

JAPAN, KOREA STORM SWEEP; 408 VICTIMS

Millions in Property Damage — 92 Fishing Boats Carrying 500 Men Are Reported As Missing.

Tokyo, July 21.—(AP).—Torrential rains and terrific winds today had claimed toll of at least 408 lives and devastated huge areas in southern Japan and Korea, laying waste property valued by conservative Tokyo newspapers at millions of dollars.

In one area alone, Kiushiu Island, at the foot of the Japanese Empire, property damage reached 100,000,000 yen (about $20,000,000). Other districts reported great damage from storms of the last two weeks, but official figures were lacking.

There were sixty-five known dead in Kiushiu. Many were missing and hundreds injured.

Last Week's Typhoon Seoul, Korea, dispatches to Tokyo newspapers said fifty-eight deaths were known to have resulted from last Friday's typhoon, which swept in from the Pacific, lashed Kiushiu and whipped across Korea straight into the provinces of Keishonando, Keishohokudo, Kankyonando, and Kogendo. These provinces, still suffering from the effects of recent floods which killed at least 285 persons, and made thousands homeless, were hard hit by the typhoon.

Property damage in Kiushiu, but only because of the comparative poverty of the inhabitants.

May Mount Higher Indications were the Korean death toll would mount much higher. Ninety-two fishing craft, carrying more than five hundred fishermen, were missing at sea. Eighty-three persons were unaccounted for ashore.

More than 120 vessels, mostly fishing craft, were missing from Kiushiu island, where 950 craft of the same type were sunk by the typhoon.

Seas were reported to have reached tidal wave proportions along the eastern coast of Korea. Calms between Japan and the mainland were damaged by the typhoon. Service between Japan and China virtually ceased and Japan-European service fared not much better.

Full extent of the typhoon damage probably will not be known several days, owing to disrupted communications.

The wind at times was reported to have reached a velocity exceeding one hundred miles an hour.

NINE ARE KILLED OVER THE WEEKEND

Two Killed by Heat; Five Die in Crashes; One Drowned and One Gassed.

(By Associated Press) A merciless sun that shot temperatures throughout Connecticut to record-breaking levels combined with the desire for a cool respite on motor roads and at the beaches to take a toll of nine lives.

Two of the deaths were ascribed directly to the heat, five resulted from auto accidents and one from drowning. The ninth victim was struck down by carbon monoxide poisoning in his garage as he was starting his car for a Sunday afternoon jaunt.

LAST MAN DRINKS TOAST TO 33 DEPARTED FRIENDS

Lone Survivor of Last Man's Club Opens Bottle of Wine Sealed in 1885 at First Meeting of Club.

Stillwater, Minn., July 21.—(AP).—Thirty three vacant chairs, draped in black, stood as silent sentinels around a banquet table today, witnesses that Charley Lockwood carry out the covenant of the Last Man's Club.

Lockwood, 87 years old, is the last man and today the Club's only member left. He is the only one left of the original members of the club, which was organized in 1885 for the purpose of drinking a toast to 33 Civil War comrades who died before him and left him with the honor he has found empty.

Before each chair stood a bouquet of flowers. Before Lockwood's plate was placed the bottle of old Burgundy wine which the club set aside as its former members departed. It was to be opened at the first meeting of the club after the death of the last member.

Lockwood said his fellow survivors of Company E, First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and today's banquet like those each year before was on the anniversary of the First Battle of Bull Run in which the company was first engaged.

Lockwood said he would be last, Lockwood said, admitting to his feeling manifest. "But really I look forward to it as an honor. I know now that it shouldn't have been—instead it only makes me feel badly when I think of it," the 87 year old last man said.

Today the banquet hall had a tone of deep solemnity in contrast with those meetings before when great feasts with many bottles of wine brought the old campaigners together for a day each year. Always, every member felt confident that he would be last.

Sail 700 Miles, Boy And Girl Plan To Continue In Tiny Boat

New York.—This is the story of a co-ed and a carpenter, and the kind of luck that watches over infant marines. All that Eric Johnson and Florence Smith knew when they set out for Bermuda in their 15-foot sailboat was that New York City lay about 700 miles due north-west by north. Their craft, with its slender mast and tiny cabin, was untried in the open sea. As the couple had no knowledge of navigation, beyond the ability to read a pocket compass.

The co-ed and the carpenter here are pictured with the sturdy little sailboat in which they dared the open sea from Bermuda to New York. Eric Johnson, upper right, built the craft with closed deck and cabin for just a voyage as he now has completed with Miss Florence Smith, lower left. They may continue up the coast to her home in New Brunswick.

But not until they were safely docked at a Brooklyn pier sixteen days later—although they almost lost their lives at the last minute in a collision with a brick barge—was their confidence shaken. When old salts had called the voyage a miracle, no less, and had marveled at the diminutive egg-shell which had ridden out four days of storms, Florence and Eric decided that maybe they had done something remarkable after all.

Johnson was fitted with water-tight deck and a cabin about the size of a packing case. They christened it the Florence and provided it with dried beef, hard tack, canned vegetables and a tank of fresh water.

His Biggest Accomplishment
In fact, it may well be that up to now his winning the "Battle of Ceresia" can be marked down as his greatest achievement.

Mussolini is a realist. In looking over his country he saw that the industries of northern Italy were thriving. In order to thrive, they had to import vast quantities of iron, coal, petroleum and other raw materials which Italy cannot supply. At the same time, in order to eat, Italy had to import great quantities of foodstuffs. And the balance of trade just seemed naturally to go against Italy, the imports far exceeding the exports.

RED MENACE IS SEEN IN REVOLT AGAINST FRENCH

Hanoi, French Indo-China. (AP).—The Viet-Nam-Quoc-Dan-Dang and the Viet-Nam-Cong-Dan-Dang, the chief native political parties, joining against French rule, are blamed by officials for the recent uprisings here.

Nearly seventy lives were lost and several hundred persons wounded. Among the latter were five Burmese.

Translated into English, the foregoing means that the nationalists and the communists, in spite of their entirely different political programs, formed a coalition to make life miserable for the handful of Frenchmen governing 20,000,000 Annamites and Tonkinese.

WARWICK CASTLE SCENE OF PAGEANT

Colorful Performance To Be Given At Which Over 5,000 Will Take Part.

Stratford-on-Avon, Eng., (AP).—Shakespeare's county—Warwickshire—has completed preparations for a pageant to be given tomorrow and on the three days following that rival in magnificence and historical interest the famous one of 1906.

Warwick castle is again to furnish the background. Fully 5,000 performers will take part. All over the country little bands of women have been busy making costumes appropriate to the period to be enacted, and artists, craftsmen, musicians and dancers have united to make the pageant a success.

Hoover Finds Sport In Fishing; He Likes To Experiment For Bait

Washington. (AP).—Even the lure of the medicine ball is not so strong for President Hoover as the angler's call to cool streams where trout leap.

Since he was a small boy, the President has followed the way of fish, and waters in many parts of the world have held hooks dropped by this cosmopolitan Isak Walton.

At other times he will linger at a place initially uninviting, studying to learn what kind of bait may prove most enticing. He watches insects about the water in the hope that he will find the food most palatable for the trout. The fly selected often resembles in color and some of these insects.

On week-end President Hoover enjoys trout fishing (right) in his Virginia camp. Last winter he sampled deep sea angling (upper left) off the Florida coast and caught a huge sail fish (lower right).

On dark days, other factors being equal, he may select a brightly colored fly to tempt trout that show no interest in drab "food."

"The savings bank book," he serves, "constitutes the crowning point of an American's life-work. As to prohibition, Hollitzer maintains that 'the favorite pastime of the American is indulging in the evasion of prohibition, the American, big child that he enjoys nothing so much as putting one over on the law—and that can be accomplished most easily by consuming alcohol, even if he still care much for it before prohibition.'"

DANCING JUDITH

By CORALIE STANTON and HEATH HOSKEN
COPYRIGHT 1930 BY CHELSEA HOUSE

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Judith Grant, artist's model, loves Alan Steyne, painter, who is also loved by Chummy Morley, Judith's best friend. Chummy had loved Steyne years ago and had lost her memory when he went away; so though he loves Judith, Judith insists it is his duty to marry Chummy. She regards her memory when she sees him again. Judith studies dancing and makes a sensation in a musical show backed by Richard Brown, Chummy, on the eve of her marriage. She learns that Judith and Steyne love each other and Chummy's engagement to Judith is a ruse to marry Steyne, insisting he belongs to Chummy. Then Judith learns that Chummy is really the agent for rich Bruce Gideon, a financier who has been for some time. She goes to Gideon's home and reproaches him for his deceit, telling him that the whole city now thinks she is his property.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXIV

Judith struggled with swelling tears that she would rather die than shed.

Gideon allowed a moment to elapse. Then he said, without looking at her:

"All the same, you must admit I have had the honor and the good fortune to give a great dancer to the world."

"That you haven't!" Judith's voice sounded as if her frail body were about to burst with rage. The rich man smiled with tolerance.

"You cannot pretend that you can't dance. That would be rather too much of a joke!"

"I don't pretend anything," she flashed, "but I'll tell you one thing—I'm never going to dance again. Not likely!"

Steyne looked at Gideon to argue of plead. Judy was adamant. She would give up her career as a dancer rather than owe anything to him. He had cheated her; he had behaved like a cad. She would cancel her contract with Matthew Tannary and return to her model work.

Steyne flung himself out of Gideon's apartment, and went at once to see Matthew Tannary.

He was a little, dark, bullet-headed Scotsman, with an iron-gray mustache. His eyes were very keen, but sometimes they twinkled with fun.

He listened to all that she had to say. Then he kept silent for a few moments, while he studied her with a keen and steady admiration at which even Jerry Little Judy could not take offense. What he finally said was very characteristic.

"I wonder why Chummy couldn't have kept his counsel better?"

"This made Judy wild with anger. "That's not the point, Mr. Tannary!" she cried. "I've been shamefully deceived, and I won't stand it! Nothing would have induced me to appear at the Monopole if I'd known that Mr. Gideon was paying for everything. Nothing would have induced me to sign this contract with you."

"Why is that, Miss Grant?"

"Don't you see?" she asked impatiently. "I owe all my success to him, and I just won't have it!"

"Ye can't throw your success away," he said dryly.

"I can stop dancing."

"Then ye mean to break your contract with me?"

"Yes—of course I do."

"Ye can't stop, Miss Grant. The law will bind ye; and I've spent a good deal on advertising ye and all that kind of thing."

"I'll pay you back. I've got plenty of money."

"It must be enough. You can't have spent such an awful lot."

"Ye'll lose me a ton of money. Ye were going to set the place on fire. The Swedish people will be at me like bees. Ye can't do it, Miss Grant!"

"I'm going to."

He regarded her with a grim little smile.

that Alan Steyne had gone to Paris with his friend Hynton, who had managed his departure sooner than he had thought possible.

She herself was leaving for Paris in the following week. She was booked for a three-week engagement there, and was then going to Nice and Monte Carlo, and from there to Milan, Rome and Naples. She felt dizzy when she thought of it, but she knew that it was her life, and that she could never have given it up.

Three days before her departure she met Bruce Gideon. She was walking toward her lodgings, and her arms were full of parcels.

He stood still, hat in hand, bowing with formal deference.

Through Judy's mind there flashed the idea that it would be a great satisfaction to cut him dead; but almost instantly another thought came to her, just as definite. In some way she had so to order her life that Alan Steyne must know that she could never have any part in his. How to do this better than by assuming her friendship with Mr. Punch? It would get to Alan's ears, however far off he was—she was sure of that. He would despise her. He would think that what had been said about her was true. Well, all the better! That was what she wanted.

Then, on the top of this thought, came still another. The purpose that had been lying dormant stirred again—that curious plan born out of the vision of a beautiful girl and a disappointed-looking man in a big motor car; or, born, more strictly speaking, in Vincent Stornaway's studio, as she sat on the bench behind a screen. Those hateful words sounded again in her ears:

"Not the sort of girl one could marry. If one did marry, it would not be a little Judy Grant!"

So, instead of cutting Bruce Gideon, she smiled at him.

"I hear you are going to Paris after all, Miss Judy," he said.

"Yes, I changed my mind," Judy said.

"I am more than glad," he answered very politely.

"You don't walk with me to my diggings," she said. "I'll tell you all about it. I'm going to pay you back."

"I have been paid back," he replied. "Wyon and I went through everything yesterday."

"Oh, no—there's a lot more to come!"

"As you like," he said. "Anything, as long as you don't punish the world at large for what I did."

"Rubbish! The world could do without me well enough; but I decided I was a fool. I was mad when I saw you. Guarventus would have wanted me to go on."

They reached her lodgings.

"When can I see you?" he asked.

"Could you arrange to do me an hour or so? Won't you lunch with me tomorrow?"

"I might if I had the time. I can't."

"I'll be at the Mayfair at half past one. Don't disappoint me, Miss Judy."

She hardly answered him, and ran up the stairs. She was struggling with many emotions. To be going with her, and to be overpowered with herself, though the object was laudable, the carrying out of it was repugnant in the extreme. She hated Gideon's flabby face, his ridge of black hair, his huge nose, and his pale, covetous eyes. She had not brains enough to appreciate his remarkable knowledge and dominant personality. Her most definite feeling about him was repulsion.

It was June again in New York—a peerless, golden June, with blue, translucent days, and crimson-and-purple sunsets, and long lavender-gray twilight slipping into short fairy nights of sapphire satin and silver moonshine. It was New York at its very best.

The doors of the Cafe Turc were swung wide open to the street. Dan sat on the steps and played his guitar and sang his songs for the world to hear.

Inside, it was a reek of smoke and coffee and stock pot and wine dregs, as usual; and the usual crowd were there.

Bastien Dumont and Michael Stone sat at the table under the dead master's sketch of Clarissa Morley, with its faded laurel wreath and rusty grape bow. Bastien was fulfilling himself. He need no longer go without food or necessity, although he still did so quite often from habit. He had the indelible air of the man who is arriving.

A man's work improves with recognition and success as it does by the very fact of working. It is the man who has no work to do who works badly. Bastien's big canvas at the Belvoir Galleries, "Sewer Men at Breakfast," was making the whole city talk.

"Judy is back," said Michael Stone, stirring his ice coffee in the long glass.

"Yes," replied Dumont, in the depths of gloom. "So I hear."

"She's been at Monte Carlo and Nice, and all over Italy. Now she's back here for a week or two; and then she's going to Sweden and Norway and Denmark."

"Yes, I know."

"In answer," she's been, this chap Gideon's been there. He's her shadow."

"So Stornaway says, and he ought to know."

"Judy—marry—him?"

"I shouldn't think it likely myself," said Michael, and his rugged face grew chivalrously tender.

"What a little sport she was! What a spirit, she had! Always merry and bright, with great holes in the soles of her shoes on a dreary night! Always fussing around Chummy like a hen! And now she's the greatest dancer the world has ever known."

"By Jove! Dumont, do you remember her first night? And even more than that, the night in Steyne's studio when she danced for us and you fiddled for her? That reminds me—I meant to ask you, do you think Steyne and Clarissa have made it up?"

"What makes you ask?" said Dumont.

"Only that they're always together now, since Steyne came back from Paris. How long ago was it? At least a month—and he seems to have drifted back into the old life."

"I don't think he has," Dumont replied. "He came back with his friend Hynton, who very nearly died out there. Steyne took care of him; and brought him home; but I think he's going back again very soon. Far from drifting back, I think he's becoming a business man."

"He told me the other day he'd quite given up the idea of painting; but of course he would be with Chummy—they're still great friends."

"I wondered, that's all," said Michael Stone. "You know what women are. They said she'd broken it off because of her work. The point is, would her work always come first?"

Dumont nudged him sharply, as Chummy and Steyne came in. (To Be Continued)

West Sides Defeat New Britain 6 to 3 But Bon Ami Loses

Stavitsky, Holland, Mantelli Star, West Hartford Too Strong for Town Champions After Layoff.

The West Sides turned back the strong Sacred Heart team of New Britain at the Four Acres yesterday by a score of 6 to 3. Elmo Mantelli was on the mound for the locals and pitched splendid ball, aided by his team mates who gave him outright support.

The Sacred Hearts scored in the opener when Dobrowski walked. Longmore laid down a bunt and Sullick hit to right and Dobrowski. The West Sides got a hold of Dobuck in the third inning for three runs. Ty Holland hit to center and "Stuffy" Stavitsky laced a screaming triple out to the left field, scoring a run. Mantelli pitched a single and scored on an error after Mantelli had advanced him with a long fly to center.

The visitors came back in the fourth and scored two runs to tie the score. The West Sides produced another run in the fourth when "Lucky Joe" Raynor bunched his way to first and came home on Ty Holland's single to right field.

Mantelli, aided with double plays by McConeky and Foley to Stavitsky, held the visitors scoreless for the remaining five innings, issuing only two hits. The West Sides scored again in the sixth after Raynor again walked and McConeky Stavitsky's hit to left field. In the eighth, Foley hit to center, Holland did likewise. Stavitsky pushed them up a peg with a neat sacrifice and Foley came home on McConeky's hit.

The game was full of pep and was marked with some beautiful plays. With two men on in the fifth and two out, Dave McConeky scratched a line drive of Dobrowski's bat for the final out. Again in the seventh he took another hot one from Sapkowski and turned it into a double play retiring the side.

In the eighth Jimmy Foley sared a hot one and threw to Stavitsky for a double play.

TILDEN ACCEPTS AGAINST WISHES

Veteran Decides To Play For United States Against France; Does Out.

Paris, July 20—(AP)—William Tilden II told the Associated Press today "that against my wishes and better judgment, I have accepted an invitation to play for the United States in the Davis Cup challenge round."

The American tennis star explained that the rule regarding syndicate writing by amateur contestants had been waived to a certain extent and that he would be permitted to write tennis articles for a news syndicate for the three days ending with Wednesday, July 23, but inasmuch as actual competition from writing articles, Tilden will not report the challenge round matches on the ensuing Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

He remarked that he had taken a place in the challenge round, despite his previous assertions that he would not because of his news writing connections, on special request of Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the United States Davis Cup committee. Others selected to represent America in the challenge round are George Lott, Chicago; Wilmer Allison, Fort Worth, Texas; and John Van Ryn, of Princeton. An announcement as to the probable lineup of the team was made, but it appeared almost certain that Tilden and Lott will carry the singles burden, while Van Ryn and Allison will be paired in the doubles.

Mr. Wear said the definite selection would be left to Fitz-Burgess Dixon, non-playing captain of the team, and that it probably would not be announced until 24 hours before the start of the matches. Despite the Philadelphia veteran's announcement that he would not become a member of the American team because of his contract with a news syndicate to "cover" the matches, Mr. Wear had stated many times that he felt certain Tilden would eventually yield to the wishes of himself and other members of the Davis Cup committee.

As chairman of the committee, Mr. Wear said he had given Tilden permission to write tennis articles on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday prior to the opening of the challenge round, but that on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, when the matches are in progress, he would handle the writing. This arrangement, Mr. Wear stated, would in no way break the player-writer rule.

Atlanta Boy Proves New Tennis Wizard

Kansas City, July 21—(AP)—The counterpart of William (Little Bull) Johnston of California today holds the national clay courts tennis singles championship.

An Bryant Grant, Jr., 19-year-old Atlanta boy, battled in 100 degree temperature yesterday at the Rock-hill Tennis Club, to subdue Wilbur F. (Junior) Coen of Kansas City in the finals of the twenty-first round of the important event, tennis followers let their thoughts wander back several years and saw the slight Californian playing with that courageous determination, never saying the play of the new clay champion.

Neither Johnston nor Grant was blessed with the tennis physique of a Tilden or a Frank Shields, notwithstanding the fact Grant's withstanding the fact Grant is a 6-footer and in 1967 with Nat Horton was runner-up in the national doubles. But both were endowed with fighting hearts and with those they conquered a physical deficiencies. Grant is more sturdy than was Johnston when he lost the tournament committee after having filed his entry.

LEGION CLOSES SEASON BEATING SOUTHTONING 6-5

Closes Successful Campaign That Netted 8 Wins, 5 Losses and 1 Tie Game; Several "Graduate."

With a lineup composed of older boys than permitted in regular Legion competition, Southington was able to give Manchester a real battle Saturday afternoon at Recreation Park in Southington. The locals won by a score of 6 to 5.

Southington played an early lead tallying three times in the second stanza. Rautenburg, who was on the mound for Manchester, gave way to Fraser and Roy promptly put an end to the scoring until the latter part of the contest Manchester pegged away at the hand and went out in front in the sixth inning. The advantage for the remainder of the game.

Friday, the first Southington batter to face Rautenburg, clouted a homer into deep left field but failed to touch first base. It was a tough break.

Bob Cotton, with two timely doubles, and Joe Lovett, who bunched out three singles, were the "big boys" for Manchester while "Mucky" Smith did yeoman service in the field, accepting nine out of ten chances. Sherman and Stuart were the leading hitters and the work of Paulins at second was clever for Southington.

Saturday's game was the last of the season for the Legion. The team has engaged in fourteen contests this year, winning eight, losing five and tying one.

Due to the restrictions as to age Captain James O'Leary, Roy Fraser, Raymond Day, Dominic Squarito, Francis Mahoney, Robert Cotton, Robert Metcalf and Joseph Lovett have played their last game in Legion competition. Those who will be eligible for next year are Raymond Berger, Harold Civallo, Stewart Kennedy, Eric Rautenburg, Charles Smith and Joseph Sullivan.

MORGAN AND FOX WIN WITH HOMERS

Former's Clout In Ninth Beats Yanks 9-8 While Latter's Downs Tigers.

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.

It usually is only in the realm of baseball fiction that the hero wins a game by hitting a home run in the ninth inning, but every once in a while such fact turns up in the world of fact in the major leagues. Eddie Morgan of Cleveland was the only player who actually gained a victory by a home run hitting feat at the moment.

From Kansas City "Bity" Grant moves on to Denver and the Colorado state tournament. He admits he is tired, has "little pep" but, true sportsman that he is, will not throw down the Colorado tournament committee after having filed his entry.

HARRIS WILL CAPTAIN COUNTRY CLUB TENNIS TEAM DURING SEASON

Former Oregon State Flash Named No. 1 Man; "Cap" Bissell Is Club Professional.

Milton Harris, former captain of the Oregon State College tennis team, has been appointed to captain the Manchester Country Club team this season, according to Henry R. Simmonds, chairman of the tennis committee.

The personnel of the local team has not been selected yet and it is understood that any club members are eligible to compete for a berth. Matches are planned with the Hartford Golf Club and other similar organizations. They will be home and home affairs.

The new courts have only recently been completed near the clubhouse at the Country Club and they are without fear of contradiction by far the best courts in town.

It was also announced today that Sherwood Bissell, former tennis champion and captain of the Trinity College tennis team, has been appointed club professional. He will give instructions to those who desire but will not be in the employ of the club, working independently from a financial standpoint, yet under the club's supervision.

John Hyde Noses Out Earl Ballsieper 2 Up In Golf Tournament

Overcomes Great Rally To Squeeze Out Winner, Eckman Cops Saturday Point Tournament.

The John H. Hyde-Earl M. Ballsieper quarter-final golf match of the President's cup competition went to the 36th hole before Hyde won Saturday afternoon by a score of two holes up. The day before they had played an 18-hole dead-end.

Hyde now meets J. P. Cheney, Jr. in the semi-finals for the right to play M. J. Turkington in the final. The Hyde-Ballsieper match was a very keenly fought struggle waged on almost even terms. Hyde got away to a two hole lead but when the pair reached the turn they were all square. On the home-ward journey, Hyde started to make the hole look like a walkway.

Hyde got a par three against Ballsieper's four to win the match two up. Their Cards: Hyde 455-746-588-446 443-554-583-39 Ballsieper 575-645-445-45 554-633-454-41

Eckmanian Winner The regular tournament Saturday was a point affair with handicaps. Eagles netted five points, birdies three, pars two and holes one over par one. John H. Hyde, director of the State Trade school, was the winner with 40 points. A. A. Knofa, A. L. Knofa, Paul Ballsieper and H. H. Hunt were tied for second place. Paul Ballsieper's 61 was low gross.

You can't fool me—they're pink.

Good news for the back-seat driver:
An engineer has invented an

I still have the car and the tools except
The landlord got my jack.

A JOKE

The orderly sergeant was mak-

"Any complaints?" he boomed.
"The Irish stew's funny," replied one soldier.
"Oh, is it?" barked the sergeant.
"Then why ain't you laughin'?"—

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

One sandwich was not quite enough and Clowdy said, "Here's where I stuff. I've never tasted food like this. It's surely cooked up great. We've eaten every one that's done, but it will be a lot of fun to watch the man make more of them. Let's stand right here and wait."

The Travel Man then said, "Oh no! You see, the meat cooks rather slow. We'd all get tired out standing. Come, we'll all sit down instead." So, at the curb, they all sat down and watched the meat cook and brown. And, while it sizzled over the fire, the man prepared some bread.

Soon Scouty said, "What kind of meat is that which makes so nice a treat? It's juicy and it's sunder, like a meat croquet, well done." "It's mutton," said the Travel Man. "They're ready now.
Eat all you can." And soon the sandwich vendor served the Tinies, one by one.

A flock of little Persian boys had gathered round amid much noise. They knew the Tinymites were from a country far away.

They all spread friendly smiles, and then the Travel Man spoke up again. Said he, "They're nice young lads and I am sure they want to play."

So Clowdy cried, "All right, let's go!" And they all played an hour or so. The Tinies taught them tag and soon much laughter filled the air. Of course there wasn't any doubt that they would all soon grow tired out. Then Coppo said, "It's fun to play with them 'cause they play fair."

They shortly bid the lads goodbye. Then came another vendor's cry. "Oh, look! He's selling nice hot soup. I'll bet it tastes real good." The Travel Man said, "Bless your soul! Xon all shall have a nice hot bowl!" And then the soup man served it to them quickly as he could.

(Clowdy has a wild, scary ride in the next story.)
