JOY DIVINE By George Henry Dole. International Sunday School Lesson Text, June 15. Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross—Heb. 12:2.

Neither to try, nor tempt, nor punish is the primary purpose of temptations. Temptations come because we are weak or imperfect at the point where they afflict. Their purpose is to show us wherein we are defective, and thus enable us to make ourselves so strong in faith and righteousness that we are no longer vulnerable.

PRECEDENT OFTEN BEST GUIDE FOR HOUSE DESIGN

Each House, However, Should Reflect Personal Taste and Wishes of Owner.

BY EDWARD SHEPARD HEWITT

Good precedent is the key to a successful house. There is a legend in China of an artist who was engaged in painting a dragon on the walls of a palace. He completed the design except for the final touch, which was the eye of the dragon. This he could not paint until he felt himself to be really inspired. When he felt that moment had come, with due ceremony he painted the eye. There was a crash and a great clatter of tiles, and the dragon had flown away.

So it is with the house. All the elements of mechanical equipment and arrangement of space may be there, but not until the finishing touch of a personality of its own has been given it can it truly come to life.

Example In Old Houses
We know this and recognize it in the beautiful examples of old houses of our own country, and of England and France. The designer needs everything which he can learn and adapt from these houses which have proved themselves worthy through whims and fashions by their quality of dignity, beauty and usefulness.

This result is not obtained without preliminary study and training upon the necessary requirements of the problem, as well as by the inspired touch of design.

The function of an architect in designing a house covers first the gathering of information from the owner as to the particular requirements of the problem. That is not as simple a matter as it generally supposed. Naturally, it takes considerable questioning and discussion for the owner to determine what his real requirements are and their relative importance.

It may well be that the requirements are impossible. All the rooms in the house cannot have southern exposure. The requirements for bedrooms on the second floor may make it considerably larger than the first floor. A requirement of a low, un-interrupted roof line may be made impossible by the necessity for windows to light the bedrooms.

Drawing First Plans
Then when the list of the owner's requirements have been worked out and written in the form of a memorandum, pantry, dining room, living room, library, porch and service quarters, the relative importance of these items must be indicated, so that the designer of the house can put the emphasis where the owner desires it, and make such necessary sacrifices to give a possible solution of the problem.

The size of the rooms can be best ascertained by the owner comparing actual rooms with which he is familiar. A careful list with dimensions is essential at the start. It may prove on the face of it that the whole house has become larger than can be built for the appropriation.

Then it comes to the matter of deciding which rooms can be cut down; in size or eliminated, and which rooms are essential. In one case a large dining room is desired and the living room need not be so large. In another, a very large living room is desired for music and a small dining room is adequate.

After this analysis of the problem, the next step is to consider the site, and a contour map of the property is essential to get results. The considerations of the site are the prevailing breezes in summer, sun for the principal room, reasonable protection from the north, and the question of the best view. Each of these problems is different and is so intimately connected with the layout of the roads, the sewage disposal and other practical considerations that the closest relation with the landscape architect is desirable. Where there are ample grounds, the gardens are an essential part of the house plan and should be intimately connected with it.

Building on Unit Plan
It is desirable to have as much as possible of the 360 degrees around the house itself available for the master's portion, no matter how cut up by gardens. Ample service yard and drying yard are essential, but where the main driveway to the house approach is near the service yard and service portion of the house a larger amount of un-interrupted outdoor space for the master's portion is obtained.

It has been said the modern house is a machine comparable to the automobile and should be built on a unit plan with every mechanical device possible and turned in for a new house every year, as is done with the automobile.

Such a scheme for a house has been successfully worked out, and I believe it will meet the requirements of efficiency and low cost in a remarkable way in the future.

However, I am taking up a somewhat different problem in this discussion, and assume that the house in question is to be built for an individual family, which hopes to make it a permanent home, which will continue to meet not only their physical problems of mechanical equipment, space and necessary circulation, but a personal and individual house, which the owner will like and continue to like for an indefinite period.

Modernism plays a large part in design; it has its place. The new, the unusual, the queer, the exotic, is a strong selling point and carries advertising value in the architecture of today. Many of the problems are completely new and require solution, and I am in no way undervaluing the value and importance of this movement when I express my opinion that as such it has no place here and that precedent is essential to a successful American house and its setting.

The American house is more than a machine. It is more than a solution of the physical housing problem. In fact it is a combination of a machine with the physical perfection of a model barn plus "something else" which is required.

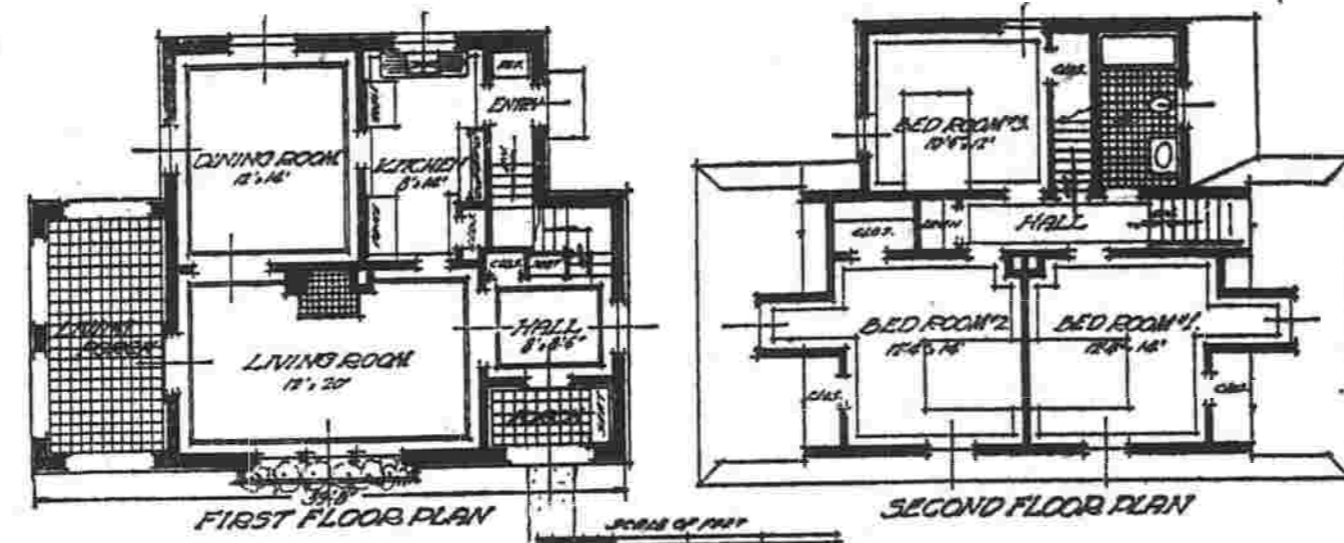

Good proportion is a pleasing relation of the parts and cannot be satisfactorily resolved into rules. A designer has no need of taking down his book on "Humboldt's Theory of Dynamic Symmetry" to decide on the height of a room when the width and length have been determined without knowing the proportions of the adjacent rooms and what is to be expressed by the room itself.

Precedent Always Available
A low basement, or rez-de-chaussee, is desirable to give grandeur to the more important rooms of the bel etage above. A small entrance hall makes a living room appear larger. A low door gives greater apparent height to a room. On the exterior, where a house seems too high, if the chimneys are made higher than usual the house will look lower.

It is the relation of one element of the house to the other which makes for good proportion. It is, therefore, only by experience, practice and comparison with successful examples or the designer's failures that success can be obtained. The designer of today has the past well tabulated and available.

A WELL BALANCED DESIGN

The long low sweeping roof lines are in perfect symmetry. The symmetrical disposition of windows and balanced porches make a pleasing composition. The porches on either side are roofed in such a manner as to give a broad appearance to the front of the house and provide additional room space on the second floor. The huge center chimney lends character to the house. The first story walls are stucco over hollow tile construction while the second story is covered with wide weather boards out to irregular pattern. The roofs are of slate in variegated colors.

This house when built would make a real home for in its arrangement nothing more could be wished for in a small house. While the cubic contents is relatively small nevertheless there are seven rooms and two baths all of good size, for besides the rooms shown on the first and second floors there is a bedroom and bath on the third floor. The house contains 25,700 cubic feet.

An approximate cost of construction would be $12,800. Complete working plans and specifications of this house may be obtained for a nominal sum from the Building Editor. Refer to House A-228.

KITCHEN MAY BE BRIGHT AND GAY

There really can be a rainbow around the dishpan for the woman who takes the time and thought to make her kitchen as attractive as possible. One of the features which stimulates interest in kitchen decoration is that it costs so little to make it a really attractive place.

Equipment for the kitchen is so beautiful, so complete and efficient and so entirely within the price reach of everyone that the woman who works in a dull, dingy, inconvenient and poorly arranged kitchen does so only because she has not given the room and its furnishings the little thought necessary to make them all they should be.

MANCHESTER MOTHERS CLUB HOLDS OUTING

Membership Goes to Highland Park Last Evening—Past President Receives Gift.

Fully 75 of the members of the Manchester Mothers club attended the outing last evening at Highland Park. At 6:30 a delicious supper was served in the Community clubhouse under the direction of Mrs. J. N. Nichols and her committee. The tables were attractively decorated and the menu included baked ham, baked beans, salads in great variety, relishes, coffee, ice cream and assorted cakes.

Miss Myrtle Fryer who was in charge of entertainment, and one or two of her associate teachers, presented an amusing little sketch. She also arranged for a series of outdoor games and bridge for those who preferred to play cards. A delightful tour was made to the gardens of members of the Case family nearby.

During the evening, Mrs. C. Ely Rogers, the retiring president, was surprised and pleased to receive from Past President Mrs. R. E. Purinton, what purported to be a diploma. When the document was unrolled, Mrs. Rogers discovered a small package which proved to be a beautiful Chanel bracelet, the gift of the club in appreciation of her services.

The committee in charge received the congratulations of the members on the success of the outing.

KIDDIE CAMP OPEN 6 WEEKS THIS YEAR

Kiwanis Decide to Add Night to Period of Vacation for Local Youngsters

The Kiwanis "Kiddie Camp," at Hebron will be run for a period of six weeks this season. This was decided last evening when the committee in charge, headed by W. G. Glenny, met at the Hebron Game Club headquarters.

Since the camp was instituted by the Manchester Kiwanis club it has operated for four weeks each season, two weeks for the boys and two weeks for the girls. This year, however, the committee decided that, because of the unusual business conditions, it would be advisable to extend the vacation period two weeks longer so as to be able to accommodate a large number of children.

Every member of the committee attended the meeting. The committee includes W. G. Glenny, chairman, C. R. Burr, Dr. D. C. Y. Moore, Stephen Hale, W. A. Knofia, Earl Scaman, G. H. Waddell, R. LaMotte Russell, Helge Pearson and Thomas Ferguson. Mr. Russell and two of his assistants went out to Hebron in the late afternoon to prepare supper, which was ready at half past six.

Pearson in Charge Afterward the committee for more than two hours went over the plans for the camp and discussed ways and means for further improving the grounds and the equipment. Helge Pearson will have full charge of the conduct of the camp. He has had experience in such work and according to his plans the camp will be fruitful of real pleasure and profit to the children fortunate enough to participate. It is the plan of the committee to open the camp on Monday, July 14, and continue it until the first of September.

It is Mr. Pearson's plan to have a definite daily schedule. Certain periods for play and recreation specified periods for rest. In addition it is his idea to have the boys devote some time each day to simple carpentry work. The camp is fully equipped with swings, slides and such equipment so that the children will find plenty of amusement. The pond is being enlarged and for the first time will have at least two boats on it. One boat will be provided by the losing team in a recent attendance contest of the Kiwanis Club. The other will be supplied by George H. Waddell, from his camp at Columbia Lake. A radio will be installed and daily communication will be had with Manchester by the delivery trucks of the Pinehurst Grocery. It is the plan of the committee to determine the best road to reach the camp and have it properly marked all the way.

Dr. D. C. Y. Moore, as head of the Town Health Board, will go out to Hebron just before the camp is opened and give the grounds and the buildings a thorough inspection so that parents will be assured that everything is being done to insure the strictest hygienic safety. During the several seasons that the camp has been conducted only one child has had to return home because of illness. This is considered a remarkable record.

The owners of the Hebron Game Club, all Manchester men, have donated the use of the grounds each season. In addition the Game Club members have devoted much time and spent money improving the grounds and buildings. The Kiwanians point out that it would not have been possible for them to carry on the work without this assistance.

The Lions club meeting Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock at the Hotel Sheridan will be devoted to business with the delegates to the district convention at Newport, R. I., reporting on the proceedings, including an outline of the changes in the district by laws and laws governing the newly created zones.
