Greatest Murder Hunt in Chicago's History is On—Reporter Knew Too Much About Gangland, is Belief.

Chicago, June 10.—(AP)—One of the greatest murder hunts Chicago ever has seen was organized today. Police, state attorney's men, private detectives and the organized power of the press joined to track down the man who killed Alfred (Jack) Lingle, 38 year old reporter for the Tribune yesterday.

Rewards totalling $30,000 were posted—$25,000 by the Tribune and $5,000 by the Chicago Evening Post. The Press Club of Chicago issued a statement that it stood ready to post an additional $10,000.

Two hundred or more persons were within a few feet of Lingle when he was shot down yesterday afternoon but the slayer escaped. Early today the investigators had as clues the killer's cap, a pocket revolver of .38 calibre, and the black silk glove worn by the killer to prevent latent fingerprints being left on the pistol butt.

Identify Pictures.
Several witnesses tentatively identified rogues gallery pictures of Sam Hunt, Capone gunman, as closely resembling the man who killed Lingle. Hunt, carrying a shotgun in a golf bag was arrested a fortnight ago on the northwest side shortly after a gunning in which the body of the victim was spirited away. He is out on bond under charges of carrying concealed weapons.

Lingle is the first newspaperman, the Tribune pointed out, to be murdered since Don R. Mellett, Canton, Ohio editor was slain in July 1926 following his crusade against gangsters there. Lingle's 18 years as a Tribune reporter have been devoted largely to police reporting and investigation, a job that has brought him in contact with most of the "big shot" gangsters of Chicago. He was well acquainted with Al (Scarface) Capone, among others, and once was entertained at the Capone home in Miami.

Rich Reporter.
The Tribune reporter, reputedly wealthy enough to retire, but staying on the job through pure joy of the work was working on the chain of gang murders that have been committed within the last ten days.

MARKET FIRM AS SELLING IS ABSORBED

Prices Shift Frequently as They Seek Firmer Footing After Yesterday's Trouble.

New York, June 10.—(AP)—The Stock Market's struggle yesterday for a footing today, after its severe tumble late yesterday. Hangover selling was in the main well absorbed, but rallies failed to hold. Price trends shifted frequently.

Trading was in large volume, progressing at the rate of more than 3,000,000 shares an hour during the early hours of trading. The ticker quotations fell about half an hour behind transactions.

After absorption of considerable selling during the first half hour, the market recovered rather briskly for a time, several shares showing gains of $2 to $6, but renewed liquidation appeared just before noon which cancelled most of these advances and depressed several shares from $2 to 6 under yesterday's final levels. During the early afternoon, however, the market again developed a firm tone.

Financier's Opinion
The feeling was expressed in banking circles that the recent wave of pessimism in Wall Street had been carried to illogical extremes. Commission houses, however, were extremely cautious in their advice to customers. Some houses predicted a sharp technical rally as soon as the current selling is disposed of, but there was no inclination to forecast any sustained upward trend until business news brightens.

The United States Steel Corp.'s report of total unfilled tonnage at the end of May was the outstanding item of the day's news, and was scarcely of a character to influence the market either way. A decline in total unfilled orders of about 245,000 tons was reported, which was about in keeping with the normal seasonal trend. Unfilled tonnage declined only 130,000 tons in May of 1929, but more than 40,000 tons in May of both 1928 and 1927.

Shares Showing Gains
During the morning rally, shares showing gains of $2 to $6 included U. S. Steel, Goodyear, Loew's Radio Keith, A. M. Byers, Electric Power and Light, Johns Manville, J. I. Case, and Allied Chemical. These were soon lost, however, and such issues as Radio, Westinghouse Electric, Johnson, International Nickel, Dupont, United Aircraft, North American and International Telephone soon sold off about $2 to $6. Thereafter there was a tendency to support a few issues, but the market as a whole drifted uncertainly.

Baltimore, June 10.—(AP)—As a group of scientists who for more than two years have sought the cause and cure of the common cold prepared to test cultures of the organism which caused the disease, the Baltimore, Md., police department today announced that it had found the cause and cure of the common cold.

The four, given their Bachelor of Arts degrees last week, agreed to let Dr. J. A. Doull, head of the group financed by the $195,000 John J. Abel fund and his associates inoculate them with cold organism cultures and various serums for two weeks.

In return they are to be paid $50, given all the latest magazines to read during their close confinement at a local hospital, and also were given thorough physical examinations.

The Abel fund was established in 1928 by Francis P. Garvan, president of the Chemical Foundation, for five years of research into the maldy.

The Abel fund group prepared to test the culture of Dr. J. A. Pfeiffer of the University of Maryland, an independent research worker, who a few days ago announced that he had found the common cold, and had developed a vaccine for preventive inoculation. Dr. Pfeiffer willingly agreed to let the Abel group test his results.

POLITICAL CONTROL SCORED BY BANKER

Need More Statesmanship of Business Kind Especially Dealing With Tariff.

Quebec, June 10.—(AP)—Speaking before the New York State Bankers Association, John G. Lonsdale, president of the American Bankers Association, today advocated removal of political control in governments from the place of prominence it now occupies.

"The less political control and the more business statesmanship we have among men, nations and governments," said Mr. Lonsdale, president of the Mercantile-Trust Co. of St. Louis, "the more quickly we shall arrive at the era of good will and understanding for which the world at large is now clamoring."

"If our big national issues, such as the tariff for instance, could be removed from political control and placed in command of impartial investigators and advisors who have no campaign pledges to keep, we eventually would have a measure to which we could point with pride. In its present form the tariff bill does not satisfy the people and I am certain it is a disappointment to our basic industries, including agriculture, unless radically changed, it will benefit only a few people at the expense of many."

ALIANO MENACED BY MAN HE KILLED, WITNESS DECLARES

Front Street, Hartford, Proprietor of Speakeasies Goes on Trial Before Three Judges—Witness Testifies That Murder Victim Said "I Am Going To Kill You Before Night" On Day of the Shooting.

Hartford, June 10.—(AP)—Sebastiano Aliano, 35, alleged proprietor of a chain of east side speakeasies went on trial today in Superior Court before three judges for the slaying on December 4, 1929 of Alfonso Minniti, 23, one of his employees.

The slaying, said by police to have been caused by a bootleg feud, precipitated a Grand Jury investigation into liquor traffic and charges of corruption in Hartford county. This jury which has not as yet completed its inquiry indicted Aliano for first degree murder in the Minniti slaying on January 17, two weeks after it undertook its investigation.

Before Three Judges
Aliano's trial opened before Judge John Richards Booth, Judge Carl Foster and Judge Frederick M. Peasley. The prosecution was in charge of Hugh M. Alcorn, state attorney, while Thomas J. Spellacy appeared as chief defense counsel.

The shooting occurred in front of a speakeasy owned by Aliano. Minniti died several hours later in a hospital.

Following an extensive search Aliano was located in Brooklyn, N. Y., turned over to Hartford police by his attorney.

Members of the Grand Jury which is conducting the liquor probe occupied reserved seats in the center of the courtroom today.

All other seats in the room were occupied by witnesses and spectators.

The opening of the trial. Mr. Spellacy secured an order from the court that all of the state's witnesses, except professional men, be excluded from the courtroom while one is testifying.

Alfonso Minniti testified that Aliano said to Aliano on the day of the shooting:

"I am going to kill you before tonight," Minniti, he said, accused Aliano of being a stool pigeon. The witness said that he saw Aliano in a store at 419 Front street when he heard a shot. He looked out a window, saw Minniti lying on the ground and Aliano's automobile was nearby.

Called Stool Pigeon.
Fortunato Capucci who was employed in the front street shop at the time of the shooting said he had heard Minniti earlier in the day call Aliano "mean" and a "stool pigeon." After the shooting he saw Aliano walking slowly away from the spot. Minniti, the witness said, got on his feet and fell again and then said, "Ned has killed me."

Capucci did not see any gun in Aliano's hand as the latter walked away. When he was shown a gun in court today he said it looked like a spot. Minniti, the witness said, was kept under the court house store at 285 Front street. He did not know who owned the gun.

Dr. Henry Costello, medical examiner, testified to an autopsy on the body of Minniti at Mount Sinai hospital and found two bullet wounds in Minniti's left arm, a third wound in his left chest between the eighth and ninth ribs and on the right side the doctors found a steel jacketed bullet. Cause of death was a gun shot wound from the spot. Dr. Costello produced the .38 caliber bullet and a finger ring taken from Minniti's left hand.

On cross-examination Dr. Costello said presumably the bullet was from a smokeless powder cartridge. There were no powder marks on any of the wounds. The three wounds were made by one bullet. Mr. Spellacy cited some authorities on legal medicine as to absence of powder marks, with whom Dr. Costello agreed.

SIMON REPORT ON INDIA IS MADE PUBLIC

British Expert Suggests Eventual Dominion Status—Is Up to People Themselves To Adopt New Customs.

London, June 10.—(AP)—Great Britain's problem in India will be before the Empire in a complete statement and as exhaustive a form as it has ever been presented; to the recommendations of the investigators for a solution of the problem it will be necessary to wait, however, until June 24.

On that day the commission on Indian statutory reform headed by Sir John Simon will publish the second volume of the report of their two and one half years inquiry into Indian affairs. The first volume of the report, dealing with the situation in India, is that made public today.

A Prediction. There was perhaps, in the final paragraph of today's offering, a promise of what the second volume—of recommendations—will contain. The commissioners, to whom the long accustoming to self government, are bound to sympathize with this movement (Indian Nationalism).

"We are pledged to help India along in her way, and constructive effort is needed. In our view the most formidable of the evils from which India is suffering have their roots in social and economic customs of long standing, which can only be remedied by the action of peoples themselves. They are much less likely to be remedied if the blame for their continuance can be put, however reasonably, on others."

"We desire to see the forces of public opinion which exist in India concentrated and strengthened for the practical work of reform. It is only when the difficulties of constructive policy are really faced, that the inadequacy of general phrases begins to be realized."

The first volume of the report is an exhaustive compendium of facts, ranging from discussion of population, racial and religious factors to treatment of possibilities of "dyarchy" which is the name given to the forms under which the rule will be allowed as great a degree of self government as is possible.

India's Population. The report brings out that India has about 320,000,000 population in a territory not 20 times as large as Great Britain. That there are 222 languages spoken and that not over 2,500,000 persons are literate in English, which is the nearest to being an empire wide language. Impassable enmity of Hindus, in the majority in India and of Mohammedans, a big minority, is treated at length. The Christians, with 4,000,000 converts, are credited with being the third largest sect.

Special attention was given by the commissioners to the northwest frontier province, which has been the scene during the past few weeks of incursions by neighboring tribesmen, who have been told that British authority no longer exists.

The final chapters of the report are devoted to education—which it is said, must be given further impetus—and to development of public opinion.

Indian Liberal comment on the Simon commission report was severely critical. Sir Phiroze Sethna, president of the Liberal Federation, said that reading between the lines he was tempted to believe that the recommendations still to be made will be such as to give India as little as possible and to keep Great Britain's hold upon her as long as she can.

Sir Chimanlal Setalvad, member of the Bombay Council, said it was fairly clear that the commission's recommendations would be of a character which would never satisfy Indian National aspirations.

H. P. Mody, president of the mill owners association, said he was certain that the recommendations would have to be of a most advanced character if they were to receive the slightest consideration in the country.

SIMON'S COMMENT. Fritwell, Oxfordshire, Eng., June 10.—(AP)—Sir John Simon, during an interview at his home today, expressed pleasure at the prominence which the newspapers have given to the commission's report on India. He said: "I think the novel plan of producing the report in two volumes with an interval between has been abundantly justified because it is evident the public does intend to consider the conditions of the Indian problem so as to be able to form conclusions as to the recommendations which are to be put forward a fortnight hence."

"I want to emphasize that the unity of the report really represents this, that it is the work of my colleagues as well as myself because we have all done our full share in producing it."

STATE COURT DECISION IS UPHELD IN ITALY

New Haven, June 10.—(AP)—A verdict handed down in Civil Superior Court here in 1922, awarding the New England Iron Works of this city and Hamden damages of $6,760.12 against Giuseppe Pugliasi, a former plumber, builder and contractor here, has been upheld by the Italian Court of Appeals at Messina Italy.

A transcript of the Italian court's decision, handed down March 13, was received here today by a member of the law firm of Brooks and Brooks, which represented the plaintiff. The case assumed an international aspect when Pugliasi fled New Haven in 1916, a plaintiff's claim being considered by the late Donald Warner, state referee. Subsequently his decision awarding the plaintiff damages of $6,760.12 for labor and materials furnished the defendant for construction of an apartment house here was confirmed by the Superior Court.

When Pugliasi was found to have left the country, action was started in Italy where he had gone to live.

J., June 10.—(AP)—Release on bail of Albert Saunders, 24, a waiter in a Camden barroom who was held as material witness in the death of Felice Solury, 24, a sailor of Waterbury, Conn., will be asked today by his attorney. Saunders, with Rolfe Waterhouse, 22, Samuel Wertz, 27, and three women, all of Camden, were held in connection with Solury's death from a blow on the head received in a fight in a South Camden cafe Saturday.

Two women identified Saunders as the man who struck Solury, but Saunders denied this. A charge of murder was first placed against him by Rocco Palese, assistant prosecutor yesterday, but this was later withdrawn in place of one charging him as being a material witness.

OFFER $40,000 REWARD FOR REPORTER'S SLAYER

He himself became the eleventh victim. Every branch of law enforcement promised full and unrelenting prosecution of the hunt for Lingie's slayer. Commissioner Russell said: "I'd give my two eyes to solve the murder of Al Lingie. Nothing that I can do will be left undone."

Chief of Detective Siege who also was intimately acquainted with Lingie said: "I haven't much but I would give all I have to be able to arrest the man who killed him. My time in the department is short probably not more than nine months more and every minute I spend in the department I will devote toward the apprehension of Al Lingie's slayer."

Sweeping orders for a new roundup of gangsters were issued immediately after the body of Lingie was identified. Several arrests followed but none of the prisoners was believed to be the man who fired the single shot into the back of Lingie's head.

One man arrested was John J. "Boss" McLaughlin, former legislator, who police learned had sought Lingie's aid in starting a gambling racket.

The slain newspaperman was married and the father of two small children. Lingie was instrumental in tracking down eight robbers over a period of as many years for Arthur Cutten, prominent grain trader and personal friend. This circumstance held place today in a multitude of theories on motives for the reporter's slaying.

Mr. Cutten vowed to spare neither time nor expense to bring justice to the robbers. He sought the aid of the court in the capture of the work which eventually landed eight of the criminals in prison. The ninth was expected to be captured shortly.

NORTH END FETE OPENS TOMORROW

Carnival Equipment Being Set Up Today—Many Big Attractions.

Setting up of the "rides" of the Howard Everett Carnival, which is to show at the grounds of the Community Club at the North End under the club's auspices, was well under way today. The carnival is to open tomorrow night and run the rest of the week.

Trucks were busy today carting the equipment for the "rides" from the sidetracked freight cars. It will be arranged in a semi-circle. The rides said to be the largest carried by any traveling carnival company, consists of a Ferris wheel, a "whip," a "merry mixup" and a "merry-go-round." The first to be erected is the "merry mixup."

This has a spread of 90 feet with a 20 foot rise and has a bridge iron base. It will accommodate 36 customers. The "whip" is a big one, 90 by 50 feet. The merry-go-round has 40 horses, three in a row and all jumpers. Children are carefully strapped on.

At the end of the circle is the set-up of the big free outdoor set of Edward Dobell, who rides a bicycle on a wire forty feet in the air amid a fireworks display, his own person being decorated with no less than 96 colored electric lights.

The bases for all the rides were being put in position this morning and this afternoon erection work was well advanced. The equipment will be ready for testing early tomorrow. Lumber was being hauled onto the grounds this morning and this afternoon a number of the concession booths—all of which will be operated by local people—were well along toward completion. It is expected that they will all be finished and decorated early tomorrow.

Another attraction was added today when arrangements were made with Kemp's music store for the establishment of a big radio reception set which will pick up the broadcast of the world's heavyweight champion fight and amplify it so that it can be heard all over the grounds.

ATHLETES RUINED BY BOOZE, HE SAYS

Don Singer Tells Lions Liq- uor Has Been Downfall of Many Promising Men.

Speaking before the Manchester Lions Club at its weekly get-together at the Hotel Sheridan last night, Don Singer, rated as an All-American football player when at the University of Pennsylvania and now connected with the Goodyear Tire Company in the capacity of salesman at Hartford, declared that liquor had been the ruin of many famous athletes. During the twenty minutes Singer addressed the Manchester organization, he spoke chiefly on football because that is the sport in which he is most versed.

He blamed the Alumni for a large amount of the drinking that takes place among college athletes. He said that they even succeed in getting into the locker rooms after big games and that they almost force the "idols to take a drink." In addition, most of the liquor is "rotten booze," he declared. Singer said that in many cases this marked the beginning of the downfall of a young and promising athlete.

RAIN POSTPONES GARDENS TOUR

Members of Local Club Hold Meeting at Recreation Center Last Evening.

Garden club members were obliged to postpone their tour of local gardens last evening and instead held the regular monthly business meeting at the School Street Recreation Center. Considerable routine business connected with the May plant sale and the June flower show held last week at the Masonic Temple was transacted.

An interesting feature of the evening's program was the visit of three boys representing the Barnard Garden club, with their teacher, Miss Edith Eaton. Each one of the trio, Anthony Gryk, Gordon Frazer and John Nutt made a little speech, explaining the aims of their school garden club and their enjoyment in the work. They thanked the Manchester Garden club for its donation this spring of five dollars for the purchase of seeds for the school gardeners, and invited the grown-ups to attend their spring exhibit to be held at the School Street Recreation Center auditorium Thursday and Friday evenings of this week at about 7 o'clock.

The tour of gardens was postponed to Monday evening of next week, with Miss Mary Cheney's garden as the starting point. Adjacent gardens will be viewed and any of the following gardens may be visited by groups at any time during the evening: Mrs. Mabel Rogers on Center street, Mrs. Albert Hemingway on Summit street, Mrs. Fred Robinson, Porter street; Mrs. Adeline Miner, East Center street; Mrs. Lillian Bowers North Elm street, Miss Mary Palmer, Hudson street.

FAIRFIELD BANDIT KILLED IN NASHUA

Joseph Agofsky, Wanted in Three States, Dies After Being Shot by Police.

Nashua, N. H., June 10.—(AP)—Joseph Agofsky, 22, Fairfield, Conn., alleged bandit, died today at Memorial hospital from wounds inflicted by police bullets yesterday while he was attempting to escape arrest. Two companions are in custody here.

The shooting of Agofsky occurred in the Pine Hill road section after police had captured his companions, Frank Agofsky, 18, a brother, and Harry Cameron Young, Methuen, Mass. The trio concealed their identity under fictitious names for several hours after their arrest.

An automobile in which Frank Agofsky and Young were found sleeping, with rifles across their knees, contained, police said, large quantities of stolen goods. Joseph Agofsky was not with the other two when they were arrested.

Police found Joseph in a search of the woods in the district and ordered him to surrender. When he fled instead, they fired on him. Although he was wounded, he escaped then only to stumble out of the woods an hour later to surrender. He had been wounded in the back and in a leg.

Have Confessions. Police said they had confessions from the trio to a holdup at Ayer, Mass., in which $1,500 worth of loot was taken. They also confessed, police said, to having fired shots at an officer in Westford, Mass., a week ago.

Three weeks ago following an exchange of gunfire, Joseph Agofsky eluded officers in the woods at Stamford, Conn. He was wanted in Fairfield county, Conn., and in Massachusetts for a series of gasoline station robberies and automobile thefts.

WOMAN FLIER TRYING FOR ENDURANCE MARK

Le Bourget, France, June 10.—(AP)—Madame Maryse Bastie, pretty little French brunette and noted as an aerial acrobat, passed the half-way mark today in an airplane endurance flight by which she is seeking to regain the world record recently taken from her by a young naturalized Russian girl, Lena Bernstein.

Madame Bastie learned her air acrobatics from Maurice Droughin, famous flier, who was killed testing his trans-Atlantic plane two years ago. She has done all kinds of air stunts and made parachute jumps but has abandoned these in preference to acrobatics and record trials.

Madame Bastie took the air at 8:18 p. m. last night in a small 40-horse power monoplane with enough gas for 40 hours. She hopes to stay aloft until noon tomorrow in an effort to beat Mile. Bernstein's record of 35 hours, 46 minutes, 55 seconds. "All going well," say notes she has dropped from time to time. The weather was excellent.

DRUNKS ON DECREASE IN BRITAIN'S CAPITAL

Boston, June 10.—(AP.)—Quoting testimony before a royal commission on the decrease of drunkenness in England and Wales, George W. Wickersham said in address here last night: "One magistrate said the decline in drunkenness had been so steady during post-war years that he had suggested to the chief superintendent of police that it was rather unkind to bring an offender into the Police Court. He ought to be taken to a museum."

EIGHTH'S DIRECTORS IN FINAL SESSION

Oakland District Residents Ask for Fire Protection; Assured Of Co-operation.

The June meeting of the directors of the Eighth School and Utilities district, the last meeting of the fiscal year for the directors was held last night at the fire house on Main street, with five of the directors present.

The tax collector's report was reviewed by the board and exemptions asked by Collector Joseph Chartier in the amount of $97 were voted. The collector also reported the restoration to the collection list of taxes in the amount of $104.71.

Reports showed that the district had sold and deeded the property on Woodland street, taken over for taxes were received and that the chemical truck of the district was being painted at a local paint shop. It is expected that the truck will be back in active service in about ten days.

The president reported that the truck of the utility district was now being stored in his garage at a reduction of storage charge of $2.00. A new contract was entered into for compensation and accident insurance for the firemen of the district at a reduced premium.

A resident of the Oakland district was present at the meeting in the interest of securing the co-operation with this district in the event of fire breaking out in that section. It was pointed out that this property owner that the refusal of one of the officials of the district to allow the fire truck to go to a fire in that vicinity a few months ago, had prompted the proposed plan of a group of the residents to ask for a paid fire upon which this department would respond to appeals for assistance in case of fire. The directors pointed out to the group the control of the apparatus had been taken from its former repose and power given to Chief Coleman to use his discretion in responding to request for aid outside of the district.

The plan for co-operation will follow the present plans of the Manchester Water Co. to allocate their present hydrants in the Oakland section.

NOVEL PASTIME, BUT THEY PASSED IT UP

First Name They Read Didn't Exactly Add to Their Enthusiasm for Sport.

Manchester boys have hit upon a new stunt to while away the hours. They congregate at a quiet phone and after pooling certain names they proceed to call up the sweetest name in the phone book and talking to the person called, they try to get the girls to talk and in many cases the voice of "paw paw" on the other end took all the spirit out of the occasion.

Any way, some one suggested cutting the phone book and taking the name on the upper left hand corner of the page to call up and "chin" awhile. The book was produced, the cut made and the first name that appeared was the following: "Manchester Town Of-Chief Of Police."

YALE UNIVERSITY GETS ANTIQUITIES

Fourteen Cases of Rare Objects Arrive from Mesopotamia; To Be Exhibited.

New Haven, June 10.—(AP)—Fourteen cases of antiquities, part of the results of the Yale excavations during the past year at Dura-Europos in Mesopotamia, have arrived at the university from Syria and will be put on exhibition at the Yale gallery of Fine Arts before commencement.

Dura, which on the Euphrates, has been covered by the sand of the desert for over 2,200 years. In collaboration with the French Academy, and with the permission of the Syrian government, excavation work on the city, an ancient Assyrian fortress, later replaced by a Macedonian military colony, has been going on for the past two years.

Work Successful. The season's work during the winter months at Dura was most successful. The University announced today. Part of the temple of Artemis, partially excavated previously by Professor F. Cumont of the French Academy, has been uncovered, and beside it a temple of Atargatis and Hadad. Atargatis was the Syrian goddess of fertility and Hadad the Syrian sun god. Excavations were made in private houses and in the towers of city walls. This work brought to light material of the greatest importance in determining the history of the city and the religious cults of Syria about the time of the birth of Christ.

At the end of the season a division of the finds was made between the Syrian government and Yale. To Yale's share fell a splendid bas-relief of Atargatis and Hadad, a copy of which is believed to be the great cult statues at Baalbek.

WICKERSHAM

If George W. Wickersham was seeking to bring a measure of satisfaction to any group in the country, or to make clear to any group the problem of prohibition, the conclusion is just about unavoidable that in his address before the National Conference of Social Work at Boston last night he registered a signal failure.

Mr. Wickersham made it very apparent that he does not believe you can bring about temperance by statute law; that legislative enactments which have no support by the majority of the people are futile; that federal prohibition has done a lot of harm by substituting ineffectual force for education and moral suasion—but from anything he said there is no suggestion that he would advocate the frank and honorable course of repealing the laws and starting over again on that campaign of education which, according to his own words, is the only method of bringing about general temperance.

As nearly as we can gather from reading the reports of his address Mr. Wickersham's proposal is to leave the prohibition laws on the statute books, inactive and useless, until such time as a new generation shall have been taught to respect them and recognize their virtues.

For a lawyer of Wickersham's standing and for the chairman of a commission charged with the epochal task of showing the way to law observance this is a pretty feeble suggestion. It is without merit in practicability and without virtue in its moral aspect.

Perhaps, with his customary subtlety, Mr. Wickersham really intended to produce a very different effect. Perhaps he intended to show by indirection that federal prohibition is a flop—that even the dearest friends of legal regulation are forced to conclude that the prohibitory laws came far ahead of preparedness for their reception. If so, Mr. Wickersham has sadly confused today with yesterday. The time has long passed when there is any need to ease in such ideas.

Wickersham, on the contrary, leads all the way up to the conclusion that prohibition is a mistake and a fizzle—and then inferentially advises us to leave it on the statute books, to enforce so much of it as is convenient, and try to teach the people that, in spite of its ruinous results, its corruption and its injustices, it is a fine thing—to the end that in a hundred years or so the nation will come to respect and love it.

We can think of nobody who will be pleased with that brand of intellectual opportunism.

WISE GUYS

Young Joseph Agofsky's spectacular career as a hide-and-seek bad man and crook didn't last very long. He had only about three months of it and now he is ready for the burying ground and oblivion. A cop's bullet put a New Hampshire end to the Fairfield boy's fun of being a bandit, holding up policemen and getting his name and his picture in the papers.

It is to be doubted whether the thrills that Agofsky got out of his short jamboree of crime were worth what he has missed. If we recall correctly Joseph was only a little more than 20. In the natural order of events he had fifty years coming to him. It is a fascinating thing to imagine what this world will be like 50 years hence. Goodness knows what experiences one may lose by popping out of it just now. Maybe Agofsky has lost a chance to take part in a war which will make the last one look like a picnic. Maybe he has lost a chance to travel twenty times faster than he ever drove his stolen automobiles. Maybe he could have joined an expedition, some time, to make a raid on the filling stations on Mars. Maybe, if he had been patient, he could have become the big shot of all racketeers in a dry United States of Africa.

All these bright young men who think they have done something clever when they give up work and go out on their muscle may be making terrible suckers of themselves, after all—throwing away their lives and getting into the category of dead ones for a fiddling little shoe-string of small change whereas the future may have held glorious possibilities in the fields of crime and excitement.

And they call themselves wise guys!

THE AGE LIMIT

A writer with an investigating turn of mind has been inquiring into the ages of the heads of the great industrial corporations of America. He has compiled some interesting figures. Ninety-nine of the largest concerns in the country were considered. Of these only two are ruled by men under 40. Nine of the industrial chieftains are between 40 and 50. Thirty-two of the "big bosses" are between 50 and 60. The largest group is that whose ages run from 60 to 70, there being 35 of these. Eighteen industrial heads are between 70 and 80, two are more than 80 but under 90 and one has reached the latter mark.

Here then we have no less than 88 out of a total of 99 men, whose decisions determine the course of American industrial affairs, who are more than 50 years old, and more than half of the total number are upward of 60.

Yet among the great industries captained by these elderly men are at least a few—it is to be suspected a considerable number—which draw the age line against employees at 35 or 40.

If three score and ten years have left a corporation's chief executive still, among all its thousands of workers, the one best qualified to be in supreme command while two score and ten have made a machine hand or a blacksmith or a pattern maker necessarily unfit for his job, what strange force has been at work bedeviling a law of nature in favor of the "big boss?"

What would the ancients think if the stockholders of their various concerns should somehow or other succeed in establishing a corporation by-law forbidding an executive from continuing in office after he was 45?

It's a curious philosophy which figures it out that a man may be capable of carrying on his shoulders the responsibility for the success or failure of a billion dollar corporation when he is seventy-five but that nobody that old—or twenty years younger—can be trusted to run a milling machine.

MISTAKEN PREMISES

The venture of an English syndicate which plans to take great parties of Americans for sea-going "boat rides" on huge liners supplied with fine liquor and all the ingredients of whoopee may not prove to be so big a success as its promoters hope. It would probably be easy enough to put over, so far as the laws are concerned, for there is nothing to prevent a British ship operating as a floating cafe outside the twelve mile limit. But the assumption that flocks of Americans with plenty of money would go to sea for a week at a time, with no particularly objective but to go a-sailing and lap up booze, is based, of course, on the theory that the Yankees can't get their quality liquor any other way.

This sort of thing used to operate all right enough for a day at a time when it was the practice in the big sea coast cities to make the saloons and beer gardens close up on Sundays and when the coastwise excursions on steamboats and barges thrived because of the plenty and quality of the beer. But that was a poor-folks proposition.

The well-to-do didn't patronize such affairs. They didn't have to. And they don't have to go to sea for a week in a British liner, right now, merely to quench a thirst for Char-donnay or ten year old rye. They can do that in their own apartments and country houses.

We greatly fear that the enterprising Englishmen who are going to put their money into the chartering of those big ships and into costly "cellars" and contracts with entertainers have been reading the statements of professional drys and really believe that good liquor is hard to get in the United States, even when one has the price. How's that for an odd notion?

DIAGNOSIS?

"If one considers two elements in space, one compares them so far only as regards size. But there is a further element which comes into it that might give the clue and it is this: You can also compare those two elements in the matter of direction. Space will have to be regarded as a primary and matter derived from it as a secondary result. That is to say, space now has turned around and is eating up matter. Space is now having its revenge."

Professor Einstein says this idea came to him in his sleep while he was sick in bed.

We have known several gentlemen to have ideas that would tie this one if they didn't beat it. One dreamed that a pink imp with Mexican opal eyes had come to him and commanded him to eat his shoes—and he was busy gnawing at the mortar coated heel of one brogue when the corridor man in the police station discovered him. Another dreamed that he was the reincarnation of Yankee Sullivan and had to lick all the other prize fighters of history in five minutes. He broke every knuckle but one on the cell walls and the station house doctor had to give him a hypodermic of heroin—which was what they did in such cases in those days.

Funny ideas come with the poppley-lals.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BY RODNEY DUTCHER, NEA Service Writer

Washington, June 10.—It isn't so much the amount of money a candidate spends on a senatorial primary that counts as it is the way he got it and the way he spent it.

Which is why no one expects anything very exciting to come out of the Senate's investigation into campaign expenditures this year. Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick winning the Republican nomination in Illinois, spent more than $250,000, which is considerably higher than the $198,000 that got Senator Truman H. Newberry of Michigan into so much trouble; but the circumstances surrounding the case make it unlikely that there will be any serious effort to keep her out of the Senate, provided that she wins this fall over her Democratic opponent, J. Ham Lewis.

Only 36 Cents a Vote. To begin with, Newberry's $198,000 analyzes down to an expenditure of about $1.69 for each vote that he got. Mrs. McCormick's much larger sum figures up to only 36 cents a vote—which is hardly high enough to stir any senator to indignation. In passing, it might be mentioned that Boss Vare's $800,000 expenditure in Pennsylvania, which kept him out of the Senate, came to $1.34 a vote.

Moreover, no one has hinted that there was any improper use of Mrs. McCormick's money in the primary. Besides that, she contributed the money herself, and hence cannot be accused of putting herself under obligations to big campaign fund contributors.

In other words, it hasn't yet been proved that a man can't pay his way into the Senate. Theoretically, each case before the Senate itself has been decided on its merits. The Senate can bar anyone it likes for any reason at all, but it has set no standard for admission as far as expenses are concerned.

The fact is often overlooked that senators-elect who have had their troubles following large campaigns by the Senate have not been barred by the Senate unless the collection and distribution of the money were in some way tainted by corruption or the odor of it.

THE BOOK SURVEY

BY BRUCE CATTON, NEA Service Writer

If you ever sat up nights as a small boy to read stories about cowboys and Indians in tall wild westerns you ought to go for "The Last Ruster," by Le. Sage, in a big way. In fact, you ought to anyway. The book is one of the most thoroughly interesting books I have seen this year.

Lee Sake is—or was—just about what the name of his book says—the last ruster. Born in the "Robber's Roost," a remote mountain valley in Utah, in the late '80s, he grew up as a hard-riding, quick-shooting cowboy of the old tradition. As a boy he saw gun fights and outlaw escapades enough to fill a book. As a young man he took to wandering all over the west.

He lived with an Indian tribe, became a cow puncher, broke wild bronchos for a living, tried cattle rustling, spent a few months as a moonshiner, fought and drank and rode all the way from below the Rio Grande to the Canadian north-west—lived hard, in a word, and outgrew his time, so that at present, still a young man, he is quietly teaching young people how to ride very tame horses in a Salt Lake City riding academy, and making his money in a safe and sane way.

His book is priceless. It is just about twice as interesting and exciting as any fictionalized "romance of the cow country"; and it is, besides, an extremely valuable bit of history. Le. Sage tells of an era that has gone forever; an era almost unbelievable in its color, its dash and its hardness, an era which seems to be aeons away from us but which actually ended only yesterday.

Sage dictated his book, and his language is breezy and racy as the old west itself. There are some very good black-and-white illustrations by Paul S. Clowes. All in all, this book is one of the best of the year, and I don't see how you can fail to enjoy it immensely.

It is published by Little, Brown and Co., and costs $3.

An Absorbing Tale About Bandits and Soldiers "Devil Drums" by Clements Ripley, gets about as much excitement between its covers as the most exciting reader could ask. This novel deals with the adventures of a soldier in the U. S. Cavalry who went to Siberia during the World War with the American army, got paid off there after the armistice and stuck around to see if he couldn't find some adventure. He could, and did, with a bang. Bandits, roving armies of "white" Russians, Bolshevik marauders and occasionally Russian soldiers chase each other across the account of his wanderings with a dizzying speed.

Mr. Ripley has turned out an adventurous tale that "clicks" all the way through. If you get tired of weighty, serious novels immense amount of senatorial prejudice against him. "And there was Senator Newberry of Michigan. His expenditure in the 1918 primary only came to $198,000. The Senate finally let him in, ensuring him for such a large outlay, and eventually he resigned. But he wasn't barred. Even so, he had been indicted and convicted on charges of violating the federal corrupt practices act of 1910, and although the supreme court finally upset the conviction, the taint of criminality which had been associated with the case helped build up the opposition against him.

FAVOR GUILLOTINE Paris—French prisoners still believe that the heads of murderers should be cut off on the guillotine. According to a recent straw vote taken among prisoners throughout the country this was the case. "Capital punishment should not be abolished; it should always be imposed where murders are committed by men," is the prisoners' opinion.

The mayor of Providence, R. I., has made the first formal protest against the official population statistics of his city. He just can't believe his census.

that studiously examine the tragedy and frustration of human life, this book will come to you as a welcome relief. It doesn't pretend to be anything but an adventure yarn; but in its own class it rates just about 100 per cent.

Brewer and Warren are the publishers. The book will cost you $2. A Round-the-World Trip In a 30-Foot Cutter

"In quest of the Sun" is another book for those who like to get their adventure in a safe arm chair. It is Alain Gerbault's tale of his amazing cruise around the world in the tiny cutter "Fire-crest," a matter-of-fact, unemotional story of a very daring exploit.

Gerbault, a youthful French tennis star, built a sailboat—a little craft some 30 feet long—and set out to sail around the world all by himself. He succeeded, getting home something like five years after he started out. He had many adventures, was shipwrecked once and got into enough perilous situations to turn his hair gray before he landed and he idled for months among the fabled islands of the South Seas; but don't imagine that there is any Richard Halliburton taint to his book.

He made his cruise because he wanted to and wrote his book as a sort of afterthought. Not once does he enlarge upon his adventures or remark that things were "glamorous." He leaves most of his story untold. You have to do a prodigious amount of reading between the lines to go along with him.

In fact, it is this very reticence that makes the book worth while. The genuine adventurer is that way. The things that he goes to seek are not things that can be put down on paper. He doesn't pose with one eye on the news-reel photographers. There is something in his heart that calls him out, but it cannot be described. He indulges in no talk about the "red gods" or "the wanderlust." Only the fakes do that. Gerbault is the real article.

Doubleday, Doran and Company are offering "In Quest of the Sun" at $2.50.

A War Nurse Tells About War and a Love Affair "War Nurse" purports to be the diary of an American girl who served as a nurse in army hospitals in France during the World War. I say "purports to be," because it sounds just a wee mite like me. It may be the literal truth all the way through, but it doesn't quite sound like it. It reads like a not-too-well-done novel.

In the first part of the book there is a good deal of the customary stuff about blood and sneezing and horrid things that the author's love affair with an aviator; and from that point on the war is incidental.

"War Nurse" is getting a big balmy, but it doesn't deserve it. The Cosmopolitan Book Corporation is the publisher. The price is $2.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Stimulating Foods) Questions.—J. G. F. asks:—"Why is it that I do not feel strengthened or energized after a meal which does not contain starchy food? I am much underweight." Answer: All carbohydrates including both sugars and starches may be said to be stimulating foods. When you first give up the use of such foods you may notice this lack of stimulation, but such apparent weakness will soon disappear if you will use a properly balanced diet containing sufficient proteins. Carnivorous animals seem to have plenty of energy and never use starches or sugars. It is possible for your weight to become normal without carbohydrates, but there may not be any serious objection to your using some if you will learn how to combine them properly with other foods.

IN NEW YORK New York, June 10.—Scattered paragraphs from the notebook of a Manhattan growler.

Not so many months ago, a young man driven prematurely gray by the necessity of daily columnings was writing pieces for the United Press about the romantic and comic goings on in this great city. Sam Love was, and still is, his name—and around Huntington, W. Va., there are lots of people who will tell you that "they knew him when."

But such is the infection of association that the tables are now turned and Sam has had his moment in the spotlight, with photographers clicking cameras and reporters writing notes on each other's cuffs. For he has taken to casting dreamy eyes on far horizons from under his white starched skipper's hat has himself turned explorer. Thus the young man who interviewed a hundred nomadic adventurers becomes one himself. He's off for the Guayas river, somewhere in Ecuador, with notebooks in his pockets and sharpened pencils over his right ear.

Of course he will one day write a book about all this and, heaven forbid, will go about making lectures. And someone else on his old job will write stories about him. So pardon me while I chuckle at the topos-turveness of things.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCLOY

BRONCHITIS After having passed through the season when colds are plentiful, there is bound to be an increase in the number of those who are affected with bronchitis. With most people, this disease is not severe, but it is uncomfortable and prevents proper relaxation because of the coughing and raising of mucus.

Children and very old people are apt to suffer most. Chronic bronchitis is nearly always preceded by a cold or by an attack of acute bronchitis. The acute attacks are usually over within two weeks. However, the tendency is for chronic bronchitis to remain in a mild form.

The acute attack usually begins with a cold in the head. The irritation extends to the throat so that the patient is hoarse. There may be some fever and loss of appetite and pains in the muscles. The inflammation spreads from the larynx down into the bronch, which are the two large forked tubes conveying the air to the lungs. The case is true bronchitis when these large bronchial tubes have become inflamed and their mucous membrane becomes swollen, irritated and actively engaged in throwing off discharges of mucus and pus material.

The patient begins to recover when the cough loosens and brings up the mucus and mucopurulent material. Chronic bronchitis usually brings about a thickening of the bronchial tubes and is therefore more difficult to cure than the acute bronchitis, although both diseases will usually yield to very simple measures.

It is usually a good plan to begin the treatment with a few weeks' fast on orange juice, using a glassful of juice every two hours during the day, and one or two enemas daily. This assists in cleansing the blood stream so that less irritating material is discharged through the bronchial tubes. Other eliminative treatments such as shower baths and skin friction rubs are helpful, and it is a good plan to use hot applications over the chest and back. The deep therapy lamp is very useful for this purpose as it brings about a greater flow of blood through the lungs and bronchial tubes.

After the fast the diet must be very carefully regulated so that the amount of acid-forming foods is held to a minimum. The best treatments are achieved if the starches and sugars are used sparingly or not at all for a time. The foods which leave an alkaline ash should predominate in the after diet so that the alkalinity of the blood stream will be increased. By persisting on this diet for as long as necessary the patient may be sure of freeing himself from the excretion of catarrhal mucus through the bronchial tubes.

Speaking of which reminds me that they do say that a certain Colonel Lindbergh has netted a quarter of a million in the "street," thanks to tips from his wife's daddy, Dwight Morrow, who was a Morgan partner once upon a time. Anita Loos, who used to do acrobatic dances, got back from Europe just in time to grab a train for Hollywood, where she's going in for serious drama, having all but stopped a show earlier in the Broadway season. . . . A Colorful Closeup Personality Story on One of the Most Interesting Figures in Today's News— MORROW—FROM POOR BOY TO MORGAN'S PARTNER

New Jersey Senatorial Candidate, Now in Nation's Spotlight, Worked Way Through College, Took First Job at $50 a Month and Steadily Rose to Millions

Some Morrow Anecdotes

One of the most revealing anecdotes told about Dwight Morrow has to do with his remarkable powers of persuasion, even as a boy.

Back in his native West Virginia, years ago, a corner lot baseball game was in progress and one small urchin batted the ball over a fence, smashing the flower pots of an irascible old lady whose chief affection in life was her garden. Awd and frightened, the boys debated on who should go for the ball and suffer the certain penalty.

"Til go!" volunteered young Morrow.

In a few minutes he was back.

"Why, she's a nice old lady," he said. He not only had the ball, but also three big sugar cookies she had given him.

One of Wall Street's legends is Morrow's absentmindedness, probably brought about by his deep absorption in important matters with consequent disregard for details.

Once a friend saw him in the Grand Central Station, fumbling in his pockets with a worried look.

"What's the matter—lost your ticket?" the friend inquired.

"Worse than that," Morrow replied. "I've forgotten where I was going."

Morrow has always had a great affection for Amherst, his alma mater, and has been a trustee of the college for years. This devotion often caused him to miss important meetings when he was a Morgan partner; once J. P. Morgan is said to have remarked: "Dwight, I'll give you $100,000 if you will give up that Amherst trusteeship!" Morrow declined.

Washington.—A couple of decades ago Wall Street was a bugaboo to frighten all good citizens of the democracy, and the house of J. P. Morgan was a fearsome lair of capitalists viewed with deep suspicion by the common man from one coast to the other.

Today a former partner in this same house of Morgan stands as one of the most popular public figures of the day. He has been ambassador to Mexico, member of an important diplomatic mission to Great Britain and now is a candidate for senator from New Jersey—and some people are wondering if he will not eventually be president of the United States.

The man, of course, is Dwight Whitney Morrow. And while the fact that a former Morgan partner could gain widespread public approval is partly due to the changing times in which great wealth is no longer regarded with grave suspicion, it is also due in large measure to the personality of Mr. Morrow himself.

Worked Way in College

His is the story of a boy who worked his way through college, who tackled New York practically penniless and took his first public approval is partly due to the changing times in which great wealth is no longer regarded with grave suspicion, it is also due in large measure to the personality of Mr. Morrow himself.

Morrow's story begins in the plain, middle class home where money was never over-abundant. He was born at Huntington, W. Va., on Jan. 11, 1873, the fourth of eight children of James Elmore Morrow, at that time president of Marshall College. When he was still young the family moved to Pittsburgh, where the father taught his first in the State Normal School and then in the public schools. The family income, it might be noticed, no time exceeded $2400 a year.

At 14, young Morrow was graduated from high school with honors. He spent the next four years working as an errand boy and clerk in the county treasurer's office at Pittsburgh.

The Morrow children wanted college educations, but money was scarce. So Dwight tried to get an appointment to West Point. He passed the examinations, but as an elder brother had already gone there his local congressman refused to appoint two boys from the same family. Coolidge's College Mate

In 1891, therefore, the young man entered Amherst College, working his way through by tutoring other students, and graduating in 1895 with high honors. His classmates voted him the member of the class "most likely to succeed"—one of the few cases on record where such a prophecy has come reasonably close to the mark. Morrow, incidentally, cast his vote for a campus friend named Calvin Coolidge.

After graduation Morrow worked in the office of the county clerk in Pittsburgh to earn money to go to Columbia Law School. He went through that institution, and upon graduation became a clerk with a leading New York law firm.

It was this firm's custom to require young clerks to work for nothing the first year for the privilege of studying and getting experience. Morrow, having no money to pay his board or buy clothes, was able to induce his employers to make an exception in his case, so he began at $50 a month. Seven years later he was made a partner in the firm. As a lawyer, Morrow did little court room work. He was a negotiator, an arranger, an expert advisor. As such he gained a wide experience in business matters, and in a comparatively short time was recognized throughout New York as a man of exceptional ability.

Enters Morgan's Firm

At this time Morrow was living in Englewood, N. J. Among his neighbors were a Henry Post Davison and a Thomas W. Lamont, both partners in the house of Morgan. They knew of Morrow's reputation as a lawyer; they also were struck by his forceful personality. The result was that in 1914, at the age of 41, Morrow was made a partner in that famous organization.

Soon the World War broke out, and the House of Morgan entered on a new phase, becoming money-lender to most of the world. Morrow quickly demonstrated his ability.

When America entered the war he was appointed to the Allied Boards of Transport and Supply, served as a civilian advisor at A. E. F. headquarters in France and was credited with playing a large part in keeping the great streams of men and materials flowing steadily to Europe. After the armistice he returned to America and dropped out of public life for a few years.

Ambassador to Mexico

In 1925 President Coolidge, his former college friend, made him chairman of a board to investigate military aircraft following General William Mitchell's fiery charges. In 1927 Coolidge named him ambassador to Mexico.

Morrow's services in Mexico are well known. He found relations strained almost to the breaking point; he left them better than they had ever been. He ended Mexico's fear of American dominance, helped choke off American jingo talk of conquest and won from President Rubio the comment: "I consider Ambassador Morrow one of the greatest diplomats in the world."

The first meeting between Morrow and Lindbergh, his future son-in-law, was chance as lots of important things are. Lindbergh, returning in triumph from France, was received by President Coolidge at the White House, and Morrow, having been chairman of the aircraft inquiry, was present.

When Lindy Met Anne

Their mutual interest in aviation led Lindbergh to visit the Morrow home in the summer of 1927 and it was on one of these occasions that Anne Morrow, returning from a visit to Cleveland, got her first glimpse of her future husband. Lindy was talking over the phone when Anne came in with her mother; there was a brief introduction and she hurried upstairs to unpack. The following Christmas, however, they met again when Ambassador Morrow entertained Lindbergh in his Mexico City home. There began the romance that ripened into their marriage.

Returning from Mexico last winter, Morrow went to London as an American delegate to the naval conference, where he played a leading part in bringing together groups with conflicting aims and had a large share in making a final agreement possible.

CHINESE WAR LORD IS FOUND FINALLY

Marshal Wu Pei-Fu Is Living in Seclusion Far from Any Big City.

Shanghai, June 10.—(AP)—Marshal Wu Pei-Fu, China's famous scholar and war lord who long since dropped out of public view, has been located.

The Chinese post office found him living in seclusion far in the hinterland of Szechuen province, a thousand miles from here and almost completely out of touch with the rest of the world.

When Marshal Wu and his armies were defeated three years ago by the Nationalist forces, the war lord went into retirement, isolating himself from China's political affairs.

Long Search.

Many unsuccessful attempts were made to find him. Even his closest friends had no idea where he was living or that he was alive. Recently a report from Peiping stated that he intended to return to the battlefield and join the forces of the rebel leaders. Marshal Feng Yu-Hsiang and General Yen Shi-Shan. This report proved groundless. A condemned criminal, an hour before he was led out to the execution grounds and shot, asked permission of his executioners to write a letter to Marshal Wu. The criminal, a serious-minded student had penned a piece of poetry dedicated to the war lord and wanted him to have the original manuscript.

How He Was Found.

The letter and manuscript were mailed to an inland town in Szechuen where it was rumored that Marshal Wu had taken up a temporary abode. They were returned. Recently a local magazine sent the marshal a subscription blank together with a copy of the magazine. They were addressed to Peiping and several weeks later a reply was received with the subscription blank filled out. And thus the post office succeeded in locating the leader after many influential had failed.

Let's hope that that Austrian who can play the piano with his feet is capable of producing sole-stirring music.

AMERICA AGAINST SMUGGLING TREATY

Says General Pact Is of No Great Assistance to the United States Now.

Geneva, June 10.—(AP)—The United States government today officially frowned on a general treaty for the suppression of smuggling...

"While smuggling, from the economic and fiscal point of view, the note said, is of importance to this government, a general treaty on the subject would probably not be of great assistance to the United States at this time.

"Diamonds, jewelry and other merchandise of small volume and great value constituted the chief commodities smuggled which affect our industries and defraud the government of revenues.

"The smuggling of liquor, which under the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution is a contraband commodity, has become an important smuggling problem, a problem, however, having but little relation to the economic and fiscal aspect of the general question of smuggling.

"Since the adoption of prohibition, bilateral treaties in regard to this question have been negotiated with fourteen countries. These so-called 'liquor treaties' provide for the search and seizure of suspected vessels on the high seas within one hour's sailing distance from the coast of the United States...

D.A.R. members are notified that an address will be broadcast from Station W.T.I.C., Hartford, Tuesday afternoon, at 2:45 D.S.T., "Service for our Flag."

Merle Jones, the six-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Claude W. Jones of Hebron, made her debut as a band player at the Community Band Concert given in Hebron, under the management of conductor Albert E. Lyman, at the town hall Thursday evening.

The hit of the evening was made when the little girl, cornet in hand, stepped up bravely before the audience and played a difficult cornet solo.

She received an enthusiastic encore and responded by playing a number entitled "Folk Song" in a duet with Mr. Lyman, playing a second cornet.

Merle is the youngest member of the band. Mr. Lyman says that several years ago a six-year-old boy living in Westchester played with his band, but that he has never before had so young a girl player as one of his pupils.

Merle goes to school and will be all ready to enter the second grade next fall. In fact, her teacher says that she can already read and spell with the second grade. She wanted to go to school when she was five or under, but was not allowed to on account of her youth.

Another interesting feature was the opening number of the program, "The Hebron March," composed for the occasion by Conductor Lyman.

The program included a cornet and baritone solo, a trombone solo by Leonard Porter; Opera selections, by the band; a violin solo by An-draw Hooker; a Medley of Patriotic Airs, band; a piano duet by the Misses Olive Warner and Marguerite Keefe; a saxophone duet by the Misses Marjory Foote and Aceynath Jones; "Army and Navy March," band; a clarinet duet, by Billy Warner and David Porter; "Our Leader March," band; a cornet duet by Mr. Lyman and Howard Foeter, and "Star Spangled Banner," by the band.

About twenty players took part. As the evening was very warm many of the ticket holders stayed outside the hall and listened. The attendance was decreased by the weather and by the fact that the concert had been postponed so many times, but a good many of the tickets had been sold and it is understood that a substantial sum was realized.

The playing was exceptionally good, especially in view of the youth of many of the players. All wore uniforms of white and were a good sight to look at.

They came to the city Friday and were cared for over the week-end by local charity agencies. Though they had come today and that would be enabled thereby to leave town, the outlook did not appear bright, for no word has been received from the Winston Company and the men have claim directly against the city.

Majestic Radio Co. Opens New Refrigerator Plant At Chicago

10,000 New Employees Put On Majestic Payroll

"10,000 additional employees were added to the force at the factory in Chicago on Monday," said Herbert E. Young, vice president in charge of sales of the Grigsby-Grunow Co. at Majestic headquarters at the Ambassador hotel in an exclusive interview yesterday.

"This means an increase in the payroll of $400,000 per week," continued Mr. Young. "In July 5000 additional employees will be added to the refrigeration manufacturing force."

Production on radios will be built up just as rapidly as possible, according to Mr. Young. Business conditions are improving rapidly and radio sales are decidedly on the upgrade.

Production on the new Majestic Electric Refrigerator will be built up rapidly," Mr. Young predicted. Orders on hand from Majestic distributors all over the country will keep the plants running at peak for 16 months.

Arrangements are being made at the present time to work the refrigeration plants on three eight-hour shifts per day.

Uncle Sam's Planting Pointers. BEARDED IRIS. By Dr. Victor Lumsden, Bureau of Plant Industry, U. S. Department of Agriculture.

Just after the bearded iris has bloomed is the most satisfactory time to divide rhizomes of this plant. While many refer to these rhizomes as roots they are really underground stems thickened and modified for food storage.

The length of time that such plants can be left undivided, yet have the produce satisfactory results, will depend upon the growth that they make in any given soil and location. If they remain in one spot over a period of years with the care usually afforded, they will eventually exhaust soil and produce small, thin, and weak growth.

Nearly all bearded iris grow with considerable vigor in favorable environment, the rhizomes gradually spreading and forming dense masses. One clump often encroaches upon its neighbor and a crowded condition results.

Work for Two. If the clumps of rhizomes are large, two persons working with spades on opposite sides of the plants can most effectively dig them to prepare for dividing.

After the soil has been removed the clumps are separated with a sharp knife so that each division, with its attached fan-shaped mass of foliage or dormant buds makes a new plant. At the time the work is being done inspect the roots and before replanting cut out any decay.

Shallow Planting Advised. Plant the divisions in a soil that has not grown iris for a few years in order to get the best results. By so doing there is less chance of having the plants damaged by pests.

Replanting cut mass of two-thirds of the fan-shaped mass of foliage from the division in order that the rhizome may establish itself most satisfactorily. Place the division so that its top is just exposed on the surface of the soil. This essential, as the bearded iris prefer shallow planting in a well-drained soil.

In regions where extremely dry summers are the rule keep the soil from drying out while the divisions are becoming established. A light mulch is beneficial.

Mrs. Knapp will relate the many activities which entered into the adoption of the universal Flag Code, thousands of copies of which have been distributed in the endeavor to teach love and respect for the flag. The annual observance of Flag Day will be on June 14, and as the occasion will mark the display of flags everywhere, Mrs. Knapp's talk will be of timely interest.

Sports Sketches as Related by Tom and Jerry. The rookies, Tom and Jerry, introduced over the air from station WTIC last Tuesday for the first time, will resume their "twice-cracking" comments on sports this evening at 6:45 o'clock.

In the last broadcast a challenge was issued for a game of golf, and the results of it will be made known today. The belligerent attitude displayed by Jerry in this episode almost gets him into trouble, but to even him at its nature would rob the broadcast of one of its climaxes.

An expression familiar in baseball is to the effect that there is nothing so fresh as a fresh batter, and the sharp rejoiners indulged in by the two rookies as they go through their round of golf may be reminders to many a golf fan who is trying hard to master the strokes and to learn the identity of one club from another.

TODAY IS THE ANNIVERSARY. DRAGON-BOAT FEAST. On June 10, the Dragon-Boat Festival, a boatman's holiday, is celebrated throughout China with much hilarity.

The holiday is said to have originated in the fourth century B.C. Ever since, the anniversary of Kuei Yuan, minister of state of Tsau, was deplored because of his persistence in pointing out the evil doings of his master. He then drowned himself in the Milo river despite the efforts of an eye-witness, a fisherman, who launched his boat to save him.

Ever since, the anniversary of the suicide and the fisherman's attempt at rescue has been commemorated by a procession of dragon boats over the inland waters of China. Each of these boats, owned by a clan, can seat between 50 and 60 men.

The rowers are timed by a drummer in the center who beats his instrument faster and faster as the fun grows more furious. In the bow stands a man who pantomimes the act of throwing rice on the water as a method of appeasing the evil spirits.

As the races develop into hot contests between the clans, decisions of the judges in close races often create more tumult than even those of the baseball umpire.

"10,000 additional employees were added to the force at the factory in Chicago on Monday," said Herbert E. Young, vice president in charge of sales of the Grigsby-Grunow Co. at Majestic headquarters at the Ambassador hotel in an exclusive interview yesterday.

"This means an increase in the payroll of $400,000 per week," continued Mr. Young. "In July 5000 additional employees will be added to the refrigeration manufacturing force."

Production on radios will be built up just as rapidly as possible, according to Mr. Young. Business conditions are improving rapidly and radio sales are decidedly on the upgrade.

SPARKS CIRCUS HERE TOMORROW

Long All Steel Trains Will Pull Into Railroad Yards
Early in Morning.

Tomorrow is circus day. With the early dawn the long, all-steel trains of Sparks Circus are scheduled to arrive, and by the time the average family is seated at the breakfast table, the grounds at Center and Dougherty streets will be occupied by the white city of tents. Years do not lessen the appeal of the circus and so in the crowd that will watch in the railroad yards for the coming of the show, will be numbered men and boys of all ages, or perhaps it would be more appropriate to say boys of all ages for the circus has a wonderful way of bringing back the light of youth to eyes grown just a bit tired in this workaday world of ours.

There will be two performances, the matinee beginning at 2, and the night show at 8, with doors opening one hour earlier, so that there may be ample time for a leisurely inspection of the menagerie, in which there are specimens of wild animal life from every clime. Among the featured displays on the program may be mentioned the original Nelson Family, the Aerial Walters, the Guice trope of bare-back riders, starring Flora Bedini; and a sensational exhibition by the Rink Wright Duo of equilibrists. Tickets, both general admission and reserved, will be on sale tomorrow at Packard's Drug Store, South Manchester at the same price as at the grounds.

NOW THEY NAB SARDINES

New York, June 10.—(AP)—Customs agents today were in possession of 5,000 cases of Norwegian sardines, seized in a Department of Justice procedure against what the government charges is a conspiracy in restraint of trade among Norwegian packers.

The sardines were seized in the warehouse of Chr. Bjelland and Company, Inc., importers, which is accused of being a party to an agreement entered into by packers of Norwegian sardines to fix prices and regulate the business in the United States.

The Department of Justice charges that the sardine combine sought to impose its rules and prices upon dealers in this country under threat of boycotting those who refused to abide by them. The seizure was made under the Sherman Anti-Trust law and Wilson Tariff Act.

MILLION SHORTAGE

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 10.—(AP)—A shortage of one million or more in the accounts of the Cincinnati branch of the Henry L. Doherty Company of New York was responsible for the arrest of A. W. Shafer, former district sales manager and an examination of the Cosmopolitan Bank and Trust Co. Although Shafer specifically is charged with reimbursement of $10,162.50, assistant county prosecutor Dudley Outcutt and officials of the Doherty firm indicated the total shortage may be between $1,000,000 and $1,500,000. The Cosmopolitan Bank's condition was being audited by State bank examiners who came here yesterday to determine whether it had been affected by Shafer's operations, conducted through his company's account with the bank. It was reported the company's account was $535,000 short, of which $100,000 is covered by securities.

The Silent Partner of Everyone

The stabilizing effect of Stock Fire Insurance in our commercial structure is of such importance that business paralysis would certainly follow its elimination or impairment.

Fire insurance so effectually safeguards the home, factory, and store, and contributes such an element of certainty to all enterprises in which men engage, that it is well termed the Silent Partner of everyone.

Makes the Uncertain Certain

Protection may be secured from Stock Fire Insurance companies against loss or disaster caused by fire and the elements—wind, water, hail, earthquakes—as well as riots and civil commotions and other causes.

These companies also issue policies protecting against property damage, loss of profits, losses due to interruption of business, loss of rents or valuable leases, loss of goods in storage, or in transit by motor, aircraft, railroad, steamship, or other carriers.

Fewer Hazards

Business runs more smoothly and economically, credit is stabilized, and fewer hazards accompany every business process because of the more than $150,000,000,000 constantly at risk in the protection of American property.

The Stock Fire Insurance business is related to all other businesses as a balance wheel, whose steady revolutions are essential to the general good.

BY RUTH DEWEY GROVES

BEGIN HERE TODAY
NATALIE CONVERSE, jealous of her husband's friendship with BERNADINE LAMONT, leaves him. Alan is consoled by his secretary, PHILLIPA WEST, who is seeking to make an advantageous marriage.

Natalie returns, and Alan realizes that he loves her, but the entanglement that Phillipa has cleverly engineered prevents him from attempting a reconciliation. Phillipa refuses to release him.

Natalie goes to Alan's office and there meets Bernadine. Her old jealousy flares up again and she quarrels bitterly with Alan. The next day Natalie comes to the office to plead for forgiveness, but Alan is out. She waits a while in his private office, then departs in despair.

Phillipa, fearful lest Alan's anger should not endure, plots a scheme of credit. Natalie, in a letter she characterizes the name of a stock Bernadine wants to buy to one that is worthless, Bernadine comes to the office after the order has gone through, and discovers the investment that has been made. Phillipa directs suspicion at Natalie. Alan believes her guilty.

Natalie is stricken to utter hopelessness by the accusation. Alan leaves her and goes to Bernadine's home to find her. Not long afterward he is hastily summoned to Bernadine's deathbed. Left to care for her son, BOBBY, he turns to Phillipa. Natalie, living with an aunt in Philadelphia, reads of Bernadine's death. She decides to make one last plea to Alan for a reconciliation. Alan misunderstands her motive and tells her he is going to marry again as soon as she is granted a divorce.

CHAPTER XLV
Alan learned how idle it is to build upon the anticipated emotional reactions of a fellow mortal.

For Natalie was not overcome with despair when he told her she was going to marry another woman. It found him keenly disappointed in her manner of accepting what he had thought would be an overwhelming declaration. She did not shrink, or pale, or tremble, as he had expected.

The calm with she looked at him brought him a second shock. She did not love him! In a flash he realized that through all the weeks she was away, he fed himself upon the belief that she was suffering under her proud self-exile. He had no right to him to have this conviction upset.

But he knew it now. And he blamed Natalie for it. At least temper rose as she sat there looking at him—waiting. Damn it all, she was motivated all through the whole sorry mess by nothing more than vicious jealousy. And he thought it was pure jealousy. Pure jealousy! That was a good one. Jealousy in a man is a thing which should be called love!

He felt like laughing in her face. Love! Why, the woman had been merely fiercely possessive. Her passion had been nothing more than an insane desire to keep what belonged to her. And he gave her credit for being able to love. He thought he could hurt her, punish her, through her affections.

He felt like laughing in her face. Love! Why, the woman had been merely fiercely possessive. Her passion had been nothing more than an insane desire to keep what belonged to her. And he gave her credit for being able to love. He thought he could hurt her, punish her, through her affections.

He thought now of the soft memories of her that had crept upon him in the night and threatened to make him forget what a rotten thing she did. He was glad he had banished them with firmness. His common sense had told him that he could never respect her against even though he had to go on loving her to the end.

And now, after all this battling to put aside their love and begin his life anew on a sensible basis, he learned there wasn't any love on her part.

It wasn't love that had brought her back, trying to re-establish herself. It was self-interest. Probably sick of the simple life she led at Aunt Emma's. Missed her friends in Westchester. Thought it would be easy to come back, now that Bernadine . . .

"Well?" he said challengingly. "Alan," Natalie spoke patiently—"are you trying to hurt me, or do you merely say that as a way of refusing to give me the little boy?" "Hurt you?" Alan exploded. "Is it possible?" Natalie put out an imploring hand. "Please, it isn't necessary to be cruel, is it? You know you can't expect me to believe what you said."

pounded furiously as he waited for her to speak because if she said "yes" she believed he had been in love with Bernadine, then all his disappointment of a moment ago had been uncalled for.

She nodded. "Then you thought I was bluffing?" he went on excitedly. Again Natalie nodded. Alan hesitated. He lost his desire to hurt her. But the truth had to be told. If she suffered over it or if it left her cold—what could it matter to him?

He did not look at her, gallantly denying himself a chance to measure her feeling for him. "I was not bluffing Natalie," he said quietly. "There was a girl—and it was not Bernadine."

Natalie did not cry out, but this time it was not disbelief that silenced her. The unexpectedness of Alan's admission had come upon her with crushing force.

Alan would not look at her, but he heard her breath flutter through her lips.

"There was a girl—" the words were branding themselves upon her brain while she sat frozen to lifelessness. "There was a girl—"

Her hand flew to her lips when her anguish could no longer be contained in her breaking heart. The paralysis of shock had left her. She felt herself slumping down in her chair.

But what did it matter? What did it matter? Bernadine or another? She had lost Alan long ago. This suffering was not new. Only a new stab on an old wound. She ought to be able to hear it better than this. But she never had heard Alan say it before—that there was a girl—he denied loving Bernadine Lamont. She never dreamed what it would be like to hear him say it himself—that he loved someone else.

She prayed he would give her time to recover before he spoke again. Blindly she fumbled in her handbag for a handkerchief. Alan saw the movement of her hands, but his gaze did not follow them to her face.

God, this was awful. But there was no retreating now. This was the price of jealousy and temper—that they had put impassable barriers between them.

He felt suddenly driven to talk to Natalie as he would to a friend. It might make it easier for both of them. He began quietly, though clearly with suppressed feeling, to tell her about Phillipa West. How she had been an understanding companion in his loneliness.

"And Natalie," he paused to interject, "that is not a joke, that sympathy racket. It led to my asking Phillipa to marry me when you got the divorce. She didn't want to marry me in love with her. But she's a good kid. And she'll be kind to Bobby. I had to think of him. But I had talked about marriage to Phillipa before that. I don't remember exactly how it happened, but she's giving up a lot for me. She had trouble with her family over her engagement. You see how it was when you came with Florence?"

"Why, why didn't you tell me?" Natalie asked. "I didn't dare to," Alan replied, and Natalie winced under the unequivocal implication of his words. "But I did hope that Phillipa would see how matters stood and put an end to the situation. I think she might have, too, but . . ." he stopped stammering.

"But I spoiled it," Natalie ended for him. "Yes," he said bitterly, "you spoiled it, Natalie."

And you're going to marry Phillipa West? Natalie asked. "You've made up your mind to go through with it?" Alan nodded, gloomily. "I see no reason why I shouldn't," he answered. "It'd be a cad to back out, and Phillipa has done nothing to deserve such treatment."

What if Alan would find a way to break this engagement to Phillipa; would it bring him back to her? She was obliged to confess that in all probability it would not.

She made a gesture of acceptance, weighted with weariness. She was suddenly very tired. It was all so hopeless, so useless, so futile. She didn't know where her own responsibility began, or where it ended. Perhaps, when she had time to think . . .

She got up, and held out her hand. "If you should wish to have a talk with me," she said, "come to see me. I'm going back to Philadelphia, to Aunt Em's."

"Tonight?" Alan asked reluctantly, letting her hand go. Natalie glanced at her wrist-watch. "I can make a train before dinner," she said. "Goodby."

She turned quickly and hurried away. She had meant to tell him she would go on with the divorce proceedings, but fear of a complete breakdown in his presence had checked her. Well, she could write to him, and wish him luck. Oh, she hadn't wished him luck!

As she made her way to the nearest elevator, she was glad she had taken a room in the hotel, glad she had some place to go where no one would see her.

Alan stood watching her until she was out of sight. The thought was in his mind that he might never see her again—but it was too harrowing to be retained.

Why had he let her go? He walked out of the hotel like a man going to his own execution. He went back to his office, and sat stark-eyed at his desk until Phillipa telephoned to learn if he had started for Westchester. She wanted to dine early—she was still looking after Bobby in his home—and go for a drive.

She was tired of confinement to the death-shadowed house and petulant over Alan's continued depression. After all, why should he mourn? The dead woman was not in particular to him. Phillipa looked after a crying child—she would make miserable over Bernadine's passing.

She had been through the house thoroughly—was sick of it. Alan didn't spend any more time there than he was obliged to, she reflected. It was all very well for her to claim her absence from the office made it necessary for him to devote more time to his business—she didn't want to give up work to look after a crying child—she would much rather be downtown.

She was certainly going to bring up the matter of putting Bobby in a school very shortly, or having the three of them move into Alan's home. It might be some time before Natalie obtained a divorce.

The fear that Natalie might sue for a divorce was settled with an offhand: "Alan's got enough on her to force it." She could not help smiling over the thought of Natalie's "crime." What a joke it was!

She felt sure of Alan, nevertheless she wanted to keep a tight rein on him. His voice, when he answered her call, warmed her she was not as secure as she thought. (To Be Continued)

NON-SKID TIE
Paris.—The non-skid necktie has made its appearance in France. Sheets and threads of rubber are put together to form either the four-in-hand or bow tie, and these are vividly colored to suit the wearer's taste. It is said that the ties will last longer because they will not fray or wear out, but it is not said whether or not they will stretch out of shape.

SHORT SKIRTS SAFE
London.—Another argument for short skirts has been advanced here by the Bishop of Barking. He says that short skirts and cream-colored silk stockings promote safety on highways. When girls are walking along roads, headlights of oncoming motorists catch the reflection of stockings, thus enabling them to avoid the young ladies.

Americans In France Slow On Stage Jokes

By JOHN EVANS
Paris.—(AP)—Why are Americans in France slower to laugh than the same type of people in America? A year or two abroad seems to slow them down on the trigger when they see an American comedy. They played in English by the same company that gets quick action from audiences on Broadway, in the middle west or on the Pacific coast.

Well-proved successes, fresh from the United States, must be re-timed here to give the audience opportunity to "get the laugh."

This is one of the interesting points out of the experience of the American theatrical season put on here for twelve weeks by Carol M. Sax, founder of the Baltimore "Vagabond Players." The reason, says Sax, is that the technique of the American stage has been modernized.

"Formerly the actor, by pause or other indication, gave the signal for a laugh," he explained, "but today, the American audience is mentally on its toes and seldom misses its cues. Over here, I think, the Americans out of touch with American conditions, unconsciously wait for some of the signals to which they were accustomed some years ago."

The American Players solved the problem by having one or two characters show just the slightest sign of amusement, when the "joke cue" came, so as to touch off the audience. Although the American Players were brought here by Sax as an artistic experiment and he expected to lose money, the latter half of the season showed a profit and the 86 performances of six American plays and one French piece given in English, broke even, if transportation of the company to and from New York were eliminated.

Anyway Sax, with wealthy friends behind him, has decided to play here every year, starting toward the end of the French season in May, and running into the summer. Here are some of the discoveries made by Sax: "French amusement taxes took 29 per cent of my receipts."

"Those Americans who are pro-French never came until the always tardy French criticisms were published, so they might take the French view of things." "Audiences were composed of 60 per cent French, yet not a single French person attended on the night of Friday, the 13th."

"The Americans here were shocked at the rather 'free' lines in big American successes, such as 'The Road to Rome' and 'The Barker'; much more so than at far more daring French plays or than people in America."

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE DOES NOT ALWAYS INDICATE DANGER.

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN.
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

In the child what is known as the systolic blood pressure varies between 90 and 105 and the diastolic between 65 and 70. The systolic pressure gradually increases until it reaches a level of 120 at the age of 20. The diastolic pressure does not rise proportionately, but reaches about 80 at the age of 20. The systolic pressure is the highest pressure reached in the arteries and the diastolic pressure the lowest pressure reached, these representing various phases of the contractions of the heart. Naturally the pressures are going to be higher just after the heart has contracted than when it is in the relaxed stage.

As a person grows older the arteries tend to harden and the systolic pressure becomes higher. From 20 years of age to 40 years of age the blood pressure is usually about stationary, averaging from 120 to 125 systolic and from 120 to 125 diastolic in normal people. From 40 on the pressure may rise gradually, reaching 135 systolic at 60, and 89 or 90 diastolic.

It has become customary to regard blood pressure above 140 systolic in adults as abnormal, although there are some individuals who normally exhibit blood pressure above the average. At times the blood pressure remains constant at a higher than average figure.

This does not constitute a disease in the usual understanding of that term, because in diseases in which the blood pressure is higher than normal, it tends to get still higher as time goes on. It is extremely difficult indeed to tell on a single examination just which cases represent normal types of high blood pressure, and which abnormal types. The only way in which that can be done is to have examinations made at fairly regular intervals over long periods of time.

It is important not to put too much stress on the blood pressure rating alone. Far too often men have become exceedingly disturbed mentally over a high blood pressure when such disturbance was not warranted by the physical state. The competent physician takes into account not one single observation concerning any phase of the condition of the human body, but concerns himself with all of the conditions.

He then regulates the life of the individual according to the physical condition. It is known that rest lowers the blood pressure, whereas exercise raises it. Blood pressure drops during sleep.

Overweight is usually associated with high blood pressure, but there are many fat people whose blood pressure is not above the average for their ages.

Solo Over 1902 Wireless Rated As First Broadcast

Little Rock, Ark.—(AP)—When Mrs. J. H. White, a little girl played a harmonica before crude apparatus. It was heard a mile away over as crude receiving equipment.

That was 28 years ago. Today the little girl is Mrs. J. H. White of Little Rock, considered to be the "first woman broadcaster." The crude equipment was designed by her father, Nathan Stubblefield, at Murray, Ky., a pioneer radio investigator.

Mrs. White was stationed in a field a mile away from her father's farm house laboratory. As she played the harmonica she received the receiving apparatus. But, clearly, the music was received.

This experiment, one of a number conducted by Stubblefield in 1902, has led his home town of Murray to feel that he should be credited with the "invention of radio." It erected a monument in his honor March 28, the second anniversary of his death.

Stubblefield was considerably elated over his early experiments, and friends assisted him in obtaining a patent. Later he conducted demonstrations in Pennsylvania and New York and a stock company was formed to manufacture his device.

Things did not seem to develop as the inventor had hoped, and he went back home to spend the rest of his life in seclusion. Two years ago he was found dead by a friend who had visited his humble living quarters.

Mrs. White still shows a keen interest in radio, but she does not seem greatly concerned over the fact that she played an important part in some of the first attempts at entertainment broadcasting.

A LESSON ON SHOE LEATHER
By William H. Baldwin
Although style is naturally important in the selection of shoes, it is just as well to know something about shoe leathers.

Calfskin is regarded as in many respects the most suitable for uppers. It is smaller, finer in texture, softer, more pliable and of more even grain than cowskin. Because it takes a high polish, it is extensively used in making enameled and patent leathers. Kips is a medium weight calf.

Kid is an excellent upper leather, being able to stand a strain in any direction. Sheepskin is not so strong or durable as kid.

It is, however, suitable for facings, tongues and other parts of a shoe where the wearing strain is not so great. Kangaroo skin makes a good upper leather, having a fine-pitted surface as if it had been pricked with a pin.

ESCAPES DEATH TWICE
Milton, Pa.—If Bobby De Hart recovers from his most recent misfortune, his parents will watch him closely until the three-year-old boy is able to take care of himself. Recently he found a bottle of poison tablets and swallowed them. Prompt action saved him. A few days after, in playing with matches, he set his clothes on fire and seriously burned himself.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

There is a decided tendency among parents to hold a girl or boy back from getting married until they are "older."

Such an attitude may be right or wrong. There is much to be said on both sides. But the arguments against it are man-made, a result of social laws and economic conditions. The ones for the early marriages are taken out of our hands. Nature must still rule us as long as our bodies and our psychology are what they are.

I am with Kathleen Norris absolutely in favoring the early marriage. She says, "If a girl of eighteen wants to marry, let her have her boy and they will work it out together. You can't live her life. No one-lived yours. And they will have experiences and interests in the struggle that will bind them together inseparably."

I think she is right. The things that form a bond when these children are young are the very things that separate them if they are older when they marry. Struggle either unites or divides.

I could write a large and thrilling book on the struggle, the bitter struggle, of a certain young couple who faced the world on almost nothing years ago, had children, kept up a home, have worked desperately through illness, trouble and death (and are still working for that matter), got into debt, and out of it, and ran the gauntlet of every conceivable sort of worry on the globe, and now face the trip down the hill with a bond that all the diamonds and limousines in the land could not have welded. They met when she was sixteen and he was eighteen. In a few years they married. What were they doing. That girl was myself.

You can multiply this story by the hundred thousand and you have the story of America. It is struggle that holds up country, character, home—the right kind of struggle with the right kind of love and courage to carry it through.

That for one side.

On the other hand there are the economic factors. "A couple can struggle through now on what they could twenty years ago!" Also there is education. "Why, Jim or Laura won't be through college for two more years and then he has to get his start!" There is no question that the economic view does flood the more sentimental argument is a good many rounds.

Peril of Waiting
But any good argument can afford to give ground. We don't discount the benefits of education and that fetish of what Jim's degree will do for him, or for Laura. But I've seen dozens of Jim and Lauras armed with degrees and jobs letting the years roll on—because "Dad and Mother think rent are so high and Jim isn't making much yet, so we'd better wait."

And then what? Will Jim suddenly become a millionaire? No, he won't. Maybe in three or four years he'll be making fifty dollars a month more than he is now. But he's older; people "expect" more and his pride steps in. He and Laura start out to live better than they can afford. They are not so young. They can't adjust themselves so well and there is bitterness and trouble. The chain is not soft enough when welded. It breaks.

Young people still can find cheap rents in obscure communities. If they are willing I'd say "let them." They can find cheap, wholesome food, too, and clothes aren't as expensive now as they were when I was young.

Manchester-West Hartford Game On Thursday

Senators Still Slipping As Reds Close In Fast

Lost to Indians 5 to 4 Yesterday; A's Beat White Sox; Detroit Trimmed; 7 to 6.

Baseball games won in the spring count as much as those won in September but the Washington Senators are discovering that it takes more than an April and May winning streak to keep in the midst of the American League fight.

True the Senators are still clinging tenaciously to second place in the junior circuit but every day sees the Indians creeping closer and closer.

On May 28 Walter Johnson had the Senators showing the way by four full games. Then something happened to the seemingly perfect machine. In ten games since that date the Senators won only two while Connie Mack with subs playing the role of regulars, has accounted for ten of his twelve games. The Indians also shifted into high and won seven of their last ten games.

The Indians today stood within grasp of runner-up honors as the result of a 5 to 4 victory over the Senators yesterday.

Taking advantage of the Senators' defeat the Athletics strengthened their hold on first place by a 3 to 2 victory over the White Sox. Big Bob Welland held the champs at bay for eight innings but in the ninth they scored and proved to be the tying and winning runs.

Chad Kinsley turned in a brilliant bit of relief hurling at St. Louis but holding the Yanks to five hits in six innings failed to stop them from defeating the Browns, 8 to 5. The Yanks scored seven of their runs off Crowder in the first three innings.

In the only other game played in the major leagues the Red Sox nosed out Detroit, 7 to 6 by reason of a five-run rally in the seventh. All of the National League games were postponed either because of rain or wet grounds.

FASTEST DOG

Lansdowne Sun Guage is the name of the world's fastest whippet, who was among the prize winners in the dog show held by the Penn Athletic Club of Philadelphia. The blue-blood is pictured above with Mrs. Benjamin F. Lewis, Jr., of Lansdowne, Pa.

The American boys and girls have been doing pretty well in the golf and tennis championships, and are furnishing two of the big winners in Helen Willis Moody and Bobby Jones; two runners-up in Glenna Collett and Big Bill Tilden.

The British Open golf, the Wimbledon Cup and Davis Cup tennis contests still are to be settled before the spring invasion is closed. American prospects are at least as good as any, in the first two events, with Jones and Mrs. Moody leading the attack. There is at least a fighting chance in the Davis Cup skirmish if the boys can get past the European Zone winner, which probably will be Australia, and if Bill Tilden rejoins the colors for another joust.

Henri Cochet happens to be the main obstacle to any advance by Uncle Sam's net artists, Henri is as certain to be a double-winner in any Davis Cup battle as Tilden used to be in his prime. That leaves no other alternative but to win the remaining three matches, if the cup is to change hands. Even with Lacoste absent from the French fold, this assignment is no lead-pipe cinch for the U. S. A. or any other challenger.

It will be Britain's turn to take up the attack to the tune of the Wearin' of the Green, when Sir Thomas Lipton sails his Shamrock V across the ocean for an attempt to lift the America's Cup and when the British polo team rides out in September to challenge America's hold on the International Cup.

There is a distinct Irish touch to these two colorful classics of sport this year, for representing the heroic up-consecutive Hurlingham Club likely will be three Irishmen and an Anglo-Argentine. British polo's Old Guard seems to have capitulated completely in the announcement naming the famous Roark Baiding, another young Irishman; and Lewis Lacey, the Argentine ace, to carry the challenging colors against Tommy Hitchcock's Yankee riders.

The best minds of American polo consider this prospective British line-up the strongest that possibly could be assembled, in fact the most formidable challenge any English side has presented since before the war.

All four are thoroughly familiar with playing conditions at Meadow Brook as well as with the American "system." Lacey is the finest "back" the game has produced since the heyday of the American rock of Gibraltar—Devereux Milburn. "Pat" Roark, a daring horseman and good hitter, frequently has demonstrated ability to make things more difficult for Tommy Hitchcock than any other player ever seen on Long Island's classic turf. Baiding and Aidan Roark are young, aggressive, of the same type as America's English-born star, Winston Guest, though not so far advanced in big league polo experience.

Old Pop Time gets them all, even the old warhorse, Grover Cleveland Alexander. Old Pete shuffles down the trail that has seen Cobb, Speaker, Wheat, Collins, Johnson, Dugan, Peckinpaugh and other stars fade out of the active picture in the last few years alone.

John Kitzmiller the "Flying Dutchman" quarterback of the University of Oregon was elected captain after spring practice under the Webfoot's new coach, Dr. Clarence Spears.

ANOTHER K. O. FOR KID BOOTS

Primo Carnera may be something of a heavyweight after all, judging from what he did to old K. O. Christner, the Akron rubber puddler. When Carnera knocked him out in the fourth round at Detroit, it was the first time Kaye ever hit the canvas for the full count. The two photos show a skirmish between the tall Italian and the bold Kaye, top, and below, as they posed in mid-ring with Referee Slim McClelland.

Sharkey Must Look Out For Max's Right

BY WERNER LAUFER. Endicot, N. Y.—They say that Max Schmeling might as well keep his left hand in his pocket during a fight—

And that Max's right hand, "with a cowbell on it," never can beat as experienced a ringman as Jack Sharkey.

But, I believe that if that right hand ever hands plump on the Sharkey chinworks, the next heavyweight champion of the world will be a beetle-browed young German from Hamburg.

One big chance to tag Jack Sharkey early in the fight is the hope and prayer of Dempsey's followers. Jack Sharkey is the greatest in-and-outer in the ring. On occasions when he was in good form and had an incentive to win, he was the master fighter. On other occasions, he looked like a bum.

Sharkey has everything along the mechanical lines to make him a great champion. He boxes superbly—he can hit with either hand and has plenty of courage. He is accused of being a front runner and a fighter who couldn't take it after Jack Dempsey knocked him out.

But the only mistake he made that night was to look toward the referee and take his eyes off Dempsey's fists. The mistake was mental and gave evidence that Sharkey is not a smart fighter.

When he dropped a decision to John Risko and barely drew with Tom Heene, Sharkey substantiated this evidence. Against both of these fellows, he was the soul of nonchalance. He boxed cautiously and met their clumsy rushes with clinches. Not once during these two performances did he drive him- self to the limit.

In his first Miami fight against Young Stribling, he fought much the same day. It was only that the southerner was even more loath to mix it that brought the referee's nod.

But against Jimmy Maloney, Jack Delaney and Tommy Lough-

BUSCH PRAISES MAX.

The following is a personal letter received by T. W. Stowe, Herald sports editor, from Frank C. Busch, local boxing and swimming instructor at the Regatta Club, who has been working out with Max Schmeling the past week. It is printed to show what Busch thinks about the German's chances against Jack Sharkey Thursday night.

June 7, 1930.

Hello Tom:
Just a few lines to let you know I am expecting to stay here until Schmeling breaks camp and then expect to also see the bout. By the way have been playing golf a bit myself out here so that you better improve your game.

Boxed today with Max and after the workout went to a private amateur and defending title holder, Woodland, and Arthur Gusa, Point Judith were tied for next place with 156 each.

Alex Simpson, Springfield Country Club pro, formerly from Manchester, Conn., failed to qualify. He shot an 88 for the morning round going out in 44 and back in the same number which made it obvious that his best score in the afternoon would not be sufficient to qualify.

Pfeiffer, coach at Perkiomen school, Pennsylvania, Pa., that he will take a squad of basketball players to Venezuela this month for a series of games. Twelve players will be taken along and they will be the guests of Gonzalo Gomez, son of J. V. Gomez, former president of Venezuela. The squad will stay on the Gomez ranch near Caracas.

The party will sail from New York June 25 and will be away about six weeks.

Noact Pfeiffer is taking six youths from other leading prep schools in eastern Pennsylvania including a squad of six from Perkiomen. The Perkiomen school boys will include Blank, Jack Stevenson, Lansdowne, Pa.; George Beech, Allentown, Pa.; Charles Chabough, Baltimore; Lewis Kippaman, Trenton, N. SIMPSON IS OUT

OF GOLF BATTLE

Fails to Qualify for Mass. Open Because of 88 Morning Round.

Newton, Mass., June 10.—(AP)—Play in the final 36 holes for the state open golf title began today at Braeburn with Fred J. Wright, Jr., state amateur golf champion, leading the field by one stroke.

His 150 was one better than the 151 turned in by Mike Brady, Winged Foot professional and former state open title holder, in yesterday's round. Sixty one of the 140 entries qualified for today's play, 17 of them amateurs.

Jack Curley, Stoney Brae, Dave Hackney, Yawpers, George Guilford, amateur and defending title holder, Woodland, and Arthur Gusa, Point Judith were tied for next place with 156 each.

Alex Simpson, Springfield Country Club pro, formerly from Manchester, Conn., failed to qualify. He shot an 88 for the morning round going out in 44 and back in the same number which made it obvious that his best score in the afternoon would not be sufficient to qualify.

Too many books spoil the broth.

Keep Trying.
The visitor to the suburbs was doing his best to keep up the conversation. Finally he said:
Visitor—I hear your volunteer fire company has bought a new engine.
Native—Yep.
Visitor—Have you tried it out yet?
Native—Nope.
Visitor—What, no fires at all?
Native—Oh, yep. Had five fires.
Visitor—Then why haven't you tried your engine?
Native—Houses burn down 'fore we get there.

Seattle—When the offspring of George Muir had a birthday, its father thought his child should have been. And when police found 84 bottles in his possession he told them that story. But the judge didn't think young Muir should celebrate with beer, so the liquor was confiscated and Muir fined $100.

AYE, 'Twas HIS EYE

Brockton, Mass.—William T. P. Nelson had been without his glass eye for some time. Walking down a street here recently he stopped to watch a group of boys playing marbles. One boy he noticed was the constant winner, under closer observation Nelson found the boy was using his glass eye as a marble.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)

The Finnish girl seemed very kind and Clowny said, "Say, would you mind, please, telling us what can we do or see that will be fun? You see we've never been here before, so we don't know what is in store. We want to see all that we can before our visit's done."

"Oh, there are lots of spots, I know, where you all would be glad to go," the girl replied. "But first of all, let's have some nice ice cream. A little shop across the street. Just join me now. This is my treat." "A dish of ice cream?" Clowny cried. "Oh, this is like a dream."

Then Scouty said, "Be quiet, lad. You make us all look rather bad. She'll think that we have never had ice cream, so kindly stop." Then, quick as everybody could, they reached the spot. The cream was good and looked especially tempting with fine chocolate on the top.

"Now," said the girl, "if I were you, I know exactly what I'd do. I'd hike down to the fishing docks and watch the boats come in. The fishermen are very kind and, if you ask them, they won't mind explaining all about their boats and telling where they've been."

So, after thanking her, the bunch were glad to act upon her hunch. They went down to the docks and asked queer questions by the score. One fisherman seemed very glad to answer every little lad. He answered questions till they couldn't think of any more.

They heard a fisherman yell, "I have some real fine fish to sell." "Let's buy some," cried out Copy. "We can have them cooked, I guess." "Why, sure," replied the Travel Man. "Ah our hotel, I know we can. If one of you will carry them, I'll gladly buy a mess."

Group of G Clef Glee Club Members Dine and Attend Theater Last Night.

Seven members of the G Clef Glee Club acted as hosts to seven other members of the club at a banquet and theater party last night, due to a three months bowling tournament, which the team composed of the first seven girls, lost to the last seven by the scant margin of a few pins, after a long existing tie had been played off.

The losing team consisted of Marion Browning, Clara Lindberg, Ann Lindberg, Edythe Schultz, Frances Hanson, Martha Shortz, and Lillian Clifford. The winning team was Esther Johnson, Mrs. Esther Pearson, Norma Johnson, Beatrice Johnson, Svea Lindberg, Louise Johnson, and Evelyn Anderson.
