WAR, DECLARES

Former Kaiser Eager to Have Court Determine
Who Was Responsible,
Says Bigelow.

New York, June 28.—(AP).—Former Kaiser Wilhelm is willing and even eager to have an international court determine whether he was responsible for the outbreak of the World War in 1914, Poutney Bigelow, American historian, declared today on his return from a visit with the self-exiled ex-emperor.

For three days and nights, said Bigelow, who returned today on the Minnewaska, he and Wilhelm sat in the former Kaiser's great library at Doorn, Holland, studying documents from imperial Germany. At the end of that time, Bigelow said, he concluded that Russia, primarily, and England secondarily, were responsible for the conflict.

Authentic Documents
"Such is the case if the Kaiser's documents are authentic," Bigelow said, "and I believe they are, for in sixty years of friendship I have never known him to have done a crooked thing."

Bigelow went to Doorn to mend a friendship between the two which was ruptured at the beginning of the World War—a friendship begun when Bigelow was 17 and Wilhelm thirteen. Their amity ceased when Bigelow blamed the German emperor, in 1914, for starting the war.

The venerable American, who is 75 and is tall and straight, is distinguished by a broad, square nose, brown but streaked with grey.

Long Friendship
The son of John Bigelow, United States ambassador to France under Lincoln, Poutney Bigelow met Wilhelm when the latter was a student at Potsdam, and out of a friendship based on the young German prince's interest in James Fenimore Cooper's books.

"My friend," was the former Kaiser's greeting to me on my arrival.

Perfect summer weather that drew thousands to highways and beaches over the week-end took a heavy toll of life in Connecticut.

Five persons were killed in automobile accidents, two were drowned and two others committed suicide. Falls accounted for two more lives and sudden death at a beach picnic brought the week-end death toll to 12.

Mrs. Lina Natale, 40, of South Norwalk was killed as she was being taken for a ride by her son in an automobile borrowed without the owner's consent. The car hit a tree and overturned in the Norwalk Danbury road near Wilton. Others killed in auto accidents were:

RECORD BREAKING HOP FAMILY AFFAIR

Chicago's endurance flight in which four brothers are participating—two in the endurance plane and two in the refueling plane—is indeed a family affair because Irene Hunter, a sister, prepares the food that is sent up to the tireless flyers. These pictures show Miss Hunter carving a juicy chicken and the endurance ship, piloted by Kenneth and John Hunter, being refueled from above by the supply ship, piloted by Walter and Albert Hunter. The remarkable closeup above, made by a flying cameraman for The Herald and NEA Service, shows a contact being made; below, just as the two ships parted. The plane smashed the record yesterday afternoon.

HUNTER BOYS SHATTER RECORD; ARE STILL UP

Chicago, June 30.—(AP)—Outriding a terrific thunder storm and overcoming trouble in refueling, the Hunter brothers fought off sleep today to prolong their record endurance airplane flight over sky harbor at 10:40 a. m., (C.S.T.) today. They flew through their 451st hour and kept the "City of Chicago" nosed toward their intended goal, the Fourth of July and 23-days of continuous flying.

Already they have eclipsed the world's record for such a flight by 31 hours, and their motor was functioning well.

On the ground watching with admiring eyes, was the rest of the Hunter family—three of them a part of the flight—all of them from Sparta, Ill.

John and Kenneth Hunter pilot the endurance plane, worn, unkempt but determined. Walter and Albert, with "Big Ben," furnish fuel and food contacts with the record breakers. Sister Irene is still cooking the food that keeps Walter and Albert well and eager for the wearing grind, and Mothe, Hunter pats the back of her three children on the ground and sends words of encouragement to the two boys in the air.

OLD MARK PASSED.
Chicago, June 30.—(AP)—The two Hunter boys, who turned from farm to plane, roared on in triumph through the sky, placing more hours on the new world endurance record established yesterday.

The old mark was passed at 5:01:30 a. m. (C. S. T.) yesterday. At 2:40 a. m. (C. S. T.) today the Hunter brothers—John and Kenneth—Tausa was 45 and a native of Lithuania. At the time of his conviction he also was under indictment charged with the murder of A. J. Kaufner, of Plains, near Wilkes-Barre, during a holdup in November, 1928.

Appeals for commutation of the death sentences were taken to the board of pardons in all three cases, but all were refused. Places later to Governor Fisher also were without avail.

Krokosky was shot to death while he and another policeman were pursuing Tausa after an attempted burglary.

To go into the reason for this would cause me to be accused of talking politics. Suffice it to say that our present theory of the economic relationship between us and the other nations does not seem to be an outstanding success for our pocket books.

BOROTRA CONQUERS LOTT; COCHET FALLS

Tilden vs. Borotra and Allison vs. Doeg in Semi-Finals. 15,000 Cheer Allison as Cochet Loses.

Wimbledon, Eng., June 30.—(AP)—In a day of spectacular tennis featured by a smashing victory by the young Texan, Wilmer Allison, over the world's champion, Henri Cochet of France, the United States today placed three men in the semi-finals of the British championships, the fourth survivor was Jean Borotra of France.

Allison amazed the big gallery of 15,000 by stopping Cochet in straight sets, 6-4, 6-4, 6-3, in a match that marked the French star's first defeat at the hands of an American since 1927.

Bill Tilden ripped through the first set against J. C. Gregory of England and then toyed with the big Yorkshireman to win at 6-1, 6-2, 6-3, and John Doeg, Santa Monica, Calif., turned back a rival from the United States, Gregory Mangin, Newark, N. J., 6-3, 1-6, 6-3, 6-4.

The American forces met with a reverse in the fourth quarter finals when George Lott of Chicago was beaten by Borotra, 2-6, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. The Americanist expected Lott to wing Allison to lose.

Allison will meet Doeg in the semi-finals Wednesday and the winner probably will encounter Bill Tilden in the finals on Saturday. Thus an all-American final is probable.

Cochet never looked like a winning player. He played without the end of the first set did he get going. He took the seventh game and continued his supreme efforts throughout the eighth session but the nimble Texan beat him back from the net with deep, well-placed drives. Allison was holding the fort at the net and he volleyed and smashed his way through to victory.

The crowd went wild at the finish. Cochet came to the net, dropped his racket and gave the American a ringing handshake. Renewed cheers resounded through the stands as the players left the court together.

CENTRAL POST OFFICE FAVORED BY MANY

Voting in Chamber's Survey Still Remains at 30 to 1 in Favor of Site at Center.

As voting on the question of establishing a new centrally located post office on the government property at the Center continues to increase the percentage pro and con remains about the same, thirty to one favoring the plan. Of a total vote of 225 cast in the Chamber of Commerce survey of the Situation, 246 voted "yes," and nine voted negatively.

Of the affirmative vote 99 were cast from the North End. Of the negative, only one was cast from that section generally regarded as opposed to the centralization of postal facilities. A varied number of reasons for South End opposition are evidenced, the major one being that by locating the post office at the Center, South Manchester will lose its individuality, being merged under the name of "Manchester Post Office."

The suggestion has also been made, that the town change its name to "South Manchester." It is pointed out that as it is now much confusion arises because of the numerous places called Manchester. Were the town as a whole, to be called South Manchester this confusion would be erased. This, however, requires General Assembly action and is without the purpose of the Chamber of Commerce.

DETAILS COMPLETED FOR KIDDIES CAMP

Public Affairs Committee of Kiwanis Club Meets This Noon at Country Club.

A meeting of the public affairs committee of the Manchester Kiwanis Club was held this noon at the Country Clubhouse for the purpose of arranging the details for the kiddies' camp at the Hebron Game club which opens on July 14. It is the aim of the committee to make the project an even greater success than last year and is arranging for his assistants.

Those who attended the meeting today included Chairman W. G. Glenney, Dr. D. C. Y. Moore, George H. Waddell, Stephen C. Hale, William A. Knott, C. R. Burr, Helge Pearson and Thomas Ferguson. It is expected the committee will have another meeting previous to the opening of the camp.

CENTER GANG TRIES BASEBALL, WINS

Group That Will Take a Hand at Anything Once Finds the National Pastime Easy.

A fifteen inning "pitcher's battle" up to which the score was tied at 9-9, was won by the Center gang at its cottage known as "Hoover's shack" at Crystal Lake, the game being played in the "Hoover Stadium," yesterday, against a pick-up team from Springfield known as the Young Men's Hebrew Association. The final score was 10-9.

Brilliant pitching by Earl Rogers, who allowed but three strikeouts, was a feature of the game. "Happy" Madden and Roy Norris, basketball stars, also starred at baseball by getting a homer apiece. It remained for Connie Dietz, however, to slam in the winning run with a single in the eighteenth, after Joe Fitzell had doubled. The victory was made sweeter by the fact that Springfield had several professional players in the lineup.

ACRE OF TOBACCO NETTING BURNED

Damage of $1,000 at Hackett Brothers' Plantation Yesterday Noon.

More than an acre of shadegrown tobacco was ruined by fire which broke out yesterday noon at Hackett Brothers' plantation. While an official of the company rather bluntly referred to the incident as too trivial to mention, it was learned elsewhere that the loss may exceed $1,000.

The fire was a most unusual one consisting simply of the cloth netting which covers the shadegrown tobacco. The netting is, or rather was, double thickness at the point where the fire occurred on what is known as the Gilman tent.

Spreads Quickly The flames spread very rapidly but in a very surprising time a force of about 40 persons had gathered around the net with water, which was useless in attempt to check the rapidly spreading flames. There was no alternative save to go ahead of the fire and cut down the netting with knives.

"The water netting dropped onto the tobacco plants which had been growing very satisfactorily and scorched the tops of them so badly that the section where the netting burned is regarded as a loss. Adjusters have not yet arrived to estimate the loss definitely. The origin of the fire is unknown.

CHAMBERS SECRETARIES IN ANNUAL CONFERENCE

E. J. McCabe of Local Association Reports on Meeting at Concord, N. H.

Secretary E. J. McCabe of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce returned Saturday evening from the New England Conference of Chambers of Commerce Secretaries at Concord, New Hampshire which was held on Friday and Saturday and in an interview in his office this morning the Herald reporter stated that it was the sentiment of most of the Old Time Secretaries that it was one of the best the New England Association of Secretaries has ever had.

Mr. McCabe stated that at these conferences which are usually attended by secretaries representing practically every full-time Chamber of Commerce in New England, matters of great importance such as community development, industrial growth and merchandising programs are very thoroughly discussed and usually the well experienced, older secretaries looked on as the deans of the Chamber Secretary's profession, give lectures on these various subjects after which considerable time is given to round table discussions.

Secretary McCabe said the two most interesting and helpful subjects at this last conference were on the "Changes in Chamber Membership Meetings," by Paul Foster of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and "What Happens to the Industries You Buy," by Fred W. Seavey, Mr. Seavey has been secretary of the Lynn Chamber of Commerce for twelve years and was selected by the executive committee of the New England Association of Secretaries to discuss this problem. His address brought out the New England Council Survey for 1929 of the industry in the State of New England which in part was as follows:

The 1929 survey, complete with the exception of Metropolitan Boston, includes 249 cities and towns, which report 357 new industries employing 21,478 workers. In the same community 231 concerns, employing 17,417 workers, failed or moved away. Thus there is left a net gain of 126 industries and 4,061 workers. These same communities reported a net gain in 1928 of 120 industries and 5,709 employees.

A total of 23 concerns employing 2,420 workers moved into New England in 1929, while seven, employing 1,462 moved from New England to other states. Of the many city exclusive of 12 branch plants employing 831 workers established in New England by eight companies located in New York, two in New Jersey, one in Ohio, and one in California.

The secretary Fred W. Seavey went on to produce many facts and figures which he had accumulated through a study of this situation over a long period of time which proved that it was very unfortunate for communities to offer bonus and the unreasonable inducements that some smaller New England communities have been offering in the past, as it often brings a dying industry to the community only resulting in a long term loss to those furnishing financial support and great inconveniences to those making a change of employment only to find after a short time they are out of a job when the unhealthy dying industry brought to the community.

The New England Association is making even a greater study of this situation which will prove a valuable guide to local secretaries Mr. McCabe reports and it was the unanimous opinion of the many city Chamber of Commerce officials as well as State Chamber of Commerce officials and representatives of the United States Chamber of Commerce that this is a most important study for consideration.

RECALLS PARTY'S NAMES ON AUSTRALIAN TRIP

William Carr Worked With Men Who Accompanied John Hayes Back in '70's.

William Carr of Spruce street adds another phase to the Hayes brothers story, revealing the number of men in the original party that left for Australia in the Commerce and their names. They were all employees of Cheney's at the time of their departure with the exception of John Hayes. Mr. Carr worked with the boys in the silk mill at that time.

Those in the party that had become enthused over the glowing tales that the papers of the time were carrying about the riches of Australia were: John Brennan and James McDermott of West street; John Riley Thomas Riley and James Connell all of Eldridge street and John Hayes and his uncle, John Ryan, Highland Park.

The trip took 87 days and James Connell died on the voyage and was buried at sea.

All of the Australia party were South Manchester men and often gathered in the old Cheney store to talk over the prospects of the con-jugal trip. It is interesting to note that in the broadcast John Hayes asked Tom if the old Cheney store was standing yet. There are but a handful of men in South Manchester today who remember any of the party that left to seek their fortunes in the south Pacific over 60 years ago.

rival and there were tears in both of our eyes," said Bigelow. "Then you apologized to him for the letters you wrote during the war?" Bigelow was asked.

"It was less an apology than admitting to an old friend that I was mistaken," Bigelow replied, "you can take German history with a fine tooth comb and you will not find an example of a German monarch who kept peace as long as Wilhelm II. He gave to Germany in those days a prosperity unequalled by any other country in the world with the exception of the United States. It was Germany's many interest to go to war. It might have been to Russia's and England's."

"If you read 75 years of German history you realize that you cannot determine who or what started the war. There were too many forces and factors involved."

Bigelow said he spent three days and nights at Doorn "talking the hind legs off a mule." He and the Kaiser split wood to see who could cut the most.

"Who won? Modesty forbids me to say," said Bigelow. "Stories that the Kaiser is immensely wealthy are all wrong," the historian said. "He is comparatively a poor man. He did not salvage great wealth for himself when Germany collapsed. He has 19 families to support."

Bigelow said that if the German people should call on him to do so, Wilhelm would be willing to resume the throne as a matter of duty, in spite of his age.

LEISURE THE KEYNOTE OF KIWANIAN'S SPEECH

Atlantic City, N. J., June 30.—(AP)—The "vitalizing of leisure" is a serious problem of modern times, Fred C. W. Parker of Chicago, secretary of Kiwanis International, told the fourteenth annual convention of that body today. He said that "where there is a serious lack of higher opportunities for leisure, it would seem that here is a real opportunity for Kiwanis leadership to initiate plans to meet the problem." His report recommended five matters that should receive the attention of Kiwanians during the coming year. 1. That the further adoption of the plan for leadership training be urged upon districts and clubs; 2. That more attention be given to development and enlistment in service of individual members; 3. That a greater interest and activity in the sponsoring and building of new clubs be prepared; 4. That the building up of club membership be stressed and 5. That club leadership be applied to the problem of improving opportunities for use of leisure.

SUE TO STOP MERGER

New York, June 30.—(AP)—Hearing in the government's suit to prevent a proposed merger of the Standard Oil Company of New York and the Vacuum Oil Company were begun today before Fred L. Williams of St. Louis, as Special Master in Chancery. John Lord O'Brien, assistant to the attorney general, said in opening the government case that while for convenience the litigation begun in 1906 and ending with the dissolution of the parent Standard Oil Company would be referred to as the "old suit" there was no separation between it and the new suit. The government charges that the proposed merger would eliminate all competition between the two companies and violate the decrees issued in the 1906 suit. John D. Rockefeller, Sr., William Rockefeller, Henry H. Rogers, Henry M. Flagler, John D. Archbold, Oliver H. Payne and Charles M. Pratt were among the defendants in the old case.

LEARNING TO DRIVE, BOY IS BADLY HURT

Herbert Tedford 16, at Wheel, Practising, When Car is Hit by Another.

Fifteen-year-old Herbert Tedford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Tedford of 144 High street, is in the Memorial hospital with a possible fracture of the skull as the result of an automobile accident yesterday afternoon on Middle Turnpike, East. His condition, however, is not necessarily regarded as critical.

The boy's father was teaching Herbert how to drive as the boy will be 16 next August and was desirous of obtaining a license at that time. Motorcycle Policeman Eason Griffin who investigated the accident placed the father under arrest for allowing a minor to operate an automobile but judgment was suspended by Judge Raymond A. Johnson in Manchester police court this morning. Tedford was represented by William S. Hyde.

Harry J. Radding of 140 Summit street, driver of the car which figured in the collision with the Tedford machine, was charged with reckless driving and found guilty by Judge Johnson who imposed a fine of $40 and costs. Radding gave notice of appeal.

The accident occurred at the intersection of Parker street and East Middle Turnpike a few minutes after two o'clock. Young Tedford was driving south on Parker street with his father sitting beside him in the front seat. The other car was proceeding impact buried the Tedford machine up an embankment and threw the boy out of the car into the street. He landed on his head and was knocked unconscious.

At the hospital, it was stated that Tedford was suffering from at least a concussion of the brain if not a fractured skull in addition to a lacerated forehead, abrasions and possible internal injuries. Despite his injuries, Herbert had a fairly good night and was resting quite comfortably this morning. He is a Manchester high school student and will be a sophomore next September. No one else was injured in the collision but both cars were badly wrecked.

Patrick Kelley, a tobacco worker on the Mulcahy farm in Hillstown, paid a fine of $10 and costs for intoxication. He was picked up by Patrolman W. R. Martin.

James Goggin of East Hartford was fined $10 and costs for speeding his motorcycle on Center street. Traffic Officer Walter Cassels placed him under arrest.

A scrap that took place in Murphy's restaurant, now managed by Earl Gamba, Saturday night was aired in the police court this morning. The participants, Joseph Collins and Watson Mozzer were arrested on the charge of breach of the peace and Collins on the additional charge of intoxication. Each man gave his side of the story. The testimony was somewhat inconclusive and Judge Johnson decided to suspend judgment in each case.

A fine of $100 and costs was imposed on Thomas P. Aitkin of 106 Summit street for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The judge remitted $50 of the fine as the young man had an excellent record. He was represented in court by Attorney William S. Hyde. Aitkin was placed under arrest by Patrolman Joseph Prentice.

STORES HERE OPEN THIS WEDNESDAY

Merchants' Division Decides To Revoke Previous Decision; Closes All Day 4th

Manchester stores will remain open Wednesday afternoon until six o'clock this week. They will be open as usual Thursday evening until 9 o'clock and will be closed all day on Friday, the Fourth of July. A conference of the Executive Committee of the Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce, held this morning, resulted in a unanimous vote to revoke the decision of last week, which called for closing of Manchester stores Wednesday afternoon in conformance with the summer closing schedule adopted by the division.

The instant disfavor created by this decision caused the Executive Committee to reconsider the question. As the organization was established and carries on for the good of the majority and because it was the consensus that it would be best to stay open to accommodate the buying public, the original decision was reversed. It is felt that many persons will wish to do a majority of their holiday purchasing Wednesday afternoon in that a quick start to beaches and other summer resorts will be desired.

ALL KIWANIS IS JOINED IN MEETING TONIGHT

Members of Service Club All Over Country to Gather Simultaneously for Session.

Kiwanians from the U. S. and Canada opened the business sessions of their annual convention at Atlantic City today. Over 5000 members of the service organization are present for the four-day gathering. There are 1876 Kiwanis clubs in the principal cities of the U. S. and Canada with a membership of over 102,000 according to Fred C. W. Parker of Chicago, secretary of Kiwanis, who made his annual report to the delegates.

"However great the past of Kiwanis has been, it is my sincere conviction that the present is even greater and the future gives promise of large endeavor in civic and social activities," the secretary remarked. "Kiwanis at the present time has an organization structure that is sound, a leadership that is usually devoted and efficient, and a membership that is stable. The objectives of Kiwanis, which have to do with underprivileged children, two-country relations work, citizenship, etc., are a challenge in civic service and community betterment."

The secretary urged that Kiwanis continue its maintenance of the strong basic principles upon which it has prospered since its founding in 1915. "If we continue Kiwanis as an association of friendly groups of representative men for practical civic service and community work, the future of Kiwanis is assured," he said.

Under-Privileged Child Helped Over 975 Kiwanis clubs are engaged in assisting underprivileged children, Dr. John T. Macdonald, of Norristown, Pa., chairman of the children's committee, told the convention today. "Helping the unfortunate child has taken a tremendous hold upon Kiwanis, and there seems to be a natural desire on the part of many clubs to do some kind of relief work," the doctor stated.

An under-privileged child is considered as one who has a physical, mental, or moral handicap which prevents normal development. Dr. Macdonald urged Kiwanis to study child welfare work. "The tremendous strides in child study has made personal service highly valuable, and already Kiwanis is engaged in this work. Personal service means a member gives part of his time to study a child, gives him counsel and advice, and assists in educational and moral training. All this work is with consent of parent or guardian and is non-sectarian," the doctor said.

Tourists and social workers are welcoming the help of Kiwanians. On spite of the best efforts, a boy not inherently bad learns in a reformatory the tricks of real crime from the hardened offenders," he said. "In work with juvenile court cases, Kiwanis recommends a boy be given a psychological examination. The men picked for court work should be carefully picked for their fit-

It was necessary for the "Swiss" geographically gold-brained ceremonial ushers to clear the aisles before the ceremony at the altar could proceed. Hundreds of small boys stationed themselves outside the church, early in the morning, and greeted him excitedly when he arrived and the famous tennis hero had to run a gauntlet of black-smocked boys held sternly in check by the ceremonial guards.

SCHOOLS VS. CRIME

There being crime, and plenty of it, the Church League proposes to do away with it. The idea may not be exactly new but it is always interesting. The Church League's proposed methods is to "make moral and religious education as universal among the children of America as the teaching of reading, writing and arithmetic." From that point the League proceeds. It envisions a vast network of services, extending into every city, town and rural district and operating in such close partnership with the common school system as to become part and parcel of the educative scheme of the nation, with credits, exams and everything.

If the Church League or any other group or organization has a scheme whereby a large part of the time spent by children in schools would be devoted to acquiring the principles of fairness, decency, right conduct and unselfishness, then we are for it to the extent of being willing to see three-fourths of the present curriculum scrapped and the hours wasted on it employed in the development of ethical culture.

But before subscribing to the Church League's plan we should have to know pretty exactly what is meant by "religion," what by "morals" and whether it is at all possible to bracket the two as a subject to be taught to the youth of the land as didactically as it is possible to teach multiplication. Moreover we should want to know who is going to do the teaching and every last ascertainable thing about him.

As a matter of fact we are extremely skeptical about the probability of solving the crime problem by introducing the teaching of religion in the public schools. Many excellent religions have been very sedulously taught to children for a great many thousand years. And still there is crime. We are not at all sure that there is any less of it in countries where religion is most intensively taught than in some where it occupies a less dominant place in the education of youth.

And then there might arise the question, What religion? There are so many of them and every one of them occupying exactly the same level with relation to American constitutional guarantees—Christianity, Judaism, Buddhism, Confucianism, Mormonism and countless others. We assume, for obvious reasons, that the Church League would expect to teach Christianity. But, setting aside sundry cogent reasons always to be produced against the linking of the state with any special religion, what brand of Christianity would the League propose to inculcate? There are scores of sects and they all differ more or less, some irreconcilably.

tween right and wrong and an unwavering determination to live in the right and abhor the wrong. They may call this anything they like, religion, morals, moral philosophy, spiritual science, ethics—but it would be worth more than all the education that the schools now impart. And it is pretty nearly the only thing that they don't make any sort of a stab at teaching.

LIVING ON RACKETS

Edward D. Sullivan, an author who has specialized in the subject of crime and criminals, told the summer conference of the League for Industrial Democracy the other day that, counting all the 200 rackets, more or less, chief of which is bootlegging, some 6,000,000 persons in this country are getting an easy living from crime. That is something like five per cent of the population. Mr. Sullivan of course includes, besides the racketeers themselves, their families.

This is something to arrest anybody's attention. Most people, naturally, will regard it as a gross exaggeration. Perhaps it is. But the estimate is likely to set a good many folks to figuring.

Manchester is one of the best behaved towns in America, on the whole. Felonies of any sort are rarely committed here. The merest handful of police manage somehow to maintain a really remarkable degree of good order. There is probably as little petty crime here as in any place of its size in creation. It is, indeed, a very exceptional community.

Yet while we haven't any idea that so many as five per cent of the people of this community are living on the proceeds of any racket whatever, it is to be shrewdly suspected that if it were known how many of them are it would cause plenty of worthy souls in the town to lose their breath.

If you gain the confidence of any hardboiled citizen who is intimately informed on Who's Who in Bootlegging in Manchester and get him to make a sincere estimate of the number of establishments in town where a drink can be bought he will demand to know whether you mean "regulars" or "part-timers." As to the latter he will refuse to hazard a guess, but of the former he will tell you the number is anywhere from forty to seventy. This, he will tell you, includes a number of establishments at considerable distances from the thickly settled part of the town but makes no account of some others that do an inconspicuous side-line business in intoxicants.

Suppose that there are, altogether bracketing full-timers and part-timers together, to constitute the equivalent of fifty bootleggers and speakeasy proprietors in this town. The class of people engaged in this business usually have large families. Granting that the families number four persons on an average—that would make, not by any means six per cent but just about one per cent of the people of even this orderly community living on a racket. Perhaps there are not so many, but most of the town's sophisticates will tell you there are more.

Anyhow it is somewhat disagreeable to even suspect that one person out of every hundred in Manchester is supported by the booze game.

And if that number, or half that number, in a place like this, is a racket beneficiary, it is easy to imagine an infinitely larger proportionate number living on a variety of rackets not only in the great cities but in the middling sized cities and in hundreds of communities no bigger but less respectable than this one. Here, about the only racket is bootlegging. In the great cities there are scores of them. Not so difficult, when you come to think it over, to admit the possibility that out of every hundred Americans, three or four, at least, are supported by crime.

SHOWDOWN

Refusal of the Connecticut Company to guarantee adequate service to the city of Rockville and dark hints at increased fares because the company has suffered a serious loss of revenue presage a showdown before long.

The presumption that the state of Connecticut is under any obligation to insure the prosperity of the Connecticut Company is as erroneous as anything can be. If the company goes broke, all right. If it can't, for any reason, give adequate service, all right. Let it get off the map, the same as any other business lame duck and let somebody run the transportation business who can give service and who will give it and who must—and at rates of fare that will not rob the public.

Connecticut Company has no more right, under them, to exclusive privileges over the highways than the man in the moon. Any Utilities Board decision or any court decision which may be to the contrary isn't worth the paper it is written on and can be definitely and finally scrapped whenever the people of the state get sufficiently tired of the maladministration of the transportation function by this arrogant and inefficient corporation.

ANYTHING TO OFFER?

We are quite interested to know what the Democrats intend to do in order to take advantage, in the fall elections, of the relative business depression. Yes, we said relative. For the very sufficient reason that this country is doing more business today, and every day, than it ever did in the course of all its history, under a Democratic administration, with the exception of the World War period, when it would have done a capacity business even if it had an administration of Eskimos.

However, we have a relative business depression. And every Democratic caucus orator and every thick and thin Democratic newspaper is gleeful about it. Bustled is the superstition that Republican rule and prosperity go hand in hand! A Hoover can witness unemployment in his term of office as well as a Cleveland or a Wilson! Hoo-ray!

Well, grant that. Grant that there are economic forces which are beyond the control of any political party. Grant that things business-wise are terrible—which will bring nothing but smiles to those who remember the pallid starvation of '93. What has the Democratic party to offer by way of making them better?

We have been waiting for some time to hear. Up to yet we haven't heard anything—not a single peep of any sort bearing on the economic situation. Nothing but cheers for the business slump that "shows up" the wretched Republicans.

Perhaps some Democrat, somewhere, will by and by suggest something that might be done to help. So far none of them has.

SPITE

The United States Senate has done many things to earn the impatient resentment of citizens who recognize that this government has got to be something besides a puddle for big frogs to inflate themselves in, but it has never done anything more tawdry or little minded than the defeat of the proposed $250,000 appropriation for the continuance of the work of President Hoover's Law Enforcement Commission.

A cow could hide behind an attenuated wheat straw as easily as a senator—any senator—could successfully plead an urge to economy as his reason for withholding that appropriation. Only three days before, almost every senator who voted against the necessary funds for the commission had voted to squander hundreds of millions on the most ill-considered and flagrant vote seeking measure in the nation's history.

AMERICAN NATIONS WEEK

Paris, June 30.—(AP)—Paris today began observance of "American Nation's Week" in promotion of better understanding between France and the 22 American nations. Bunting and flags were strung up all over the city for each of the nations. The observance is an annual institution. This year's program includes services for the war dead at the Cathedral of Notre Dame and at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier. One hundred and fifty delegates here from all the nations will be received today by the French American committee at the American nations house.

Tonight President Doumergue will give a dinner to the American ambassadors and ministers. The basis of the week's program is the national holiday of Canada, the first day "of the month of Bolivia" celebrated in various Spanish American countries, and July Fourth, United States Independence Day.

WASHINGTON LETTER

BYRONNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

Washington, June 30.—Business conditions, the tariff and prohibition will be the most conspicuous issues in the fall election campaigns when Republicans and Democrats battle for control of Congress.

Enough primaries have been run off and enough election fights consequently are in their earliest stages to permit a fairly clear bird's-eye view of what will be happening in October. There will be some recession in Republican strength in both houses of Congress, as in 1922 to 1926 after the Harding and Coolidge victories, seems reasonably certain. There is also just the possibility that the recession will reach the proportions of an upset.

How Wet Are the Wets? Prohibition will not be a party issue. Its importance probably will not increase as it affects the general campaign. Anything that happens with regard to prohibition in the next four months is not likely to change any results. But the question in several states is whether we are actually in a recession or not. If so, it would be a real reduction of unemployment, Republican candidates to affect decisively contests where the issue already is drawn.

The only real party issue will be business and the tariff, which can almost be spoken of as a dead issue. The effects of the new tariff act and the improvement or lack of improvement for business in the next four months are likely to make a great deal of difference. Unless there is an actual boom and a real reduction of unemployment, Republican candidates for Senate and House will be on the defensive right up to November. After doing business for years as the party of prosperity and the protective tariff, the C. O. P. now finds itself with no prosperity to point to and under the necessity of showing that as exemplified in the Hawley-Smoot act isn't a very bad thing instead of a blessing.

Prosperity and tariff benefits will have to prove themselves. For many months administration spokesmen from the president down have been asserting that business conditions weren't really bad and that the worst of unemployment was over. That didn't work at all; things didn't improve the least bit. Lately Mr. Hoover has been trotting out cabinet members and other high Republicans like so many trained seals to assert that the new tariff law with its flexible provisions could be depended upon to help the country. But the new tariff rates will have to stand or fall on their own merits and it remains for the president to demonstrate that he can tinker with them successfully enough to eliminate the tariff as a Democratic issue.

If the tariff-business-unemployment issue proves important enough to wipe out the Republican majority in either chamber it seems as if the House would most likely be the one affected. Only a third of the Senate is up for re-election and all of the House. About two-thirds of the contested Senate seats are extremely unlikely to be captured by the opposition party. And it happens that most of the other dozen contests will have other issues to overshadow the tariff and the business depression.

Don't Expect a Majority

The more conservative Democrats only predict that the elections will furnish the material for a strong Democratic-Progressive coalition in the House and for a stronger coalition in the Senate. They aren't really confident of a Democratic majority in either house.

The most clean cut wet-dry fight yet assured for the fall is that between Ruth McCormick, dry Republican and J. Ham Lewis, wet Democrat, for the Senate in Illinois. A Lexington rider, in fact, they are to be the best break the wets could get this year, not even excepting Dwight Morrow's recent cleanup in New Jersey. Wet-dry election contests in Massachusetts and Montana are also considered quite likely.

As some bozo once put it, "Wall Street begins with a graveyard—and gets you there in a hurry, if you don't watch out."

HEALTH-DIET ADVICE
 BY Dr. Frank McCoy
 "The Best Way to Health"

NON-STARCHY SOUPS

Most people think that soups are more valuable in winter than in summer, but as a matter of fact soups contain so much water that their main action is to cool one off even if they are hot and cause one to feel warm temporarily. In using soups during the warm weather, however, it is a good plan to use soups which do not contain starches and which are not too hot.

I do not believe that many of you have ever tried a cold raw soup, but you would find this very refreshing on a warm day. A good soup may be made by grinding some raw tomatoes through a coarse grinder into your food chopper, and then putting on a finer grinder and grinding through some parsley celery and carrots. This makes a soup about the consistency of catsup, with a very good flavor. If you like, you may give a creamy consistency to the soup by adding a small amount of almond or peanut butter, mashed first with a small amount of the juice and then the balance slowly added. This soup should be chilled on ice before serving. Cold cooked tomatoes may be used if you prefer.

In cooking soup you will achieve the finest flavor if you chop the ingredients into pieces and start it with cold water over a low flame. The old saying that soup should smile and not laugh illustrates a proper way to boil soup, allowing it to simmer slowly but not boil vigorously. In this way the full flavors are extracted and blended together in the water.

It does not matter whether you call soup a broth, consommé, bouillon, bisque, chowder, puree or potage. It consists essentially of food particles suspended in water. In preparing soup one should remember that the food combinations should be observed in soups as in meals. Meat soups are quite wholesome when only one kind is combined with some of the non-starchy vegetables. When making a meat soup you may use this soup standard: tomatoes, but do not use crackers or any other starch in the meal at which tomato soup is served. The meat extractives when boiled out

(Head Sweats)
 Question:—C. L. M. writes: "My baby nine months old has for several months been subject to profuse perspiration which occurs only when she is sleeping or nursing, and the strange part of it is that the condition manifests only at the head. Will you tell me if this is an indication of anything wrong and what measures I can take to overcome it?"
 Answer: Most mothers dress their babies too warmly, and this is generally the cause of the baby sweating. The baby will sweat if too many covers are used while she is sleeping, or if she wears the same amount of clothing while nursing as she does at other times, as the heat of the mother's body and the effort used in nursing will make the baby's head unusually warm.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF CABLE NEWS

Western World Shares in Political Strife That Hitherto Stirred India.

By Associated Press

The western world last week shared in the political strife which for three months has rolled up a toll of casualties in the Asiatic lands of India and China.

Bolivia and Mexico furnished the action in this hemisphere. The southern American republic sustained a revolution and a change of government.

Conditions there have been unsettled since Dr. Hernandez Siles resigned the presidency some months ago. Political opponents charging that Dr. Siles had quitted merely to open the way to a new term against constitutional procedure, and animosity was directed against Hans Kundt, German commander of the Bolivian army.

Severe fighting occurred in La Paz last Sunday, following the slaying of a young girl and boy, student demonstrators, and more bloodshed resulted Wednesday after military cadets and three regiments joined the revolt, battling the two remaining loyal regiments in the capital. The insurgents captured the city on Friday.

The cabinet, conducting the government after the resignation of the president, turned the administration over to a military directorate headed by General Blanco Galindo. Dr. Siles fled for safety to the Brazilian Legation.

The revolt spread, meanwhile, the cities of Oruro, Santa Cruz, Cochabamba, Potosi and Sucre falling into the hands of the revolutionaries. No definite figures on the casualties in La Paz were obtainable but various estimates of the fighting on last Sunday alone placed the deaths as high as 40.

Mexico's trouble, occurring in the state of Chihuahua—just below the American border—was purely a political affair which took only one life, that of the police chief in Chihuahua City. Following rioting in the state capital, followers of Manuel Jesus Estrada proclaimed him governor and the incumbent, Francisco Almada, fled to the border city of Juarez. He returned after Estrada and his supporters themselves had fled, and in the meantime the Federal government investigated to determine which should be recognized. Recognition was given Almada.

In India. India's Nationalists, bitterly opposed to the British empire from its policies to its products, assailed the second volume of the Simon report as an insult. The report, prepared by a British Parliamentary commission headed by Sir John Simon, recommended that India in the future become an All-India Federation of Provinces progressing toward autonomy as their capacities increase, with the great province of Burma being made a separate territory and the British retaining control of certain powers, among them the army and foreign relations. The recommendation was, of course, far short of the Nationalist goal of independence, but since it did not even offer dominion status it was denounced by many Liberals and even Moslems, who are principally aloof from the Nationalist civil disobedience movement.

The anti-government activities of the Nationalists now are centering chiefly on the picketing of foreign cloth shops.

In China. In China the National government was reported at its most critical phase in the battle against a rebellious Northern coalition. The Northerners seized Tsinan, important capital of the province of Shantung and continued to advance on the Honan front. The government ordered 50,000 reinforcements from southern front, where Nanking troops have been battling organized forces of Communists and bandits, and decided to stand desperately in Honan.

Squadron-Leader Charles Kingsford-Smith of Australia and three companions successfully completed first east-to-west airplane crossing of the North Atlantic to land on a North American airport. He reached Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, in his historic Southern Cross, and later went to New York.

Iceland celebrated the one-thousandth anniversary of the founding of its Althing, or Parliament. The King and Queen of Denmark who occupy the same position in Iceland, participated.

NOON STOCKS

New York, June 30.—(AP)—Substantial gains were visible all hours in the Stock Market today, despite the paucity of demand. Short-covering by bears discouraging with their lack of success last week appeared to be the dominant factor.

The readjustment process which the market has recently undergone, and the apparent lack of any top heavy outside speculative interest, caused an undercurrent of cheerfulness which was translated into gains of from 1 to 2 points among the popular trading vehicles including U. S. Steel, American Can, General Motors and American Telephone.

Gains of from 3 to 6 points were established by the high flyers such as J. I. Case, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse Electric and Columbia.

Call money renewed unchanged at 2 per cent.

SOUTH METHODIST CHOR IN ITS ANNUAL PICNIC

Go to Coventry Lake Saturday to Enjoy Outing at the Hohenthal Cottage.

The South Methodist church choir, on Saturday had a most enjoyable picnic. Leaving the church at 2:30 in autos the party proceeded to Coventry Lake, where headquarters were established at the cottage of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Hohenthal.

On arrival a section of the party went swimming, while others were interested in such sports as baseball, volley ball, and boating. Activities continued with amusing features at times standing forth, and in particular as seen in the three-legged race for women. Some excitement resulted by the over enthusiasm shown by the competitors which accounted for the downfall of their ambitions, and also perhaps scraped knees. However the young women in the volley ball games showed a degree of skill that promises well for further laurels in sport, if they decide that the aches and pains following are worth it.

When the call for eats sounded, none of the party hesitated but entered the combat, armed with appetites that meant ill to the victuals. Hot dogs, cooked on a charcoal brazier, doughnuts, sandwiches, and coffee were supplied, and enjoyed by everyone, at this supper recess, while ice cold lemonade, was also to be had throughout the day.

When the shades of night came along adjournment was made to the porch, and chorus singing of old time melodies was enjoyed. Mrs. Hohenthal supplying the accompaniment on a portable harmonium. That this gave added pleasure for their many kindnesses as shown by the happy time enjoyed by all.

Group pictures, and also unexpected individual snapshots, were secured, and it is hoped that they will be but the beginning of a gallery of such events that will be prepared for future reference. The party returned to Mr. and Mrs. Hohenthal their thanks for the excellence of arrangements made, and for their many kindnesses as shown by the happy time enjoyed by all.

MANY LIVES LOST IN LA PAZ REVOLT

Rebels Victorious—Plan to Restore Bolivia to a Constitutional Basis.

La Paz, Bolivia, June 30.—(AP)—Victorious at every turn, although not without a heavy price in human life and property, a revolting military group today developed plans for restoring the nation to a constitutional basis. La Paz and other cities were without fighting for the first time in a week.

Soldiers of the revolution venturing abroad today, were showered with flattery by exultant citizens of the landlocked republic, happy in their escape from the alleged dictator's rule.

Hot dogs, cooked on a charcoal brazier, doughnuts, sandwiches, and coffee were supplied, and enjoyed by everyone, at this supper recess, while ice cold lemonade, was also to be had throughout the day.

When the shades of night came along adjournment was made to the porch, and chorus singing of old time melodies was enjoyed. Mrs. Hohenthal supplying the accompaniment on a portable harmonium. That this gave added pleasure for their many kindnesses as shown by the happy time enjoyed by all.

Count von Luckner said he expected to have the damage repaired at once and that there would be little if any delay in the ship's departure which was scheduled for tomorrow.

FOR ADULT EDUCATION

Columbus, O., June 30.—(AP)—The National Education Association is preparing to assume the role of a tripartite officer to bring half-educated grown-ups back to school.

The general impression that the association is chiefly interested in educating youngsters was dispelled by Miss E. Ruth Pyrtle, of Lincoln, Neb., president of the organization in an address prepared for the 68th annual convention here today.

The association has its eye on the adults of the nation, just as much as the children, and hopes to arrange a countrywide program that will make students of all working men and women, banish illiteracy and carry those who already have been well schooled along to a higher education, Miss Pyrtle said.

"The old theory that people do not learn after twenty-five has been exploded by years of research and experiment, she said.

Joseph Rosier, president of the West Virginia State Teachers' College, Fairmount, W. Va., was one of the first candidates in the field to succeed Miss Pyrtle as president at Friday's election.

NEED MORE PRIESTS IN SUBURBAN ROME

Pope Pius Says Protestant Proselyting Must Be Combated in Eternal City.

Rome, June 30.—(AP)—"Protestant proselyting" in Rome must be combated by an increased number of parish priests to serve the outlying quarters of the city, Pope Pius XI declared today in an allocution opening a secret consistory at which five cardinals were created.

The Pope said that the Protestant sects from 1880, the year in which the Italian troops took Rome from the Holy See, "have not ceased to carry out the work of corrosion and conquest with ever-growing insistence."

Observers indicated their supposition that he had in mind the missionary activities of the American Methodists although he mentioned no specific denomination.

"Tolerated Cults." "If we might tolerate that in the practical order of things these sects be called 'cults admitted' which under the Italian statute were well denominated 'tolerated cults' we could not expect that those very cults should later be treated in a fashion that seems they not only are tolerated in full and admitted in practice but also not a little favored—this is something that can not but aid the deplorable proselyting."

The Pontiff then spoke gratefully of the "providential work" now being carried on in Rome by the institute for the Preservation of the Faith. He referred to the new institute being prepared for the furnishing of churches and parishes in the suburbs.

Referring to religious persecution in Russia and his now famous mass of expiations in St. Peter's Cathedral on March 19, the Pope exhorted the cardinals to continue the crusade of prayer and ordered special prayers for the end of the persecution to be said at the conclusion of every mass.

TWENTY ARE KILLED IN MEXICAN RIOTS

Torreón, Mexico, June 30.—(AP)—The correspondent of La Prensa reports that twenty Communists and police were killed, and eight wounded in a severe encounter in the streets of Matamoros, Coahuila, near here.

The dispatch stated that the Communists had sought permission to parade in protest against the government's arrests of Communists in various parts of Mexico.

Three times refused, they decided to march anyway. The police blocked their path. Members of the demonstrators opened fire on the officers.

Arturo Pema, chief of police, the report said, was wounded. He had given orders for a general attack. Troops were hurried to the scene. The dispatch said they soon restored order.

Silver dollars bearing the date "1877" should be scrutinized closely as there are a number of such dollars in circulation in town that are said to be counterfeit. The counterfeits are light in weight and the edges are a trifle ragged.

LIFE AND LOVES OF KING CAROL AS BIZARRE AS COMIC OPERA PLOT—
FATHER ALSO LOVED COMMONER, BUT FINALLY WED PRINCESS

BY MINOTT SAUNDERS
NEA Service Writer

Paris, June 30.—Uneasy lies the heart when the head wears a crown! As bizarre as any comic opera plot and as odd as any movie romance have been the life and loves of King Carol II who has just returned to his native Rumania to take the throne that he renounced four years ago when a pretty face, a pair of flashing eyes and two rosebud lips proved more appealing than a kingdom.

King Carol's young life has been full of turbulent love affairs. In a dozen years, two of Europe's fairest maidens have been his wives and one has been his mistress. He has learned about women from each of them—but evidently, not very much.

First, it was Zizi Lambrino. Zizi was the raven-haired and laughing-eyed daughter of a Rumanian cop and back in the wartime days of 1918. Her charms proved irresistible to the debonaire young prince—he was then only the heir to the throne—so he deserted his regiment and eloped with her to Russia where they were married.

Next, it was Princess Helen. Helen's blood was royal; her father was the king of Greece and she was one of the most beautiful maidens in all the courts of Europe. Conveniently, both church and state annulled young Carol's marriage to Zizi, the commoner, robbed their baby of a name, and arranged a state marriage with Princess Helen.

Then it was Madama Lupescu, red-headed and a dashing adventuress. She was just as good-looking as the royal Princess Helen and seemed to have all those captivating charms that Carol's quiet and home-loving wife lacked. So he deserted his wife and royal baby, renounced his right to the throne and ran away to live in Paris with her.

Now, his four-year moral holiday over, and his tempestuous career steadied by the weight of more mature years, Carol has come back to Rumania to attempt to make his peace with his wife and recover the throne from his 9-year-old son who ascended to it upon the death of King Ferdinand during Carol's absence.

The gay and reckless young Carol is a product of his environment and inheritance. He grew up surrounded by the deep political conspiracies and romantic intrigues of the Balkans where marriages were made for political reasons and love went roaming anywhere.

At 15, he was carrying on a violent romance with a woman who was 30, and royalty was laughing in an amused way. A little older, he began to "play" the chorus girls of the National Theater at Bucharest, and it seems that the theater manager won royal favor by aiding him.

Such was the atmosphere in which he grew up.

So it had been with his father, old King Ferdinand who died of a broken heart after Carol had renounced the throne and run away to Paris to live with Madama Lupescu. For old King Ferdinand, back in his youthful days, had a somewhat similar love affair of his own. In those days he was the handsome young Prince Ferdinand, nephew of the childless King Carol I and presumptive heir to the throne. The old Queen Elizabeth, King Carol's wife, was a sentimentalist with a somewhat warped view of life who could see no harm in anything done in the name of love.

The young Prince Ferdinand fell madly in love with one of the old queen's ladies-in-waiting, Helene Vacaresco her name was and she was as beautiful and intelligent as any woman in Rumania—but, alas, the daughter of a commoner.

Nevertheless, the sentimental old Queen Elizabeth encouraged the romance—as a poetess, she reasoned that true love should have its way, royal considerations to the contrary notwithstanding.

The old queen gave her consent to a morganatic marriage, but when the hard-bottled old King Carol heard of the plan he gave vent to an outburst that shook the palace rafters. If Prince Ferdinand married a commoner, he stormed, it would cost him the throne.

Ferdinand, finding the lure of the throne more compelling than a charming face, chose the former and the marriage plans collapsed.

Years later his son, the present Carol, made the same opposite decision when he chose to elope with Madama Lupescu and let the throne go to hang.

Mlle. Vacaresco has since pioneered in Europe in defense of women's rights. She fought the purchase of women for harems and has participated in League of Nations discussions.

Ferdinand was only an indifferent bridegroom when the beautiful Princess Marie, the 16-year-old granddaughter of Queen Victoria of England, was brought to Rumania in 1893 to marry him at the age of 20.

They had never seen each other before, for many of the Balkan royal marriages are made in the councils of diplomats who are seeking favorable unions to promote political alliances. But the wedding was held and little Rumania won an English princess for its throne and a powerful ally—a power that was sufficiently strong many years later, when the World War came on, to cause the German-born royal family of Rumania to cast their lot with the allies against the Kaiser.

Like his son Carol, who had three amazing romances, the late King Ferdinand of Rumania also had an affair of the heart. Above, right, is Mlle. Helene Vacaresco whom young Ferdinand sought to marry a generation ago when he was crown prince and she was one of the most beautiful girls among the queen's ladies-in-waiting. Left is Queen Victoria's granddaughter, who at 16 became Ferdinand's royal bride, though neither had even seen the other before. Lower right is King Ferdinand as he appeared shortly before his death several years ago.

Beautiful, vivacious and intelligent, Marie made a good queen for the stolid King Ferdinand and soon eclipsed him to a point where she became the real head of the royal household and famous as "the mother-in-law of the Balkans."

She bore him six children, five of whom are still living. So well has she succeeded in the royal marriage market, that she has married one of her three daughters to the king of Jugo-Slavia, another to a prince of Greece and is said to have designed on the Prince of Wales, the greatest "catch" of all, for her third and youngest girl.

Queen Marie's close friendship with Prince Babu Stirbey, a powerful and equally mysterious figure at the royal court until his banishment by King Carol the other day, caused much comment in Rumania for years. It is reported that Carol, then crown prince, once struck Stirbey in the face. When Carol returned as king one of his first acts was to have the private telephone line between the queen's apartments and Stirbey's palace ripped out.

Princess Ileana and Prince Nicholas, the two unmarried children in this unusual royal family, have also had their affairs of the heart. Nicholas is said to have "rushed" an American actress playing in a London music hall and to have eloped to Paris with a Mme. Tahon, only to be recalled by his mother. The mysterious cancellation of Ileana's recent engagement to Count Alexander of Hochburg of Germany has never been explained, and the young princess, when only 18, is also reported to have had a love affair with a Rumanian naval officer, a married man.

Her other child is the new King Carol II, the Don Juan of Balkan royalty, the first of whose gay, romantic adventures will be told tomorrow.

NEXT: Zizi Lambrino . . . a prince renounces his throne for a pretty commoner, and then reconsiders and deserts his wife and baby.

5 NEW CARDINALS CREATED BY PIUS

Vatican City, June 30.—(AP.)—Pope Pius XI held a secret consistory this morning in the Consistorial Hall and created five new cardinals in one of the most colorful ceremonies of the Catholic church.

The five prelates so honored were not present, only the Pope and the cardinals of the curia were within the hall when the consistory began, and the doors were locked and guarded by Swiss and Noble Guards. The new cardinals waited at their residences until the "big-bullet" or note should arrive acquainting them of their election. They were:

Monsignor Sebastiano Leone da Siveira Cintra, 48, condutor archbishop of Rio Janeiro. He is the youngest of the new wearers of the purple.

Monsignor Francesco Marchetti Selvaggiani, 59, widely known in America, where he was auditor of the Pontifical delegation at Washington. He is now secretary of the Congregation of the Propagation of the faith during the war. Stationed in the nunviature at Munich, he labored superhumanly for the better treatment and exchange of prisoners and invalids. He is the sole Roman of the five.

Monsignor Raffaello Carlo Rossi, 54, a Carmelite, assessor of the Consistorial Congregation.

Monsignor Giulio Serafini, 63, secretary of the congregation of the council.

Noted Arbitrator Monsignor Achille Lienart, bishop of Lille, one of the youngest bishops of France, having been elected to the See of Lille only two years ago. He is noted as an arbitrator between capital and labor.

Today's consistory was significant because it marked the close of the Pope's jubilee year, celebrating the fiftieth anniversary of his coronation.

Half-an-hour before the consistory was scheduled to begin, the old streets leading to the Vatican, the Borgo Vecchio and the Borgo Nuovo, were crowded with people watching the arrival of automobiles carrying vividly-robed cardinals, prelates and papal officials. In St. Peter's Square another crowd gathered to watch the Swiss Guards present arms as each cardinal passed under the gate of the bells.

The public consistory, in which the new cardinals will publicly receive their red hats from the Pope, will take place Thursday.

Malta Situation Referring to the Malta situation the Pope, declaring it of the most serious nature, laid down three principles. They were that the Maltese temper was not aroused by the Holy See or Maltese officials; that the return of tranquility and peace "notwithstanding our sincere effective desire and the desire of the episcopacy itself has been rendered impossible by the actions of persons and facts independent of our will, indeed, contrary to our will because of contrary interests of the Catholic religion. The Pope expounded another principle, "at no time has our intervention and that of the Maltese episcopacy wished to enter the political field. Instead it has limited itself, always, as was its strict pastoral duty, to recall, proclaim and inculcate those principles of moral law wherefrom Catholic conduct and actions can never depart."

The Pope said he did not wish a limitation of liberty but solely protection and saving from degeneration into license the moral laws which regulate the use of liberty and indicate the confines between permission and prohibition and intimate respect for liberty.

AMERICAN SAINTS.

Rome, June 30.—(AP.)—Churches of Rome today celebrated the first day of a three day observance of canonization of eight North American martyrs in St. Peter's yesterday.

This was "Canada Day" begun with a pontifical mass sung by Archbishop Forbes of Ottawa, assisted by the Canadian college, in the church of Gesu, mother church of the Jesuit order.

Father Gillet, general of the Dominican order, preached at a later service at the church of the sanctuary. The benediction was by Cardinal Rouleau of Quebec.

DANCING JUDITH

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JUDITH GRANT, beautiful artist's model, shares her Greenwich Village apartment with CHUMMY MORLEY, a lovely girl whose mind has been a blank ever since ALAN STEYNE, her lover, disappeared seven years ago. Steyne returns but Chummy fails to recognize him; meanwhile he and Judith fall in love, and he tells Judith that he never loved Chummy and never knew Chummy loved him. Chummy's memory suddenly returns, she recognizes Steyne; and feeling bound by a tie of honor, Steyne—with Judith's approval—asks Chummy to marry him. Judith, meanwhile, has aroused the infatuation of BRUCE GIDEON, rich financier, who offers to star her in a musical show. She agrees and begins studying to become a dancer. BASTIENY DUMONT, young painter who is also in love with her, goes to Steyne and tells him that Judith is "in Gideon's clutches."

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII
Under other circumstances, Dumont might have been astonished at Steyne's vehemence. As it came from Chummy's betrothed, and as Bastien knew the enormous debt of gratitude the girl owed her friend, it seemed natural enough. "You know the world, Steyne," he went on hurriedly. "You know that when a millionaire, a man of 40, takes an interest in a girl in your position, there can be no good in it for her. It's all nonsense about his helping her with her dancing, and all that."

"You mean that she can't dance?" asked Steyne.
"Of course she can dance. That's not the point. It's this man's influence that made Garvenius take her on. The result is that she's killing herself, and one sees nothing of her. She is constantly out with this fellow—"

"Constantly out with him?" put in Steyne with suppressed excitement.
"Well, perhaps that's an exaggeration. Anyhow, she does go out with him to lunch and dinner and to the play."

"Do you know anything against the man, Dumont?"
"Yes, as a companion for Judith—enough to know that it can do her any good to be about with him. You don't know Judith as I do, Steyne," he went on agitatedly. "She thinks she knows the world inside out. Well, in a way she does, I suppose—worse luck!—but perfectly innocent of the people she is concerned. She thinks the best of everybody. She never dreams that anyone would take her in. That's what makes it difficult."

"Why don't you speak to her?"
"I have, but it's not the slightest use. You see, Judith never would take any notice of me. I thought, if you would speak to her—"

"Why should she take any notice of me, Dumont?"
"Oh, you see, she thinks a lot of you. You see, you're a bit different from the rest of us. She knows you have traveled a lot and would look at things a bit differently; and then, of course, she couldn't think you were jealous."

There was a moment's pause. Then Steyne asked in a very quiet voice:
"And would she think you were jealous, Dumont?"

"She knows I am!" The Latin half of poor Bastien got the better of him. "It's torture to me to see her with anybody. Steyne," he went on with a groan. "I can't help it. She brought the brute to the Lemon Grove not long ago, and she danced with me and then went off with him, walking home. He doesn't dance. It will drive me mad if it goes on!"

"That means you love Judith, Dumont?" Steyne's voice was still very quiet.
"Of course I do! And hopelessly!"

"I—I am sorry," Alan said, and he hardly knew whether he meant it or not. At any rate, he could not help liking the young man for his candor and for his confidence in his friend.
"But even if I did not care for Judith, it would be the same," Dumont went on fiercely. "I could not bear to see any girl mixed up with a man like him. Consider Steyne—an immensely rich man, and Judith in a way under an obligation to him. It's horrible—perfectly horrible! I can't stand the thought of it. And Judith—Judith!" He jumped up and began to pace the room. Then, with a great effort, he calmed himself and went on: "You see, Steyne, you might have more influence over her. You wouldn't be carried away by your feelings, as I should."

"It was a grim joke."
"I can't promise to do anything, Dumont," Alan said. "Judith would probably resent it from me even more than from you; but perhaps, if I spoke to Clarissa—"

"Oh, utterly useless, my friend! Women don't understand these things. I happen to know that Chummy thinks Gideon merely a plutocratic patron of the arts. If you had only seen his face!"
"I have, Dumont. I saw him once, and I thoroughly agree with you. We must try to influence Judith. What did she say when you spoke to her?"
"Oh, she was all prickles. She accused me of spying on her. Then she said that it was purely a business arrangement, that she was taking up dancing, and that he was advising her."
Steyne understood, although Judith had never treated him exactly like that.
After that they talked of other things, and drank and smoked; but there was a feeling of uneasiness in the air that no friendliness could dissipate.
"I'm afraid I've worried you, Steyne," Dumont said rather awkwardly, when he rose to go. "After all, what can you do?"
Alan smiled rather absently.

"Anyhow, perhaps it was a relief to have it out," he said. "But you're quite right, Dumont—something must be done."

They shook hands cordially. After Dumont had gone, Steyne sat on far into the night, alternately frozen with fear and boiling with indignation.
What could one do but set one's teeth and live on helplessly, like an animal waiting for the butcher's knife? Judith was her own mistress. One could not talk to her as to a child, or as to an ordinary girl. She knew the world—hateful phrase! She earned her own living. She was free to choose her own companions.
But reasoning never subdued raging blood. Alan loved her—that was the only thing that counted. He loved her; he loved her as a man loves only one woman in the world. In the middle of the night he flung himself out of his chair, went out on the roof, and gazed at the stars, over New York lying asleep.

By the morning he was calmer and saner, but it was only a superficial calm. Every nerve was still on edge. He was never in a less suitable frame of mind to appeal to Judith, or to pronounce a warning; and yet it just happened that he met her for the first time since his return from Maine.
He was passing the Cafe Turc, having called at a little shop near by to get some colors. She came out of the cafe alone, walking with her head down, and in a great hurry.

He had to speak her name twice before she looked up. Then a brilliant, excited smile flashed across her face. There was an unnatural look about her. She was shabby and made up, as usual; only her careless, happy-go-lucky air had gone. Her whole being seemed to be concentrated on something.
"How do you find Chummy looking?" she inquired. "My but she's making a positive hit!"

No place and time, this, for Alan's purpose, and yet he was desperate. He walked beside her. "Where are you going?"
"To the dancing school."
"Well, I'll walk with you, if I may."

"Bless you, I've no time to walk farther than the square. I'm going on a bus."
"Then I'll come as far as the square," he said, with a kind of harsh doggedness that was the result of jarred nerves. "I want to talk to you, Judy."

Judy laughed, and the pansy eyes took on a steely glitter.
"We are solemn!" she exclaimed. "I know," Steyne said. "Judy, I'm awfully worried and upset. You must listen to me—if only as your friend."
"I know what you mean. You do not approve of my dancing. You are going to lecture me."

"It has nothing to do with your dancing," he protested. His jarred nerves made her abrupt, and her fatigue made her as touchy as a cat in a thunder storm. "I only want to warn you."
It was an ill-chosen word. She did not look at him, walking with her head high, her nose pointing heavenward.
"Judy"—Steyne grew painfully earnest, his emotion dominating anything else—"do listen to me! It's only—"

"For my good, I know," she interrupted glacially.
"Do listen to me, Judy!"
"It's Mr. Gideon you're worried about, isn't it?" she asked, with a sudden veering round to amiability. "I thought so. I can see it plainly—Bastien has been at it. He thinks I am going to the devil, poor soul. He thinks I was born yesterday."

"Judy, don't be cross! You are young."
"I know, Methusalem!"
"I'm not going to argue. I do want you to think that I've no feeling except that I'm frightened for you."
"Thanks very much, but there's no need for it. When I want advice, I'll ask for it. Meanwhile, let me assure you that Mr. Gideon is the kindest"—she paused—"most thoughtful"—she paused again—"most considerate person I have ever met."

Steyne made a gesture of despair.
"And," she went on, her hoarse voice growing hoarser every second, "I should advise you to get married as soon as possible, and—to mind your own business."
They had reached the square. Without another word Judy darted through the traffic, crossed the road, and jumped on a bus that was just slowing down, leaving the young man dazed and feeling rather as if he had cut himself with a razor.

HOW TO SHOP

BEST TOOLS ARE OF FORGED STEEL

BY WILLIAM H. BALDWIN

The department store, the "five and ten" stores, and innumerable hardware stores and small shops carry an assortment of household hardware—that is, hammers, screw-drivers, saws, hatchets, etc.—all suitable for use by the householder without calling in the services of a carpenter or other mechanic.

Tools are graded according to the quality of toughness of the steel and the quality of the handles. The cheapest, poorest grades are of cast steel, which are dear at the price. If a cast-steel product is finely finished it may be difficult to distinguish it from a better quality of steel. If the shopper is in doubt, she should compare it with a higher priced article made for the same purpose. The cast-steel tool will be much lighter in weight.

The better tools are made of forged steel, subdivided into die and drop-forged products. The latter are the better. Handles should be of hickory or ash, tough and free of knots.

It's a very flattering outfit worn with a matching blue hat. The white geometric motifs brighten the navy blue ground of the voile. The collar and rever is of plain navy blue voile.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

BY SISTER MARY
NEA Service Writer

One of the most satisfactory vegetables for home-canning is the "baby" beet. Beets are one of the few vegetables that do not lose their flavor and natural sweetness if between the gathering and use. They are less perishable than almost any other vegetable, and they require less time for canning runs less risk of spoilage after canning. The perfect freshness of peas and beans, corn and tomatoes is such an important factor in their keeping qualities that it is seldom payed to try to can these vegetables unless one has one's own garden.

Although winter beets are available, many women find them inconvenient and expensive to use on account of the long cooking required. The housekeeper who buys her fuel by foot or unit finds that several hours spent in the cooking of a vegetable is quite an item.

The oven-method of canning is particularly easy for beets. If you have a thermostatic controlled oven, the regulator is set to 275 degrees F. and the oven heater while packing the vegetables. An oven thermometer can, of course, be used, but frequent checking is necessary to insure satisfactory results.

Small beets about the size of a walnut require no slicing or slicing and are most attractive for serving. Larger ones should be cut in quarters, diced or sliced ready for serving. More beets can be put in a can if they are cut and it saves cans and storage space.

Wash beets thoroughly, using a vegetable brush. Cut off tops, leaving about two inches of stem. Take care not to break the skin nor cut the long straight tap root. Drop into a kettle of boiling water and boil 15 or 20 minutes. Dip into cold water to make easier to handle and slip off skins. Pack in hot sterilized jars, adding 1/2 teaspoon salt, 1/2 teaspoon sugar and 1 teaspoon lemon juice to a pint jar. Add enough boiling water to fill jars to within an inch of the top, half seal and place in preheated oven. Leave for two hours, remove from oven and completely seal. Invert for a few minutes, to be sure the seal is perfect, then place upright and let stand upon as a jar is filled, place it in the oven and keep jars about two inches apart to allow for circulation of heat around each jar. Two racks may be used if the oven is large enough.

Work fast and dip beets in cold water only long enough to slip skins, not long enough to cool them.

The oven method of canning has many advantages. There is no heavy lifting of water to fill a large container, as is necessary for the hot water bath. There is no over-heated, steam-filled house during the processing period and there is less danger of burns in removing cans from a warm oven than from a boilerful of boiling water. The oven is always convenient and requires no storing from season to season.

DECORATIVE WALL PAPER

If your plain closet doors seem terribly plain, try decorating them with some very pretty border wall paper and shellacing them. Use a fine edge around the border paper and it gives the impression of a framed picture.

SEWING BASKET

With the return of buttons, hooks and eyes and other "findings," in the realm of women's wear, an old-fashioned sewing basket comes in handy. Keep buttons tied together with thread, hooks and eyes in a small bottle, thread on a rod and needles put in their packaging.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
© 1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

The longer I live, the more necessity I see for children having playmates that suit them.
Over and over and over again, I observe children being shoved aside, imposed upon, and ridden over roughshod by stronger-willed companions, and it's neither fair nor fair. This very thing, we are discovering, is the greatest contributing factor to that cruel and unhappy thing, inferiority complex.

We can talk all we like about children learning to take their own parts, and developing enough spirit to cope with their more determined neighbors, but it doesn't work—that's all there is to it, not if the difference is great and the gap hard to breach.
The stronger will go on getting stronger, and the less assertive will get more submissive and less confident as time goes on. Because he will soon take it for granted that the other has all the rights and he'll be contented to take what's left.

Avoid the Bullies.
If I saw a group of two little girls playing together constantly, and just as constantly one got her choice of games, had to be waited on first in the candy-store, had to have most slides down the sliding-board, and flaunted her good clothes, that she'd bullied her mother or into letting her wear, before the longing eyes of her more modestly dressed companions—if I saw this day after day, and my child were the follower, I should take her away from the stronger-willed child, if possible, and find a playmate for her whose will matched her own and who would increase her own self-respect and confidence. Certainly she'd be happier.

If I had a boy who played with another boy day after day and who was permanently unhappy because the other boy could do things better than he could and made him feel his inferiority, I'd break up the association and search for a playmate who could not do too many things too well and who would give my own son a chance to develop. Competition is good but it can also be disastrous.

When Standards Differ.
Oftentimes it isn't a matter of being weaker-willed, or less clever, but that fact that some children are trained to be thoughtful and kind to others; the culture and refinement of the carefully-brought-up child often cannot compete with the young steamroller whose tutoring about other people's feelings and rights may have been somewhat casual. It isn't fair to children to teach them consideration and then turn them over to the others to take what treatment they can get. I firmly believe that this "following" business is a serious thing. True, we can't be leaders, but wise leadership and selfish leadership are two different things.

HOLE PREVENTION

If your style of walking seems to encourage holes in the heels of your stockings very quickly, try putting a small square of adhesive tape on your bare heel just at the shoe line, before you put your stockings on. It often helps.

ROSE GARDENS

A single big pink rose and petals from another make a stunning garnish for a pudding. Place the rose at one side of the dish and scatter the petals over the top.

Hints On How To Keep Well by World Famed Authority

DOCTORS FINE SIMPLE EXERCISES BEAT "REDUCING MACHINES"

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

About 1857 a Swedish physician named Gustav Zander began to use mechanical means for massage and exercise.

These machines were the first ever used for the purpose. Since that time various devices have been developed, including the hobby horse, popularized by Mr. Coolidge, and all sorts of vibrators, shakers and springs, as well as machines for manipulating and vibrating the muscles of the human body.

In a recent consideration of the use of these machines, the Council on Physical Therapy of the American Medical Association condemns them, although not unreservedly, for several reasons. In the first place, it is felt that the psychology that their use develops in the patient is wrong, since they convey the impression that the machine has curative qualities and that it is unnecessary for the patient to do anything but that he can leave everything to the machine.

It is argued that the machine will accomplish things that cannot be accomplished by simple exercise, but in the instance of extra fat around the waist actually better results are accomplished by leg and abdominal exercises without apparatus, and better results for weight reduction can be accomplished by a walk or slow run in the fresh air. The machines treat only one part of the body at a time and do not have the advantage of general exercise in developing other parts of the body.

Indeed, the Council on Physical Therapy points out that vibratory massage of the abdomen with a strap attached to a motor for 10 minutes cannot give as much benefit as a 10-minute fast walk with conscious effort given to holding in the stomach and abdomen.

The tendency is for people to become very tired promptly of the shaking devices and hence to discontinue all exercise. Moreover, a few instances have been reported in which people with appendicitis, or rupture, or ulcers of the stomach have been seriously injured without any adequate knowledge of their physical condition.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Picture postal cards from lucky friends who get abroad can be used to colorful and interesting advantage in the following manner. Makes a border of these little pictures around the top of the tiling in the bathroom by pasting them on. When this is done, shellac the whole in the same color, as the ceiling and walls of the bathroom, if this is a pale tone. If not, use clear shellac on them.

You will be surprised how many times your wandering eye absent-mindedly rests upon a view of the Voigt, Constantinople, a bit of the Nile or Montmartre in the course of the summer. You'll be surprised also how pleasant this vicarious traveling can be.

INVITING SEAT

Do try to have a place outside that invites you to come into the open. It may be a comfortable chair on the porch, a shady nook in an arbor, a swing that moves gently while you shell peas, darn the family stockings, or peel potatoes. Such a lure can take you into the open at least two hours daily, which will aid both your health and your disposition.

SENSE and NONSENSE

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

CONSOLATION
Though perspiration trickles down
My neck, and though I sigh
The summer's not so bad, you know—

Vacation: Leaving the comforts of home for the discomforts of a summer resort.

A bride, is a young woman who goes ahead and invites guests to the duck dinner before her husband gets back from the shooting trip.

Stranger at door—I am trying to find a woman whose name I have forgotten, but I know she lives in this neighborhood. She is a woman easily described, and perhaps you know her—a singularly beautiful creature, with pink and white complexion, lovely eyes and hair such as a goddess might envy.

Among those who enjoy your vacation are those you have left behind to worry about without you for two or three weeks.

Two small boys were boasting about the wealth of their respective fathers.

The One—My father has so much money that he doesn't know how to spend it.

The Other—That's nothing, my father has got so much that my mother doesn't know how to spend it.

They say the wrist watch was invented by a Scotchman who objected to taking anything out of his pocket.

Another need of the times is a postcard to mail the vacationist—a card inquiring: "What in thunder do

I care how many blankets you sleep under?"

When a merchant goes on a cash basis he naturally heads off a lot of running accounts.

We sing "Rescue the perishing" when it's the overfed who need rescuing.

And by the way, when nature gives a man a permanent haircut it's the real thing.

Many a former movie star has talked himself out of a job.

Hired Man (mopping his brow)—
Gosh, boss, it ain't much fun workin' with the thermometer 98 in the shade.

Farmer Haymaker—Well, ye dern fool what's that to you? I'm not askin' you to work in the shade, am I?

A fashionable tailor had taken his daughter into partnership with high hopes of the future upon her graduation from College, but the situation was distinctly not so good.

Tailor (mourning)—I'm ruined!
What an idiot I was to let her go into business with me!

Sympathetic Friend—What's happened, old man?

Tailor—Why, the first thing she did was to change the name to Ye Olde Clothes Shoppe."

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN—PICTURES BY KING

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE.)

The man who drove the hay cart said, "My home is not so far ahead. That's where I'm going to stop. Where will you? Things go from there? We're pretty far from town right now. I guess, though, you'll get back somehow. "Twill do you lots of good to walk out in the open air."

in and said, "I guess this bunch has been around enough for one long day. I'll gladly pay for all our board." "Hurray! Hurray!" the Tinymites roared. "We're going to sleep in his big barn. Oh, gee, that will be swell."

(The Tinymites visit a queer toy-shop in the next story.)

MONES Pinehurst
"GOOD THINGS TO EAT"

THAT DOWNWARD TREND

Various governmental agencies are trying to keep up the prices of foods, in the interest of the farmers. Yet prices keep on going down—a little.

It's a big problem, this one of general prices—whether they ought to be higher or lower for the good of the whole country. But it's a problem which isn't up to us to solve. All we know is that whenever a price goes down, to us, our price goes down, to the customer.

Please note that most of the decreases in price are on the cheaper grades of foods—that high quality units have been and are being less affected. All the wholesale market reports show that.

Pinehurst will keep exact pace with any recession in the prices of quality goods. Be assured of that.

Pinehurst will be open all day Wednesday. Closed all day Fourth of July.
