WARN AUTOISTS OF DANGERS IN DRIVING ON 4TH

Days Preceding and Following Holiday Also Produce Many Accidents State Records Disclose.

Three dangerous days are just ahead for motorists and pedestrians. The records of the Connecticut Department of Motor Vehicles disclose that the holiday, July 4th and the days immediately preceding the following form one of the greatest accident periods each year. Indications are that conditions this year will be particularly bad because the holiday summer week-end traffic will be added to that created by the holiday merry-makers.

Last year department figures show there were 236 accidents in the three-day period, resulting in death of 4 persons, 100 injuries for 1937. In 1928 there were 334 and 188 injuries in 282 accidents and an even worse record was that of 1927, when 7 deaths and 175 injuries resulted from 462 accidents.

It is conservatively estimated that between 250,000 and 300,000 motor vehicles will be using Connecticut highways during the next three days. Most of the traffic will be on the streets and improved roads. There are about 5,000 miles of such highways in the state, which, considering space for two-way traffic, would equal 52,800,000 feet. The 300,000 vehicles considered in the estimate, when standing would use up at least 4,500,000 feet, or about one-twelfth of the available road space. This means that if all of the 300,000 vehicles were to move at the same time, each vehicle would have only twelve times its own length in which to operate.

It is improbable, of course, that so many vehicles will be on the road and moving at the same time. However, at certain hours of the day at some locations it will seem as if they were. The traffic volume will be tremendous. In an article read this afternoon from W.T.C. the Travelers Station, Commissioner Robbins B. Stoessel said that "because of the conditions which will exist in the next few days it is timely to warn that enforcement officers are becoming extremely impatient with certain bad performances. One is the way in which an occasional operator moves in and out of a line of traffic. It would appear as though the world depended upon his getting to some particular place within the shortest possible time; yet it is an established fact that in heavy traffic the difference in time over a 25 mile stretch between a reasonable speed and a fast speed is only a fraction of time. It is poor economy, poor policy, poor citizenship, and a sample of the worst possible consideration for others to try to save that slight fraction of time and endanger the life and limb of many other persons. The only course is to do as others do and to curb any impatience which may exist. One's own wishes must be subordinated to the welfare of all.

CITIZENSHIP

It is to be hoped that the citizenship case of Professor Douglas C. Macintosh of Yale will go to the United States Supreme Court for final decision. Nothing else will satisfy citizens of the United States. There is general surprise over the decision of the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in reversing completely the finding of the lower courts in the case of Professor Macintosh and in that of Miss Marie A. Bland.

In the case of the professor, which went up from Connecticut, refusal of his citizenship application was based on his declaration to promise to "defend" the Constitution by the taking up of arms unless he, himself, decided that the occasion was a just one. In his appeal he sought refuge under the same constitution, pointing out that it forbids Congress to make any law against the free exercise of religion.

Miss Bland, who was a war nurse and, like the professor, a Canadian, was willing to defend the constitution "so far as conscience as a Christian would allow." There is no material difference in the basis for both appeals. They simply set up that the appellants, as Canadians, seek the protection of the United States and the benefits to be derived from living here, but they do not propose to burden themselves with the obligations of those who are native to these shores. There is nothing complicated about their attitude. In effect they announce their desire to become citizens without the full responsibilities of such citizenship and, to date, it appears that they may succeed.

There is no implication that either of these individuals are or have been slackers. The professor served as a chaplain and Miss Bland as a nurse. So far as that is concerned they did their full duty. Neither of them, as a matter of fact, could be expected to "take up arms" in defense of their adopted country—assuming that they eventually are allowed citizenship. The professor, being a minister-had too old, anyway, and Miss Bland being of the other sex, are perfectly safe from such onerous and dangerous duty here or in Canada.

It is the principle of the thing with which we have a quarrel. Plenty of young Americans live "over there" and plenty are in hospitals who had no desire to "take up arms." But, being Americans, it never occurred to them to dodge the issue by setting up the claim that their consciences did not approve. Being Americans, they never gave the constitution and any possible loopholes in it a moment's thought. Their training had been different. Their outlook on life was and is different.

There were some "conscientious objectors," who found life very unpleasant. If Professor Macintosh and Miss Bland are admitted to full citizenship on their own terms there should be no reason why in the next war anyone should bother to risk himself in the service of his country. If those from other shores and other nations are to come here or the benefits they receive and not return, in case of need, the obligations of citizenship, why should the rest of us?

DANGEROUS PATRIOTISM

For many years now the preliminary racket heralding the near approach of the Nation's birthday rings back to mind the most potent drawing that ever came to our eyes. It appeared in life in the streets of a safe and sane Fourth and depicted a boy, bandaged over his eyes, lying on a couch with his hands in fearful attitudes standing near. It told the story that it was more truthful today because

"Improved" their product. A boy now can buy in this state enough high explosive wrapped in a pretty red paper to blow a whole crowd of his playmates to hospitals and undertakers. This is possible under the guise of patriotism.

We rail against reckless drivers, against dispensers of poison bombs, against this and against that. Our laws require that dynamite must be stored and transported under police restrictions, except during the week in which we celebrate our National birthday. Then stores, sidewalk stands and doorways are packed with dozens of forms of explosives and some of them are of high potentiality. We must be patriotic. Some where, some time in the dim distant past it was discovered that the way to show patriotism was to make a racket with firearms. The manufacturers have done the rest.

Bigger and more dangerous explosives have been their motto. And they have lived up to it. Some states, notably Massachusetts have laws restricting the size of fire crackers and salutes that may be sold within its borders. The power of the explosive contained therein is also designated. The manufacturers cannot sell the Big Bertha type of crackers there because the retailers are subject to such supervision that they dare not buy them. Such a law helps reduce the mortality of the "night before" and of the Fourth and of the days immediately after it. No police force in the world can stop the exploding of fireworks in public places. But it is possible to lessen the danger by restricting the power of the explosives.

However, that is not the point. No one who was a boy half a century ago wishes to take from modern boyhood what unmistakable pleasure is to be found in making a noise on the Fourth. The tradition is there and it will not be downed. But the danger of blindness for life, of missing fingers, of scorched faces is always present. The doctors are able with their antitetanus and other serums to lessen the dangers of death in some cases but they cannot perform miracles.

If parents will supervise the purchase of fireworks on the part of their children, restricting somewhat the tendency to buy the most noise possible in a single package and if they will devote a little time to an oversight of the fun, we shall see some reduction in the long list of injured.

Already the publishers have received orders for four hundred copies which will mean embourgeoisment for other juvenile authors who may have the urge to write, a 50-cent printing-press and the determination to stick to the job. Those authors of more mature years who find it hard to persuade a publisher to consider their literary efforts, there can be only poignant regret that they didn't begin early and have the nerve to do their own publishing, at least as a start. It will be interesting to watch the development of this youthful author and printer. The fact that he carried through to a conclusion a considerable task lends strength to the belief that he is of the sort who will make a go of life whether in the field of literature or something else.

NEGLECTED FEES

Some motorboat owners down in New Haven may find it necessary to pay back taxes and some fines, all because one conscientious soul insisted upon paying 50 cents to register his motorboat, "Anna." He appeared in the proper office with his half dollar but no one knew anything about registration fees for motorboats. Of course it was their business to know all about registration fees, but being officials, they had not bothered to remember the laws regarding motorboats. They can't go out and shove them as they can pet dogs whose owners fail to pay the head tax on their pets. And besides what's the use of bothering about such a small fee as 50 cents?

NO HERALD TOMORROW

No issue of the Manchester Evening Herald will be published tomorrow, Independence Day.

by official ignorance or neglect. So they looked up the law and then, interested, they inspected records. They discovered that registration for motorboats had been on the books since 1918 but disregarded for five years. Not a single put-putter was registered in 1926 but someone must have been insistent the following year for the city collected 50 cents; probably had it forced upon it in 1927. Since that year no one has bothered to pay. No one has been sufficiently interested to collect. It will be interesting to see whether anyone else is foolish enough to pay such a fee—in New Haven.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

Washington, July 3.—The close of every session of Congress demonstrates all over again and more clearly than ever the fact that there is no real difference between the two major political parties, that one is the party in power and the other the opposition and that when they actually line up against each other there is nothing discernible in the situation except a row between the "ins" and the "outs."

The Republican party has been normally in and the Democratic party normally out. So when an election year comes along and jobs are at stake and the two factions of the politicians' union start slinging away at each other the Republicans begin taking credit for all the good things that have happened to the country and forgetting all the bad things. And the Democrats, of course, forget all the good things and harp on all the bad things as they point accusingly at the Republicans.

Defenders and Attackers
 As far as national politics are concerned, there isn't much more to it than that. The party in power boasts and defends itself; the party out of power sneers and condemns. The Republican party is attacked not because it stands for anything in particular, but for the way it does things when in power—the way it revamps the tariff, the way it enforces or doesn't enforce prohibition, the way it helps or doesn't help the farmers, the way it stimulates or doesn't stimulate business and employment.

Each party claims certain fine, high-sounding principles for its own, but neither has an honest, clear-cut or fundamental issue.

Once there was a rather common popular impression or belief that a real cleavage existed between the two parties on the question of the protective tariff. The Republicans were supposed to be high tariff and the Democrats low tariff. And it is true that the Democrats have seized on the Hawley-Smoot tariff act as the big issue in the congressional campaign of this year.

But where were the Democrats in 1922? Straddling the fence and assuring the country that they, too, believed in the protective tariff. Promising the country, in effect, that the Republican rates of duty fixed in the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922 were good enough for them and that no one need fear a Democratic assault on the tariff walls in case the nation chose a Democratic administration.

Mr. Al Smith's position was that the tariff must be taken out of politics and that a scientific, non-partisan tariff commission could do just that. Well, today President Hoover has said that the tariff is not to be taken out of politics. The Republican spokesmen are forced to take credit or blame for the new tariff, but again and again they have been trying to make the Democrats share it. They are able to point out that all but one Democrat in the Senate voted for one duty increase or more and against various decreases and that the Democratic record in the House is about the same. Five Democratic votes passed the bill in the Senate.

They're Getting Together
 All this makes a strange spectacle. In effect, the Republicans are trying to prove that the Democrats and Republicans feel alike about higher tariffs, thereby dissociating themselves from the ancient argument that the G. O. P. was the only protective tariff party. They are willing to go that far to meet the attack of the Democrats which is based on Republican sponsorship of an admittedly unpopular measure. Meanwhile, Mr. Hoover has hedged to the extent of admitting that his dear friends in Congress put enough back in the bill to force him to make quite a few readjustments.

Possibly some bright young person can think of another issue on which the parties are more definitely opposed to each other than they are on the tariff. Possibly there is a more real issue which is more than merely something to grab at for temporary use in campaigns. But probably not.

Health and Diet Advice

By DR. FRANK McCOY

CANTALOUPE ARE COOLING

Provident nature kindly arranged to give us cantaloupes during the warm season when they are most valuable. Throughout the melon time I would suggest that you will keep cooler and feel better if you use melons once or twice daily. On extremely hot days it is often a good plan to make an entire luncheon on nothing but cantaloupes, using as many as desired. The large amount of purified water and whole-some mineral elements contained in cantaloupes and other melons have a cooling and cleansing action on the blood stream and should be used abundantly during the summertime.

Cantaloupes are related to the gourd family. Their original home is in Asia and India, and they were first brought to Europe from Armenia. Muskmelons, cantaloupes and nutmeg melons all belong to the netted group whose rings are faced outward with thick graying pattern. The pulp of these melons varies from green to a deep gold, and is highly flavored and sweet to the tongue. They consist of about 80 per cent of water, the rest being composed of sugar and organic minerals, principally potassium, lime and iron, and vitamins. Cassabas and honey dew closely resemble muskmelons in food value and are somewhat larger in size and ripen later in the season. These melons contain a small amount of acid and for this reason the best way to use them is to make a complete meal of any one kind of melon, using all that is desired.

They should never be eaten when they are unripe or overripe, as they may produce symptoms akin to colic. They are best when the rind is most fully developed. The housewife should use the greatest care to select the ones which have a good ripe odor and are not bruised. Much of the pleasure of eating the muskmelon is due to the delicate musk-like aroma which is in the rind. For this reason, the melon with the best color usually has the best flavor.

They are best chilled by placing in the refrigerator. If cracked ice is used to chill them, it should not be placed inside the melon, but the bottom should be packed inside the rind, and opened and cleaned when ready to serve. This method preserves the delicate natural taste and is not diluted with ice water. To make the cut cantaloupe stand on the plate a slice may be cut from the bottom, and the melon put on a perfect meal for luncheon when you do not care for heavier food. Another delicious way to serve muskmelons is to cut the fresh fruit into small squares or balls which can be served with a melon spoon obtainable at any hardware store. This can be served as a salad or you can cover these pieces with sprigged pineapple Jello or Jell-well, placing the dish in the refrigerator until the gelatin has hardened.

Some people enjoy the cantaloupe raw, scoop out the seeds and put the halves into a hot oven. Serve as soon as they begin to brown. Do not cook them too long or they will become mushy. If the cantaloupe is a little too green to serve for breakfast, you may often use it by baking in this manner.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Fyellitis)

Question.—R. asks: "What are the symptoms of pyelitis? Is it possible to have it at intervals for a period of years? Is it curable? If so, what is the cure?"
 Answer: Those with pyelitis usually develop a fever, but the most characteristic diagnostic point is the presence of pus in the urine. It is often associated with other disorders. The treatment would depend upon the findings from a thorough diagnosis.

(Bread With Meals)

Question.—A. C. N. asks: "Will you tell me why you never recommend bread with meals in your menus, only Melba toast? What harm is there in eating yeast bread and baking powders bread?"
 Answer: I do recommend bread occasionally in my menus, but I believe most people use too much bread to the exclusion of other more vital foods. When any kind of bread is used it should be taken with non-starchy vegetables and not in addition to other starches or with protein foods.

(Spinal Curvature)

Question.—Mrs. S. writes: "My little girl 12 years old has developed a curved spine within the last two years. She has a mixed diet, attends gymnastics, and seems generally well, but complains of backache and tired easily. What causes this? Can it be corrected? Does it affect the health?"
 Answer: Be sure that your little girl is having corrective exercises with her gymnastics work and that she is instructed by a competent teacher. It is also well to have an x-ray picture made of her entire spine, and to get the opinion of a bone specialist regarding the condition of the spinal vertebrae. She may be suffering from tuberculosis of the spine, in which case it would be unwise for her to exercise during that time when the acute changes are taking place in the bones.

IN NEW YORK

New York, July 3.—In East 42nd street, in addition to many other unusual attractions there is a "hotel for trick animals."

Now a trick animal is no common, everyday dumb beast. Inconceivable as his particular trainer is concerned, the performer's salary is anywhere from $25 to $100 a week, according to the tricks performed.

And oftentimes being quite as temperamental as any other theatrical personality, the stage dog, horse, duck, seal, cat or what-is-it is humored more than mightily.

After a performance the average stage animal gets a good rub-down and is turned over to an attendant who sees that it gets safely home and doesn't squander its salary on wild oats or something.

The "animal hotel" has special quarters for special performers. During an average week it's possible to find all sorts of guests registered there. During a recent week we checked two elephants, half a dozen monkeys, a whole troupe of trained parrots and a flock of pigeons.

Then, as they say in the profession, there were very number of beasts "at liberty." Which means, in plain language, that they are out of a job—or rather their master can't get theatrical booking for them. But they must be kept in good shape, just the same, and go through their daily training.

Speaking of which, reminds me of the old Broadway yarn about the trained seals. Now there weren't two of them—Pat and Mike!

There were, as a matter of fact, five or six. And, thanks to an unfortunate dull spell, they were laid off for six months. One day the theater manager found the trainer and owner in tears.

"What's the matter?" asked the theater man.

"I'm ruined—absolutely ruined, wailed the other. "They'd been out of practice so damn long that when I finally put on the act the other night they all drowned. They'd forgotten how to swim."

"So you don't believe that! . . . Oh, very well."

"Maybe you'd believe that a few more chain-store men who had to lose everything overnight during the first of the market crash—when they introduced the 'chain-store' to New York."

Waiting for the Whistle

The story goes in the Broadway belt that he has opened something like twenty "whisper lows" in the Lengrore Square neighborhood and, because of the quantity having them made possible, is under-selling most of the "speaks" in the midtown belt.

This, insofar as anyone knows, is the first appearance of modern selling methods in the Manhattan hooch "racket."

And whatever may be said for or against the prohibition question, the thousands of tricky New York "speaks" seldom fail to be a center of interest among visitors and tourists. I have yet to entertain a "vigilant fireman"—wet or dry—without, second or third request, being told, "Show me one of these boys. I've been hearing so much about 'em."

Knowing this tendency as well as the flexible nature of the Gotham dweller, every form of decorative novelty is employed and economy is changed regularly, as a play.

One place which, at the moment, finds paragon first rate, appeals to the "air-minded." Not only are the walls decorated with photographs of every memorable fight and every important fight, but there is a glassed-in bar, second in which are scores of tiny models of the famous air craft flying in European and other skies. Some of the famous air-men have been guests here and there are always a few flying fans to be found.

Which also reminds me that the old Belmont bar, rail and all, was the most historic in the city—was sold at an auction the other day for something like $100. The purchase was a $100,000. The name of the "bar" was "The Belmont." The name of the "bar" was "The Belmont."

AND A MAN WHO
 "I've been hearing so much about 'em."

"Show me one of these boys. I've been hearing so much about 'em."

"I've been hearing so much about 'em."

"Show me one of these boys. I've been hearing so much about 'em."

Fourth of July broadcast of "The Travelers Hour" Roy Mac, young musician, and radio maestro will commence at 11 o'clock, daylight saving time. "I'll show you, as well as 'Show me' in 'showing' what Missouri has to offer in the line of popular songs. Mac will be supported by a radio orchestra under the direction of Christiana Kriens. The program is slated for 10:30 o'clock from Station WTIC.

Roy Mac made his debut in his home town of Kansas City in a Kansas City Civic Opera production, "The Merry Widow," at the opera house, heard him sing the title role of "Faust" and influenced him to try his talents on New York City.

The orchestral portion of the program will include several selections appropriate to the holiday, among which are listed a movement from Dvorak's "New World Symphony" and a medley of World War tunes.

St. Louis, July 2.—(AP)—Machine gunner put former bootlegger on the spot near Wood River, Illinois, just before midnight last night. The victim was George Williams, 45, of Wood River. At a morgue where the body was taken an examination revealed forty bullets had struck him. Williams and Culp were returning from the Kings Highway Camel Club, a dog racing track, Culp said when they noticed they were being followed. As the Williams car was about to cross the railroad tracks on the outskirts of Wood River, the other machine suddenly increased its speed and its occupants opened fire with a machine gun.

Carol, as Crown Prince, Yields Claim to Rumania's Crown for Love of Red-Haired Adventurer With Whom He Elopes to Paris, Abandoning Royal Wife and Baby.

EDITOR'S NOTE—This is the fourth of six stories on the life and loves of King Carol II of Rumania. Previous stories have told of Carol's morganatic marriage to Zizi Lambriño, beautiful commoner, and his unhappy royal union with Princess Helen of Greece. Today's story tells of his young wife, Madame Lupeșcu, who heard him sing the title role of "Faust" and influenced him to try his talents on New York City.

Paris, July 2.—Stranger are the things that kings do for love. England's George IV, as Prince of Wales, had his affair with the comely young widow, Mrs. Fitzherbert; Henry VIII defied his church to divorce Catherine and marry Anne Boleyn, one of her ladies-in-waiting; Louis XV of France had his notorious romance with Countess du Barry; Manuel of Portugal lost his heart and ultimately his crown for the affections of a French dancing girl, Gaby Deslys.

And so Crown Prince Carol of Rumania—now King Carol II—renounced his right to the throne, deserted his wife and baby and fled his country for a butterfly existence with a red-haired divorcee said to have been the daughter of a Rumanian junk dealer.

Carol may sound like a movie scenario or a comic opera plot, but it is Balkan history. Madame Magda Lupeșcu was the titan-tressed charmer—of Rumania. A young Prince Carol's woman, she was the first marital venture, as she accused Zizi of vague plots to bribe her servants and perhaps poison her.

They continued to live together until just recently when Carol dramatically returned to Rumania, taking the throne from his 9-year-old son who had inherited it during his absence. He left Mme. Lupeșcu in France.

Mme. Lupeșcu's friendship with Carol, according to the story she has told, began in their native Rumania long before he quit his wife to run away with her. They first met when she was 9. Her father took her to a visit to the home of an ambassador of one of the states of King Carol I. There she encountered the old king's nephew, Prince Carol, then 15.

The young prince admired the little girl's beautiful red hair with lavish praise. And he gave her a box of chocolates, gallantly feeding them to her with his own hand. They did not meet again, Mme. Lupeșcu insists, until years later, when Prince Carol came to Paris after attending Queen Alexandra's funeral. In the meantime, she had married a Rumanian army officer at 18, given birth to two children, both of whom died, and divorced her husband.

At the outset, Carol's parents—King Ferdinand and Queen Marie—had announced that they would pay all the debts he contracted while heir to the throne but he would have to pay his own thereafter. He was dropped from the Royal Civil List, which meant he lost his annual $60,000 allowance. But he continued to enjoy an income from the vast Rumanian estates that old King Carol I had willed him, and this approximated $30,000 a year. From January, 1926, until June, 1930, Carol and his red-haired beauty continued their butterfly existence.

HE RENOUNCED A CROWN FOR HER LOVE—Here are Carol and Mme. Lupeșcu, his pretty mistress, for whom he deserted his royal wife and baby. They are pictured as they were enjoying a holiday on a visit to England.

Carol's first wife, was living in another villa only a short distance away during the early days of Mme. Lupeșcu's butterfly existence with Carol. And how these two women hated each other! "It was a youthful plunge into romance which turned into marriage because Carol was too decent and chivalrous to do otherwise," Mme. Lupeșcu snorted, contemptuously, referring to Carol's first marital venture, as she accused Zizi of vague plots to bribe her servants and perhaps poison her. "That woman!" shot back Zizi, in the war of words. "She is the most common type of red-haired Rumanian Jewess!"

Carol may have been foolish enough to toss away a throne, but he was wise enough to keep out of this row. He said nothing. One day Zizi secretly obtained admission to Carol's library with her cousin, the late Prince Carol's brother, "Daddy, come back to us!" They were ejected—but Zizi had succeeded in again embarrassing the man whom she now hated as strongly as she had once loved.

Mme. Lupeșcu insisted that she thought too much of her royal lover and their country to force him into a morganatic marriage with her. "Carol's marriage to Zizi Lambriño was a mistake of youth," she explained. "I shall be the one to lead him into another such error? Never would I think of that!" Again Carol said nothing. They continued to live blissfully in open disregard of society's conventions, while Carol fought and won a 10,000,000 franc suit brought against him by Zizi in Paris and his princess-wife in Rumania obtained a divorce on grounds of desertion.

At the outset, Carol's parents—King Ferdinand and Queen Marie—had announced that they would pay all the debts he contracted while heir to the throne but he would have to pay his own thereafter. He was dropped from the Royal Civil List, which meant he lost his annual $60,000 allowance. Their husbands fought for America's Freedom 118 years ago

These widows of the War of 1812 still live

At the age of 105 she died in 1906. Her husband was three years old when George Washington died.

Linking the present with the nation's dim but glorious past of more than a century ago when their husbands fought in America's second war of freedom, a handful of aged women who are carried on the government's pension rolls as widows of the War of 1812 still survive today. Youngest of them is Mrs. Carolina King, 81, who lives alone with her memories in a little vine-clad cottage at East Aurora, N. Y., doing her own housework and tending her flowers. Her husband was Private Darius King of Stevens' Company, New York Militia, a sharpshooter, who is reputed to have been the soldier whose bullet brought down the British commander at Queenstown Heights, General Brock. As a 23-year-old southern belle, in hoop skirt and pantaloons, Mrs. Mary A. Williams, now 97, married Dr. John M. Williams, then 65, at Baltimore on March 22, 1866. At 18 he had given up the study of medicine to enlist in Moore's Company, Maryland Militia, and fought under Andrew Jackson in the Battle of New Orleans. He died at 75, and thus she has been a widow for three score years. With a friend, Mrs. Williams now lives in a little apartment in Philadelphia. She does her own ironing and cooking, but spends much of her time before her window, watching the children laugh and play on the sidewalk. . . . Do you wonder what her thoughts are? All told, only nine of these widows of the War of 1812 still survive, each of whom receives a government pension of $50 a month. The others are: Mrs. Emma Arnout, Ashville, N. Y., widow of Private Samuel Arnout, Parker's Company, New York Militia; Mrs. Marion A. Clark, Iowa City, Ia., widow of Private John R. Clark, McClelland's Company, Massachusetts Militia; Mrs. Lydia Ann Graham, Brusby Run, W. Va., widow of Isaac Graham, musician, Bookin's

Company, Virginia Militia; Mrs. Mary Coleman, Claudeville, Va., widow of Private Robert Coleman, Davenport's Company, Virginia Militia; Mrs. Mary Lagriss, Cincinnati, widow of Private Daniel Lagriss, Cullom's Company, Ohio Militia; Mrs. Emma Mann, Greenbush, Mass., widow of Private Thomas Mann, Hastings' Company, Massachusetts Militia; Mrs. Armina I. Anderson, Cedar Grove, Ga., widow of Robert Anderson, after, Nabor's Company, South Carolina Militia. The last surviving soldier of the War of 1812 was Hiram Cronk of

Ava, N. Y., who died in 1905 at the age of 105 years. The last survivor of the Revolutionary War was Daniel F. Bakeman who died at Freedom, N. Y., in 1889, at the age of 109. The last widow of that war was Esther S. Damon of Plymouth Union, Vt., who died in 1906 at the age of 92. "If history repeats itself," says the U. S. Bureau of Pensions, "at least a quarter of a century will elapse before the chronicler of events will note the death of the last survivor of the great Civil War, and the 20th century will be drawing to a close before the last widow of a soldier of the Civil War will have passed away."

BANK CLOSES DOORS

Connellsville, Pa., July 8—(AP)—The Union National Bank of Connellsville failed to open for business today a few hours after the title and Trust Company of West ern Pennsylvania here was taken over by the State Department of Banking. The board of directors of the Union National issued a statement saying the board decided to be for the best interests of the bank's depositors and stockholders to place the assets in the custody of the National Banking Association.

starch food and should be used as such in the diet. This food, like all starches, should be well cooked and not used with other starches or proteins, but with greens. (Orange Juice and Egg Yolk) Question—Mrs. D. asks: "Will a mixture of orange juice and egg yolk cure long standing digestive disorders?" Answer: The mixture you ask about is a simple combination, and many people find it agrees with them better than the ordinary bad mixtures of food, but there is no magic in such a food combination any more than there is in the use of any other simple food mixtures. (Avoid Cold Feet) Question—J. K. asks: "Would sleeping in a room with a cement floor be harmful to the health?" Answer: Sleeping in a bedroom with a cement floor would not affect the health, but it is a good plan to have a rug or something to walk on to avoid coming in contact with the cold floor.

BATTLE OF SANTIAGO

On July 3, 1898, the Spanish fleet under Admiral Cervera, attempting to escape from Santiago harbor, was intercepted and destroyed by the American fleet under the command of Admiral Schley. This was one of the most spectacular battles of the Spanish-American war. Finding himself in a blockade, Cervera proposed to ram his flagship, the Tenessa, into the American cruiser Brooklyn, so that his other ships would have an opportunity to break through and escape. This strategy failed, for when Cervera made his dash each Spanish cruiser following him found itself confronted with an American dreadnaught.

"Thus," writes an historian, "the action resolved itself into a series of magnificent duels: between powerful ironclads, metal ringing on metal, while the cannon roared, the great engines throbbed, and the air was filled by the clouds of smoke, which rushed from the overcharged boilers. The Spaniards' aim was bad, or their powder poor, for their shots went wild or fell short, while the American gunnery was excellent." Four hours after Cervera began his dash, the last of his four cruisers and torpedo boat destroyers were destroyed, 323 of his crew were killed, 151 were wounded, and 1732 were prisoners, he being among them.

The Dealer Who Sells
Country Club Ginger Ale
Safeguards Your Health and Your Pocketbook
AT HIS OWN EXPENSE!

It costs more to make such a fine ginger ale as "Country Club", because it contains only purest Jamaica Ginger, snow white granulated sugar, finest fruit juices—and then is carbonated with "OZONATED" WATER—a special process which makes "Country Club" retain its laughing, bubbling effervescence for hours and hours after the bottle has been uncapped.

Because this wholesome product does cost more to make, it naturally costs more for your dealer to buy. This means that dealers either must sell "Country Club" at a slightly higher price than other ginger ales or else take a smaller profit.

All "Country Club" dealers take the smaller profit!

Thus, "Country Club" dealers protect both your health and your pocketbook. They sell you the finest ginger ale that can be made and they sell it at a small profit. Such dealers deserve the patronage of intelligent people in every community . . . and what's more, they are getting it.

Over the "Fourth" you and your family will naturally drink more soft drinks than normally—at home, motoring, on the water, at picnics, wherever you are. Make this a safe and sane Fourth not only in your use of fireworks, but also in your use of wholesome beverages. Get a case of "Country Club" today and have it handy for yourself, your family and your guests.

DANCING JUDITH

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Judith Grant, beautiful village model, lives in the eventful village with Chummy Morley, a beautiful girl who lost her memory when her lover, Alan Steyne, disappeared seven years ago. Steyne returns but Chummy fails to recognize him; he and Judith fall in love, and he tells Judith he never loved Chummy and never knew Chummy loved him. Chummy's memory returns, and Steyne, feeling bound by a tie of honor, asks her to marry him. Judith accepts the offer of Bruce Gideon, rich financier, to marry him in a masquerade show, and begins studying dancing to prepare for her part. Steyne distrusts Gideon and warns Judith, but she is offended and tells him to mind his own business. Judith goes to the studio where Vincent Stornaway, successful portrait painter, to act as model, and hears him talking with Gideon.

CHAPTER XX
It must be admitted that Judy was beginning to feel the irksome necessity of earning her scanty livelihood as an adjunct to the hard work of her dancing lessons and practice. Sometimes she was so tired that she almost lost consciousness of what was going on around her; and when she awoke in the morning she would not even remember how she got home the evening before. Steynaway and his guest came into the room, but they stopped behind the screen. Judy gathered that the artist was showing Gideon a piece of his work. All the canvases were at the other end of the studio. She was just going to call out to them when her own name fell on her ears.

"Here is the sketch of Judy, Gideon—the one you asked me to do. I could elaborate it, if you like it." The every-ready painter ripped out Judy's line. She was going to answer what Mr. Punch thought of her picture. She herself thought it perfectly hideous; but Stornaway told her it was the best thing he had ever done. It was a dancing attitude he had chosen—that is, she was standing with one arm poised on her hip, leaning a little forward on her toes. She was supposed to be thinking of the dance that she was about to begin. Stornaway had told her he was doing it for his own pleasure. He had said nothing about Gideon asking him to do it.

Again, what could she feel but flattered? "It's splendid!" Gideon's voice said. "It's a great thing, old chap. Don't you think so?" "Yes, I rather like it," admitted the artist modestly. "You see, every muscle is taut, ready to spring into action." "Wonderful!" said Gideon. "Wonderful! What a dancing attitude her eyes shone with behind the screen. "You're very much gone on her, aren't you, Gideon?" the artist asked. Gideon laughed, somewhat roughly for him.

"She's not the kind to give a man much peace," Stornaway went on. His tone was not offensive at all, and yet Judy stiffened. "You're right there," Mr. Punch said, with an infection that made Judy stiffen still more. "Is it serious?" was the artist's next question. "Damnably," said Gideon. To Judy it suddenly became intolerable that they were discussing her like this—discussing Gideon's feelings for her in this old-fashioned way. If Gideon was fond of her, why there to prevent him from being so? They spoke as if it were an impossible thing—something to jest and laugh about. Odious creatures, both of them!

"A thousand pities!"—Stornaway's voice sounded exceptionally clear—"a thousand pities, Gideon, that she isn't the sort of girl one could marry." Gideon's laugh was a little broken in this time. What he answered seemed to write itself with a sharp, fiery pencil on the listening girl's brain. "That's putting it rather strongly, my dear fellow. Marriage—well, it never did appeal to me, you know; but you're right, of course. If one did marry, it wouldn't be a little Judy Grant."

Judy sprang to her feet. At the same moment the artist said carelessly: "By the way, I was expecting her this afternoon. She'll come here. Come back to my den and smoke another cigar." The voices grew more distant. The two men had left the studio. Judy knew the arrangement of the house. Next to the studio was an anteroom, the door of which was always open, and beyond that was the artist's sanctum—a large, untidy apartment, with all sorts of odd bits of furniture, masses of photographs, and souvenirs of boyhood and early travel. It had nothing of the ordered beauty of the rest of the house.

Stornaway had married, within the last year or two, a woman of wealth and position, a so-called young wife. She never came into his studio, and appeared to take no part in his artistic life. One sometimes saw her name mentioned in the papers as attending this or that function, but Judy had never set eyes on her.

The girl stood there, drawing deep breaths, so violent that they shook her slender frame. "Not the sort of girl one could marry! If one did marry, it wouldn't be a little Judy Grant!" So that was what he thought of her—that horrible, ugly, loathsome man! She wasn't the kind of girl he would marry. Oh, dear, no! He would only be silly, disgustingly amiable and deferential and friendly, and try to cheer her and throw dust in her eyes, and trick her into believing he had the greatest respect in the world for her—that was all!

Men were all alike. Didn't she know the world? But she had very nearly allowed herself to be fooled! There was no time to stay there and rage inwardly against Bruce Gideon. They might come back at any moment. She was not going to be found there.

She slipped across the studio and out into the corridor that led to the central hall. When she came upon a servant, it was not the one who had admitted her. "Will you please tell Mr. Stornaway," she said, "that I came to tell him I couldn't sit for him today? I'm his model. They said there was someone with him, so I waited a minute, but as there's no sign of him I've come away. Just say that she was too tired to sit today. He'll understand. Thanks so much!" And before the servant could answer she was running down the stairs and had reached the front door.

The maid went to find Stornaway and delivered the message. She found him with Bruce Gideon in his den. Both men assumed that Judy had just come to the front door and left the message. They made no comment, and shortly afterward Gideon took his leave. Judy, meanwhile, walked as fast as her legs could carry her. She was dead and blind with fury. She did not see where she was going, and it was a miracle that she was not run over at the crossings. "Not the sort of girl one could marry! It wouldn't be little Judy Grant!"

The words rang in her ears like clashing bells. They roused the devil that she could gladly have killed both Gideon and Stornaway if she had been strong enough. So that was what Mr. Punch thought of her! All this time he had been scheming to make her believe that he was decent—trying to deceive her. Thanks to him, she was thoroughly blinded, when the time came, then, no doubt—

She ground her little teeth as she rushed headlong through the park. She found herself, presently, and remembered that she was a new pair of stockings for her dancing practice. She was always wearing holes in her stockings and they hurt her when they were too much darned. She was such a bad dancer and Chummy, who would have loved to do it for her, was worse. She went to a shop and bought a pair at random. She was fiercely glad, inside her violent little being, that she owed nothing to Bruce Gideon—not a thing beyond the introduction to Guarvenius, except a few meals and motor trips. She need never eat at the same table with him or go to a theater with him again. When she wanted to see dancing, she could save up, as she used to do, and go and stand up in the gallery, or let one of the boys treat her, if he could afford it.

Never again! Never again should that odious man be allowed to see a kindness to one of her friends, as he had done to Dan. Judy ran up the stairs and flung herself into Chummy's room. She did not expect to find Chummy there, but they shared the little writing table, and she wanted to write a note to Dan. Bruce Gideon: She had just remembered that she had promised to lunch with him on the following day.

Never again! Chummy had done wonders to her room, and it was quite presentable. The screen around the bed and toilet table had been recovered. There were some cheap rugs on the floor. Her aunt, Miss Morley, had given her an old chest, a little writing bureau, and a tall, old-fashioned mirror. Out of her small allowance she had bought two wicker chairs, cushions for them, and a jar of two of pottery for flowers. She had the artist's capacity for imparting beauty to the simplest things; and the sun came into the room in the afternoon.

It was about five o'clock when Judy got back. She must have been later than she thought at Stornaway's. Her dancing practice had been very trying that morning. She had had practically no lunch, and she felt ready to drop. Her senses seemed to have fallen her, so that she was almost up to the writing table near the window before she realized that the room was not empty.

Alan Steyne was standing in the window, with his back to her, reading a newspaper. He turned, hearing her, and she gave a little cry. "I thought you were in Maine!" "I came back this morning, sooner than I expected. I was just going to leave a note for Clarissa, asking her to dine. I've been with the lawyers most of the time. I'm letting my mind rest." "Yes—some people are very keen on it for the fishing, and the shooting later on. They're paying a big rate. I've let it for six months. It seems silly to leave it empty." "Not when you're married!" "Who will be, I wonder?" he said. "So do I." He was gazing at her earnestly. "Judy, you look tired to death!"

"I am a bit fagged," she said, and dropped into a chair. The mention of his marriage had started that mad fury in her brain again. Chummy was a girl good enough to marry—Chummy was not a girl of no account, like little Judy Grant! She burst into a tempest of tears, wailing and rocking herself to and fro.

LIGHTNESS AND FLEXIBILITY ARE OF FIRST IMPORTANCE IN SLIPPERS
By William H. Baldwin

Slippers should be light and flexible.

The construction is not so stiff, the soles are thinner, and softer. Slippers come in a variety of patterns, with or without heels; lined with fur or fleece or unlined; of felt, alligator, oak, or side leather or cloth. The sewing or stitching should be closely examined because upon this feature of construction depends to a great extent the wearing quality of the slipper.

Ruth Injures Finger Against A Wire Fence

Accident Comes When He Attempts to Rob Another Player of a Home Run by Spectacular Catch.

BY HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

It is quite obvious from the standings that the eastern clubs of the American League are the "class of the circuit" but it takes the comparative performances of the east against the west in the long interlocking series just completed to show how far ahead they are. Of the whole interlocking series with every team getting its share of the home ground advantage the eastern clubs turned in 72 victories against 44 for their western rivals.

Washington put the big spurt into the finish of the interlocking play yesterday, moving into second place in the standing and bringing its total of victories to 47, while the St. Louis Browns 5 to 4 and 5 to 3. The first contest went 13 innings.

The Athletics' five game winning streak was broken when Detroit beat the champions 4 to 3 behind the fine pitching of Earl Whitfield in the first game but they returned to slam Hoyt for a 7 to 2 triumph in the second.

An injury to Babe Ruth and the slugging feats of Carl Reynolds shared the interest as the Yanks won the first game in Chicago 5 to 1 as the Babe hit his 31st homer, then took a 15 to 4 drubbing in the second. Reynolds equalled two records by hitting three homers in successive times at bat and by driving in eight runs.

The National League pennant race became more complicated than ever as the N. Y. Giants and Brooklyn Robins gave a great display of spirit before departing.

The Boston Braves also improved their position a bit, turning back Pittsburgh's threat to fifth place with a 6 to 4 triumph.

Griffith Whips Risko 3rd Time

Chicago, July 8.—(AP)—Gerald Ambrose Griffith, the aspiring heavyweight hope from Sioux City, Iowa, has changed his ring moniker from "tuffy" back to "tuffy."

Fighting for the position he once held as a heavyweight of championship calibre, Griffith silenced his chiding critics at the Chicago Stadium last night by giving rubbery Johnny Risko, the big cake baker from Cleveland, a sound thrashing in ten rounds. It was his first win over the notorious hopper of championship hopes and by far his most impressive.

"Gil" Wright Opens Golf Driving Field At Manchester Green

Further proof as to the rapid interest which is growing in golf was attested today when Gilbert W. Wright, popular and well known Manchester athlete now engaged as athletic director and coach of baseball at Trinity College in Hartford, announced his intentions of opening a driving practice field in Manchester.

Wright realizes the fact that there are scores of persons in town who undoubtedly want to play golf but have no place to enjoy the sport. Inasmuch as a long drive gives a golfer about as much if not more satisfaction than any other shot, Wright believes that many will appreciate the opportunity of a place to swing the club to their heart's content without the bother of shacking.

Ben Cheney Equals Golf Course Record

Playing superb golf from start to finish, Ben Cheney equaled the old Walker Farm at Manchester Country Club yesterday when he shot a sensational par 70 for the 18 holes in a second Richardson's Cup match. C. Read Richardson was the unfortunate victim who had the "luck" to meet Ben when he was "decidedly on."

Bags Four Birdies to Score Par 70 in President's Cup Match Against C. R. Richardson.

Cheney was over par on only four holes during the round trip, three on the way out and one on the homeward journey. On each occasion it was only a single stroke. His card reveals that he bagged four birdies, the first on the par five third, the second on the tough par four fourteenth and the third on the difficult par four seventeenth.

SENSE and NONSENSE

THE SALUTE TO THE FLAG

(Friday, July 2nd, 1936)
'I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America, and to the Republic for which it stands: one, with indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.'

Friends Like You

This world is well worth living in When I have friends like you, Who don't expect perfection In things I say or do; Who look beyond the bright veneer. Or through the roughest crust To see the good that's shining clear In all the human dust.

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

It takes cents and sense to buy scents.

but it's really used in case of an emergency—in case the delicatessen store isn't open.

Lots of times when you order coffee, half milk, you have to guess what the other half is.

Now that long skirts are the style poor man is relieved of that down-cast look.

Happiness Departs When the Dish Is Put Into Illusions

If you would get the best reading every time a new book comes out read an old one.

With as much food as there is in the world some folks still eat green cucumbers.

"After looking at the turtle," said Alonso P. McGuire, "I don't think much of mud baths As a facial beautifier."

Whatever became of the old-fashioned girl who had to have some of her clothes loosened when she faints?

DIDN'T STAY LONG

HUSBAND: From the glimpse I had of her this morning, I rather like our new cook. There seems to be plenty of go about her. WIFE: Yes, she's gone.—The Humorist.

NOT A DOUBT

VISITOR: And what sort of man are you going to be when you leave prison? PRISONER (in for 20 years): An old one, lady.—The Humorist.

TIRED OF SLEEP

"I feel tired. I've been getting along on only two hours of sleep a day." "Only two hours a day? How can you manage?" "I get the rest at night."—Faun, Vienna.

HESITANT

JUDGE: How do you know you were only going 20 miles an hour? DEFENDANT: Why, I was on my way to the dentist's.—Kensington, England, News.

THANKFUL

ABOUT TOWN

George Wolf of Binghamton, N. Y., who has been spending the week with Will Astimus of 14 Middle Turnpike west left today for a trip to Washington, D. C.

Tomorrow being the first Friday of the month there will be masses celebrated in St. James's Church at 6:30, 7:00 and 7:40 tomorrow morning. Confessions will be heard this afternoon and evening.

Manchester Lodge, No. 99, L.O.L. held its meeting last evening in Tinker hall as the regular session would fall on July 4. The lodge has accepted an invitation to attend the church service in Stamford, Sunday, July 6. Cars will leave the Center at 8 a. m. on that day for Stamford.

Roy, 15 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Elnor Peterson of Center street, is spending his vacation visiting relatives and friends in Rochester and Niagara Falls, N. Y.

South Manchester Camp, No. 2280, Modern Woodmen of America, will meet in Tinker hall at 8 o'clock this evening.

Richard and Stuart Joslin of East Center street left Monday for Camp Massachusetts, Readfield, Maine, where they will spend the summer.

The Salvation Army band is scheduled to give a sacred concert at the Sunday evening service on the grounds at the South Methodist church, July 6.

Alexander Hall of Apel Place is spending several weeks with his daughter, Mrs. Dorothy Bradley of Brattleboro, Vermont.

The Manchester Electric Co. will be closed all day Friday the Fourth and also Saturday July 5th.

George L. Betts of 323 Woodbridge street who has been seriously ill with pneumonia at his home and under the care of two nurses is reported to be somewhat improved this morning.

C. P. Quimby and F. B. Clarke who were delegates to the Atlantic City Kiwanis meeting this week, will tell about the wonderful time they had at the Monday meeting of the Manchester Kiwanis club to be held at the Hotel Sheridan. Every member in town on that day is urged to be present.

Miss Pauline Beebe of Maple street will entertain the members of her sewing club at her cottage at Coventry Lake for the Fourth.

Mrs. James Wetherell of Florence street received a pleasant birthday surprise last evening, when on returning from an auto ride with Mrs. Mason Wetherell to the latter's home profusely decorated with pink rambler roses. They presented her with a fine wicker chair and relatives from Rockville brought a large box of roses and delphiniums. Whist and setback was played with prizes going to the winners. Luncheon consisting of three different kinds of salads, rolls, coffee, cake and ice cream was furnished by the guests.

Ralph C. Nelson, who has been in Florida for several months after disposing of his business in Bristol, arrived in Manchester last night and this morning returned to Bristol where there are several business matters that require his attention. Mr. Nelson, while in Florida, greatly improved his health.

Miss Gladys Dickson of Hamlin street, winner of the title of "Manchester's Most Popular Girl," appeared on the stage of the State theater last night, and thanked her friends for their assistance in winning the honor for her, also thanking Warner Brothers and the cooperating merchants.

Miss Helen Berggren of Linden street, accompanied Miss Dorothy Noren of Cornwall street, when she returned to Chicago last night to resume training at the Augustana hospital. Miss Berggren plans to seek employment in the West.

Herman Modean of Lyness street, accompanied by John Swenson of Cromwell, sailed yesterday on the liner Kungsholm for Sweden, for an indefinite stay.

A committee of three, consisting of Herman Johnson, Erik Modean, and Roy Johnson, has been elected by the combined Bible Classes of the Swedish Lutheran church to plan for a boat ride on the Connecticut river, during the month of July.

All Organizers who have signed their intention of attending church at Three Rivers, Mass., will meet at Orange Hall at 8 a. m., Sunday morning.

Miss Barbara Newton of Buckland will accompany Miss Marion Swift and her parents of Adams street to Narragansett Pier over the week-end.

A year and a half old dog owned by Sebastian Catani of 151 Oak street was struck and killed by an automobile operated by David Heland of Hartford but formerly of Manchester, on Main street near the Manchester Trust Company last night. The dog darted across the street in front of the automobile which was proceeding south at a moderate rate of speed. Catani said he had spent much time training "Dot," the dog, to do various stunts; and that his children would miss the pet.

John Wilson, who rooms on Locust street and is employed as a salesman for the Manchester Motor Sales Company, was stricken last night with an acute attack of appendicitis and this morning was removed to the Manchester Memorial hospital.

NEW TYPE MILK TRUCK ATTRACTS ATTENTION

Bryant and Chapman's New Delivery Car Resembles Small Street Car

A new milk delivery truck owned by Bryant & Chapman of Hartford, attracted considerable attention on the streets of Manchester today when it made its initial appearance here. Scores of people stopped to scrutinize the machine. The automobile is only 15 feet in length and has a maximum speed of only 25 miles an hour and with the exception of having rubber tired wheels and no trolley pole, greatly resembles a street car which opens at the center on both sides. It is also painted yellow like all the Bryant and Chapman trucks.

The new delivery truck has a capacity of 2,000 pounds and a loaded weight of 4,300. The truck will carry 700 quarts of milk. In addition to the two side doors, there is another in the rear which when pulled out slides along the top of the ceiling. The truck is a metal structure built low to the ground. The motor is a Reo.

The truck is very obviously built for short delivery work as in big cities where stops are thickly dotted along long routes. The truck was brought here to be used for the next few weeks while one of the regular ones used here is under repair. John Wood was in charge but Peter Seligman of Hill street will use the truck on his route. More than 1,200 quarts of pasteurized milk is sold in Manchester by the Hartford concern.

A similarity between the milk truck and a trolley car is that the driver must stand up erect at all times. The steering wheel and apparatus is located on the left side where one enters. There are five gears to operate, three from hand and two from foot. A combination clutch and brake may be operated either from the floor with the left foot or by hand from the center. The other floor part of the mechanism is the accelerator. An emergency brake is operated with the right hand.

PLACE DIRECTING SIGNS BUT IN WRONG SPOT

Direction signs were being placed at the junction of Main and North Main streets in Depot square this morning. Some little opposition was created when the workmen from the State Highway department failed to place a sign on the north curbing of North Main street to conform to an agreement said to have been reached with the State Highway department. The first sign placed on the south side of North Main street nearly opposite the store of William Gray.

The State Highway supervisor was due to come to Manchester today to direct the work, and it is expected that the matter will be taken up with the local committee before others will be erected. Well defined direction signs are necessary at this point, as large numbers of people are forced to inquire their way from Depot Square to points north and east.

Enter Summer School on Monday and prepare for a good office position. Connecticut Business College, South Manchester.—Adv.

Woman's Law Enforcement Committee Organized at Meeting Yesterday.

Mrs. Louis St. Clair Burr was chosen chairman of the local branch of the Woman's Law Enforcement committee, of which Mrs. Henry W. Peabody of Boston is the national chairman, at a meeting attended by a number of the town's representative women held last evening at the home of Mrs. Charles W. Holman of Summit street. Mrs. Burr is unusually well qualified to head such a committee. She is a prominent worker in the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and has been president of the Manchester League of Women Voters and actively interested in that organization since Connecticut started the vote to its women citizens.

Other Officers
 Mrs. C. Elmore Watkins was elected secretary and treasurer. Mrs. Eunice Case Hohenstein, who is grant worthy patriarch of the state here, was elected president. Mrs. Scire Scire was named vice chairman. Mrs. Elbert Shelton, second vice chairman and Mrs. Herbert B. House secretary of literature.

The guest speaker was Robert L. Sengle of West Hartford, prohibition enforcement officer for this district who explained informally the aims and scope of the work of his department, and answered questions put to him by a number of those present.

Single Speaker
 Mr. Sengle is an attorney by profession and was a student at the Yale Law school when the late President Taft was an instructor there. He was formerly attorney for the state police department, in fact was connected with that body during the first nine years that prohibition was in effect and had unusual opportunities to observe enforcement. During those ten years he had seen conditions change from year to year constantly for the better, until today liquor conditions are the best they have been since the day the Eighteenth amendment became effective, and with the assistance of just such groups of women as were gathered last night, conditions will continue to improve.

He said we hear much of ten years of enforcement as if that were an ample time in which to demonstrate that prohibition was worth while or a failure. To those who are concerned chiefly in the selfish and petty details of their own narrow lives, ten years may seem like aeons of time. What is ten years when we consider the alcoholic appetites of hundreds of thousands of inebriates who are still among us? What is ten years of time when we consider the number of parents who have not fulfilled their obligations to the younger generation in the matter of the use of intoxicating liquor?

Still Formulating
 When prohibition became a law, the federal government had no machinery, no police authority to cope with the problem of enforcement, and only on Tuesday of this very week did we become a part of the department of justice, asserted the speaker.

Mr. Sengle believed that prohibition of the liquor laws had been enforced exactly as well as every other prohibitory law. He called attention of his hearers to the fact that during the open fishing and hunting seasons the state finds it necessary to place wardens and patrolmen throughout the forests and along the streams to enforce observance of the laws pertaining to fishing, hunting, and forest fire prevention. He called attention to the violation of the law with regard to the sale of lottery tickets. He also made the statement that on June 10 Federal agents under his direction raided 18 speakeasies in the city of New Haven and succeeded in seizing less than a gallon of liquor. He said his associates in the Federal bureau are expected to concern themselves with major violations involving the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor, but do occasionally cooperate with local police in controlling the speakeasies, avoiding sensational methods at all times because one of the things prohibition has suffered from is the wrong kind of publicity. He believed the greatest service the women could render the State of Connecticut was to get to work to defeat overwhelmingly any attempt to repeal the state enforcement act.

9TH DISTRICT ANNUAL MEETING ON JULY 10

Will Be Held in High School Hall—Only Routine Business Scheduled.

The annual meeting of the Ninth School district will be held Thursday evening, July 10, at High School Hall, when routine business will be transacted in accordance with the items listed in the call.

The business will include reports of the School Committee, treasurer, auditors, recreation committee, and library committee. Two members will be elected to the school committee to serve for a period of three years. A clerk, treasurer, two auditors, and a member of the recreation committee for three years, will also be elected. Appropriations for the coming year will be voted and a tax will be laid on the district. Borrowing of funds to cover the current expenses of the district will be voted.

The outside force of the town of Manchester under Town Engineer J. Frank Bowen, has regraded Clinton street and oiled it. They also repaired and oiled Norman, Oak, on the upper end, Ashworth and Glenwood streets and are to begin work on Autumn street. The change has made a big improvement in the roads and the residents living on streets in that section have expressed themselves as much pleased.

PORTABLE BANDSTAND READY FOR CONCERTS

Structure That Can Be Moved Wherever Needed Completed by Construction Co.

The new portable bandstand to be used by the Salvation Army band for the coming band concerts has been completed by the Manchester Construction Company under the direction of the Park Department. It is of wood and constructed in such a manner that it can be taken down and reassembled at any given point.

The Park Department ordered the stand made, incorporating this portable feature which will make possible its removal to any given point in town for use as a reviewing stand, a concert, or for out-door use in general. The stand will be stored under cover, thus protecting the wood from the weather and can be assembled on short notice at any given point in town.
