WARDEN AT WETHERSFIELD INFORMED OF ESCAPE PLAN

Present Executive at State Prison Reveals That Deputy Warden Patterson Knew That Attempt Had Been Made Through Bribery to Smuggle Saws to Prisoners.

Hartford, Jan. 21.—(AP)—George Patterson, deputy warden, knew of an attempt through bribery to smuggle hack saws into the Connecticut state prison at Wethersfield for Roland Malone and failed to report this information to the authorities. Warden Charles S. Reed revealed today in a statement explaining Patterson's sudden resignation Saturday.

Lalone and Watson Moulthrop, who with Leo Landry, captured in Jacksonville, Fla., Sunday, are still at large following their escape from the prison on January 4. Since their escape, Warden Reed announces, information has come to him which points to negligence of Patterson, who was acting warden during the long illness of the late H. K. W. Scott, then warden.

Bribe Is Offered
Warden Reed's statement reveals that last November an inmate of the prison, who is serving a life sentence as one of the "ice box" bandits convicted with Lalone, offered a bribe of $2,500 to a prison official if he procured two hack saws for Lalone.

Patterson admitted he knew of the bribe, but considered it a "joke" and for that reason did not let the warden or any other prison authority know of Lalone's plans to escape, the warden maintains. The statement, however, does not place definitely on the former deputy responsibility for the prison break on January 4, although Colonel Norris G. Osborn of New Haven, president of the prison directors, yesterday said that if it had not been for Patterson's laxity and negligence, the escape might have been prevented.

The beginning of the escape of Lalone, Moulthrop and Landry dates from November 3, 1929, only a few days after the funeral of the late H. K. W. Scott, when an inmate (the partner in crime with Lalone) came to an officer and attempted to bribe him by telling the officer he could get $2,500 in cash to bring to him, the inmate, into the prison, two hack saw blades. The officer inquired what the saws were for. The inmate said they were for Lalone to make his escape with; that if he, Lalone, could get out he would be able to get papers that would prove this inmate's innocence and he would go out a free man. The officer informed him that he was a very foolish man to undertake such a desperate thing.

"The officer informed me," Reed's statement says, that on the following morning he reported in detail the entire attempt to bribe to Mr. George Patterson, the acting warden. Mr. Patterson was acting warden during the last illness of the late Mr. Scott and continued to serve in that capacity until November 20, 1929, the date of the escape. Mr. Patterson was acting warden by the board of directors.

"The officer informed me that he had heard nothing from this report, that the acting warden, Mr. Patterson, never talked to him regarding the attempt to bribe to escape. Three men on Saturday morning, Jan. 4, 1930—exactly two months from the date that the attempted bribe was reported to acting warden Patterson. This officer informed me that the night after the escape he went to Chaplain Brady and told him the whole story. The chaplain advised him to see the warden. Before seeing the warden he told two other officers of alleged bribe.

Increase in Employment All Over United States

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—President Hoover said today that the Department of Labor had reported for the first time since the Stock Market crash, that the time of employment had changed in the right direction.

The chief executive said reports from last week showed that employment was on the increase and substantially so.

"There has been a distinct increase in employment all over the country within the last ten days," President Hoover asserted. "The time of employment all over the country had changed in the right direction."

Immediately after the Stock Market disturbance in November President Hoover moved to stimulate the building of public works in an effort to prevent unemployment.

Today it was felt in administration circles that the President's program to increase the development of public works in both the Federal and state government was bearing fruit.

The Labor Department has been keeping in very close touch with the employment situation.

The report of the department given to the President by Secretary Davis at today's Cabinet meeting, showed employment on an upward tide. During the last ten days there has been a steady increase, it was said.

ITALY IS EAGER TO REDUCE ARMS

Dino Grandi, Foreign Minister, So Tells Delegates at Opening of Parley.

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Dino Grandi, Italian foreign minister, in his address at the opening of the five-power naval conference today expressed hope that a solution would be found for difficulties facing world naval disarmament.

"We have become convinced however," he said, "that the problem is one calling for courageous action in the field of disarmament there's much truth in the saying that 'half measures are always failures'."

Signor Grandi's address follows: "Allow me first of all to express the gratitude of the Italian delegation to the kind words of welcome which the King graciously has been pleased to address to the delegates from the different parts of the world, convened at this historic meeting on which His Majesty's hospitality, and the British nation for the cordial reception given us."

"Mr. President, you have appealed to all of us to work in a spirit of good will so as to secure success for the cause of disarmament. Your words reflect the warmth and nobility of your convictions. With like sincerity and confidence allow me to say that the Italian delegation will be second to none in its effort to secure the end in view."

"The Fascist government is desirous of securing real and tangible results in the fields of disarmament and security, which two it considers linked indissolubly together, for two reasons, one of which I may call national and the other European or world wide."

Needs Peace
"The head of the Italian government, Signor Mussolini, has laid down a vast program of work for the progress of our country which requires a long period of peace for its execution and to which the major resources and best energies of the Italian people are devoted. Italy desires nothing better than to carry out this program in a peaceful Europe and a peaceful world."

DRAFT BILLS TO RELIEVE COURT JAMS

Wickersham Draws Up Plans to Handle Dry Cases Now Congesting the Federal Courts.

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—After Chairman Wickersham, of the law enforcement committee had appeared before a House judiciary sub committee decided today to draft three bills to carry out the committee's recommendations to increase the powers of the United States commissioners to handle misdemeanor cases in an effort to relieve congestion in the Federal courts.

It was said one of the bills would outline the procedure which minor cases before the United States courts and that two amendments probably would be incorporated into one bill. If these were done there would be but two instead of three measures.

One of the amendments would define slight or casual offenses. The other would amend the Jones-Stalker law to provide for penalties for misdemeanors of not more than six months in jail and a fine of $500.

The measures are to carry out the recommendations of the commission to provide for the United States commissioners to take jurisdiction over offenses not a felony.

Subject Well Studied
Chairman Wickersham said that he and Dean Pound had come out the whole subject relative to increasing the powers of the commissioners.

"We discussed fully the difference between the slight or casual offenses and the right to trial by jury," he said. "The commissioners are to have jurisdiction in cases wherein there is no right to trial by a jury."

Wickersham said that Pound discussed the constitutionality of the proposal and had cleared up any doubts on that question.

Hearings probably will be held before the subcommittee Friday on the measures because there were several groups which desired to appear against the proposals. Wickersham and Pound were heard by the subcommittee behind closed doors.

GREAT NAVAL POWERS MEET TO START PEACE MOVEMENT

Stenographic Report Of the King's Speech

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—A stenographic report of the speech by King George V opening the London naval conference today, as relayed over a nation-wide network by the National Broadcasting Company, follows:

It is with sincere satisfaction that I am present here to welcome the delegates of the five principal naval powers assembled for the object of eliminating the evil results of wasteful naval armaments. Every one represented here is proud of its Navy, proud of that navy's past achievements and its traditions. It is not the fault of these traditions nor of our navies. It is the competition due to the proposed necessity which has led to a feeling of insecurity between nations and even to the risk of war.

"Since the Great War, all of us have determined to leave nothing undone to prevent a repetition of that grim and immense tragedy, we are seeking to bring about agreement in building ships of war, the limitation of naval armaments and bring the reduction to a point consistent with national security. This limitation of naval arma-

DIGNITY FEATURES PARLEY'S OPENING

Envoys in Speeches Consecrate Themselves Anew to Bring About Reduction of Armaments; King George Sounds Keynote When He Pleads for Removal of "the Evil Results of Wasteful Competition in Warships"; Spokesmen of Other Nations Join in Chorus of Hopeful Predictions.

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Sounding a call in words heard around the world, the five great naval powers consecrated themselves anew to peace today at the opening session of their long-awaited conference of the further limitations of armaments on the sea.

Their first meeting was opened "formally with impressive dignity in the royal gallery of the palace of Westminster by King George who, bespeaking success in ending competition in building ships of war, the nations each in turn declaring in eloquent phrases their readiness for common sacrifice in the common interest."

No diplomatic bombshell disturbed the solemn quietude of the session for every national pronouncement was couched in general terms and in the tone of utmost harmony.

Over the Radio
When the formal opening addresses, which were broadcast by a worldwide hookup, had been completed the conference adjourned to reconvene Thursday morning at 10 o'clock in St. James's palace. Tomorrow the delegates will spend an informal discussion to clear the way for Thursday's meeting which will be a private one.

"I believe that you to whom your governments have entrusted the high mission of continuing the task begun at Washington," said King George, "are animated with working front intentions of working not only with selfless and exclusively nationalistic purpose but with noble inspiration and the resolve to remove once for all this particular obstacle from the path of ordered and civilized progress."

Other Speakers
In order, after King George had sounded the note of naval limitation and the removal of the evil results of wasteful competition in naval armaments, and had departed from the resplendent Westminster chamber in the palace of Westminster, the spokesmen of Great Britain, France, the United States, Italy, Japan and all the British Dominions, joined in a chorus of hopeful predictions.

How far these prophecies may be fulfilled only the most informal later sessions can tell, but at least a harmonious beginning had been accomplished.

MONARCH GAVE KEYNOTE TO THE NAVAL PARLEY

King George Supplied Lofly Motive to Ceremonies; MacDonald Sounded the Practical Note at Parley.

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Amid the splendors surrounding the delegates to the five-power naval conference at the formal opening of the plenary session today, it was King George who gave the really lofty note to the ceremonies. Such was the impression fixed in the minds of the delegates themselves as they left the royal gallery of the House of Lords after the King had spoken.

It was a royal note of solemn exhortation, an appeal for conciliation and agreement, an impressive reminder to all that the one peoples of the world are waiting hopefully and expectantly for constructive results coupled with a general warning that the human statecraft is in a sense confronted with the supreme test of its sagacity and its capacity to lead the world along the paths of sane progress.

The Practical Force
The King saw this progress embodied in the reduced burdens of armament as the practical means for securing peace.

Prime Minister MacDonald gave a practical force to the King's aspirations when he emphasized the fact that England is above all a maritime nation, dependent on her ships and ready to contribute to the arresting of naval competition, surely the other nations could reasonably do likewise.

Foreign Minister Grandi of Italy, spokesman of Premier Mussolini, held the attention of everyone, when entering into the spirit of King George's oration, he told his hearers that Italy was engaged in constructive enterprises, in the use of peace, and gave them the message of collaboration and desire for agreement based on the respective needs of the countries.

Final Secretary of State Stimson, pledging unrestricted American cooperation in the work, hinted that the world should not expect too much at the start and that increased security would lead to more drastic reductions in the future.

THIS PARLEY IS NOT FINAL SAYS STIMSON

Our Secretary of State Tells Conference That It Is But First Step in a Series to Outlaw War.

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—A declaration that the present effort at naval limitation is not regarded as final was made here today by Henry L. Stimson, the American secretary of state in his address at the opening of the naval conference in the Royal gallery of the House of Lords.

"Naval limitation is a continuous process," he said. "We regard disarmament as a goal to be reached by successive steps, by frequent revision and improvement. A solution reached today, however, perfect may not respond to conditions at a later date."

The chairman of the American delegation added that he and his colleagues were ready to remain in London until the problems were solved, until the opportunities were grasped and until the world was given an agreement which would carry it happily on to the time when the nations could meet again in the same spirit to look over the situation anew. He spoke in part as follows:

Recent Development
"The use of international conferences of this sort for the purpose of limiting and deducting armaments is a recent development in world affairs."

MAIL PLANE PILOT
IS LOST IN STORM
Wanders Over State for Several Hours and Finally Lands at Groton.

New London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—After wandering about over the state for several hours, lost in a heavy snow storm that has been experienced here this winter, a pilot from Boston mail plane, piloted by F. L. Pond of Newark, N. J., London, was forced down this morning at the Groton Airport. The plane came down out of the blinding snow to a perfect landing and was not damaged. The mail was removed from the plane and pouches consigned to the Hartford post office. The pilot was placed aboard the express which left here at 11:28.

Pilot Loses Way
The plane left Newark at 5:30 a. m. today and was due at the Hartford Airport at 6:30 o'clock. The pilot succeeded in finding his way as far as Willingford, but then lost his bearings in the storm and flew back and forth over middle Connecticut until shortly after 10:30 o'clock when he came down at Groton.

PROPERTY OF S. A. GOES TO HIGGINS

Booth Executors Must Turn Over Five Million Estate to New Executive.

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Executors of the late General Bramwell Booth, former Salvation Army head, were ordered today by the Chancery Court to turn over to General Higgins, who now heads the Salvation Army; Army property valued at £5,000,000 ($5,000,000).

Mostly Real Estate
The property which had been sequestrated by the Booth family pending outcome of the litigation which General Higgins started when he questioned Mr. Booth's disposition of Salvation Army assets as a family trust, consists mainly of real estate, buildings, halls and shelters.

American Salvation Army property which is administered by a board of five trustees is not affected.

PLAN SHIP CANAL NEW YORK-PHILLY

Would Cross State of New Jersey; Project Would Cost About 90 Millions.

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—A ship canal across the state of New Jersey linking New York and Philadelphia and forming an integral part of the inland waterway system along the Atlantic seaboard was urged upon the rivers and harbors board of the War Department today by members of Congress from Maine to Florida.

The project, for which a favorable report has been received from Colonel R. T. Ward, district engineer for the New York district, would cost about $90,000,000. Plans call for a ship canal at sea level crossing the state from Raritan bay to the Delaware river.

Senator Fletcher, Democrat, Florida, urged approval of the 12 foot channel saying the canal would complete the last link in the intra-coastal waterway from Boston to Miami.

J. Hampton Moore, president of the Atlantic Deeper Waterways association, urged a formal report on the canal project. This would place the question before Congress.

PROHIBITION HELPS SAFEGUARD CHILDREN

Child Abuse Cut Down and the Lot of Mothers Has Been Greatly Improved, Officials Say.

Boston, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Theodore A. Lathrop, general secretary of the Massachusetts Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, today told the annual meeting of that body that National prohibition, with all its weaknesses, has reduced child abuse and neglect due to intemperance by more than one-half, and at the same time correspondingly improved the lot of mothers and children.

He made a plea for the retention of the State Enforcement Act, "father," he said, "we would earnestly urge unqualified and sympathetic support or President Hoover's administration program of enforcement and study, and then, when the results are known, such action as may be indicated."

LEAGUE WATCHING THE NAVAL PARLEY

Success of Geneva Body Depends a Great Deal on London Parley Success.

Geneva—(AP)—The London naval conference, which will be watched eagerly in League of Nations circles, is generally looked upon here as a proving-ground for the League's "League of Nations through ten difficult years."

Three outstanding purposes of the League's builders and backers will be deeply affected by the outcome of the negotiations whereby the United States, Great Britain, Japan, France, and Italy will seek a scheme for reduction in their marine fighting forces.

First: The cause of disarmament, named in the League's covenant as a fundamental aim, will be tremendously advanced if the five naval powers find a basis of agreement. Such an agreement would stimulate the League's preparatory disarmament commission in its work for a world disarmament conference.

Second: Success at London—so League authorities believe—would greatly encourage the United States to take further steps in cooperation with other nations for solution of international problems. It is clearly recognized at Geneva that cooperation by the Washington government is essential to full realization of the League's objectives of peace and security.

Third: The spirit of cooperation and goodwill among nations, it is felt, would be kindled by the success of the League's friends are to point to evidences of international confidence and goodwill, they frankly concede that much remains to be done before the ideal is attained in this respect.

Not Over Confident It would be inaccurate to say that Geneva observers are bubbling over with confidence with regard to the outcome of the London parley; the memory of the 1927 Geneva conference is still too vivid. But it would be equally wrong to say that the attitude around the League's central office is pessimistic.

Perhaps it would be a fair summary of authoritative sentiment here to say that it ardently hopes for success at London, realizes that the difficulties are formidable, and is cheerful with a conservative optimism.

Well informed persons here believe that the big difficulty which Secretary Stimson and his conferees from other countries will meet in London lies in the conflicting views as to the character of defense requirements, namely, the Anglo-American view that naval needs for defense are relative, depending primarily upon the naval strength of "the other fellow," and the view championed by France that defense requirements are absolute and have a minimum level.

MUST POST FORFEIT FOR TITLE BATTLE

Battalino Cannot Meet Singer, Garden Rules, Without $5,000 Chocolate Pledge. New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Christopher (Bat) Battalino, of Hartford, world's featherweight champion, must post a forfeit of $5,000 with the State Athletic Commission to guarantee defense of his title against Kid Chocolate at Madison Square Garden, March 1, before approval is given for him to meet Al Singer, Jan. 31. The boxing salons laid down this condition today when the garden matchmaker, Tom McCord, appeared to seek approval for a Singer-Battalino non-title contest.

HOOVER LISTENS IN ON LONDON PARLEY

Washington, Jan. 21.—(AP)—President Hoover rose at 5 o'clock this morning to listen in by radio on the proceedings of the opening session of the London conference on naval limitations. Gathered around the radio set with him as the words of King George came strongly and clearly in opening the conference, were Attorney General Mitchell, Justice Stone of the Supreme Court, Dr. Joel Boone, White House physician, and Lawrence Richey and Walter Newton, two of the President's secretaries.

JAP DIET CONVENES.

Tokyo, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Japanese Diet convened today but was dissolved shortly afterward. The action had been forecast, being the government would use the opportunity to go to the populace in general election and seek a majority at the polls.

GREAT NAVAL POWERS CONVENE IN LONDON

Great Britain's cooperation in the conference effort to limit navies, and expressed a hope that an agreement would be reached which would prepare the way for a general disarmament treaty.

It was the King's first public appearance since his illness of last year. His face was ruddy, his step firm, his voice rich and full of confidence—loud enough to carry even to the corridors outside the gallery of the House of Lords where the delegates and a few invited guests convened.

Immediately that his address was concluded the conference was organized formally, with nomination of Ramsay MacDonald, premier of Great Britain, as chairman by Colonel Henry L. Stimson, American secretary of state and delegation head.

Premier Takes Chair The entire assemblage rose and stood respectfully as His Majesty presided over the opening of the conference. Mr. MacDonald took the chair vacated by the monarch and immediately upon his designation as chairman began his own address, urging in an eloquent speech the necessity for enlightening spirit of confidence among peoples and the way for an agreement to halt competition in naval construction.

"The whole world," he said, "expects that we shall deliberate and agree on the assumption that having put our names to pacts of peace we mean to respect our signatures."

Praises Hoover The British prime minister gave President Hoover credit for initiating the present conference. "After several attempts had been made unsuccessfully to get such an understanding between the United States and ourselves as would make a wide international agreement possible," he said, "President Hoover through his newly appointed ambassador to London, proposed to me that we should explore our differences once more."

Colonel Stimson addressed the assembly when Mr. MacDonald had concluded his speech, remarking that the present effort at naval limitation was not to be regarded as final by any means. "Naval limitation is a continuous process," he said, "We regard disarmament as a goal to be reached by successive steps, by frequent revision and improvement. A solution reached today, however perfect, may not respond to conditions at a later date."

Pledges Cooperation Colonel Stimson pledged the cooperation of America to further endeavor in behalf of disarmament, both land, naval and in the air. "Our efforts to contribute to the success of endeavors in other fields will continue unabated," he said.

Other delegation heads followed in alphabetical order, the Canadian, Colonel J. L. Ralston, coming next, to be followed in turn by Andre Tardieu, French premier.

FOGS COVER LONDON

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The thickest fog of the winter enveloped London today as the five-power naval limitation conference convened. Traffic in all directions was badly hampered but the misty curtain seemed densest around Westminster Palace as the conferees gathered for the opening.

Most of the delegates stayed indoors until time actually necessary for them to leave for Westminster. The fog filtered even to the interior of public buildings.

WARDEN INFORMED OF ESCAPE PLANS

not think this was a most alarming attempt to smuggle hacks into the prison and an attempt to bribe an officer and he replied: "I did not consider the matter important enough to be drastic, believing the remark of the inmate to the officer as being a wise retort; I did have the inmate's cell searched and made inquiries of officers as to what were his habits."

"The kitchen officer informed me that he had gone to Patterson while he was deputy and asked that Lalone and Moulthrop be moved from the kitchen where they had been assigned; that the officer did not like their action and that he was suspicious of them. Later Lalone was taken out of the kitchen and put to work in the bakery, and adjoining room from which he and the two other men escaped.

Lalone was received at the prison on October 19, 1929 and assigned to the work in the kitchen on December 11, 1929. He was serving a sentence of 18 to 25 years.

"I have made diligent inquiry from the assistant deputy and other officers whether or not they had ever heard even a rumor of this attempt to smuggle hacks into the prison and bribe an officer and they all have told me that they have not."

"Being these facts, Mr. Patterson was permitted to resign as deputy warden."

LANDRY'S STORY

Jacksonville, Fla., Jan. 21.—(AP) Leo Landry, 26, whose escape from the Connecticut state prison with Roland Lalone and Watson Moulthrop, was followed by the charge of a deputy warden, today from a jail cell here related details of the flight.

He blamed his companions for the shooting of two Jacksonville detectives, one fatally, in a gun battle here last week. He said he had no part in the fight although he was present.

FLED TO SPENCER

Escaping on January 4 through an opening sawed in the bars of the bake shop in which the three were employed, Landry said they traveled by night on foot to a nearby town, stole a car and then obtained a change of clothing at the Spencer, Mass., home of one of Lalone's relatives.

"Why I don't understand, but we drove back by the prison after getting the car," he said. A second car was stolen at Worcester, Mass., he said, and in that city they had a narrow escape from capture at the hands of state troopers.

CANADA TO JOIN BIG PEACE MOVE

Minister of Defense Says Dominion is Eager to Help At Naval Parley.

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—"Canada comes here with no assumption of undue prominence or importance," declared Colonel J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of National Defense and chief Canadian delegate, at the opening of the five-power naval conference today. "She hopes particularly for the opportunity to be useful and helpful to those who will bear the burden of this great event."

Canada joined the assembled nations in the sincere and earnest hope "that definite and practical results may be achieved," Mr. Ralston added.

The Canadian delegate's speech was as follows: "For the Dominion of Canada I humbly thank His Majesty for his gracious words of welcome. His Majesty has honored and signally marked this occasion by his royal presence and his memorable and fitting speech."

"And while His Majesty's participation was welcomed by all the nations represented here, it is received by the nationals of the British Commonwealth with peculiar pleasure. Each has its separate sphere and authority; there is no subordination among ourselves, but the allegiance and loyalty which each bears to the crown in the person of His Majesty supplies the living expression of the tie which unites this great Commonwealth."

Canada's Affection

"Let me say also that in no part of the empire could there exist greater devotion and affection to our sovereign than in Canada, where the descendants of two great races have with those who come from time to time to our shores, united to develop and to preserve a nationality which rests for its harmony, its tolerance and its assurance of liberty on the freedom and security guaranteed by the British crown."

HEMENWAY PREDICTS EARLY WORLD PEACE

Hartford Times Editor Says It May Come Within Lifetime Of The Present Generation.

Waterbury, Conn., Jan. 21.—(AP)—"The time may come within the lifetime of some of the present generation when it will be considered as ridiculous that nations should have one time armed themselves against each other with steel battleships and long range guns as we now regard it that individuals should carry private weapons to protect themselves against each other," said C. C. Hemenway, editor of the Hartford Times, addressing the opening session of the Connecticut conference on International relations at the Waterbury Women's Club today.

Mr. Hemenway approved of the United States entrance into the World Court and in general endorsed advanced notions of international co-operation with world police force, as opposed to isolation and competition in armaments between nations.

Other speakers were Miss Kathleen D. Courtney of England, president of the League for Peace and Freedom; Mme. Marie Louise Peuch of France, president of the Women's Branch of the League of Nations Union; Frau Dorothee Von Eelsen, president of the League for Equal Citizenship of Women; and Mrs. Inoue Gauntlett, of Japan, former president of the Japan Woman's Association. Rennie Smith, member of the British Parliament will speak tonight on the topic "Can we reduce our navies—a British view."

CHINA LEARNS RICHES SEIZED BY JAPANESE

Hongkong.—(AP)—The Chinese have just begun to comprehend that Japanese interests have stolen a march on them by exploiting their phosphate deposits on the Paracels, a group of reefs and islets in the Chinese sea 170 miles southwest of this port.

The group belong to China, but it is far out of the regular track of ships and has been used hitherto only as a source of supply for the bird nests that go into Chinese soup and as a base for small scale fishing. The isles are barren and worthless.

But they have for ages been the sanctuary of millions of sea birds, and through the years there has grown upon them thick deposits of phosphates. Some say these beds are rich enough to pay off the Chinese national debt.

NOON STOCKS

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Stock Market rallied briskly under the influence of short covering today, after a further bear push during the first hour of trading. The volume of trading continued at a lower ebb, however, representing little more than the rather listless activity of professional traders.

ST. JAMES PALACE QUARTERS ENVOYS

Delegates Use as Workshop Rooms Seldom Ever Seen by British Subjects.

London.—(AP)—King George and Queen Mary live at Buckingham palace nearby but St. James' Palace, headquarters of the five power armaments conference, still is the "Court of St. James" and officially "the titular authority and symbol of the royal power in Great Britain."

The death and accession of the British monarch is proclaimed to the people from a balcony over Friary Court, as was the signing of the Armistice of the World War. Debutantes and dowagers attend royal courts at Buckingham palace but the King holds his levees at St. James'. There foreign ambassadors present their credentials to the British sovereign as he stands before the throne chair under the elaborate canopy.

The Throne Room The throne room is one of the great range of apartments along the south front of the palace set aside for use of the arms parley delegates and in the estimation of the British people no greater act of good will toward disarmament negotiations could have been made by King George than his ready consent in turning over St. James' for conference use and his desire formally to open the first plenary session, to be held in a large hall of the Houses of Parliament.

American, French, Japanese and Italian delegates and secretaries will be using as a workshop royal precincts which few British subjects ever have had the privilege of viewing.

St. James' has been the official ceremonial court of the British monarch since 1697 when fire destroyed Whitehall Palace.

STATE LOSES A MOVE IN RIVER DIVERSION

Attempt to Get Speedy Decision Against Massachusetts Fails in Supreme Court.

The State of Connecticut, represented by Asst. Attorney-General, Judge Raymond A. Johnson of Manchester, Deputy Attorney-General, Ernest Averill and Attorney, Benedict M. Holden of Hartford, lost a preliminary step in the Connecticut river diversion case before the Supreme Court in Washington yesterday.

The Connecticut attorneys moved to strike out the Bay State's answer but were overruled without the court hearing of the Massachusetts arguments. From the very start the court intimated that Connecticut was going to lose the first round and that the case would eventually go before special master C. W. Bunn of St. Paul, Minn. appointed some time ago.

Throughout the presentation Attorneys Holden and Averill were interrupted by the court while at that time indicated that the points raised would not be decided by the full bench. At the conclusion of the Connecticut argument the motion was immediately denied.

Following the decision Attorney Holden declared that "it would have been unusual for the court to decide the important points raised by Connecticut on a motion of this character," with both the Connecticut attorneys taking the defeat philosophically.

Both States are anxious to begin the hearings before the master which may take place in Washington according to present plans.

Undaunted by the prospects of bad weather, the ninth annual Poultry Show is preparing to open its doors at the State Armory tomorrow night with the largest exhibition of poultry displayed since the organization of the club. As an innovation this year the combined Poultry, Pigeon and Rabbit Clubs have accepted the co-operation of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis and Lions Clubs and local merchants making this year's show the first annual combined club and Merchants' Exhibition.

The initial feature of this four night show is a get-together dinner, reservations for which have been made by the various clubs co-operating. The dinner will be open to all persons whether they are members of any club interested in the show or not.

Speakers for tomorrow evening are, A. J. Brundage, agricultural and 4-H club supervisor in the state and Professor William F. Kirkpatrick of the Connecticut Agricultural College, of the division of poultry husbandry. Professor Kirkpatrick will speak on poultry and egg laying contests.

Following the dinner the various exhibits will be classified by the following judges: Poultry, Paul Ives; Rabbits, Albert E. Facey, Jr., of Long Island and Oscar F. Schultz, of Norwalk; Pigeons, A. Fred H. Miller of Coventry, one of the largest poultrymen of this section will speak on Thursday evening.

DAWES ARRIVES LATE

London, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Ambassador Dawes, one of the seven American naval delegates, did not hear King George's address opening the naval conference today.

The American ambassador was delayed by the dense fog which rested over London and did not arrive at Westminster palace until after His Majesty's speech had been delivered and translated into French and the monarch himself had departed.

General Dawes started from the Embassy home at Prince's gate a full three-quarters of an hour before the beginning of the session. The other members of the American delegation came from the Ritz hotel, which is miles nearer the Houses of Parliament than the Embassy residence.

HEALTH IN SCHOOLS IS UNUSUALLY GOOD

Health conditions in the schools of Manchester this year show an improvement over the past ten years, according to school authorities. Usually after the Christmas vacation there is a falling off in pupils' attendance because of colds, pneumonia and other seasonal ailments. Such is not the case this year, few being ill. Much the same contrast was experienced in the fall term.

COMMUNITY LANDSCAPE DEVELOPMENT

By VICTOR LUMSDEN, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture

Each year the American Society of Landscape Architects meets in Washington, D. C., and discusses the problems having to do with the beautification of land areas throughout the United States.

It is not possible, however, for one group of professional men alone to bear such an enormous burden for a country the size of ours.

Throughout the United States at the present time there is a development which is contributing a commendable part to the landscape improvement of the nation.

The incentive for beautifying home grounds can be increased when the owners can assemble to discuss matters of common interest, resulting in an improved appearance of the community.

Through many agencies the United States is improving its landscape beauty where changes have had to be made from the original natural setting.

"Amusement Stocks Active," says a headline on the market page. We had almost forgotten there were amusement stocks listed in Wall Street.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH CAMERON marries ARTHUR KNIGHT, executive of a New York publishing house in which she is employed. They sail for a six weeks' honeymoon in Bermuda. Knight is a widower with an 18-year-old daughter, TONY, who is in Europe, and a son, JUNIOR, 16, at school. In his infatuation he overlooks the fact that Judith is not communicative about her past life.

After the first week in Bermuda a cablegram arrives announcing that Tony Knight is coming home. Arthur tells Judith he must return at once to meet her. Since neither the girl nor boy knows of the father's remarriage, Judith is skeptical of her welcome. The fear proves well founded.

Arthur and Judith reach the Long Island home just one day before Tony's boat docks. Next morning Knight meets his daughter but when they arrive at the house Tony ignores Judith and rushes to her own room. Knight tries to reason with the girl and later assures Judith the difficulty will soon be settled. He goes to Tony's room and tells her mother and exclaims: "You're going to get out!"

Knight enters the house to overhear this, and compels Tony to his office. Late that afternoon after dinner a young man calls for Tony and she leaves the house with him.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIV

"Mickey" Mortimer, in the annals of the family and on membership cards, was Frederick K. Mortimer, but even his mother had long since ceased to call him anything but "Mickey."

He belonged to the Philadelphia Mortimers—which is to say he "belonged."

The bank of which Mickey Mortimer's father was a director was not among the country's 10 largest and yet it was not so far from home. The son had not inherited his father's zeal for economics.

Mickey found the warm and sunny sands of Italian water resorts much more agreeable during the winter months than anything he had ever observed on Wall Street. He also found polo on Long Island a good deal pleasanter in July than trying to sell bonds. Mickey's income was steady. He was a vice president of something or other (really two something-or-other) but if he could have told you the name of either it would have been quite remarkable. He was as careless about business affairs as he was about the lady who happened to be his wife.

Mickey had a daughter, too, an attractive youngster with yellow curls, photographed occasionally with other children at a society affair at Newport and seen at the beach at Miami. These photographs generally appeared in the Sunday newspaper gravure sections. Whenever he saw one of these pictures Mickey looked at it and wondered how the kid would turn out.

The child lived with her mother. Mrs. Mickey Mortimer had had a rather good part in a musical comedy playing 18 months on Broadway before she and young Mortimer had gone down to Italy. It was arranged there by an official. That had been four years earlier. Mrs. Mickey Mortimer was very beautiful. It is significant that in family tribunals the Philadelphia Mortimers sided with her instead of her husband.

Mickey didn't spend much time in New York. When he was there he sometimes called around to see his wife. Sometimes not. Mickey, who above all things sought pleasure, loathed "scene" and was in Mickey Mortimer's swagger green coupe that Tony Knight was riding the first evening after her arrival in New York. It was Mickey himself who was driving the car and who vetoed her suggestion to visit the Casino.

They couldn't go there, he said, because Florence was likely to be there and Florence (as Tony very well knew) was his wife.

Mickey and Tony had met at Madrid. Later, after Tony and her aunt had returned to Paris, Mickey came after them. He had to have playfights, a very great number of them, did Mickey Mortimer. Tony, as Mickey himself expressed it, was a "devilish enticing" little trick.

The girl was quite captivated by his airs and his ardor. She began to make excuses and avoid engagements with Count Bodanzky.

Tony's Aunt Helena disapproved of this and very shortly Tony and her Aunt Helena disapproved of each other. They did it in such loud tones and for such a long while that the girl cabled her father, sent off her trunks and caught the first boat for New York. Mickey Mortimer was on the same boat.

It was Mortimer's custom, when his companion was a very pretty girl and after about the fifth cocktail, to state that he was "divorcing his wife." It was a good beginning for the long story of how fate was abusing him. Sometimes Tony would become so pathetic that only music would drown his sadness. That meant that Mickey would start singing, and when Mickey sang there simply was no likelihood at all of guessing where that party would end.

The truth was he was not and could not divorce his wife. Neither was Mrs. Mortimer divorcing her husband.

Mickey didn't mind. He had found that a good looking young man of wealth never need face any dearth of feminine companions.

He and Tony visited a blouse store that evening, dined at a supper club which was not one of Florence Mortimer's favorites, danced at two others and shortly after four a. m. arrived at the Knight residence. Tony entered the house with her own latchkey and Mortimer drove away.

At 11 o'clock next morning Judith sent Harriet to see if Miss

YOUR CHILDREN

by OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Moulded Hips—Accented Waistline; Slenderizing Effect Apparent at Glance

I wonder why we hear so much of "child complex" and so little of "mother complex."

By the latter I do not mean the generally accepted meaning of the term. I mean the complex of mothers concerning their own children that result definitely and disastrously in affecting the children's own behavior.

One complex that we mothers all have, if we are human, is a supersensitiveness about the looks of our children. Aren't we to be pitted? Is there anything in the world that can cause us more misery than the conviction that Mrs. Brown's children next door, or Mrs. Smith's children across the street, are so much prettier and more attractive than our own?

The chances are about even that Mrs. Brown and Mrs. Smith are thinking precisely the same way about us. But some imp of perverseness keeps whispering things into our sensitive ears and we become obsessed with strange and terrible ideas sometimes. Ideas that are not only all wrong but not true. However, the misery that these things cause us can cause our children still more wretchedness.

This state of affairs does not concern ourselves alone, for about the first thing we do is to give voice to these unhappy thoughts. The children themselves are usually the first to hear.

Then the fat's in the fire for sure. Because if we tell Nellie her nose is turned up, Blanche that her teeth are yellow, Mildred that her neck bones are ugly, and John that his hair is a heartbreak, he is perfectly sure that Nellie and Blanche and Mildred and John are going through life carrying crosses not only bitterly cruel and torturing, but out of all proportion to the harmless little remarks we thought we were making.

We must watch these barbed little opinions we mothers, for we can cause more misery, more self-consciousness, by such careless words than we can undo in a lifetime of kindness otherwise.

I knew well one little girl, now a woman, who hated school because she had to take her hat off. Her mother had told neighbors that she did wish Mabel didn't have such a "funny bump" on the back of her head.

I knew a boy who had a habit of sitting with his hand capped over his nose whenever it was possible. His mother had repeatedly sighed, "Oh, dear, he's going to have that awful Fitzwilliams' beak!" To this minute he hates himself and he's a really fine looking young man indeed.

I know a girl whose mother actually cried because her daughter's teeth were so "yellow," as she said. True, they were not a dazzling white, but one would go far to see a more perfect mouthful of gorgeous ivory. She told me recently that one day a little child said to her, "What grand teeth you have!" She could have cried with relief. Now she's not ashamed to laugh any more.

These little things we tell our children hear so. They leave such scars! We must learn to guard our feelings and our tongues. Inferiority complexes so often have physical causes and the sooner we realize it the better. It is all right to rouse a little pride and effort at improvement on the part of the children, but we must learn how to do it without sacrificing their self-respect. Tread softly—that's the word.

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

CHILD DEATH RATE IS STILL TOO HIGH, DESPITE RECENT GAINS

By DR. MORRIS FISHBAIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, The Health Magazine

In Great Britain more school children die of tuberculosis than of any other cause. Second to tuberculosis is violence, most frequently the result of street accidents.

Sixteen and four-tenths per cent of the total deaths among school children in 1928 were due to tuberculosis, so that this disease remains the chief menace to life among children of school age. The incidence of tuberculosis has declined greatly since 1907, largely due to increased knowledge of proper diet, hygiene, ventilation and similar factors.

Deaths from accidents are likely to increase in number, due to the increase in the amount of traffic and the dangers to the child from machines which represent the chief factor in modern civilization. Among British school children, violence was responsible for 12.1 per cent of deaths.

Although we have good knowledge of the cause, the method of prevention and proper treatment of diphtheria, this disease caused 11.8 per cent of deaths among school children. As long as there are people who are so ignorant as to fail to avail themselves of what modern science has accomplished, such deaths will continue to occur.

The next group of disorders are what are known as the respiratory disorders, bronchitis, pneumonia, and other infections of the nose, throat and lungs. These are not infrequently associated with the great crowding that occurs under modern conditions of living, and particularly with the kind of conditions that are found in slum districts.

In the next group of serious disorders are meningitis, diseases of the nervous system, heart disease, measles, whooping cough and rheumatic fever. Here are diseases associated with bacterial organisms. Unfortunately the only method of control known to medical science include the general care of the child, healthy surroundings, and a well-balanced diet.

Diseases of the heart seem to be associated with infections elsewhere in the body, particularly in the nose and throat. The early detection of such cases, and particularly the early detection of heart disease and treatment by absolute rest constitute the most scientific medicine has to offer at the present moment in the control of such conditions.

The greatest advances that have been made by modern medical science are prevention of infant mortality and acute infections in childhood. Nevertheless, these still take a considerable toll of humanity.

The reasons are two: first, the necessity for more knowledge than scientific medicine now has; second, lack of education of the public in the application of such knowledge as is available at suitable times and in the vast majority of cases.

The WOMAN'S DAY

One of the most comely and popular debts of last season has now opened an employment bureau at the Junior League house in New York, and puts in an eight hour day getting jobs for society girls who want to stop being butterfies and become busy bees.

Some girls, those who actually have to work or go hungry, resent the job-seeking society girl. And in a way, the girl who can pick and choose, and who can walk out on a job any time she gets tired of it, does have the breaks.

But just the same, the society girl has done much to establish women in industry, to remove any stigma from working, and to debunk the Mid-Victorian idea that a woman ought to work for glory and forget the gold.

Ad Open Field

To be sure, the society girl walks with assurance into the path that was cleared painfully and somewhat slowly by the girl who really had to work. For when women first began to be employed outside the home, the only sort of work that carried much prestige was teaching. Office work was scarcely respectable, because it was considered no quite proper for a girl to work side by side with men.

But if she walks with assurance, she also bestows assurance upon others. She does not act as if she were working because she wanted to express herself, or make a gesture of independence, or set a good example for others—no, indeed, she comes right out and states that she is working for money, and that she is out to get it all she can.

She realizes that her social position and her background has a distinct commercial value that compensates for a lack of business training and experience.

Money Is the Goal

Comparatively few society girls who go into business insist on jobs with prestige or seek those that pay in glory. They are working for money, and bent on making it. If necessary, they will work in a shop, and give the obscure woman the pleasure of being served by a social registrie. If one has a liking for finance, and many of them have, she will take any sort of a clerical job that will give her a foothold in a brokerage house or a bank.

And New York has many examples of society girls who are making good and making money, and apparently having more fun in business than in society.

And after all, why are they not valuable recruits to industry? They are daughters and granddaughters of men who have made fortunes and secured social positions. They have inherited a love for finance as well as a keen instinct to trade and build up an industry, as well as the sons of the family?

Call of Industry

The fact is that while what we call Society has really stagnated in the years just before and those following the war, industry has progressed, expanded, and offered limitless opportunities for expression and venture, as well as for gold. And it is not surprising that girls who have social position

When The Light Has Gone Out

THE UNEXPECTED generally happens—and especially when the inevitable is concerned.

Therefore, if every wife knew what practically every widow knows from experience, every husband would make a will without further delay, —his wife would insist on it and refuse to allow it to be "put off" from day to day or postponed forever.

The matter of protecting those near and dear to you after your "light has gone out" is of the utmost importance to those who are left behind and should not be regarded lightly. Tomorrow may be too late, who knows?

You protect yourself and your family against cold in winter—against heat in summer—against physical injury and disease at all times.

You protect your property against decay and fire and it stands to reason that you should protect those near and dear to you against financial distress at the time they need it most—and that time is when they no longer have the protection of your guiding influence.

Your will should provide for them in accordance with your best judgment—and your judgment is at its best while you are still mentally active and alert and in the best of health.
