

"DRY BROOK" QUESTION UP TO THE VOTERS

Selectmen Decide Special Town Meeting Should Act On Sanitary Sewer District Purchase Proposal.

The question of the purchase of the rights of way through the so called "dry brook" from the South Manchester Sanitary and Sewer District and the reimbursement of the district for money expended for storm water sewer construction will be placed before a special town meeting to be held in June, the Board of Selectmen decided last night. The date of the special town meeting will be set after several other minor matters that may be placed before the meeting are settled.

In Conference
Last night the Selectmen held a conference with Frank Cheney, Jr., president of the district and Howell Cheney, head of the Industrial Relations division of Cheney Brothers. Several questions with regard to the sewer district's proposals were ironed out, but most important of all was the decision of the selectmen to place the entire matter before the voters in meeting and let them decide.

Practically the only point in the discussion about which the Selectmen and the district representatives have not reached an agreement is the paying of any money for the construction of a storm water sewer between Spruce street and the "dry brook." Cheney Brothers say that if this storm water sewer were closed the town would be forced to great expense to replace it. They have no intention of closing this culvert but they simply cite that point to prove what the Sanitary and Sewer district has done for the south end. On the other hand, the Selectmen maintain that the construction of a storm water sewer has become dedicated to public use in that time. They also fear a precedent would be established if the work were paid for at the present time.

Want Statement
After a long discussion the Selectmen voted to place the matter before the town meeting after, however, they have secured from Cheney Brothers a statement outlining their obligations that must go with the rights of way and including assurance that Cheney Brothers would not seek money for any other storm sewer construction the firm built. In answer to this latter request Cheney Brothers state that they are not seeking any reimbursements for expenditures that were

ROY INAUGURATED HAITI'S PRESIDENT

Selected by Hoover Commission and Political Groups As Temporary Chief.

Port Au Prince, Haiti, May 15.—Eugene Roy, selected for temporary president of Haiti during the recent Hoover commission survey here, was inaugurated shortly before nine o'clock this morning without incident.

Mr. Roy, who is 69 years old and is an independent in politics succeeds President Louis Borno who finished an eight year term today.

President Roy was selected by the Hoover commission after receiving almost unanimous support from the various political groups in Haiti. He was formally elected by the Council of State on April 21.

Under the Haitian system, the Council of State which served under President Borno will be dissolved and President Roy will select a council to assist him.

Plans Popular Election
In accordance with the plan drawn by the Hoover commission, the new president will develop plans for a popular election either late this summer or in the autumn for a regular president.

President Roy is a banker and was former president of the government clearing house. He was picked by leaders of the opposition and by President Borno, with the approval of the American commission as a neutral temporary president.

It is expected that the regular political campaign will open after the temporary president's announcement of the date of regular elections. At this time 36 Deputies and 15 Senators will be elected. Both Houses will hold a joint session and then elect a regular president in accordance with the Haitian Constitution.

It also is expected that various changes will be made in the Constitution in order to give the people greater share in the government itself. However, because of illiteracy, election of the president will remain as now provided instead of by universal voting methods.

Leads Revolt in India

Postess, orator, Oxford graduate and first woman president of the Indian National Congress, Sarojini Naidu, above, now has succeeded to the leadership of India's "civil disobedience" campaign against British rule. This unusual portrait study of her was made during her visit to the United States last year. She has long been a co-worker of Mahatma Gandhi and Abbas Tyabji, Indian leaders who have been arrested.

POLICE FRUSTRATE MRS. NAIDU'S RAID

Officers Surround New Indian Leader and Friends As They Take Salt.

Dharasana, India, May 15.—(AP)—Police this forenoon nipped in the bud Mrs. Sarojini Naidu's projected civil disobedience leadership by surrounding her and a large party of volunteers as they started to raid the salt depot here.

The police action indicated the government's determination to practice firm methods against the salt raid.

Mrs. Naidu had assembled her followers early in the morning, volunteers flocking to the scene just outside this town.

Several hundred police had been concentrated for the purpose of preventing the salt raid. The depot at Dharasana is privately owned but government operated, according to the authorities. The government in-

AMERICAN GIRLS AT PRESENTATION

Eight Curtsy Before King and Queen of England; Nine More Tonight.

London, May 15.—(AP)—Eight American girls curtsied to King George and saw the kindly flash of Queen Mary's smile in the first Court of the Buckingham Palace season last night. Nine more American women, seven of them matrons will receive the same honor tonight. King George received his guests, who numbered more than 800 and came from every country in the world, for the first time in two years, the Prince of Wales having acted with Queen Mary last year at the time of the King's recuperation from his long illness.

Imposing Figure
King George made a flashing figure in the full red uniform of colonel in chief of the Grenadier Guards as he stood in front of one of the gold thrones. Queen Mary impressive in a gown of blue silver brocade with the famous Kohinoor diamond on her breast, stood beside him.

Prince of Wales Present
The Prince of Wales attended, with Princess Mary, who wore a gown of pale blue trimmed in diamonds, with a silver tissue train and a diamond sapphire tirc completing the ensemble. The Prince wore the uniform of the Welsh Guards.

The long queue of limousines stood for hours in the Mall before the court, moving up to discharge their occupants as a loud speaker called their names for presentation. Since most of the guests were of the diplomatic corps, brilliant uniforms were the order of the evening.

YALE STUDENTS ARE SUSPENDED FOLLOWING RIOT

Fourteen Come Under Dean's Ban; Sixteen Others Lose Privileges as Result of Disturbances Last Week.

New Haven, May 14.—(AP)—Fourteen students in Yale College today found themselves suspended from recitations for the remainder of the college year by order of Dean Clarence W. Mendell of the college, as an outcome of the student disturbance of last Thursday night.

The disciplinary notice also deprived sixteen students of the privilege of the right to live in a cottage dormitory next year, "because of the disorder in their rooms" that same night.

Dean's Statement
Action by Dean Mendell was forecast as his inquiry into the disturbance progressed but the number of students who were to be disciplined were not known until a formal statement was issued today. In part this said:

"Much of the disorder in these rooms was due to intruders from other rooms with the result that some apparent injustice is being done. At the same time occupants of rooms are responsible for the order of the rooms and falling knowledge of the actual disturbers of the peace who protected themselves by using other men's rooms. The consequences fall in some cases upon those less responsible."

In the case of suspensions the dean said:

"In the case of these men as with the others, responsibility lies largely upon the shoulders of other men, themselves more guilty."

The students who were suspended were: L. H. Boles, New York City; W. E. Culbertson, Lansdowne, Pa.; N. L. Deutsch, Brooklyn, N. Y.; H. C. Reiner, Clayton, Mo.; B. Kaufman, East Orange, N. J.; W. C. Thorne, Rye, N. Y.; R. A. McLaughlin, Boston; T. Todd, Seattle, Wash.; W. I. Wait, Kinderhook, N. Y.; T. J. Welsh, Steubenville; G. Wolfe, Baltimore; R. C. Webery, Akron, Ohio.

The disturbance a week ago began much like those in other years, the ringing of a false alarm of fire followed by other alarms, a student demonstration with the fire apparatus in the center and hurly-burly which led to sending police to the college section. In the bodily conflict which finally came about a number of students were clubbed and the police were bombarded from dormitory windows with various articles.

Ten students were in court next day and seven were fined for disturbance of the peace.

Dean Mendell in a statement, praised the action of the police and he began an inquiry into the participation of students in the trouble. The freshman class members who faced previous disturbances were warned of a drastic action. The list of students given out by Dean Mendell today shows that all but two suspended students were seniors and the others sophomores.

Of those deprived of dormitory rooms next year, eight are sophomores and eight juniors. The freshmen had headed the warning and

COAST GUARD NABS $600,000 IN BOOZE

Tramp Steamer Captured in Lake Michigan With 6,000 Cases on Board.

Green Bay, Wis., May 15.—(AP)—The tramp steamer Amsterberg with five thousand cases of Canadian liquor aboard valued at $600,000 was captured late yesterday by a crew of the Plum Island Coast Guard station as it attempted to run into Green Bay from Lake Michigan.

The crew of five men, armed with rifles, offered no resistance when the Coast Guardsmen boarded the ship. Captain M. A. Jackson, of the Plum Island station, sighted the ship, which had been painted black, late yesterday afternoon. It was running at top speed.

SAVE EIGHT AVIATORS IN SHARK FILLED SEA

Two Believed to Be Afloat On Plane and Two Others Thought Lost Off Island at Hawaii; Big Plane Lost.

Honolulu, May 15.—(AP)—Eight of the 12 Army and Navy fliers who were cast upon the rough, shark-infested waters between the islands of Maui and Hawaii were rescued late last night by the inter-island steamer Hawaii. Two others were believed to be afloat in an amphibian plane. The fate of the remaining two was unknown.

The twelve fliers were caught in the grip of the rough channel yesterday in the emergency landing of a big Army bombing plane and in the subsequent rescue attempts by fellow aviators who were unable to take off after they had landed at the scene.

Eight Rescued.
The eight rescued fliers were taken on from a Navy seaplane and an Army amphibian, both of which had gone to the rescue of the bomber. The big bomber was believed to have been lost. The Hawaii is proceeding in search of another amphibian which was believed to be carrying two men, believed to be afloat in the channel.

Piloted by Lieutenant T. L. Boyd, of Washington, D. C., and carrying Staff Sergeant H. Alexander of Kentucky, Ala.; Staff Sergeant Joe Becker of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Private H. L. Cowan, of Syracuse, N. Y., the bomber was forced down in the channel while flying from Luke Field to Hilo.

Three Jump.
Three of the four men jumped with parachutes, the fourth remaining at the controls. A Navy seaplane with a crew of four, piloted by Lieut. M. A. Shur, had been conveying the Army planes.

Shur landed in an attempt to rescue the bomber's crew and took two of them aboard, but was unable to land from the water again. Two Army amphibians, each bearing two men, landed later and also were unable to take off.

Those rescued were the four of the seaplane's crew, two men from one of the amphibians and two of the bomber's crew. The latter two had been picked up by the seaplane. In taking the six men from the seaplane the Hawaii broke one of the craft's wings. Navy officers ordered

WOMEN PRAISE SUPT. PECK FOR MERIDEN PROBE

In Statement Say He Did Not Merit Discharge for Calling Attention to Conditions at the State School.

New Haven, May 15.—(AP)—Praise of the investigation precipitated by James Peck, discharged farm superintendent into charges of brutality at the Connecticut School for Boys at Meriden is contained in a statement drafted for presentation to the executive board of the Connecticut Child Welfare association.

The statement prepared by Mrs. Percy T. Walden of New Haven, president of the association, Miss Mary Bulkeley of Hartford, president of the State League of Women Voters, and Mrs. Edith Valet Cook of New Haven, state chairman of Child Welfare for the League, says:

"The Connecticut League of Women Voters and the Connecticut Child Welfare have been watching with the greatest interest developments in the reorganization of the Connecticut School for Boys, following the recent investigations there and we have noted with concern certain actions recently taken by the board of trustees.

"The only employe of the institution thus far actually discharged has been James Peck on the ground, we understand, of being a 'trouble maker.' We know that we are voting the sentiment of a large group of Connecticut citizens in saying that, far from meriting discharge, Mr. Peck is deserving of sincere commendation for his disinterested—indeed self sacrificing—service in calling attention to the shocking conditions that obtained there.

In contrast, no other dismissals have, so far as we know, been made although the commission's report clearly indicated that a number of staff members deserved to resign voluntarily, leaving them in good standing to take similar positions in another state, would seem to us little short of a crime against boyhood.

"We also feel that a great injustice has been done to Mr. Julius Hadley, secretary of the State Board of Welfare, in the statement of the board of trustees condemning him in part in bringing about the inquiry. Mr. Hadley, if directly responsible for the publicity given the affairs of the school, deserved from the board, the State Board of Welfare and the public the hearty thanks and commendation for his courage in bringing to their attention a situation of such intense concern to us all."

The statement was presented to the executive board of the Connecticut League of Women Voters at Hartford yesterday, and will be offered to the board of the Child Welfare Association at its meeting here next week.

VARIOUS FAITHS HOLD CONFERENCE

Jews, Catholics and Protestants Attempt to Clear Up Misunderstandings.

St. Louis, May 15.—(AP)—Impassioned pleas from laity and clergy alike to end conflict in religion today were before a National seminar here of Jewish, Catholic and Protestant groups.

Leaders in all three faiths told general conferences and round-table meetings that they do not seek to mould all religious beliefs in one, but that there is hope of eliminating misunderstanding, responsible for religious prejudices.

A layman, Governor Henry S. Caulfield of Missouri, led a discussion last night, with the statement that "out of ignorance grows suspicion and sometimes even hatred; it is vital that we understand each other."

Urges Honest Analysis.
Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr of the Union Theological Seminary, of New York, told the conference there is great need of comity between faiths in America. All, he said, have a com-

ADMIRALS DISAGREE OVER NAVAL PACT BEFORE THE SENATE

Hilary P. Jones Says a Different Settlement Would Have Been Possible; Was Naval Adviser at London; Pratt Says America Got the Best It Could—Borah Agrees With Jones on Need of More Eight-Inch Cruisers.

Washington, May 15.—(AP)—Two grey-haired admirals of the American Navy, each with upwards of a half century of distinguished service behind him, disagreed pointedly today over the merits of the naval treaty of London.

Sounding the first note of protest from any official quarter, Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, long an outstanding figure among navy men, told the Senate foreign relations committee that he not only disagreed with many of the decisions of the London conference but thought a different settlement would have been entirely possible.

At the same time Admiral William V. Pratt, commander of the battle fleet, was advising the Senate naval committee that the treaty suited him, that he was satisfied with the outstanding figure among navy men, told the Senate foreign relations committee that he not only disagreed with many of the decisions of the London conference but thought a different settlement would have been entirely possible.

Both Naval Advisers
Both senior advisers were naval advisers at London, but Jones left before the conference ended because of illness and he came to the committee table today leaning heavily on a cane. His disability did not diminish the vigor of his replies to questioning Senators.

"I disagree fundamentally with Admiral Pratt," he said. "I cannot understand Admiral Pratt's position. Great Britain, Jones said, always had strength in the eight-inch cruisers most desired by the Navy, and at London had brought about such a reduction.

The Japanese cruiser strength as against the United States under the treaty he placed at "5-5 plus."

When the witness concluded, Chairman Borah said that while he was not ready to indicate whether he would support ratification of the treaty, he agreed with Jones in respect to the need for more eight-inch cruisers.

TYPES OF CRUISERS.
Washington, May 15.—(AP)—The old feud over the type of cruiser best suited to American needs was revived in a running exchange of questions and answers today as two Senate committees continued hearings on the London naval treaty.

The smaller ship, with six-inch guns, found a champion in Admiral William V. Pratt, commander of the battle fleet, who told the naval committee he was well satisfied with the treaty provision giving the Navy little as well as big cruisers.

Secretary Adams of the Navy before the foreign relations committee also defended the treaty although he had disclosed that the American Delegation at London really favored a larger allotment of the big 10,000 ton, eight-inch cruisers than it got in the final agreement.

Others Summoned.
Various other navy officers were summoned by the two committees, and the points under examination included virtually all controverted sections of the treaty. In each committee a small group of members continued to shower questions with questions, indicating many doubts as to the fairness of the pact to American naval interests.

In large measure the testimony of both Adams and Pratt was a repetition of that given by them yesterday, when the secretary was before foreign relations and the advisor before the naval committee. Today they had just crossed the street and exchanged witness chairs.

The foreign relations committee hearings are held in a large hearing room in the Senate office building while the naval committee meets a block away in the Capitol itself.

Adams read a prepared statement saying he believed the treaty "advantageous to the American Navy" because it offered the hope of parity with Great Britain. Pratt, on the other hand, said he had no statement, but he was ready to answer questions.

"To some degree it was true that we gave up building some of the ships we desired," said Adams. "Of

LATEST STOCKS

New York, May 15.—(AP)—Stock prices sank slowly in unusual calm seas today, as professional operators failed to provide renewed buoyancy, and the public remained apathetic. A few issues in which only a thin market is probed broke sharply, but leading shares generally lost little more than 2 points.

Neither long or short positions in the market have worked out very profitably of late, and traders were disposed to await development of a starting point for a new move. With moderate signs of improvement in freight traffic, retail trade, and bank clearings, bears have been cautious, but bulls have tried to attract any notable following in bidding up stocks.

A conspicuous item in the days news was the reduction of the American Locomotive annual dividend rate from $3 to $2, but this had been generally expected that it was without reflection in the market. Standard Oil of New Jersey's annual report, showing $4.75 a share against $4.45 in 1929, was said to have made an ever more at-mildly optimistic view of W. C. Teague, president, failed to stir up renewed enthusiasm for the oils. Some of the eastern utilities were firm, in response to further rumors of new alignments.

Admiral Pratt underwent a similar cross-examination by Chairman Hale before the naval committee. Asked to go into details of the American delegation's policy toward abolition of undersea craft, Pratt said he would prefer to discuss the question in private. Hale asked if the submarine was not vital to defense of the Panama Canal and Hawaii, but Pratt said he felt aerial forces had "changed the situation materially" since 1922, when he opposed abandonment of submarines as a naval weapon.

Washington, May 15.—(AP)—The controversy between Massachusetts and Connecticut over diversion of water from the Connecticut River for use in Massachusetts now pending settlement in the Supreme Court, was laid before the Senate commerce committee today by the two states senators and other representatives. Senator Walcott, Republican, Connecticut, complained against a provision in the House rivers and harbors bill, now under consideration before the committee authorizing $1,000,000 expenditures for navigation development on the Connecticut River, above Hartford. Insisting that the "entire question of navigation" must be left untouched until "the diversion question is settled" Walcott offers an amendment expressly prohibiting any diversion by Massachusetts.

STEADY DOWNPOUR BRINGS RELIEF HERE

Badly Needed Rain Last Night and Today Ends Drought of a Month.

Rain started falling during the night and the storm was still in progress at noon today much to the approval of farmers and practically everyone for that matter, with the possible exception of the merchants who feel that it is always their misfortune to have a storm on a Thursday or Saturday night.

The rain was badly needed in Manchester by the crop-growers inasmuch as there has been no major rainfall since April 18, the little that did come from the brief thunder storms during the early part of the month being quickly absorbed by the arid ground. The rain will also help to swell the brooks and lakes which have already begun to show a lower water level.

Roads Dried Up
The recent heat wave had served to dry up the roads to a mid-July condition, causing passing vehicles to be hidden from view by clouds of dust like an army tank in a smoke screen. This was especially so on the road connecting the south end trolley terminus and the New London Turnpike.

Further proof of this condition is seen from the fact that the Board of Selectmen in session last night, for the first time in its history had a complaint over too much dust on the highways. Several registered complaints, some wanting the town to oil the highways, others being satisfied with a daily watering. They were informed the town did not possess a watering tank. Usually the board gets complaints over tax assessments, holes in the road or some other similar condition but last night's complaints were of a most unique nature.

Helps Fends
While the present storm is most needed and is proving very beneficial to garden crops and flowers, it would be more beneficial to the ponds and lakes if the rainfall were heavier. Although the rain fell steadily throughout the morning hours, it was more of a drizzle than a hard rain. However, this sort of a storm is much better for the crops. The rain brought the mercury down to a much more comfortable level.

The month of April was 1.43 inches short in the normal rainfall for that month, and the total deficit so far this year is 4.57 inches. It was this shortage that prompted the water company to warn users of water not to be wasteful with the water as conditions might become more or less serious if the drought continued.

ity was slowly increasing throughout the entire day, moving from 60 in the morning to 61 at noon and reading 66 at 8 o'clock last night. The wind direction was northeast in the morning, and last night the direction was easterly. The velocity had increased from 4 to 12 miles per hour.

PREPARE FOR TROUBLE

Bombay, May 15.—(AP)—The British government took extreme precautions today to prevent the projected raid of Indian Nationalists under the woman, Mrs. Sarojini Naidu on the salt depots at Dharasana.

Orders were issued prohibiting assembly of more than four persons in the vicinity of the salt depots which though privately owned, are state operated. The entire police force of Jalapur was said to have been removed to the threatened point. One year simple imprisonment was imposed on Mrs. Lakshmi Bai, a widely known social worker of Madras, the first woman to be taken into custody by the government since the civil disobedience campaign began. Her offense was leading a demonstration against the salt laws at Vedranayam.

BICYCLE RULES.

Boston, May 15.—(AP)—Bicycle riding is not an obsolete method of travel in Massachusetts. Among the rules are: Use the ball of the feet to pedal with; grip both handlebars and ride on the right side of the highway. Never carry another person on the handlebars.

CRAZED MOTHER KILLS HER THREE CHILDREN

Canso, N. S., May 15.—(AP)—Three of the seven children of George Munroe, a fisherman, were dead today at Dover after their mother had attacked them with an axe during a spell of insanity.

The woman was found in tears by neighbors summoned by the eldest son, Andy, 12, who had tried in vain to save the life of one of the children when he returned home. The husband was attending his lobster traps.

The dead children are Albert, 5; Gerald, 3, and Theresa Elizabeth, an infant born Easter Sunday. Two boys and a girl had left home before the slayings and Andy returned from a neighbor's house during her insane spell. Two were dead and she was attacking the third. He wrested the axe from her and rushed to give the alarm.

An inquest was held last night. The woman said she did not remember what she had done. She had been in ill health.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Philadelphia—Out of the cloisters at the age of 62 came Professor Francis H. Bohlen to run for the United States Senate on a wet ticket in Pennsylvania's Republican primaries. He is perhaps the most picturesque of all the candidates in the primaries, and he is making more or less of a hit wherever he goes in the campaign.

He won't win. His opponents are Senator Joseph R. Grundy and Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, and he has no real organization support. But he has a good chance of polling a larger vote than any candidate who ever before ran on an exclusively wet or dry platform.

Bohlen is professor of law at the University of Pennsylvania, an erudite gent whose speech bristles with classical allusions in ordinary conversation, and sometimes even overflows into his campaign speeches. He has had no previous experience as a political candidate, but a high reputation in the teaching of law. In 1925 he was appointed to the Langdell professorship of law at Harvard and he is the author of a comprehensive book on torts.

There's nothing dry or dull about this professor. He dresses almost flashily. He speaks rapidly and vehemently and frankly. He sometimes writes his speeches in advance, but if he does he forgets all about them and proceeds extemporaneously. He is a highbrow in both the figurative and literal senses of the word, has fine gray hair and a snappy mustache. Recently when dressed the Pennsylvania League of Women Voters, his impressive appearance, his crisp delivery and his obvious sincerity drew greater applause than the ladies gave anyone else.

Out at the University of Pennsylvania, Bohlen is one of the most popular members of the faculty and boys have organized a Bohlen club to work for his candidacy.

This writer asked Bohlen how he happened to leave the classroom and take up such an arduous job in a primary where he had little or no chance of winning.

"We're giving the voters a chance to show that they resent the dictatorship of the dominant dry minority," Bohlen replied. "Why let a minority rule us simply because it is highly organized?"

"I'm not opposed to temperance. No one who has a son and grandson growing up, as I have, is opposed to temperance. But this campaign of ours is designed to promote temperance in fact instead of prohibition in name."

"When I think of the way even children are drinking today, I'm shocked. I'm horribly frightened about the whole thing. What proportion of prohibition in times past ever thought that prohibition would be worth such prices as we are paying in Chicago, where the entire city is terrorized by armed gangs fighting only for monopoly of bootlegging territory? Frankly, the best explanation I can make is that I was shocked and frightened into making this campaign."

"Personally and selfishly, I have no great room for complaint. I am one of a class against whom prohibition is not enforced. But even so, I would oppose it on the grounds of class injustice."

"I have always taught law and the by-products of prohibition have always been offensive to any lawyer."

Bohlen's nearest previous connection with politics was his large part in framing the Pennsylvania state workmen's compensation act which was passed in 1915 and his service for eight years as counsel for the state board administering the act.

His running mate, Thomas W. Phillips of Butler, out for the governorship, is many times a millionaire and owns coal mines and utilities. His dislike for prohibition is as enthusiastic as Bohlen's.

"I wouldn't walk across the street to be governor of Pennsylvania," he said when they came and asked him to go on the ticket.

"But I'd crawl on my belly from Butler to Harrisburg in order to strike down prohibition."

CONGRESS AGREES ON DRY TRANSFER

Washington, May 15.—(AP)—The first of the administration's bills for the improvement of prohibition enforcement today bore the approval of both branches of Congress and awaited only the elimination of minor differences between the two Houses before being sent to the White House.

This was the measure to transfer the prohibition unit from the Treasury to the Justice Department and co-ordinate it with the prosecuting agency there under the direction of a single head. It was approved by the Senate late yesterday, with a few minor amendments in which the House is expected to concur.

The vigorous wet and dry debate that the bill had been expected to evoke in the Senate failed to materialize. The principal Senate amendment will provide that the bill become effective next July 1.

The wet bloc of the House today threw itself behind an effort to obtain consideration at this session of either the LaGuardia bill for modification of the Volstead Law or the Norton resolution for a referendum on the repeal of the 18th Amendment.

RAU'S CRYSTAL LAKE PAVILION OPEN MAY 24

The twelfth season at Rau's Pavilion at Crystal Lake will start May 24. Everything is in readiness for the grand opening and a season of enjoyment.

Happy Harrington and his Rhythm Boys will be the first attraction. This band will start the following week to play at Ebb's Place on Lake Congamond for all summer where they always go over big. Although they have been heard frequently over the air, they will be heard for the first time in person at Rau's on the 24 of May. They are a young aggregation of musicians with a wealth of experience under the leadership of one of the best drummers that ever shook a stick.

An added feature this year at Rau's Dance Palace will be a master of ceremonies who will endeavor to keep things going at a warm and delightful pitch.

Memorial Day, May 30, Charles Miller and his orchestra from Holyoke will make his first appearance this year at Rau's where he had a large following last year.

Saturday, May 31, Leo Roy and his Spanish Cavaliers will make their first appearance at Crystal Lake. This is good news to the dance public who know how well Leo and his boys are going in Hartford and about the state as well as in Massachusetts.

This year all dances will be run on daylight saving time from eight-thirty to twelve-thirty, and it is hoped that this consistent plan will remedy the misunderstandings of time that have been known in the past.

The washer that is creating a sensation.

Voss—the only washer that cleans by the hand washing method.

Voss Washers, by means of the marvelous, exclusive Floating Agitator, are the first washing machines to duplicate the gentle thoroughness and safety of the hand washing method.

Study the three illustrations at the left. They make clear the advantages of the natural hand washing principle employed by Voss Washers. The agitator rests gently upon the clothes and swishes them through the clean, euday water at the top of the tub—away from the dirt, which settles to the bottom.

Thus your finest things are as safe from injury, and the delicate fabrics are washed as cleanly and as thoroughly as though washed by your own hands.

In addition to this outstanding exclusive improvement, the new Voss has every worthwhile feature of the modern washer—ballon wringer rollers, porcelain enamel tub, enclosed mechanism, running in oil bath, specially designed motor, etc. And the price is only $22.50.

Manchester Memorial Hospital Fund Campaign

MAY 18---25

The Goal Is $36,000

It Can Be Easily Attained Through The Whole-Hearted Cooperation
Of Every Person In Manchester and Vicinity. Let's Go! Put It Across!

Nine Years Of Achievement Stand Back Of This Institution! It Is Depending On You To Stand Back Of It!

IN the short period of nine years since the Manchester Memorial Hospital was established it has achieved an enviable record. It has been under the guidance and supervision of an able board of trustees and the actual work at the institution has been done by a capable superintendent and staff of doctors and nurses. Through perseverance and hard work this hospital has received the A rating of the American College of Surgeons which means that it is on a par with the metropolitan hospitals in our large cities.

Many costly facilities have been added to the equipment to give patients every possible treatment. The physical plant has been expanded. The staff has been expanded and the scope of work has enlarged even faster than it can be taken care of. The services of this hospital are in greater demand today than ever before.

YOUR hospital is a living tribute to the Manchester men and women, living and dead, who fought in the World War. A row of beautiful trees marks the driveway to this institution, living reminders of those who gave their lives in the war.

Funds for the hospital were pledged and given by parents and relatives of these men and women and countless hundreds besides. Their work is not finished—your hospital cannot be idle when there is need of service. It requires funds to do this work. Many older institutions are fortunate to have endowment funds. Such funds are just beginning to accumulate for this hospital.

Therefore for a few years Your Hospital must rely upon your financial support to meet its annual operating deficit until such time as it may be fortunate to be substantially endowed. It is a noble purpose that Manchester people have pledged themselves to and they will not fall.

Every Dollar Counts Toward The Success Of This Campaign----Won't You Do Your Share?

THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1930

—but nobody but Cagle knew that. What did he care? But now that there was a very serious likelihood of his being permitted to watch on his contract, it was convenient for Cadet Cagle to trot out the unacknowledged wife, knowing that her production would automatically cut the bond that tied him to the military service of his country—that he would be freed, after which he could be hired. Just possibly former Cadet Cagle, dismissed without honor from West Point, lucky to escape a court martial, may discover that he is not wanted by any college as a football coach; he will, if there is a shred of consideration remaining in the colleges for standards of decency and good sportsmanship. And perhaps his value as a bond salesman may not now be deemed as high as it was a little while ago. Who wants to buy bonds of a wretched? It might not be quite safe. In any event the very clayey feet discovered under this football idol may, as we suggested at the start, bring the reflection to some schoolmaster or other that perhaps something besides mere athletic prowess—some elements of simple manhood, for example—might well be stressed as worthy of admiration among his boys.

MIGHT HAVE BEEN KING The history of Dr. Nansen, Norwegian Arctic explorer, scientist, humanitarian and statesman, is familiar to Americans generally only so far as is concerned that part of it which deals with his work in the polar seas. It has therefore always been a little puzzling to a good many people in this country why Nansen should have been so patently an idol of the Norwegian nation. His achievement in proving the possibility of a drift passage across the Arctic ocean, while a very notable one, was after all only one of innumerable tremendous sea adventures that figure in Viking history and legend—hardly distinctive enough, in Norway, to cause its performer to be so singled out for national acclaim.

As a matter of fact, Dr. Nansen would probably have been almost if not quite as great a figure in his native country if he had never attained to celebrity through polar exploration. How great a hold he had on the affections of the people because of his distinguished civic services to Norway is to be gathered from the circumstance, rarely mentioned but now brought to mind by the Oslo correspondent of the New York Times, that in the period when the union between Norway and Sweden was in process of dissolution, in 1905, there was a very important movement on foot to make Nansen the first king of the independent Norway.

When Christian Keener Cagle became Cadet Cagle he signed an agreement to serve eight years in the United States Army, four years as a student officer at the West Point Academy and four years as an officer under commission. The opportunity to make such an agreement he sought himself—the United States government does not draft young men into West Point. West Point is an expensive school. The pupils there do not pay for their tuition. Instead they receive pay. They get $780 a year and their keep. They receive instruction not only in military science but in mathematics, English, French, Spanish, drawing, natural and experimental philosophy, chemistry, mineralogy, geology, electricity, history, international and constitutional law, civil engineering and other important subjects. When they are graduated they are highly educated, quite aside from their training as soldiers.

In return for this free gift of four years of splendid schooling the cadet, before it begins, has agreed to serve an equal length of time in the Army itself—at, of course, the regular rate of pay of his rank which starts at second lieutenant. He has given his word and his word has been accepted. He is not asked for a bond. It is assumed that he is a man of honor, a gentleman.

If, because his presence in the academy has provided him with opportunity to attain celebrity in a sport or other activity, it chances that he sees an opportunity to make money by going back on his promise, and if he does go back on it by wriggling out of the Army in some way or other, our cadet is a wretched; just a plain wretched. Cadet Cagle, intending to resign as soon as he had gotten the last atom of benefit to be squeezed out of West Point, suddenly finds himself confronted by a very serious doubt whether he will be permitted to watch. Whereupon he plays a trump card. He allows the fact to become known that nearly two years ago, in direct violation of his contract and of regulations, he had married. He had hidden his marriage behind a lie, answering in the negative the question propounded to all cadets returning from leave, whether in his absence he had taken a wife.

Cagle hid that marriage so long as it served his purpose—so long as it kept him in West Point and allowed him to play football and add to his fame and his value as a future coach—and bond salesman. He was ineligible, of course, and his presence on the West Point team put the record of that team during two seasons in the debatable column.

advantage can possibly accrue to Hartford, its people or its business, by getting proof that its population is 170,000 instead of 161,000. Even the element of rivalry seems to be "out" because Bridgeport, though its count is still incomplete, expects to show hardly more than 150,000 and Hartford's place as second city in the state seems to be secure enough. As if it made any difference.

THEY LIKE IT As nearly as we can see it, the town of Andover and the village of Sandy Hook, down in Fairfield County, ought to organize a little solidarity or two-town league, being, apparently the only two communities in New England that object to having the "main stem" deflected enough to keep the traffic from roaring under their bedroom windows. Sandy Hook has come in for quite a lot of wondering comment from other places which would be only too glad to have the ruck of trucks and automobiles shunted off to one side. But Andover's case seems to be just about parallel with that of the little neighbor over to the southwest.

It has often been said that there are some folks so habituated to the mental habit of self-defense that they would throw stones at Santa Claus if they heard him on the roof.

THE JAKKY RACKET And now that it appears that all the mysterious jakky has been produced in the cultural Hub of the Universe, the natural reaction of the general public will be a mild degree of wonder as to just how many of Boston's police commissioners, captains and patrolmen own stock in the chemical concerns which have been distributing paralysis throughout the Union.

IN NEW YORK

New York, May 15—From "Matie M." of Wichita Falls, Tex., comes a note: "I am sure there are many of your readers who, like myself, intend spending a vacation in New York this summer, who would like further suggestions on what to do and to see in New York."

Very well! A few weeks ago I detailed some of the colorful spots, with an admonition to "clip this out and paste it in your hat." But also, I note, I promised more. So here goes: Take in the entire new Grand Central Station skyline belt, with emphasis on the new Chrysler, Grand Central and Chanin buildings. To get a particularly memorable view of this fast changing skyscraper zone, choose a place in Library Square, or the Sixth avenue elevated station at Forty-second street.

Don't miss the new Greenwich Village, for the old one passes fast. Eighth street becomes a highway of "Villagery" shops and eating places from Fifth to Sixth avenue, any of them worth a visit. And historic spots disappear daily. The old wholesale belt in Canal street. . . the new radio theater in the old Amsterdam theater roof. . . the play, "Berkeley Square," if it's still in town. . . the upper Hudson. . . the typical Manhattan background of the Stadium symphony concerts, with autos blaring by and the city lights off in the distance.

The breadlines of the Bowery and the Little Church Around the Corner. . . just to remind yourself how fortunate you are to be able to afford a vacation. And that boat trip around Manhattan Isle, revealing the magic changes which come over the city. The conglomeration of shops and humans in Nassau street when the Wall Street buildings empty their tens of thousands at noon or in the late afternoon.

The miles of swanky new model apartments that now line the East river. . . And, if you've never seen it before, don't miss the Times Square show, neither the Times Square show, nor the kaleidoscope of humanity in Grand Central Station. . . While there, pass a half hour figuring out how much exploration you can do and how many novelties you can find without leaving the building. The Grand street push carts after nightfall, just down from Manhattan bridge. . . And the Orchard street maelstrom at any hour before six. . . The old "braastown" belt on East Side. . . The last remnants of Old Chelsea in the middle Twenties.

The Hungarian and Gypsy restaurants dotting upper Second avenue almost anywhere above Eighth street. . . And if you want to get night-clubbish, the Club Abby for a peep at the Broadway rounders after midnight. . . And a plenty "hot" show. . . The Broadway "catch penny" shows just to make you feel as though it were "old home week" back where you came from.

The Broadway view from the peak of the Paramount building. The blocks of wholesale flower shops in Twenty-sixth street and the fur markets a couple of blocks uptown. . . The blinding new talking picture signs in the mid-Forties and early Fifties. Harlem, all dressed up in silk hats on a Sunday morning. And one more trip on the Fifth avenue buses. . . There's something new each time. . . The view of the Manhattan skyline as gathered from Columbia Heights in Brooklyn. And—oh, well, if you have any pet interests just write and ask me questions! GILBERT SWAN.

WATKINS BROTHERS, Inc. 55 YEARS AT SOUTH MANCHESTER

HEALTH-DIET-ADVICE Dr. Frank McCoy says 'The Best Way to Health'

BLOOD EXAMINATIONS ARE IMPORTANT Every good physician considers blood tests of the utmost importance as an aid in making diagnosis. You will realize how important the blood is when you consider it the principal method of providing nourishment and drainage to practically every living cell in the body. . . The blood is then squeezed through the opening as the doctor presses just below and samples of the blood collected in sterile pipettes. After a few drops of blood have been removed, the spot is again sterilized and covered with some protective substance so that no germs can enter and in this way, guarded against infection. . . One of the usual tests made is to compare the color of the sample with the right shade for normal, healthy blood. If the color is too low it is an indication that the hemoglobin of your blood is not plentiful enough. The color is expressed in percentage, thus the normal blood may be said to range from 85 percent to 100 percent. The hemoglobin of the red cells gives them the special ability to absorb oxygen. When the hemoglobin is reduced it means that the cells of your body do not obtain as much oxygen as they should. . . Usually the next step is to make a smear, that is, a small amount of blood is put on a glass slide and allowed to dry. This is then placed under the microscope so that the cells can be distinguished and counted. In this way it may be found whether the cells are in the normal range of color shape and size. . . The comparative number of red cells and white blood cells to each other and to the normal is of great importance. . . Much publicity has recently been given in regard to the use of the blood test in determining the paternity of children in contesting divorce cases. The blood from the mother, from the child, and from the supposed father is all taken. By comparing the samples it can sometimes be told from whom the child has inherited its blood. All bloods may be divided into four types, and usually responds to the same type of diet. The trouble is often brought on by some local irritation in the mouth, such as sharp points fathers both have the same kind of blood, nothing can be determined. . . Many parasites inhabiting the blood may be detected by the microscopic examinations. The most common parasite to be found in the blood are those of malaria. In some of the tropical countries an organism known as the trypanosome, the parasite of sleeping sickness may be present in the blood. Sometimes in tropical countries blood can be found containing quantities of a small worm called the filaria sanguinis hominis. . . The blood can also be tested for the Wassermann and Widal reaction. In this way the doctor may be able to determine the presence of diseases which might otherwise only be suspected. My readers know that in this column I have often warned them against accepting newspaper diagnoses without careful tests and you can see from reading this article how important it is for you to have your blood examined the next time you wish a thorough diagnosis. . . QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (White Patches on Tongue) Question:—H. V. writes: "My tongue and the lining of my mouth have little white patches with branches leading from them. I have tried all kinds of treatments, but seem to be getting worse all the time. I believe the doctor calls it 'leukoplakia.'" Answer:—There is a disease called leukoplakia buccalis, commonly called leucal corns. This disease resembles psoriasis in some respects and usually responds to the same type of diet. The trouble is often brought on by some local irritation in the mouth, such as sharp points of teeth. It should be corrected as soon as possible as there is some danger of epithelial or skin cancer developing. It is a good plan to use a citrus fruit fast until your weight has become slightly below normal, then you could have some local treatments to the growths, such as touching them with nitrate of silver or electric cautery. They are not likely to recur if you have your teeth corrected and thoroughly cleanse your blood stream. . . Contracting Tuberculosis Question:—W. M. writes: "My work brings me in contact with a man affected with tuberculosis. Do you think there is any danger of my contracting this disease, and if so what caution should I take?" Answer: It is possible to contract tuberculosis by associating with someone who has this disease, but this is not likely to occur if you guard your health carefully and avoid becoming overtired. Ostrer, the great medical authority, claims that tuberculosis cannot be contracted by breathing the expired air of a consumptive. However, all persons affected with this disease should use every sanitary method in disposing of sputum. . . THE TERRIBLE MEAK (Bridgeport Post). The arrest of India's Mahatma (Holy Man) Gandhi brings to a climax the first long act of England's relations with that country and that man. Gandhi is wedded to the principle that the meek can inherit the earth, i. e., that humility and patience will gain ends when all other methods fail. In this the Indian leader is in accord with the principle of Tolstol, great Russian who said, "I cannot afford to hate because of the thing it does to my own soul." Gandhi has said, "The Englishman never respects you until you stand up to him. He is afraid of nothing physical, but he is mortally afraid of his own conscience." Here are the principles of the Mahatma. Never force, but ever an insistent, persistent presentation of facts before the moral tribunal of the world. His whole theory of life and of society is so far removed from the conventional pattern that there is serious doubt whether he can persuade his own followers to accept it. Gandhi would scrap all power machinery and have his people return to spinning and weaving their own cloth. Part of his day is devoted to his hand-loom as a sign and an example. He would let the cities rot by rebuilding the farm lots. He is against mass living, mass production, mass passions and pursuits. What are his chances with his own people? Well, his rebellion is passive, and for thirty centuries the Indians have had a passive religion, its holy men lost in meditation, its people submerged in poverty. Gandhi figures, and his followers with him, that things could not be worse. He stakes all on non-resistance, non-cooperation, civil disobedience. He appeals to the head and to the heart. He is for wearing down the white overlords, playing them out with a weapon they have never used or often met with—meekness. Terrible and terrifying meekness. . . The deepest body of fresh water to be discovered as yet is Lake Khatanga in Siberia. It is 5385 feet deep.

On May 15, 1918, the first regular daily air mail service in the world was inaugurated by the United States government between New York and Washington.

Before this time there had been attempts to carry mail from point to point or across intervening bodies of water, but not on a large and regular basis of service.

The service was begun with a special stamp of 24 cents to a letter, but later the rate was reduced to 16 and then again to 6 cents. The distance between the cities was negotiated in three hours and 22 minutes.

At first the Washington-New York service was maintained by the air service of the army, but as soon as its reliability was demonstrated, it was taken over by the Postoffice Department.

Although the service was discontinued in 1920 from motives of economy, similar services were established between the larger cities. On September 8 of the same year the transcontinental mail was inaugurated between New York and San Francisco.

Of course you have heard of the refined panhandler who asked a passerby for 15 cents to buy a chocolate malted.

HOW TO REDUCE VARICOSE VEINS

Rub Gently Upward and Toward the Heart as Blood in Veins Flows That Way.

Many people have become depressed because they have been led to believe that there is no remedy that will reduce swollen veins and bunches.

If you will get a two-ounce original bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) at any first-class drug store and apply it night and morning as directed you will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

Moone's Emerald Oil is a harmless, yet, most powerful germicide and two ounces last a very long time. Indeed, so powerful is Emerald Oil that old chronic sores and ulcers are often entirely healed and anyone who is disappointed with its use can have their money refunded. Magnell Drug Co., South Manchester, sells lots of it.—Adv.

Go to the car dealer for the TRUTH about gasoline—he knows!

WHAT sells a new car? The impression it makes when demonstrated. That's why more dealers in New York and New England demonstrate their cars with Socony Special plus Ethyl than with any other motor fuel.

Your car, too, will always give "demonstration performance" if you use Socony Special plus Ethyl—the only premium gasoline sold in New York and New England to which Ethyl is added.

For years Socony Special was recognized as the best premium gasoline in its territory. Now the addition of Ethyl makes it the finest motor fuel that science has yet developed—explains why sales keep jumping month by month.

EXONERATE CANNON ON SMITH CHARGES

Not Guilty of Political Activity But Stock Market Quiz Is Still On.

Dallas, Texas, May 14.—(AP)—Exonerated of charges of undue political activity in the 1928 campaign, Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of Washington, D. C., today still faced complaints signed by more than a score of delegates to the general conference, Methodist Episcopal church south, that he speculated on the Stock Market.

Nearly six hours of deliberation by the episcopacy committee yesterday failed to clear Bishop Cannon of the speculation allegations. For three hours in the afternoon and 45 minutes at night Cannon was on the witness stand. Much of the time he was known to have spent reading papers, presumably in reply to the photostatic documents presented by Judge G. T. Fitzhugh of Memphis purporting the records of his stock market transactions.

After Bishop Cannon left the committee room, the committee spent nearly two more hours discussing his case. The sole known accomplishment of that session was a two paragraph statement which placed the committee definitely on record as supporting the political activities of five bishops.

FINE FISH

Bloomsburg, Pa.—Walter Randusky will go a long time before he catches any fish quite so fine as 27 trout he bagged recently. They were all under size and when caught by Game Warden Lithwhiler, he was fined $270. This fine of $10 a fish was made because Randusky told the warden he had only caught four, while a search revealed the 27 in his game coat.

FATE OF TARIFF BILL RESTS WITH COALITION

Washington, May 15.—(AP)—Whether the tariff bill will be passed or not depended today, Congressional leaders believed, on whether the Senate's Democratic-Independent Republican coalition can muster a majority for a final test on its amendment revoking the President's authority to make emergency changes in import duty rates.

In Deadlock. The Republican conferees of the two houses have reached an impasse and before the end of the week the Senate Republican majority of the conferees committee are to ask to be relieved of an agreement restricting them from abandoning this amendment.

The coalition today was discussing whether it should oppose this request or grant it and then oppose the conference report, if the amendment is not included. When the conference report is brought to the Senate, the issue will be approval or rejection of the entire bill.

KIN OF ROOSEVELT DIES

New York, May 15.—(AP)—W. Emlen Roosevelt, capitalist and a cousin of the late Theodore Roosevelt, died today at his Fifth avenue home at the age of 73.

Mr. Roosevelt had been ill for some time at his home at 804 Fifth avenue. He died at 6:30 o'clock this morning.

He was a member of the financial house of Roosevelt and Son, chairman of All America Cables, and an officer and director in numerous other organizations. He was the son of James' and Elizabeth Roosevelt and married the former Christine Keane. In 1923 W. Emlen Roosevelt gave 11½ acres of woodland surrounding the grave of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay, Long Island, to the National Association of Audubon Societies for a wild bird sanctuary and shrine for bird lovers. Several of the Roosevelts have estates near that of the former president.

BYRD PARRIES REPORTERS' QUIZ

Will Not Answer Questions Put to Him on Details of His Trip.

Panama City, May 15.—(AP)—Read Admiral Richard Evelyn Byrd, who returned to American soil yesterday after two years in the Antarctic, has coined a non-committal reply to interviewers which has proved quite as effective as that used by Colonel Lindbergh.

Colonel Lindbergh frequently parried questions with: "I have nothing to say." Rear Admiral Byrd varies the wording, but is no less firm when the questions touch the personal or scientific phases of his expedition. He says: "I had a most interesting time."

Retiring early last night after an arduous day of ceremony and greeting, the rear admiral and the five members of the expedition who accompanied him aboard the Rangatiki from Dunedin, New Zealand, awoke today to a new round of speeches and acclaim.

Today's Schedule. The explorers were allowed the morning to themselves at their hotel, but with the afternoon their schedule called for visiting a swimming exhibition by Coach Henry J. Griesser's Red, White, and Blue Troupe, tea at the American Legation with the diplomatic corps attending, and a dinner at the home of Governor Harry Burgess.

The party last night appeared a jolly crowd at their hotel, the Tivoli, where Charles E. Lofgren, Ralph S. Haines, and Richard Kontner, Russell Owen, and Lloyd Berkner, who arrived with Rear Admiral Byrd, all are staying. The explorer's plans call for a direct run from Panama to New York aboard his bark, the City of New York, which is due here from New Zealand about May 23.

LINER SINKS SCHOONER, CREW OF EIGHT SAVED

New York, May 15.—(AP)—The schooner Azua, bound for Bermuda with a cargo of coal, was rammed and sunk early today by the Savannah liner City of Atlanta, 47-miles southwest of Barnegat Light, N. J., the Savannah line was advised today by radio.

J. E. McLean, master and owner of the Azua, and all seven members of his crew were taken aboard the City of Atlanta, which proceeded to Savannah with her bow damaged above the water line.

The Azua was a four master. The City of Atlanta sailed from New York yesterday with 22 passengers and a cargo of freight. Although confirmation was lacking from Captain Diehl of the City of Atlanta, it was believed the collision occurred in thick fog. The night was pitch black and the sea choppy.

The Azua was struck amidships, and sank quickly with its heavy cargo. The vessel was built 12 years ago. Its tonnage was 605. It sailed from Hoboken for Bermuda on Monday, with a coal load valued at $12,000. The City of Atlanta is a 5,433 ton ship, built at Chester, Pa., in 1904.

WOULD DISCUSS PACT

London, May 15.—(AP)—Premier Ramsay MacDonald today told the House of Commons, Britain's part in the recent London naval conferences would be opened up to the widest possible discussion.

The premier defended the accomplishments of the parleys, declaring however small their results might have been, they were only possible through "very great forbearance, helpfulness and good will of all the delegates."

Mr. MacDonald said the gathering was not merely a naval conference but had been aimed at making a "substantial contribution to the problem of general disarmament." He continued: "We must bend our attention not merely to the sea but to the air and the land as well. The mere limitation of one form of armament will not go very far to secure the peace of the world."

RAIN SEEN AS BOOSTER OF GARDEN CLUB SALE

Seedlings and Plants to Be Offered at Store Near Bidwell's at Center.

Local Garden club members welcomed the rain today, as did everybody else whose gardens and lawns were suffering from the protracted dry spell. The rain will benefit the plants and seedlings which the club will offer for sale Saturday all day beginning at 10 a. m., and help start them when they are planted in their new locations.

Only a few of the gardeners have notified the committee what kind of annuals and perennials they will donate, but it is safe to assume there will be the usual wide variety. The list in hand already includes a few of the better known rock garden plants, such as hardy flowers as veronica, delphiniums, pink and white hardy chrysanthemums, periwinkle, coropsis, iris, pink and white sweet rocket, phlox, Chinese forget-me-not, and among the annuals promised are pansies, zinnias, petunias, snapdragons, upright growing verbena, salpiglossis and stocks.

The sale will be held in the vacant store at 339 Main street, near Bidwell's Candy and Soda Shop at the Center. The store will be open tomorrow afternoon at 3:30 to receive plants, with Mrs. W. W. Ellis, Mrs. Harold Belcher and Mrs. William Taylor in attendance, and at 9 o'clock Saturday morning a number of the committee members will be at the store to prepare for selling at 10 o'clock.

An attraction at this third annual plant sale of the Garden club will be an exhibit of windmills, bird-houses, bird baths and other garden novelties, made and colorfully decorated by W. E. Keyes of 17 Washington street.

STRICKLAND SECURES VOSS WASHER AGENCY

Merton H. Strickland, of Main street, has been appointed by the Voss Washer Company of Dayton, Ohio, as local distributor for the firm. The Voss Company has been in the washer field for more than 50 years so local people will be satisfied concerning the integrity of the manufacturers.

To introduce the Voss Washer in this vicinity Mr. Strickland is giving a valuable electric flat iron free with every purchase of a Voss Washer this month. The Voss is endorsed by Good Housekeeping Institute and embodies an exclusive patent on a floating agitator. Further details about this principle will be found elsewhere in the Herald.

Mr. Strickland has also been appointed by the Manchester Gas Company to sell the Glenwood Insulated gas ranges. Several ranges will be on the floor and visitors will be welcome to inspect them with no obligation at all. The latest in gas water heaters, the Kompals is also on display.

Due to the unprecedented demand for General Electric refrigerators, prospective purchasers are requested to place their order at least two weeks before delivery. According to figures just released the G. E. Company will merchandise 145 million dollars worth of refrigerators. It will take 12,000 carloads to deliver and distribute the G. E. this year. Today G. E. has achieved first place in domestic refrigeration from nothing four years ago.

Mr. Strickland reports May business for 1930 just about 100 per cent over May, 1929, on the G. E. refrigerator. Nineteen G. E.'s were installed in May to date in Manchester's share of the total sales in the United States.

EMBEZZLEMENT CHARGE

Stamford, May 5.—(AP)—Probable cause for a charge of embezzlement of $5,500 from the Yale and Towne Mfg. Co., was found against William Hann, 43, of 7 East Gunhill Road, New York, by Judge Justus J. Fennel in Stamford City Court this morning, and Hann was bound over to the next criminal term of the Superior Court at Bridgeport in default of $5,000 bail. He was employed for 18 years at the local factory.

He was in charge of expert workmen, who are sent to various cities by the company to repair and install bank locks. It is alleged that Hann drew expense money for fake trips in the past few years and kept the money himself. A sudden rise in expense money caused the investigation.

Timely Suggestions on the Care of the Car by the Automobile Club of Hartford.

Gas Wears Piston Pins

How tight fitting pistons and rings can spare the piston pins excess wear may seem to be merely a mechanical process, but it is chemical as well. The piston pins are apt to be damaged by the gasoline that gets to them by leakage.

Present day fuels have a tendency to corrode the piston pins, and such corrosion commences wear proceeds at a more rapid rate. Fortunately, lubrication is greatly improved and the pins are showered, or even force fed, with oil. This acts as a protection. Furthermore, with the introduction of the constant clearance type of piston there is less leakage during the warming up process which is when raw gasoline is most prone to get past the pistons. To offset these advantages, however, pistons are now extremely cutaway in design so that what fuel does get by can reach the pins more readily.

Jack Up With Care

Cars are so low, the front axle so concealed and garage jacks so powerful it is a matter of wisdom to be careful in jacking up the front end of the car these days. If the wheels leaving the ground it is a sign that the jack hasn't caught the axle.

If it catches the tie-rod this vital part may be bent so that the front wheels will be out of line. This means excessive tire wear and steering trouble.

Sometimes the jack will catch on the splash pan. There usually is a metal rim on these pans such as you will find on the edges of the fenders. Thus, the pan will endure the strain up to a certain point when suddenly it will buckle.

One owner who used a jack in a repair shop caught it on the radiator drain cock which broke off and caused him a lot of unnecessary grief.

Stops Battery Corrosion

Those corroded terminals of the battery can be taken care of by the simple process of greasing them. This does not mean even the trouble of unloosening them and smearing them with vaseline.

In some service stations mechanics merely pour a little heavy oil over the terminals, using a grade of lubricant similar to that employed for transmissions. The oil works its way over the entire surface of the terminals and provides protection sufficient to prevent them from being eaten away.

The corroding of terminals is a peculiar process which sometimes indicates a change in the charging rate but which more often than not is no evidence of trouble. However, it develops into trouble if the corroding process is not checked by greasing the terminals.

For a complete and neat job it is best to disconnect the terminals, clean them and then brush on the oil.

Adjusting Front Brakes

In adjusting front-wheel mechanical brakes it frequently happens that the car owner will accomplish the task of equalizing the brakes but will find that his car does not stop

Suggest Channel Highway

While plans are being considered for the construction of a tunnel under the English Channel, another method suggested is that of a combination highway and canal from England to France. The sketch furnishes an idea of such a road. At both ends would be bridges and ports to permit large steamers to pass, while between them would run two parallel dams, between which would be the canal and over which would be the roadway.

as quickly as before. This is due to a natural habit of going at the job the wrong way.

When brakes are unequalized one of them will be more effective than the other and the temptation is to adjust the particular brake so that it matches the less effective one. The result is equalization, but less powerful brakes.

Merely by taking up on the adjustment of the less effective brake equalization can be had without sacrificing stopping ability. In fact, by making the weaker brake more effective stopping is greatly improved. After adjusting the brakes always jack up the wheels to see that they run free when the pedal isn't being pressed.

New Batch of Batteries

Among the newer rattles which owners have to contend with and which may puzzle them when trying to silence the car is the device resulting from loose shock absorbers. Some of the hydraulic devices have a connection to the frame which wears occasional tightening.

With mechanical braking systems there are additional brake rods, shafts, universal joints and other mechanism that may rattle when worn. Over a rough stretch of road the driver can usually silence these by pressing on the brake pedal lightly while feeding gas with the hand control. This puts the brake mechanism under tension.

Some rattling is a direct result of minor shimmying of the front wheels. There is just enough instability to set up vibrations which shake the entire car. Sometimes this is caused by too liberal lubrication of the front end, but more usually by wear on the king pins or bushings.

Oil Less for Comfort

The approach of warmer weather is a signal to owners of the latest cars to stop oiling the springs. Overlooking this point may result in the car getting to bobbing around on a rough road.

Where cars are equipped with hydraulic shock absorbers, as majority of those being produced today are, the warmer weather thins the fluid and results in less effective spring control. This can be offset to a very large extent by allowing the springs to work "dry." The situation is just the reverse of that in cold weather.

Automatic chassis lubrication, if overdone, will provide so much oil for the shackles as to lubricate the spring ends. About the best rule, therefore, for the motorist with the latest equipment is to guard against being too liberal with oil, if he wants best riding qualities in warm weather.

NEW AUTO RECORD

More than 6,300,000 automobiles and trucks were produced by auto manufacturing countries of the world in 1929, which is a new record for world production.

THOSE TAXICABS!

Taxicabs, representing only 2 per cent of the motor vehicles registered in New York state, were responsible for 24 per cent of the automobile accidents in 1929.

How's She Hitting?

BY ISRAEL KLEIN
Science Editor, NEA Service
In winter the battery runs down because of an over-demand on its service.

In summer the battery runs down because of too little demand on its power.

So attention, almost similar to that given this device in cold weather, must be paid it especially when it's warm.

There are various important reasons:

The days are much longer and riding is more constant. The result is that the battery is put to little use, except in starting. Even in this occupation the battery finds things much easier than in winter, for there isn't the frozen oil in the transmission or the cold engine to combat.

The nights are short, giving little time for the batteries to exhaust their oversupply of electric fluid in the lighting system.

The result is that the generator is liable to overcharge the battery.

An overcharged battery is worse than one lacking juice. The latter type used only to be recharged at a service station.

The former type needs repair, in many cases. Its positive plates may be ruined, by loosening the active material in them. The negative plates may become granular and useless. And the separators may be carbonized and disintegrated.

The increased charging rate of the generator in summer causes rapid evaporation of the battery electrolyte, increased resistance due to its higher specific gravity in the battery. The whole device, therefore, breaks down.

Even closer attention to the battery is needed in summer than in winter, to prevent overcharging.

Water should be added more frequently, especially during a tour. It should be kept above the top of the plates.

The terminals should be kept clean and their corrosion should be prevented by application of grease.

The summer charging rate should be followed as specified by the manufacturer, and when the needle in the ammeter goes beyond the point of safety, the lights should be turned on to keep down the charge.

The Husband Hunter

By Ruth Dewey Groves

BEGIN HERE TODAY.

Natalie Converse tries to conquer her jealousy over her husband, Alan. But they quarrel over Bernadine Lamont, a night club hostess, when she asks him to look after her son, Bobby, whose father had saved Alan's life during the war.

Annoyed at Natalie's attitude, Alan seeks sympathy from his secretary, Phillipa West, who is waiting for the opportunity to widen the breach between husband and wife.

Phillipa successfully schemes to arouse Natalie's suspicions, and one day Alan finds her gone. Wounded pride prevents either from seeking a reconciliation, and Alan seeks consolation with Phillipa, who plays her part cleverly.

Meanwhile, Natalie regrets her hasty action. She hasn't told her family of the break and promises to take her young sister back to New York with her. Still she does not write to Alan, hoping that he will beg her to return. Her silence merely arouses his resentment, and when he comes in with Phillipa, who makes him feel neglected and abused. They are seen together constantly, and Phillipa, fearing that he does not intend to propose marriage, tells him her parents object to her going with a married man, and she brings Alan to the point of confessing more than friendship for her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XXIV.

Alan did not give Phillipa a ring for some time. She was bitter over his neglect in the matter. He had showered gifts and checks upon Natalie; she knew that.

"He's the kind who wants to give a woman everything he has when he is in love with her," she stormed to herself. Well, she could not ask him for things before they were married, but she did intend to have a ring.

She wanted it, for one thing, as tangible evidence of his promise, every time he saw her ring flashing upon her finger. She did not expect him to forget he had asked her to marry him. But, having asked her, he seemed content to let the affair rest in abeyance.

He did not make love to her. That was all right with Phillipa except occasionally when she weighed his new attitude toward her and wondered if it portended ill for her plans. She did not want him to acknowledge too thoroughly to himself his lack of desire for her.

"She gave a great deal of thought to ways and means for bringing the ring to a state of her left hand to his attention. She could think of nothing that was not too obvious, until Bernadine Lamont came back from the second trip that she had taken that winter. This time Bernadine had gone for her ring. Phillipa had been glad she was gone. She was annoyed by Alan's devotion to Bobby. She knew that, if the boy were about much, she would see a great deal less of Alan. No doubt, if Bernadine hadn't left soon after Natalie went home to her mother, Phillipa said to herself, Alan would have found the companionship he sought with the Lamonts, mother and son. Phillipa could not conceive of a love that would endure beyond the grave. She was absolutely convinced that Bernadine would have taken Alan if she had known that he was separated from Natalie.

He happened to reveal to her that he had told Bernadine anything about it. She suggested several reasons why she thought he ought not to do it. Alan agreed with her, without giving the matter much thought.

But when Bernadine returned, and Alan went up to see her and Bobby, Phillipa had to make the most of it. She decided it was high time to get her ring and bring Alan to a definite consideration of their future.

Choosing a time when Alan was less absent-minded than usual, and consequently more devoted to her, she appeared to be nervous and downcast.

Finally as she knew he would, Alan asked what was troubling her. "Oh, just a condition at home," she answered in an offhand manner.

Alan frowned. He didn't feel like delving into trouble, but he considered it his duty to do as much for Phillipa as she had done for him. And she never had failed to be interested in his affairs, even when they were dreariest. Of course, lately, while she had been living in a sort of shell of resignation, he hadn't needed much comforting.

Curious, he thought idly, this lethargic state had seemed to come upon him with their engagement, with the settling of his fate, as it were.

"What is it, dear?" he pressed, using the only endearing term he applied to her since she had promised to marry him.

"The same old trouble, if you must know," Phillipa answered with a ready show of impatience.

"Yes?" he encouraged her.

"You know I had to tell the folks at home that we're going to be married—some day," she explained, not without a touch of acrimony in her voice. "They wouldn't have allowed me to continue going about with you, if I hadn't told them." She went on, talking fast.

say what they think, I could convince them that I told the truth." Alan did not seem greatly impressed with her difficulty. "Can't you talk about it of your own accord?" he asked.

more more more more more more Phillipa shook her head. "You don't understand, Alan," she said, and now her voice was sweeter, and quite sad. "There isn't anything that I can say except that we're engaged, and I can't say that over and over, when there's nothing they can see to back me up."

"You won't let me see you at home," Alan reminded her.

"No, I won't," she said stubbornly. "My home isn't a pleasant place even for me. I'm not going to infect it upon you."

"But I think I ought to talk with your parents, Phillipa. After all, it's asking a great deal of them, even in this day and age, to entrust their daughter's happiness to a man who is still married to another woman."

Phillipa grabbed at the chance he gave her. "That's just it," she exclaimed. "Everything is so unsettled, so uncertain, I can't talk about it with them. If I could tell them when we're going to be married, where we're going to live, or what we're going to do, it would not be so bad." Her voice had grown louder, excited. She appeared to be carried away by her thoughts, so that when she said: "If I only had an engagement ring to show them, it would help a lot," she seemed a naturally expressed and innocent remark. Alan never guessed how skillfully he had been reminded of an oversight.

"That's one thing we can settle without delay," he said, glad to be able to take some direct action. "We'll get a ring tomorrow, dear. You'll pick it out, of course."

"Alan," Phillipa breathed it thankfully, but she was too clever to gush over her success.

And the next day she got her ring. The girls in the office cast knowing glances at each other, when they caught sight of it on her finger, but not one of them dared to question her about it.

Her mother and father were over-awed. "There," she challenged, moving her hand back and forth under their startled gaze; "isn't that a beauty?" "Where did you get it?" Her mother's voice had never been so stern before.

Phillipa laughed. "Oh, I know you're going to be a bit, she retorted, "but don't. I'm engaged."

She caught her father's eye, and for a few seconds her assurance deserted her. But she had to see it through. "Their interference isn't another new ring. I've had to find another place to live, Alan would take care of her."

"To that young Mr. Norman you used to talk about?" her mother asked, before Phillipa had decided what she should say to her father. Mrs. West couldn't think of anyone else who had money enough to give Phillipa such a ring. For even her untrained eye knew that the square-cut stone her daughter was exhibiting was a valuable one.

"No," Phillipa declared, unabashed, "to Mr. Converse."

"Converse?" Both her mother and her father echoed Alan's name. Against the silence of their perplexity, Phillipa smiled coolly, insolently. "To Mr. Alan Converse, my boss for a little while longer," she said.

"But Phillipa, he's married!" her mother exclaimed in horrified accents. "He's been parted from his wife for weeks," Phillipa explained calmly, at the same time avoiding her father's glance.

"You're crazy, girl," he exploded wrathfully. "I won't have it, I tell you. Do you hear? I won't have it! My daughter engaged to be married to a man who's already got a wife. It's plain disgrace!" Phillipa's face flamed red. "Plain or fancy, take it or leave it," she thrust back; "he's going to marry me when he's divorced from the present Mrs. Converse."

"Phillipa..." "Oh, don't rag me, mother. There's nothing wrong, I tell you. I didn't separate them. They quarreled all the time. She was beastly jealous..."

"And did she have cause for it?" Mr. West broke in, pointing an accusing finger at Phillipa.

"If you're going to start treating me like a home wrecker, I'll leave," she threatened in answer. "You'll leave if you don't take that ring off your finger, and be damned quick about it," her father shouted.

BARGAINS IN WEDDINGS

The Cheaper They Are the Smarter, in Eyes of London's Young Set.

By MILTON BRONNER

London, May 15.—Court dressmakers, florists and other luxury trades are aghast at the new fad that has been taken up lately by prominent young society people—that of doing away with the gorgeous church weddings which were the rule in London before the war. There was a time in the British capital when no young girl of prominent family would have dreamed of anything other than a very stately wedding before a very large and distinguished and splendidly dressed company of invited guests. Now simplicity in this greatest event in a girl's life is becoming the fashion.

Some of the young brides hate the fuss and bother of a big wedding. Others belong to the "new poor" of the after-war days of huge taxation and do not feel that they ought to saddle their parents with the cost of a very expensive wedding.

The result is that some of them prefer to go quietly to the office of a registrar with just a few close friends and have the whole thing over in about five minutes. The cost is about $500 on up.

A real "posh" wedding may cost anywhere from $5,000 on up. The dressmakers' lament.

"The people that this new economy hits the hardest are, of course, the dressmakers of Bond street and vicinity. Nine or ten big society weddings in a season used to mean making dresses not only for the brides and the bridesmaids, but also special dresses for the many wedding guests.

Two of the richest and prettiest girls in British society have just recently given striking examples of the new tendency. Not so long ago it was announced that the Countess of Seafield was to be married to Derek Studley-Herbert, a young broker. Lady Seafield, who is 23, is the youngest noblewoman in her own right in Great Britain. She owns vast estates in Scotland. It was presumed her wedding would be a gorgeous affair. And the not long the announcement was sent out to the newspapers that, five days before, she had been quietly married in St. James's church in Piccadilly, with less than a score of friends and relatives present.

But the equally pretty Lady Diana Bridgeman, the 22-year-old art student daughter of the Earl and Countess of Bradford, went even farther. On one day she announced her engagement to Sir Robert Abdy, a young baronet who runs art shops in London and Paris. Three days later a party of five gathered at Princess Row Register. Besides the bride and groom, the only persons present were the best man and the parents of the bride. Lady Diana, instead of having gone to the expense of a wedding gown, wore a simple, sensible tweed suit.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"This is my kid!" said the father when the baby was three months old. "No monkey business with him. You took Charlie and he's the sis of the whole street."

His wife smiled. "Charles is a lamb. He's perfect. And you think he is, too."

"I know, but you said it. Lamb's right. The little wolves around here at him alive, and he doesn't even know it. He's cheese, pudding, stuff, when it comes to spunk. I'd give my front teeth if I could see him punch some of those kids in the eye."

"Well, he doesn't run." "No—stands and takes it because you told him never to fight back. But I guess you're safe there. He wouldn't anyway."

"They like him. He isn't dubbed a coward even if he doesn't take his own part. He's just not made to fight."

His Public Bicycle "Well, he needn't fight, but he doesn't need always to be thinking of the other fellow. They take things away from him and he never moves. Just look out the window now. I'll bet a dollar to a sausage skin that he's not on his bicycle. I never see him on it. The other youngsters own it. It's as public as a taxicab. The McGregor kid's on it this minute and the kid's sitting on the steps."

The mother of Charles sighed. "Well, I do think you are partly right. I wish he had more spunk. But what are you to do? You can't change children. It's just his nature to be kind."

"We didn't start early enough. If I'd had my way when he was two years old and the other youngsters started to tease him and punned him and break his top, I'd have taught him the use of his fists. You had a prize method of pulling them off and telling them to go home. Now this boy here's to be mine and I'm going to work it out on him. I think I'll begin now."

And sitting the action to the word he reached for the baby's bottle and held it high above his head. The baby roared and slashed about with his fists. "Attaboy! Attaboy!"

A Young Mauler Then followed a mauling that brought a scream of joy at first but which soon changed to a whimper and then to a roar of rage. The small face on the pillow was purple and fury darkened his eyes until they looked like holes burned in blankets.

"Oh, stop! That's a shame," his mother interferred. "Give him his bottle and let him get settled. He won't sleep a wink tonight."

His father was satisfied, so he complied. "He's got the right stuff in him. And I'm going to keep him in training."

"Yes, and when he's as old as Charles he's going to be an unbearable little coxcomb that we can't stand to have around. You're all wrong. If children are born gentle and kind you can't put all that rough stuff in them. And if they have it when they are born, as I think the baby has, it's wrong to try to accent it. We have to take our children as we find them, and do the best we can."

This opinion probably conflicts with the behaviorist theory, but I think she's right.

HEALTH

T. R. SUFFERER WHO USES PATENT MEDICINES RUNS A BIG RISK

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Before the passage of the Food and Drug Act made it illegal to carry false and misleading labels on packages, the use of quack remedies for tuberculosis was widespread.

In those days the "cure" for tuberculosis had not been developed. Its present high state and ethical principles had not been adopted by great periodical publishing houses. Today new newspapers indeed will carry the advertisements of cures for tuberculosis or for other disorders of this character.

The National Tuberculosis Association has been actively engaged in spreading the information that a specific cure for tuberculosis is not available and that the chief essentials to recovery are rest, fresh air and good food.

In a recent survey among tuberculosis patients as to whether or not they had purchased various proprietary medicines for the relief of their condition, it was found that somewhere between 20 and 50 per cent of the patients had attempted to use such remedies in self-treatment of the disease.

In more than half of these instances the medicine used was cod liver oil, and in most of the others cough medicines of one type or another had been taken.

Out of 1499 patients, 52 remedies had been used a total of 143 times in attempts by patients to treat their own condition. A few of these medicines were preparations which are used by physicians and which have good standing for the relief of certain symptoms.

On the other hand, such preparations as are called "lung invigorators" or "magic foods" or so-called "consumption cures" had been used in 32 per cent of instances—by patients who had put confidence in the claims made in circulars of advertising matter for such substances.

The most widely used preparation sold as a "consumption cure" in the days before the Pure Food and Drugs Act made that illegal, is now advertised as a remedy for coughs and colds, in which form it has a special appeal to the patient with beginning tuberculosis.

Certainly conditions are better in this regard than they were 25 years ago, but there is still much need of education of the public in the fact that tuberculosis cannot be cured by any magic preparation taken internally and that it is dangerous to rely on such medicines in the early stages of this disease.

MOTE PURSUIT

Now is the time to pack away all woolens. Department stores have a wide variety of cedar equipment, tarred bags, and other receptacles that keep clothes and blankets and rugs from the insective and persistent moth.

CRISP LETTUCE

Lettuce keeps longer and stays crispier if you wash it, roll it in a dampened cloth and place in the refrigerator in an earthen bowl.

An Ailing CHILD

Are you prepared to render first aid and quick comfort the moment your youngster has an upset of any sort? Could you do the right thing—immediately—though the emergency came without warning—perhaps tonight? Castoria is a mother's standby at such times. There is nothing like it in emergencies, and nothing better for everyday use. For a sudden attack of colic, or the gentle relief of constipation, or to allay a feverish condition, or to soothe a fretful baby that can't sleep. This pure vegetable preparation is always ready to ease an ailing youngster. It is just as harmless as the recipe on the wrapper reads. If you see Chas. H. Fletcher's signature, it is genuine Castoria. It is harmless to the smallest infant; doctors will tell you so. You can tell from the recipe on the wrapper how mild it is, and how good for little systems. But continue with Castoria until a child is grown.

ENID WILSON PUTS HELEN HICKS OUT

U. S. Girl Outclassed; Glenna Collett Barely Noses Out Hilda Cameron, Scottish Player, One Up.

COLLETT IN FINALS

Formby, May 15.—(AP)—Glenna Collett won her way to the final of the British Women's Golf championship today by defeating Enid Wilson in a close match. She won her opening match by the same margin. The American champion held an eight foot putt for a birdie three to win the 18th hole and the match. Both Miss Collett and Miss Wilson played golf for the round while Miss Wilson scored 82.

Miss Diana Fishwick won her way to the final by defeating Miss Kathleen Macdonald, five up and four to play. Miss Collett and Miss Fishwick meet in the final tomorrow over 36 holes.

Helen Hicks loses. Formby, May 15.—(AP)—Glenna Collett, American champion, fought her way into the semi-finals of the British women's golf championship today but her young rival, Helen Hicks, was eliminated. Miss Collett found a worthy rival in the person of Hilda Cameron, of Scotland, but won a hard fought and close match, 1 up.

Miss Wilson and Miss Collett were to clash in the semi-finals this afternoon in what is expected to be the deciding match of the championship. The survivor was expected to have a comparatively easy time of it with the finalist from the lower half of the draw.

Miss Hicks was outplayed all the way by the husky British youngster. The American champion was down to the wire in her match with Miss Cameron but never could get her shots in working order and Miss Wilson ended the match at the 16th green.

Miss Collett found Miss Cameron a worthy opponent from start to finish. The American had a lead of two up at the turn but Miss Cameron cut it to one shortly afterwards.

Miss Cameron's nine holes losing by one-hole margin. Hicks vs. Wilson. The outgoing cards: Miss Hicks: 455 535 543—39 Miss Wilson: 444 534 533—35

The incoming cards: Miss Hicks: 645 46 Miss Wilson: 555 45 Miss Collett played in great form on the first nine holes of her match with Miss Cameron but her game was erratic on the last nine. As a matter of fact she was only because Miss Cameron's game also slipped.

Miss Collett was able to get under the wire in front. The American champion held a three hole lead at the end of the first nine holes. The eighth and ninth were halved and Miss Collett drove from the tenth tee with her two-hole advantage intact.

The tenth was halved in fives but Miss Collett needed six at the eleventh and saw her lead cut to one hole. After the lead cut to one hole, Helen Hicks squared the match with Miss Cameron at the thirteenth. Stroke for stroke the American and Scottish girl marched through the next three holes but the turning point in Miss Collett's favor came at the seventeenth. Here she regained her one-hole lead with a four while Miss Cameron was halved in six. The eighteenth was halved in fives and Miss Collett had gained the semi-finals.

GLENNA HAS NEVER WON BRITISH TITLE

Failed in Five Attempts to Win Golf Crown.

BY WM. BRAUCHER.

Over the seaside fairways of Formby, England, a game little woman with a big bundle of golf sticks is fighting to defeat a jinx that five times has turned her back from one of her most cherished ambitions—the British Women's Championship.

Glenna Collett has been playing golf 16 years since her father, a former professional bicycle rider, saw her pick up a driver one day and make a great shot. It was that shot that decided Glenna's career.

It has been 12 years since the golfing world began to realize that the comely girl from Providence was a great golfer. During that time she battled five times to win the British Women's—and each time the fates, or Joyce Wethered, turned her back.

Last year it was Joyce Wethered who turned back "our Glenna" in the 36-hole final. The British woman, called by some the greatest woman golfer in the world, was 5 down to Glenna at the ninth hole, but came back to win 3 and 2. Nearly all of Glenna's battles on British soil have gone the same way.

This year proved no exception, for in the recent international matches, Glenna, after making a good start, bogged down and the fate of the British woman was decided in two matches, singles and foursomes.

Joyce Wethered announced she would not take part this year, and that was a disappointment to Glenna in whom the competitive spirit burns high, but the fruit of victory over one of the best fields that ever took part in a British Women's would taste to Glenna almost as sweet as a victory over Joyce.

Glenna has learned to take things more or less as they come, overcoming the petulance which she demonstrated earlier in her career. "An ideal toward which I have always struggled," says Glenna, "is to have a physical prowess, co-ordinated nerves and muscles, the 'will to win' and all that. It is a mental attitude, partly grave of spirit, philosophy and good manners reduced to the essence of sportsmanship."

Glenna knows how to lose, which many good golfers have told me is one of the most vital lessons in the game—the lesson which marked the turning point for no less a golfer than good round Royal and the Emperor of the links, himself.

As Helen Willis Moody is the Poker Face of tennis, Glenna, I think, can be called the Great Gambler of golf. Her expression remains unchanged. With her little oval face set, she just chases that ball around the course from the first tee to the last green, without wavering.

You might compare her with Helen Willis Moody in other ways, too. Glenna's clothes sit well upon her and she is good-looking. In her action on the links she is smooth and easy, just as Helen is a picture of well-oiled human machinery on the courts.

Von Elm and Voight, Lone American Pair to Suffer Defeat in Four Matches Which Opened Walker Cup Play Today; Prince of Wales Spectator

Sandwich, Eng., May 15.—(AP)—Robert T. Jones, Jr., and Dr. O. F. Willing won the first point for the Americans in the Walker Cup matches by defeating T. A. Torrance and Rex Hartley in a foursome, 8 up and 7 to play.

Cyril Tolley and Roger Wethered evened up the score by defeating George Von Elm and George Voight 2 up.

The American side was assured of an even break on the day's play when Roland Mackenzie and Don Moe returned a victory over J. A. Stout and Sir Ernest Holderness, two up and one to play.

This left the score two points for the visitors and one for the home team with one match to finish.

Von Elm and Voight fought a great battle with Tolley and Wethered. The Americans took a one hole lead at the third hole but the British pair squared the match at the sixth and they were all even at the turn.

Tolley and Wethered went into the lead for the first time at the tenth where the Americans needed five but Voight and Von Elm squared the match at the thirteenth.

The Americans won the fourteenth and fifteenth in succession to go two up. Wethered and Tolley needing sixes on both holes. The last three holes were halved leaving the Americans in possession of a two hole lead at the end of the first half of the match.

Jones-Willing 5 Up. Bobby Jones, American captain, and Dr. O. F. Willing of Portland, Ore., were five up at the end of the first eighteen holes of their foursomes match with T. A. Torrance and Rex Hartley of England.

The Prince of Wales arrived by airplane, the plane landing on the edge of the Sandwich course. The Prince immediately joined the gallery following Jones and Willing and saw the Americans win the ninth hole.

ATHLETICS BEAT RED SOX 10 TO 1

West Side League Game Has Many Thrills Regardless Of One-sided Score.

The Athletics trounced the Yankees 10-1 in the West Side League last night at the Four Acres to take first place.

The score does not tell what a pack of thrills were witnessed. One thrill is to see Ty Holland umpire at second base with his old fishing pipe steaming away.

In the first inning G. Gustafson made a neat catch of Dimquist's bid for a hit. In the second, which was the big inning for the Athletics they bunched six hits and two walks to get seven runs.

In this same stanza, Kearns who was not being backed up very well struck out three men. Twelve men batted in this frame. In the fourth with two Yankee men on bases and none down, Faulkner showed himself a master curvesman by striking out S. Gustafson, J. Hewitt and Maloney in succession.

During this game, however, he let a wild pitch go out and Dahlquist scored the only run the Yankees got. Faulkner ended the game nicely by catching his rival, Kearns napping on first base for the final out in the seventh.

Kearns showed some good stuff as can be seen by his nine strikeouts but his team seemed bewildered at times and the A's took advantage of every break. Ambrose caught a nice game having an assist to his credit and efficiently holding up Faulkner's speed ball on a dark gray evening.

At a meeting held after the game the following captains were chosen. Pirates—Ty Holland. Yankees—Yump Dahlquist. Athletics—Fritz Wilkinson. Baker is acting captain of the Red Sox until Friday night when an election will be held.

Friday night at 6 p. m. the Pirates and the Red Sox meet. Neither team has won yet. Friday's game puts one of them in the cellar.

At St. Louis.—(AP)—The four American pairs led their British opponents at the halfway point of the Walker Cup international golf series this morning.

KENTUCKY DERBY

Field Numbers 16. Gallant Fox Still Prime Favorite to Capture $50,000 Prize Turf Event.

Louisville, Ky., May 15.—(AP)—The Kentucky Derby field had narrowed down to 16 today with three listed as doubtful starters, as owners and trainers definitely withdrew their eligibles for various reasons.

Gallant Fox still ruled the favorite today to capture the $50,000 added stake despite a poor workout yesterday in which he showed a dislike for the mud. Paster workouts by other eligibles, however, narrowed the odds and left the Derby still a wide open race.

Magnuson's Timely Batting

Enables Locals to Win With Makeshift Lineup; Bristol Here Saturday.

Manchester High kept in the running for the Central Connecticut Interscholastic League baseball pennant yesterday afternoon by turning back the strong East Hartford nine on the latter's own field. The score was 4 to 2.

The victory was the fifth in a streak starts for Coach Tom Kelley's crew which has bowed only to the undefeated West Hartford combine. That score was 11 to 7. Victories were scored over Hartford 9 to 2, Rockville 16 to 7, Middletown 9 to 3 and Meriden 7 to 3.

Manchester High has one more game to play this week. That will also be a league affair. It comes Saturday afternoon when Bristol sends its aggregation to the West Side field here along with its tennis outfit in return for a track engagement in the Bell City. Next week four games confront the Kelleyites. Monday Weaver plays here and Saturday Hartford comes to town for a return engagement. Wednesday the locals travel to Meriden and Friday play at Rockville.

The local schoolboys showed much all-around improvement in yesterday's victory over East Hartford. Playing with a makeshift lineup, the Manchesterites displayed no real weakness and richly deserved the triumph which they achieved. Only one error was made by the two teams together, which shows the caliber of ball exhibited.

Dave McConkey, pitching his first game of the season, allowed but three hits, two singles and a double and also struck out seven batsmen. He was especially active after the first couple of innings with the lone exception of the eighth in which his own error coupled with Foley's double and an infield out, paved the way for both East Hartford runs.

Manchester scored one in the fifth. Lupien first, Morry up, single, and stole second, took third on McConkey's neat sacrifice and romped home on Tierney's infield out. In the sixth Magnuson singled and scored on Buddy Kerr's double. In the eighth Morry walked, only second and went to third on Bycholski's single. The latter stole second, and both counted on Magnuson's timely single to right, his second opportun blow of the afternoon. Both rival shortstops fielded well.

OPENING STOCKS

New York, May 15.—(AP)—The Stock Market opened irregular today, although variations were of fractional extent in most instances. U. S. Steel dropped 1/4, and Auburn Auto lost 5/8. Electric Auto-Lite sold a point higher, while New York Central and A. M. Byers rose 1/4. Vanadium, which had a broad upturn yesterday, was unchanged. Radio and American Call sagged about half a point each.

With the exception of continued strength in some of the utilities the market worked into soft ground after the initial orders had been executed. U. S. Steel's loss was extended to 2 points, while American Call, General Electric and Radio each yielded a point.

American Telephone and Public Service of New Jersey soon joined the list of prominent issues showing moderate losses, although Columbia Gas and Electric, which had been heavy yesterday, turned more than 2 points higher. American and Foreign Power and Pacific Lighting were also substantially.

Colorado Fuel and Iron, Warren Brothers and Columbia Carbon made progress against the general trend, improving nearly 2 points in the first half hour. Eastman Kodak, Goodyear Rubber and Manhattan Electrical Supply, however, lost from one to 2 points. Standard Oil of New Jersey, whose 1929 report, published today, showed earnings equal to $4.75 a share against $4.43 in 1928, sagged by a major fraction on profit taking from the recent advance.

The morning's news was meager, but the selling of the industrial leaders was apparently another move by the bear faction to make capital of uncertainties in the business situation, as reflected in current reports on steel operations. Profit taking from the higher ground made by the market generally this week was also in evidence. Sterling cables opened at $4.86 1-32, up 1-32.

SENSE and NONSENSE

Pep
Vigor, vitality, vim and punch—
That's pep!
The courage to act on a sudden hunch—That's pep!
The nerve to tackle the hardest thing.
With feet that climb and hands that cling.
And a heart that never forgets to sing—That's pep!

Sand and grit in a concrete base—
That's pep!
Friendly smile on an honest face—
That's pep!
The spirit that helps when another's down.
That knows how to scatter the blackest frown.
That loves its neighbor and loves its town—That's pep!

To say "I will!" for you know you can—That's pep!
To look for the best in every man—
That's pep!
To meet each thundering knockout blow.
And come back with a laugh, because you know
You'll get the best of the whole darned show—That's pep!

Guest—Say, waiter, I ordered strawberry shortcake and you brought me a plate of strawberries.
Where's the cake?
John Henry—Well, suh, that's what we is short of.

A colored man came in yesterday inquiring, "Is dis de printin' office?"
Being assured that we were disciples of Johannes Guttenburg, assiduously following the livelihood the art preservative, we inquired to what manner we could serve him.
"I wants de names of my chillun and dates of deir burf printed on a piece of paper."

We told our prospective customer that it could be done, since there were only some seven or eight names on the list submitted.
"An' be shore to leave lots of space at de bottom where I can add de names of others as dey come along," requested the colored man.
This, too, proved no difficult matter for our printers always strive to please.

Boss—Why is it, Rastus, that so few negroes ever commit suicide?
Rastus—It's dis way, boss. When down to worry over it, he gets des-

Sambo—What kind of watch have you got?
Jasho—A wonder watch.
Sambo—Wonder watch! Never heard of that before.
Jasho—Well, you see, it's like this: Everytime I look at it, I wonder what time it is.

The human naturest thing in the world is to believe when times are good they will always be, and when they are bad that they will soon pass.

During the hearing of a case a over chairs and generally upsetting things.

Judge (sternly)—Young man, you make a great deal of noise.
Young Man—Your Honor, I have lost my overcoat and I am looking for it.

Judge (frately)—Well, well, people often lose whole suits here without half as much disturbances.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN - PICTURES BY KING

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)
The milkmaid, to the Tinymites, said, "So, you're out to see the sights? Well, Denmark is a won-derous land. You'll like it fine, I think. I'd like to tell you more, you see, but I'm as busy as can be. I must go on with milking. Would you youngsters like a drink?"
"You bet we would. That sounds just great," cried Clowdy. "I can hardly wait. I know that real fresh milk is good for every little lad. If we can have a cup or two, we all will be obliged to you. It's been a long, long time since any fresh milk we have had."
"Well, well, I'm glad you feel that way," replied the maid. "This very day I've taken plenty to the farm. You all can have your share.
But, first of all, why don't you run around and have a lot of fun. It's sure to make you thirstier, out in the open air."
"Down in the valley you will find a lot of cows of every kind. Run down and take a look at them. They are a pretty sight. Then, when you've exercised a bit and all of you are feeling fit, go to the farmhouse." So the Tinymites ran with their might.

The Travel Man cried, "I'll stay here. I can't keep up with you, I fear. In 'bout an hour I'll meet you at the farmhouse. Don't be late.
Pick wild flowers, on your merry way and bring the milkmaid a bouquet. Most every girl likes flowers, real well. She'll think that they are great."
Oh, my, but all the bunch had fun. They seemed to like to jump and run. The countryside for miles around had very wondrous charm.
When heaps of exercise was had, some flowers were picked by every lad. And then an hour was up and so they headed for the farm.

(The Tinymites have a real farm dinner in the next story.)

16 BANDITS KILLED.

Managua, May 15.—(AP)—United States Marines and the Marine officered National Guard have recommended intensive activity in northern Nicaragua against groups described in an official statement as not believe there was any central leader of the band.

May 5 and 12, sixteen bandits were killed. Commander General Douglas McDougal of the Nicaraguan National Guard and colonels of the Marines, in an annual report, said that all the men killed wore red hat bands as their only insignia. He said he did not believe there was any central leader of the band.
