CALL ALONZO STAGG AS A DRY WITNESS

Noted Football Coach Says Present Law Should Stand; Business Men En- dorse 18th Amendment.

Washington, March 13.—(AP)—Alonzo Stagg, who has won his way to prominence by coaching the big maroon eleven of Chicago University was recorded today before the House judiciary committee along with a group of prominent business men of Philadelphia as sharing the same view that the Eighteenth Amendment should stand.

The white haired athletic director whose voice has barked sharp commands to youthful athletes for 38 years said that it was his observation that the young men and women of today were fortunate in growing up in a land where the sale of intoxicants was prohibited.

After Stagg, Arthur H. Hood, of Philadelphia, an insurance man who said he represented the Philadelphia Federation of Men's Bible Classes, argued the prohibition law was the "supreme common sense of the majority." He presented letters endorsing the dry statutes from a number of business men in the Quaker City, including Samuel Robinson, president of the American Stores Company; Edward G. Budd, president of the Budd Automobile Body Works; and David Lupton, a steel manufacturer, G. Renwick Hogg, a carpet manufacturer.

Proceeding both Hood and Stagg, the committee had heard anti-prohibitionists described as "fanatics" by Carlton M. Sherwood, executive secretary of the Citizens Committee of One Thousand of New York City. Under questioning by Representative LaGuardia, Republican, New York, he mentioned Senator William E. Borah, Republican, Idaho; Senator Carter Glass, Democrat, Virginia; William G. Cullen, Democrat, as members of the board of directors of the organization, and Gifford Pinchot, now candidate for the governorship of Pennsylvania.

Dollar's Request

SEEKING SOLUTION

BALDWIN ATTACKS LABOR GOVERNMENT

Conservative Leader Admits, However, That It Will Win on a Vote.

London, March 13.—(AP)—Former Premier Baldwin, Conservative leader opened an attack on the Labor government today moving a vote of censure, but took most of the sting out of it by declaring that the government in all likelihood would win on the vote.

At the same time he asserted that eventually the cold fact of unemployment would mean the defeat of the MacDonald ministry.

Vote of Censure.

Mr. Baldwin moved his vote of censure on the government for its attitude toward safeguarding duties in relation to unemployment. He flatly asked whether the Labor government would be prepared at any time to have recourse either to a single duty or to a general duty as a remedy for unemployment.

Mr. Baldwin arose amid loud cheers to make his attack and said he had just learned that today was the silver wedding anniversary of Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer.

"I hope," said Mr. Baldwin, "that Mr. Snowden will find it convenient to go home to dinner tonight, and I wish him, for all sections of the House, many years of happiness."

After lengthy arguments urging the imposition of some safeguarding duties as a stimulus to depressed industry, the Conservative leader concluded by declaring that the government would win on the vote tonight, but that nevertheless the cold fact of unemployment eventually would "wash the government away."

Philip Snowden, chancellor of the exchequer who acted in behalf of Mr. Baldwin's criticism in reply to Mr. Baldwin's statement in the government came into office there has been an organized conspiracy. It has been the deliberate policy of certain interests to prevent employment in order to discredit the government.

He declared that British newspapers are spreading a feeling of pessimism, daily printing stories about the closing of factories and the laying off of men, attributing the whole increase of unemployment to the actions and policy of the Labor government.

The chancellor attributed the uncertainty existing today to the late Conservative government in leading industries to believe they could get protection and thus preventing them from reorganizing themselves.

HARVARD IN TIE WITH YALE, 2-2

Fourth Hockey Game Necessary for First Time In 30 Years of Competition.

Boston, March 13.—(AP)—A fighting Harvard hockey team held a great Yale sextet to a 2-2 tie after 90 minutes of play here last night in the third game of the annual series. Each team has a victory and this deadlock forced the series, which runs back to 1900, into a fourth game for the first time.

The fourth game will be played on March 19 and the rival athletic officials will decide tomorrow on the playing surface. Harvard wants the game played in Boston and Yale plans to move it to New York.

The Crimson team started the conflict in the underdog, but Joe Stubbs' puck chasers had power enough to cage the first score, during the first five minutes. Charley Cunningham, Crimson defense player, slashed the rubber into the Yale net when the Eli goalie delayed clearing a shot fired from a hectic scrimmage. Ding Palmer, speedy Yale winger, tied the score before the period ended by slashing Frank Luce's assist into the Harvard net.

There was no scoring during the second period, a furious 20 minutes filled with thrilling hockey. Both teams made many sensational drives, but the rival goalies refused to give way.

Harvard appeared to have the game won early in the third period after Bobby Giddens, Canadian born forward, scored Sam Batchelder's assist. With less than five minutes to play Dan Hickok forced the game into overtime by hooking the rubber from a wild scrimmage in front of the Harvard cage and slashing it past goalie Hardy Ellis.

Both teams ran through the 30 minutes of overtime without penalty though the play was fast and furious during every minute of the three ten minute overtime sessions. SEEKS TO DISSOLVE SIMONSEN INJUNCTION

Board of Health Restraint on Vernon Farm Declared in Violation of 14th Amendment.

Rasmus A. Simonsen, owner of land in the town of Vernon, just over the Manchester town line, in which the reservoir of the Manchester Water Company is located and against whom an injunction has been granted by the commissioner of the State Board of Health, has prepared and today returned to the Superior Court of Hartford County a writ asking for the dissolving of the injunction that compels Mrs. Simonsen from using his farm, forty-four acres in all.

As the writ is one that has a priority of action over other cases filed on file awaiting trial it is likely that it will be given a hearing early next week. In the writ calling for the hearing it is set up that the defendant is deprived of the use of the land, which is a garden truck and well as a general farm, and is costing him much money.

LATEST STOCKS.

New York, March 13.—(AP)—Expectations of a cut in the New York Federal Reserve rediscount rate provided the background for a brisk advance in prices in today's Stock Market. Flourries in selling intervals being the market during the morning of some of the recent trade news, but offerings were well absorbed, and operators for the advance succeeded in maintaining the upper hand.

Revised speculative activity and strength in the oil shares, a dozen of which moved into new high ground for the year, featured the day's proceedings. Buying of this group was stimulated by the sharp drop in crude production last week. The California court decision upholding the legality of the state's restriction scheme, and rising commodity prices. Houston was marked up nearly 5 points to a 2 1/2-4-8, Skelly, and Standard Oil of New Jersey, General Asphalt and Indian Refining sold 2 points or more above yesterday's prices. Standard Oil of New York, Sinclair, Standard Oil and International Oil & Gas were among the stocks to attain new 1930 peaks. Call money renewed unchanged at 4 percent but dropped to 2 1/2 percent following the income tax payments.

In the nine games of league play Columbia, lost only one contest, that to Yale on the Eli Court, 30 to 29.

It was a hectic contest for the full first period, Pennsylvania's hopes ran high and the Columbia players were so successfully blocked that it looked for a time as if the Red and Blue was going to halt temporarily Columbia's climb to the league honors.

ARREST TWO SUSPECTS

New Britain, March 13.—(AP)—Louis Allen Duntz, 22, of this city and William Mch. pfd, who met while they were serving terms in state prison at Wethersfield, are being detained by the police on suspicion that they might be connected with the theft of $100,000 jewelry from a house here last night.

Burglars entered the home of Thomas F. Little of 82 Brighton street, while the family was out in the evening, and stole the jewelry. They were seen to drive away in a car with lights out. Shortly afterwards, policemen arrested Nied-zelck hiding behind a tree near the looked home. He was armed with two loaded pistols and had a supply of bullets in the pocket. The police say they also found two masks and a black handkerchief. He denied knowledge of the robbery.

DEPLORES RELIGIOUS BAN

Boston, March 13.—(AP)—The Massachusetts Legislature would be placed on record as deploring religious persecution in Russia in a resolution filed today by Representative Roland D. Sawyer of Ware. "Be it resolved," declares the measure, "that the citizens of Massachusetts made a formal expression that it deeply deplores the present religious persecutions in Russia, whether they be official or otherwise, and that it is in entire sympathy with the citizens of America, who shall in every way consistent with diplomatic usage, make known their protests to the Russian government, that such a condition of affairs should exist."

IDENTIFY THE CHECK PRESENTED TO FALL

Washington, March 13.—(AP)—The check for $100,000 drawn by Edward L. Doherty and given to Albert B. Fall, was identified today by Graham Youngs, former treasurer of Blair and Company of New York, after he was called as a witness in the bribery trial of Doherty. Youngs, first witness for the government in its effort to prove that Doherty, wealthy oil man, gave Fall, former secretary of the interior, a bribe of $100,000 in return for the award of the Elk Hills oil lease, said he personally cashed the check and got $100,000 in currency.

FALSE REPORT

New York, March 13.—(AP)—Reports that several workmen had been injured in an explosion in a subway cut at Greenpoint and Manhattan avenues, Brooklyn, today sent several ambulances and police emergency trucks hurrying to the scene.

Police however could find no trace of the reported explosion in the vicinity where the Interborough Rapid Transit Company is constructing a new subway. They blamed the rumor on a practical joker.

WETS ARE FANATICS SHERWOOD ASSERTS

Secretary of New York Association Says Situation Has Changed Lately.

Washington, March 13.—(AP)—A statement that "the Wets have become the fanatics" was made today before the House judiciary committee by Carlton M. Sherwood, executive secretary of the Citizens Committee of One Thousand of New York City.

His testimony, presented in the committee's hearings on proposals for the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, was concentrated upon a denial of evidence given by the wets to the effect that American business men are habitual violators of the prohibition laws.

He said he hesitated to use the word "fanatic" as he would hesitate to use to the word "bigot" as both terms were employed for the most part "by folks who live in large and spacious" glass houses.

Wild Statements. "However," he added, "it is quite evident from the character of a large part of the wet testimony given in these hearings that many of the leading opponents of prohibition will go to any extreme of mis-statement in an endeavor to make their case. Slander and malicious lies have become a large part of their stock in trade. They are waging to tear down respect for all law because of their dislike for one law.

"One does not need to be a prophet to realize that the direct statements and decided inferences of those business men who testified for the wets has been harmful in this country. "It has been alleged here by Mr. Grayson, M. P. Murphy of New York, in particular that all the business men of his acquaintance violate the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution of the United States and his decided inference was that business men generally throughout the country obeyed this law.

Far From the Truth. "Of course that is not true. It is far from the truth. But what is the effect of such statements upon growing boys and girls or upon that section of the laboring population of the country which does not have the opportunity to know the truth and may be led to believe the worst?"

Denouncing the present investigation as "primarily a publicity hearing" Sherwood asserted that it business men generally thought the repeal or modification measure before the committee had any prospect of passage, "the capitol would not be large enough to hold the business here to defend prohibition to the last ditch." He added that although the business men know "the wets do not have a chance" they are "not willing to let even this publicity case go by default."

Submits Briefs. He then proceeded to present more than twenty-five brief statements, many of them flatly denying Murphy's charge, that had come to him by telegram from among others Robert Garrett, a Baltimore banker; Clarence H. Kelsey, of the Title Guaranty and Trust Company of New York; Captain Robert Dollar of the Dollar lines; J. C. Penney, founder of the Penney chain stores; Orrin R. Judd, president of the Irving Trust Company, New York; E. K. Linticum, president of the National Cast Iron Pipe Company, Birmingham; E. L. Smith, president of the National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers, Chicago; and Ralph H. Burnside, president of the Willapa Lumber Company, Portland, Ore.

Sherwood also brought statements supporting the prohibition laws from W. Donahay, former governor of Ohio, Bishop Francis J. McConnell, president of the Federal Council of Church of Christ in America and Professor Henry W. Farnam of Yale University, an economist.

In support of his contention that statements such as that of Murphy have a harmful influence upon the public and that the business men of the country are preponderantly in favor of the prohibition law, he said: "If certain types of mind are led to believe that bankers violate such portions of the Constitution as they choose, it is not a far step for others to set down the bars in violation of the Fifth Amendment, guaranteeing private property, and bomb the banker's bank."

"In such a time as this, when the complexity of our modern civilization is making it difficult to bring up growing children with respect for the law and Democratic institutions these mature citizens who sneer at the law and advocate its violation should pause to realize how far the poison of their influence may go.

Gives the Facts. "The facts are these, gentlemen of the committee, that the vast majority of the American people are law abiding. They observe the prohibition law and other laws. This includes the business executives at the top, the day laborers at the bottom and those in between. It is true that we have a difficult problem of lawlessness in our country, but it ought to be said with equal vigor that the problem is restricted to a comparatively small, even though dangerous, class."

Former Governor Donahay's telegram said: "Prohibition in my opinion has been successful and in Ohio is being as well enforced as any other criminal statute."

per cent. perfect is poor argument for its repeal." Professor Farnam said that "the social and economic evils of the liquor traffic" could be handled only by "the co-operation of the states and the nation as contemplated in the Eighteenth Amendment."

DRY LAW RATIFICATION ILLEGAL, LAWYERS SAY

agents of the people to vote away the people's rights or to give any additional power over them."

Dry Law Conflicts. The 18th Amendment conflicts with the American people and can confer no powers on the national government over the people or their individual rights until ratified by people themselves in constitutional conventions in their several states. "Consequently, the attempts of Congress and the courts to enforce the 18th Amendment without its prior adoption by the people of the United States attack the very foundation of all our constitutional rights and liberties as American citizens."

Distinguished Body. The special committee is made up of distinguished members of the bar. Daniel F. Cobalan, former Supreme Court Justice, is chairman. Justice Cobalan's aides included the law Leslie J. Tompkins, head of the school of New York University; Martin Conboy, former president of the Bar Association of the City of New York; Seldon Bacon, Charles Strauss, Julius Henry Cohen and Robert McCurdy Marsh, former Supreme Court Justice.

Justice Marsh's was the only vote recorded against Justice March did not file a minority report. He contented himself with taking exceptions to the findings of his associates.

To Seldon Bacon is attributed the distinction of having first advanced and evolved the theory that the Eighteenth Amendment was illegal, ratified in defiance of the Bill of Rights.

The report, as revised by Mr. Bacon bears his name as the author and at the outset declares that the United States Supreme Court in its five to four decision upholding the Eighteenth Amendment "failed to consider the history and effect of the Tenth Amendment, none of the counsel in that case having presented the propositions which we advance."

Tenth Amendment Cited. Under the subtitle "Our Propositions," the pamphlet submitted to the membership of the New York County Lawyers' yesterday, is found: "We advance the following propositions for the consideration of the bar, and, through the bar, of the bench and the community generally, believing them fundamental to our liberties."

"The Tenth Amendment to the Constitution was adopted to secure the people of the United States in their individual rights so that they would be forever beyond the reach of any expansion of the powers of the new national government, save such as might be granted by the people themselves.

"Without the promise that these sacred and inviolate rights would be so safeguarded by immediate amendment, the Constitution would never have been adopted.

"By the Tenth Amendment" all powers over the rights of the people, not already delegated to the national government, were reserved to the people themselves.

"Since the Tenth Amendment no additional powers over the rights of the people can be granted to the national government by any body of men save the people themselves, to whom those rights and powers were reserved, acting through constitutional conventions of the people in their several states.

"The Tenth Amendment, because it was an amendment, overruled every prior conflicting provision of the original Constitution.

"Back to the People." "It thus wiped out the power, conferred on Congress by the Fifth Article of the original Constitution, by which amendments might be adopted, giving added powers over the people and their reserved rights; and made it necessary, when any added new powers over the people and their individual rights were sought, to go back to the people themselves, as the sole possible source of such powers.

THE NEW ATTACK

The Tenth amendment to the United States Constitution, the last item in the Bill of Rights, reads as follows:

"The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people."

It is under this vital factor of the fundamental law of the nation that the special committee on the Eighteenth amendment of the New York County Bar proposes to attack the validity of the prohibitory amendment.

The Eighteenth amendment was never, of course, adopted by the people of the various states but by their legislatures. It is the position of the New York law group that legislative action on any proposal to expand the powers of the United States and to take away the authority of the respective states in any relationship is not, as required by the Bill of Rights, the action of the people.

This claim is not made out of a clear sky and without anything to back it save its own logic. There is cited in support of it the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has repeatedly held, in other instances, that neither a state nor the people of a state can exercise any control over the members of the Legislature of that state, even by state constitutional provisions, and that therefore the legislatures cannot represent the people in voting away original constitutional rights which, under the Tenth amendment, can be legally yielded only by the people themselves.

It would be as well for everybody interested in this matter—and that means practically everybody in America—to realize that the fact that the Supreme Court has already declared the Eighteenth amendment valid does not in the slightest degree affect the possibility of consideration of its validity in the light of a new approach to the question. This is a point on which there is liable to be much confusion in the popular mind. The court's decisions up to this time have been predicated on the circumstances and pleadings before it at the time, as such decisions always are, and not as they never are—upon any assumption of omniscience. It is conceivable that the court might consent to review the same question a dozen different times if it could be shown in each instance that in previous hearings some vital element of truth had been overlooked.

It would involve no abandonment of a position once taken, no reversal of itself, if the Supreme Court were to again consider the validity of the Eighteenth amendment in the entirely new aspect evolved by the New York lawyers, even if at the end the court were to rule the amendment out of the Constitution.

DIRT ROADS AGAIN

We don't believe the Bridgeport Post has given the question of the dirt roads the benefit of quite the best of its capable and usually fair editorial mind. The Post, foreseeing a raid on the next Legislature by back country towns demanding a fat chunk of the motor vehicle license money for improvement of their local roads, gets its bristles up. Bridgeport paves its own streets, the Post shouts, without asking the state to pay for them; how many of the country towns try to take care of their roads? Then it proposes that if automobile tax money is to go to the towns for roads, it be distributed pro-rata, the cities to get theirs, too, in proportion to population.

Bridgeport does pave its streets, and extremely well; and New Haven paves its streets, and Hartford and Waterbury and the other larger cities—and none of them have gone bankrupt doing it. But we would like to ask the Post where the towns of Sharon, Glastonbury, Woodstock or Salisbury, each of them territorially twice to three times as big as Bridgeport yet with a comparative handful of population, would get off if they spent the money necessary to make their roads merely passable—where, short of financial ruin?

How can you draw a parallel between compactly built cities with taxing power based on hundreds of thousands or millions of valuation per mile of street and country towns where essential roads may and do run through areas where there are maybe twenty persons to the square mile of territory and where there are not pennies of valuation compared to the city dollars?

This cannot possibly be a matter of pro-rating by population because it is a question not of people but of mileage; and of ability, not willingness, to be self sustaining.

The cities need fine paved streets—and they can pay for them, an assumption that is proven by the fact that they do. The back country towns need roads that are passable. And the fact that they haven't got them is proof that they can't pay for them.

ALL UNAFRAID

There is something hearty and forthright about Rev. William Bartlett of Chicago. He is not like the ordinary Anti-Saloon League orator. He is out to lick the Demon Rum and he proposes to face facts in a constructive way—or, at least an effective way.

Talking in Boston, Mr. Bartlett said the other day: "The prohibition question in Massachusetts will not be settled until men are ready to go to war to stamp this devilish and hideous thing out of existence."

Now that is a lot different from pretending that the thing is already settled and all that the dries have to do is to stand pat—which is the position of so many. Also it is a lot different from professing to believe that if it isn't already settled it can be by passing more and stiffer laws.

Rev. Mr. Bartlett believes there's only one way you can stop the liquor traffic—and that is by force and violence, by the shedding of blood and taking the risk of shedding your own. And he is for it.

He is willing to suffer the horrors of war—or thinks he is—in order to get rid of the horrors of alcoholism. Maybe it would be worth it. Still and all the horrors of war are pretty horrid. Particularly civil war. And another thing—would we all have to get into this fight on one side or the other, or could some of us be neutral, leaving the battling to the Anti-Saloon League, the Methodist Board of Prohibition and Public Morals and the W. C. T. U., on the one side and the bootleggers and racketeers on the other?

Would Mr. Bartlett have his militant dry army shoot up just the rum runners, the gangsters and the speakeasy crowd, or would there be an open season on all tipplers and wet voters as well?

But these things are more or less academic, perhaps. The big idea is that Mr. Bartlett scents blood and machine gunning and hand grenades and poison gas and trenches and hell a-popping, as the price of working the will of the prohibitionists—and is undismayed thereat. Wherefore he has more of our admiration than some of his associates.

EVERY-DAY CRIMINAL

One of the cleverest object lessons on the folly of passing indiscriminate criminal laws appeared recently in a leading magazine in the form of an article portraying a single day's activities of an ordinary citizen. The citizen in the case happened to be of Pennsylvania but he might about as well have belonged to any other state in the Union, any of the older ones at all events, for if he didn't break exactly the same laws he would break others to make up.

This Richard Clarke slapped his puppy dog with a slipper to start his day. Then he let the dog out on the street, unmuzzled and unattended. Next he went into the street and helped his small boy put up a kite. On his way to business he smoked a cigarette in a public square. He put on sale a lot of popguns and wooden cannons that hurled cork projectiles. He got a splinter in his finger and swore profanely. He dressed his show window with some goods with an "old price" and a new price displayed on the cards, boosting the "old price" a bit. He threw an empty cigarette package away without destroying the revenue stamp. He saw a cigar store man put a lottery ticket in an envelope and, instead of telling the police he mailed the envelope at the corner mail box to accommodate the cigar man. He had his clerk distribute some handbills from door to door. Back home, he carried his small son's velocipede down the steps to the sidewalk and helped him mount it. A friend dropped in and in the course of the talk Clarke said he didn't believe the story of Jonah and the Whale. Atter he had gone to bed it snowed and he didn't wake up till six hours after it had stopped and so hadn't removed the snow from his walk.

In each of these acts he had broken a law and the sum total of the fines that could have been imposed on him for his sins is, in Pennsylvania, $2,895.67 and altogether he could have been sentenced to five years in prison.

And still about the commonest thing we hear is, "There ought to be a law against it."

IN NEW YORK

New York, March 13.—Ringsiding with celebrities—

This time it's a gentleman with a monocle and the trimmest of Vanduyke beards. And if, from this meager description, you recognize S. Van Dine, the eminently popular spinner of detective tales concerning a certain Philo Vance, recall please that this gent is sometimes two other people—or at least one.

For instance, when you approach the decorative Van Dine mansion in the middle Seventies, you'll see two signs upon the door. One reads "S. S. Van Dine" and the other "Willard Huntington Wright."

For Van Dine was Wright before he became Van Dine, and automatically grew rich and nationally known. Wright was, perhaps, the most erudite of the essayists on art, music and literature. Among scholars his reputation leaped the borders of southern California, where he lived, and traveled across the land. But they did not bring in money. And his health had been none too good. He went to a quiet country place to leave back and rest. There, for amusement, and with hope of some economic success, he wrote his first detective yarn.

Now, for a few close-up slants: He has a hobby for canes. The old-fashioned stand in his hallway is cluttered with various styles of walking sticks. There are from a dozen to 20 of them.

This is no Baker street suite of a Sherlock Holmes. The atmosphere is that of a triumphant Wright. He is now an indulgent himself in a number of excellent modernistic paintings, which adorn the study.

There is, if you please, a suggestion of the dilettante Philo Vance in the long ivory cigarette holder, the suave manner and the collection of objets d'art. Some have hinted that he used himself to a considerable extent, in fashioning the detective.

He loves nothing better than to expound—on his paintings, music, the films that have revamped his tales, writing, almost any general subject. One gathers that he's ready to return to earth as Willard Huntington Wright and continue his cultural efforts where he left off. He can afford to now, although he pursues him for more and more mystery tales. He'll tell you that he fared better from some six months of murder tale telling than from 15 years of serious effort.

His next book, I can inform you, will be an exhaustive study of philology, rather than another sleuth yarn. He has notes in his library to the extent of some three hundred thousand words. He intends to make his sixth Philo Vance book his last, and it is not unlikely that he will be able permanently to retire after that.

He has his own special brand of cigarettes and is a caseless smoker. He has a most diverse library of 2000 volumes of detective and mystery stories and a considerable library of valuable art commentaries. GILBERT SWAN.

PLAN BIGGEST SHIP

London, March 13.—(AP)—The Cunard line officially announced today that it is in communication with certain shipbuilders regarding the building of a new steamer for its Atlantic express service.

It is understood the company has sent out preliminary inquiries and specifications for a new liner which, he is reported, will be the biggest ship afloat.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

Washington—The prolonged illness of William Howard Taft calls attention to one of the most remarkable comebacks in personal popularity of which American political history has any record.

Taft was given an opportunity that never was given to anyone else. After being defeated for reelection to the highest public office in the United States, he turned around and proved that he could fill the next highest post with distinction. It was shown in Taft that a man of unimpeachable integrity and the best of motives might fail as a politician and yet reach the top rank in a judicial career. In the general sorrow over the resignation of Taft, this fact has not been recalled. But everyone who remembers the Taft administration can appreciate it vividly, and it is interesting to recall that Taft never wanted to be a politician but always did want to be a judge.

Had the Judicial Mind. Fortunately for Taft, he actually had the judicial mind and the judicial ability, or he would be known to history only as the man who headed his party into what at the time seemed a permanently disastrous break-up and as the worst defeated president of them all. It turned out that he really had the "stut" to make his way in the American jurisprudence by his personal activities within the system.

He himself was the son of a judge, Alphonso Taft, who had become a politician to the extent that he headed the Hayes cabinet. It is said that the father regretted William Howard Taft's preference for law over politics, which expressed itself for many years in his contentment as was as solicitor general here in the early nineties that Taft did to know Roosevelt, then civil service commissioner, who was later to push him into politics in such a large measure as to make Taft's name become a justice of the supreme court.

Roosevelt brought him back from the Philippines and made him secretary of war, and then, in 1908, made him president. Taft had a good ship made no harsh demands on his executive or political abilities. In almost no time at all Taft became a president. His honesty and straightforwardness in backing the Payne-Aldrich tariff bill may well be compared with the canniness or timidity of President Hoover in failing to express any opinion on today's Hawley-Smoot bill, but it may well be that Hoover has been consciously profiting from Taft's fearful experience.

Taft, however, fumbled the ball repeatedly. He went into the northwest to praise the Payne-Aldrich bill when the northwest was raving wild against it and when one such speech aroused an obviously bad reaction he publicly undertook to excuse himself by explaining that he had "dashed the speech off hurriedly between the stations"—which, of course, made his plight a hundred times worse.

Again he gave his enemies ammunition which they used with deadly effect when he answered a reporter's question as to what would be the outcome of an important situation with the words "God knows!" He forgot, as he sometimes did, that infinitely more is expected from a president than from other men. Political blunders led to his fatal blow with Roosevelt as when he owed both Taft and Roosevelt an election, although Taft was quoted as telling Roosevelt that he thought he owed still more to his brother, Charles P. Taft.

Made a Poor Campaign. Once in office Taft was undoubtedly sincere as he denounced Roosevelt policies and Roosevelt appointees, but it turned out that he was playing extraordinarily poor politics. When he finally took the stump against the roaring, menacing Teddy Roosevelt, he was judged to have driven into a corner. He won a nomination only through the amazing steam roller tactics of his machine and wound up in November with the eight electoral votes of Utah and Vermont.

Even though it all Taft had preserved his essential humanness, honesty and—usually—his good nature. It was these qualities which gave him a place in the heart of the American people for the first time as he sat later on the bench. And although he was always a conservative, he came to be regarded as one of the best if not the best of chief justices in the last 50 or 60 years.

THE MILK DIET FOR STOMACH ULCERS

I find that the milk diet is one of the best that can be used to permit the inflamed raw surface of the ulcer to heal. Solid food is apt to prevent healing by scratching off the healing tissues as they form. The milk is also valuable to act as a sort of salve to prevent injury through the friction of the stomach churning upon itself, and it also serves the purpose of absorbing the digestive juices so that they cannot work upon the sore surfaces. It is a good plan to use an 8-ounce glass of milk every hour during the day and night while you are awake. The milk should be raw and sweet and slightly warmed by placing the glass in a pan of warm water but not hot enough to burn the hands, and taken exactly every hour. No water should be used in addition. If you take the milk at irregular periods it will not agree with you, and one suffering from stomach ulcers dares not be careless. Holstein milk should be used, but if this is not obtainable, it is better to remove about half of this heavy cream. The raw milk is better for this purpose than the pasteurized. The milk and cream diet which is given by many authorities often brings about serious conditions of acidosis, and I have had many patients treated by this method who afterwards developed liver and gall bladder troubles because of the excess of hydrocarbons, and for this reason I find that the plain milk is better than the cream mixture. In some cases it is advisable to add half a teaspoonful of milk of magnesia to one glass of milk. This is advisable in the beginning in cases where the stomach irritation is excessive. It is better to remain in bed for at least the first few days while taking this diet, and to use hot applications over the region of the stomach several times daily. A large therapeutic lamp is best for this purpose, but if you do not have one of these, use an electric heater, directing the force of the rays against the described area of the skin. This will promote a larger quantity of blood to the stomach and assist in its healing. Massage treatment should be used over the whole body, and some exercises may be taken in bed by tensing the muscles of the arms and abdomen—rather keep its muscles relaxed during this period. Remain in bed as much as possible, although it is all right to get up to go to the toilet. A quart of plain water should be taken for an enema once a day. This treatment should be continued until all of the soreness and tenderness has left the region of the stomach. When the stomach ulcers are complained by other trouble, it is usually advisable to take the milk diet to heal the ulcers first until the digestive system becomes stronger and able to assimilate other foods more readily. I am sure that anyone troubled with stomach ulcers will find this regime the best method for bringing about a permanent improvement.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Skin Tumors) Question:—L. H. J. asks: "What causes skin tumors, and what is the best way of getting rid of them?" Answer: Skin tumors are caused from some faulty growth of cells just under the skin. This is probably due to some systematic condition and certainly would not occur in a perfectly healthy person. About the only way that they can be quickly removed is through surgery, although they sometimes disappear by themselves without treatment.

DRY LAW SUCCESS
SAYS DR. WILSON

Methodist Board Secretary
Declares Prohibition Raised American Standards.

Washington, March 13.—(AP).—A proposal to repeal the Eighteenth amendment was termed today "nothing less than a proposal to repeal the American standard of living," by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals of the Methodist Episcopal church.

This assertion he made in a statement read before the House judiciary committee, in its hearings on repeal measures, by Deets Pickett, who is also associated with the board.

Wilson denied the charge that prohibition had failed, asserted that repeal proposals before the committee offered no solution for the liquor problem, opposed a referendum on the prohibition question and declared that government sale of intoxicants was "obnoxious to the moral sense of millions" of American citizens.

"The committee will have noticed the earnest effort to establish the assumption that prohibition has failed," he said. "The shortcomings in the enforcement of the prohibition law cannot in any sense be held to have indicated that it is a failure. The policy is not only right in principle, but the almost unanimous testimony of the pastors of our church, men who come into the most intimate contact with every class of society, is that the operation of the law has conferred upon the American people material and moral blessings.

"Poverty has been relieved, drunkards have been enabled to shake off the terrors of the drink habit, children formerly neglected have become well-clad into the nation's schools. We do not hesitate to express our opinion that the use of directly traceable to the use of intoxicating liquors less today than in any other country on the face of the earth.

"We must protest against the effort by suggestive repetition to induce this committee to accept as fact what is not only an assumption but an assumption contrary to truth."

He declared that there was no program upon which the opponents of prohibition were agreed and went on to speak of the measures before the committee, saying that some advocated the immediate repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment, others urged a national referendum and others a government sale.

Repeal proposals, he asserted, do not take into consideration "the fact that the nation would soon be burdened with a five-billion dollar liquid expenditure for productive and constructive enterprises.

Standards Higher
He added that the American standard of living had changed materially for the better under prohibition. State control of liquor he declared impracticable because "state lines are purely political" and "no scheme has ever been devised that will keep a legal liquor traffic within their boundaries."

Pinehurst Offers Safety
Bonuses To Its Drivers

Pinehurst's Two Fast Delivery Trucks

Clean Records Now
Demanded by Service Store.

Put-put-put-put-whiz! here he comes, there he goes; skipping about through traffic like a ray of light, getting to the place where he's going from the place he's coming from, in the ticks of the clock; and almost before anybody knows he's been away. That's the way the modern motorcycle delivery man from a modern food store scoots about, getting hurry-up orders to the customer before the jingle of the telephone has much more than quit.

Busy No—
About the only time Ed Dwyer, motorcycle delivery messenger for Pinehurst grocery, has been still long enough to look like anything but a shiny flash since Pinehurst installed this system recently, was when he was posing for the accompanying photograph—and then the photographer had to work fast at the well known one-armed paper hanger with the itch was never half as busy as an individual as Ed. He hasn't any regular route—just grabs off the emergency orders for things that Madam the Housewife didn't know she was out of until all ready to use them, and scoots away with them. North, south, east, west—his sidereal cycle is likely to be anywhere in Manchester at any minute of the day. In fact he flashes about here, there and everywhere, so ubiquitously that some folks have got the impression that Pinehurst has a whole fleet of these motorcycles in operation.

It hasn't there's only the one, though Walter A. Gorman, Pinehurst boss, says there are more motorcycles in the world and more good riders and that Pinehurst will have more of them as soon as needed.

The motorcycle is only the mosquito fleet of Pinehurst delivery system, of course. The capital ships, so to speak, are the two big, fast Dodge trucks that handle the bulk of the delivery, and which were also found, for once, in one spot and standing still enough to photograph.

Cash Prizes.
And about these trucks and the motorcycle there's a place of news. This week Pinehurst established a system of monthly prizes, the driver making the cleanest driving record for each period being the winner. That means, of course, that he not only must keep out of actual accidents—which is taken for granted because Pinehurst trucks haven't had an accident in town in five years, and the driver who got into one then isn't with Pinehurst any more—but they mustn't even scratch paint or get bawled out by a traffic cop or "take a chance," or be complained about. As each Pinehurst truck has to do 300 miles of actual travel each week, besides making a tremendous number of stops, that means that Drivers Harold Nelson and Albert Nackowski, as well as Motorcycle Ed, have got to watch their p's and q's.

It takes good driving to cover ground the way Pinehurst's fleet has to cover it and of course nobody is ever going to accuse one of those vehicles of being a road lizard, but Mr. Gorman has always insisted on careful driving, with particular attention to the vicinity of schools and in neighborhoods where there are children, and he says that if folks get the impression sometimes that Pinehurst trucks go pretty fast it is not because they are driven faster than other cars but because they are seen going fairly fast so much oftener, being all over town all day, as they are.

Eleven Years Old.
It's eleven years since Pinehurst started out as a "service" food shop—with one Ford delivery truck and two men in the store. Now there are ten persons in the organization, with this highly developed delivery service—and the expectation of more people and more delivery units in the early and natural course of events.

It takes some business to keep the trucks and the cycle on the jump—between 200 and 250 orders each week day, with from 300 to 350 on Saturday. The shipping man, Francis Coleman, probably knows the shortest way to more homes than any individual in Manchester.

And most of these orders come into Pinehurst by phone. There are no less than four trunk lines under the single call number 4151, handled in town—and when and as they become necessary (and the time seems not far distant) four more trunk lines can be brought in on the same turret.

Delivery.
It takes some bit of bragging over its early delivery—Mr. Gorman says his store was the first in town to stress a delivery as early as 8 o'clock in the morning; but even that is a relatively late one now, as that is a relatively late one now, as Pinehurst is featuring a delivery at 7:15.

FORD IMMersed 12 DAYS
RUNS UNDER OWN POWER

After 12 days' immersion in 15 feet of water under the ice of Fernan Lake, not far from Spokane, Washington, a Ford coupe, owned by the municipality was recently recovered and driven back to the city under its own power.

City officials were driving the car across the lake when it plunged through a thin layer of ice. They scrambled to safety, but before any attempt could be made to retrieve the Ford, it was necessary to wait until the ice hardened sufficiently to support the lifting apparatus.

After the car had been raised by a derrick the water was drained from the body, crankcase and fuel tank. It was towed two miles to a Ford dealer in Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, where a new battery and carburetor bowl were installed. Then supplied with fresh gasoline and oil the car was driven 35 miles to Spokane.

SLEEP IS ANALYSED

Hamilton, N. Y. March 13.—(AP).—The sleep habits of 509 distinguished American men were made public at Colgate University today and upset some popular notions.

The critical age when it is unsafe to lose sleep is thirty-five. Contrary to classical anecdotes men of important affairs sleep about the full eight hours. It is not a matter of age that sleeps the least. Then that old-fashioned way of getting to sleep by counting sheep jumping a wall is as out of date as Mary's lamb. Now that the fundamental method has changed but today only a sheep herder should pick on the dream sheep. For the rest of us there are more effective sleep potions.

Dr. Wilson went on to cite statistics issued by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, intended to show that liquor in Canada has had a harmful effect.

"We stand," he said in conclusion, "for the observance of the law by all patriotic citizens and the strict enforcement of the law upon the lawless and the thoughtless."

Government Sale
The resolution offered by Mr. Sabath (Rep.) of Illinois suggesting the establishment of a system of government-sale," he said, "is not only obnoxious to the moral sense of millions of American citizens, but runs counter to the general policy of the American government and proposes the establishment in the United States of a system which is rapidly producing serious evils in Canada. Are the people who were unwilling for the government to consent to the operation of a liquor trade by individuals to be forced to participate in it through their government?"

Such a proposal comes strangely from the lips of witnesses who would never for one moment consent to government ownership of telegraphs or municipal operation of public utilities. Is it thought that the American people will consent to the government placing in the hands of politician administrations the management of a traffic in

WEST HAVEN'S BIGGEST ASSET IS A VERY STRONG DEFENSE

Manchester's Opponent In Yale Tournament Tomorrow Has Won 11 of 14 Games; All But Two Decided by Very Close Scores; Opponents Average Only 17 Points, But Otherwise West Haven's Record Is Not Particularly Impressive; Locals Practice Against Zone Defense.

The season's record of West Haven High School's basketball team which opposes Manchester in the opening game of the Yale Tournament at the New Haven Arena tomorrow afternoon, reveals that 10 of its 14 games played here have been decided by margins of one, two or three points. In this respect the record of the West Haven team is somewhat similar to the record of this town and not particularly impressive.

Only three defeats in fourteen games is the record which West Haven will enter the state championship tournament. New Haven, Hillhouse, Fairfield and Branford were the three teams which turned back the down-staters. Two of the defeats were by the narrow margin of one point. It is apparent from the record that West Haven's biggest asset is its strong defense. Only three teams have succeeded in penetrating West Haven's zone defense for more than 20 points and 24 was the highest total reached by an opposing team and that by the Hillhouse quintet. The season's record shows that West Haven averaged 2 1/2 points per game against just a slight fraction over 17 for its opponents.

Not Impressive. The West Haven record isn't particularly impressive from an offensive point of view. Neither has the team defeated any schools that rate in a class with Bristol, Torrington, Naugatuck, Meriden or Bridgeport Central. Five games have ended with one point margins, three with two points difference, three with three, one with five, one with seven, one with 15 and one with 24.

Cognizant of the style of a game which West Haven plays, Coach Wilfred J. Clarke of the local team has been drilling his first string men on an attack which he hopes will pierce the stubborn West Haven barrier. The second team used the zone defense against the regulars Monday and last night in practice sessions at the State Armory. A squad of ten players, Coach Clarke and Faculty Manager E. M. Bailey, Manager Lincoln Murphy and W. Stowe, Herald sports editor, will make the trip. The team will be quartered at the Hotel Strand, only a couple of blocks away from the New Haven Arena.

MARY DREW HELPS BEAT AETNA, 25-18

Hartford, March 12.—(AP)—All the previous defeats of four seasons were atoned for by the Meriden Inslico girls last night at the Broad street gym. They played the Aetna Life team completely off its feet and put across a smashing, absolutely convincing triumph. The score was 25 to 18. It was the second time this season that the Silver City representatives conquered the proud insurance team, which had won every other game on its schedule.

Never before this season has an Aetna Life team bowed to an Inslico five, but the girls from Meriden last night went a long way toward squaring accounts and proved that the victory in Meriden a month ago was not the accident Aetna Life supporters had thought it to be. An overflow crowd of more than 1200 fans watched the Inslico come from behind and outplay the Hartford five in every department of the game. A sizeable delegation from Meriden, Bridgeport and Norwalk staged an impromptu celebration on the floor as the final whistle blew.

SPORTS WRITER TELLS ABOUT WEST HAVEN
W. E. L. Lush, member of the sports staff of the New Haven Register writes The Herald as follows: "The Cohen, tall center, is West Haven's outstanding player. He and Captain 'Hymie' Schwartz were picked on All-District schoolboy five. 'Schoolboy' Moran, who pairs with Schwartz at forward, has been out two weeks with a torn cartilage. West Haven's reserve material is poor. If Moran plays, West Haven may beat Manchester by close score but if he doesn't I doubt that West Haven can pull through."

The twenty game, home and home bowling match rolled in Waterbury and completed at Gamba's alleys last night ended in Roach of Waterbury defeating Berthold of Rockville by a total pin fall for the twenty games of 47. ODDITIES IN THE FIELD OF SPORT

Ten Overtime Period Struggle Sets World's Record In Peoria

Basketball games seldom go more than three overtime periods at the most but the cartoon above depicts players in a state of exhaustion after ten extra sessions. Inquiry by the Herald sports department brought the following additional information from the Peoria Star sports editor: "It took ten overtime periods to decide the winner of the Toluca-Wenona second team championship game in the Marshall county meet at Toluca, Wenona finally won by a 26-22 score on baskets by Kans and E. Kemp. The game began at 8 p. m. and it was nearly 10 before it was completed. "Score by quarters and overtimes of the phenomenal game: Toluca 2-4-11-15-15-17-17-17-17-19-21-22. Wenona 7-14-15-15-15-17-17-17-17-19-21-26.

SWEDISH QUINTET DEFEATED, 25-15

The New Britain Luther League basketball team tacked another decisive defeat on the Swedish Lutheran Church Luther League five at the Hollister street gym last night by a 25 to 15 score in one of the best, though roughest, games of the season. New Britain won the first game 27 to 13 a few weeks ago.

HERE'S THE DOPE

Manchester admirers of Joe McCluskey and the athletic future which confronts him, should not underestimate the ability of the Fordham Freshman star just because he failed to finish better than sixth in the Columbian mile, feature event of the K. of C. meet in Madison Square Garden last night.

It should be taken into consideration that the 18 years old Manchester lad is still in the infancy of his career. The mere fact that he is generally recognized as the best college freshman two miler in the country, doesn't mean that he should be able to step into a class with such famous stars as Ray Conger and Dr. Paul Martin and still continue to breast the tape first.

The gap between the freshmen college field and the select circle which includes those who have long since finished their college training is too wide to expect the youthful McCluskey to bridge at this early point in his career. It would not be at all surprising, however, if in another two or three years the Manchester boy will be able to step with the best of them.

DAILY LENTEN THOUGHT

BY WM. E. GILROY, D. D. Editor of The Congregationalist

There are two sorts of shrines and sanctuaries as we pass through life. The one represents a retreat from the world of ordinary daily experience—a passing from the scene of toil and conflict to some quiet or cloistered place where alone, or in fellowship with others, the emphasis is put upon prayer and devotion as a matter of reflection and of inner experience.

The other shrines and sanctuaries are found along the daily way, often in the very busiest places where it might be assumed that there would be no time for prayer or devotion. Here and there, in downtown portions of our largest cities, are churches almost hidden under the shadow of towering business and financial institutions that by their persistent presence remind the wayfarer that religion is still a reality even in the busiest thoroughfares and occupations of a restless and hurrying age.

Members of the cast included Ebba Olsen, Doris Waltz, Ruth Litz, Gladys Rhodes, Wallace Preble, Helen Litz, Joseph Hodgson, Wesley Osborne, Mildred Dunn, Grace Sutliff and Fred Plummer. The successful production was coached by Emil Kroymann.

Drast was arrested by Police Officer Kulo on Tuesday. R. V. N. Association Meets. The Rockville Visiting Nurse Association held its regular monthly meeting in the Visiting Nurse headquarters in the Prescott Block.

Priestley's Birth. On March 13, 1733, Joseph Priestley, discoverer of oxygen, was born in Yorkshire, England.

At 22 he determined he would become a minister, despite his orthodox views and a serious impediment in his speech. While living next door to a brewery in Leeds, where he held an early pastorate, the young preacher became interested in the production of carbonic acid and succeeded in forcing it into water.

Priestly made considerable of a reputation also as a philosopher and political writer. He opposed his government's attitude toward the American colonies and made a strong reply to Edmund Burke's "Reflections on the French Revolution." Although France made him a citizen on this account, a mob burned his chapel and house and destroyed all his books, manuscripts and scientific instruments.

Talk IS CHEAP

It really costs very little to talk by telephone with out-of-town friends or relatives. You will get the lowest rate if you tell the operator that you will talk with anyone who answers. This is known as a "station-to-station" call.

Rates are very low

Out-of-town telephone rates have been reduced several times in recent years—and the quality and speed of the service has been vastly improved, too. If you haven't kept posted on out-of-town rates, you'll be surprised to learn how inexpensive they really are.

Take these for example—

Here are some station-to-station rates that will interest you. They are in effect during the day, until 7 P. M. After that time rates of forty cents or over are reduced on this class of call.

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

"Course Clowny had a heap of fun. He'd bathe a while and then he'd run along the beach. The sand was soft and felt good on his feet. All of a sudden he sat down and in the sand he worked around until he'd drawn a figure of a horse that looked real neat. "Hey, look!" he shouted to the rest. "I'll bet you all can do your best as good as this horse I have drawn." The others eyed it for a spell and Scouty said, "Gee! That is swell." Then Clowny messed the sand up and the little horse was gone. Back to the water they all ran much to the pleasure of the man who'd let them take the bathing suits. He quite enjoyed their fun. Just watching them brought forth a smile. Thought he, I guess that after while I'll let them go boat riding, when with swimming they are done. The next thing that the old man

Don't Expose Your Property to Loss
If you were carrying $10,000 in cash in your machine, you'd want to have it insured.
But are you not driving your machine with anywhere from $1,000 to $25,000 of your property exposed?
If you injure a man, and he obtains a damage verdict against you, you've got to pay it.
If you haven't the cash, your property can be sold to get it.
Don't risk your house, your bank account, your business. Let a Travelers Automobile Policy stand between your worldly goods and the result of that possible accident.
