission which would more completely discredit him.

On the whole, it would seem rather unfortunate for the Negroes of the country that they haven't had the luck to elect some less "practical" politician to be their sole representative in Congress.

WEATHER

So far, this extraordinarily hot spell has been remarkably free from the evil effects on health which customarily follow in the wake of several degrees of ninety-plus temperatures. Two separate causes probably contribute to the relative smallness of the list of sunstroke deaths and prostrations—lack of great humidity and the fact that a long succession of cool nights during August has repeatedly fortified the systems of the people against the exhausting effects of the present daytime temperatures. We are getting a sample of torrid zone weather—devastating heat during the day with a sudden fall in temperature as soon as the sun goes down. Millions of people thrive all their lives under such conditions. Human beings can stand a tremendous amount of hot weather in the daytime if night brings relief.

A good deal more serious than the hot wave, however, is the continuation of the drought, fast becoming a grave matter throughout New England. With drying winds, disappearing brooks, lakes and ponds down to shallows unknown in a lifetime, there is growing apprehension of heavy loss to thousands of farmers' and even of the failure of numerous municipal water supplies.

However, we have had droughts before—some of them closely approaching this one in gravity. And always, just at the time when it seemed as though New England were in danger of becoming arid country, have come the blessed rains. Nobody really doubts that they will come again, soon, and long before any part of this lovely region of ours has suffered permanent damage. Likely enough by this time next year very few New Englanders will be able to tell you whether it didn't rain at all between Memorial day and fair time or whether it rained every day.

REDUCING THE LEGS

Many of the young women who are anxiously writing me, inquiring as to the best way to reduce, would be perfectly willing to let Shylock take his pound of flesh; if only he would take two pounds, and take it from their thighs or calves.

How many times one sees a woman, attractive in every other way except that the calves, ankles or thighs are too heavy. When fat accumulates in some one portion of the body rather than being distributed evenly over its entire surface, it is an indication that the circulation is defective through the fatty areas.

In these days when walking is not very fashionable, and we find as many who are highly overweight as we do who are thin. The fat has a tendency to seek out the legs as a resting place, where it is perfectly revealed through sheer silk hose. It is no substitute for exercise to keep the legs shapely. Walking, swimming and dancing are all beneficial and safe exercises for keeping the lower leg muscles in proportion to the rest of the body. If persisted in, will bring about a most satisfactory change in the contour of the lower limbs. If hikes were more fashionable, they would do a great deal to leg beauty of America. Dancing, whether of the ballroom type, the aesthetic, or the acrobatic, will not only be found enjoyable but will have a beneficial effect upon the leg muscles. Swing dancing, which is highly recommended for leg muscles, since the kicking movement used from the various strokes employs all of the leg muscles and tends to normalize the making of smooth muscles without any bulging of line.

When the leg muscles have not been used for a long time they lose their tone and will seem stiff and unwilling to do their first job when they begin doing them, but once you have taken them through the preliminary training, their strength will be increased, and you will find it a positive joy to indulge in any form of swing, light movement, such as dancing, playing tennis or handball.

Where the legs have really become clogged with fat, it is some times advisable to use other methods of circulation. Among the simpler methods which can be employed are alternate hot and cold applications, massage and vibrators.

I never advise "putting" upon fatty tissue for its removal unless it is in the form of unsightly circumscribed fatty tumors. One should also be very careful to use a well balanced diet to keep the blood in a good condition so that it will dissolve and carry away the fatty deposits. Those who have unshapely masses of fatty tissue are usually those who over-indulge in starchy foods, and do not employ enough of the fruits and salads.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Cornbread)

Question: Mrs. J. asks:—"What is the food value of cornbread made from unbleached, cornmeal?"

Answer: The unbleached, unrefined cornmeal is a healthful food and is placed in the starchy class the same as all grain foods. When this bread is used it should be taken in combination with the non-starchy vegetables and not with meat, fish, or fowl. (Childbirth)

Question:—M. M. C. asks:—"Will you please write an article giving your views on childbirth (first child) at the age of 39 as compared with the woman of 29? It is exceedingly risky for a woman to bear her first child after the age of 35? Please also state if you think a woman who has had a sedentary life is taking a greater chance than the woman who has led a more active life."

Answer:—Theoretically, it should be more difficult to bear a child at the age of 39 than at 29, but by actual observation I have found that the woman at the older age can have almost a painless childbirth if she will diet and exercise properly during pregnancy. Some of the greatest births I have observed have been with women around 40 who have trained properly for this important event in their lives. (Fruits)

Question:—T. H. G. writes:—"Kindly state in the column what fruits do not contain acid. Or, if all fruits do contain acids, does cooking destroy it? I would like to eat fruit, but cannot if they contain acids, so I am very desirous of knowing which fruits do not contain acid, either cooked or uncooked."

Answer:—Fruit acids are changed somewhat by cooking. Also, dried fruits contain less acid than when fresh. Many people are afraid of using fruit because of the acid, but could do so if they understood how to use the fruits properly. It is better to use only the sweetest fruits with meals, and take fresh fruits by themselves, making an entire meal of one kind of fruit. Practically all fruits contain some acid, but because of their effect upon increasing the flow of bile their anal reaction in the body is alkaline. If you have over-acidity of the stomach, you will find that a fruit fast of a few days will greatly benefit you.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 4.—Just a few steps from the spot where the modern Croesus has his castles, you'll find America's best Toomerville trolley.

It may not make all trains, but it makes all stops and its typical of the incongruity of Manhattan that a good old one man trolley line should operate through some of Manhattan's most hectic highways, winding up its run at Cortland street in the shadow of the steel giants of lower New York.

Some have called it the "phantom trolley," for seldom does it carry passengers. Most folks have no time to dawdle along in an old caboose, preferring subways and taxicabs. But this relic of another day keeps in operation because the car company doesn't want to lose a franchise.

Daniel Connors is the veteran navigator. In the best tradition of the rural one-horse cars he takes it to the barn and puts it to bed about 6 o'clock in the evening—the franchise agreement having been kept unless, of course, traffic demands another run. "Few trips from Cortland street to the edge of the Polo Grounds rate better than 15 cents.

The latest addition to Manhattan's street sights is a sun-burned young man, whose name might well be Ginsberg, garbed in full feathers and warpaint of an Indian chief, who acts as the "bal-lyhoo" man for a new restaurant on 33d street.

Also, just a few nights ago, a Broadway motion picture and portum introduced the "living electric sign," which had its birth in Hollywood. The "living sign" consists not only of the usual flare of bright lights, but added to this a complete chorus of girls, dressed in the "very very" style. But New York's climate being more uncertain than California's, the first night out came a rainstorm and so ruffled their plumage and so drenched their more-or-less tight, much to the amusement of the street crowds, and finally had to retire from their perches.

And speaking of bal-lyhooos, Luna Park has an old-fashioned tramp cyclist to work the "bal-ly" in front of the innumerable sidewalk concessions, and help attract the crowds from one place to another. Despite his make-up, it seemed to me this particular "bal-ly" showed a wit that is not in keeping with a trick cyclist—that is to say, it was fast approximating the girth of M. Paul Whitman. Making inquiry, I learned that this gent was none other than one Harry Fisher, who 30 years ago was the daredevil who rode down the chute-the-chutes on a bicycle, a very breath-taking stunt in those days.

But that was before a new generation learned to walk on its hands, up the wings of a soaring airplane.

He's been in burlesque for years—and now, with age creeping on, he's back at the old bal-lyhoo. "The show racket's like that.

And speaking of girls, there's a gag going around to the effect that when Whitman went on the 18-day diet he lost three muscians.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY

FRANCE TURNS REPUBLICAN

On Sept. 4, 1870, the third Republic was declared in France. Rarely has the bubble of power been so suddenly pricked as in Imperial France of that year.

After a series of defeats suffered by Napoleon, in the Franco-German war, the Corps Legislatif declared the emperor and his descendants forever excluded from the throne and created a Government of National Defense.

France was proclaimed a republic and a period of stress and disorder ensued. An armistice in January, 1871, was followed by the meeting of the First National Assembly of the Third Republic at Bordeaux.

A preliminary treaty of peace with Germany was signed at Versailles and ratified by the assembly. France ceded Alsace, together with parts of Lorraine, to Germany and agreed to pay an indemnity of 5,000,000,000 francs.

A violent outbreak of the Commune, who feared the assembly was hostile to the republic, convulsed France in the spring of 1871, but was suppressed.

On Aug. 31, M. Thiers, who had been elected Chief of the Executive by the assembly in February, was granted the title of president of the republic.

City Court Cases

Five cases were brought before Judge John E. Fisk Tuesday in the Everett City Court.

Everett Jacobs, charged with hunting without a license, was fined $1 and costs of $11.31 which he paid. He was brought into court through a complaint of the county game warden. Jacobs was shooting frogs and claimed that he did not know that a license was necessary.

Henry Starkweather and Joseph Morrell, both of Manchester, were in court on complaint of the game warden, charged with operating a 40-foot net in Bolton Pond, without permit. They had a permit for the Rockaunum river but not the Bolton Pond. They were fined $2 each and divided the costs of $15.31 which they paid.

Robert A. Brown of Ellington was summoned to appear in court by State Policeman Charles Dailey, charged with the violation of the motor vehicle law in operating an unregistered car. He was fined $10 and costs, amounting to $21.31.

John Oik of this city, who was arrested at 3:30 o'clock Tuesday morning by Officer Stanley Kulo charged with intoxication and assault and battery, was fined $1 on each charge, together with the costs of $9.78 making a total of $11.78.

To Receive Instructions

Fred Kuene, caretaker for several years at Rockville's filtration plant at the west end of the city, accompanied by Superintendent of Public Works George B. Milne, left Tuesday for Passaic, N. J., where the former will remain three weeks. While there Mr. Kuene will be given detailed instructions in the operation of the reconstructed filtration plant. This is according to the contract the city made with the engineers, Taylor and Knight. It is believed the reconstruction, if given proper care and attention, will serve the city of Rockville satisfactorily for an extended period.

Grass Fire Tuesday

On Tuesday afternoon the Fitch truck of the Rockville Fire Department, with assistant Fire Chief William Conrady in charge, responded to a brush fire in the Rock Jot, just beyond Gaynor place. The fire had gained much headway and when neighbors found they could not extinguish the blaze a still alarm was sent in. It was necessary to use one can of chemicals. With the aid of brooms, members of the department and others on the scene soon had the fire under control. The truck was on the scene for nearly a half hour. It is thought the blaze was started by children.

Many Heads Will Fall At Pebble Beach Today

Play in National Amateur Golf Championship Will Prove Whether Jones Can Keep His Crown.

BY DAVIS J. WALSH

Pebble Beach, Del Monte, Cal., Sept. 4.—Heads will fall in great profusion today under the pitiless guillotine that operates as an 18-hole match play round in the National Amateur Golf Championship. They will be human heads, perhaps royal heads; for even Robert T. Jones, Jr., the fool-proof golfer of the ages, is not immune to this gripping consumption type of competition in the championship, and, by night fall, it is possible that Jones may be merely a name that you find in the city directory.

The 18-hole match is the only thing in connection with a golf course for which Jones has the slightest respect. He knows he will qualify; he is reasonably certain of winning any 36-hole match. But when they play the thing on the basis of a 4 1/2 inning game, the automaton is revealed for what he really is; a human being after all who is subject to the fears and fancies of ordinary men. Jones frankly looks upon 18-hole matches with distaste and if he wins the first of these this morning, he will face another this afternoon.

Strong Opponent
In the former, he will play John Goodman, of Omaha, former trans-Mississippi champion, and every inch a golfer. This match will begin at 10:10 o'clock and end about 12:30 and every minute of the event won't seem any longer than a week to the champion. And he comes by this tendency honestly. He is the only Dick Jones in the first round, and he is on the final hole; in 1927, Maurice McCarthy had him 2 down with a few holes to go, forcing Jones to win on the final green again; last year R. R. would have been the winning putt on the eighteenth, the pair playing an extra hole before Jones won.

The second round of 18 holes in the afternoon usually is a more simple plied matter to Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, in the sixth round. At Jones bats Goodman, he will be asked to face the winner of the Finlay-Little match and at least one of these, Finlay, is one of the coming golfers of the age.

Today Important
Anyhow the two rounds today figure to determine definitely whether this championship is to be another field day for Jones or his last six starts in the field after the attempt to win in the infancy. Once launched into the 36-hole affairs that begin tomorrow, it is believed that Jones will take his field like lead water takes lardum. There were 32 left in the field after Eddie Held had a play-off for the last qualifying place from Francis Brown, Don Armstrong and C. A. Griswold late yesterday afternoon.

They were naturally the best of a great field and, therefore, good men before the ordinary meaning of the term, since they outlasted such as Chick Evans, the Canadians, Carick and Somerville; Frank Dulp, D. Clarke Corkran, George Dawson, Lord Charles Hope, Gortliffe, Allen Moser, the Ritchies, George and Jim; Bob Stein, Clarence Wolf; Rudy Knepper, Jack Neville and others. In fact, the surviving elect included Cyril Tolley, British champion; Gene Homans, the joint medalist; Jess Sweetser, former champion of America and England; George Von Elm, the No. 2 amateur of the world; T. A. Bourne, former French champion; George Voigt, 1928 medalist and semi-finalist; Jimmy Johnston, Eustace Storey, of England; Francis Outmet and Phil Finlay, among others.

Great Golfers
Great golfers, yes. But human golfers. Jones is humbled only until he steps upon the first tee. He may be beaten over the 36-hole distance but nobody is betting it that way; that is, not unless somebody else money is being used.

So today is to be the great convincer as far as the case of the people versus Jones is concerned. The first round will get under way with the Cyril Tolley-Eddie Held match at 9 o'clock. The remaining fifteen matches will follow in five-minute intervals with Jones deep down in the lower half of the draw.

This also happens to be the

SETTLING THE POINT IN GOLF

TWO PUTTING RULES

Confusion on the putting green often arises because two rules covering putts seem to conflict. Rule 31 (2) states: On the putting green, if a player play when the opponent should have played the stroke may be recalled by the opponent and the ball replaced. Under "Special Rules for Match Play Competition," Rule 1 states: On the putting green, if the competitor whose ball is nearer to the hole play first, his ball shall be the one replaced. The penalty for such a breach shall be disqualification of both competitors. The two rules are not contradictory. One permits the opponent to call a stroke; the other DEMANDS that the ball be replaced.

Last Night Fights

At Boston—Jack Zeramy, Lynn, won on a foul from Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, in the sixth round. At Newark—Frank Monto, Madison heavyweight, knocked out Frank (Cowboy) Willis, Tacoma, in second round.

Joe Christoff, Elizabeth and Tommie Blake, Newark, fought six rounds to a draw. At New York—Sid Terris, New York lightweight and Pete Nebo, Seminole Indian fought ten rounds to a draw.

Dominick Petrona, Harlem, knocked out Lou Moscovitz, Bronx, in the tenth and final round. Sailor Matty, Shenandoah, Pa., won ten round decision from Joe Salina, Brooklyn. At Jersey City—Arthur Dekuh, New York heavyweight, knocked out Joe Boynton, Texas, in third round.

At Poughkeepsie—Matty Mario, Staten Island, outpointed Bailly Algiers in ten rounds. At Toronto—Red Bragan, Toronto welterweight, won 8 round decision from Alex Hart, Philadelphia. At New York—Art de Champlaine defeated Jacinto Valdez in eight rounds.

tougher half, for his immediate neighbors include Voigt, Johnston, Don Moe, Storey, Outmet and Finlay, whereas the upper half has Tolley, Dr. Willing, Sweetser, Von Elm and John McHugh as its headliners.

The first round matches not already mentioned include the following: Fay Coleman versus Gene Homans; Dr. Willing versus Dan Sangster; C. X. Hunter versus T. A. Bourne; Sweetser versus Ralph Hoffman; A. G. Hugh versus John E. Lehman; Von Elm versus Chandler Egan; Rudie Wilhelm versus Lee Pendergrass; Voigt versus Vince Dolp; Moe versus Jack Gaines; Johnston versus John de Paolo; Roland Mackenzie versus Storey; Outmet versus Dave Martin and Clarence Hubby versus Gibson Dunlap.

All are at 18 holes, meaning that strong men will be headed without warning. For if the curtailed distance is tough for Jones it naturally follows that it is tougher than a night in jail to the rest of them.

MAP OF THE LINKS

TWO GREATEST RIGHTEANDERS TO CLASH IN WORLD SERIES

George Earnshaw of the Philadelphia Athletics and Guy Bush of the Chicago Cubs, the two greatest righthanders in baseball today, will come face to face in the world series this fall.

That is, of course, if the Cubs and A's go through with their present purpose of running away from the rest of the teams which seems a foregone conclusion.

Where do we get that two greatest pitchers stuff? How do we figure these guys ahead of Lefty Grove, Earnshaw's teammate, and Burleigh Grimes of the Pittsburgh Pirates? One moment, while little Peaches changes her costume and we shall attempt to explain.

A glance at the record will tell you who is doing the most effective pitching job in the National League. Up until very recently Bush had lost but one game, although Lefty Grove, who has been the best pitcher in the league, has lost 15, which indicates that winning 20 games will be a dead cinch for "Mississippi Guy."

And the 30 mark is by no means out of his reach when you consider that as a rule Bush is a late starter and usually does his best work at the far end of the grind.

He was a very good pitcher last year. And plenty good the year before that. But Guy has been constantly improving his percentage and he should be in full stride when the bell rings for the series. Of course, always keep in mind that the Cubs must win the pennant first.

Earnshaw's case is more sensational. He was not expected to bear the brunt of the work when the season started. He had only joined the Athletics in mid-season last year, although Connie Mack said he was a very bright prospect, little did anyone figure he would take play away from Grove and Walberg, the two great southpaws.

STELLAR DEFENSE AND GRIT EARN 6-2, 5-7, 6-2 VICTORY

Along toward the end of the year some sports writer will seat himself in front of a typewriter and will be practically sure to discover that 1929 has been a banner year in the world of sports.

Worse guesses, including this writer's choice of the Yanks and Giants for the world series, have been made. For sports this has been a healthy year, and after the football returns are in, anyone can safely call this one of sports' greatest years, without his tongue in his cheek.

Walter Hagen won the open golf championship of Great Britain. Bobby Jones attained greater golfing heights than he reached before by winning the national open. International events took on an added thrill when a crew of boys from the Brown-Nichols school went to England to win the Thomas Challenge Cup.

Hope for America abroad in tennis was aroused when Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn were triumphant in the Wimbledon doubles.

A GREAT RACE HORSE
Blue Larkspur ran the mile in 1:36 in the Withers, and took down the three-year-old championship after an initial loss in the Kentucky Derby. The sport of kings took on a new life throughout the country as rivaling golf and baseball in the amount of money spent, wagered won by owners and breeders.

In one respect the year has brought forth disappointment. No new Jack Dempsey has come striding into the national spotlight, and affairs in the heavyweight division are in a rather tawdry state. Max Schmeling, the gentleman from Hamburg, Germany, in his few fights in this country, but not enough to warrant the forecast that he will be a great heavyweight. Certainly, no pair capable of drawing the gates that Dempsey used to get has appeared on the boxing scene.

Tommy Loughran has gone up into the heavyweight ranks, but Tommy never has been noted as a puncher, and that is what the division needs.

THE WILLS SUPREMACY
Helen Wills, six times national champion, proved this year clearly that she dominates in her department. On the men's side there has been a great deal of uncertainty and quite a few upsets, an indication that the old leaders are being dethroned and a new crop of stars is ripening.

The Cubs and Athletics offer the prospect of a great world series. The two teams seem more evenly matched than has been the case since Washington and Pittsburgh fought it out in a long series in which Walter Johnson made his last heroic gesture on the mound.

On the cinder path, George Simpson was clocked in the marlous time of 9 2/5 for the 100 yards, a goal that sprinters have been trying to attain for years. Simpson's feat may not be officially recognized, but the sport world will officially accept him as "the fastest human."

NEW GRIDIRON RIVALRY
In football the powerful teams of the south and Pacific coast took their place this year before the strong teams of the east and west. The old inter-sectional rivalry between east and west is heightened by the addition of these two sections. The best teams in the Pacific region and south of the Mason-Dixon line are out to prove themselves the equals if not the superiors of the old leaders. They will make a strong bid.

Football Briefs

New York, Sept. 4.—With the greater part of last year's squad in tact, Coach Frank Cavanaugh's team will have little time in getting his Fordham university hopefuls down to real work. Following a few days of grass drills the men will begin scrimmaging.

Cape May, N. J., Sept. 4.—After a day of nothing more than running and panting the 46 man University of Pennsylvania football squad will today begin more strenuous work. Backfield men predominate this year's squad.

Farmingdale, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Only the fact that nearly every man of the New York University squad reported here in great shape can account for the fine way they are bearing up under the hard driving of Coach Chloik Meehan and his assistants. Snapping his fingers at the heat wave Meehan has had his men hitting the dummy for long periods at a time, running through signals, and practicing the niceties of the game.

West Point, N. Y., Sept. 4.—Army gridmen will do little more than calisthenics until the weather becomes cooler, carrying out the behest of Coach Cliff Jones that hard-pre-season work under a blazing sun injures a player's future chances.

Unfailing Accuracy Instrumental In Champion's Triumph; Bissell Lacks Fighting Heart and Confidence; Greatly Annoyed by Winner's Continual Lobbing; Greer Defaults to Jesanis.

BY TOM STOWE

In much the same manner as David slew Goliath with his little sling-shot, Ty Holland, defending town tennis champion once again put an end to the victory march of his ancient rival, Sherwood "Cap" Bissell, last night in the semi-finals of the men's elimination tournament at the High school court. A gallery of nearly 300 persons watched the champion throw Bissell completely off his game with countless high and well-placed shots that annoyed the challenger beyond measure and kept him away from the net. This stroke, coupled with an almost airtight defense, enabled the two-handed star to win, by a score of 6-2, 5-7, 6-2. The match was a repetition of last year's finals between the two same players, Bissell making the same mistake—playing Holland's own soft game instead of driving in his usual manner.

The victory gave the Holland family an even break for the day. In the morning Mr. Holland, Bobby Jones' champion, was defeated by Miss Ruth Behrend defending women's champion, in the semi-finals of the women's tournament. Both defending champions have now reached the finals but are assured of excellent opposition, their opponents standing a splendid chance of winning. Miss Elizabeth Washkewich will meet Miss Behrend while Paul Jesanis will meet Holland.

Greer Defaults
Greer had intended to go through with his match with Jesanis tonight but after attempting to warm up this morning, he said it was out of the question. He said he was unable to lift his arm above the shoulder to serve and it also seriously affected his starting. Rather than make a default of the match, Greer decided to default. "If I tried to play, the crowd wouldn't like the match and neither would Paul or I, so what's the use. I'll just have to call it quits for the season but he'll be back next year with the better man win." Greer's right shoulder was injured in practice yesterday morning, several muscle fibers being torn from the strain of an overhead smash.

Bissell had entered with night's match with his hopes of winning man at the finish. "I'm all done with tennis," he remarked to the writer. "It's going to be golf for me here after." Bissell admitted that he was guilty of the mistake as last year and said he just simply can't play against Holland's style of game. He added that he had a feeling before the match that he was going to get "hooked."

Jacked Out
Personally, I thought that Bissell lacked fighting spirit and confidence more than anything else. He seemed to lose heart every time that Holland forged ahead. On the other hand, the challenger was full of fight from start to finish. The majority of the crowd was pulling for a Holland victory and this, too, seemed to annoy Bissell when it should have made him fight. All the harder "Cap" had many friends in the gallery but it was Holland's spectacular defensive efforts that won him the admiration of the majority.

Bissell started strong against Holland taking a love game at the champion's service and following this with a deuce game on his own. But with a two game lead, he seemed to fold up like a tulip at sundown. Holland took the next six games in a row, only one going to Bissell. Many players argue "win the first two games and the set is yours" but this was entirely amiss last night.

Comes To Life
In the second set, Bissell seemed to come to life and his supporters began to have hope again. Holland was taking more chances and this didn't help his cause any. The second set was a nip and tuck affair, first one player winning a game and then the other. Games were tied at one, two, three, four and five and the Bissell took the necessary two in a row. Holland lost his own service by hitting out of bounds and Bissell won his through three pretty placements. It was the first set Holland had lost in his last 20 of tournament play.

The third set, however, found Holland back at his old favorite style of play and Bissell the usual victim. Ty rolled off a 4 to 1 lead and then Bissell won a game. Holland drove over a pair of aces in the next important game to increase his lead to 5-2 and then took a love game at Bissell's own service. Single game went to deuce in the deciding set!

Much More Accurate.
Taken as a whole, Holland was twice as accurate as Bissell in his returns and also played a heady game. At times both men had each other running all over the courts. There were spirited rallies which drew heavy applause. From a standpoint of good tennis, the match was not so hot, but it certainly was mighty interesting to those who have followed the Bissell-Holland matches of past years. For many in the crowd, it was the first time they had seen Holland in action. They expressed amazement at the super-brilliant defense and splendid all-around game the champion puts up in his own unique and unorthodox style.

Bissell was forced to taste a sort of double defeat. Not only did he lose the match, but was also forced to beat himself, which naturally made the medicine much more bitter to swallow. Bissell made more placements, but fully five times as many errors. Holland was credited with six aces and Bissell three while the latter made four double-faults compared to two for Holland. Holland made a total of 95 points, 16 more than Bissell's 79.

The SHINING TALENT

By ELEANOR EARLY

CHAPTER XLVIII

Red had promised to come immediately. Molly paced up and down the hall, wringing her hands. Sometimes she pressed her fingers to her lips to stifle the screams that were in her throat.

"Oh, God," she prayed, "don't let him keep Rita. Please don't let him keep her."

When the bell rang, she rushed past Natsu, to open the door herself. To her utter amazement, it was not Red—but Jack—who she admitted.

"I've read Ashes of Desire," he announced surprisingly.

And, stepping in, he closed the door behind him.

"You've what?" she cried.

"Read Ashes of Desire," he repeated patiently. "Your book. I never read it before, Molly."

She stared at him.

"I don't know what you're talking about," she told him foolishly. "Rita's gone, Jack. Bob's taken her away. What shall I do?"

"Rita?" he repeated. "I didn't come to talk about Rita."

Natsu and Marie had disappeared, and the two were alone. Simply, as though he had done it only yesterday, Jack put out his arms. And, straightway, like a child, Molly nestled in their circle.

"Dearest!"

He held her closely, as though he could never let her go.

"I don't understand," she murmured. "Did Red send you? Do you know about Rita?"

He shook his head.

"No, darling. I went back to New York, when I learned you had left town. I didn't even want to see you, nor hear of you again. Red Flynn had sent me Ashes of Desire. I never meant to read it. I meant to return it to him. But last night—oh, Molly, it was an awful night! It poured and poured, and the wind howled, and I didn't want to think about you. I darn near went crazy, trying to forget you. Then I picked up your book, and I glanced through it."

"My Lord, Molly, I hadn't read a dozen pages, when I realized! You wrote that book for me, didn't you?"

"I couldn't have bought the little gift I got for you."

From his pocket he drew seven small white boxes.

"Wait a minute, until I get them in order. I'll bet you no other girl ever had an engagement ring like this before. Here you are—here's the D."

"A diamond circle!" she cried.

"Oh, Jack, that's beautiful! It's like a little wedding ring."

"Put it on," he ordered. "Now wait a minute. I'm just starting. Here's E."

"Emeralds! Two rings, Jack?"

"Seven," he corrected gravely. "Amethysts for A. Rubies for R. More emeralds for E. Sapphires for S. And turquoise for T. What does that spell, sweetheart?"

"Dearest!" she cried. "Oh, Jack! Jack, you angel, did you think of that yourself?"

"All by myself," he admitted modestly. "Can you get them all under your knuckle?"

"They just go," she proclaimed, slipping the turquoise circle over the sapphire. "My dear, it's the loveliest engagement ring a girl ever had!"

Soft-footed Natsu stood at the door.

"Mr. Flynn," he announced. "Oh, heavens!" she cried. "I'd forgotten all about Rita! That's how much I love you, Jack Wells."

She greeted Red hysterically.

"Look! I'm engaged! See my ring. Oh, Red, I'm so happy! I mean I'm so miserable. What do you suppose Bob's going to do with me?"

Red took her left hand, and contemplated the seven little sparkling rings.

"They spell DEAREST," she explained. "Jack thought of it himself."

"Darn clever," approved Red. "So you're engaged to Jack tonight?"

"Oh, it's forever this time," she assured him. "You know yourself, Red, I never loved anybody else but him."

Red shook hands with Jack, and kissed Molly.

"I'm glad," he told them simply. "This is the first sensible thing you've done in a long time, Molly. I suppose you've counted the cost?"

"I'm Jack's sweetheart," she declared demurely. "I'm not a mathematician."

"But you know Bob will keep Rita."

"I know." Her eyes filled with tears. "But I guess Jack and I might have a little girl of our own. Of course she wouldn't be like Rita. But she might be nice, don't you think so, Jack?"

"Hello! What's this?"

Red had stroled to the window, and was looking down at the street.

"Isn't that Rita running along the sidewalk? She just left that taxi on the corner."

Molly flew to the window.

"It is!" she cried.

She threw the window open, and leaned out.

"Rita! Rita!"

The child looked up and waved.

"Hello, mama!"

Natsu must have seen her first, since he was on the doorstep waiting. It was he who carried Rita triumphantly into the house, and up the stairs to Molly.

"Where did you come from, sweetheart?"

"Daddy's going away," explained Rita carefully, "where little girls can't go. It's on a big ship. And he would you take me for your little girl. He wrote a letter, and I have it pinned with a big safety pin. Daddy pinned it himself, so I couldn't lose it."

She unclasped the pin, and held an envelope to Molly. Molly took the paper out, and read aloud:

"I am going away. Will you keep Rita until I come back? It may be for a year, and may be forever. When I took her away today, I meant to keep her with me. I guess all I need say is that I changed my mind. I am going to Australia. I reckon that's the farthest place away there is. You will be married and happy, when I come back. Maybe then you could be friends, and you wouldn't have to hate me. Goodbye, and God bless you."

Red cleared his throat.

"The poor sap," he said, and his voice was very gentle. "He's not such a bad egg after all."

"I'm hungry," announced Rita practically. "Daddy and I didn't have anything to eat, not anywhere."

"I'll get her something," offered Red. "I haven't eaten myself yet. Went to come out, Rita? I'll buy you some ice cream."

"Oh, goodie!"

She smiled beatifically. "Daddy said I'd feel better by and by. I guess maybe he knew you was going to buy me some ice cream, Uncle Red. I was crying like ever since he said little girls always felt better by and by. Is this by and by, mama?"

Molly smiled mistily.

"I think it must be, dear."

When Red had gone, and taken Rita with him, she went to her desk, and took out a copy of Ashes of Desire.

Putting it in Jack's hands, she said, "This one is yours. I had it bound for you. But I didn't think I would ever give it to you."

"Did you ever read about how Rossetti, when his wife died, buried his poems with her? Years afterward his friends persuaded him to have his earlier verses published. But his loveliest things were in the grave. In the casket, with his wife. Then his friends convinced him that he should have the grave opened—and the casket. And that he should take the beautiful verses that had never been published away from his dead wife's possession. So Rossetti did as they urged."

"But, when the grave was opened, it was discovered that his wife's hair had grown around the little manuscript in her hands. She had long golden hair, and it had become loosened, and had fallen down over her shoulders. To take the verses away, they had to cut the strands that had twined themselves about the verses."

"Rossetti's friends did not tell him that, and the verses were published. They made Rossetti famous. But his success was tinged with melancholy."

"Years later someone told him the story of the way his wife's hair had grown around his poems. Then Rossetti went insane."

Molly paused.

"That's an awful creepy story," declared Jack.

"Yes, I know it is. Well, I dreamed last week that I died, and they buried this book with me, and my hair started to grow, and grow."

"Stop it!" he cried. "Gosh, Molly, you make my blood run cold!"

"But it's so strange," she persisted. "I want you to know. I tell you the rest of the dream, if you don't want me to. Only this part of it, dear. I woke up, and I was very frightened. It seemed so real. And I went to the desk, to see if this book of yours was still there. It was the only book I had been given in the front. Look, dear. I let me read it about. Look, dear. I opened the drawer, and there it was, exactly where I left it. I opened it, and began to write on the first page. The words came simple, and naturally. I wrote without any hesitation. When I finished, I read over what I had written, and it seemed to me one of the most beautiful things in the world."

She turned the page.

"Let me read it aloud, sweetheart. Nothing is sweeter than love; nothing stronger; nothing higher, nothing broader, nothing more pleasant, nothing fuller, or better in heaven or on earth, for love is born of God, and can rest only in God above all things created."

She hesitated.

"Do you remember, Jack, that night at college—the night before Rita's wedding—when we were out on the lake, and I told you that I thought I was psychic?"

He nodded.

"Now I know I am," she exulted. "She moved toward the circle of his arms, and her hair caught the glint of the sun as it shone through the window, so that it looked like a halo. And there was a sort of luminosity about her, like a mystic light."

"That passage," she said, "is from 'The Imitation of Christ.' I looked it up next day. I never read 'The Imitation of Christ' in my life."

"But I don't understand," he murmured.

"Neither do I. Love," she told him softly, "is beyond all understanding."

IRON AND LIVER OF HIGH VALUE OF TREATMENT OF ANEMIA.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN.

Editorial Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Almost everyone now knows that scientific investigations have established the value of liver and of liver extracts in the treatment of pernicious anemia.

There are two kinds of anemia: the one called pernicious, which is a special disease in which there is great destruction of red blood cells and failure of new cells to develop to meet the emergency, and the other which follows great hemorrhage, malnutrition, or which may be associated with any serious or wasting disease. The liver has not seemed to have the specifically valuable effect in pernicious anemia that it quite certainly has in the pernicious form.

Investigators in the laboratory had shown that a combination of liver and iron was especially valuable in restoring the blood to normal. It has, of course, long been known that iron was an excellent remedy for anemias. Now some physicians in China have tested out the effects of combinations of liver and iron, and their results show that what was true for the dogs would apply also for the human beings. The experiments show again the importance of animal experimentation for the study of diseases affecting mankind.

In order to control the experiments on the patients satisfactorily the doctors studied the effects of iron given alone and of liver given alone, and then the effects of the two given in combination. When iron alone was given in suitable doses to these patients there occurred a definite increase in the development of the hemoglobin, or red coloring matter of the red blood cells. When liver and iron were given together the increase took place much more rapidly than when either liver or iron was given alone.

Some of the patients with anemia who were studied had the condition due to infestation with hookworm, an extremely common cause of secondary anemia in people living in the southern part of the United States. Some of the secondary anemias were due to bleeding associated with disturbances of the organs peculiar to women, and in other instances the anemias were due to undernutrition because of insufficient diet or badly chosen diet. In this connection it is probably true that the anemia of the patients with hookworm is due to the fact that the people with hook worm are never properly nourished and will be found to be undersized and underweight.

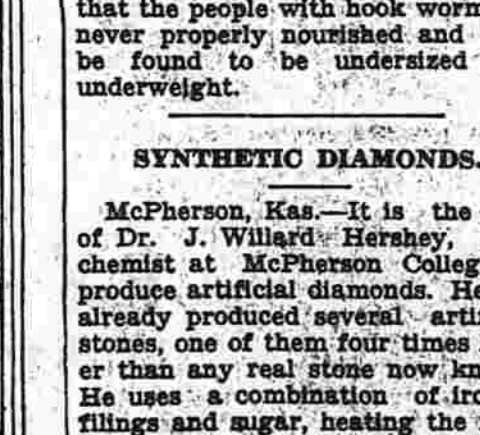

SYNTHETIC DIAMONDS.

McPherson, Kas.—It is the plan of Dr. J. Willard Hensley, head chemist at McPherson College, to produce artificial diamonds. He has already produced several artificial stones, one of them four times larger than any real stone now known. He uses a combination of iron, filings and sugar, heating the mix to 2,500 degrees centigrade. This is suddenly chilled and the diamonds form in the resulting solid mass.

YOUR CHILDREN

by Olive Roberts Barton

We talk a lot about our sophisticated younger generation, but as a matter of fact the youth of America is less adult in thinking and behavior than that of almost any other country in the world.

I wonder why it is. Certainly no one can dispute that they have the advantage of wealth and education. The enormity, number and magnificence of our schools is legion.

There isn't any question that our children have a thousand times more opportunities for development than the most of the children across the sea. They have more comforts, more luxuries, greater opportunity for health, everything! And yet, instead of developing a mature and thoughtful self-reliance that starts in early and carries on through life—the tendency is largely toward cynicism of thought and immaturity of behavior, until they are well past 25. And that is too old. They should be really adult long before that.

The System Errors.

I don't blame the children. Children are never to blame—or very seldom. I blame our system—whatever that system is. Aren't we at cross-purposes—do we want exactly what we're trying to do for the children? One faction pulls one way—another pulls another.

One advocates the academical training for gentlemen or grow rich in the industrial world? It's a question parents can't decide—so how can the boys?

The schools do their part, but we parents linger. We keep on weakening their wills during the formative years by making life too easy, and too vague of purpose. Then there is another thing, we supply everything—food, clothes, trips cars, spending money, and like matters. We heat the children to learn to accept it—may expect it without question. Why should the younger generation bother about the work and effort and worry of their parents when these parents have never intimated that they should them to? Or wanted or expected their help? Or planned for it?

Adolescence Prolonged.

I believe that our boys and girls don't turn adult until they are about 25. We parents won't let them. We hold them back ourselves. "He's so young," we say, or "She's such a child!" when in other countries they'd be full-grown men and women. It is because we have no confidence in them, because we just can't untie the apron string?

It is middle-age in America that is taking the burden of youth. They are restless partly because we do hold them back. All our training is away from independence and self-reliance. Really, they do wonderfully well. Mothers should begin to sow with the seeds of independence very early in children and help them to plan for a definite future.

The WOMAN'S DAY

It is reported that Colonel Lindbergh smiled broadly and looked tremendously proud when his wife, after nine hours of instruction from him, opened the throttle and made her solo flight at the wheel of her plane. One can't help wondering if he lost his temper at any time during his teaching, or if she flew into tears. We've all witnessed the family ructions that threaten when the average man tries to teach his wife to drive the new auto.

"I had to get the man from the garage to teach me," many a wife has told me. "Jack and I would have had to get a divorce or one of us been up for murder if he had continued to be my instructor."

The colonel has certainly added another laurel to his already loaded brow.

NATURAL ACROBATS.

A little girl, eleven years, amazed the professional dancing teachers at their recent convention. She had never appeared in public, though she seems doing acrobatic dancing since she was a mere infant.

Children are natural acrobats, and they should be encouraged to stretch their slim little bodies, in natural play, and to get the satisfaction and thrill that comes from controlling their muscles and making them obey their minds.

One of the most successful dancing teachers in New York, who teaches control of the body, and considerably more than just steps, has one class devoted to older women—most of them business women. Most of them have completely forgotten how to do the simplest gymnastics which they did perfectly naturally as children.

A MODISH BRIDE.

Another Hollywood girl who just became a bride is Ruth, Elder. I don't know what sort of wedding gown she wore, but I hope it is as stunning as the one she wears in her latest picture, which is a knockout, if I know my ensembles.

A simple, beltless frock of corded silk, has a Peter Pan collar and a jabot from collar to hem of the edge of the cuff and the hem—and a little vagabond hat. Take it from me, it's okay.

With this she wears the most simple and naive little long silk coat, with pleating on the edges of the cuff and the hem—and a little vagabond hat. Take it from me, it's okay.

Under the influence of California sunshine. And even then, they did not realize it until just as he was on the observation platform—and starting back and she was waving farewell. Over the rumble of the starting train wheels he shouted, "I love you," and she nodded her head in affirmation because by that time, the noise was stronger than their voices.

But he had to get back to New York for a professional appointment. As soon as that was settled he got in an airplane and flew back to marry Norma, and bring her back to New York between pictures.

CLING TO CAREERS.

"We'll spend about half of our time together now," she said. "The rest of the time, I shall have to be in California. When our careers aren't so pressing, we will have more time for each other."

"I would give up the stage and pictures, if he wanted me to," she repeated, "but he doesn't." He has his career, and it is very vital to him, so he understands why mine is to me.

"It is my observation that the modern man is not nearly so antagonistic to his wife's career as the men of a generation ago are. Most of them know it is better for a woman to have an interest and to have work that demands her time and energy, than just to drift into an aimless social career."

"And I don't believe any sane man wants his wife to make great sacrifices for her that are not necessary. Even if she doesn't say it, she doesn't want her 'inking—'Just think what I gave up for you.'"

There are many who would concur with the sentiments of the beautiful Norma, and it is a wise husband who puts himself out of the reach of such expressions. "Well, after all I've done for you," and "If it hadn't been for you, I would have had my chance." They can become hateful indeed.

CHAPTER I

The boxes that came for Helen Page always caused excitement at Miss Spann's School for Girls. Miss Spann's girls were smart and up-to-date and quite often their own clothes bore the label of a Fifth Avenue shop. But few of them possessed even a single garment with a Paris label in it.

All the clothes that came for Helen were Paris originals. Helen did not know, so she could not explain, that her guardian had them brought over by a friend who made frequent trips abroad—a friend he had never allowed Helen to meet.

As a matter of fact she had met none of his friends. But this friend had perfect taste and Helen's clothes were the envy of her school-mates.

Just now they were engaged—all who could crowd into her room—in helping her open the two large packages that had come that afternoon.

Helen was less interested in the new things than in the coming visit of her guardian himself. She was thrilling happily to the thought of it. For Leonard Brent was more to Helen than just a guardian in the common sense of the word. She had given him the adoration of an untouched heart, without question of the manner in which he might regard the girl.

Of his guardianship of herself Helen had no complaint. It was lonely sometimes when the other girls, all but one or two, were away at home for holidays and the summer vacation, but there was always Leno's next visit to look forward to.

"Oh, Helen, just look at this dinner dress!" one of the girls cried, holding up a periwinkle blue chiffon creation. "Don't you love it?"

Helen took it and rushed over to the mirror in the closet door. "I'll wear it tonight," she exclaimed, holding it up before her, judging its lines.

"You ought to take that V out of the back," one of the girls remarked as Helen held the dress off and studied it.

Helen shook her head. "Leno wouldn't like it," she said. "Don't you ever get tired of living up to his freak ideas?" someone asked her. "It must be a strain."

Helen smiled. She had been through this before. That her guardian was strict and exacting in everything she knew. But Helen delighted in pleasing him and so did not mind having her modernism limited in a measure.

"Of course," Helen can get away with the role of Miss Simplicity because she's descended from Helen of Troy," another girl put in sarcastically. "But I'll bet old guardian could go blow a whistle if she needed a beauty treatment."

The flush on Helen's cheek belied the words. Someone laughed. "That old guy's a whole course of beauty treatments in himself," the girl who had laughed declared.

"What are you Helen glow. No facial could do so much for her." Helen whirled upon the speaker. "Old guy!" she repeated belligerently. "Leno isn't old. Not more than 35 anyway."

"Absolutely decrepit," the other girl returned. "Don't be silly, Agatha," she was admonished by still another girl. "Mr. Brent is the most distinguished-looking man who comes here."

"The most distinguished man in New York, I'd say," put in the girl who had suggested making the dinner dress more décolleté. Helen and I went down to town last Saturday we saw him at the Ritz."

"At the Ritz? Shallmar Morris, you never had enough money to lunch at the Ritz?" Shallmar retorted undisturbed. "Of course not. We went there to see what's being worn. Mr. Brent came in . . ."

"Did he take you to lunch?" "He was with a date," Shallmar explained patiently.

All the girls were interested, for Helen's guardian was a topic of unflinching interest in their conversations.

"Let she was dressed like Queen Mary and had the manners of a Victorian Dutchess." "Not at all," Shallmar hastened to assure them. Then she turned to Helen. "Shall I describe her?" she asked.

Helen shrugged. "What's the use?" she said. "Just because Leno thinks there isn't anything funny about teaching a girl to be a lady they imagine he's a dodo."

"Oh, don't be a meany Helen. Go on, Shallie."

"Well, I just wish you'd seen her for yourselves," Shallmar began uncertainly. "She was smart as could be and not a bit stiff."

"Did he introduce you?" "No . . ." Shallmar's glance sought Helen's. The latter hastily turned away. "No, we decided he wouldn't have any use for a couple of school girls just then," Shallmar went on, flushing a trifle under her suntan powder.

"You don't mean to say you passed up a chance to meet one of Leno's lady friends?" Helen spoke up sharply. "You needn't call him Leno just because I do," she said.

The girls laughed. "Oh, we wouldn't think of getting familiar to his face, if that's worrying you," one of them said. "We wouldn't want him to think we aren't proper companions for you. He might take you away from us and put you in a more fashionable school."

"Yes, you know I've wondered, Helen, how he happened to play you here at Spann's," the girl Agatha admitted with youthful frankness. "The Ritz, and French originals! He could do better by you in the way of schools. If my dad could afford it I'd be at Elmston. It's exclusive. All the girls com-from six-car families at the very least. "I'm quite happy here," Helen declared. "And now when you all get out please? I want to try on some of these things and dress for dinner."

Helen's hands trembled as Brent took them in his own and kissed their fingertips.

"I wonder you don't put Shallmar out too," one among them grumbled as they departed. "She has eyes the same as we have, Miss Prim."

Helen laughed. She could afford to be good-natured. Tonight she would dine with Leno at the inn—and dance with him.

Shallmar helped to clear the beds of boxes and tissue paper. She was Helen's roommate and quite used to removing things to make sitting room.

But on this occasion she wore a slight frown. Not that she minded having her portion of the room overrun with Helen's belongings. She was thinking of Helen herself, wondering if she wasn't a bit of a fool girl who had laughed and declared that she would fall for her guardian's ideas. There was that woman they had seen him with in town, for instance. She certainly looked as though she knew her way about; not at all the sort of person that Mr. Brent seemed bent on making of Helen. Shallmar didn't think it was fair.

And then there was the way Helen had acted on that occasion. Afraid to intrude, Shallmar thought. And Helen hadn't explained why she had drawn back abruptly as she passed with his unknown companion. But Shallmar knew she was aware of the queerness of her act for since the trifling episode Helen had been reluctant to speak of it.

Helen observed the frown on Shallmar's darkly beautiful features and a bit of her elation over the news that Brent was coming vanished. She hated to be a mystery to her roommate. Shallmar had confided her intimate affairs unreservedly and Helen felt guilty over withholding her own secrets.

Secrets! With her life itself just one long secret how could she confide anything? The thought had troubled her through many wakeful hours.

Yes, she could see that Shallmar was seriously disapproving of her now. Often the dark granddaughter of a Spanish dancer had warned her that she would lose her individuality if she tried to remake herself in an outmoded mold.

Impulsively she decided to explain her reason for not making her presence in the Ritz known to her guardian. She put down the stocking box in which she was putting away her new hostery and came over to sit on Shallmar's bed.

"You think I have the makeup of a mouse, don't you, or that I believe children should be neither seen nor heard?" she began half-teasingly. But under the light tone she adopted there was a bit of appeal for tolerance from her friend.

"Oh, if you want to efface yourself that's your business," Shallmar answered; "provided you really want to."

Helen spoke softly. "I do, when Leno wishes it," she admitted. "Shallmar gave her a straight, quick look that Helen found made her uncomfortable.

"Yes, she went on, reading Shallmar's thought. "I'd do anything for him."

"Are you jealous of him?" Helen started and reddened. "Of course not," she said quickly. Shallmar laughed. "You don't mind his being with a knockout like that woman we saw and yet you're so crazy about him that you have to tingle with delight over obeying his slightest wish. Something's wrong with the picture, Helen. But tell me, has he forbidden you to speak to him in public?" She ended tauntingly but Helen was invulnerable to the jibe. Delicate sarcasms and broad, were favorite weapons of the girls at verbal grips with each other. "That's what I want to tell you about, Shallie dear," she said quietly and Shallmar was instantly disarmed. She opened her eyes a little wider and then narrowed them in anticipation. Was Helen actually going to open up?

"There's a reason, but I don't know what it is, why Leno wants me to grow up to be what he calls a lady. Please don't laugh. You know there is a difference between girls who take refinement and good form seriously and those who don't."

"What if there is?" Shallmar interjected impatiently. "Is that any reason why you have to give up even a dab of rouge along with cigarettes?"

A tender smile wreathed Helen's lips before she answered. "Maybe Leno does carry it a bit far," she agreed, "but what I wanted to tell you was that he has never arranged for me to meet any of his friends or acquaintances and I know he wouldn't want it to happen by accident."

Shallmar scoffed. "Afraid they will contaminate you probably. But that's going to be pleasant for you when you leave school, isn't it? Who are you going to know? What are you going to do? He won't be able to create a set of Priscillas and Priscidas just for you to associate with."

"I don't know, Shallie. Maybe it's just that Leno believes girls ought to be natural and unspoiled."

Shallmar laughed again. "After the lady we saw him with you can't pretend that he prefers unspoiled girls for himself."

Helen flushed darkly red. Shallmar had found the chink in her armor, either by accident or design. This woman they spoke of was not the first sophisticated, modish, refined girl Helen had seen in Leonard Brent's company.

Once on paying him an unexpected visit she had found him entertaining a charming friend whom he had hurriedly sent away—afterward scolding Helen for her surprise.

And Helen had not been blind to the fact that his choice of friends among the gentler sex was quite decidedly for the women of today. Why, then, did he want her to be so different?

Helen's heart sank anew at every repetition of the question. For the answer was always the same. As she regarded him. He might not be in her mind, too aged for her fancy to weave a love dream about him, but it was her great fear that he regarded her as a child.

She got up and moved away to hide her face from Shallmar's close scrutiny.

"Don't be a goose," Shallmar exclaimed sharply. "Be yourself, Helen. Cut out the ingenuity. You're 18, you know. I don't approve at all of your falling for Mr. Brent, but if you want to get anywhere with him you won't allow yourself to be a football for his notions. Not while you have proof that his personal taste is contrary to all he is making of you."

Helen answered with a half sob. "Sometimes I think I'm just naturally uninspired," she said, fishing a fresh handkerchief out of a box.

Shallmar rushed over and put an arm about her. "No, you're not honey. Don't you see? No one but a person with a lot of character could do what you're doing. And that's why I think it's a shame that you should try to be anything but yourself. It just happens that Mr.

Brent wants you to be a throwback. If you thought he liked modern youth as it's sometimes pictured to make a story or a sermon you'd flame to high heaven to please him."

Helen wiped her eyes and blinked back the rest of her tears. It was pretty hard being the ward of a man who was in love with—a man who had loads of fascinating women friends—and to know that you were just a . . . a sort of experiment with him; but hard or not Helen hated tears. They were too much in keeping with the character being thrust upon her.

"Well, anyway," Shallmar said cheerfully, "he doesn't dress you in hoops and bustles. I can't quite get his idea. An old-fashioned girl in the latest word in clothes."

"I don't get it either," Helen confessed. "But I'm grateful for the lovely things he sends me. I'd hate to look funny."

"As you would if he wanted you to," Shallmar sniffed. "I hope I never fall in love if this is what it does to a girl. But honestly, Helen, I do think you're in love with him, really. He's got you hypnotized, that's all."

Helen was pinning her thick yellow hair up on her head preparatory to taking a shower bath. She smiled at her reflection in the mirror. How little Shallmar knew about the grand passion her great brogue eyes said to those in the glass. She pitied Shallmar. For no matter how much it hurt to be in love it was an experience not to be missed.

and it made having a new dress ever so much more exciting. "Shall I wear silver slippers or the blue moire?" she asked, facing about and forgetting that her dearly beloved Leno would very likely remain unshaken by any choice she made among the things in her plentiful wardrobe.

"Wear the blue—silver's overdue," Shallmar advised. "And here's a bar of that soap Aunt Cecilia sent from Hungary. You'll love the odor. It's lasting but that won't matter since your arbuter won't permit you to use perfume."

"He doesn't object to a delicate scent," Helen corrected as she took the cake of clear green soap and disappeared into the hall. She ran down to the bath room but, early as it was, she found all the tubs and showers in use and had to wait 10 minutes for her turn. The girls were forever upsetting the bathing order established for them by the house rules committee. It did no good to grumble even if you had to hurry back to your room and content yourself with a sponge bath, aided by a rubdown with cologne. The facilities for luxurious living at Miss Spann's were limited. Still, the school had a reputation for worthiness that kept its enrollment full and things went on as they were.

When Helen returned to don her crepe de chine dancing set and the periwinkle dress she was aglow with well being and happy anticipation.

Shallmar stood by and offered well meant suggestions that were entirely ignored. No, not even a hint of lipsticking and certainly no eye make-up, Helen was firm.

"Not that you need it," Shallmar replied, "but there isn't a woman born who can't be made more beautiful. And you want to look beautiful, don't you?"

Helen consented to having her slightly water-thinned nose powdered and she allowed Shallmar to arrange her heavy hair in a way that permitted one adorable little ear to invite a caress, but that was as far as modern allurements as she would go.

Finally Shallmar announced herself satisfied. Helen gave her a swift hug. "It's funny about you," she said impulsively. "You hate to see me going out with Leno, I know you do, and yet you do all you can to make me devastating to him. Why is it, I wonder?" Shallmar shrugged. "I suppose it's because when two women aren't after the same man they are allies against all men."

"I hope I can do as much for you some day," Helen acknowledged. "Which wrap shall I wear? I want to be downstairs when Leno comes."

"You don't want to lose a minute before asking him about last Saturday do you?" Shallmar teased. "No, I wouldn't dare do that," Helen told her; "but there's something he has promised to do for me. I'm anxious to remind him of it."

She was in the closet now, running her finely modeled hands over the row of wraps that hung there behind a crumpled curtain. She seemed uncertain of her choice. Her mind was not on the wraps. She came out with a black and white one. Shallmar gasped. "Helen, not that! What blue slippers?"

Helen regarded it. "It would be a bad combination, wouldn't it?" She threw it on the bed and turned back to the closet. This time she selected a gray velvet.

The nod of approval Leonard Brent gave her a few minutes later rewarded her for exercise of taste. Helen's hands trembled as Brent took them in his own and kissed their fingertips. It was not a serious gesture, but it delighted the girl whose love of romance, and love of love itself, had settled upon this handsome, worldly man.

As he bent his head and looked at her from dark eyes that turned up slightly at the outer corners, following the line of his satanic eyebrows, her heart pounded alarmingly.

She could not fathom that look. Part mocking, part triumphant, part amused. But Leonard Brent could not be wholly laughing at her. Oh yes, she was aware that he knew of her feeling for him. There was something in his glance that made it possible to endure his knowing; something not altogether of mockery and amusement.

"You're looking lovelier than ever," Brent said to her and the words were uttered warmly.

Helen longed to say that he too was looking very well but she did not feel it would be too artless to compliment him. He might want her to be simple, but not a simper.

But she allowed her eyes to feast upon him and Brent understood her as though she had spoken. He permitted no hint of his understanding to show in his manner. A long and varied experience with women had accustomed him to their admiration. Helen's feet seemed scarcely to touch the flagstone walk as they made their way out to Brent's car, a long, narrow convertible. Tonight it was open and Helen had an instant of regret that she was not to sit in the delicious intimacy afforded when closed. But the feel of a soft breeze, warm with the promise of summer, brought a surge of pleasure that held no place for regret.

It was a short drive to the inn—a drive in May-scented twilight. Helen's thoughts were tuned to the sheer delight of the wind in her face, the lift of her hair about her face, the racing hope that sped with her.

At the inn, before they left the car, she turned to her companion, her lips apart and her eyes seeking his. "Leno," she said softly, wistfully, "tonight you will do what you promised."

"Tonight?" Brent repeated. "I can't wait any longer," Helen urged. "You must tell me. You promised, when I finished school. That will be soon. I've tried to be patient, but you've no idea what it means not to know anything about yourself except your name. And I'm not even sure of that."

Brent's lips took on a cross determination. He spoke sharply. "Don't be a nuisance and spoil our evening, Helen. I'll tell you everything as I promised, when you graduate."

Helen sat very still, facing her disappointment. Brent put an arm about her. "There is one thing I want to know," he said, "before I tell you who you are."

Theaters

AT THE STATE

"Hole in the Wall"
"Exalted Flapper"

Local picture fans who are tremendously fond of something "different" in their entertainment, are sure to have their complete satisfaction if they see and hear "The Hole in the Wall," Paramount's new sensational all-talking mystery thriller, now showing at the State theater.

"The Hole in the Wall" takes you behind the veiled mysteries of a "spirit den" and actually shows for the first time how a seance is conducted from the inside. Many other new and interesting surprises can be found in this fascinating and alluring melodrama of a girl who seeks revenge against the woman who wronged her.

Pretty Claudette Colbert, prominent stage player, has the leading role in this all-talking picture. Others in the cast are Edward G. Robinson, Alan Brooks and Helen Crane. Robert Flory directed.

The associate film feature presents Sue Carol, that popular Fox favorite, in her latest starring vehicle, "The Exalted Flapper." It is vibrant with excitement, thrills, romance and gay laughter. Besides Miss Carol, the cast includes Barry Norton, Philo McCollough and a host of other notables.

The usual pleasing State Short Subjects will be shown in conjunction with the two features.

BUCKINGHAM

The new State road being built from Hubbard Hill to Buckingham has the first coat of stone rolled in place and the fine dust for the finish coat is distributed along the way. The big ledge at the four corners is nearly reduced. Two workmen have been drilling another ledge which is located by the northwest corner of the Buckingham cemetery. The northwest corner of the cemetery has been dug away, so a retaining wall will have to be built.

The general opinion about here is that the State of Connecticut should build the wall.

The S. N. E. Telephone Company have set poles over land of the Buckingham Cemetery Association on their own initiative without permission of the owners of the land.

That portion of the ledge with the copper disk which was set by the U. S. A. Geological surveyors will not be disturbed.

America is a country where you're liable to be arrested if you park too long in front of a blind pig.

47 Years' Practice Taught Dr. Caldwell

Many things about Men and Women

DR. CALDWELL loved people. He studied the habits of his patients and tried to improve their ways of living. His observations over a long period of time convinced him many people were ruining their health by a careless choice of laxatives. Then he determined to write a prescription which would get at the cause of constipation and correct it quickly and safely.

How successful his efforts were is best shown by the fact that the prescription he wrote back in 1885 has become the world's most popular laxative. He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness, and lack of appetite, or energy showed him that the bowels of men, women or children were sluggish. It proved successful in the most obstinate cases. So men liked it. Old folks liked it because it never gripped. Children liked its pleasant taste. And everybody is pleased with the gentle way it accomplishes its purpose.

By 1888, the demand for this laxative was so great that the doctor permitted it to be bottled and sold by druggists. Today you can obtain Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from any druggist in the world.

BRITISH BOYS MIGRATE TO CANADA FARMLANDS
 The migration of British juveniles to farms in Canada is a unique feature of Canada's immigration situation, which has only become possible in the last few years through the interest and practical assistance afforded by the Canadian Railways.
 The number of teen-age British boys to adopt Canada as their home is one of the most promising sides of the whole Canadian immigration problem according to the British Superintendent of Juvenile Immigration for the Canadian National Railways, R. M. Pym, who has just arrived in Montreal for the annual conference of the Colonization Department officials of the railway. The final party for the season numbering 83 boys arrived in Montreal with Mr. Pym, making a total of 1,180, to be brought out this year in the surplus of the Canadian National Railways.
 The extent to which juvenile immigration has become a factor in the general situation in Canada is evidenced by the fact that the number brought out this season exceeded the 1928 season by 134 per cent, while the 1928 figures were an increase of 84 per cent over 1927. Deportation has only had to be resorted to in about one-half per cent of the cases. About 97 per cent of these boys have definitely made good while the remaining small percentage might be said to be still on the fence, with respect to their desire to stay in Canada.
 One of the greatest difficulties of Canada's juvenile immigration with which the railway's immigration department has to contend has been the prevalence of the old idea, still persisting in Great Britain, that boys and young men were sent to colonies only as a last resort, if they were wayward or criminally inclined. This idea persists to an extent that it is surprising and is only gradually that it is being replaced with the true idea, according to Mr. Pym, that Canada is a land of opportunity and that British boys and Britishers in general are welcome and that they may build for themselves a future not possible in the old world. The juvenile movement has become very popular and the prospects for next season are exceedingly promising.

 Something recently prominent in the news.

There are at least four mistakes in the above picture. They may pertain to grammar, history, etiquette, drawing or what not. See if you can find them. Then look at the scrambled word below—and unscramble it, by switching the letters around. Grade yourself 20 for each mistake you find, and 20 for the word if you unscramble it.

CORRECTIONS
 (1) The "Toreador Song" is from "Carmen," not "Il Trovatore." (2) "He don't sing very well" should be, "He doesn't." (3) Tuxedo trousers do not have cuffs. (4) There were no pedals on the piano. (5) The scrambled word is ZEPPELIN.

The ceremony at the church was followed by a wedding breakfast and reception for fifty guests at the home of the bride's parents which was artistically decorated with cut flowers, ferns and palms.
