STOCK MARKET AGAIN THROWN INTO TURMOIL

Another Disastrous Break In Prices Which Carries Scores of Issues Down $5 to Nearly $45 a Share.

BULLETIN: New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Strong banking support was rushed to the aid of the Stock Market today after another gigantic selling movement had carried prices of leading issues down $5 to nearly $45 a share.

The decline, which started from the opening of the market and gained momentum as the session progressed, was checked in the early afternoon, after many of the active shares had broken below the low level established in last Thursday's record-breaking session.

Margins Wiped Out: Many traders, large and small, were forced to throw their holdings overboard because of their inability to supply additional margin to protect their rapidly dwindling accounts.

Support last week attributed to support resulting from confidence of leading bankers at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co., was completely lacking during the morning but important banking executives once more began to gather at the house of Morgan early in the afternoon.

George Whitney, a partner of J. P. Morgan and company was reported from the Stock Exchange floor as a buyer of stocks, tending to confirm reports that banking support was again being provided.

BULGARIA'S BORDER TOPIC OF PARLEY

Jugo-Slavia Tries to Settle Frontier Dispute at Today's Conference.

Sofia, Bulgaria, Oct. 28.—(AP)—All Bulgaria is anxiously watching the progress of the negotiations at Piro to bring about an agreement between Bulgaria and Jugo-Slavia on their frontier.

While the two nations are negotiating, a provisional agreement has been put into effect. It establishes police measures for the security of frontier districts, permission for people living in the disputed zone to cross the frontier to look after property divided in two portions by the delimitation, and disputes.

Difficult Problem: It is recognized on all sides that the questions at issue are difficult. Bulgaria strenuously objects to the inclusion of a neutral zone ten kilometers in width from which all Bulgarians should be evacuated. It is argued that this step would throw a large number of refugees on the labor market in Bulgaria, and the

PANTAGES FOUND GUILTY BY JURY

Theatrical Magnate Faces One to 50 Years for Attacking a Chorus Girl.

Los Angeles, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Alexander Pantages, theatrical magnate whose fortune of millions grew from a stake in the Klondike gold rush today faced a prison sentence from 1 to 50 years following his conviction of a statutory charge by a Superior Court judge here.

The jury of seven women and five men deliberated 21 hours but from the first ballot agreed that Pantages was guilty. The delay in returning the verdict was occasioned by the jury's inability to agree whether Pantages should be sentenced to one year in county jail or from 1 to 50 years in the penitentiary.

Wife Breaks Down: Mrs. Pantages broke into tears when told her husband had been convicted. She made no statement. Her physicians asserted she was in a serious condition.

At a downtown hotel where she has been living with her mother since the trial started, October 1, Miss Pringle said she was "very glad of the result."

Judge Pricke set next Friday morning as the time for pronouncing sentence. If the verdict is allowed to stand a sentence of one to fifty years will be pronounced and the minimum and maximum will be fixed by the state prison board after Pantages has served the first year.

The department decision is a complete reversal of the policy followed by former Secretary Kellogg during the Coolidge administration. NEED 70,000 MORE MEN TO HANDLE XMAS MAIL

No Deliveries on Holiday So Employees Can Enjoy Day With Families.

Washington, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Postmaster General Brown said today that between 65,000 and 70,000 additional clerks, carriers and laborers would be needed for handling the 1929 Christmas mail, as well as 5,000 temporary railway mail clerks.

Already the postoffice department has perfected plans for a complete co-operation with Santa Claus, St. Nicholas, or whatever you, for the 1929 season.

At the same time the postmaster general said that all carrier deliveries and window services in all post-offices would be suspended Christmas day so that the 300,000 regular employees of the department could enjoy Christmas with their families.

Postmasters have been instructed to deliver all Christmas matter by Christmas eve.

As part of the post office department's plan for handling the yuletide mail as swiftly as possible, instructions have been issued to all postmasters to keep their main and classified stations open late each night during the ten or fifteen days preceding December 25.

ANOTHER CHICAGO BOMB

Chicago, Oct. 28.—(AP)—A dynamite bomb which exploded early today in the doorway of a south side house moving concern, started police searching for former companions of Edward Lutzki, who was convicted in 1916 for stealing $575,000 in stamps from the United States Internal Revenue Department in St. Paul.

The house moving concern, police said, was owned by Lutowski, known here as Edward Leonard, until his death on October 3. The bomb was believed to have been a sequel to a mysterious fire which attacked the one-story frame building occupied by Leonard as residence and office on the day Leonard died. The bomb did slight damage.

FASCISTS OBSERVE SEVENTH BIRTHDAY

Actual Celebration Yesterday as Premier Dislikes Extra Holiday.

Rome, Oct. 28.—(AP)—All Italy worked today, the seventh anniversary of the Fascist march on Rome. Actual celebration took place yesterday after an order by Premier Mussolini who disliked an extra holiday.

The day was celebrated with parades and bell ringing over all the kingdom, with speeches and the inauguration of many new works and improvements. The premier in a speech told thousands of "black-shirts" massed in front of the building that "after seven years we are younger, stronger and more implacable than ever before."

"Death to Exiles." The speech was interrupted several times by shouts of "death to the political exiles," a reference to the attempt against the life of Crown Prince Humbert at Brussels last Thursday by an Italian who has been living in Paris.

He indicated early in his speech that strong repressive measures should be adopted against anti-Fascists.

SEES DEADLOCK ON TARIFF BILL

Senator Reed Says He Sees No Hope of It Being Passed at This Session.

Washington, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Senator Reed, Republican, Pennsylvania, reiterated in the Senate today that he saw no hope of the House and Senate reaching an agreement on the tariff bill at this session, and in his opinion, the measure was "dead."

Calling attention to the success of the coalition of Democrats and western Republicans in placing the export debenture plan in the bill and also of revising the flexible provisions, Reed said it was evident that a majority of the Senate was opposed to the bill.

Even though he was opposed to both actions, he asserted, if he were chosen a conferee he would insist the senate's position on both unless the Senate instructed the conferees otherwise.

Ask Information: Reed's statement was prompted by a demand from Senator Johnson, Republican, California, that those in charge of the tariff bill tell the Senate "where we are at on this question."

Johnson said he had read newspaper accounts that the coalition was attempting to write the measure in accordance with the views of President Hoover and only yesterday read a statement by Reed in Philadelphia that the bill was dead.

"We ought to be advised whether the President stands for this bill as reported by the finance committee or is desirous of what the coalition is attempting to do with it," the Californian asserted.

PERSONAL ATTACKS FEATURE SESSION

Fighting Back at Lobby Committee Connecticut Man Defends His Use of Eyanson in Hour's Address; Accuses Members of Deliberately Seeking to "Befoul Him With Political Slime and Corruption"; Four Members Arise to Answer Him—Exchange Filled With Most Bitter Language Heard in Senate in Many Years.

Washington, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Presentation of a resolution of censure of Senator Bingham, Republican, Connecticut, was forecast in the Senate today at the close of two hours of savage, personal exchanges between the Connecticut Senator and members of the lobby committee who condemned his relations with the Connecticut Manufacturers Association.

Chairman Norris of the judiciary committee, who appointed the lobby committee, announced he intended to offer a resolution shortly.

Later he explained that in view of the attack made by Bingham upon the committee and in view of the committee's condemnation of Bingham he felt the Senate should place itself on record.

Gives No Details: "I don't know what kind of resolution I will offer," Norris asserted, "but I will offer one later today or tomorrow as soon as I have read the charges made by the Connecticut Senator. I think the Senate should go on record."

Fighting back at the lobby committee, Bingham, in an hour's address, defended his use of Charles L. Eyanson, a salaried counter agent of the Connecticut Manufacturers Association to help him in the tariff bill. He accused the lobby investigating committee of deliberately seeking to injure him and "be foul" him with "political slime and corrupt innuendoes."

When Bingham had concluded, Chairman Caraway and three other members of the five members of the lobby committee replied. The entire exchange was filled with some of the most bitter, personal language heard in the Senate in many years.

Senator Robinson, Republican, Indiana, concluded the lobby committee, declaring he didn't approve, "the Republican Party doesn't approve, and in my judgment the American people don't approve," of Bingham's course.

Washington, Oct. 28.—(AP)—Senator Bingham, Republican, Connecticut, and members of the Senate lobby committee engaged in one of the most bitter personal exchanges in Senate history today as Bingham struck back at his accusers.

Replying to the severe condemnation by the committee of his use of Charles L. Eyanson, representative of the Connecticut manufacturers Association, Bingham shouted that the "purpose" of the committee investigation was to "befoul me by innuendo and twisting of flimsy evidence."

"I resent it and I shall resent until the end of time," the tall Connecticut Senator thundered, pounding his desk with his clenched fist.

Blaine Excited, Too: Leaping to his feet in reply, Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin, a member of the committee, denied a statement by Bingham that he (Blaine) had used a Capitol policeman as a chauffeur for his car, adding: "He is throwing up a smoke screen in that charge against a slimy, dirty trail mapped out by the lobby committee."

Both Blaine and Chairman Caraway demanded the investigating committee be dissolved. Bingham, in reply to the committee's condemnation in an hour's speech, Blaine was recognized.

The Connecticut Manufacturers Association, he added, never asked for anything that was not needed. "My shirt fund was raised," he went on, "yet to listen to all that has been said on this floor it would lead all the country to point the finger of scorn against them."

Duty Politics: "Every effort was made to play dirty politics," referring to the letter praising Eyanson as follows: "you have accomplished a great deal more than was bargained for," Bingham said. "Oh, how they have loved that word 'bargain.' They have used it to show there was corruption. They couldn't prove it because there never was any corruption."

AIRCRAFT PLANT A HUGE PROJECT

Visit to Pratt-Whitney Site In East Hartford Impresses Local People.

Undoubtedly most everyone in Manchester knows that the Pratt & Whitney Company is building a new aircraft factory in East Hartford and have seen pictures of the plans and read of its size but until they have seen the actual construction they will be unable to appreciate the immensity of the project.

An idea of the immensity of the Pratt and Whitney plant may be gained from the fact that a person standing in the entranceway of the office in front and looking down through the manufacturing building would be unable to recognize his own brother unless he were to be dressed in manner that was well known to the other party.

From the point of view of construction the work is very plain as the whole building is made up of the most part of a stock arrangement of columns, beams and roof trusses. A light weight steel decking is being used for the roofing which is clamped to the steel purlins by a patented clamp.

The brick enclosure walls around the exterior are under way and in the east end are nearing completion. A high section of building extending the entire width of the main plant adjoins the east end of the building and is being used for wing spread in assembling the large planes that are now being built.

Column erection on this building is not yet complete and it will be some little time yet before the size of its proportions will begin to show up. This building will also be a one story affair. These two new plants are unquestionably the largest and most impressive that have been erected in this section of the country in many years and in view of their proximity to Manchester will bring business to this town and provide work for many people.

The projected landing field to the east of the two plants will extend nearly up to the fields in the rear of the Silver Lane Pickle Co. This stretch of land should make an excellent landing field for comparatively little cost and fill work will have to be done to grade it off. This field will be used for experimental purposes.

DONALDSON REFUTES COMMISSION CHARGE

Has No Intention of Using His Uniform in Other Work; Shows Letter of Recommendation.

Edwin J. Donaldson, until recently a member of the Manchester police department, today refuted in situations that he intended to use a local police department uniform for a month for the purpose of resigning. He asked The Herald to tell his story to the townspeople so that he would not bear the stigma that he feels has been placed upon him. The former patrolman also produced a letter of recommendation from a police commissioner given him when he professed his resignation.

According to Donaldson he did not ask for an order for a uniform in August. He says that he needed a new uniform and at that time had no intention of going to Florida. Moreover, he claims that uniforms are not standard in every city and it would not have been possible to use his local suit in another city. The uniform he secured has been turned back with all his equipment, Donaldson says, and his pay is not being withheld because of any argument with the police authorities. He must wait until the end of the month for his check and do all the other members of the force.

Donaldson has two other positions in view and because of his dissatisfaction with the police job here he decided last Wednesday to resign. When he reported for duty that night he was told he was through. To prove his statement regarding the resignation Donaldson produced a letter from Edward J. Murphy, secretary of the commission. The letter follows: "Manchester, Conn., October 23, 1929. "To Whom It May Concern: "This is to certify that Edwin J. Donaldson who has been a member of the Manchester police department since his appointment on November 25, 1926, and a regular patrolman since July 1927, has this day of his own accord and of his own free will resigned his position as a member of the force.

"Officer Donaldson has been actively employed at Police work since his appointment in 1926 and has been at all times courteous and punctual and at the time of his resignation the regular force was cited before the Commissioners for his police work. "His activities in the Department were both street patrol, auto patrol and desk work which gives him an active insight into all the various types of Police work. "Officer Donaldson leaves this department to take up other activities and I feel that I can honestly commend his services to anyone seeking abilities, as outlined herewith. EDWARD J. MURPHY, Secy., Board of Police Commissioners.

HOOD HAWKER GETS STIFF FINE

Burnside Farmer Pays $300 and Costs in Court; Several Other Cases.

More than $500 was paid in fines and costs by half a dozen law violators in Manchester town court this morning. One man, Arthur D. Baker, 35 years old, Burnside farmer, shared the honor of the burden for peddling liquor along with his vegetables. Baker was charged with actual sale and transporting liquor by Prosecuting Attorney Charles R. Hathaway and fined $150 and costs on each count when he pleaded guilty. Baker was arrested Saturday morning by Patrolman John McGinn who saw him stop on Birch street to make a delivery.

At first the Burnside farmer denied he had been transporting liquor and peddling it to several different places in Manchester but later decided to admit the truth. He did not manufacture the liquor but bought it to take along with his vegetables for an additional profit. George Wilson, 29 years old, of McKee street, was fined $125 and costs by Judge Raymond A. Johnson when convicted of drunken driving. He was arrested on School street yesterday afternoon by Patrolman Joseph Prentice who followed him from Pleasant street in the latter's automobile. Prentice testified that he saw Wilson while the latter and three companions were changing a tire on Pleasant street and noticed that he was drunk. Prentice said he warned Wilson at that time not to drive the car until he sobered up but that the man drove away half hour later. He added that Wilson's car was "all over the road" as he gave chase.

Police Lieutenant William Barron, Dr. Le Verne Holmes and Patrolman Prentice all testified that Wilson was drunk while two other men who were riding with Wilson said they did not see the man take a drink and had been with him at his house. In his own behalf, Wilson said that he had drunk only a glass of beer before and immediately after breakfast at 11 o'clock in the morning. Attorney William J. Shea defended Wilson. The court opined that there was no doubt as to Wilson's guilt.

Blair A. Wasilewicz, 33, of 474 Hudson street, Hartford, arrested at 8:30 by Patrolman Michael Fitzgerald was charged with drunken driving but granted a continuance until Thursday morning. Milton A. Wolfersdorf, 18, of East Hartford, Fred H. Birelow, 31, of Riverton, John Iannini, 24, of Plainville, Samuel Freeman of Hartford and Oscar E. Barrette, 24, of Saylesville, R. I., were all charged with speeding. The first three paid ten dollars and costs but Barrette and Freeman had their cases continued until next Saturday.

James B. Wilson of Garden street, formerly employed at Colts in Hartford, will begin work as a clerk at the South Manchester post office on November 1. He has been doing spare time work at the post office nights and Sundays. Wilson was the guest of honor at a party given in his honor by thirty fellow-workmen at U. J. Osano's cottage at Bolton lake Saturday afternoon.

Rev. W. D. Woodward preached yesterday at Mapleville, R. I., on the occasion of the twentieth anniversary of the dedication of the Methodist church, which was built during his pastorate there, 1907-11. Mr. and Mrs. Woodward enjoyed a few days visit with friends there the latter left last week, returning home after last evening's service with their daughter, Miss Ethel Woodward. At the close of the morning preaching service, the pastor, Rev. George Smith Brown, presented Mr. Mallon with a sum of money donated by friends in the Methodist parish of Mapleville and Glendale. It was a complete surprise. On Friday afternoon a friend took Mr. and Mrs. Woodward over the new Mount Hope bridge which has just been opened to traffic between Bristol and the Island of Rhode Island. Returning via Fall River, they were privileged to visit the fine granite Methodist church in the city, built during the pastorate of Rev. R. A. Colpitts, 1821-27.

There were 400 property owners who appeared before the assessors to file lists Saturday, the largest in any one day since the sitting of the board. This morning there were about 1,200 remaining lists to be filed and indications pointed towards a big day tomorrow and the clearing up of a good part of the twelve hundred remaining lists. With grand lists of over 5,200 to take care of the returns to date have been above the average and the remaining three days should see most of the remaining lists turned in.

Ernest Silcox of the Hollywood tract returned Saturday after a business trip to Maine, during which time he visited Aroostook County, the section of Maine noted for its potato crop. Mr. Silcox said that the growers say the potato crop is the best produced in years.

An elusive, disagreeable odor in an apartment on Main street, present for the past week, was discovered only after Officer Harold Herford of the police department had been called in and every inch of the room had been searched for the entire Saturday afternoon. The search led to a top drawer of a dresser where a dead mouse encased in a necktie was found. It had crawled through the flare end of the tie so far that it had got every inch of the necktie and mouse were buried along with the odor in the back yard.

Being the son of a grocery store owner has its advantages as a student of the Spruce street found out Saturday night. Hanging about the store he was suddenly possessed of what to him was a brilliant idea. Another minute and he possessed some eggs, too. Walking along Spruce street he carefully placed one on each side of the curb. It being dark the driver of one of the cars sank into the seat, felt something give, and jumped over to the other side to experience the same sensation. A detailed examination of the car and his trunk revealed a further investigation and the perpetrator of the joke was found and the joke was on him or rather his father's hand was on that side of his anatomy where a hand does the most good.

Nicholas Farr of Cottage street has again gained possession of his garage which was unceremoniously taken in hand by a skunk last Tuesday. Henry "Cy" Keeney of Brainard Place proved his deliverance by placing a lighted lantern on the floor in the center of the garage and when the skunk came forth, attracted by the light, Keeney socked him from behind to end the seige. The car now stands in the garage.

So diligent have the police been in keeping the one-hour parking law enforced that practical jokers have begun their work. Saturday night, Paul Hillery, who conducts a business in the State theater building, pulled up to the curb in front of his store and on his return a few minutes later found a car tagged. Looking up a policeman on the beat Hillery complained about the unjust parking. The policeman was non-plussed and investigation brought to light that tag was not a police tag at all but just the work of some joker.

The Holy Trinity Polish Roman Catholic Union of America held a most successful meeting yesterday afternoon in the fourth floor room when there was initiated forty-three new members. The Union was formed on September 1 and since then there has been but two meetings, numbers coming in until Sunday it has reached sixty. 3 CHARTER MEMBERS AT SEGAR ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kjellson and Oscar Anderson at Society's 40th Birthday Party.

Three charter members, all that are left in Manchester of the 15 persons that formed the lodge known as Swedish Benevolent Society Segar back in 1889—forty years ago—answered the roll call at the anniversary celebration in Orange Hall Saturday night.

They were: Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kjellson and Oscar Anderson, all of Ridge street. Mrs. Kjellson, as the only charter woman member living was presented with a bouquet of flowers. One other charter member still connected with Segar—now resides in the Far West. The remainder of the original fifteen members are either dead or have moved from this vicinity, severing their connections with the society.

Nearly 130 members of Segar were present to enjoy the chicken dinner served by Gus Ulrich. Henning Johnson acted as toastmaster and called on several of the older people at the table for remarks, including Nils Anderson, of Hamlin street, who held the office of treasurer for 20 years and S. Emil Peterson of Alton street who has been financial secretary for the past 22 years.

Following the dinner a musical entertainment was given with piano solos by Miss Magna Nelson of this town, and solo by Miss Mildred Berglund and Oscar Abrahamson, both of New Britain. The audience enjoyed the selections very much and all three were called on for numerous encores. Miss Nelson accompanied Miss Berglund and the latter accompanied Mr. Abrahamson.

At the conclusion of the program Henning Johnson read a short history of Society Segar covering the forty year period, which showed that 643 names have been entered on the membership books of the lodge. Of this number 36 have died. The total membership now totals about 175.

From August 24, 1889 to December 31, 1928 inclusive the society has received in dues $45,770.01. Of this amount $26,889.03 has been paid out in sick benefits. Death claims have amounted to $3,285.99 and miscellaneous disbursements to $5,500.41 making a total expenditure of $35,654.64 in two score years. Cash on hand at the beginning of this year was $10,115.37.

The committee in charge of the celebration of the anniversary were: Alfred Johnson, chairman; Algot Johnson, Eric Nelson, Mrs. Esther Moebean, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Swanson, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Brandt and Mrs. Alfred Johnson.

Norfolk was brought here through his acquaintance with Ernest Roy a member of the committee in charge of the meeting. The others on the committee are Thomas Conran and Arthur Holmes. During the dinner hour the Count's orchestra composed of young north end musicians will entertain with popular selections.

UNION MAN HURT

Marion, Ind., Oct. 28.—(AP)—Less than a month after narrowly escaping death in an explosion that rocked the Labor Temple here, Andrew Legos, 36, suffered injuries when a bomb exploded in his automobile this morning as he attempted to start it.

Legos, an employe of a local glass works, was taken to a hospital where physicians said amputation of his leg might be necessary. Legos is recording secretary of the Glass Molders' Union and of the local branch of the American Federation of Labor. The bombing today led to the belief that Legos was meant to be the victim in the Labor Temple explosion.

FOUR HURT AT FIRE

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—A man and his wife were severely burned and two firemen suffered leg fractures today in a fire that swept through a five-story tenement house on Third avenue, near East 28th street. Twenty-nine other persons, men, women and children, either escaped unharmed, or were carried down fire escapes.

The injured, taken to Bellevue hospital, are John Jordan, 55 years old, his wife, Ellen, 50; and Joseph A. Kelly, 38, and Edward Crawford, 27, members of Engine Company 10. They were pinned to the floor when a section of the ballustrade floor hallway after the fire was under control. The Jordans, both unconscious were found in their smoke filled room in the front of the fourth floor by firemen, who carried them down the fire escape. They were revived by an emergency crew of the Consolidated Gas Company before being taken to the hospital.

SPEEDWAY PROBLEM

At great cost of time and money that stretch of Main street between the Center and Depot Square has been converted from a rough and treacherous driveway into a smooth and safe one. It has scarcely been opened for full use before it is the scene of an inexcusable fatal accident.

While it is true that the eccentric automobile laws of Connecticut assume to take away from the municipalities the right to establish inelastic speed limits, it is just as true that, by co-operation between the various departments of local authority, it is always possible to establish an understanding of what is the outside limit of speed safe "under the conditions" on any street of any town or city.

Manchester is confronted by a very serious responsibility through the conversion of its streets into speedways. It has the choice of doing something about it or facing the certainty of more and more and still more maimings and deaths.

ENCOURAGING

While the case itself is as sordid and commonplace as any to be encountered any day in the police courts of any large community, there is an element of real interest in the conviction of the theatrical manager Alexander Pantages' at Los Angeles on a charge of assault on a girl dancer who went to his office seeking employment.

This case was one of those concerning which it is quite impossible to arrive at a fixed opinion, as to guilt or innocence, outside the court room itself. Against the reputed tendencies of some men in the position of Pantages to take advantage of aspiring stage girls there is the ever present possibility of the girl in such a case being a blackmailer.

juries are not always swayed by the fact that a malefactor has a lot of money. This verdict, coming on top of the conviction of Albert B. Fall for accepting a bribe in the Elk Hills case, would seem to show that the way of the transgressor cannot be at all assured of smoothing through an oiling with dollars.

A GOOD JOB

The position consistently taken during the last two years by this newspaper, that the bull stock market which produced steadily increasing inflation of stock values over a very long period was not only a trap for the unwary investor but a detriment to general business, is now supported by scores of the financial and industrial leaders of the country.

Almost with one accord these people are greeting the collapse of the bull market if not exactly with cheers at least with expressions of profound satisfaction. "It will clear the atmosphere and remove many difficulties from the path of legitimate business," is the sum of their voiced opinions.

In a very few highly specialized "luxury" businesses, it is possible that the bursting of the stock market bubble may be reflected by diminished demand. Perhaps there will be fewer mahogany yachts built during the next several years and the polo pony industry may suffer somewhat.

While the explosion has impoverished a number of people, their misfortune is a personal, not a nationally economic one. Not a single dollar of actual wealth has disappeared in the deflation.

BRAND STILL STRONG

Acceptance of the post of minister of foreign affairs in the new Socialistic French cabinet by Aristide Briand, eleven times premier, will go far toward reassuring the world that the political crisis in France is not fraught with essential disaster to all plans for the liquidation of the war and the establishment of world peace.

Internal French politics are beyond the ken of the ordinary American. Interest in the political affairs of that country possess, in America, next to no general interest save insofar as they are international in their reflexes.

In the worst event, Daladier will have no majority without the votes in the chamber of deputies that come along with Briand. Either the new government must play the game largely under the sanction of its foreign minister or else the Socialist regime will prove to be but a brief interlude.

A FULL LIFE

The passing of Harry I. Horton, Hartford Courant editorial writer and veteran of the newspaper field, marks the close of a full life. Political expert, humorist, commentator on a thousand and one phases of human existence, he lived the typical career of the born and trained journalistic worker in which there is no room for idling.

Fame in its more lustrous and shining aspects does not come to the Harry I. Hortons. Largely their work, so far as the public is concerned, is anonymous. But in the circles of their craft, in that little behind-the-scenes world which is the newspaper shop, they gain a standing which is more precious to them than the acclaim of a nation of strangers.

True to the traditions of his profession, Mr. Horton, despite illness and falling strength, stuck to the newspaper game almost to the last gasp. After all, he probably never saw the time he would have swapped jobs with any prince of state of finance or of politics. There are worse lives to live fully.

WARDEN SCOTT

In the death of Warden Henry K. W. Scott the state prison at Wethersfield loses a chief executive who may or may not be replaced by another of equal capacity. In these days when there is so much evidence that something is all wrong with prison management in many parts of the country it is becoming better realized that very special qualities are demanded of prison administrators. Martinets fall and milksofs fall and prisons become bedlams of revolt under both kinds of wardens.

Warden Scott was neither sort. He was a stern disciplinarian and he was utterly free from the urge of inherent cruelty. He was firmness itself and he was kindness itself. He combined the qualities of command and of leadership which must be correlated in a successful prison wardenship. Therefore he was successful. Connecticut will be fortunate if whoever follows him in this extremely difficult position shall prove to be his equal.

Personally Warden Scott was a good deal of a hero. To be able to carry on as he did, to retain that fine balance of heart and mind and temperament which distinguished his work, under the handicap of physical suffering and confronted by an inevitable doom, is a splendid manifestation of fortitude and of essential nobility of character.

PLAYBOYS

Apparently the East Hampton tax collector, now charged with absconding with town funds, was just a playboy. So was the Kokomo, Ind., student at a college in Muncie, whom a garage man found stealing gasoline in his establishment and shot dead. So are half of the amateur stickup men who get arrested and nearly all of the till-tapping clerks who never get arrested. The country is over-balloated with playboys.

The main question is, Is the playboy to blame for being a playboy or does the fault lie somewhere else? Our impression is that parents and schools are both responsible. But the parent, in many cases, isn't a responsible party. The school is.

The school system errs doubly. It overemphasizes play in the concrete, which is a positive error. It does nothing whatever to inculcate in youth a realization of economic truth and a sense of its responsibility to contribute to the national life as much at least as it consumes. That is a negative error but a bad one.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Oct. 28.—The weekly who and what's what in Manhattan. George Kaufman, the playwright, whose name is connected with two successful drama collaborations at the moment—the other parties being Ring Lardner and Alexander Woollcott—last on his New York Times. There he appears each week, just as though he hadn't made a fortune or two from his plays. One day a week Kaufman sits down to a typewriter and taps out his column as of old.

George Gershwin, who abelved his very popular jazz compositions to grand opera "The Dybbuk" for the Metropolitan, started out life among what they are pleased to call the "herring eaters," under the name of Bruskina. He occupies a pent house, which is accepted as the last word in modernistic decoration.

The best performance to be seen on Broadway is not being done by a famous prominence, but on the stage of the bright lights: Arthur Byron in "The Criminal Code"; Muriel Kirkland in "Strictly Dishonorable"; Jean Dixon in "June Moon"; Josephine Hutchinson in "Mlle. Bourrat"; and Jack Lee in "Subway Express."

When Mme. Curie arrived in America, the men who greeted her were advised to kiss her hand, rather than to shake it, because radium burns make handshaking painful to the famous woman scientist.

Maurice Dekobra, the most popular romance writer of France, will be the bright and particularly lion of the winter literary season. He will arrive about the same time as his next novel, "Serenade to the Hangman." Advance information indicates that he'll hit the fair ladies of the salons as no visitor has since Michael Arlen.

John D. Rockefeller's menage in the mid-Fifties retains 24 maids. And J. P. Morgan, well-known town banker, had his Murry Hill barn painted one day last week. . . . And while Rudy Valle cleans up most of the money in the world, his brother runs a switchboard in Rudy's night club. . . . La Argentina, the Spanish dancer who now turns them away at fancy prices, had to take small dancing jobs years ago.

Daily WASHINGTON LETTER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the seventh of a series of articles by Rodney Dutcher on the operations of Washington lobbyists in the past.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington—Lobbyists in the Grant administration were often able to recruit the aid of the president himself in furthering their schemes for public plunder. These lobbyists did not hesitate to attempt to bribe the speaker of the House or to offer the vice president a prosperous corporation job to count on after his term expired.

It seemed as if nearly everyone in public life were selling out to the highest bidder and those who protested the general practice were subject to ostracism and political attack. Cabinet members, senators, congressmen and innumerable lesser officials were the lobbyist's willing prey. Bribery was used even to obtain passage of the $7,000,000 Alaska Purchase bill.

The railroads maintained the most effective lobbies. A correspondent suggested that Congress adjourn permanently, leaving the place in the hands of the business of this establishment will be done hereafter in the office of the Pennsylvania Railroad.

The Worst of All Several of the road's attorneys were in Congress. Claude G. Bowers, in "The Tragic Era," says "the lobby was more than ever open and insolent, that of the railroads, under the vigilant eye of Tom Scott, the most brazen and defiant of all." Attorney General Williams was regarded as the Pacific Railroad's own man.

The Credit Mobilier incident, involving the Union Pacific, was one of the major scandals of the time. Congress had given the Union Pacific $27,000,000 in bonds and land. Credit Mobilier was the name of the stock company used to milk the road of the huge subsidies granted it by the government. Congressman Oakes Ames was given stock to distribute among influential members of Congress as a precaution against an investigation. The bribery revelations involved Vice President Colfax, Vice President-elect Wilson, a senator and the chairman of the most important House committee, including a future president, James A. Garfield. A stacked committee, whitewashed all but Ames in its report.

Speaker James G. Blaine, one of the most distinguished statesmen of his time, was badly tarred in 1876. Several years previously Blaine, who had helped the Little Rock & Fort Smith Railroad with one of its land-grant bills, was permitted to sell a large amount of the road's bonds and stock and to keep $125,000 in bonds which should have gone to the customers as a personal commission, plus $32,000 brokerage commission. When the road went broke and the bonds went bad the customers became incensed and the only way to avoid exposure for Blaine was to take back the bonds and reimburse the buyers.

Suddenly three railroads, including the Union Pacific, began to buy up the Little Rock & Fort Smith bonds. It was charged that they were keeping Blaine's name in return for his great legislative influence. Tom Scott, the Union Pacific's chief lobbyist, was an important figure in the deal. The facts damaged Blaine politically.

and probably kept him from the presidency. President Grant's name figured in Jay Gould's attempt to corner the gold market. Instead of leaving it to a lobbyist, Gould himself had entertained often helped the speculators and lobbyists. When a group of speculators was demanding that we seize San Domingo, Grant went himself to the Capitol and lobbied with senators for annexation. He accepted gifts from men who were here to seek profitable favors and privileges. He nearly always appeared to be on the side of the corrupt and opposed to those who prosecuted corruption.

He personally lobbied for North Pacific subsidies to Jay Cooke. Cooke bribed some congressmen, had others—including Blaine—under financial obligation, maintained a powerful lobby which included state governors and had invited the president on fishing trips. Grant had his reward in 1872 when the railroads, including Blaine—under other favored industries poured money into his campaign chest.

A. R. Corbin, Grant's brother-in-law and an associate of Gould, was a notorious lobbyist for corrupt bills. A headquarters of lobbyists was John Weicher's restaurant, patronized by nearly all the statesmen and politicians. "There is not a measure noted for importance in the last ten years but can be traced to these rooms," someone wrote. "Many were the meals and bottles of wines which lobbyists bought for senators."

This was the period in which Mark Twain set "The Gilded Age," the central character of which was a beautiful girl lobbyist who vamped the leaders of Congress into supporting the purchase of a parcel of Tennessee land for a fabulous sum.

The capital swarmed with ladies of indifferent morality, representing perfectly respectable business organizations in pursuit of privilege," says Bowers. "Attractive, fashionably dressed, and dashing were these women of the most daring and corrupt in the land. They descended on a legislative body for purposes of self. . . . The more audacious took pretentious houses as for a social campaign. These, the grand duchesses of the tribe, were good to look upon, clever conversationalists, altogether pleasing and, while most were unmarried, their God-and-morality employers had conveniently provided them with husbands."

Vamping Congressmen "They had abundance on the board, wine and brandy, but it was the seductive charms of these ladies that lured statesmen to their parties. They subtly conveyed the impression that, tired of their prosy husbands, they were ready for a romantic interlude. . . . The cynical correspondent, studying her methods, noted that she will flare up at a mere glance of curiosity from a stranger, and pardon a kiss red-hot on the lips from a man who has a wife. . . . The lever of lust is used to pry up more legislators to the stinking point when money itself does not avail to seduce. That there was not little blackmailing we may be sure. . . . "The industrialists had marched on in a mass upon the capital—iron, coal, steel, wool, leather—in the making of the tariff act that year."

Tomorrow: Lobbying in the last quarter of the century.

HEALTH-DIET ADVICE

By Dr. Frank McCoy says "The Best Way to Health"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

DANGERS OF RHEUMATISM. In some cases—even where there are two or three bowel movements daily, there will be a large amount of intestinal poisoning because the colon is inflamed and irritated with a condition known as colitis. In this condition the colon will reabsorb vast quantities of toxic material which must again pass through the blood before it can be eliminated. In addition to these causes from absorption of intestinal poisonings, the patient eats the wrong kind of food, too much food or food combined from over-work or develops local infections in some place in the body, then the one with a tendency to the rheumatic diathesis develops some form of rheumatism. (More tomorrow about rheumatism.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Pellagra. Question: G. H. asks:—"What causes pellagra?" Answer:—Pellagra is a disorder caused by the absence of organic minerals in your food, and partly because of the acidosis produced from using an excess of over-refined starch—taking for example such de-vitalized foods as cornmeal from which the hull has been entirely removed.

Whooping Cough. Question: Mrs. D. F. asks:—"Will you kindly advise what to give my children as a tonic after whooping cough? Also, is it a bad sign when a child's finger and toe nails grow very slowly?" Answer:—Tonics are only stimulants and should not be given to children. In recovering from whooping cough it is necessary to take a carefully balanced diet and to increase exercise each day in order to regain lost strength. The slow growing of finger and toe nails is because of a lack of organic minerals which go to make up the composition of the nails, bones, and hair and teeth.

Internal Bath. Question: Mrs. H. asks:—"Will you please explain what you mean by an internal bath? One woman I know is drinking a quart of warm water night and morning, and another is using two quarts of warm water as an emema night and morning. Is this correct? Also, is a warm bath in a tub all right when one hasn't a shower?"

Answer:—When the term, "internal bath" is used it usually refers to a washing of the colon by what is otherwise known as an emema. It is true that one can wash out the stomach by drinking large quantities of water, but this has very different effect upon the intestine, as the water is absorbed mostly in the stomach. You can arrange a very satisfactory shower by securing one of the shower attachments which connects with your bathtub faucet. A shower can be taken while sitting or squatting in the tub. It is better to use cool or cold water, as warm water is always enervating.

AUTO RACER KILLED

Woodbridge, N. J., Oct. 28.—(AP.)—A broken steering arm was blamed today for the death of John Rohrer, automobile race driver whose car broke through a guard rail during a race at the Evans speedway.

He was competing in a seven and one-half mile spring event yesterday and was on one of the turns when he lost control of his machine. The car went down a 30-foot embankment rolled over several times, and came to rest against the trunk of a tree in which several small boys were perched to watch the races.

He died on the way to a hospital in Perth Amboy. He was 25 years old and lived in McAdoo, Pa. A crowd of 8,000 spectators witnessed the accident.

N. Y. OPERA SEASON TO OPEN TONIGHT

Lucrezia to Play Same Role She Played Nineteen Years Ago in Paris.

New York, Oct. 28.—(AP)—One night in Paris, 19 years ago the Metropolitan Opera Company of New York gave Puccini's "Manon Lescaut."

In the title role that evening appeared a young and unknown soprano—a tiny, diffident Spanish girl from Valencia, who arrived for rehearsals a few days before with her glossy black hair in pigtail curls up in tight knobs over her ears.

The next day all Paris was talking about "La Petite Bori."

Two years later, in that same role, she made her American debut at the opening of the Metropolitan opera season at home.

And around the golden horseshoe went the whisper: "Lucrezia Bori— isn't she enchanting?"

Tonight the Metropolitan will open its season of 1929—an opening which, with long skirts back in fashion, should have about it something of the trailing magnificence of pre-war seasons.

Again the Star. And again "La Petite Bori" will be the lovely, wistful Manon. Incidentally, Opera House attaches said it will be the first time Mme. Bori has sung at a Metropolitan opening since the night of her American debut, 17 years ago.

Laughingly and tenderly, for Lucrezia Bori is greatly beloved by everyone at the Metropolitan, from the conductors and her fellow stars down to the switch board operator—some of them recalled today the first time they had seen her, when she appeared at rehearsals for "Manon Lescaut" in Paris, 19 years ago.

General Manager Giulio Gatti-Casazza had been looking about for someone to sing the role of Manon. Several Italian sopranos, all of them older and better known than the young Spanish singer, had been sent him for tryouts. None would do.

Was Very Young. Finally one day he heard the youthful Lucrezia Bori, daughter of Spanish colonel. She was very young, hardly more than a child, and she had been studying music in Spain. Only that winter, in Italy, she had sung for the first time in Paris.

He engaged her at once, and shortly thereafter she appeared in Paris for rehearsals, bringing with her for her chaperone, her mother having died, the landlady of the

"She was the most diffident, funniest little thing you ever saw," William Guard, veteran director of publicity of the Metropolitan, said today. "So very, very bashful, with her hair in pigtails wound up in little knobs over her ears. But my, my how she could sing."

The landlady chaperone, Mr. Guard explained, was Madame Bonini, whose home in Milan became celebrated because so many operatic stars had lived there while studying.

In the gorgeous costumes of the 18th Century, Mme. Bori tonight will add greatly to the magnificence of the Metropolitan opening, which is in itself probably the most colorful social event in America, outside of diplomatic receptions in Washington.

And she is still "La Petite Bori," a woman of surpassing loveliness and grace. Some singers, after they have become prima donnas, grow stout and mature. But not Lucrezia Bori.

"The Italian 'Manon' of Puccini—ah, yes, it is my debut opera," she smiled today. "I have made my debut but in it, not only in New York and Paris, but in Buenos Aires and in Italy."

"But do you know, I really think I like the French 'Manon,' the 'Manon' of Massenet, better?"

The Innocent Cheat

By Ruth Dewey Groves
AUTHOR OF "RICH GIRL—POOR GIRL," ETC.

THIS HAS HAPPENED

HELEN PAGE thinks she is in love with her guardian, LEONARD BRENT, who changes his plans for her future after meeting a dying man named NELLIN. Brent presents the girl to a millionaire, CYRIL CUNNINGHAM, as his heiress and offers proof which the lonely old man accepts. Among Helen's new friends are EVA ENNIS and her brother ROBERT. Brent finds another locket like the one he had taken from Nellin to prove Helen's identity and decides to get Cunningham out of the way quickly. He slyly administers a shock which proves fatal and the servants find the old man dead in bed. Then Brent wins Helen's promise to marry him. Later she and Bob realize they love each other but she tells him she is engaged after Brent refuses to release her.

Eva asks Bob why he is neglecting Helen and flirting with another girl. When he tells her that Helen is engaged to Brent she catches lapses after admitting that he has been making love to her. In a fit of hysteria she tries to take poison but Bob prevents her and tells her what a cad Brent is. Helen denounces Brent and sneeringly tells her that she is not the real heiress but the daughter of one of his crook pals and if she refuses to marry him and keep the money he will expose her as an impostor. He leaves her tortured with the story and when Bob comes she dares not see him. She decides to demand Brent's proof, and when she arrives Eva is waiting for him, too. Helen persuades Eva to go home, but while writing a note at the desk she spies the locket which she had lost. Helen thinks it is hers until they open it and find Nellin's picture instead of Evangeline Cunningham's. Just then Brent came in and snatched the locket. Helen ran out wildly with it and just made a descending elevator while Brent crashed through the half-closed door to his death.

CHAPTER XLVII
Helen said nothing about the locket to Eva nor to Bob when he came. Before her arrival she had seen clearly that it was a clue to the real heiress. And she was frightened.

Suppose she told them the truth—that she was an impostor, a cheat, the daughter of a criminal? The thought aroused all the horror she had lived through since Brent had told her that she was not the granddaughter of the millionaire who had experienced when it flashed upon her that he could not carry out his threat to prevent her from marrying Bob, left her now.

She felt herself caught in an agony of indecision. To keep silent, to go on without fear, happily, with Bob; this was her temptation. She could do so much good with the money, as much good as anyone.

But the real heiress? What about her? Did she exist? Could she be found? Would Mrs. Ennis know where she was? But then, why to do with the money? Why had she remained silent? These questions were millionths that weighted Helen's hopes to earth.

Before her lay a golden future—could she only destroy the one thing that stood between it and her—her conscience; could she only forget that somewhere there might be a girl she had robbed, a girl living in poverty perhaps.

When Bob came she was trembling with mental agony. He came straight across the room to her and took her in his arms. She rested there without offering any resistance, sobbing brokenly.

He could not get the story of what had happened from her. Someone else in the apartment told him of Brent's tragic death.

Helen clung to him while he listened. To lose him now! Suddenly she went limp in his arms. He thought she was fainted with hearing the accident gone over.

He carried her to the divan and put her gently down. She opened her eyes and waved away those who gathered round to help her. "Eva needs you," she said to Bob. "She is in . . ." She could not say Brent's name, but Bob followed her glance to the bedroom door and understood.

Still he hesitated and Helen told him he must go to his sister. Presently he came back, with Eva leaning against him, dragging herself along with halting steps.

He found Helen waiting, with her hat and coat, and the superintendent went down with them, helping Helen to her car.

She got in first, and held out her arm for Eva, who was in a state bordering on complete collapse. Nothing touching on the accident was said during the drive to Yonkers. For the most part Eva lay quiet against Helen. Now and then she shuddered, or moaned pitifully.

Helen could do nothing to comfort her beyond drawing her closer. Her own heart was breaking. Mrs. Ennis ran out when they stopped before the house, and she had been wild since discovering that Eva had slipped out of the house and disappeared.

Frankly she had telephoned Bramblewood only to learn that Helen was not at home, and Mrs. Wethering had not known or could not say where she had gone. Then she had tried to reach Bob. He, she was told, had been called away from his work by a telephone message. She was in despair but did not know what to do.

was acting so strangely. She would have understood Bob's behavior had she witnessed a scene that took place between him and Helen while she was with Eva.

"Oh don't, please don't!" Helen had cried sharply when he sought to embrace her.

Bob had drawn back, astonished. This, in contrast to the way she had shown her need for him in Brent's apartment! It staggered him.

Helen dared not try to explain. She had sealed her fate in her own mind. In a little while Bob would know that she was a fraud—that she had come by crooked paths into his life. Until then she would not let herself accept his love.

His pleadings proving unavailing, Bob had flung himself out of the room in desperate discouragement. His mother heard him come upstairs and slam his door behind him.

He was there still when she went down for the milk and when she came back with it. Then she had tapped at the door and he had told her to go away and let him alone.

She sighed heavily over her inability to understand her children as she made her way to the living room where Helen had said she would wait when she left the kitchen.

"I'm sorry we left you alone," she apologized, and sat wearily down in a chair.

"It gave me time to think," Helen smiled wanly. "What I want to say to you is important, Mrs. Ennis, that I don't want to muddle it. And I've been too confused to know how to put it—until just now."

"Well, my dear, what is it?" Mrs. Ennis asked, thinking that, of course, it concerned Bob.

"It's about . . . a locket," Helen answered.

Mrs. Ennis started and looked at her more searchingly.

"The locket?" she asked. "Helen went on, constraining herself to speak calmly. "We found it—in Mr. Brent's possession."

"Mr. Brent?"

"Yes, undoubtedly he found it at Bramblewood. I do not know if he learned that Eva lost it."

Mrs. Ennis had grown highly excited. "Where is it?" she cried.

"I have it," Eva said quietly, "here." She reached for her bag, opened it and brought out the locket.

Mrs. Ennis took it with a cry of relief.

"I would like to ask you," Helen began, "where you got it and—"

Mrs. Ennis closed her hand over the locket, hiding it from sight.

"I don't want to talk about it," she said unasily.

"But I am not asking through the curiosity," Helen hastened to assure her. "You see, I know it is something you treasure highly and I have good reason to believe that it is an important clue to a secret," she added, putting off her confession in a dismy way.

The WOMAN'S DAY

Orchids have never been my favorite flowers, but they have always held great mystery and interest for me.

In my ignorance, I have pictured them as parasites in tropical swamps, swarming with brilliant birds and blue-green butterflies. Instead, I learn that those exotic blossoms that nestle so cozily on ermine coats and black velvet gowns, grow in New Jersey and other quite civilized regions.

Which probably explains why any little hole-in-the-wall florist in New York City always has a line of orchids ranging from five dollars apiece upward, and why, in spite of their supposed rarity, orchids are the one flower you can always get in any season.

Within a few miles of New York City, in Bound Brook, N. J., are orchid nurseries started 22 years ago, that now cover some 50 acres, with greenhouses that accommodate as many as 185,000 a time.

Recent years these nurseries were sold to a large corporation for $2,500,000—which makes orchid raising big league business. The new corporation plans to establish greenhouses in other parts of the country, using bulbs developed at the Bound Brook nurseries. They have specimens that are so rare that they cost $700 apiece.

It seems that it takes seven years to produce an orchid, even with modern science, and that extreme care is required to bring them to their maturity.

Ask any pretty chorus girl to tell you how long it takes them to wilt!

In the Air Mode
If you are old enough, you may remember the hideous costumes women wore when they first took automobile in a serious way.

The dusters, long chiffon veils, goggles, and so-called tourist coats should be forgotten with the generation who wore them. Why any marriage licenses were taken out during that time, I shall never understand.

But aviation finds us more style conscious, with the sartorial side of flying taken care of right at the start.

Thus Fay Gillis, who is both a seller of flying machines and a flying instructor, has designed a costume to make every woman who is not so already, air minded.

The suit follows the general architectural idea of the overall—just glorification. It comes in leather, in delightful shades of blue, green, or red, with zipper fastenings on the sleeves, from neck to waist, and from ankle to knee. Even the nifty little pockets are zippered. Then the garment is neatly lined with sheep-skin, closely clipped, so that the garment is less weighty and is also more kindly to the silhouette.

Sports for women can scarcely be more popular than the costumes they call for. Making golf and tennis togs so smart and snappy has done much to increase interest in the court and the links—to say nothing of the added volunteers to swimming pools and beaches when bathing togs went seductive.

A THOUGHT
Therefore we conclude a man is justified in faith without the deeds of the law.—Romans 3:28.

Cars Blamed For Pump Dilemma In Village Where Milton Wrote

Chalfont St. Giles, England.—(AP)—A pump problem disturbs the peace of mind of this village where blind Milton wrote some of his verse.

It seems the village pump, which for centuries had stood in the middle of the main street, directly over the well from which it drew water, began getting in the way of motorists several years ago.

A red lantern was hung on it at night; but still the reckless drivers knocked it down. Finally it was decided, not without misgivings, to move the historic pump to the village green, just a few yards away.

After that, however, the pump never seemed to be itself. During the recent prolonged drought it would not work at all, and villagers who previously had depended on it had to buy water elsewhere and pay a penny a pail for it.

The parish council decided to move the pump back to its old stand, automobiles or no automobiles. But the highway committee of the rural council to which the proposal was submitted for approval vetoed it.

That has offended the pro-pump section of the village population; the anti-pumpers, on the other hand, point out that the old pump has been working better lately since it was overhauled and a mouth-organ removed from its pulpit.

"Let it stay where it is. It's all right now," they argue. And so the controversy rages.

Today is the 153rd anniversary of the Battle of White Plains, which was fought on Oct. 28, 1776, in the Revolutionary War.

The battle took place on Chatterton Hill, 22 miles northeast of the center of New York City. On Oct. 12, 1776, General Howe occupied Throgs Neck in Westchester county, but was held there for several days while Washington rapidly evacuated Manhattan Island, except Fort Mifflin, and concentrated his forces on White Plains.

Howe sent 4,000 men against the outpost on Chatterton Hill, west of the Bronx river, and compelled 1,400 Americans stationed there under General McDougall to withdraw to Washington's camp. The British lost about 229 men and the Americans 140. Howe's attack on the main American army was delayed and on the 31st of October Washington took up an unassailable position at North Castle.

White Plains was incorporated as a town in 1788.

HEALTH

PEOPLE OF BYGONE
DAY HAD ODD NOTIONS ABOUT TOOTHACHE

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBURN
Editor of Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine.

When a tooth aches the trouble is usually due to an infection around the root, inflammation of the gums, or a cavity which leaves the nerves exposed. These are the facts in the case, actually discovered only in the last century.

Because the people of an earlier day did not know the causes of toothaches, they developed all sorts of superstitions as to their causes. It was thought that one could be exposed to the Evil Eye with a resultant toothache. There were supposed to be special gods who presided over the teeth and who caused them to ache as a means of revenge or to command respect.

It must be remembered that pharaoh was punished according to the Biblical text by being afflicted with the plagues.

In order to appease the gods who caused toothache, all sorts of gifts were taken to the shrine and these deposited. It is not surprising, however, that the gods were especially successful in curing toothaches.

Among many people it was believed that toothache was caused by a demon that was identified with a worm. The worm, it was thought, got to the gum and irritated the tooth. Writings as late as the middle of the eighteenth century discussed the possibility of finding these worms. When the famous founder of microscopy, Leeuwenhoek, discovered the "true" nature of germs of various kinds in the tartar scraped from between the teeth in 1683, it was believed that he had verified this fact.

In many European countries to-day, uneducated people still think that a worm is the cause. The reason probably is that a tooth which was pulled had some of the pulp hanging at the end and this had a worm-like appearance.

Because of this belief in the worm as a cause of toothache, many of the popular remedies are supposed to be worm to come forth and be destroyed.

They have been using it for several hours. These fall days, when frost gives a nip to the air at night, it is a temptation to the children to wear only an inch or two for a Johnny catches cold.

Another thing Johnny's mother is likely to do is to scan the sky, and if she sees nothing but white clouds, warn her son to hurry home from school; he "might catch a cold" if he stays out for such a damp, dreary day.

Of course, there is no day like a sunny day. But they cannot all be sunny days, and one thing should be borne firmly in mind: Outside air is at all times better than house air!

After school, it would be far better advice for Johnny's mother to say, "Stay out for an hour, son. Walk straight, take deep breaths, and don't sit down on the damp ground or on any damp surfaces."

Or let him play on the neighborhood football team. It's better for him to be moving or exercising than standing still, particularly if the weather is sharp or damp. But in some ways, somehow, anyhow, let him get that pure air into his lungs.

At night, don't raise the window a few inches. Put them up the whole way. Get a screen, as cheap as you like, and put it near the bed to keep off draughts. On very cold nights, see that his head is protected by a cap. Of course, the bedclothes must be light.

Avenging Parrot

THIS HAS HAPPENED

Through the influence of his uncle, POLICE COMMISSIONER O'BRIEN, BONNIE DUNDEE gets a job as "silly" detective under LEUTENANT JOHN STRAWN of the homicide squad of Hamilton, a mid-western city.

On his first assignment Dundee takes a room incognito in MRS. RHODES' boarding house in order to be near a MRS. EMMA HOGARTH, who has written the police for protection, saying her life and money are in danger, and placing emphasis on EMIL SEVIER, a former boarder. Dundee's room is on the third floor near that of JEWEL BRIGGS, stenographer; DAISY SHEPHERD, saleswoman, and THEDA, housemaid.

At dinner Dundee meets his fellow boarders: MR. and MRS. SHARP, CORA BARKER, pianist in a local theater; WALTER STYLES, proprietor of a men's furnishings store; NORMA FAIGE, his pretty fiancée; BERT MAGNUS, bookmaker; amateur scenario writer; HENRY DOWD, middle-aged, nondescript, a newcomer out of work.

Dundee is reflecting that this is a harmless, friendly group when a horrible cry of "Murder!" rings out. DUSTY RHODES, waitress, has been shot. Mrs. Rhodes assures the boarders the cry came from CAPT. Mrs. Hogarth's parrot. Dundee is told of Mrs. Hogarth's miserliness, how she is roombound because of heart trouble, and of her constant chattering of her will to name a new favorite. Norma, who is her latest favorite, agrees to introduce Dundee to the "woman of mystery" that night.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER III

So it was decided, before dessert was reached, that Bonnie Dundee was to be introduced to Mrs. Hogarth that evening. Satisfied that the prospective meeting had been arranged adroitly, the young detective incognito leaned back in his chair and studied his fellowboarders keenly.

If, by chance, old Mrs. Hogarth was right and her life really in danger, what an opportunity he now had to observe all of his possible suspects before the crime was committed or committed. But that was a foolish thought, he told himself sharply. It was his job to see that the crime was not committed. Why, that was what he was there for—not to suffer palpitation of the heart because a remarkably pretty girl, whom he had never seen before that evening, smiled at him adorably. Besides, she was already engaged to that Styles chap. Though what she could see in him.

Oh, of course, Styles was good-looking enough, with that thick, black, bushy hair and those candid eyes. But what she could see in him? Dundee didn't look quite so happy and carefree as a newly engaged man is supposed to look. Maybe Styles had got himself engaged to Norma Faige just to make sure of the old lady's money, which he had lost when the will had been changed in the girl's favor. Suppose that was why he looked so well-occupied now? Had the newly engaged pair quarreled already over Norma's fiercely upright determination to break the news of the engagement, that very evening, although it meant, in all probability, her being cut out of the will? If that was so, Dundee told himself with a grin, he had better be ready to break the engagement.

"Bert, you aren't eating a thing!"

It was Cora Barker's voice, full of mingled anxiety and tenderness, that jerked Bonnie Dundee back from his day-dreaming. Though the words were addressed to him, he turned to the man on his left, Magnus, his name was wasn't it?

"Too hot to eat, Cora." Bert Magnus answered, with a deep sigh, as he pushed aside the dessert which had been served him.

Dundee turned to look at him with more attention than he had yet bestowed upon his neighbor. His keen ears had told him that Cora Barker was in love with this man, and he wondered what sort of person her features, pasted on her heart, had chosen. He saw a man of medium height; dark-brown, rather oily hair going a little thin on top; light-gray eyes, behind rimless pince nez; a stubby, reddish mustache, many shades lighter than his hair. Neither handsome nor homely; just another man, say 35 years old. What did Cora Barker find in him, Dundee wondered?

"He was soon to learn.

"Bert, tell me," commanded urgently, leaning as far across the table as possible. "Have you heard from your scenario?"

"Hasn't anyone told you yet?" Magnus asked, rather irritably. "I supposed it was common gossip by this time that the story was returned—today. Not even a rejection slip. In fact, the envelope hadn't been opened, or the studio wants to pretend it hadn't."

"Oh, Bert!" Cora's voice was heavy with disappointment and sympathy. "And it's such a wonderful scenario, too! I bet they did open it, and had it copied, so they could steal your plot! You just wait! I bet I look up from my piano some day next winter and see your story unwinding on the screen!" She turned her indignant black eyes upon Bonnie Dundee. "Mr. Magnus writes scenarios, Mr. Dundee, and you can take my word for it that this story of his that came back today is better than nine out of 10 movies I have to look at. I play the piano in a movie theater over on Grand street, you know."

There was nothing but sympathy in Dundee's eyes as he turned to Bert Magnus. "I say—I'm awfully sorry you got a rotten break on your story, old man. Have you—sold any yet?"

"I had a very encouraging letter from the scenario school whose agents I subscribed to," Magnus evaded, stiffly. "Well—if you'll excuse me, I'll go up and do some work. I'm a bookkeeper, so I only

"You'll be nice to her, won't you, Mr. Dundee? Not—laugh at her, even to yourself?"

SALVATION ARMY HEAD DENIES LONDON RUMOR

London, Oct. 28.—(AP)—General Higgins, new head of the Salvation Army, returning from Canada made emphatic denial that members of the family of the late General Booth had been victimized under his regime.

He termed absolutely false also reports that negotiations had been opened in the United States for financial aid. It was no secret he said that self-dental appeal contributions had fallen off but weekly contributions of Salvationists themselves had increased steadily. There was no necessity, he insisted, for asking aid in the United States.

He declared he had received unsought assurances from Commissioner Catherine Booth on her own and her mother's behalf that they had made no representations regarding "victimization." Two London Sunday newspapers carried the statements which occasioned the denials.

Weekly Cable Review

By Associated Press

With the departure of Prime Minister MacDonald for home and announcement of four appointments to the American delegation, the work on the London naval conference entered its second stage this week. The scene now shifts to Europe, where Parliaments are meeting again and ministers preparing for battle.

Secretary of State Stimson, Senators Reed and Robinson, and Ambassador Dawes have so far been named to represent the United States.

Mr. MacDonald, whose visit to President Hoover sent England and the United States so far on the way to a sympathetic and intelligent understanding in international affairs, will face, for the first time since the Anglo-American conversations really got before the public, Parliament where his party is in the minority.

There have been no signs of a Tory or Liberal offensive against Labor, both opposition parties seem a little bit at loss for political ammunition; but it is certain that some effort will be made by the Tories to attack the government on the question of resuming full relations with Soviet Russia. Parliament will be asked to approve exchange of ambassadors between the two countries.

Aristide Briand, foremost statesman of France, was less lucky than Mr. MacDonald. His government, known since its formation on July 29, at the "Vatican Cabinet," was overthrown.

France, where ministries have had rocky road to travel since the war, is thus in the midst of another Cabinet crisis, and the progress of the great international negotiations in which she is involved is menaced.

The success of the London naval conference, French approval of the Young plan as modified at the Hague conference, the rapidity with which French soldiers are withdrawn from the Rhineland, and the question of the Saar valley, are all affected by M. Briand's fall.

Edouard Daladier, leader of the Radical Socialist Party and several times a cabinet minister, will try to form a government. M. Briand will be minister of foreign affairs in the new Cabinet.

France indicated she was willing to enter an agreement with Italy to prevent a naval construction race, but was determined not to accept parity with her erstwhile "Latin sister."

There was some ill-feeling against France in the Italian press over the attempted assassination of Crown Prince Humbert of Italy by an Italian anti-Fascist who came to Brussels from Paris. Italy objects to the asylum that France gives to Italian political refugees.

The crown prince escaped unharm. He was in Brussels for the official announcement of his engagement to Princess Marie Jose of Belgium.

Repercussions of a heavy break on the New York Stock Exchange were felt in European money markets, which have long been uneasy over the "bullish" movement in Wall street.

Urban F. Diteman, Jr., Montana cattleman, succumbed to the lure of trans-Atlantic flights, setting out for London from Newfoundland in a small airplane. Hope for his safety was generally abandoned when he was long overdue abroad and had not been reported anywhere.

Unnecessary Pain!

Nowadays, people take Bayer Aspirin for many little aches and pains, and as often as they encounter any pain.

Why not? It is a proven antidote for pain. It works!

And Bayer Aspirin tablets are utterly harmless. You have the medical profession's word for that; they do not depress the heart.

So, don't let a cold "run its course." Don't wait for a headache to "wear off." Or regard neuralgia, neuritis, or even rheumatism as something you must endure. Only a physician can cope with the cause of such pain, but you can always turn to Bayer Aspirin for relief.

Bayer Aspirin is always available, and it always helps. Familiarize yourself with its many uses, and avoid a lot of needless suffering.

GERMANY'S REPUBLICANS PLAN NEW DEFENSE ACT

Berlin, Oct. 23.—(AP)—New teeth will be put in the regulations for defense of German democracy, but no new prohibition of the return of the Kaiser to Germany, if the new Defense Act prepared by the Democrats for submission to the Reichstag winter session is passed.

Last July, when the old Defense of the Republic Act expired, a scare was raised in Germany and abroad that the former Kaiser might return and even attempt to inspire a coup d'etat by the Extreme Nationalists. The Democratic government parties, however, adopted a phlegmatic attitude toward the possibility and refused to be alarmed.

The late Dr. Stresemann's invariable comment, "what if he does return?" expressed the unanimous feeling of German Republicans, that the days of political assassinations in 1923, when the first Defense of the Republic Act was passed, are gone for good and the German republic of today stands on too firm a foundation to be shaken by the former ruler's possible decision to live on a country estate in Germany instead of in Holland.

True to this attitude, the Democrats have entirely omitted in the new Defense of the Republic Act a paragraph referring to the Kaiser's return.

Increasing bitterness during the summer months, however, between the two great groups of German parties, the Rightists, leaning toward monarchy, and the Progressives and Socialists on the Left, supporting the Republic, had led the government parties to feel strongly that a new Defense of the Republic Act must nevertheless be passed.

COMMUNITY CLUB TO ASK FOR FUNDS

Continuation of Work at North End Depends on Financial Support Given.

After eight years of helpful assistance in working the community spirit and interests of the north end, the Manchester Community Club is now facing its greatest test—that of seeking continued financial support due from a wide range of beneficiaries during the winter season.

Under able directorship the club has come to be known as the ideal environment for the youth of the north end, accomplishing much along social lines with those between the ages of 16 to 21. All branches of sports have been sponsored by the club and weekly entertainments, concerts, and parties have held interest throughout the year, especially during the winter season.

Miss Christina Mason, present director of the club, has returned and is actively engaged in planning a series of recreational activities for the coming season. Miss Mason is well fitted for her work, coming to the north end post after a successful season last year. She knows the likes and dislikes of her patrons and it is to be hoped that a unified and concerted effort will be made to guarantee the continued functioning of this valuable community organization.

Sutton is said to have ten moons, Jupiter nine, and Mars two.

There are at least four mistakes in the above picture. They may pertain to grammar, history, etiquette, drawing or whatever. See if you can find them. Then look at the scrambled word below and unscramble it by switching the letters around. Grade yourself 20 for each of the mistakes you find, and 20 for the word if you unscramble it.

CORRECTIONS (1) Chief is spelled incorrectly. (2) "What's the orders" is wrong should be, what are the orders. (3) One of the casters on the chair is missing. (4) There is no tin on the roof-top of the telephone on the left. (5) The scrambled word is OPPORTUNITY.

Said another little chick with a queer little shrug, "I wish I could find a nice little bug."

Said a third little chick with a shrill little squeal, "I wish I could find some nice yellow meal."

"Look here," said the mother, from the green garden patch: "If you want any breakfast, get busy and scratch."

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Within the barn the fat cow stopped and to the ground the whole bunch dropped. "Twas then that Clowny noticed that the Weenoes were not there. "For goodness sake," he shouted "How did they get off this crazy cow. We must have left them far behind. That doesn't seem quite fair. "Oh, that's their own fault," Scouty cried. "Perhaps they grew tired of this ride. I didn't see them disappear, but we can't worry now. I'll bet they're hiding among the trees. Well, they can do just as they please. I think we Tinymites were smart to stay upon the cow. The cow then went into the stall, as if to say, "Well, tots, that's all. I'm tired of racing round and round and now I'm going to rest." The Tines stood around and saw him nestle in a pile of straw. "Ma, ha," said Clowny. "He's just like a big hen in a nest. "But, even so, he's kind of smart.

ABOUT TOWN

Miss Alice Jarvis of Center street was pleasantly surprised Friday evening when a group of 25 friends gathered at her home to help her celebrate her birthday party given by her sister Agnes. The house was prettily decorated in orange and black streamers and Halloween decorations. Games were played and a tasty lunch was served.

Miss Anna Sullivan of Worcester, Mass., formerly teacher in the Buckland school and prominent in lodge circles here, was the week-end guest of Mrs. Andrew Healey of Buckland. Miss Sullivan attended the confirmation at St. Bridget's church, many of her former pupils being among those received into full membership of the church yesterday.

The Buckland Parent-Teacher association will give a Halloween whist in the school hall this evening, under the direction of Mrs. Marion Pierce and Miss Irene Buckland, teachers. The first prize winners will receive $2.00 gold. Refreshments and dancing will follow the card games.

Town Treasurer George H. Waddell will be the speaker at the meeting of the Men's Friendship club at the South Methodist church at 8 o'clock tonight. Mr. Waddell is thoroughly conversant with all aspects of town affairs and will deal with this subject at the meeting which is open to all whether members of the Friendship club or not.

A ladies choir of 30 voices sang two numbers at the evening meeting at the South Methodist church yesterday. The choir has been organized under the leadership of Thomas Maxwell for the purpose of assisting with the music at the evening meetings. A solo part in one of the numbers was taken by Miss Ruth Nyman. Miss Olive Nyman completed her travel talk on Europe begun at a previous date, before the members of the Eyworth League of the South Methodist church last night.

U-TURN CAUSES AUTO CRASH ON MAIN ST.

Body and Fender Dents Are Only Results—Drivers Settle It Themselves.

Two cars came together on Main street, opposite Bissell street, at 6:30 o'clock last night during the movie rush hour when Ernest E. Bartley, of 142 Eldridge street, going south, struck the right rear fender of the car driven by Robert McVeigh of 150 Eldridge street as McVeigh was making a U-turn. A deep dent in McVeigh's Pontiac and a bent bumper on Bartley's Ford coupe were the only damages. The police were called and Officer Heffron brought Bartley to the police station for questioning, but no arrest was made, the men settling between themselves.

TRIES TO AVOID BUMP, WRECKS OWN MACHINE

Rockville Man's Ford Ready for Junk Heap After Hopping Sidewalk Into Pole.

Attempting to avoid hitting a car at the intersection of Spruce and Pearl streets at 9:45 o'clock Saturday night, Fred Baker of Rockville lost control of his automobile, a Ford touring of 1923 vintage, and ran up over the curb on the south side of Pearl street, collided with a telephone pole and escaped without injury to himself or his wife and daughter, who were riding with him.

However, the windshield of the Ford was smashed with the impact and the hood fell down on the occupants. When Baker extricated himself he found also that all the tires were flat. Officer John McGinn investigated but made no arrest. Baker said that he would have the wreckage towed to Rockville where he would junk it.
