PLAYWRIGHT STOLE DEAD MAN'S IDEAS

Texas Editor Coming to New York to Seek Justice for Widow and Mother.

Amarillo, Tex., March 1.—(AP)—Gene Howe, editor of the Amarillo News, will leave here Monday for New York with the announced purpose of "either closing the biggest dramatic hit in New York or securing an equitable settlement for an Amarillo widow and mother."

Howe referred to the play, "The Last Mile," which he asserted was based on the experience of Robert Blake, son of Mrs. Ella Blake of Amarillo. Blake was executed in the state penitentiary about a year ago.

Just before his execution he wrote a playlet, "The Law Takes Its Toll," which was published in the American Mercury, and the rights of which were given Mrs. Blake as her son's only legacy. This playlet, Howe charges, was used by John Wexley, in writing "The Last Mile," Stole the Idea.

"According to New York newspapers," Howe said, "Wexley stated he obtained the idea and the words for his first act from Blake's playlet. However, Mrs. Blake informs me that she did give permission for use of the playlet. Wexley or his representatives have been in communication with Mrs. Blake but they have not come to terms."

Mrs. Blake, Howe said, spent every cent she had in an effort to save her son from the electric chair. He declared that either Wexley must "do the right thing" or he would enjoin the producers of the play.

THIS STEAM SHOVEL RATHER ODD CRITTER

Los Angeles, March 1.—(AP)—A steam shovel, it appears, cannot disappoint its public day after day without inviting gossip. This steam shovel sat in an excavation here. It tolled and ruffed with great ado, attracting the attention of passersby just like countless other hard working steam shovels.

As this case, however, there was something wrong with its technique. Expert steam shovel watchers observed that while there didn't seem to be anything wrong with its stance, or its pivoting, it didn't move much more dirt than the average duffer with a good midiron.

The police investigated yesterday, arrested four men and reported finding a 1,000 gallon still hitched to the boiler.

SNOOK MEETS DEATH CALMLY; PLANNED DEED

College Professor Tells Warden on Last Day That He Deliberately Murdered His Student Mistress.

Columbus, O., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Dr. James H. Snook, the iron nerved professor who killed his student mistress, Theora Hix, with his electric chair for his crime in the electric chair at Ohio penitentiary last night.

The former instructor in veterinary surgery at Ohio State University went calmly to his death for the crime which he confessed in his last hours, was deliberately planned to end an affair which threatened to ruin his position and reputation. It was eight months 17 days after he left the mutilated body of the 24 year old girl lying on a lonely rifle range near the city limit.

Was 50 Years Old

Dr. Snook who was 50, walked unassisted to the chair. His manner was cool, his eyes alert, his lips silent. A minister from whom he had just accepted communion intoned a benediction as two guards adjusted electrodes to Dr. Snook's right leg and the top of his head. Six thousand volts of electricity passed through his body in three separate charges. He was pronounced dead at 7:09 p. m.

Today Dr. Snook's body was at the disposal of his faithful wife, Helen Maple Snook, who visited him daily for the past week at the Ohio Supreme Court and Governor Cooper refused to intervene in his behalf. She shared his last meal with him and remained at the penitentiary until he was taken home, evading the curious crowds by a ruse and keeping secret her plans.

UNREST SPREADING THROUGHOUT SPAIN

New Premier Ready to Pro- claim Martial Law If the Trouble Grows.

Madrid, Mar. 1.—(AP)—General Berenguer, Spanish premier has acted promptly to save the Spanish monarchy from the threat of Republicanism sounded Thursday by Jose Antonio Sanchez Guerra, former premier, and echoed subsequently in street rioting.

Spain awoke today to full realization that the character of the Berenguer government had changed the fall of General Primo De Rivera's dictatorship, changed greatly overnight. Strong measures were in force to preserve the new government and repress further anti-monarchical agitation.

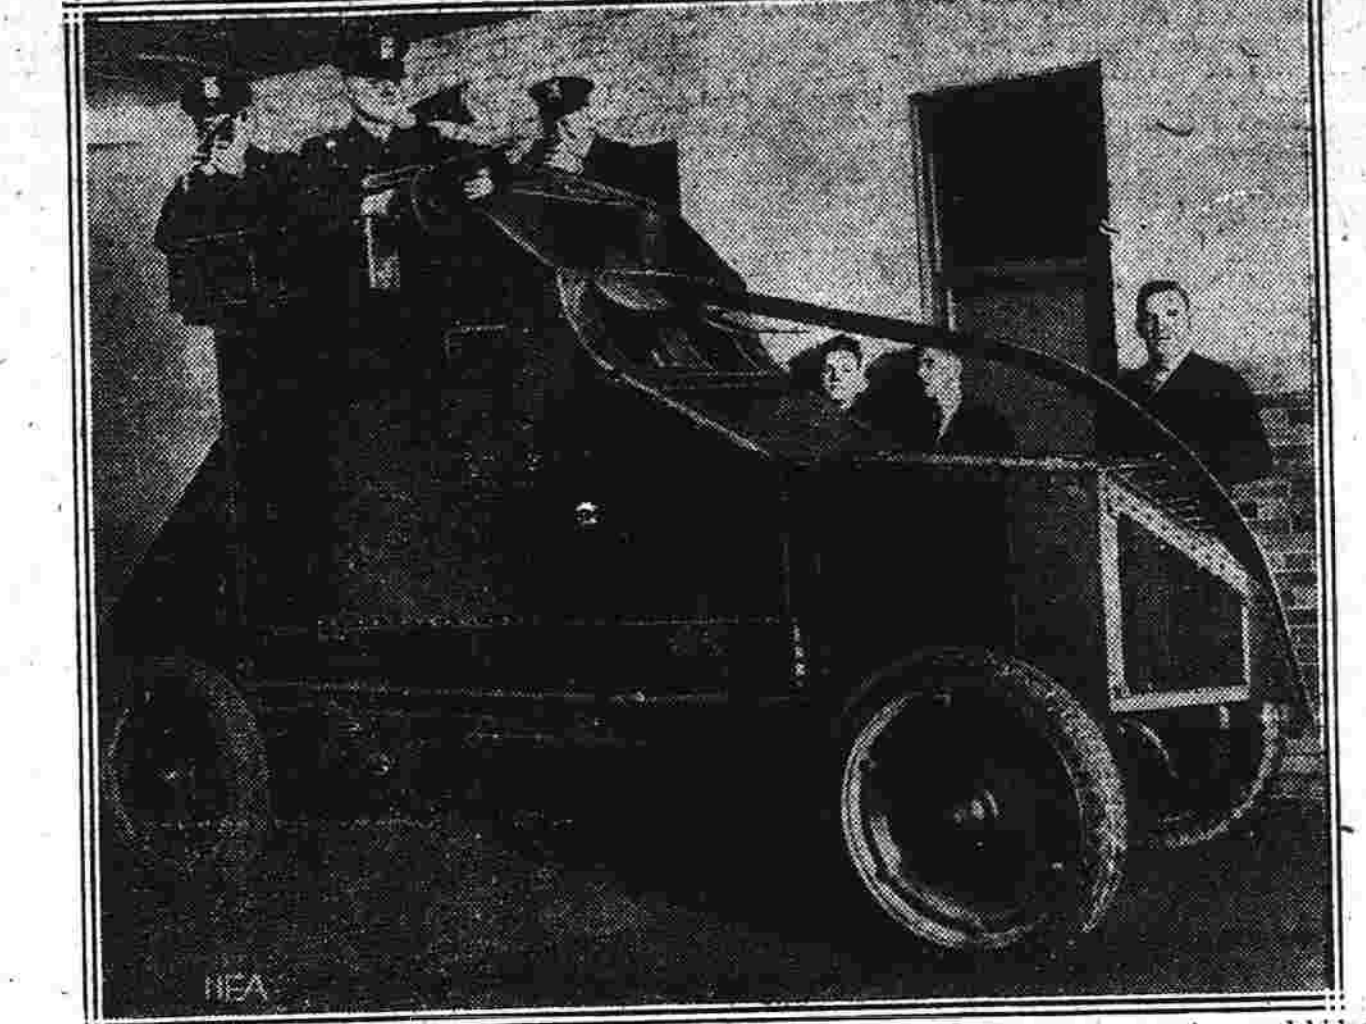

It was believed General Berenguer was ready to proclaim martial law at any time the situation should warrant it.

There were minor disorders in Madrid and the provinces during the night, although on the whole the nation was comparatively quiet.

Club Closes With a Bang; Oh, of Course, in Chicago

Chicago, Mar. 1.—(AP)—The Club Algiers, night life haunt of smart and wealthy gold coasters, closed last night with a bang. A bomb planted on the alley side of the transformed undertaker's barn, exploded when about 25 fashionably dressed men and women were dining or dancing inside. One side of the club was wrecked and at least three persons were slightly hurt. A postoffice substation across the street was damaged, the explo-

NEW WOMEN'S MEDICINE TO BE GIVEN TO WORLD

Discovered Recently by Canadian Doctor—But Great Care Must Be Exercised by Attending Physicians.

Toronto, March 1.—(By the Canadian Press)—Placental Crystalline extract, the discovery of which was recently announced to the world by Dr. J. B. Collip of McGill University, Montreal, will be made available to physicians immediately under certain specific conditions for treatment of women afflicted with certain functional disorders.

Dr. Collip made this announcement in a speech last night before a gathering of medical men, biologists, chemists and research workers.

Dr. Collip stipulated that all cases to be treated shall be thoroughly examined to determine if they fall into the classification of disorders already shown to be amenable to extract treatment. He also insists if they do, the patients shall be treated in a hospital and under the most careful observation.

Must Exercise Care

Owing to the natural limitations on the production of the extract and the fact that the application of the discovery is still in the early stages, Dr. Collip feels that the greatest care must be exercised in its use and experimentation by himself as well as others.

Setting forth the achievements and possibilities of his extract thus far indicated, Dr. Collip said it had proved encouragingly valuable in adjusting certain feminine disorders. Success had been obtained, he said, in a dominant majority of cases with varying restorations of normal functioning, gains in weight and vanishing of nervous afflictions.

Dr. Collip added that a few preliminary tests had been conducted in cases of disorderly menopause and toxemia of pregnancy. Enough success had been attained in these fields, he said, to warrant further experimentation.

Tells of Experiments

Discussing his early experiments with rats and mice, Dr. Collip paid tribute to numerous workers who had preceded him in the same field with varying success. He acknowledged particularly the work of Dr. Westner of Edinburgh University, who isolated and unpurified product similar in origin to Collip's extract, and whose work suggested the direction of the McGill scientist's researches.

It took more than a week of routine test, Dr. Collip revealed, before he convinced himself that he really had anything worth while. He thought at first it was another substance similar to several of little value he had extracted, but repeated experiments showed him he "had something," he said. "The first indi-

ABSOLVE ANAESTHETICS IN CANADIAN DEATHS

Doctors Say Chemicals Were Found Pure and Patients Died from Other Causes.

Toronto, March 1.—(AP)—An interim report of an investigation of the deaths of a number of persons while under anaesthetics was issued today by Dr. R. Stirling Pentecost, honorary secretary of the Academy of Medicine.

No deaths have been found to which anaesthetics could have contributed, the examining body of the academy finds. Instead, it states, chemicals have been found to be pure but a fear has been caused through the attraction of public attention to a few deaths of patients who died from other causes while under anaesthetics.

This fear, the report states, and an unwarranted lack of confidence have caused deaths and suffering. As a result, undue restraints have been cast upon anaesthetists and persons whose physical conditions necessitate operations are avoiding treatment.

SPURN A TRUCE OFFER TO END CABINET CRISIS

French Radicals Refuse Premier's Offer to Stop Political Scrapping Until After the Naval Parley.

Paris, March 1.—(AP)—The Radical Socialists today refused the peace move of Andre Tardieu, premier designate, who wished to call a three-months political truce to permit solution of France's immediate outstanding problems.

Despite the rejection, Mr. Tardieu announced he would have his ministry together tomorrow and would announce it then. It was believed he possibly had won enough support in the Radical Socialist vote to his standard with the offer to insure a Chamber majority.

His proposal was, briefly, to quit political scrapping for three months until the naval conference could be concluded, the budget passed, and other major problems settled. He was reported in addition to have offered the recalcitrant group four ministries and two under secretaries.

Cabinet by Tomorrow

"I adjured M. Herriot (one of the Radical Socialist leaders) to recommend to his friends that they accept this indispensable truce, which will be formed tomorrow," M. Tardieu said.

He said he had urged M. Herriot to realize that the nation demanded action on its vital problems and that he declined to have the truce expire at the expiration of the three-months period after the disposal of the more important matters facing any new governments.

Rejected

M. Herriot carried the offer to his party, which immediately rejected it. M. Tardieu said he had offered the Radical Socialists five ministries and two under secretarieships, and M. Herriot himself to have the vice-premier and ministry of justice.

One Post Filled

So far as is known, Tardieu has actually filled only one post in his new ministry, that being the foreign office portfolio, which he has announced today. Aristide Briand, who has become a fixture in the office, had accepted.

The Radical Socialists have been particularly obstinate as to collaborating with M. Tardieu in the formation of a new government, holding him personally responsible for defeat of their president, Camille Chautemps, in the Chamber Wednesday, when he asked for a vote of confidence on his ministerial declaration.

REPORT LITTLE CHANGE IN CONDITION OF TAFT

Japs Quote Napoleon In Bid for Big Navy

London, March 1.—(AP)—A theoretically when figuring out relative naval strengths.

"Now, the five-five-three battle-ship ratio comes very near to a 50 per cent superiority, in order to be technically secure we must have an increased ratio in other branches of arms. With the 70 per cent and 50 per cent merged, Japan feels she will have the security which the country desires and which actually will not menace America in any way.

"It must be remembered that America, with its 10-10-7 ratio has ample protection, so far as Japan is concerned in case of war—which, of course, is unthinkable. At the same time Japan, keeping the Napoleonic theory always in view, believes that with these ratios, America will not have sufficient naval strength theoretically to attack Japan successfully.

"In other words everybody will be happy with no harm done. We certainly can't attack America and we wish to feel America can't attack us."

THREE EMPLOYEES NAMED IN BOYS' SCHOOL PROBE

Actual Investigation of Brutality Charges at State Institution Will Be Begun Next Week.

Meriden, Conn., Mar. 1.—(AP)—The names of three employees of the Connecticut School for Boys were under fire for inhuman treatment and were made public today. They are Frank Maguire, Arthur F. Smith and Leon B. Staples, all of whom have supervisory powers over the boys who range from 8 to 16 years of age. A fourth employee is said to be accused.

One of them, it was said, had been dismissed or permitted to resign from the Lyman School at Westfield, Mass., for brutality.

Charges that the boys had been flogged and mistreated, and that the school's board of trustees after the State Department of Welfare after a secret investigation began at the request of James S. Peck, farm superintendent.

Further Hearings

Ernest S. Fuller, secretary of the board said actual investigation of the charges may not be started until the return of Dr. Jere D. Eggleston, president of the board, although it is planned to meet again next Thursday to recall Peck for further testimony.

Peck, it has been learned, was not an eye witness to any of the alleged acts of brutality, but merely reported to the Welfare Department stories told him by the boys.

Took No Action

Supt. E. S. Boyd is not accused of administering punishment of a harsh nature but the Welfare Department charges that he took no action against his subordinates when their infractions of the law were called to his attention.

Mrs. Kathleen Litz of Talcottville yesterday, charged that her son, a former inmate, had been flogged and clubbed until he returned to her a hardened juvenile criminal with a professional knowledge of burglary methods.

Whipped With Straps

"When he was at Meriden," she said "I visited him regularly and found that he was continually mistreated, whipped with straps and even clubbed with hickory sticks from the chair factory. Fruit and candy I sent him were seldom received until the monitors had taken the greater portion of it.

SOVIET SOLDIERS DESERT TO POLAND

Border Guards Say They Are Starving and Hate to Kill Peasants.

Warsaw, Poland, March 1.—(AP)—The Polish press today published reports that a detachment of twenty Soviet border guards, fully armed and headed by an officer, crossed the Polish border during the night and reported at the Polish police station in the town of Luniec, east of Lublin.

The correspondents of the Warsaw Morning Express today reported that the number of refugees from Russia was growing hourly. He said the refugees were exhausted and many of them bore wounds inflicted by pursuing Soviet patrols. This was the first time that the Soviet government had sent to the border special punishment expeditions which are destroying and burning entire villages.

The correspondent reported that he had witnessed a border fight between peasants and Soviet guards, several peasants were killed, but the rest were captured by the patrols.

DOMINGO DISPUTE IS NEARING END

Insurgent Chief Takes Office and President Decides to Leave the Country.

Santo Domingo, Dominican Republic, March 1.—(AP)—General Rafael Eserella Urena, chief of the insurgent movement, today took over the office of secretary of state for the interior, and as soon as President Horacio Vasquez leaves the city, will take full charge of the chief executive office, in accordance with the constitution.

President Vasquez, who has been granted permission to leave the country because of ill health, was expected to depart some time today for Porto Rico, leaving his resignation in the hands of the National Assembly for its consideration.

Peaceful solution of the political upheaval was generally attributed to the willingness of the opposition party to negotiate on constitutional and tranquil lines, coupled with the good offices of the American minister, Charles E. Curtis, who brought the conflicting parties together.

It is the first time in Dominican history that such a political dispute has been handled without bloodshed and violent clashes.

Makes Quarter of Million Because Hens Keep Laying

Chicago, March 1.—(AP)—The corner the market so they might great American hen had something to cackle about today—sort of a hen coup.

The trouble was that the hen kept right on turning out eggs. February was a month of spring weather. Hens-laid as they never had laid before at this season of the year. As fast as the "bills" bought new trainloads of eggs poured into town. The retail price went down to the lowest it has been since 1924.

Sugar estimated that the unwonted activity of the American hen cost the "bills" on the Chicago market more than half a million dollars.

Former President Slept Un- brokenly During Night But Is Still In a State of Coma.

Washington, March 1.—(AP)—The vitality that William Howard Taft built up in his younger years still was holding out today against a combination of diseases which had his physicians sometime ago to abandon hope for his recovery.

It was said this morning that there had been but little change in his condition during the last twenty-four hours. If anything, the former president and chief justice was believed to be resting more "quietly" than last night.

The first caller at the big Taft mansion on Wyoming avenue this morning was Vice President Curtis, long a friend of the ill man. Mr. Curtis expressed his solitude. Shortly after he left, Monsignor Vitorio Fumason-Biondi, the Apostolic delegate to the United States, visited the home.

EARLY REPORT William Howard Taft Said "Quieter if Anything" Than Last Night. It Was Added That There Was Little Change in His Condition.

The former chief justice slept unbrokenly throughout the night, his nurse said, and awakened apparently more calm. He remained in the state of coma which has practically existed for several days.

His physicians did not expect to examine their patient until shortly before noon unless there was a change for the worse.

The former president today was slowly and without pain "going down the Western slope" as he himself, referred to death.

The physicians attending him frankly admitted that Mr. Taft could not hold on much longer. "Probably the former Chief Justice will go through the night," Dr. Francis R. Hagner gravely announced, coming from the Taft home on Wyoming avenue after his third visit yesterday.

Although Mr. Taft lay in his second-floor bedroom weak, unable to speak, his life ebbed away, he was able several times to recognize those about him yesterday. At those times the seventy-two-year-old jurist summoned up a flicker of the famous Taft smile.

RECOGNIZES HIS SON When his son, Robert A. Taft, went into his room immediately upon arrival from Cincinnati shortly after noon and clasped his hand, Mr. Taft opened his eyes.

FEDERAL PRISONERS WALK OUT OF JAIL

Present Forged Passes to New Guard at Door and Saunter to Freedom.

Leavenworth, Kas., March 1.—(AP)—Using forged outside passes, Thomas Holden and Francis L. Keating serving sentences of 25 years each for robbing a mail car on a Grand Trunk railroad train at Evergreen Park, Illinois in Sept. 1926, escaped from the Federal prison here yesterday and still were at large today.

A new guard was at the main entrance of the prison. Holden and Keating appeared about 10 o'clock yesterday morning. In some undetermined manner they had procured used by trusty prisoners to outside employment with photographs of themselves pasted on the backs of the cards, as regularly required.

Holden and Keating were convicted in 1926 for the Chicago mail robbery, in which $133,000 was stolen. The two men boarded the train, held up the mail clerks, seized a bag containing the money consigned to a Chicago suburban bank and escaped.

The dosage: He also reported that early tests indicated the best dosage was .001 of a milligram and that practically the same results were obtained no matter how much larger the administration was made.

Dr. V. J. Harding, professor of pathological chemistry at the university, disclosed that the number of deaths occurring yearly at the Toronto General hospital from the abnormalities of pregnancy had been reduced by more than 60 per cent. during the past few years.

"Ten years ago," said Dr. Harding, "we had an average of three or more deaths yearly from this affliction. In the past five years it has been reduced to one yearly, and if we have any in the next five years it will be our own fault."

SUES OPERA STAR FOR $10,000 GEMS

New York, March 1.—(AP.)—Frieda Hempel, opera and concert singer, today, through her counsel, declared that there was no foundation for the suit filed against her by her sister, Mrs. Helese Schaper, to recover a platinum and diamond cross valued at $10,000.

Mrs. Schaper yesterday obtained from Supreme Court Justice Lewis an order requiring Mme. Hempel to show cause on Monday why she should not be enjoined from disposing of the jewelry pending trial of the action. The order also requires her to show cause why she should not be examined before trial and permit the service of summons by substitution.

In an affidavit filed by Mrs. Schaper she alleges that in 1926 she turned over pawn tickets for the jewelry of Mme. Hempel and asked her to pay the interest. Mme. Hempel, she charges, redeemed the jewelry and sold it to a third person and subsequently bought it back again. During this period she charges four two-carat diamonds were removed and inferior stones substituted.

Mrs. Hempel's Reply: Mme. Hempel's reply to the charges contained in the affidavit of Mrs. Schaper in which the singer declares she loaned $2,000 to Mrs. Schaper in 1926 and took the pawn tickets as security. The order states the tickets were for the cross and a gold mesh bag. She further states the redemption date on the tickets expired that November and that she had to redeem the jewels at a cost of $2,600 and interest of $494. She said she returned the mesh bag to her sister, but retained the cross which she valued at $3,000.

Lawyer's Statement: The statement issued on Mme. Hempel's behalf by her attorney said: "Mme. Hempel regrets that Mrs. Schaper has instituted such an action for which there is absolutely no foundation. Mme. Hempel has generously contributed for the care of her family for many years and has requested assistance from Mrs. Schaper. Mme. Hempel feels that the action instituted by Mrs. Schaper is not of Mrs. Schaper's instigation, but is due to outside influence and bad advice."

Her attorney, William M. Sullivan, called attention to the fact that Mrs. Schaper's attorney, Harry Gobel, is counsel for Johannes Adler, a former Berlin voice teacher, who brought a $50,000 suit against the singer, alleging he rejuvenated her voice, and that she failed to keep an agreement to compensate him by recommending him to pupils in New York.

FOG ON BRITISH ISLES DISLOCATES TRAFFIC

Liverpool, March 1.—(AP.)—One of the worst fogs in years dislocated shipping traffic on the Mersey river, the Irish sea and along the western Scottish coast today.

More than 1,000 passengers at Liverpool who should have been outward bound for the United States, were gazing disconsolately at the heavy pall hanging over the river, these included 300 on the Montclair, 350 on the Scythia and 480 on the Cedric.

Ferryboats Collide: All day long there was an incessant clanging of ships' bells and sirens as smaller craft groped its way through the fog. Three Mersey ferryboats bumped into an Irish steamer during the morning, but not much damage was done.

Two channel mail steamers collided near Belfast and other ships sought anchorage along the shores. Clyde shipping similarly was held up.

HIGH DEBATERS TO MEET CHOATE

Affirmative Team to Tackle Prep School in Wallingford Next Friday.

Apparently with the ideas in mind that experience is a great teacher and practice makes perfect, Manchester High school has decided to step beyond its scholastic bounds in seeking opposition in the first debate of the school year.

Instead of selecting some other high school of equal caliber, arrangements have been completed to debate with such a well known and select institution as Choate School at Wallingford.

The opening debate will take place at Choate on Friday evening of next week. Only the local affirmative team will be in action. This is composed of Maurice McKeever, first speaker, Austin Johnson, second and Carl Cumberly, third. Both McKeever and Cumberly will be graduated next June but Johnson is a junior student.

Not much is known about the ability of the Choate debaters but the Wallingford school has among its members, taken the measure of Princeton's freshman team, which in itself is a commendable feat and gives one an idea as to their ability. Wesleyan is also on Choate's schedule. A defeat by such a competent opponent would be no discredit to Manchester in its opening debate.

Nevertheless, Coach Arbut Jenkins, who is making his debut as supervisor of debating at Manchester High, is drilling his debaters diligently in anticipation of victory. The subject to be discussed is: "Resolved, that the United States military policy in the Caribbean is justified." This is a particularly timely topic due to the recent outbreaks in the Dominican republic.

Another angle of interest to Manchester is the information that William G. Shute, coach of debating at Choate, is a former member of the Manchester High school faculty having been connected with the local institution when Dr. August A. Savage, well known local dentist, was principal.

The modified English system of debating will be in vogue in the Manchester-Choate meeting which is to say that there will be no rebuttals. The purpose of this is to do away as much as possible with the so-called canned speeches. All speakers will be limited to ten minutes except the first one who talks for seven minutes leaving three minutes for the affirmative conclusion.

The week which closes today has been a vacation for all boys and girls attending school in Manchester but such has not been the case for Messrs. McKeever, Johnson and Cumberly who have spent much time studying and preparing their arguments under the supervision of Coach Jenkins for presentation against Choate next week.

THREE EMPLOYES NAMED IN BOYS' SCHOOL PROBE

visior was not looking showed me large red blisters on his back and neck. They were caused by both water and the sun, the boy told me, had held him and dropped the water down his neck because he would not eat wormy bread."

She said her boy was whipped because he would not eat rice. Supt. Boyd, she said, was not even sympathetic when she complained and she went to Governor Trumbull who promised an investigation.

"That's the last I heard of it" she said. The State Department of Welfare in its 33 page report, it is said also urged that steps be taken to improve the condition of the buildings and the quality of the food.

PLAN OTHER ACTIONS: Hartford, March 1.—(AP.)—The possibility that three other state departments having partial jurisdiction at the Connecticut School for Boys at Meriden may take action in the future to do away with existing conditions at the school was indicated by Governor Trumbull this morning.

That such a project, aside from the investigation into charges of brutality, is under consideration, the Governor affirmed, but he refused to comment further at this time. The probe into the allegation of cruelty on the part of four officers of the school is still in the hands of the board of trustees.

In connection with the move toward modernization of the institution, however, it is generally known that the state department of health has authority to make an annual inspection of the school, and to pass upon sanitary conditions; the state police have jurisdiction over fire hazards, and the State Board of Education has power to determine the educational standards.

TOWN TAX COLLECTORS TO MEET ON FRIDAY

Those of 71 Different Municipalities to Gather for Conference in Hartford.

An informal conference of the tax collectors of the seventy-one towns, cities, boroughs, school, fire and other tax districts of Hartford County will be held in the old Senate Chamber, second floor, state capitol, Hartford, on Friday afternoon, March 7, beginning at 1:30 o'clock. This will be one of a series of county conferences which are being conducted at convenient places throughout the state. Such smaller sectional meetings, it is felt, will prove of greater value and interest to the collectors than one meeting for all the collectors of the state.

The meetings will be conducted in the nature of round-table discussions of collectors' perplexing problems. It is particularly desired that collectors be prepared to ask questions, exchange views, etc. Set programs with definite addresses, have been intentionally avoided. It is requested that these meetings be called to the attention of the treasurers, municipal counsels, selectmen of towns, mayors of cities, wardens of boroughs and members of the governing boards of lesser districts and other officials interested.

The importance of such conferences is shown by the fact that a very high per cent. of all the money used for local governments must pass through the hands of the tax collectors. The amount now being collected by such officials is approximately $70,000,000 annually and the sum is rapidly increasing. Painstaking attention must be given to this subject.

HOOVER BOARD STARTS ITS WORK IN HAITI

Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, March 1.—(AP.)—After a calm and peaceful night with no untoward incidents despite emergency preparations, the Hoover commission on Haiti today began its work, the first session opening this morning.

Barren-barrers who had stood in the street outside the gate of the Excelsior hotel which is the commission's headquarters, a good part of the night finally got tired and went home. However, they stuck their banners, neatly arranged in the flower gardens and other parts of the yard outside all the commissioners' rooms. Consequently when the Americans awoke this morning the first thing they noticed were the words "Disoccupation" and "Legislative Elections."

The commissioners were to be guests of honor of the United States Legation during the day when High Commissioner Russell will give a reception. Haitians of all parties were invited to this, but last night and this morning many of those who had been invited published cards in the newspapers refusing to attend.

WITHDRAW LIBEL SUITS

New York, March 1.—(AP.)—Libel suits asking $5,000,000 damages each from three New York newspapers and a press and feature service, have been withdrawn, R. Randolph Hicks, personal attorney for W. C. Durant, announced today. Mr. Hicks said he had instructed his colleagues in San Francisco, Los Angeles, Washington, D. C., and Chicago to withdraw similar suits filed against newspapers in those cities.

The defendants were the New York Daily News, Telegram and Journal; International News Service, King Feature Service and International Newsreel as one defendant corporation; Chicago Herald and Examiner; San Francisco Examiner; Los Angeles Examiner and Washington, D. C. Herald.

The suits were filed early in February following publication of alleged "false and slanderous statements" in connection with a suit filed here by Mrs. Elizabeth Hudson, former wife of Percy E. Hudson, millionaire broker, against Mr. Durant and Samuel Ungerleider, as directors of the Ungerleider Financial Corporation.

ADV. PRIZES AWARDED

Cambridge, Mass., March 1.—(AP.)—Clyde H. Curtis, Philadelphia publisher, was the winner of the gold medal among the Harvard advertising awards for 1929. Five cash prizes of $2,000 and four of $1,000 were also presented.

CHAMBER TEAMS HEAR PEP TALK, PICK NAMES

Drive for New Members Is Launched at a Spread Where Prospects Are Listed.

The organization of 105 members of the Chamber of Commerce began its one week drive for doubled membership last night with a banquet in Tinker Hall, after which each worker selected five prospects to be approached, out of the file of 522 names listed as possible new members.

L. M. Crandall, salesman of the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, and principal of a business college in Norwich, gave an inspirational talk centered about the word "pep." He said that the word had three ingredients, which when possessed by the worker, were sure to spell success for the campaign. They were: preparation, enthusiasm, and perseverance. Mr. Crandall quoted several poems of the pep and go-getter type. R. K. Anderson, commander-in-chief of the campaign, and his four majors, John I. Olson, Arthur Kiofla, Fred T. Blish, Jr., and William Halstead, projected success for their respective divisions.

The next meeting of the organization will be held Tuesday evening at 6:15 o'clock in the Sheridan Hotel, at which time it is hoped that the efforts of the members will show fruit in the form of 200 or more applications for membership.

The final meeting will be held on Friday evening, probably at the Sheridan Hotel also and all reports on the campaign will be made.

SAYS INDIAN WAR WILL BEGIN SOON

Mahatma Gandhi's Chief Aide Makes Dire Prediction in Public Speech.

Ahmadabad, Bombay, March 1.—(AP.)—Vallabhai Patel, who is Mahatma Gandhi's chief lieutenant, in addressing a public meeting today, prophesied that an Indian war would begin soon.

The meeting was to outline inauguration of the All-India National Congress Civil Disobedience campaign. Patel said: "War unprecedented in the history of the world will begin in a few days and the beginning will be made at Gujarat (a division of Bombay)."

His Advice. "Those who are afraid of death should go on a pilgrimage and those possessed of riches should go to foreign countries." The Pandits Motilal and Jawaharlal Nehru arrived this morning and conferred with Gandhi. The three planned to meet again in the afternoon.

It was understood Gandhi would not publish his ultimatum to the viceroy, marking the conditions upon which the civil disobedience campaign will not be initiated until Viceroy Lord Irwin gives his permission.

It was stated in authoritative circles, however, that the campaign will be begun within a fortnight. FIRE IN MONTEPELLIER. Montpelier, Vt., March 1.—(AP.)—Fire late last night destroyed the interior of the Union House, a three story wooden building, with an estimated loss of $20,000. Henry Holmes, 88, former owner, was taken to the hospital later suffering from shock.

Perfectly Calm. Snook's self control was not shaken during his last hours. Except for a trace of annoyance when the barber was late to shave him, and for signs that he had been weeping after parting with his wife, he was perfectly calm as he prepared to die.

His last meal was of fried chicken prepared by the wife of Warden P. E. Thomas, as she always does for condemned men. With him were Mrs. Snook; his pastor, Rev. Isaac E. Miller, of the King Avenue Methodist Episcopal church; Rev. Wall, penitentiary chaplain; Oscar Roedel of Pomeroy, Ohio, Dr. Snook's close friend and Mrs. Frank Landrum of Junction City, Ohio, a cousin of Mrs. Snook.

"We might have been at a picnic," Rev. Mr. Miller reported, later. "Dr. Snook ate heartily and we talked of pleasant subjects. No reference was made to death, murder or electrocutions."

MOORE'S SUCCESSOR

Washington, March 1.—(AP.)—It was announced at the White House today that the name of a successor to the late Alexander P. Moore as ambassador to Poland had been sent to Warsaw to see if it would be acceptable to that government. The name of the proposed new ambassador was not divulged. Ambassador Moore died recently in California after a protracted illness. The legation at Warsaw had only a few weeks before been elevated to an embassy. Sunday School Lesson

Jesus Teaching About Himself

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 2. Jesus Teaching About Himself. Matt. 11:2-6, 25-30.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

Nothing seems so strongly to mark the uniqueness of Jesus as the way in which the world has accepted his reported references to himself. Sayings such as "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life," "I will give you rest," "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly," "I am the Life of the World," and various other reported sayings which would subject the man who used them to a charge of egotism seem to us natural, and in no sense in discrepancy with Jesus' teaching concerning humility, when they come from the lips of Jesus himself.

All this means that the uniqueness of the man who thus speaks concerning himself has its roots and its justification in the beauty of the character of Jesus and in the simplicity and purity of his teachings.

Not interested in self. If we felt that Jesus had come into the world as a self-seeker, that his course in life had even those mixed motives that appear sometimes in the characters and careers of very able and noble men, we should not accept so readily the references of Jesus to himself and to his place and mission. Even in considering his deepest claims there is consciousness of the humility of a thoroughly unselfish man consecrated completely to God and to his fellow men.

In many respects we have passed the stage of ancient controversy, bitter and acrimonious in a way that one would have supposed that all thought of the Master's gentle teaching would have rebuked, concerning the metaphysical nature of Jesus and his relationship to the Father. For many people today it will be almost possible to revive merely theoretical and speculative questions concerning the nature of the practical effect of that doctrine remains as deeply imbedded as ever. Men feel as truly as before that in Jesus we have the revelation of all that is highest and holiest, that in him we meet with that ultimate spiritual reality that we call "God."

It was the sense of unity with God the Father that gave distinction to the personality of Jesus in his earthly life and teaching. It was out of this clear consciousness of his oneness with God that he spoke such words as we have recorded in our lesson. Perhaps it is worth while to remember that Jesus himself never dwelt much upon the speculative or metaphysical aspect of his life and mission.

It is true that we have many mystic sayings attributed to him, especially in the Gospel of John. But what is particularly noteworthy is that Jesus associated his mission and his claim to authority so essentially with the practical manifestations of the religion of love that he proclaimed and taught. When in the beginning of his ministry in his home town of Nazareth he announced his mission, it was in terms of the life of practical goodness as defined by the prophet Isaiah.

Text: Matt. 11:2-6, 25-30.

Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples.

And said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?

Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see:

The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.

And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no man knoweth the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

to be fulfilled in their ears, he was accepting all the obligations that that mission implied and was laying the foundation of that spiritual hour which enabled him to say "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

It was not an arbitrary power that Jesus possessed. The explanation of his life is not found in any magic, place or preference. The power of his life in unity with God is in the completeness and fullness of its godliness. His life was an incarnation of the divine, and that is what we mean when we speak of the divinity of Jesus.

Gives Divinity to Others. We should never forget that his mission and his ministry were to impart to other lives the divinity that he had in full measure. An early Christian writer properly apprehended this in speaking of the disciples as being made "partakers of the divine nature."

Jesus stands in the modern world attested by his claims. They are never found to be more true than when tested in experience. The doubter and scoffer can never know the reality of the matter, but the one who trustfully and honestly approaches Jesus with the willingness to accept all that the Master is able to do finds these claims amply vindicated in his own soul. He discovers in Jesus alike the source of rest and of power.

There would not be so many witnesses to the truth of that experience if the experience were not itself vitally real.

REST

By George Henry Dole.

International Sunday-School Lesson Text, March 2.

Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matthew 11:28.

If not in the present, there surely will be a time when every man will be numbered among those who "labor and are heavy laden." Then particularly is the time to hear the invocation, "Come unto Me," and to taste of its wondrous blessing and comfort. Then is the time to cast thy burden upon the Lord, and in a most practical way to learn of and to experience His inward sustaining power.

The great world wants rest. It has so felt the need of it that once heaven was thought to be a place of absolute rest from labor and from all activity other than pure pleasure. We now have sufficient light to know that it is not physical rest, which the Lord refers, but spiritual rest, rest from doubts, anxieties, fears—rest from the assaults of base passion and bitter temptations, rest unto the soul.

Ah, that is the rest we need, the rest of the spirit, from which come, as waters from a spring, peace, adjustment to environment, inward peace, spiritual power, and emotional calm.

Inactivity does not bring spiritual rest. The rest that the Lord gives is the quiescence of the evil in us. He bestows it when by vigorous action the floods that would come into the soul are expelled, and the dove of His spirit can find rest for her foot.

None other than the Lord can give this rest. It is the Sabbath day of the spirit, which comes when valiantly and faithfully our labor is done through resisting evil. We have no more control of rest than we have of the sunshine or the life of plants. It is a free gift from the Lord. Without fail He will bestow it to those who come unto Him. The Lord is the way, the truth, and the life. One comes unto Him by following Him, by learning the truth, and doing as truth teaches. Thereupon, in each victory over weakness and wrong, He will give a new life, in which is the rest promised.

Jesus Teaching About Himself

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for March 1, Jesus Teaching About Himself. Matt. 11:2-6, 25-30.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

Nothing seems so strongly to mark the uniqueness of Jesus as the way in which the world has accepted his reported references to himself. Sayings such as "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life," "I will give you rest," "I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly," "I am the Life of the World," and various other reported sayings that would subject the man who used them to a charge of egotism seem to us natural, and in no sense in discrepancy with Jesus' teaching concerning himself when they come from the lips of Jesus himself.

All this means that the uniqueness of the man who thus speaks concerning himself has its roots and its justification in the beauty of the character of Jesus and in the simplicity and purity of his teachings.

Not interested in Self. If we felt that Jesus had come into the world as a self-seeker, that his course in life had even those mixed motives that appear sometimes in the characters and careers of very able and successful men, we should not accept so readily the references of Jesus to himself and to his place and mission. Even in considering his deepest claims there is consciousness of the humility of a thoroughly unselfish man consecrated completely to God and to his fellow men.

In many respects we have passed the stage of ancient controversy, bitter and acrimonious in its nature, and one would have supposed that all thought of the Master's gentle teaching would have been rebuked, concerning the metaphysical nature of Jesus and his relationship to the Father. For many people today it will be almost impossible to revive merely theoretical and speculative questions concerning the nature of the divinity of Jesus. But the practical effect of that doctrine remains as deeply imbedded as ever. Men feel as truly as before that in Jesus we have the revelation of all that is highest and holiest, that in him we meet with that ultimate spiritual reality that we call "God."

It was the sense of unity with God the Father that gave distinction to the personality of Jesus in his earthly life and teaching. It was out of this clear consciousness of his oneness with God that he spoke such words as we have recorded in our lesson. Perhaps it is worth while to remember that Jesus himself never dwelt much upon the speculative or metaphysical aspect of his life and mission.

It is true that we have many mystical sayings attributed to him, especially in the Gospel of John. But what is particularly noteworthy is that Jesus associated his mission and his claim to authority so essentially with the practical manifestations of the religion of love that he proclaimed and taught. When in the beginning of his ministry in his home town of Nazareth he announced his mission, it was in terms of the life of practical goodness as defined by the prophet Isaiah.

"The spirit of the Lord is upon me," he read, "because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he has sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord." When he informed his townsmen that that day this scripture was

Text: Matt. 11:2-6, 25-30.

Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples.

And said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another? Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and show John again those things which ye do hear and see: The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them.

And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me. At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

Even so, Father; for so it seemed good in thy sight.

All things are delivered unto me of my Father; and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him. Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

to be fulfilled in their ears, he was accepting all the obligations that that mission implied and was laying the foundation of that spiritual work which enabled him to say "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

It was not an arbitrary power that Jesus possessed. The explanation of his life is not found in any magic, place or preference. The power of his life in unity with God was in the completeness and fullness of its godliness. His life was an incarnation of the divine, and that is what we mean when we speak of the divinity of Jesus.

Jesus stands in the modern world attested by his claims. They are never found to be more true than when tested in experience. The doubter and scoffer can never know the reality of the matter, but the one who trustfully and honestly approaches Jesus with the willingness to accept all that the Master is able to do finds these claims amply vindicated in his own soul. He discovers in Jesus alike the source of rest and of power.

There would not be so many witnesses to the truth of that experience if the experience were not itself vitally real.

REST

By George Henry Dole.

International Sunday-School Lesson Text, March 2. Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.—Matthew 11:28.

If not in the present, there surely is rest. The truth is the reverse. No one can find rest from anger, vice or passion. Rest comes from the inner can find rest without action, in heroic battle until the underworld of the mind is conquered, so defeated, so overwhelmed by the love of the pure and holy that it dare not rise to disturb. The rest that the Lord gives is the quiescence of the evil in us. He bestows it when by vigorous action the floods that would come into the soul are expelled, and the dove of His spirit can find rest for her feet. None other than the Lord can give this rest. It is the Sabbath day of the spirit, which comes when valiantly and faithfully our labor is done through resisting evil. We have no more control of rest than we have of the sunshine or the life of plants. It is a free gift from the Lord. Without fail He will bestow it to those who come unto Him. The Lord is the way, the truth, and the life. One comes unto Him by following Him, by learning the truth, and doing as truth teaches. Thereupon, in each victory over weakness and wrong, He will give a new life, in which is the rest promised.

The great world wants rest. It has so felt the need of it that once heaven was thought to be a place of absolute rest from labor and from all activity other than pure pleasure. We now have sufficient light to know that it is not physical rest to which the Lord refers, but spiritual rest, rest from doubts, anxieties, fears—rest from the assaults of base passion and bitter temptations, rest unto the soul. Ah, that is the rest we need, the rest of the spirit, from which come, as waters from a spring, peace, adjustment to environment, inward peace, spiritual power, and emotional calm. Inactivity does not bring spiritual

INTENTIONAL DUPE

NEW YORK SOCIETY SPROUTING WINGS

Manhattan's Fashionables Are Using Planes to and from the Resorts.

New York, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Manhattan's fashionables seem to have sprouted wings these days, so fast are they flying north, south or west for one set of gaieties and back home again for another.

In many cases the wings are literal, for many of the smart folk have taken to airplanes to expedite their wanderings, and aerial costumes are now as important a part of their wardrobes as ball gowns.

Many tarry in foreign fields only a few days. They hop to Palm Beach and back home again, down to Aiken, S. C., and back to New York, over to New Jersey and around to New England for the festivities in each spot.

The devotees of the chase hastened to Aiken, S. C., recently for the barbecue supper which Mr. and Mrs. Harry S. Taintor and their niece Miss Louise Hunt, of New York, gave before an evening meeting of the Aiken county fox hounds. Arrived in pink hunting coats and wellworn boots, they gathered around a great fire for the barbecue supper and then, after the moon rose, mounted their hunters and rode after the hounds for three hours.

Many of them lingered in the South Carolina resort a few days for polo, which has become increasingly popular there. Among those who generally participate in the game are F. Skiddy von Stade, Fred Post and Frank V. Burton.

The forty-ninth annual costume ball of the Kit-Kat Club brought many of the wanderers back to New York Friday evening to attend the affair which was given at the Palm Gardens.

The Kit-Kat Club, which was organized nearly fifty years ago, had made its custom in the past to hold period balls at which the guests fitted about in costumes of the Renaissance or other historical times. This year, however, any costume except military uniforms, dominoes or clown suits was acceptable. The fashionables arrayed as court ladies, snake charmers and queens and danced until a late hour.

Tony Sarg, artist; Russell Whitehead, architect, and Leo Lentelli, sculptor, were among the costumed guests who attended the affair.

A number of the fashionables fitted to Bronxville recently for the Gay Nineties costume dinner dance which was given at the Field Club. Even the smartest of the smart folk doffed the modish 1930 array to don costumes of the day when the dowager Mrs. Vanderbilt and Mrs. William Astor were among Manhattan's leading hostesses.

Mutton leg sleeves, pinch back frocks that fitted unusually close to waistlines accustomed to sports frocks, parasols and floppy flower-decked hats were worn.

Mr. and Mrs. William K. Loomis, Mr. and Mrs. William Colt and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey McCintock were among those who gave dinners before the affair and took their guests on to the party.

The St. Valentine's Kettledrum, postponed until this late date in order to secure sufficiently large hotel space, drew many of society's feminine contingent to the Plaza Friday afternoon. The Kettledrum, which draws its name from the parties originally given in India where drumheads served as tea tables, is an old and favorite charity affair, given annually for the benefit of the Samaritan Home for the Aged.

This year's benefit resembled a flower garden as the women, clad in frocks of dusty pink, turquoise blue and cornflower sip tea and wander past the booths which displayed the handwork of women in the home.

Their small sons and daughters assembled in the small ballroom for a children's party where a Punch and Judy show, marionettes, and trained animals kept them amused. There was also a fortune teller and an artist who made silhouettes.

Countess Mercati, Mrs. Henry M. Alexander and Mrs. Otto H. Kahn were among those who reserved tables for the afternoon.

Many of the smart folk are devoting this season to preparation of country homes for both summer and winter. Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt

SOCIETY IN SOUTH PLAYS 24 HOURS

Just When the Smart Folks Sleep Is Matter for Serious Consideration.

Palm Beach, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Just when Palm Beach does its sleeping would seem to be a matter for serious consideration. Evidences are that it obeys the poet's injunction that "nights were made for music not for sleep," while morning hours find tennis courts, golf links and sea shore crowded, afternoons have any number of delightful social events claiming attention. Palm Beach appears to be on the go about 24 hours a day.

Announcement of the engagement of Carolyn Storrs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Storrs of New York City, to Daniel E. Sickles of New York and Paris has caused a decided ripple on the social stream. Miss Storrs, who with her parents and sister are at Whitehall, is extremely popular in New York, Paris and Palm Beach. Mr. Sickles is a grandson of General Daniel E. Sickles of Gettysburg fame. He is the son of Countess Napoleon Magne of Paris.

RAMON NOVARRO AT THE STATE TOMORROW

Comes in Musical Romance of Napoleonic Days, With New Comer in Support.

Ramon Novarro's long-awaited first all-talking picture "Devil May Care," comes to the State for a three-day engagement starting Sunday night. This musical romance centers about the life of Napoleon Bonaparte's exile to Elba. Novarro, as a lieutenant in Napoleon's guard, schemes to bring about the triumphant return of the emperor and his adventures finally land him in the arms of the beautiful Leonie.

Six new songs are featured in the picture. Novarro, who in "The Pagan" demonstrated that he possesses a marvelous voice is aided by a male chorus. "Devil May Care" is one of the finest productions of the year. The supporting cast contains Dorothy Jordan, a new comer, in the role of the haughty Leonie; Marion Harris, the well known "blues singer"; John Miljan, and George Davis.

The surrounding program includes the Vitaphone act, Jack White and his band of syncopating entertainers; "Moving Day," another roaring Vitaphone act, and the ever popular Metronome sound news.

KEN MAYNARD, 'GIRL ON THE BARGE' AT CIRCLE

Ken Maynard appears once more on the Circle screen, this time in "The California Mall," which heads the program at this popular theater today and Sunday. The feature presents Jean Hersholt and Sally O'Neil in a picturization of Rupert Hughes famous novel "The Girl on the Barge."

Ken Maynard and his equally famous horse "Tarzan" in a picture filled with shooting, stunting and thrills. The story deals with the advent of the first express company into the west. The theme is the stage coach and the part it played in maintaining the nation during the Civil War by keeping a flow of gold pouring into Washington.

"The Girl on the Barge" has everything that makes an outstanding picture. Jean Hersholt has the part of a mean-tempered old man. Sally O'Neil gives a spirited performance in the title role, an ignorant little girl who has spent her life on a coal barge plying between New York and Buffalo.

NOTED SPECIALIST DIES.

New York, March 1.—(AP)—Dr. Floyd Summer Muckey, a nose and throat specialist who devoted the last forty years to a study of the science of voice production, died of a stroke of apoplexy last night while seated at his home listening to a woman pupil singing Handel's "Oh Sleep." He was 72 years old.

He is credited in "Who's Who" with having been the first to give a working analysis of tone, to have photographed a manometric flame and have made a demonstrating photograph of vocal cords in action. A widow, son and daughter survive.

No Safety First for John D.

By ALAN GOULD

JOHN D. ON THE LINKS

Just what kind of a golf game John D. Rockefeller plays has puzzled many. Here are the highlights of his game:

Never tries to break 100.

Plays only eight holes in winter.

Likes to play one ball with partner.

Not "safety first" golfer, seeks accuracy, not distance.

Seldom falls to "connect;" keeps head down, eyes on the ball. Backswinging is extremely slow.

Uses wooden peg tee on fairway, but enjoys shot from sand trap.

Never uses driver.

Averages 100 to 125 yards with brassie.

Does eight holes over stiff ocean course in 50.

Favorite exclamations are "bravo" and "my conscience."

Awards good shots with new nickels—dimes only at start and finish of game.

Orland Beach, Fla.—(AP)—John D. Rockefeller is no "safety-first" golfer.

The man who mastered the intricacies of the oil game and big business half a century ago, has found an aid to long life and pleasure in conquering the subtleties of golf.

As a young man he probably never saw a golf course, much less thought of spending his spare time on the links.

Today, as he draws toward his ninety-first birthday, golf is the part of his daily routine in which he finds most satisfaction and benefit, whether it is during the summer on the courses at Pocomtoco Hills and Lakewood, or in the winter time on the sandy stretches of the Ormond Beach Golf Club, a mannie shot from the Atlantic Ocean.

Plays But Eight Holes

Rockefeller is among the millions of the game's followers who do not "break 100" for 18 holes.

Unlike the others, however, he does not even attempt it, for his winter "round" is confined to eight holes of a morning.

Besides, as often as not, he will alternate with his partner in playing the same ball, in the Scotch foursome style. He enjoys the novelty of situations and the possibilities of team-work that this method of play provides.

The Rockefeller game is built on accuracy, not length, on direction rather than distance, on a well-controlled swing in place of power.

Student Of The Game

He seldom fails to connect fairly and cleanly with any club, for he is studious in the essentials of keeping the head down, the eye on the ball, the left arm straight, and the weight shifted on the follow-through.

An outstanding affair not only of the past week, but the entire season, was the fifth annual benefit show staged by the Kiwanis Club of West Palm Beach at the Paramount theater at Palm Beach on Tuesday night. Billie Burke and Sam Harris produced the show in behalf of the club, and a dazzling array of talent was presented. A group of debutantes appearing in the acts included Frances Gilmore, New York; Nina Hand Ball, Philadelphia; Katherine King Clark, Ardmore, Pa., and Veronese Beatty, Chicago; Mrs. Gail Grant, Chicago, sang. Leading members of society occupied boxes. Many smart dinner parties preceded the show.

One of the most superbly appointed affairs of the week was the dinner dance given by Mr. and Mrs. A. Atwater Kent, of Ardmore, Pa., at the Everglades Club on Wednesday night. Guests were at two long tables, decorated with illuminated umbrellas of Chinese lilies, outlined with orange blossoms. Mrs. Kent wore an exquisite gown of black lace.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sergeant Pillsbury, Minneapolis, entertained at luncheon on Tuesday at their Villa la Chosa, having 18 guests, while Mr. and Mrs. Askel de Wickfield entertained during the week at Patio Lamaze in honor of Mr. and Mrs. George Widmer of Paris, who are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Milton W. Holden, New York. In the party also were Mr. and Mrs. Richard B. W. Hall, New York; Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Phillips, Long Island; Mr. and Mrs. Lyon Weyburn, Boston; Mr. and Mrs. J. Keasley, Philadelphia; Mrs. Gertrude Conoway, Philadelphia, and Mrs. Charles Minot Armore, New York.

French Car Makers Dislike U. S. Autos

Paris.—(AP)—American cars aren't exactly welcomed in France by French car makers. Their real concern, however, is not competition here, but in other countries.

France formerly exported more than half her cars. Last year exports were only two-fifths, and this year the exports are running only one-tenth, says Charles Faroux, a recognized automobile authority.

Since American cars sell well here at double their American factory prices, they have an advantage in many places, though not in France and her colonies.

For years some industrial leaders have urged standardization, cooperation by makers and removal of the 12 per cent de luxe tax as measures essential to the French automobile industry's existence.

Gradually there have come changes. Three French manufacturers, Citroen, Renault and Peugeot, are working for standardization.

SATURDAY, MARCH 1, 1930.

NOT A QUESTION OF WRONG DRYs do not understand wrong and wets do not understand dries. In the course of a very able argument against prohibition embodied in a letter to the Hartford Courant John J. Fleming, writing from New York, says:

"Is it wrong to drink alcoholic beverages? No person of normal reasoning power will answer in the affirmative. Then the Eighteenth amendment and its enforcement statutes are stupid attempts to make a crime of an act that is not wrong by any honest standards."

Right there Mr. Fleming is wrong. He has not, we are sure, fully weighed the meaning of "normal reasoning power." The normal reasoning power of the human race is, after all, rather limited, its development being badly interfered with by inherited prejudices; really clear reasoning is, we candidly fear, super-normal.

So that there are, as a matter of fact, plenty of people entitled to be regarded as normal reasoners who do, very decidedly, believe it is wrong to take even a single drink of any sort of intoxicant. There are plenty more, of average reasonableness, who see no harm whatever in a glass or several glasses of hard cider yet who would be genuinely shocked at the idea of drinking a bottle of beer, much more an ounce of sound whiskey. There are people in New England who haven't been technically and completely sober in forty years, thanks to frequent visits to the cider barrel, who couldn't be hired, bribed, cajoled or bullied into tasting any other liquor and who vote dry and think dry—and yet are reasonable enough persons in general.

There is another class of persons, fairly reasonable, who think it is wrong to take a drink—not terribly wrong, but a little; and who get a tremendous kick out of swallowing a row of very bad cocktails just because it gives them a feeling of devilishness. They feel very sophisticated and venturesome about it, because they are being delightfully naughty.

So there are reasonable people who believe that there isn't any sort of wrong in the judicious, controlled use of alcoholic beverages; and there are reasonable people who think it is all wrong; and there are reasonable people who get muddled on one side, like the cider-soaked dry and reasonable people who get muddled on the other side like the naughty-thrill wets.

And they all think that everybody else lacks normal reasoning power. Our position in this matter is that, whether it is wrong to drink intoxicants or not, prohibition is raising rim; that it is breeding the most dangerous class of rich criminals that any country in the world has ever seen; that it is undermining our culture and our American civilization and gradually making us a lunatic nation instead of the most rational and self-controlled one on earth.

We recognize alcohol to be a tremendous problem; but we don't believe it to be the only one or the greatest one that this country has to face. We believe national demoralization is a greater evil than any degree of national drunkenness that this country has ever experienced. America survived successfully a period in its early history when hardly any man of affairs went to bed at night completely sober. But she will not be able to survive the elevation of two or three million bootleggers into a moneyed aristocracy.

That is, primarily, why we want to see and hope to see the present noble experiment abandoned in favor of some restrictive system of alcoholic control that the people will support; some system that will be genuine and candid and honest and will put the bootleggers and the racketeers out of the Rolls-Royce class. And all this has nothing in the world to do with whether it is wrong or not wrong to take a drink. There are thousands of ingrained things people do that are wrong. We can't, however, smash the world to pieces to get rid of any one of them.

BACK TO HIS START Simon Lake, of Milford, submarine inventor, is seeking a contract with the federal government under which he would be authorized to salvage the treasure supposed to lie in the sunken hulk of a British ship which foundered in Long Island Sound near the entrance to the East River in the eighteenth century. If memory serves aright the ship was carrying the pay of the British army in New York during the Revolutionary war. At all events she has been the subject of one such contract, issued to one George Thomas of New Jersey, who never succeeded in finding the wreck though he dived with the scheme for years. He has long been dead.

If Mr. Lake succeeds in getting his contract he intends to employ his privately owned submarine, the Defender, in the search. She is equipped with a compressed air chamber out of which divers can conveniently operate.

The most interesting thing about this is the fact that after thirty years Simon Lake is now returning to his first purpose in entering the submarine construction field. He built his early "Argonaut" with the intention of using her to scout the floor of Long Island Sound for sunken coal cargoes. She, also, had a compressed air diving chamber, besides deadlights from which the surrounding waters could be surveyed. She ran on wheels, like a wagon, when on the bottom. Lake was diverted from his original purpose by the development of the submarine as a military machine and never did anything along the line of his first intent. Now, in his advanced years, he is going back to the plan on which he embarked in early life.

NOT FATAL ALTERNATIVE

We have expressed the belief that the best way to get along with the communists is to let them talk, let them parade—within rational limitations—let them blow off steam, unhindered. But that isn't saying that such a way is the only way or that any other way is necessarily a fatal mistake. Sometimes, to punch them and knock them around, while it may not be as good a way of handling them as the other, is not without its valuable points.

Anybody who is frightened by the gabbling and hullabaloo of the reds is assuredly lacking in courage and in faith in his country. But there are other aspects of this thing.

When communists parade they do not parade like other people. They do not go out on the streets to show off uniforms and good marching and the effects of discipline. They go out to start trouble. They go out to annoy and hamper the ordinary processes of civilization. They put themselves in the way of traffic. They intentionally make nuisances of themselves.

And right there is to be found the reason why the police let themselves be exasperated into violence. They understand perfectly well that the reds, whom they quite naturally regard as dirty little rats, are daring them to do anything. And they see no reason why, in the face of such a challenge, they should grant to the haters of government special favors that would not be either asked by or granted to ordinary citizens.

So it frequently happens that a cop pastes a red in the eye or clouts him a good one on the jaw, or that another cop seizes a screaming haridan of a girl and gives her the bum's rush. They might do worse. In spite of the fact that it is possible to do better.

A PARTIAL REASON

The Middletown Press is impressed by the circumstance that the state of Texas, with three times Connecticut's population, is represented, among America's foreign-going tourists, by only two-fifths as many travelers as this state.

We like to glorify Connecticut, too, on all possible occasions, but we shouldn't care to make that break within Texans' hearing, for the comeback is too obvious—about Texans being able to do all necessary traveling without reaching the borders of their own state, while Connecticut people have the choice of beating it for elsewhere or remaining on a leash, so to speak.

THROUGH THE YEARS

There is one puzzling phase in the case of Edward Durant of Shelton, this state. Durant was repairing a chicken house when a spectator idly inquired the sense of putting such a good floor in such an old shed; whereupon Durant flew into a rage, attacked the spectator and, when the latter fought back, shot him. Then he took to the woods with a perfect arsenal of weapons and, resolved not to be taken alive and hanged for murder, shot a police officer who undertook to arrest him. He was himself wounded three times and captured. Incidentally neither victim of his gun died.

What we can't understand about this affair is how a man so petulant and so ready with firearms ever lived to be seventy-two years old—which he is. Most of the bad men of frontier history died in their boots before they were forty.

IN NEW YORK

New York, March 1—If a liveried partyman in the mansion of the John Chandler Moores at 17 West Seventieth street, Manhattan, were to forget himself so far as to leave a bit of brick-bat at a yodeling concert in the rear alleyway, the chances are that the crash would occur within a few inches of the nation's most socially sacred spot. Of course, no such incident is likely to happen. To begin with, no wise New York cat would ever wander into the back yards of the Seventies, where the schnauzers bark only at wolfhounds and the wolfhounds never forget their dignity. Nor would a partyman, a second man or a butler ever allow himself such a vulgar display of indisposition.

Be all this as it may, the Social Register Association—having made its hazardous way through names of the social elite—comes forth with information of extraordinary value to the geographers of that rich little kingdom called Swellodom. It is to the effect that the South Pole of swank has somewhat slipped north by east, and now lies in what would be a back yard were it not for the fact that in this particular neighborhood back yards become areaways.

Only a year ago or more, this pivotal point, marking the exact center of social aristocracy, was in the center of the street, where motors could pass casually over it and mere pedestrians scruff it up. But a couple of years have moved it seaward. The point of all this, if it seems a bit obscure, is simply that every two years the geometricians, geographers and such of the social register venture forth to find out the exact point at which New York society wears the largest capital S. It is done by means of a city map, upon which are pinned little cards bearing the names of those folk whose names are written large in the register. The particular neighborhood which is most densely populated by the socially eminent is thus discovered.

This district is then geometrical-ly and mathematically bisected until an exact center is found. After which, everyone spears another walrus and goes home. Those intrepid navigators and explorers who care to meet the doughy butler in his native jungle can take a chance upon reaching the spot marked with the Social X. Climbers, we are told, have a better chance.

However—making our own survey from without—it has been learned that the South Pole of swank is surrounded on one side by the Frick art memorial and mansion; by the Grayson Murphys, the Le Roy Baldwins, the Marshall Fields and the John Wing Prentices.

The social registerites would have the world know that the hub of aristocracy may be expected to move gradually northward. All of which is extremely valuable to real estate gents, who are interested in having their property values affected by surrounding social significances. This is a neighborhood, incidentally, where shutters will be found upon the windows and boards over the doors during a considerable portion of what Ed Wynne refers to as "the physical year." The winter season finds most of the registerites in Florida and way points, and the summer finds them headed for the European play spots and the cooler climes. Many of the houses seem usually to be in the hands of servants with no one to serve but themselves.

In the key section of the South Pole of swank, however, one finds that the "gentleman of the house" is, almost invariably, an active and important man of affairs. A check of a dozen names show the business address almost invariably to be some banking house in Wall street or some corporation headquarters. GILBERT SWAN.

"Good Morning, Mr. Zip, Zip, Zip—With Your Hair Cut as Short as Mine!"

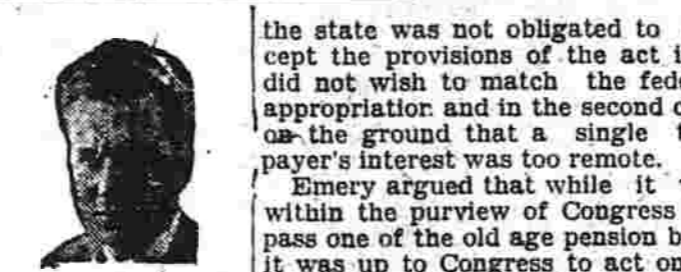

HEALTH-DIET ADVICE by Dr. Frank McCoy. A NEW VIEWPOINT. Today I wish to urge you to acquire a new point of view about food. You have probably selected your food principally because of its agreeable taste, or because it filled you with a comfortable feeling of contentment; or, perhaps, also because having these filling and tasty properties, it could be secured at a nominal price.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Automatic Heart?) Question—Mrs. W. M. asks: "Will you be kind enough to tell me the meaning of an automatic heart, and is it dangerous?" Answer: The heart always works automatically, so I do not know what you mean by "automatic" heart. Perhaps you mean either an athletic heart, or what is called an abdominal heart. Athletic heart is one which has been enlarged through hard exercise. The so-called abdominal heart is where the heart has been displaced into the abdomen.

(Iodine) Question—L. S. asks: "Is it safe to use iodine internally to stop pyorrhea?" Answer: Many dentists use iodine locally on the gums in treating pyorrhea and it is often used as an internal remedy. I do not believe the internal treatment is necessary for the cure of pyorrhea, but in case you do use this treatment you must do so under the directions of a physician who is familiar with its use. The right dosage must be taken to suit each particular case or one is liable to suffer from iodism from taking overdoses of this remedy.

(Removing Wrinkles) Question—Mrs. H. asks: "Can you suggest a good prescription for removing wrinkles? I don't know what to buy, as there are so many removers from which to choose." Answer: It is dangerous to use preparations for removing wrinkles except as they are used by trained cosmeticians. Sometimes liquid preparations are used, and others use a peeling induced by a burning from the ultra-violet light. Massage treatments can then be given to the skin and ice applied several times daily to produce a good blood circulation. The very small wrinkles can be almost entirely removed by such methods, but of course the large ones cannot be changed except by facial surgery, and the final results of this method are very disappointing. I will be glad to send you a special article on this subject if you will forward a large self-addressed stamped envelope.

place the immediate dollar above human rights." Most of the testimony before the committee stressed the increasing problem of dependency. It was pointed out that with the reduction of the age deadline in industry more and more people were being turned out into the ranks of the unemployed and that whereas many persons once depended on the years after 45 or 50—with children grown and self-supporting—to accumulate savings, they no longer can count on that final productive effort. The witnesses on behalf of the American Association for Old Age Security included Father John A. Ryan of the National Catholic Welfare Council, Rabbi Edward L. Israel of the Social Justice Committee of the Central Conference of American Rabbis, Edward F. McGrady of the American Federation of Labor, William N. Doak of the railroad brotherhood and Harry W. Laidler of the Socialist party.

Call it Unconstitutional. James A. Emery, counsel for the manufacturers' association, appeared against the bill. Committee members discussed with him the constitutionality of federal old age pensions, pointing out that when both the state of Massachusetts and a private citizen brought actions against the Sheppard-Towner Maternity act the supreme court turned down both, in the first case because

WASHINGTON LETTER BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer.

Washington, March 1.—Advocates of old age pensions were encouraged by the reception their views received at the House Labor Committee's hearings on various bills having to do with old age security.

There was little opposition expressed and members of the committee appeared to take a sympathetic and informed interest. Although no one expects passage at this session of any bill providing an appropriation for pensions, some hope is held for the Strovich resolution which would create a Congressional Old Age Security Commission of 10 members appointed to make a thorough study of old age dependency in the United States and of the different proposals for relief.

Seek to Arouse Sentiment. "These hearings have been of tremendous educational value," says Abraham Epstein, the executive secretary of the American Association for Old Age Security. "The sentiment of America has been aroused to the neglect of aged persons in the only industrial country in the world where no system has been created to aid them. It is significant that only the National Manufacturers' Association, which has opposed all social legislation throughout its history, is still misguidedly fighting this legislation. There isn't an industrial group abroad which doesn't believe that the old age pensions systems established in other countries have proved a great blessing to industries themselves. Last year I went to Europe and interviewed dozens of English, French and German manufacturers and nowhere did I find any strong group of them opposed to old age pensions. "The only opposition left in this country is due to the short-sighted policy of propagandists. Many of America's biggest business men have written us to tell us of their hearty support. The framers of National Manufacturers' Association policies are afraid old age pensions systems will cost them a little money. There are still many people who

Horace K. Burr and Wilbert E. Tedford Nightly Converse With Operators in Europe With Their Home Made Sets—Real Edisons In the Making.

MANCHESTER has an ever-growing crop of prospective Thomas Edisons. The field is large; the opportunities are unlimited and the tools of the tradesmen are many and highly perfected. Small wonder, then, that such boys as Horace Burr, son of Dr. and Mrs. Noah A. Burr of 14 Park street, Manchester's youngest licensed radio operator, and Wilbert Tedford, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. Tedford, 72 East Center street have entered into the field of radio electricity and have constructed sets capable of sending and receiving radio messages to and from many distant points.

MANCHESTER NOW HAS SIX LICENSED OPERATORS

MANCHESTER has six licensed radio operators of various ages. They are: George Pinner, John Dwyer, Louis Richmond, Leonard Johnson, John Reinartz and Horace Burr. The application of Wilbert Tedford has been made to the Department of Commerce, his task having been taken under the direction of John Reinartz, the local inspector and instructor and the necessary permit to operate should be in the mails today.

OVER 13,000 MEMBERS OF THE RADIO LEAGUE

THE American Radio Relay League has a membership of 13,000 in the United States with 4,000 scattered in all other parts of the globe. This organization is composed of licensed operators banded together to further the interests of radio activities throughout the civilized world.

It is not unusual for an operator in Manchester to span the limits of oceans, mountains or continents, through all kinds of weather conditions, and to bring the remotest outpost along the fringe of civilization in direct touch with the cosmopolitan cities. The explorer, hidden for months in the most inaccessible parts of jungle or wild desert of the northland has little to fear if he has the proper radio equipment. The daily messages of the Byrd Antarctic expedition confirms this fact.

Highly Technical But it is a highly technical course, a brand-new outcropping of the electrical arts having but very little in common with the standardized, colorless study and development of electricity as generally viewed by the average person. To cover the subject of radio electricity, and to do it with some semblance of justice, one must needs be seeped with an intimate knowledge of the tools of the trade. Such terms as rectification, filtered, screen-grid, heterodyne, frequency, counterpoise, resistance, milliamperes, electrolytic, and modulation are not to be used promiscuously. The technical color of this interesting pursuit must needs be passed on to those more qualified.

YOUNG BURR INTERESTED IN BOY SCOUT WORK

HORACE K. Burr, son of Dr. and Mrs. Noah A. Burr of 14 Park street was born in Manchester, Sept. 2, 1913. He is a member of Troop 3, E. S. A. of the Center Congregational church. He has been a member of the troop for the Little Home Made Radio Set Can Send Around the World

Appropos today's story of Manchester's youthful radio operators, Mr. John Reinartz, speaking of the possible distance range of home made sets made by local boys, told of an interesting experience while in the Arctic with McMillan.

"The standard radio set is capable of a very wide range, suitable for the average youthful operator," he said. "An experience that I had while in the North convinced me of this fact.

"A friend of mine was sending a message to another operator within the borders of the States, 3,500 miles away. I picked up every word, distinctly on the edge of the Arctic Circle."

Asked about the possible advantage of the new Ceco 50 watt tube to be installed by Wilbert Tedford in his Pilot super-wasp set said:

"If he can adapt the new tube to his set he can practically circle the world."

Will wonders ever cease!

YOUNG RADIO EXPERTS

Horace K. Burr

past three years, taking much interest in all the various activities of the organization, especially in signaling in which he has become very proficient. He has to his credit at the present time 21 merit badges, giving him the qualifications for Star Scout hood. Four more special merit accomplishments and he will attain to the coveted pinnacle of all scouts—Eagle Scout—the magna cum laude of Scouting.

Early in his Scout career he sought out the deeper things of radio, just then in the ascendancy. He studied books on the subject and prepared diagrams as each new twist and feature was developed. His final diagram perfected, he constructed his first set and labored long hours over unusually dry, and yet—interesting terms, and sketches in which the entire radio field was shimmering with constant development. Each new development came so close upon the one previous that before construction was complete, the set was out of date.

Gets Long Distance His set constructed in conformity with the latest accepted principles of radio construction, Horace devoted much time to the study of the code and after examination by Mr. Reinartz, his application for a radio operator's license was forwarded and was received on Jan. 30th last. Up to the present time he has communicated with stations in many parts of the world including: Nauyas, Germany, one of the highest powered stations in the world; Mexico City, Balinas, Cal.; Havana, Cuba, and many other United States stations.

He operates a Hartley circuit, 200 ohms alternating current rectified and filtered using 2 UX 201 A tubes, and admits of an ever increasing interest in this fascinating pursuit where world-wide races talk but one language—the code of the radio key.

FEW OF THESE WORDS IN THE DICTIONARY

WILBERT E. TEDFORD, a little more than two months to a day younger than young Burr, is nevertheless not one less enthusiastic over the prospects of future days with his up-to-date Pilot super-wasp screen-grid set. To hear these boys talk along radio lines is to be overcome with a desire to commune with Webster's Unabridged at the earliest possible moment. In this instance the dictionary is of little moment, for the book of many word meanings has difficulty in keeping up with radio progress and the coinage of new terms applicable to the new study.

After a short period of sickness, Wilbert confessed to prying a request from his father (who incidentally is a maker of radios) to allow him to make a small one tube set, which was granted and soon made. With interest at a high pitch after the first few code letters arrived on the little set from distant points, other sets were constructed, parts substituted until today young Tedford has a fine set, considering the outlay of money and the time spent on construction.

"Ted" as he is familiarly known to his boy friends at the Trade School, where he is taking a straight Electrical course, is bubbling over with enthusiasm and dates his real interest from that day on his sick bed when he soaked his father into the construction of a simple one tube set. He has brought in stations in Holland, England, the Eiffel

Tower, France, Havana, Long Beach, Calif.; Walla Walla, Wash.; Virginia, Alberta and Illinois.

JOHN REINARTZ TALKS ON MAKING SETS

A CALL on Mr. John Reinartz, who in a large measure has been the inspiration of the local boys in their radio work, brought out many interesting points, among which the following should be of timely interest to parents who may have had at some time, these same requests for consideration from radio inclined boys.

"Radio furnishes for the qualified boy an interesting avenue for development," said Mr. Reinartz. "The first thing he has to contend with in radio is a complete knowledge of his work. Nothing can be done unless he can absorb the details of construction, the why and the wherefore of various diagrams and in short—to know what is actually taking place within his set."

Radio Advancing "Radio had advanced to such a point that with a moderate outlay an ordinary boy, willing to devote his time to the subject matter can become proficient in a short time. Practice in sending and especially in receiving will soon bring him into a world that is increasingly colorful and attractive as time quickly passes. Best of all, parents will know that these boys are engaged in something to their liking, keeping them away from influences not for their best interests."

The older licensed operators in town have expressed a feeling of deep interest in the boys just stepping into radio work. Over a long period these same operators have kept the spirit alive because they are co-workers in a wide-awake organization, 17,000 strong over the known world. There is always the realization of the unexpected occurring, new stations to be heard from and of late an increasing amount of correspondence between station operators, relative to reception, distances covered and other subjects.

BISHOP MURDERED

London, March 1.—(AP)—An Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Hong Kong today reported that the Salesian bishop, Monsignor Versiglia, Father Caravario and three Chinese sisters were murdered some days ago by bandits near Suifu.

The bandits apparently saw the party entering the boat ahead of them and proceeded to attack it at Suifu. They demanded $500. On receiving a refusal they tried to seize the sisters and the bishop. They met opposition, but eventually succeeded in carrying off the party to the mountains where they murdered them.

CANCEL PARTIES AT WASHINGTON

Congressional Club Affairs Postponed Because of Illness of Mr. Taft.

Washington, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Washington's official social program went uncompleted this week, when the capital's interest was diverted to concern for William Howard Taft after his physician had announced Thursday there was no hope for his recovery.

Mrs. Hoover's social plans, which have been trailed by changes and disappointments this season, were likewise affected, with cancellation of the White House reception in honor of the House of Representatives Thursday night.

The reception arranged for Friday evening by the Congressional Club for the Speaker and Mrs. Longworth likewise was cancelled, as were many of the large official and semi-official dinner parties.

Mr. Taft's successor, Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, and Mrs. Hughes had made no social plans and had accepted only the most informal invitations from old friends since coming to Washington, because of the critical condition of the former president and chief justice.

They are living at the Mayflower hotel, and have with them their daughter, Miss Elizabeth Hughes. Miss Hughes was a Cathedral student during the previous residence in the capital.

One gets an occasional peep into unusually delightful places in Washington through the ordinary medium of an "at home," and those who attended the first reception held by the new minister from Ecuador and Senor Viteri Lafontaine were well rewarded.

Senior Lafontaine presented his credentials in October, but failure of his household goods to arrive until recently resulted in postponement of the party, to have been given Christmas.

The legation formerly was occupied by a Peruvian minister, who dwelled in an Oriental atmosphere. Now it is Spanish. While many of the massive pieces of mahogany, came from Spain, much of it is termed Colonial by the minister because it was made in the colonies of Spain, in the Eighteenth Century.

The dining room where tea was served had been transformed into a sylvan apartment, from which leads a loggia, and was adorned with carvings and paintings, much of which is of a religious nature.

BUILT ROCKET PLANE

Monongahela, Pa.—(AP)—July 4, 1898, when the airplane was in its infancy, an airplane model propelled by rockets roared, puffed clouds of black smoke, and soared into the air.

The jubilant and excited inventor, William Schick, raced madly after it while the odd contraption shot forward for 12 feet to the amazement of the crowds that had gathered in the field to hoot. But Schick's moment of triumph was fleeting. The plane crashed, splintered, and burned.

The plane had a cylindrical body, 40 feet long and 10 inches in diameter. A tube containing powder caps was adjusted to an explosion chamber in the front of the machine. Dropping one at a time into the explosion chamber, the powder caps would ignite and the force of the explosion would drive the plane through the air, while the gas produced inflated canvas bags attached to the body, thus lifting the plane from the ground.

For years, Schick built other models and sought unsuccessfully to obtain financial backing. Poverty marked his last years. He died this winter.

20,000-MILE AIR TOUR

Atlanta.—(AP)—The first airplane built in Atlanta, a tri-motored, six-passenger, low-winged monoplane, will make a 20,000 mile tour of South and Central America in March. The Atlanta Aircraft corporation built it.

THE BOOK SURVEY

BY BRUCE CATTON NEA Service Writer

Francesco Nitti, nephew of a former premier of Italy, found himself unable to rejoice when Mussolini made himself dictator. Being brave, he did not keep his feelings to himself; so, one day, the Black Shirts descended on him, and presently he found himself exiled, for a five-year term, to the desolate island of Lipari in the Mediterranean.

Nitti did not propose to stay the three years, but he spent something like a year working out a plan of escape, despite the fact that no one had ever escaped from Lipari before. The plan was somewhat daring since it required out into the sea, at night, on the chance that a rescue launch would be waiting for them; but they did it, the launch was there, and all three got away.

Nitti describes all of this in "Escape," offered by G. P. Putnam's Sons at $2.50; and he makes his book one of the most thrilling tales of exciting adventure you would care to find.

Parts of it are almost unbelievable. Two of the police officials he mentions were obviously insane; and I found it hard to believe that an efficient force like Mussolini's Fascism would put lunatics in positions of command—until I remembered a lieutenant in the United States navy, in the World War, who was unquestionably very goofy. So I guess such things do happen, after all.

Nitti's story will not go down well with admirers of Mussolini. It is a tale of senseless oppression, torture and despotism. But it is eminently worth your while. Besides being a valuable insight into the ways of Fascism, it is exciting from beginning to end.

An Arkansas Bootlegger, His Son and a Girl. "Backwater," the newest novel from T. S. Stribling's talented pen, is not another "Teef-tallow." Instead of being a slow, painstaking study of a little-understood section of American life, as "Teef-tallow" was, it is frankly a melodrama. But what a melodrama it is! The story moves at a gallop from start to finish. It ought to make a magnificent movie.

The son of an Arkansas bootlegger comes home from college, blindly in love with the daughter of a neighboring planter—an aristocrat to whom the lad's bootlegger-father is quite outside the pale. The girl returns his love, but pride of place is too much for her and she can't see her way clear to marry him.

Then her own father, conpendium of all the virtues, slides from grace and makes a fortune through an unusually shady banking deal. The girl thereupon comes to her senses and the course of true love gets a break. Meanwhile, there is a fight with a mob and a devastating flood—in which the bootlegger, furnishing free booze to the tired negroes working on the levee, becomes the hero of the hour.

That's the story. It is very well done, and I'm dead sure you'll like it. Doubleday, Doran are publishing it.

In Which the Mid-West Goes Very Modern. "Native Soil," by Allan Updegraff, is a tale of singular charm; the tale of a globe-trotter who returns, after many years, to his home town of Springfield, Mo., to find that Springfield is moving a great deal faster than he ever dreamed.

For the American-small-city Mr. Updegraff describes has no more in common with Sinclair Lewis' Zenith than Calcutta. The returning native, fresh from Paris, is fairly swept off his feet by the unshackled, modern-minded sons and daughters of the middle west. He visits in the home of friends; his hostess flings herself gaily at his head and, instead of flying into a middle-western passion, amiably offers to divorce her and let the guest have her. Then a 24-year-old school teacher coolly asks him if she can be his mistress for a year, or so when he goes back to Paris.

In a short time, the globe-trotter flees back to Paris again. Springfield has so thoroughly lost its provincialism that it is too much for him. Paris is more sedate.

I may be giving you a wrong impression of this book. It isn't flippant and airy in tone. Mr. Updegraff writes with fine insight and sympathy, and his book is no cheap shocker. It is well written and thoughtful. I think it'll appeal to you.

"Native Soil," is printed by the John Day Company and sells at $2.50.

A Good Book About the Man Who Took Quebec. General Wolfe, who took Quebec from the French and died in the moment of victory on the plains of Abraham, is a familiar but unknown figure to most of us. We read about his achievement in our school histories, and the name stuck in our minds; but that, in most cases, ends it. We never really made the man's acquaintance.

Lieutenant Colonel F. E. Whitton, in "Wolfe and North America," provides us with an introduction. He has done a good job. Wolfe, you discover, was a man worth knowing. He was a good soldier—Lieutenant

BUILDERS URGED TO EXAMINE ALL SPECIFICATIONS

Architects Often Blamed for High Cost of 'Extras' Actually Ordered by Owners

BY WILLIAM HARMON BEERS

A set of specifications is a document very often misunderstood by the layman. In many cases he thinks it is loosely written and covers in a general way what is to go into the house, but that there are loopholes in it big enough to drive a coach-and-four through, and that these omissions are the cause of many extras before the house is finished. No doubt in many cases he is right but, fortunately, the majority of specifications written today are founded on similar documents written for similar operations and they are usually complete and good.

In my experience the extras which occur are, in nine cases out of ten, due to changes by the owner while the house is being built. The architect is no superman endowed with clairvoyant powers, and he cannot foresee that "Mrs. Jones" will tell "Mrs. Smith" that her library would be much more attractive in light yellow, when Mrs. Black had intended to copy "Mrs. Black's" library painted Adam green and had told her architect so.

A set of specifications is really a typewritten communication from the owner through his representative the architect to the contractor. A business man writes a letter to an agent in some other town, so the architect, representing his client, writes the set of specifications to the contractor. Of course the specifications are couched in certain customary terms and are longer.

Here I must digress a bit and make an earnest plea to all prospective builders, that they read their specifications. Many times I have seen unfortunate architects and builders being roundly scolded by their clients because the clients had not properly read the specifications and did not actually know what they were getting.

Often when there is trouble during the building of a house it is due to a misunderstanding between the owner, architect and contractor, and usually as to the kind of workmanship called for in the specifications. As an example: You are building a house costing $10,000, during the operation you look at your friends' houses, many of which have cost $20,000 to $25,000.

When the paint is being applied your architect has specified three-coat work and in your friends' houses six or seven coats of work has been used. You wonder why the painting job when finished is not as good as theirs and your architect tells you that in order to give you your house cheaper he has had to cut down on the number of coats used. Had you carefully read the clause in your specifications on painting you would have been thoroughly conversant with the kind of interior finish you were to get.

DUMBWAITERS STILL FOUND CONVENIENT

Some houses are planned with the kitchen on the basement level and the dining room above, making a dumbwaiter necessary. This arrangement is frequent in city houses. Other houses are sometimes equipped with a dumbwaiter extending from kitchen to cellar, as it has been found a great convenience, preventing carrying many articles up the stairs.

BUYING BY PLAN AVOIDS ERRORS IN DECORATING

Selection of Individual Pieces Without Regard to Layout Disappoints.

BY MARGERY SILL WICKWARE
Surely there is no more misap-

plied title than that of interior decorator. It is so extremely ambiguous that one cannot be quite sure whether it means a mural decorator, a paperhanger, a collector of antiques and objects of art or, at a slight stretch of the imagination, a cook of unusual excellence. At all events, it is an ill-defined and, withal, a rather important-sounding title, that has undoubtedly prejudiced many persons of simple tastes, who love unpretentious houses, and who lead informal lives. The decorator should serve those who feel that their houses are not large and important and expensive enough to interest him; for the planning of the decoration and furnishing of the small house is a most interesting problem.

Study of Proportions Advised
To achieve a home that is a harmonious unit and not a conglomeration of heterogeneous furniture, it is essential to start with a well-considered plan and to make all future selections of furnishings with reference to this plan. Nothing is more generally unattractive and unfit than a collection of furniture bought at random—a piece here because it is pretty, a piece there because it is cheap. More than likely the piece that is cheap is much too clumsy to go in the room with the piece that is pretty and, frequently, the latter is only pretty and neither good nor useful.

Yet many people who can afford both time and money for really satisfying results purchase most of their household belongings in just this fashion, without regard to their proportions or to their relations to each other.

Home Analogous To Dress
This is, indeed, strange, for nine times out of ten the woman who furnishes her house in this helter-skelter manner will give the greatest consideration and thought to the purchase of her clothes. She would never dream of buying satin slippers three sizes too small to wear with a tweed coat four sizes too large. Yet this is exactly the way she dresses her house, and the things that she buys for her house unfortunately last much longer than the garments she buys for herself. Mistakes in furnishing are expensive and lasting and live to haunt us, sometimes for years.

It is in avoiding these mistakes in buying for the home that the methods of the interior decorator prove to be especially helpful and economical. When the decorator plans the furnishings and embellishments of a room he ascertains, first, the use to which it is to be put; the personalities and tastes of those who are to occupy it, and the amount of money to be spent.

CHAPTER XLVIII

Slowly the big car, which looked black in the darkness, made its way along West Twelfth street. The driver peered at each house as he passed. He was hunting for a street number and this was difficult because part of the houses were not lighted.

The limousine hesitated, and then moved forward. Before the next house the chauffeur brought the car to a halt. He swung to the pavement.

"This is the place, sir," he said, opening the door of the tonneau. From the driver's tone it was evident that he did not approve of the neighborhood.

Arthur Knight stepped out on the sidewalk.

"Wait until I come back," he directed. "I don't know how long that will be."

"Yes, sir."

Knight glanced up at the building, then hurried up the steps and rang the bell.

"Does Daniel Cameron live here?" Daniel asked.

"Yes, sir."

"I'd like to speak to him. Knight is my name."

"I'll see if Mr. Cameron is in," the woman said. She stepped back, opening the door wider for Knight to enter. Then she turned and hurried up the stairs.

Arthur Knight surveyed the dingy hallway with disapproval. He noted the worn floor, the ugly bouquet of wax flowers which stood before the mirror and the small electric globe feebly struggling to brighten the scene.

"The man moved restlessly. At the noise of a door opening and steps upon the staircase he raised his eyes. Quickly he lowered them.

Young Dan Cameron came down the steps. Each man measured the other with a glance.

"Mr. Knight?" Dan asked formally. "I understand you asked for me." "I understand you asked step as he spoke.

"Yes. How do you do, Mr. Cameron?" Knight's voice betrayed his uneasiness. "The fact is, I came here hoping that you might help me."

"In what way?"

The harsh edge of the words left the other plainly embarrassed. He hesitated, then said slowly:

"I thought you might help me find my wife—"

"Mr. Knight," she said. "She doesn't wish to see you."

The silence which followed was poignant.

"Could I—would you mind telling her I'm here?"

Dan Cameron shook his head. "Under the circumstances," he said, "I don't think it would be at all wise."

"I'm afraid you don't understand," Knight persisted. "I must see Judith! There is something of the utmost importance for her to know! Oh, don't you understand?"

"No, I'm afraid I don't!"

Arthur Knight raised his eyes in despair and as he did so a light came into them. Dan turned and followed his gaze. There at the top of the stairs stood Judith.

But she was not the same Judith who had left Arthur Knight's home. There were hollows under the blue eyes and her cheeks were pale. She seemed thinner. Judith's eyes were fastened on Arthur but she did not smile.

"Judith!" said the man, rushing forward. "I've got to talk to you! I didn't mean what I said to you that afternoon. You'll give me a chance to explain, won't you?"

His voice was more eloquent than the words. Knight had rushed part way up the stairs.

"Yes," said Judith nodding, still unsmiling. "You can come up."

She led the way down the hall to the rear room. Dan Cameron followed Knight sulkily. When they were in the room Knight exclaimed:

"You're not well—you've been ill!"

He was staring at the girl.

"I'm much better now," she told him. "It's nothing to worry about."

"Sit down, Judy," Dan spoke up. He moved a chair for her.

Judith took the chair and regarded her husband.

"You understand of course," she said firmly, "that I intend to remain here with Dan."

"But I want you, Judith!" Knight's tone was moving.

"Mr. Knight," said Dan, "you can see she isn't well. I don't think you've any right to disturb her this way."

Knight turned toward him.

"Do you think," he said slowly, "that it is a disturbance to tell my wife that I love her better than anything in the world, that I want to spend the rest of my life trying to make up for mistakes which have hurt her, and that day and night I have grieved for her?"

"Arthur!" There was protest, not joy, in Judith's voice. Knight started as though struck.

"Do YOU want me to go?" he said.

Judith's lips trembled.

"But I told you I intend to stay here with Dan. We need each other."

"Are a brother's claims above a husband's?"

"Then—you know!" murmured Judith.

"I know that I have been miserable and lonely—and I know that I love you more than you could possibly guess from my blundering mistakes. I know that I want you to come home—"

"But—Arthur!"

Suddenly Judith could not keep back the tears. Knight was on his knees beside her, his arms around her, her head pressed to his shoulder. Rather incoherently he comforted her with soothing, endearing words. Judith sobbed silently. Presently she raised her head.

"Arthur," she said tensely, "you mean—nothing—makes any difference?"

"Nothing in the world makes any difference to me now that I've found you again!"

Dan Cameron was quite out of the scene from then on. Judith and Arthur Knight were in each other's arms, warm kisses on Judith's lips and throat and forehead, her hands caressing his dear face, both pair of eyes blurred from laughter and tears at the same time.

When their ecstasy had calmed, Knight drew his chair close to hers.

"Starting," she smiled, "there's so much to say! I came here to talk to you, and now before I've begun I feel that everything's been said." Judith shook her head.

"But it hasn't," she denied. "I want to hear everything. I want to know what you've been doing and how you happened to come here and why—"

Here Dan was interested. He came nearer, leaning against the table.

"I'd like to hear about some of those things myself," he said.

"Of course," said Knight. "I'm looking forward to knowing you a lot better, Cameron. I want to know your father too."

Judith's eyes grew serious.

"How long," she asked, "have you known about—us?"

"Knight answered her gaze directly.

"Since about the third evening you had dinner with me last November."

"Oh!" The little gasp was involuntary.

"It doesn't sound very gentlemanly," Knight continued, "but I want to know the truth. When I realized what you had suddenly come to mean to me, Judith, I did some investigating. I knew I couldn't live without you and in order to know the quickest way to win you I had to be an—"

"Confidential investigator. I didn't mean to spy, my dear—you believe that, don't you? When he made his report you were more than ever the girl I wanted."

"Told you the whole story, did he?" asked Dan.

"Why, yes, I suppose so. He told me that you and Judith had come from a little town in Missouri—forgot the name—and that your father had been unfortunate enough to be railroaded into a prison sentence due to mismanagement of a bank. He made it explicitly clear that the man was the victim of unscrupulous superiors. Naturally I couldn't blame Judith for not caring to mention all this, though I fail to see any reflection upon any of you—or your father. I believe you're in a rather good office here, aren't you?"

Knight turned toward Dan.

"Oh, I'm not getting much of a salary," the youth answered, "but there's the opportunity there, all right, if I can make the grade."

"Of course you can!"

Dan blushed awkwardly.

"Judith and I," he pondered—"you mustn't think we're ashamed of dad! You see, just about everything we had was cleaned out after the bank failed. There was enough money to bring us to New York and pay for Judith's business course. One of father's friends—about the only one who was loyal—got me my job in the bond house. He was the one who told us not to let the story out. Judy didn't tell you about it because she thought somehow it might hurt me."

Knight nodded.

"I would expect it to be something like that," he said.

"But to think you've known all this time!" Judith exclaimed. "It—it makes me feel ridiculous."

Dan Cameron thrust his hand out.

"Mr. Knight," he said, "I've thought some pretty harsh things about you. I want to apologize."

Arthur wrung his hand warmly.

"Forget about it," he said.

"Arthur," said the girl impulsively, "will you take me to see my father? He's such a fine man. I want you to know him the way I do. There's another year left before he can—"

"Come to see us."

"Of course I'll take you. We'll go next month."

For that he was rewarded by two radiant blue eyes and a squeeze of the hand.

"But I haven't made my apology yet," Knight hastened on, "and it's the most needed." He hesitated. "I'm an old fool, Judith," he went on slowly. "You ought to know it by this time. But, you see, I couldn't get the notion that a lovely young thing like you could really care for me. I thought I was doing the right thing in giving you up to a younger man!"

"Oh!"

"Yes," went on Knight humbly, "I thought—well I thought it was Andy Craig you cared about."

"Look into my eyes now and tell me you love me," said Arthur Knight fervently.

Judith took his face in her hands. "I love you," she said simply.

It was on the way home that evening in the car that Arthur Knight remembered to tell his wife about Tony's and Andy's marriage. The young Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Craig had sailed the day before for France. There was to be a two months' honeymoon and after that an indefinite post for Andy with the London representative of Hunter Brothers. Knight said he believed the youngsters would be happy.

"By the way," he said, "you and I are going back to Bermuda and finish up that honeymoon. Or would you rather make the trip somewhere else?"

"From beneath lowered lashes Judith's eyes flashed an eloquent answer.

"Murder Backstairs" Is Tingling Detective Story

MURDER had been committed at the fashionable Berkeley mansion, where house guests were gathered for a week-end party.

The body of Doris Matthews, a pretty maid, was found in the swimming pool. The only clew was the pungent odor of perfume that hovered about the murdered girl.

Even this insubstantial clew apparently was valueless because Gigi Berkeley, beautiful young daughter of the host, had sprinkled all the guests with a similar perfume the preceding night.

Hints On How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

EATING WRONG TYPE OF FOOD CAN CAUSE ATTACK OF ECZEMA

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Editor Journal of the American Medical Association and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

In the last quarter of a century cases of eczema have been much better defined than they were before.

At one time any inflammation of the skin that was associated with swelling and redness and the exudation of fluid was called eczema. Nowadays it is realized that eczema is a condition of the skin with the symptoms that have been mentioned, but which follows a definite course and which is associated with a special reaction on the part of the skin to certain irritant or exciting agents.

Among the external irritants which may bring about the reactions of eczematous character are such chemicals as frequently occur in normal life, including formaldehyde and turpentine, the dyes which are used to stain fur and hair, vegetable irritants such as poison ivy, primrose and mustard. Sometimes the rays of the sun produce eczematous reactions in the skin of certain people.

The specialist in diseases of the skin is likely to separate the condition which follows a definite course and which is known as eczema from an ordinary inflammation of the skin brought about by irritating substances and which is called dermatitis. Usually infection occurs in combination with the inflammation and defines the situation.

Sometimes people who are sensitive to certain food substances react with eczema on the skin; in other instances, they react with urticaria and which consists of itching, blister-like hives.

Babies may be sensitive to wheat, to eggs, or to milk and respond after the taking of such food substances with eczematous reactions. In such cases the removal of the sensitizing substances from the diet results in prompt alleviation of the symptoms.

There was a time when the skin was considered something entirely apart from the body generally and merely as an envelope to hold the rest of the organs. Nowadays the skin is considered as a mirror of the system reacting in various ways to the changes that go on in the body.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

A certain mother went to her doctor in great distress over her little girl's diet.

"She won't eat what I give her—she plays with her food. We've done everything we can to coax up her appetite," she complained. "Now what had I better do next?"

"Bring her in and I'll look her over," said the doctor.

Hilda May was forthwith produced and the usual procedure gone through.

"She's as sound as a nut, a little underweight, perhaps—but she's all right. What do you feed her?"

"The diet you gave me. A quart of milk a day, either plain or in other food, cereal, vegetables, an egg, or chicken, fish, or lamb, or a little beef; stewed fruits, citrus fruits, light desserts—oh, we give her a fine variety."

Cooking Isn't the Trouble

"How's your cooking?"

"Mother and I do it nearly all ourselves. We're good cooks."

"Do you serve it up in small appetizing portions?"

"Oh, yes!"

"Regularly?"

"Just about."

"Talk much about her not eating before her?"

"Well—perhaps we do, a little. Yes, I'm afraid we fuss a good bit."

"Does she eat between meals? Or drink milk? Nibble at fruit perhaps?"

"Well, of course, we get worried and we've gotten now that we'll give her food whenever she wants it. But she doesn't want it ever, it seems."

"I don't think your daughter is a problem case," said the doctor. "She may have a little idiosyncrasy against food as some children have, but I'd even hesitate to call it that. We older people are so fond of calling anything out of our stereotyped man-made program for children an 'idiosyncrasy.'

Exercise a Common Need

"The truth is that nature makes a program for each child regardless of what we think she ought to do. No two children are exactly alike—and so, as a matter of fact, the food needs of all children cannot be alike. There is one thing, however. All children alike need exercise. Metabolism, that is, assimilation of food, must be speeded up by exercise—a great amount of exercise—outdoors, at that."

"I believe I'd invent every exercise program to keep her busy out of doors. See if you can't get her healthily tired. Tired muscles demand food. Why not let one day go by without offering her any food at all? She will come to you and

MANCHESTER TRADE BEATS MERIDEN MECHANICS 49-20

Viot Big Gun for Winners With Eight Hoops; Coach Schrober Uses Seconds Part of Time.

Manchester Trade school got back to winning ways yesterday at the expense of Meriden Trade school at the East Side Rec. The score was 49 to 20 and the game marked the second time the mechanics have trimmed their Silver City rivals this season.

Captain Ernie Viot was the outstanding performer for the winners with eight hoops from the floor. Roger Spencer was next with half as many. Godek starred for the losers. Coach Schrober used his whole second team in the second period, so obvious was the outcome.

MAGNOLIA SAYS HE COULD WHIP SCOTT

Miami, March 1.—(AP)—“I said absolutely nothing to Johnson about disqualifying Sharkey. I would not think of disqualifying a fighter for landing a thigh blow once.” Magnolia declared, in a talk with newspapermen today, that in his opinion Scott was prepared to claim a foul under any and all circumstances, even if “hit on the ankle.”

The referee who has considerable reputation as a physical pugilist himself, then asserted: “I will bet $500 I could take Phil Scott down in the nearest cellar now and make him quit. He can't get away with that stuff indefinitely.”

SCHMELING GIVEN EVEN CHANCE TO DEFEAT SHARKEY

German Heavyweight Rated On at Least Even Terms With American Ace.

BY ALLAN GOULD. Miami, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Bag, baggage and ballyhoo, the pugilistic hosts, Madison Square Garden, prepared to beat a strategic retreat today from the disastrous scenes where the second battle of the coconut palms fouled and flopped.

There have been more artistic failures than this Scott-Sharkey affair. Tex Rickard had his defeat in 1919 at Toledo, and the boom town of Shelby, Montana, was hard hit by the flop of the Dempsey-Gibbons bout there in the summer of 1923, but these at least had glamor of a championship struggle.

The balmy setting of this winter's fistic fiasco had few if any redeeming features to offset the financial shortcomings. As it was, the battle of the minute's rest added no lustre to heavyweight history.

Scott, all hands concede, has been effectually removed as a heavyweight title contender, thus the field is at least reduced by one in the wearisome and unsatisfactory series of elimination bouts since the retirement of Gene Tunney in the summer of 1928.

Sharkey, the main American hope through a three round victory over Scott under extraordinary circumstances, remains an uncertain figure as a fighter of apparent great possibilities; Thursday was the night for this Jekyl and Hyde of fistfouls to wage one of his “bad nights.”

The expert consensus as a result of the squawks over the Miami bat-tle may be heard for some time to come. The Miami boxing commission made it clear however, that while they will accord Scott or his manager any reasonable hearing, they have no thought of reversing or reconsidering the verdict of Lou Magnolia.

The final report from the box office was sad indeed. It showed gross receipts of $193,792 and a net gain of $161,716 after the deduction of federal taxes. There were only 18,762 paying customers of whom 11,897 sat in the 55 sections (until they moved elsewhere); 3,495 occupied 12,590 seats and 3,370 enjoyed the luxury of $25 locations.

The total cost of the promotion was figured at no less than $200,000 so that the loss probably will be between $40,000 and $50,000.

SCOTT SHOWN STARTING SWOON

Withering under a merciless bombardment of rights and lefts, Phil Scott of England—the “swinging Swan of Soho”—here is pictured with his arms flung wide over the top strand of the ring, pain and agony written on his face, as Referee Lou Magnolia stepped between him and his conqueror, Jack Sharkey, in the third round of their widely advertised jubilee bout at Miami, Fla. Declining Sharkey's screaming and hysterical challenge to continue the fight, Scott stood the loser by a technical knockout. This NEA Service picture was flown to Atlanta by Western Air Express, transmitted by telephoto to New York, and rushed by train to The Manchester Evening Herald.

SETS HIS HOUSE AFIRE BY DRIVING GOLF BALL

Cheyenne, Wyo., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Albert Cronland, banker, and city links champion, set his house afire with a golf ball yesterday. Mr. Cronland has developed his driving to a high point of accuracy this winter on his indoor course. Practicing yesterday on the course, Cronland placed a match in the bull's eye of the canvas ball stopper. He drove the ball hard from the tee. The sphere sailed true, struck and ignited the match and the canvas flared. The fire department came to discover that most of the damage was caused by smoke.

REC GIRLS LOSE 1ST AQUATIC MEET

The Rec Girls swimming teams, recently organized, lost its initial aquatic meet of the season last night to the Hartford Y. W. C. A. in the latter's tank. The Junior Rec team was defeated 14 to 9 while the Senior Rec team lost 29 1-2 to 11 1-2. Considering their lack of training and inexperience, Manchester's showing was highly satisfactory.

TILDEN AND COEN WIN AT MONTREAL

Montreal, Mar. 1.—(AP)—In a resumption of Franco-American tennis warfare, Bill Tilden and his youthful Kansas City protégé, Wilbur F. Coen, Jr., defeated the young French combination Christian Bousis and Rene Dubeslet in the semi-finals of the Butler Cup match by scores of 6-4, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-4 yesterday.

The Americans thus qualified to meet Henry Austin and Charles Kingsley, a strong British team of former college players, in the final round today. Austin, once captain of the Cambridge University forces and Kingsley led the Oxford team. Austin is England's outstanding player.

HEADS TWO SPORTS AT WILLIAMS COLLEGE

Williamstown, Mass., Mar. 1.—(AP) Benjamin Langmaid, of Swampscott, today was elected captain of the Williams College hockey team. A week ago he was chosen captain of the football team. Selection as leader of two varsity teams is considered a rare honor at Williams. He is vice president of the Junior class and a member of the Purple Key Society.

SEEK SUSPENSION FOR NICK CHRISTY

Waterbury, March 1.—(AP)—Frank Brickel, local deputy boxing commissioner announced yesterday that he would ask Commissioner Christy, Bristol, for failure to perform on the local card here Thursday night. Christy weighed in but did not appear for his bout with Frankie Albano later on in the evening.

NATIONAL SWIMMING MEET AT LONG BEACH

Long Beach, Calif., Mar. 1.—(AP)—The National Outdoor A. U. swimming championships will be staged in Alhambra Bay here July 3, 4, 5, and 6. The Southern California Amateur Athletic Association announced yesterday. The meet will include the men and women's championships, and the national water polo championships.

SELIGSON DEFEATS AMHERST OPPONENT

Ithaca, N. Y., Mar. 1.—(AP)—The favorites headed by Julius Seligson of Lehigh University, defending champion, came through their opening matches successfully in the fourth annual intercollegiate indoor tennis tournament for the Larned Cup sponsored by Cornell University yesterday.

Seligson defeated S. P. Hayes, Amherst 6-1, 7-5, John M. Richardson of Dartmouth, runnerup for the National Junior Indoor title, also advanced, beating G. H. Weltner, Cornell, 6-3, 6-0. T. D. MacDonald, also from Dartmouth who was beaten by Seligson in last year's final, trimmed Lawrence Dritz, Syracuse, 6-1, 6-2. Their victories carried all three into the third round as they drew first round byes.

FLORIDA TOURNAMENT ATTRACTS MANY STARS

Belleair, Fla., March 1.—(AP)—America's links caravan of professionals and amateurs paused here today on its transcontinental golfing itinerary for the 35th annual Florida West Coast championship and its reward of some $4,000 in cash prizes. More than 100 of the country's leading exponents of the game were entered. Two rounds of 18 holes each will be played today with another 36 holes tomorrow. Though he finished poorly in the West Coast Open last year, Horton Smith of Detroit, by virtue of his splendid showing in the last 15 months, ruled a favorite to top this year's top prize, Denny Shute, slim Columbus, O., pro, was a close second choice in the pre-tournament selections.

NEW BRITAIN GOLFER LOSES IN SEMI-FINALS

Ormond Beach, Fla., March 1.—(AP)—Miss Virginia Van Wie, of Chicago, and Mrs. Stewart Hanley, of Detroit, will meet today in the finals of the south Atlantic Women's Golf Tournament.

Miss Van defeated Miss Bennett of New Britain, Conn., 4 and 2 in their semi-final match today. Miss Van played two fives on the final two holes to set a new course record of 73 for women. The old record was 74. Mrs. Hanley, who provided a great upset yesterday in eliminating Miss Maureen Orcutt, metropolitan champion, easily vanquished Miss Ruth Repligic, Oklahoma City champion, 6 and 5.

Captain Dowd's Basket Decides Super-Thrilling Contest; Big Crowd In Continuous Uproar; Turkington Outstanding Performer; Spectators Stage Wild Demonstration as Battle Ends; Players Mobbed by Happy Throng.

Radiant visions of being nominated for the Yale basketball tournament with a possible state championship in the background, was the kaleidoscopic panorama that danced gleefully before the drowsy eyes of ten happy Manchester High school athletes today when they awoke from a well earned slumber to find their dreams on the verge of being realized.

If any of the boys had pinched themselves to be sure it was not all an idle fancy, this was due to the scare of their young lives which the fighting hosts of warriors from Middletown High school furnished over at the State Armory last night when they all but managed to take Manchester's measure for the second time this season as the squash whatever hopes remains of getting the call for the New Haven Joust.

Manchester won, to use the vernacular, by the skin of its teeth, nosing out one of the pluckiest quintets ever to grace a local basketball court. The final score was 19 to 17 but it did not come until after an overtime period of three minutes had been furiously fought to the accompaniment of a deafening uproar as some 700 spectators yelled themselves wild with delight.

Crowd Goes Wild The termination of the battle was easily one of the most exciting ever seen in Manchester and the huge steel rafters fairly trembled from the pandemonium which broke loose when Captain Ernie Dowd shattered the deadlock with a pretty shot from outside the foul line's deepest point. Timer Iver Dahlquist's whistle was the signal for one of the wildest demonstrations that has marked High school basketball history in years.

The crowd swarmed all over the floor and the more ardent supporters literally mobbed the exhausted and victorious Silk City athletes in effort to shower them with congratulations. This outburst was largely due to the announcement before hand that a triumph for Manchester would undoubtedly mean participation in the Yale tournament a couple of weeks hence. A Restless Wait While there is no alternative but to mark time restlessly until the official pairings are made next week it now seems comparatively certain that Manchester High will be one of the eight teams chosen although the eventual selection of the local school is not yet definitely assured. With only three defeats staining an otherwise immaculate record, however, Manchester boasts a record fully as impressive as that of most state schoolboy quintets. A defeat by Middletown last night, however, would have cast the red and white's chances alongside those of Briton's famous horizontal pugilistic champion, Phil Scott. The crowd sensed the importance of the game and became so over-enthusiastic over the progress of the bitterly fought contest that one would have thought life or death depended upon the outcome.

Middletown came to town boasting one victory over Manchester earlier in the season by a 24 to 22 margin after two overtime periods and last night Manchester was forced to play three additional minutes before they could square accounts. Although admittedly out of the running for both the Yale tournament and Central Connecticut Interscholastic League, Middletown put up a great battle, one that will live in the annals of local basketball. In view of the lack of either of these incentives, Middletown's great showing was particularly commendable. Manchester, although holding the upper hand most of the way after a faulty take-off, faltered at the finish and just about managed to stagger across the finish in an upright position. Tears streamed down the faces of two of the players from sheer ecstasy as the game ended and the crowd surged onto the floor to stage a vociferous celebration.

Locals Nervous Manchester seemed nervous, no doubt due to the importance of the stakes, and this was one reason why Middletown was almost successful in spoiling the Clarkites' chances of going to Yale. Time after time the locals would lose possession of the ball through poor passing. Another factor which proved a difficult obstacle to scale was Middletown's five man zone defense. The visitors shot into a six to two lead at the start of the game but this was reduced to six-five at the conclusion of the first quarter. Three spectacular shots by Turkington, Dowd and Nicola shot Manchester into a 11 to 6 lead as the second quarter got underway but the gap was almost closed at half-time due to baskets by Cubeta and Malone.

Captain Is Ousted Middletown had the mortgage to lose its leader, Captain Eddie Leonard on personals soon after the third period started and Tierney dropped in both tries to make the score 18 to 10. A few minutes later matters were reversed when Tierney also was given his unconditional release for the night. Shortly afterward Turkington scored from the floor and the third quarter ended with Manchester on top 15 to 10. Baskets by Mike Malone and Nick Cubeta, the latter dribbling almost the entire length of the floor for his twin-pointer, almost closed the gap. Then Turkington stamped himself as the hero of the hour with a pretty basket from a red hot scrimmage under the hoop to put his team ahead 17 to 14. This was short lived as Cubeta equalized. Charlie Umba went out on personals but Jimmy O'Leary missed both free tries.

With 28 seconds remaining to play and Manchester leading 17 to 16, Nicola fouled Del Vecchio on the pivot play and the latter sunk the free try to tie the score. Play was furious in the overtime and the large crowd stood up and the wildest of commotion prevailed. The terrific din could be heard for blocks away. Turkington fouled Malone but the Middletown forward missed the try and a few seconds later Dowd sank his spectacular shot that spelled victory, assured Manchester of a second place tie in the final C. C. I. L. standing, brightened the Yale hopes and drove several hundred unruly High school students mad with joy.

ODDS AND ENDS Coach Wilfred J. Clarke used excellent judgment in making substitutions last night. Moriarty, Nicola and O'Leary who went in as substitutes all did a nice piece of work. The officiating of Sumner A. Cole of Connecticut Aggies was particularly good last night. He kept the game well in hand, which was no easy task with the crowd in such a continuous uproar. We wondered why Referee Dole had to stop the game a few times and place the men in their proper positions during free throw attempts. Between the halves he explained that they were stepping on each other's toes. Speaking about Dole, it might be of interest to know that he will be at the WCAC microphone at Storrs tonight describing the annual clash between the Aggies and Rhode Island State at Hawley armory. While Captain Dowd's shot won the game, no one played any better brand of basketball than “Gob” Turkington, lanky Manchester center, whose long arms and fighting spirit were a constant menace to the hopes of the down-staters. He held his opponent scoreless to boot. Manchester High has but one more regular scholastic game to play and that is against Windham High at Willimantic next week Friday. This does not count in the records submitted for Yale consideration. Incidentally, Coach Tommy Callahan of Windham, scouted the game here last night. Faculty Manager Edson M. Bailey announced that 650 persons paid admission to see last night's hectic struggle. Meriden's two-point defeat, 24-22, at the hands of Bristol last night was its third of the season and thus leaves the Meriden quintet which twice bowed to the Clarkern, tied with the locals for second place in the final league standing.

Paradise for Birds Built On Henry Ford Incentive

A view of the bird paradise at Aussig-on-Elbe, a Czechoslovakian steel center, established by Dr. Heinrich Lumpe (inset).

Aussig-on-Elbe, Czechoslovakia.—(AP)—Reading about Henry Ford's love for birds supplied the incentive for Dr. Heinrich Lumpe, hardware dealer and ornithologist, to establish a bird's paradise in this "Pittsburgh of Czechoslovakia."

He told this in explaining how he happened to hit on the idea of "Lumpe's Nature and Bird Protection Park" where feathered songsters nest unhindered, find food in winter if they wish to stay, and in payment keep the region free from caterpillars and other insect enemies of plant and tree.

Dr. Lumpe, whose contributions to ornithology won him an honorary degree from Vienna university, observed that with the extension of industry and the progressive thinning of forests, many species of birds were disappearing from this country. So in 1908 he took some of the profits of his hardware business and bought 12 acres, including a beautiful ravine, on a slope of the Marienberg, just outside of Aussig and its smoking mill stacks.

This tract has been laid out to illustrate famous fairy tales. There is an Enchanted Castle in the grounds, a grotto fitting the German "Raubzahn" saga and other similar places. Dr. Lumpe believes that by connecting fairy tales with bird life he has made the feathered folk more attractive to children.

Perhaps, the great forest between Carlsbad and Marienbad converted into a bird reserve.

"That would be an object lesson to the whole world," he said. "Agriculture and forestry would surely benefit if people realized what it means for the birds to destroy insects."

"But the greatest advantage of such a park is that it teaches children kindness to animals. Moreover people who are kind to birds and beasts learn also to be kind to each other, something which this old world certainly needs."

ON U. S. TEAM

Buffalo, N. Y., March 1.—(AP)—Miss Peggy Wattles, four times Buffalo district champion, and present holder of the title, announced yesterday that she had accepted an invitation from Miss Glenna Collett, to play with the first women's international golf team to invade Great Britain. Miss Wattles will sail with Metropolitan players and others of the "group from New York, April 22. The trip will consume seven weeks, during which the United States golfers will participate in the Women's British championship.

Miss Wattles will leave for Pinehurst, North Carolina, in a few weeks to prepare her game for the overseas competition.

PITCHER MCGRAW SOLD

St. Louis, March 1.—(AP)—Pitcher Bob McGraw, who came to the St. Louis Cardinals after the season closed last year on the deal that sent Grover Cleveland Alexander to the Philadelphia Nationals, has been sold outright to the Rochester club of the International League. TRAINING CAMP NOTES

San Antonio, Texas, Mar. 1.—(AP)—Manager Donnie Bush of the Chicago White Sox has made another change in the old order—the Sox this season will have no field captain. Bill Kamm who served most of last season as field leader will have that much less to bother about.

Avalon, Catalina Island, Cal. Mar. 1.—(AP)—With his cast fully assembled Manager Joe McCarthy of the Chicago Cubs today settled down to the business of preparing for the drive after another National League championship.

Fort Meyers, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Manager Connie Mack has created a new job for Howard Ehnke, veteran righthander. He will have complete coaching charge of the rookie boxmen, eight of whom are now working out here.

Winter Haven, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—With the veteran Grover Cleveland Alexander as head master of the Phillies pitching staff is going to school at their spring training camp here. "Alec is the only man that's going to tell our pitchers how to pitch," Manager Shotton said. "If he can't tell them, then I don't know how they'll ever learn."

St. Antonio, Tex., Mar. 1.—(AP)—John McGraw, manager of the Giants already has swung the axe. Lou Winer, righthanded pitcher and Jack Gallagher, burly catcher have been unconditionally released.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Bob Shawkey, new manager of the Yankees is a firm believer in the efficacy of the sliding pit, and one has been constructed at the Yanks training camp here. All of the club's previous managers have been opposed to the pit.

Pensacola, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—Heinie Wagner, Red Sox manager has ordered his 22 or more pitchers to slow down for a few days. With the infielders and outfielders arriving Tuesday he says he doesn't want them to be baffled by too good pitching or the hurlers to get the idea they're world beaters.

St. Petersburg, Fla., Mar. 1.—(AP)—The only malcontent on the Braves roster is Jimmy Welch, tall centerfielder from California, and it is not because he prefers California climate to that of Florida. A substantial salary cut remains to be accepted or a compromise reached.

Now Mr. Coolidge hints that he won't need all of those 500 words for that history of the United States that is to be chiseled on a mountainside. Before he gets through they'll be able to put the whole business on a boulder.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

Poor Clowny dropped down on the ground and for a moment looked around. "What hit me, lads?" he shouted. "Someone played a trick on me! It seems there was a rubber band that I was holding in my hand. And then, all of a sudden, I was startled as could be."

Then Scouty ran up to his side. "Twas all my fault," he loudly cried. "I'm very sorry, Clowny, that the rubber knocked you down. The rubber snapped when I let loose. I put it to a sad, sad use. The way you took your tumble was exactly like a clown."

"Oh, that's all right," kind Clowny said. "You simply didn't use your head. But I'll forgive you this time." Then he jumped up to his feet. "Let's put the rubber on the plane so that our work won't be in vain. I'd like to see the plane fly. That would be a dandy treat."

The boy then said, "Sure!"

"That's all right, but we'd best hope, with all our might that everything turns out as we're expecting that it will. I want to see this plane sail high. If we have any luck at all, I'm sure we'll get a thrill."

The boy then took the rubber band and stretched it out, from hand to hand. One end was fastened round the big propeller very quick. The other end soon snapped in place. A smile spread on the boy's face. "I'll wind it up," said he. "And then I think 'twill work real slick."

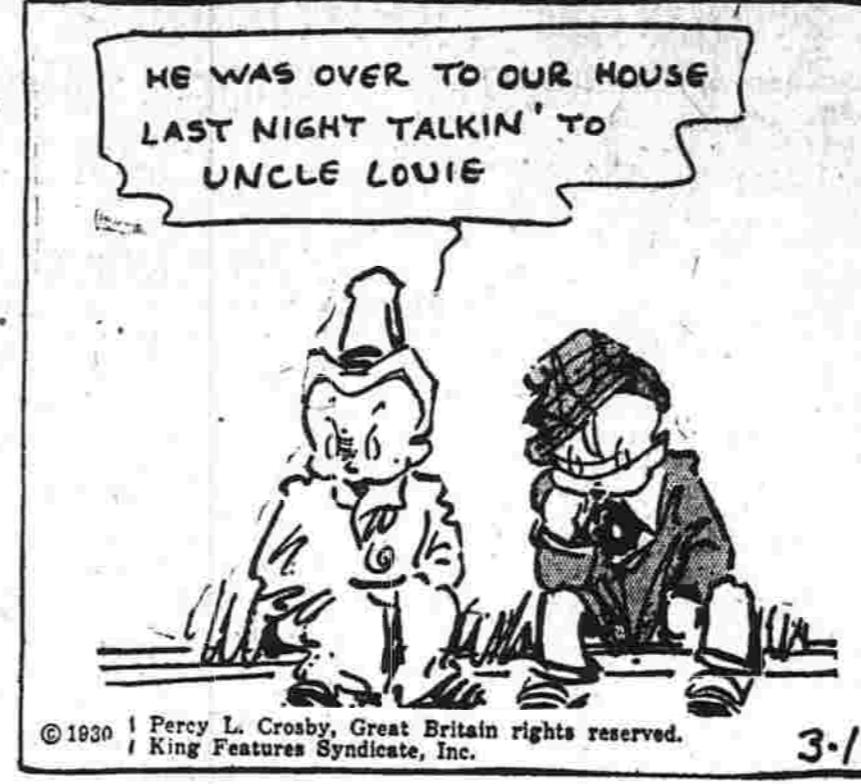

It wasn't long until the plane proved that their work was not in vain. The rubber band was wound up and the plane began to sway. The big propeller spun around and took the plane off of the ground. "Hey! Grab it," shouted Scouty. "Gee! Don't let it get away."

PLANNING MENTAL HEALTH CONFERENCE

Dr. James L. McCartney, of State Department of Health in Charge Here Thursday, March 6.

Dr. James L. McCartney, chief of the Division of Mental Hygiene of the State Department of Health will conduct a mental health conference in Manchester on Thursday, March 6. Miss Betsey Mitchell, psychiatric social worker for the state department has been in town conferring with the Memorial hospital officials in regard to the proposed clinic, which is one of a series held in the large centers by Dr. McCartney since the first of November, and which it is the purpose of the department to continue into the summer. The cases referred by physicians and nurses is expected to occupy Dr. McCartney and his assistant the greater part of the day at the building across the street from the Memorial hospital. About four o'clock it is planned to hold an open meeting at Watkins Brothers auditorium at which all people interested in the general subject of mental health are urged to be present.

In ten or more towns in which the state department has already held these clinics, much interest has been manifested in the project because of the need of more specialists to diagnose nervous troubles. At the clinic on Thursday persons of both sexes and all ages will be examined free. They will not be treated but will be referred back to the physician or organization with advice as to treatment needed. Connecticut was the first state to take up this study and care of mental cases. A Yale student who was successfully treated and completely cured from a mental illness aroused interest in the subject by writing of his experiences. Of late years this state has fallen behind some of the others through lack of adequate appropriations for this most important work. Those in a position to know claim there are two cases of mental illness for every single case of sickness treated in hospitals.

TOBACCO SHED WITH ALL CONTENTS BURNS

Robert Tedford of Fern Street Loses Building, Implements, Hay and Grain.

A tobacco shed, built to hold three acres of tobacco and owned by Robert Tedford of Fern street, was destroyed by fire last night. The large wagons, laths, spears, and many other farming implements and machines were also lost. Burned with the shed were stores of hay and buckwheat. The fire was discovered shortly before 3 o'clock and a still alarm called No. 8 Company. The fire had made such progress, however, that although the firemen worked from 8 o'clock until 10 they were unable to save anything. The shed burned to the ground with all its contents. There is some insurance on the shed but not enough to cover the loss, which Mr. Tedford said this morning, he could not yet determine.

"GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

GETTING A KICK OUT OF IT

Down in New London they have just pinned a medal on an employe of the Gas and Electric Co. who has worked seven days a week for 25 years with only ten days off altogether. That's what you call staying on the job—and we'll bet he gets a kick out of it, at that.

Pinehurst gets a great kick out of staying on the job, too—the job of supplying perfect food and perfect service, or as near perfect as is humanly possible.

Maybe it's great to be a President or a big general; but we KNOW it's great to run a food shop so that hundreds of people will tell their friends it's a wonderful place to trade. And that's good enough for Pinehurst.

"I will keep right on with my piano work"

DURING the recent stock market slump, one newspaper item especially caught our attention... A well-known young woman pianist had been left a large sum of money in good securities several years before. But the speculative fever seized her and when the crash came, unable to meet her broker's call for more margins, she was soon completely sold out.

Young and buoyant, she philosophically remarked, "Of course, I will keep on with my piano work."

All young people are not so buoyant nor do many of them have a highly profitable profession to fall back on.

The above incident illustrates the almost imperative necessity for parents to leave money to children, not in large outright payments, but in trust for them.

You can arrange a Trust Fund with us for the benefit of your children or any other members of your family. The principal will be protected by investment in excellent income-yielding securities. Likewise the income will be paid at regular intervals as you direct.

We are firmly bound by your instructions, whatever they may be. And your children are protected, no matter what the speculative temptations may be.

A trust arrangement can be incorporated in your will very easily, as our Trust Officer will gladly explain.
