CRUISER WAITS WORD TO LAND EX-PRESIDENT

Argentine Warship 30 Miles Off Montevideo, Uruguay; Reports Say Irigoyen Will Not Be Landed There.

Buenos Aires, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Argentine cruiser General Belgrano, with ex-President Irigoyen aboard was reported today in despatches to La Plata to be 30 miles off Montevideo, Uruguay, awaiting further orders.

The dispatches said presumably Irigoyen would not land at the Uruguayan capital, where it had been reported he would take a temporary refuge.

Left yesterday the cruiser at La Plata yesterday shortly before noon, since his fall from power he had remained in the seventh infantry barracks there since presumably Irigoyen would not land at the Uruguayan capital where it had been reported he would take a temporary refuge.

STATE DEMOCRATS LAUNCH CAMPAIGN

P. B. O'Sullivan, of Orange, New Chairman; Plan Mon- ster Speaking Program.

New Haven, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Democratic Party of Connecticut—with Dean Emeritus Wilbur L. Cross as its nominee for governor—today marked out its battle lines for carrying the fight to the Republican strongholds in the fall campaign.

An early conference of Dean Cross and P. B. O'Sullivan, the new chairman of the state central committee was held for the first time. A speaking program such as has not been attempted in recent years is expected to bring the Democratic cause into every section of the state.

Harmonious Meeting
Dean Cross and the entire ticket was selected at the state convention held yesterday at Easton. It was an unprecedentedly attended by almost unprecedented manner. Daniel J. Leary, Waterbury, comptroller, was chosen as the candidate for lieutenant governor.

The only topic of discord was caused over the right of the gubernatorial nominee to name the state chairman. When a serious break was threatened on the floor, James J. Walsh of Meriden, the former chairman, stepped in and urged to calmer waters with a plea that Dean Cross be empowered to choose his own party management.

Later at a meeting of the state committee, Cross announced P. B. O'Sullivan as his choice, and he was elected along with Joseph M. Toms, of New Haven, secretary and Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch, Columbia, as vice chairman. The control of the reorganization group.

The state headquarters of the Democrats have been opened in the Lincoln building in Court street city, the renting of the suite of offices having been carried through a few days ago by the then chairman James J. Walsh.

Convenient Quarters
The location of the offices will make it convenient for Professor Cross to call frequently for conference with his managers. Up till this time has had none of his campaigning from his office at Yale as he has been closing up his affairs as dean during the summer; that the office may be taken over by his successor with the opening of college late this month.

Professor Cross already is having a much increased mail, and many telegrams of congratulation from Yale friends and former pupils. Today he was in New York and early next week he will settle down to organization of his speaking tours. It is his intention to go out on the stump and he promised the delegates to have more to say on the prohibition question as the campaign went on.

Many Invitations
Invitations to Mr. Cross, to attend outings and political club meetings are now coming in. He promised to go Sunday afternoon to a Senatorial club outing in West Haven and make his first stump speech. Alton T. Miner, nominee for secretary, Mayor Sunderland of Danbury, nominee for comptroller and David A. Wilson, nominee for attorney general also said they would be present.

Yale's China School Not Wrecked By Reds

New Haven, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The home office of Yale in China today received a cablegram saying that the hospital and middle school of Yale in China, located at Changsha, had escaped serious damage during the recent invasion by Communists.

The cablegram sent by the staff of the station, said that the Yale in China campus had not been entered during the entire period of Communist occupation. The hospital, located across the street from the campus, was invaded and over-run, but only slightly damaged.

Dr. Hwang Fu, principal of the Middle School, cabled that the Chinese staff escaped injury and that the school would open for its fall term.

The trustees of Yale in China met in New York yesterday and voted $6,000 for the purchase of equipment for the hospital.

SEES PROFITABLE YEAR FOR NEW ENGLAND MILLS

New England Council Reports That It All Depends On Management These Days How Large Profits Will Be.

Middlebury, Vt., Sept. 12.—(AP)—A profitable year for many New England mills was foreseen by the industrial committee of the New England Council in its report at the opening sessions of the 20th quarterly meeting here today. Richard W. Suloway, treasurer of the Suloway mills, Franklin, N. H., and William S. Nutter, vice president of the Goodall Worsted Company, Sanford, Me., reported for the committee.

The activity or inactivity of a mill at this time rests chiefly with the management," Mr. Suloway said in the report.

"In those plants where it is the practice of the management to maintain low inventories and a strong cash position, to employ research in the development of new products, new processes, and new markets, also to do the best possible job of selling, we find a healthy and prosperous ending of the year with a profit smaller than in boom years, but a profit nevertheless," the committee found in its report.

"There are many firms," the committee found, that "the whole mechanism of distribution is being subjected to more intensive scrutiny than ever before, and management is becoming more scientific in its efforts to cut costs and conserve profits."

"There are many firms," the committee warned, "who are still waiting for something to turn up and it is these firms which are most likely to find themselves out of the running as business once again recedes into its normal state. The mills that have adopted watchful waiting as a policy are the ones that seem to be feeling the depression the most."

Modern Methods
The adoption of modern merchandising methods by the farmer, a cash income in the recreational field that is higher than expected, and a rapid advance in highway beautification, was reported by other of the council's committees at the opening session.

The report of the agricultural committee was presented by Harry R. Lewis, chairman of the committee and commissioner of agriculture for Rhode Island. Products labeled with the stamp of New England quality farm products have found a ready market when the market has been slow on similar products, and stamped the committee found.

Crops Are Good
There has been no suffering to any appreciable extent from drought in New England and the committee on agriculture foresees a good year for New England farmers.

"The corn crop in New England is large and the demand strong due to the failure of western corn crops," the report said. The potato outlook was described as good, despite the fact that the crop is slightly smaller than last year and the price lower. Both are above the average for the past five years, however, the records show.

Staying Of Elephants
Increasing These Days
Colombo, Ceylon, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Elephant stealing is on the increase in Ceylon. Mahouts seldom endeavor to sell the beasts, owing to the difficulty of obtaining the necessary bills of sale. Instead they take stolen animals to some remote part of Ceylon and hire out their services. Elephants are in great demand here for work on farm or in the logging camps, dragging little native ploughs and in piling timber. P. D. Madugalle, of Kottawegoda, appeared in the Matale Court on be-

REPUBLICANS PLAN TO NAME ROGERS

No Uncertainties As To Ticket of This Year—Convention On Monday.

New Haven, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Democrats having led off with their ticket, political attention turned today to the forthcoming Republican convention at which the ticket will be named. This will open Monday night at Hartford in Foot Guard armory, the scene of the greater number of Republican conventions in the last 20 years.

The most acrimonious convention the party ever held was just 20 years ago, precipitated by the Goodwin-Lake fight, which led in a Democratic governor for two terms.

Rogers For Governor
The Republican ticket to be named has no uncertainties in its make-up. Lieutenant Governor Ernest E. Rogers of New London, will be named for governor, his sponsor being former State Senator Daniel M. Cronin, of his home town.

It is on the program to name state treasurer Samuel R. Spencer of Suffield for lieutenant governor, give Senator Roy C. Wilcox of Meriden the treasuryship and rename Secretary of State William L. Higgins, and Comptroller Frederick M. Salmon. If the last named should be elected, he will be on the way to establish a modern endurance record in the office. He took office in 1923.

Back in the last century, a comptroller served from 1806 to 1819, or 13 years. The party platform is being outlined, and it was understood today that over the weekend convention arrangements will be completed.

CANOEISTS TRAVEL ARCTIC TO PANAMA

Have Already Made 7,500 Miles—Four Men Started in May, 1929.

Prince Rupert, B. C., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Four Arctic to Panama canoeists—Victor, Alvin and Evans Fisher, and Charles Bruder, of Tyvan, Saskatchewan, have reached Prince Rupert after a canoe journey of 7,500 miles and more than one thousand miles by dog team.

In the best of health they declared today they would press on toward the Panama Canal by way of the Fraser, Saskatchewan and Red rivers in Canada and the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico. They started from Waterways, Alberta in May, 1929.

The most trying part of the adventure was last winter spent trapping on the Snake and Peel rivers country. In the darkness of the long Arctic night they lived for 96 days on caribou meat and salt. They ran the rapids of the Peel river for 200 miles. They brought their winter catch of valuable furs which they sold for several thousand dollars.

"DRY" SENATOR NOW OUT FOR ACTS REPEAL

Burton K. Wheeler, of Mont- tana; Changes His Opin- ion—Says Present Law is Failure and Gives Reasons

Washington, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Senator Burton K. Wheeler, Montana, Democrat, ranked among the drys in Congress, issued a statement today saying he had come to the opinion "That National prohibition is a failure and that each state should be left to regulate the liquor traffic as a majority of its citizens seem advisable."

His statement follows:
"I voted for prohibition in Montana because I felt that the old saloon was a curse to the American people, and I wanted to do away with it. In the old days the breweries in many instances owned the saloons, the buildings and the license and in many instances controlled local politics."

Against Saloons
"I am now more in favor of the saloon, no more in favor of the sale of liquor today than I was before but under prohibition you have in many cities more dives and speakeasies where they are openly selling rotten whiskey than you had in the old days. Today in many communities, the bootlegger is becoming a greater political power and has more information than the old time saloon keeper as evidenced by the fact that he is able to reach the top of our highest offices. He is generally a more law-abiding citizen. He has had a rightful corrupting influence upon our social, moral and political life."

"In view of the fact that this administration and the previous administrations have apparently been helpless in stamping out the evil, I am reluctantly forced to the opinion that national prohibition is a failure and that each state should be left to regulate the liquor traffic as a majority of its citizens deem advisable."

Senator Wheeler in the last session of Congress introduced a resolution into the Senate asking an investigation of prohibition. No action was taken.

Senator Thomas J. Walsh, Mr. Wheeler's colleague, last year said that he would favor a referendum on prohibition if a resolution to that effect were introduced.

AGAIN NAME SMITH AS STATE SENATOR

Local Man Wins Nomination at Fourth District Con- vention Held Today.

Senator Robert J. Smith of Manchester was renominated to represent the fourth district in the state public convention of the district held at the Hotel Bond, Hartford today. Mr. Smith who is also county commissioner enters his fifth term as State Senator.

Today's convention was called together by Mrs. J. Francis Saunders of East Hartford, state central committee. William Thrasher of South Windsor was elected chairman. Mrs. Charles Manning of East Hartford was named clerk.

Judge Raymond A. Johnson, assistant attorney general, replaced the name of Senator Robert J. Smith in nomination for senator and this was seconded by Owen Havens of Rocky Hill. At the conclusion of the convention the party was invited to dinner by Senator Smith.

Robert J. Smith
of East Hartford, state central committee. William Thrasher of South Windsor was elected chairman. Mrs. Charles Manning of East Hartford was named clerk.

TREASURY BALANCE
Washington, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Treasury receipts for September 10 were $7,486,760.83; expenditures, $14,263,820.02; balance, $98,503,845.66.

ADVENTURERS IN SPACE

Housed inside a hermetically sealed gondola of a balloon, as pictured here, Professor Auguste Piccard, physicist of Brussels University, is to attempt to soar to a height of 52,500 feet above Augsburg, Germany, as soon as weather conditions permit.

At this altitude, two miles greater than any ever reached by man, he and an assistant hope to attain measurements of radio activity and the ionization of the air. A supply of oxygen will allow the scientists to breathe when their craft enters the rarified air.

ISLANDERS FEAR VOLCANO'S WRATH

3,000 Residents of Strom- boli, Italy, Sleep in the Open; 4 Dead, 10 Injured.

Messina, Italy, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The people of Messina, Stromboli and Lipari today turned anxious eyes toward the Stromboli volcano which, strangely silent after its latest eruption, had kept thousands awake and on the alert throughout the night.

The nearly 3,000 residents of Stromboli island slept last night in the open, under tents provided by government ships hurriedly sent here after yesterday's eruption and violent earthquake shock. Three thousand feet above was the peak of the volcano, mysteriously quiet but with all of its weakened dead-volcanic potentialities.

All of the Aeolian islands were affected by the earthquake but only the picturesque circular island of Stromboli suffered from the volcanic disturbance.

Two torpedo boats came back from Stromboli shortly before midnight bringing one badly injured person, reporting four dead at Ginestra, one woman missing and nine residents injured.

Many fires started by the volcano were extinguished after four hours by firemen debarked from the warships.

Stromboli, in the Tyrrhenian, where the ancients believed Aeolus, god of the winds, resided and blew good or bad breezes from his bulging cheeks, was the heaviest loser. Aside from the fatalities three villages were damaged and acres of fertile land laid waste. That more lives were not lost was due to warning which the volcano itself sounded to the inhabitants.

The lava, instead of going down to the sea, as in the case of the eruption Mt. Etna in 1928 spread through villages until there was little left of the grape crop.

COLUMBUS VISITED AMERICA BEFORE

Hamburg, Germany, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Prof. Luis Ullmann, director of the German National Library at Lima, in an address at the Americanists Congress last night said newly discovered documents show America once before 1492, the accredited historical date of discovery.

The professor said that Columbus accompanied Danish Corsairs on a voyage which took them from Ireland to Greenland, Labrador, Newfoundland and the American continent.

Columbus, he declared, was not Genoese but a Catalan Corsair. He challenged documents heretofore produced, such as the alleged will of Columbus, as falsifications.

Find Document to Prove He Accompanied Danes Before Year 1492.

Filing information yesterday that the home of Simon De Brock, which yielded beer and mash to raiders, was an improper place for rearing children, Carbury obtained from Judge Olney C. Allen an order placing the five De Brock children in custody of the County Court.

HARTFORD A STOP FOR OCEAN FLIERS

Coste and Bellonte to be There on Monday, First Day of Good Will Trip.

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Dieudonne Coste and Maurice Bellonte, French trans-Atlantic fliers, will start Monday on a 15,000 mile good-will tour across the country during which they will fly over 100 cities in 30 states.

Their itinerary will take them up New England, across the northern part of the country to Seattle, down the Pacific coast and eastward over a southern route, then up the Atlantic coast, back to New York. The flight is expected to require 25 days.

Stopping Places
The stopping places indicated are: Boston, Cleveland, Indianapolis, (for lunch), Detroit, Chicago, Milwaukee (lunch), Minneapolis (Sunday stop over), Omaha (lunch), Denver, Salt Lake City, Boise (lunch), Portland, San Francisco, Phoenix (lunch), El Paso, San Antonio, Oklahoma City (lunch), Kansas City, St. Louis, Memphis (lunch), New Orleans (Sunday stop over), Pensacola (lunch), Atlanta, Winston-Salem (lunch), Richmond, Baltimore (lunch), Philadelphia.

The Paris to New York non-stop fliers will visit Hartford Monday on the first day of their good-will tour, and plans were immediately formulated by Mayor E. J. Patterson to assemble a fine welcome. A special committee will be picked to arrange for their reception, and a parade from Brainard Field through the main streets of Hartford, similar to Colonel Lindbergh's reception in the city, will be held if it coincides with the fliers' plans.

The expected stop at Brainard Field will be made on the flight from New York to Boston via Providence, New Haven, Hartford, Springfield, Newburyport, scheduled for Monday.

Major George Witten has been appointed tour manager and will travel along the route in a Department of Commerce plane. Pennsylvania, business manager of the fliers will act as inspector. A cracked propeller of the plane will be repaired for the tour until the arrival of a new one, now on board a liner enroute to America.

MOOCK IS EXECUTED FOR CLARK MURDER

Spokane Man Killed Boston Woman Who Went West to Marry Him.

Walla Walla, Wash., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Archie F. Moock of Spokane, was executed at the state penitentiary here this morning for the murder two years ago of Mrs. Catherine Clark, who came here from Boston in response to letters promising marriage.

Moock had relatives in Saskatchewan, Canada, who aided his defense through employment of counsel. J. A. M. Patrick of Yorkton, Sask., an attorney, was associated with the defense.

Killed With Hatchet
Mrs. Clark was killed in the woods near Spokane with a hatchet two years ago. Evidence at Moock's trial indicated she was induced to come west through several letters signed "Murphy."

Letters, clothing and money found at Moock's home provided the principal links in the chain of circumstantial evidence which led to his conviction. Moock claimed "Murphy" actually existed and that he himself was a victim of circumstances. Several thousand persons in Spokane signed a petition asking Moock's sentence be changed to life imprisonment.

DRIVER BADLY HURT
Norwalk, Sept. 12.—(AP)—James K. Carter, 29, of 6 Dorman street, New Haven, who is in a serious condition at the Norwalk hospital, faces a charge of reckless driving when he leaves the institution as a result of the accident yesterday, in which he was injured.

Carter sustained fractures of the skull and left forearm and numerous body bruises, on the Norwalk Danbury road in Wilton, when he sideswiped a car driven by Mrs. Loraine E. Schreiber, who had her small daughter as a passenger. Carter's machine was badly wrecked but the other car was only slightly damaged and its occupant escaped injury. He was rushed to the Norwalk hospital where he was later arrested by state trooper George Mitchell of the Westport barracks.

JAP VOLCANO ACTIVE

Tokyo, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Asama, Japan's most active volcano, erupted violently today, sending a shower of ashes and small stones down upon Karuzawa, the small town nearby noted as a summer resort and meeting place of missionaries.

Villages nearer the mountain were subjected to a hail of falling stones which damaged roofs. Ashes seriously harmed crops. Flying fire ignited the woods near the mountain's base. One Japanese mountaineer was seriously injured.

Asama has been unusually active this summer.

ADD TO EMPLOYES

Atlanta, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Atlanta Ford Motor Company plant, according to announcement today will start Monday on an increased production schedule with 150 additional employees. The new schedule calls for 25 additional car units a day in the plant, bringing the total to 135 cars a day.

Children As Weapons In Prohibition Battle

Geneva, Ill., Sept. 12.—(AP)—slaying of Mrs. Joseph de King in March, 1928, during a raid by agents from his office, Carbury promised further use of the new campaign against violators.

The De Brock children will be permitted to remain at their home but will be under the strict supervision of a probation officer. Should there be further offenses against the dry law in the home, the children will be taken from her, Carbury told Mrs. De Brock. De Brock was fined $500 and sentenced to six months in jail.

League of Nations Decides That French and Belgian Troops Should Leave; Ger- many Guarantees to Pro- tect Railways—Franco- Italian Naval Difficulties in Fair Way to be Settled.

Geneva, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The League of Nations Council today decided the last remaining defense force of French and Belgian troops should be withdrawn from the Saar district within the next three months.

The action was taken on recommendation of Senator Scialoja of Italy, head of the Italian delegation since the departure of Foreign Minister Grandi. Scialoja conferred with Foreign Ministers Briand of France and Curtius of Germany regarding the problem.

The contentions of France has been that a force of 250 men was necessary to guarantee security of railway transportation in the Saar district. Curtius insisted the troops no longer were needed. When the Saar commission agreed to guarantee the security of the railways, Briand yielded to German requests.

More World Courts
The council also voted to increase the number of World Court judges from 11 to 15, to increase the salaries of the judges, and to allow pensions to the personnel of the court after January next.

PEACE DISCUSSIONS
Geneva, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The Anglo-Saxon and the Gaelic points of view about the best way to increase peace were before the League of Nations Assembly today with nothing to indicate that the gulf between them was any narrower than it always has been.

The changes in the frequently since the World War, has appeared this time in the addresses of Aristide Briand, French foreign minister, and Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, before the League Assembly.

Mr. Briand in an address lacking much of the oratorical force with which he usually defends his projects, pleaded for a federation of European states, within the framework of the League of Nations, involving an economic and political agreement and disarmament secured by guarantees of mutual security.

British Viewpoint
Mr. Henderson advanced the Anglo-Saxon viewpoint that peace is best assured through disarmament. "In our profound belief," he said, "security and disarmament are closely interlocked and nothing can make our peoples truly safe from war until a general disarmament has been made."

Mr. Much also submitted to the Assembly, on behalf of Denmark, Sweden, Norway, Finland, Estonia, Latvia, Holland and Switzerland, a resolution calling for regulation of "most favored nation principle" in its application.

Clause Not Clear
"The Assembly, considering the unexplained which now exists concerning the interpretation and application of the most favored nation clause, asks the council to study the means of expediting the work undertaken some time ago by the League of Nations with a view to international regulation of the problem of the clause of the most favored nation," the resolution said.

The representatives of Holland and Denmark both expressed their concern over the "economic Anarchy prevailing in Europe." They urged their colleagues to get together in some form of organization through which measures could be taken to curb the tendency toward rising tariff walls. They also urged that the work of disarmament be hastened in the hope that a general disarmament conference might be called next year.

PAN-AMERICAN HOLIDAY
Paris, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Count Condove Kalergi, Pan-European president, today in a newspaper interview proposed that the European governments create a holiday to be known as Pan-American Day, commemorating the date of publication of the Briand memorandum for a European economic federation.

Count Kalergi proposed that the holiday be instituted to parallel Pan-American Day in the new world.

The Paris press agreed today that Foreign Secretary Briand had "ful-

SCHOOL GARDEN SHOW OVER NORTH SEPT. 18

Vegetable and Flower Exhibit for Grade Pupils to be Held at Hollister School.

At the assembly this morning of the sixth, seventh and eighth grades held in the hall of the Hollister street school, Superintendent A. F. Howes announced that the annual vegetable and flower exhibit will take place Thursday, September 18. Children in districts 1 to 7 inclusive will be eligible to compete and should bring flowers in labeled vases to prevent their being lost. The vegetables must be brought in Wednesday after school or early Thursday morning and must be clean. Each exhibit of potatoes, tomatoes, beets, carrots should contain at least three specimens, with one specimen each of pumpkins, squash or other bulky vegetables. Bouquets should be of single varieties as well as mixed. All exhibits must be in some measure at least, products of the pupil's own cultivation and care. The prizes will be all cash, as follows: $2.00 will be awarded to the room scoring the most points; $1.00 to the next. The pupil scoring the most points will receive $1.00, second, 50 cents. The best vegetable exhibit will take a reward of 50 cents. The best bouquet of asters, gladiolus, dahlias or other flower in which there are three or more entries, also 50 cents, as well as the best bouquet of mixed flowers. The speaker at this morning's assembly was Mrs. W. J. Taylor, vice-president of the Manchester Garden Club, who, in behalf of the club, promised the children the gift of $5 for the purchase of seeds should they organize a junior garden club this coming winter. A like sum was given to the club at the Barnard school last year and they have just had an unusually successful flower show. Mrs. Taylor told about the clubs at the Barnard school, called attention to the All-Connecticut Exhibition which opened at the State Army in Hartford today and discussed gardening in general.

Connecticut and Massachusetts have been cited by national students of the highway beautification problem as conducting the most advanced programs of roadside development in the country. Luther M. Keith, in charge of the landscape division of the Connecticut highway department, told the council.

Mr. Keith told of a program of the council under which each New England state would be urged to authorize the appointment by its state highway board of a state landscape architect to plan and supervise the work along the highways. "Practical highway beautification contests and demonstrations will be carried out by the Federation of Women's Clubs of New England," he said. These federations were selected by the council as the organized group having the greatest interest and the most effective influence for carrying on the work in this field, he said.

"Thirty-five per cent of the hotels reported that their guests were stayers for a shorter period than in previous years," Colonel William A. Barron of the recreational development committee said, "and 30 per cent of the hotels reported that their guests were shopping for cheaper rooms."

and he felt that all thoroughly enjoyed themselves. A Great Ticket

Asked as to his opinion of the ticket, he said it was "a great one—one which would give an appeal to every Democrat and to a great host of independents."

The nomination of Professor Cross came just 20 years after the nomination of Simeon E. Baldwin the last Democratic governor of the state, and 38 years after the nomination of Luzon E. Morris, the previous Democratic governor.

Party interest in nominations today swung to the Congressional Fifth where, in the First and the Fifth there are likely contests. Former Mayor Poesness of New Britain, who is actively seeking the office in the First District, was at yesterday's convention and he "elt sanguine of winning. Augustine Lonsgeran who has had Washington experience in the office, said he did not care for the nomination when friends congratulated him after his speech nominating his fellow townsman, Mr. Wilson, for attorney general.

Many of them asked him to run for Congress. In the Fifth District the canvass of Judge Martin E. Gormley, of Naugatuck, is continuing without letup. In the second district the happy remarks of State Senator William C. Fox would have brought him a nomination if the delegates had had the power. Calls for Congressional conventions will be issued in a few days.

Hartford, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Deputy Attorney General Ernest Averill appeared in the Superior Court today and stated that Professor Albert Levitt's petition for re-hearing of the mandamus case be dismissed was not a motion in writing and the attorney general is not appraised of a reason why the petition should be dismissed. Judge Allyn L. Brown continued the matter a week.

GIRL HERE WINS THIRD PRIZE AS ESSAYIST

Miss Betty Harvey's Article on "Safety" One of Best Written in the State.

Miss Betty Harvey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Harvey of 88 Cambridge street, a student in the eighth grade at the Harding school on Hollister street, has been awarded third prize in an essay contest submitted on "Safety" conducted by the State Highway Educational Board in co-operation with State Department of Education. There were over 50,000 essays submitted. The first prize was won by Eleanor Keyes of Bridgeport, now a freshman in the Harding High school of that city.

Betty Harvey is the young girl that last year was the winner of a prize essay that carried with it a trip to Niagara Falls. In the same contest last year the Keyes girl was a second prize winner. Miss Keyes was an eighth grade pupil when she submitted her essay last spring while Miss Harvey was then a seventh grade pupil in the Harding school. Miss Harvey's prize this year is $5.00 and a bronze medal.

MOTHER BOXES EARS OF 51 YEAR OLD SON

New Haven, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Even if he is 51 years old, William Smith is just a wayward boy to his gray-haired mother who boxed his ears in city court today.

After he had been given a six-months sentence in jail as a second offender for driving his automobile while drunk, Mrs. Martha Smith asked permission to speak to her son. In the prisoner's pen she spoke only a few words to him before she slapped him several times on each cheek.

Tears welled into the eyes of the errant middle-aged man. "Now be a good boy while you are in jail!" his mother admonished. Then she left him.

ABOUT TOWN

Ralph A. Leander and party, of this town, were recent guests at Landlord's Inn, Templeton, Mass.

The iron railings have been set in the new steps at the Union School and the columns supporting the small roof over each set of stairs will be done tomorrow when school is closed. The placing of the railing has removed the possible danger of children falling in going down the steps.

A practice game of football will be played by the Majors on the Hickey gridiron tonight.

William Wright of Charter Oak street, who has been for several years employed by the South Manchester railroad, is to leave Manchester and return to his former home in Vermont. Mrs. Wright will continue to reside in Manchester.

A brown pup wandered into the Municipal building this morning and paid a visit to the various town offices. He finally picked the office of the town engineer as the most quiet spot to catch up on his lost sleep. The young dog appears to have some pointer blood in his veins and if the owner values his property he can no doubt locate the straggler in the vicinity of the Center late this afternoon.

E. L. G. Hohenthal, Jr., and E. J. McCabe, president and secretary respectively, of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce will attend the Eastern States Exposition at Springfield Sunday and Monday—Governor's Day, as guests with the party consisting of ten New England governors and prominent officials. A concert by Sousa's band will be one of the Sunday features.

Reservations close tonight for the annual outing of Campbell Council, Knights of Columbus, to be held Sunday at Reeve's Farm, Windsorville. Over sixty have made reservations to city. The program for the day will include miniature golf, a course being handy at the farm. Private cars will leave the State Theater building at 9:30 o'clock Sunday morning. Tickets may be obtained from Bernard Fogarty, chairman, and John Hutchinson, secretary, and other members of the committee.

St. Mary's Young Men's club will hold its first fall meeting Monday evening at 8 o'clock at the club rooms when plans will be made for the coming season.

Carroll Wilson, elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence E. Wilson of Woodbridge street has returned to Wesleyan University, Middletown, for his sophomore year.

Miss Elsie Bengs of Park street returned this week to New York City where she has been teaching for several seasons. Miss Bengs has been studying the voice for some time with Madame Nevada Van der Veer and this year will be singing teacher in a new school recently erected in the Bronx.

Fayette B. Clarke who is chairman of the joint committee from the North Methodist and Second Congregational churches, appointed to consider the possibility of federation of the two churches, has secured Rev. Dr. L. H. Dorchester of Simsbury formerly of Hartford, to meet with the committee Thursday evening, September 18 at Second Congregational church. Dr. Dorchester who is father-in-law of Rev. F. C. Allen, pastor of Second Congregational church was president for several years of the Connecticut Federation of Churches. He is at present its secretary and his views will be worth hearing. The chairman hopes every member of the committee will reserve the date.

The Manchester Mothers club will hold its first get-together of the season at the Hale House in Glastonbury this evening. The speaker will be Principal C. P. Quimby of the High school, and his subject, "The Ideal Student, Flapper or Grind."

The first one of the series of set-back card parties will take place in the social room of the Masonic Temple tomorrow night. The popularity of these parties is attested by the regular attendance of some of the old-timers at all of the previous series.

A 7-pound daughter was born yesterday to Mr. and Mrs. Carl Nelson of 150 Oak street.

The American Legion auxiliary unit will begin its fall activities with a card party at the North End hose house, Main at Hilliard street Tuesday afternoon of next week. Playing will begin at 2:30. Prizes will be awarded the winners in bridge and whist and refreshments will be served. Mrs. T. J. Dannaher is chairman of the committee.

CUP RACES ON AIR OVER WEAF-WJZ

To Be Broadcast Saturday
Commencing at 11:30
A. M. Over WJZ.

Two fast vessels and a United States coast guard station will be the points of vantage from which radio listeners will hear running accounts of the America's cup races off Newport. The National Broadcasting company today revealed that three transmitting units would be available for the broadcasts of the races instead of the one transmitter previously planned. The series of broadcast descriptions will begin Saturday morning at 11:30 o'clock. Powerful short wave transmitters will be installed aboard the United States destroyer Kane and aboard a coast guard cutter. Another microphone panel will be set up at the coast guard station on Brenton Point near Newport. Land wires will connect this microphone post with the N. B. C. networks.

Two N. B. C. networks, one headed by WEAF and the other by WJZ will broadcast the ten-minute descriptions of the race. There will be twenty-minute intervals between each ten-minute period. Stations in the WEAF group will be on the air from noon to 12:10; from 1:00 to 1:10; from 2:00 to 2:10; from 3:00 to 3:10 and from 4:00 to 4:10. The N. B. C.-WJZ network schedule is from 12:30 to 12:40; from 1:30 to 1:40; from 2:30 to 2:40; from 3:30 to 3:40 and from 4:30 to 4:40.

LAST OF SOLDIERS ARE ORDERED OUT

Approved by Germany
Berlin, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The energetic plea for disarmament made before the Assembly of the League of Nations by British Foreign Secretary Arthur Henderson yesterday has found hearty endorsement in German official circles and the press. Mr. Henderson's speech was regarded as fully supporting the German stand on this question. The newspapers referred to the address as sensational and as the great event of the league meeting. They consider it also in the nature of a sharp rebuff for French Foreign Minister Briand's policy. Never before, the newspapers declare, has a representative of a great power belonging to the victorious nations (in the World War) so urgently demanded fulfillment of the promise of disarmament.

WHERE IS GRANDI?
Rome, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The question being asked in political circles here is the last 24 hours has been "where is Grandi?" Reports last night said that the foreign minister, who left the League of Nations session at Geneva precipitately Wednesday had moved across the French frontier with his wife and had taken lunch at Chambéry. Telephone calls at the foreign ministry elicited the statement that Signor Grandi was in Rome. Further telephone calls to the foreign minister's home, however, brought the statement that he had not yet returned to Rome.

PETITION GRANTED

LETTER DESCRIBES HURRICANE'S RUIN

Received From American Minister Curtis — Nearly All Houses Wrecked.

Bantam, Conn., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Charles E. Curtis, American minister to the Dominican republic, in a letter to his wife, graphically described the damage wreaked last week by the hurricane which swept over Santo Domingo.

An otherwise tragic recital of death and ruin is relieved by Minister Curtis by several facetious references to the personal discomforts forced upon him and his neighbors by the hurricane.

"I am considered remarkably lucky as I have at least two good suits," Mr. Curtis said in his letter, which was written Sept. 4. "Mrs. C. has one dress, Mrs. F. one dress and M. said he was wearing borrowed clothes."

Describes Scenes Describing the scenes that greeted him after the hurricane Mr. Curtis said: "I have not seen a single street through which a vehicle could pass—corrugated iron sheets, doors, masonry, etc., are everywhere. To say that 99 percent of all of the houses are badly damaged is conservative; only the very few flat roofed reinforced concrete houses and very old buildings with very thick walls have remained undamaged. Not a single roof to be seen from here."

"There is now (since the hurricane) a view of the ocean from the front veranda. On the morning of the hurricane Mr. Curtis said he had gone home early from his office 'as it blew a bit at 11 a. m. and I had asked Ramirez (legation clerk) to lunch."

"The wind got stronger and the rain heavier, but the barometer remained exactly where it had been the night before, 769 M M (30.28 inches). At about 3 o'clock, however, we had seen numerous branches blown from the trees, we saw the roof of the Damiron House next door begin to lift. Soon the wind was blowing as I had never seen it blow before and hope never to see it blow again and pieces of corrugated iron began to fly from the roofs of almost all of our neighbors. Next we heard part of our own roof tear loose from the rear of the house and saw some of it catch on the electric light wires across the street."

"After a long time the wind changed to the east and then stopped almost suddenly, and the sun tried to shine through the clouds. We walked through the house and found that, beyond the loss of the roof, the damage was not very great. Then we walked across to the office. We strolled back to the house very soon, stopping to talk to Clark (American consul), the front half of whose second story had collapsed. Almost immediately after getting back to the house, Ramirez asked me if I had noticed the barometer—it was 747 M M (28.22 inches), far the lowest I have ever seen. 'What that we were in the middle of the hurricane—not finished with it—and I called all the servants into the kitchen, where Chick, the cook, had found no cause for excitement because he thought that the north wind had blown in and the refrigerator out."

Storm Keeps On "We were greatly disappointed when the hurricane did not cease after the second part had equalled the duration of the first, but it kept on and on until long after dark. I cannot say when it stopped because it decreased in violence very gradually, but with occasional short but fierce gusts. Somewhere about 7 o'clock Ramirez and I and Hon (the Chinese house boy) moved to the pantry where we were more comfortable and drier. Well we spent the night there, Ramirez sleeping quite well on the shelf (too short for me) under the china closets, I sleeping a couple of hours altogether most comfortably in my chair with my feet on a stool, and Hon sleeping hugging his knees on the table."

"Timothy (negro servant) got caught by the second part of the storm and says the man walking with him was killed by a piece of flying corrugated iron." Mr. Curtis quoted a Captain Silva as saying that the hurricane was "far worse than what Porto Rico got two years ago."

MOTORCYCLE RUNS WILD AFTER BEING IN CRASH

Speeds Away for 150 Yards Without Rider When Hit by New York Automobile.

A side-car motorcycle driven and owned by Joseph Rabaglio of 57 Summer street and an automobile owned and driven by Richard Plater, Jr., of New York, figured in an accident at the junction of West Center street and Victoria Road at 7 o'clock last night which resulted in no serious damage to passengers or machines, but frightened a number of people when the motorcycle started on a wild run without a rider.

The automobile and the cycle were coming from the west. Reaching Victoria Road Rabaglio started to turn into that street. He says he put out his hand but Plater was already about to pass him. The automobile hit the motorcycle and the impact threw Rabaglio off the motorcycle, but did not stop the engine and the machine continued east on West Center street for about 150 yards when it went off the road, ran into a service pole and was stopped.

Officer Walter Muskey investigated. Plater said he saw no signal by Rabaglio. Three companions supported him. There was no arrest.

WAPPING Malcolm L. Juno, who is attending school at Bryant Stratton College, spent the week at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis W. Juno. A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Michael Kobylanski last Thursday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Kobylanski purchased the Edward Elmer place recently at Pleasant Valley. Robert F. Valentine has a fine display of Celosia in the Capitol National Bank window at Hartford. At the meeting of the Manchester Garden Club last Monday evening Miss Jessie Lane of this town exhibited ten varieties of dahlias from the Maple Ridge Gardens and gave a short talk about them.

Little Frank Congdon, who was visiting his grandparents, after the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Laurell Hill, met with a serious accident last Wednesday while he was investigating the engine that pumps the water on the place; he put his index finger of his right hand into the wheel and it was cut nearly off. They rushed him to the Manchester Memorial hospital where the doctor amputated it.

A very pleasant evening was enjoyed at the Wapping Parish house last Friday evening at the Sunday school social. There were about fifty present. Games were enjoyed on the lawn and refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and lemonade were served inside, after which singing was enjoyed for a time.

Wapping Grange held its seventh regular meeting at the School hall last Tuesday evening, it being "Newspaper Night." The members assigned to represent each department were as follows: Weather Reports—Waldo V. Collins. Lodge News—Miss Elsie Newcomb and Mrs. Emma West. Social and Personal—Mrs. Lillian E. Grant. Editorial—Miss Ellen J. Foster. Sport Page—Miss Elsie Newcomb (illustrated by playing sports).

Advertisements—Mrs. A. Turner. Story—Miss Helen Lane. Cartoons—Miriam Welles. Radio—Farnham Lane, Alfred Stone and Miss Jessie Lane. There were forty Grangers present, two from Manchester and three from Ellington Grange.

ROBBERS GET $12,000 New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Three robbers held up two messengers of the Fort Hamilton Savings Bank, Brooklyn, today, and escaped with $12,000 after slugging Edward McGuirk over the head with the butt of a pistol. The messengers intended to deliver the money to the Brooklyn Trust Company branch, a block from their own bank.

ANDOVER

Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Cook and son, Percy, and Mrs. Frank Hamilton went on a motor trip to Watch Hill, Atlantic Beach, New London, Crescent Beach and other places of interest, Sunday. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Cloudman and son, Robert Jr., of Hartford, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Helmer Sunday. Miss Mildred Hamilton returned to her work in Hartford on Monday. Miss Hamilton took only one week of her vacation now and later will have another. Mrs. Fred Bishop is beginning to gain very slowly and only sits up 10 minutes at a time twice a day. A large number attended the Men's Club meeting in the Town hall Monday evening, it being the annual Ladies' Night. Refreshments were served by the committee in charge. Mrs. Kittie Mittens and Mrs. Charles Faulkner were callers in Hartford, Wednesday. Mrs. Janet Smith was called to Hartford Monday afternoon by the death of her grandson, Donald Smith, who was fatally injured by a truck on the Danielson-Waugan highway. The funeral was held at his home in Hartford Thursday morning at 8:30 and at St. Justin's church at 9 o'clock. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery, New Britain. First Selectman Raymond Palmer and Frank Brown were quite badly injured Wednesday afternoon while working on a well at the Daggett place when a charge of dynamite exploded prematurely. Both men were badly cut on the head and face and Mr. Brown may lose the sight of one eye. Mr. Brown lived in Manchester for several years, working for Cheney Brothers as night watchman. He came to Andover several months ago and has been staying at the Daggett home where he bought what is called the Little Daggett place. They are both suffering from the shock but fortunately neither are seriously injured. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Phelps, William Palmer, Clarence Ketcham and Judge and Mrs. E. M. Yeomans attended the Democratic State convention held in the Griswold House at Eastern Point Wednesday evening. Mrs. Yeomans and Mr. Ketcham attended as delegates. Judge and Mrs. Yeomans spent the night in New London and attended the convention Thursday morning. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Platt and son, Douglas, of Manchester, and Mrs. A. E. Frink visited Mrs. Frink's sister, Mrs. A. H. Foote, in Colchester, Thursday. Roscoe Talbot has recovered from the motorcycle accident which he had recently and has returned to his work. STAMP FANS MEET Berlin, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The International Philatelic Congress opened today with Admiral Frederic R. Harris of New York, Arthur Hinb of Utica, N. Y., and Theodore Steinway of New York, among the prominent Americans attending. Four artistic stamps with views of Berlin, Marienburg, Wurzburg and Aix-La-Chapelle have been issued which are obtainable only in connection with an admission ticket to the Congress.

AMERICAS IN FAVOR OF EUROPEAN UNION

Geneva, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Oreste Ferrara, Cuban ambassador at Washington, told the League of Nations Assembly in an address today that American countries are "profoundly and favorably interested in the success of a scheme for economic co-operation among European countries." Pointing out that American states, particularly those which provide raw materials for commerce, depend upon the prosperity of Europe for their own economic betterment, the diplomat said "America, therefore, welcomes a move for European collaboration." Such a union would not be regarded by Americans as a reaction against Pan-Americanism, the Cuban asserted. Today's meeting was a field day for the representatives of smaller nations. KIN OF JESSE JAMES REFUSES BANDIT ROLE

Los Angeles, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The family claim to major bandit honors must rest on the record achieved by Jesse James as far as his grandfather is concerned, she testified in her $55,000 break of contract suit against a film company here. Eager enough to help enact episodes of her grandfather's life on the screen, Miss Jesse Estelle James testified she balked at emulating him in actual life. "They suggested I stick up a cop for publicity," she testified. "They wanted me to get arrested for speeding, resist the officer and draw a gun on him so they could broadcast the story Jesse James's granddaughter stuck up a policeman." Miss James testified she refused because she had never been arrested and didn't crave the experience, even for the sake of publicity.

HOSPITAL NOTES

A son was born this morning to Mr. and Mrs. George Risley of 121 Highland street at the Memorial hospital. Dexter Dahlman of 28 Bank street was admitted and Mrs. Minnie Barnsley of 40 Garden street was discharged. CHAPTER I Celia Rogers whirled about. Then the color in her cheeks deepened and a fluttering little laugh caught in her throat.

"Oh, hello—" she began, but was interrupted.

"Say, Celia, where in the world are you rushing off to on a hot day like this? Guess I surprised you. Oh, but I'm glad to see you—I've got the most exciting news!"

The second girl was taller than Celia. She was slender, dressed in becoming beige silk and radiating youthful assurance. Before the other had time to speak she hurried on pell-mell:

"We're going to Europe. Isn't it grand? Mother and I. We're going to take a northern cruise—England, Scotland and the Scandinavian countries, and then finish up with Paris. Isn't it marvelous? Oh, but it's so hot here. Let's have a soda and cool off and I'll tell you all about it. Besides, I want to know what you've been doing."

There was the slightest perceptible tightening of Celia Rogers' red lips.

"Sorry, Helen. I'd love to, but I really can't."

"Oh, yes, you can. Come on. It won't take five minutes."

The other smiled.

"No, I—I've got an appointment. I'm awfully glad you're going to have such a wonderful trip, and I do wish I could hear all about it. Maybe I'll see you again before you leave."

"Well, we're sailing a week from tonight."

"Goodnight, then. Have a grand time! Goodbye!"

Before Helen Spencer could detain her longer Celia was off down the street and the bright smile with which she had nodded was faded. Celia did not look back, but walked on briskly.

There were two excellent reasons why she could not waste time over an ice cream soda with Helen that afternoon.

One was to be found in the painfully slim little purse clenched in Celia Rogers' left hand. The other was an address written in pencil upon a slip of paper within that purse. Celia was on her way now to that address to apply for a job.

She had to have the job—she had to!

Celia was repeating this to herself firmly as she hurried along the hot sidewalk. It was a fact she did not need to be reminded of, but the habit had been formed during these long days of job hunting.

The office just ahead might be the Big Chance, but so far none of them had been. So far Celia Rogers, who was 17 (going to be 18 next month), a graduate of Western High School, possessor of a two-weeks-old diploma and recommensidewalks, was attractive enough to be singled out in almost any gathering.

It was Celia's pretty face which had led Helen Spencer to treat her as a confidante, though the two never met except in class rooms. For two years "Spencer" had followed directly after "Rogers" on high school class rolls, and an odd sort of intimacy had developed between the two girls.

Helen's father was a member of the city's most important financial group. Celia was the daughter of a fitter in a Charles street dress shop. Celia's mother had earned those few coins remaining in the girl's purse. For a long time now Mrs.-Rogers had earned every cent which had paid for food and lodging for herself and her daughter.

So, though Celia and Helen Spencer had sat side by side in French class and during ordeals of mathematics and chemistry, and though Celia could describe all of Helen's party dresses and most of the parties at which they had been worn, she had not been invited to the Spencer home. She had not even expected such an invitation.

Both girls were graduated now—Helen setting off for Europe and Celia hunting work.

If there was a trace of bitterness in the girl's face as she hurried along the hot street, it should be forgiven. Bitterness comes so easily to those for whom the chance to work is an unobtainable luxury.

Celia Rogers' lunch had been a glass of milk and sandwich eaten at a soda fountain counter. The three little coins in her purse would have totaled less than the price of the rich mixture of fruits and cream which Helen Spencer was consuming at that moment.

Celia turned again into a side street. Half way down the block she hesitated before a brick office building, glancing up at the number over the doorway.

Yes, this was the place. She entered.

"Watkins Letter Company" was the name Celia hunted for on the office directory board in the lobby. She found it. The Watkins Letter Company was located, according to the directory, on the fourth floor of the building.

The girl signaled for the elevator and a few seconds later stepped into the fourth floor corridor.

"Third door to your left, ma'am, the lanquid, dark-skinned elevator operator volunteered, pointing toward an open door.

Celia nodded. Suddenly there was something tight in her throat and she felt her temples pounding. The feeling was familiar. It was always this way just before screwing up courage to step out boldly before the unknown person who would be waiting on the other side of the threshold and make the familiar little speech.

It was all wrong. Celia knew that perfectly well. She had been told dozens of times about the value of confidence, the importance of the "approach" in asking for employment. At school the commercial instructor regularly coached her classes on these subjects.

Celia had learned the lessons, but they wouldn't work.

She popped back the lid of her silver vanity case, dabbed at her gleaming nose with the tiny powder puff and tried ineffectually to rearrange the straggling wisps of hair. No use! She looked a wreck and knew it.

Suddenly her lips set in a firm line and she hurried down the hall.

Celia paused in the open doorway. She saw a large room before her, light though the shades were pulled at one side. Beyond a wooden railing several girls worked at typewriters. Inside the railing at a desk facing the entrance sat a girl with red hair.

She was reading a book. Four feet away an electric fan buzzed loudly, drowning out the sound of Celia's footsteps.

No one took any notice of the girl in the doorway. Celia cleared her throat and stepped forward.

"Excuse me. Is this the office of the Watkins Letter Company?"

The red-headed girl raised her eyes.

"This is it. Who'd you want to see?"

Celia's coaching in business approach was coming back to her.

"Why—I—Is the manager in?"

A cold, gray stare countered this. The girl at the desk smoothed back a stray tendril of carefully marcelled hair before she answered. She eyed Celia impersonally. A dress of vivid green georgette seemed to make her all the more formidable.

"Mr. Norton's busy," she said.

"What you want to see him about?"

There was no help for it. It would have to come out.

"I wanted to ask about a position. I'm a stenographer," Celia blurted out. Her cheeks burned. She didn't like the woman in green.

"Oh, you want a job?" The young woman shifted to a tone of snappy efficiency. "Mr. Norton isn't the one to see about that. Sit down in that chair there and I'll give you a blank to fill in."

It didn't sound promising. Celia Rogers had filled in employment blanks before.

"But—there is a vacancy here, isn't there?" she persisted.

The red-headed one nodded. She handed Celia a sheet of paper bearing a printed form and continued to study the girl openly.

"Yeah, there's a vacancy. The

MISSIONARY J. S. PORTER PRAISES U. S. DIPLOMAT

Representative of Local Church Tells of Work Done by Abraham C. Ratschesky, of Boston

Minister Plenipotentiary Abraham C. Ratschesky, Boston man now representing the United States at Prague, Czechoslovakia, has again made history in diplomatic circles of that nation by touring the country and studying conditions at first hand, according to Rev. John S. Porter of Gilead, representative of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, Boston, for the past 38 years and supported by the Second Congregational church of this town. Minister Ratschesky's tour has been commented on favorably by the Czechoslovakian press, says Mr. Porter.

Following his extensive journey, Mr. Ratschesky spent a week-end with President Masaryk in his castle at Slovakia, where the Chief Executive spent the summer.

Mr. Porter's son, Professor Livingston Porter, will be remembered as having been appointed as "Visiting Professor on the Carnegie Foundation" for Charles University in Prague for the current academic year. Mr. Porter had previously taken his Ph.D. from the University of California with a thesis entitled "The Prague University of the Middle Ages." Livingston Porter was born in Prague and during the World War was engaged in Y. M. C. A. work in London, Vienna and southern Czecho-Slovakia for several years. He has kept up his knowledge of the language and will be able to lecture on the subject of history. This appointment which is considered a great honor came to the younger Porter through President Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia University who is also president of the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace.

Mr. and Mrs. Livingstone Porter and their three children sailed from California by way of the Panama Canal. They arrived in Prague on the Fourth of July and will remain until the close of activities at Charles University next summer.

COVENTRY

A very large delegation from North Coventry attended all three services held at the First Congregational Church, South Coventry, Sunday when they had their dedication services.

Mrs. Daniel Barrows spent the weekend with friends in Rockville. Mrs. George Meyers and son, George have returned to their home in Astoria after spending the summer with Mrs. Myers' sister, Mrs. Benjamin A. Strack.

Benjamin A. Strack and daughter Josephine, motored to New York over the weekend.

Robert Downton took an excursion trip to New York Sunday. Miss Lillie Hill has returned home having spent the summer with relatives in Ohio.

Mr. and Mrs. George Maskell and John E. Kingsbury have returned from a week's motor trip to Wellsburg, N. Y. Miss Kathryn McKnight returned with them and will spend several weeks with her aunt, Mrs. John E. Kingsbury.

A THOUGHT

And it shall come to pass at that time that I will search Jerusalem with candles, and punish the men that are settled on their heads: that say in their heart, The Lord will not do good, neither will he do evil.—Zephaniah 1:12.

Men are not to be judged by their looks, habits and appearances; but by the character of their lives and conversations, and by their works.—L'Esrange.

PICTURE SHOWS
ANOTHER SKULL

Strange Development in Photographs of Andree Expedition—Not Seen by Horn

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The possibility that a third skull may have been photographed unknowingly and left behind by the Norwegian expedition of Dr. Gunnar Horn, which solved the 33 year old mystery of the disappearance of the Swedish balloons, Dr. Salomon August Andree, developed here today.

When a photograph of the landing place of the expedition was enlarged by the Associated Press late last night a well preserved skull was found resting among the rocks of the desolate terrain of White Island. Cables to Oslo and London developed the fact that no one there had noticed the object, which blended into the picture so completely.

As far as could be ascertained the expedition leaders were in ignorance of the relic shown in the picture of the landing place and it may be that this is one location where the Whaler Isbjorn last Sunday. The newspaper expedition, which set out to search for the returning Horn party aboard the Bratvaag, proceeded to White Island after they had missed the Norwegian scientist.

Cables September 7 told of the finding of additional relics of the balloon party, including a skull. In Dr. Horn's own story he described in detail the place where the skull and bones believed to be those of Andree were found. He said it was under the well of a mountain. Between two mounds of earth a short distance away from Andree's remains were found the remains of a second member of the party.

No Mountains
The picture in which the apparently overlooked skull is shown does not fit into either of these descriptions. It is a flat waste space at the edge of the ocean which photograph was taken to show the difficult landing made by the expedition. The melting snows have left patches of earth and in the foreground, blended into the rounded knobs of rocks, is the grim relic of this long lost expedition.

While it is not possible to ascertain if there are additional relics hidden among the rocks, it is pointed out that bears might easily have removed the skull at any previous period during the long silence which shrouded the expedition's fate.

All of the descriptions of the finding of the original relics tell of their being buried in the snow and ice. The skull in the picture of the landing place lies among the rocks in a melted patch.

Was Overlooked
It is quite possible the relics may have been overlooked because of the excitement of the expedition members who made the find, and the fact that the picture was brought out with such speed and with so many others that editors overlooked it. The fact that it carries the matter of fact label "Place where Horn expedition landed at White Island" doubtless lessens the interest of European editors who handled these pictures and who were eager to get to those labeled "Relics."

Attempts are being made to get Dr. Horn to identify the picture and if he verifies the surmises it probably will clear up the fate of the missing member of the party, probably Knut Frankel. The two skulls brought back by Dr. Horn were tentatively identified as those of Andree and Nils Strindberg. This trio set out in July 1897 in a balloon from Spitzbergen in an attempt to fly over the North Pole. They sailed away into the mists and it was only a month ago that their fate was disclosed.

IOWA HARDEST HIT BY THE DRY SPELL

Lost 44 Million Bushels of Corn—Whole Belt Lost 250 Millions.

Washington, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The searing hand of the drought was indicated by government estimates today to have reduced the productive corn yield almost 250,000,000 bushels in 17 important producing states during August.

The outlook for the whole country is for harvest of a crop some 600,000,000 bushels less than the 1929 production of 2,614,307,000 bushels. The dry-August blow fell heaviest in Iowa, where in that month the crop lost 44,000,000 bushels as compared with the August forecast. Illinois lost 38,000,000 and Missouri 28,000,000.

Other States
The other states figuring in the 250,000,000 reduction during August were New York, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Kentucky, Oklahoma, Texas and Colorado.

For all of the country, 35 states showed varying degrees of loss compared with the 1929 production, and 13 states, none of them in the important corn area, showed increases.

Larger Yields
Only Colorado and North Dakota of the more important corn states show a yield larger than last year. Heavy reductions are shown for all of the corn belt proper. The yield of durum wheat was listed at 2 bushels more in Minnesota than last year. Larger increases are expected in Montana and South Dakota but a drop of almost 4,000,000 bushels is reported in North Dakota.

For other spring wheat increases were reported in each of the six big producing states with the exception of Montana, where a 5,000,000 bushel decrease is in prospect.

With the exception of South Dakota and Nebraska, the 15 important oats producing states are expected to harvest larger crops than in 1929.

LEAPS TO HIS DEATH

Boston, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Ralph Johnson, 21, Vanderbilt University student and formerly of Haverhill, was fatally injured today in a leap from the fourth quarters of Tech Chapter, Lambda Chi Alpha, in the Back Bay.

Johnson was picked up unconscious in the yard of the adjoining building. He died soon after arriving at the city hospital.

In the fraternity rooms was found a sealed letter written by Johnson addressed to his mother, Mrs. Arthur W. Johnson, Thomaston, Me.

CONNECTICUT DEMOCRACY

The Democrats of Connecticut came out of their state convention in considerably better shape than might have been expected from the hackneyed diatribe of the chairman, Homer S. Cummings, when he delivered his keynote speech at the opening of the Eastern Point gathering. They nominated a strong candidate for governor and the candidate made a speech of acceptance about one-fifth as long as that of the keynoter and about five times as good.

If it were not for one thing in that speech we should say that it would be very well indeed for the Republican party in this state to keep a very alert eye out for Dean Cross and be prepared to meet some intelligent attacks. That one thing is his explanation of the industrial slump.

"It is now clear," said the dean, "where the responsibility lies for unsound policies of the Federal Reserve System which, in spite of repeated warnings, led to a financial explosion which shook our business structure to its foundations and turned five millions of men and women out of their jobs."

This would indicate to our mind that Dean Cross is one of those who place a tremendously exaggerated value on the stroke of a pen. The policies of the Federal Reserve System had about as much to do with the industrial slump as with the transit of Venus. The pop-gun blast in Wall street was the merest symptom of the effects of industrial overstimulation and over-urbanization of the population—a million miles from being the cause of even a cause. If Dean Cross should, by any chance, become governor of Connecticut, it is to be hoped that this tendency to confuse symptoms with causes will not manifest itself so flagrantly while he is in office.

Just the same his speech was snappy, succinct and holds out promise of constructive criticism yet to emanate from the Democratic candidate which may take some combating, which will provide a refreshing contrast to the ancient and empty balloony which "keynoted" the convention and which had been the stock in trade of Connecticut Democrats for so long. Dean Cross never once went over the grave of Thomas Jefferson nor waved the many-nicked sword of Andrew Jackson. Which shows that he is different.

The rest of the ticket represents, on the whole, respectable mediocrity.

With a platform which declares for the repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and the Volstead act, advocates old age pensions and more good rural roads, calls for "investigation" of unemployment and taxation but remains silent on state liquor legislation the Democratic party is not to be regarded as a negligible factor with a candidate like Dean Cross at its head.

THE SHORTER WEEK

The declaration of President William Green of the American Federation of Labor against the theory of unemployment insurance is attracting a great deal of attention, being a revelation to a good many persons who had taken it for granted that the Federation would be strongly in favor of such a palliative.

Green's position, which unquestionably is that of labor organizations generally, is that you can't invent a system of unemployment insurance which will not in the end degenerate into a mere system of doles and any such a method of relief is regarded by American workmen as both uneconomic and demoralizing.

The Federation's idea is very simple. It is that you can have employment for everybody if you cut down sufficiently the hours of daily labor and the length of the work week, so that everybody may have a share in the business of production. The problem, unfortunately, is probably less simple than the proposed solution. The trouble with the latter is the assumption that the market for the goods produced on this new basis of employment would remain stable.

The last thing that the Federation would at present consent to, it is to be presumed, would be a sharing of income as well as hours of labor with the unemployed. The week's pay must remain unimpaired. This means that under the short work day and short work week the labor cost of commodities would inevitably be substantially increased. So, of course, would be the prices to the consumer. That would be followed by a reduction in the market for commodities, as each worker would be able to buy correspondingly less. It would be reasonable to suppose then, that we should soon find a difference between the amount of goods being produced and the amount that could be sold—a new period of "over production" with either total unemployment for some or a fresh division of the still smaller amount of work through still shorter hours of labor.

This is very particularly probable when we remember that the adoption of the shorter day and shorter week must be thought of as solely an American institution, with the added labor cost applying only to American made goods. All the world is in competition with us, and if we were to boost the labor cost of our products by paying full wages for part time we should certainly have to forego the sale of our products abroad, partly at first and altogether eventually. We should also have to establish a complete embargo against competing goods coming into America from abroad, for the difference in labor costs would soon be so great that importers could laugh at even our present high tariffs.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Sept. 12.—This, I venture to guess, will be known as "the year of the great tap."

What the Charleston was to the gyrating generation of a few years back, the tap dance will be to cold feet during the coming winter. Whenever I go, uptown, downtown or around the corner, there is an accompanying tap-tap-tap.

It's been coming slowly for a couple of seasons, but at the moment it descends like a plague of clacking beetles.

The theater, with its finger on the pulse of every vogue, is featuring the tap above all dance innovations. One of the most recent music shows—"The Little Show"—uses nothing else in its chorus numbers. The puppets, one-step, waltz and hop to the clacky-clack of stiff soles against hard boards.

It would seem that we have come up at last from the black bottom.

In New York, when you have your eye on the ground for the fashions of new fads and fancies, it is best to listen first for the faint echoes of certain social groups. If those dear ladies of the Social Register and the eager debutantes go after a whim, whether it be backgammon or tap dancing, you can be sure that it will soon spread right down the social scale. And when, in addition to that, you learn that the vanity fair folk are all smoked up about something—what ever it may be, it's "on ice."

Only the other day a charming young matron, married into one of the richest clans in America, dropped her tea suddenly when the strains of a phonograph record gave its rhythmic invitation to try out a few new steps.

And could she do a "double roll tap"? That was a couple of weeks ago. By this time, eight out of 10 people in the room will be con-cluding that because Mrs. D. was doing it, it's the thing to do. So it goes.

For years, the recognized monarch of the tap in its most intriguing phases has been Jack Dunbar. He is the maestro of original and difficult methods of keeping time with the feet. His chair dance, in which he uses everything from the rungs to the back for his rhythmic purposes, is something like the last word.

Just so is Bill Robinson's stair-way tap, though Robinson's general method has a Harlemaesque flavor. And there is a big parade of others.

Some whisper that you'll see the sand dance back one of these days—and other hand-downs from minstrelsy. But I never expect to live to enjoy any footwork that delighted me more than George Ffrtmore's wing-footed soft-shoe number.

And speaking of dancing, get your feet ready for a new dance which will be known as the "mooch," according to the dance masters.

In the vernacular of the street the expression "mooch" has long been associated with panhandling, begging, "touching" and other means of getting money, food or raiment. I am told that the "mooch" has nothing to do with begging a girl for a dance. It comes over from London and if the Britishers can dance it, the "mooch" should be duck soup for our own race of super-hoofers.

GILBERT SWAN.

THE YACHT RACES

Tomorrow's the day—the day of the first of at least four races for the America's cup between Sir Thomas Lipton's challenger, the fifth Shamrock, and the Yankee sloop Enterprise, the former sailed by one of the finest professional yacht skippers under the British flag, the latter commanded by an amateur yachtsman who is as much at home behind the wheel of a wind boat as any tarry salt on the face of blue water.

The course tomorrow will be fifteen miles to windward or leeward, according to the direction of the breeze, and return. This means, inevitably, considerably more than 30 miles of actual distance to be sailed since half the race must be a beat to windward, which may increase the mileage by a third or more. The start will be from a stakeboat nine miles south-east of Brenton's Reef lightship off Newport. The scene of the contests is about 140 miles from New York.

There is one factor likely to enter into this race which will be new—the presence in the vicinity of large numbers of very fast power boats among the spectator fleet. They will, in all probability, need a lot of policing. The wash of one of those craft might very easily destroy the chances of one of the contestants in a close race. It is sincerely to be hoped that there will be no fluke of this sort.

In all the history of America's cup racing only three separate races have been won by challengers. Whatever the outcome of the series, half of America will be rooting tomorrow for the Shamrock to break the hoodoo and win the first leg of this contest.

WASHINGTON LETTER

By RODNEY DUTCHER
 News Service Writer

Washington, Sept. 12.—State Department policy in cases where American citizens get themselves into trouble through mixing in civil warfare in other countries is likely to vary in accordance with circumstances, but despite refusals of officials to discuss the matter it is believed that this government went to bat for Harold S. Grow, the Naval Reserve aviator who accepted direction of President Leguia's forces, and who has just been released from prison on his agreement to stand trial in the courts. The Navy Department, which sent Grow as the aviation officer in his naval mission to Peru, from which he later resigned, says that Grow never took any oath of allegiance to Peru and that settles the question of his citizenship, if true. The question of how much protection he was entitled to from the United States, however, is more obscure.

He's Still a Civilian

On the basis of present information State Department officials are inclined to believe that Grow retained his civilian status despite the fact that the Peruvian aviation service with which he was associated embraced the military branch. Although Grow is accused by the successful revolutionists of plotting a bomb attack on the city of Arequipa, where he was captured, he has had nothing more than an observation trip for Leguia, his boss.

In any event, although the government wanted Grow released, it wanted just as little fuss as possible. It is anxious to have the friendship of the new Peruvian government and realizes that it would do no good either in Peru or elsewhere in Latin America to speak harshly to the Peruvians about the matter. It may, however, have had to exert considerable diplomatic pressure.

Americans have no right to take part in a foreign war in which the government is not a participant. Citizens of a neutral country fighting in the ranks of another country are not protected as prisoners of war by international law. Americans enlisted in Allied armies before we entered the World War though the Germans refrained from executing any of them as unlawful combatants. Many took allegiance to France, Britain or Italy; Congress later regularized the citizenship of these by a special act after we declared war.

Two Americans captured during the Estrada revolution against President Zelaya in Nicaragua were executed by Zelaya, and Secretary Knox broke off relations with the United States in Paris or help the French bomb Abd-el-Krim and his Ruffians in Morocco the State Department emphatically announced that the revolt was an American protection. Abd-el-Krim announced that if he caught any of them he would shoot them, which was good sound international law.

American soldiers of fortune in Central American revolutions have also been denied protection.

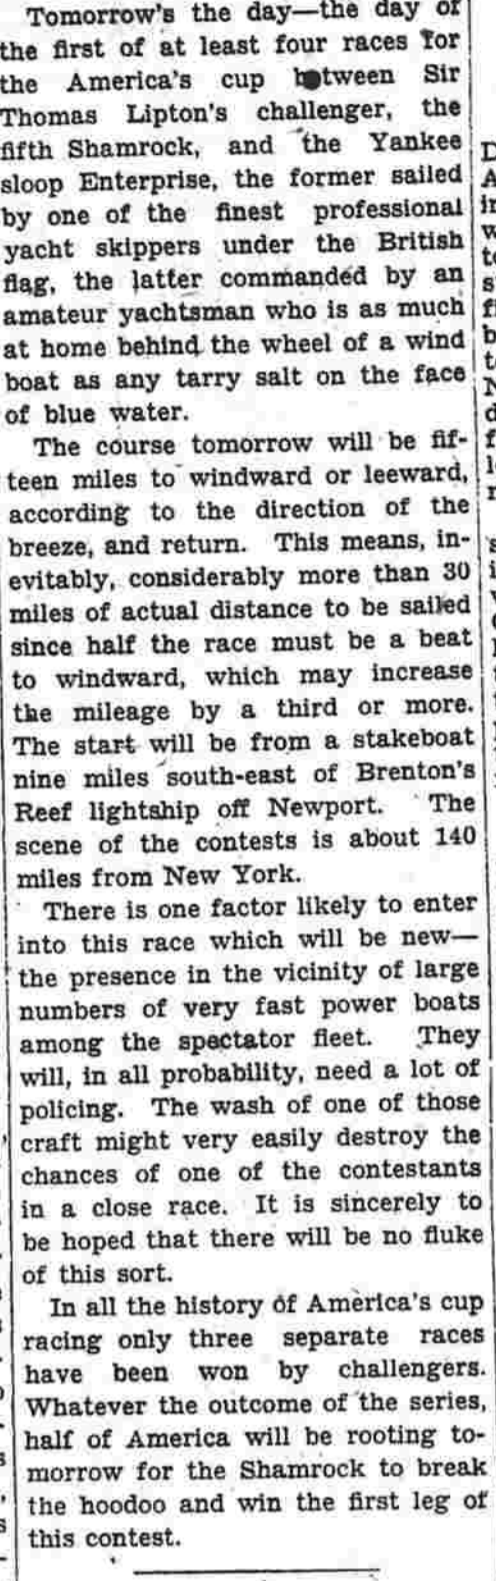

As far ago as 1818 the British government acquiesced in the execution of Arbutnot and Amlister by General Andrew Jackson on the ground that they had forfeited right to protection by entering the service of parties engaged in attacks on a friendly power and it has since become a part of international law that a citizen enlisted in the service of a foreign belligerent cannot claim the interposition of his own government for redress of injuries suffered by him in such service.

Can Ask a Square Deal

Nevertheless, a government is usually willing to demand that one of its citizens caught in that kind of a jam be given a square deal and that apparently is what our government did for Grow.

The unofficial opinion is expressed that some gratitude ought to be felt toward Grow for his impo-

FERMENTED AND SOUR MILK DIETS

Various types of sour milk have been used as a food beverage ever since men learned to domesticate milk-producing animals, such as cows, mares, goats, camels and donkeys. Within the last fifty years the healthful value of sour and fermented milk has become more recognized, and many sanitariums have sprung up in Russia and Central Europe, especially, where the sour milk diets are given in the treatment of a variety of disorders.

creamly, effervescent consistency is very appetizing. In England, a product similar to kumiss is known as Kephir. Kumiss diets have been successfully used in the treatment of many digestive disorders and seem to be helpful in cases of tuberculosis. Many beauty parlors are beginning to prescribe it for their patrons as they find that it assists in clearing the complexion when used both in the diet and externally as a skin application.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Disorders of Spine)

Question: Reader writes: "Please advise me if arthritic of the spine means the same as tuberculous of the spine, or does the former lead to the latter? Would you advise a plaster cast? One specialist does and another says it will do no good."

Answer: Tuberculous of the spine and arthritis of the spine are entirely different disorders, although the usual treatment advised is the same in both cases. However, I seldom advise a plaster cast to be used in such troubles. A better plan, as it seems to me, is to allow some movement of the joints—not too much exercise, and still not a solid cast, to make the parts immovable. The main thing to do is to get rid of the toxic condition which is the real cause of either one of these troubles.

(Starches)

Question: S. D. asks: "Generally speaking, what are the starches?"

Answer: The grains, the legumes, sago, tapioca, and those vegetables classed as "tubers" which grow under the ground.

(Nail Biting)

Question: Mrs. W. E. asks: "Can you suggest some method of making my little boy stop biting his fingernails? He seems to be in good health, except a little nervous."

Answer: As far as stopping this unsanitary habit of biting the fingernails is concerned, the cure is quite simple. Dip the child's fingers several times daily in a solution of alum water. This will keep the alum on the fingers all day long, and after a few days the habit will become disgusted with the pucker taste of the alum which he gets every time he puts his fingers into his mouth. This little cure always works.

JAKY PARALYSIS HITS ONLY WHITES

Strange Discovery Made by Chemists in Ohio — Was Tried Out on Chickens.

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Cincinnati, O., Sept. 12.—(AP)—A new freak of "Ginger Jake," a mysterious color affliction that affects chickens and men alike, has turned up in research at the University of Cincinnati.

In the medical department the ingredients of this liquor, which caused about 300 cases of paralysis about Cincinnati a few months ago, are under searching analysis.

It was noted at the time of this Cincinnati outbreak that nearly all the victims were white, negroes constituting less than three per cent.

At the same time reports brought to the university, when analysis of samples of liquor was undertaken, stated that much of the drink had been sold in negro districts.

Mr. J. F. Anderson, who is conducting the research, tried samples of the drink on monkeys, rabbits and white rats, but all these animals were immune to paralysis.

When he tried it on chickens, the bird family having a well known susceptibility to poison.

He gave it to white chickens and every one developed either paralysis or symptoms of paralysis.

But when he gave it to black chickens not one of them showed a symptom of paralysis.

Matter of Color. Scientists who attended the chemical meetings here this week made a guess that the paralysis of Ginger Jake "is a function of pigmentation," meaning that the coloring matter in pigment, that makes the comb and wattle in some manner combine with something in the drink to give the white a special poison.

Mr. Anderson says the experiments are too incomplete to throw any light on these guesses.

Queer Twists In Day's News

Waterloo, Ia.—Comes the revelation that the First Lady was First Lady years ago in a roller skating contest. Somebody has found in the Waterloo Courier of May 28, 1834, an item relating that Miss Lou Henry had won a beautiful silk parasol by skating twice around a hall and blowing out 19 candles in 38 seconds.

Washington, D. C.—Miss Miriam Elliott O'Brien, honorary guide, the only woman who has ever been in charge of big climbing parties, has climbed the Finsteraarhorn in the Swiss Alps, 14,026 feet high. Two other guides were with her.

San Remo, Italy.—Dr. Bruno Zuculin, newspaper writer, will be careful in describing feminine beauty hereafter. Employed by the young lady's family to praise "Miss Italy," winner of a beauty contest, he wrote: "Her beautiful blonde hair is becoming more blonde every day." The beauty's papa refused to pay, being angry over the suggestion that his daughter used dyes, and the doctor is suing.

New York—Clara Kimball Young of the movies is being sued for $22,675. A clothing firm avers that she owes $2,500 for a mink coat, $425 for a gold brocade coat and for other things.

Paris—What is the lure of Paris compared with the thrill of an efficient machine? Henry Ford was late, very late, arriving in Cherbourg. It developed that he saw a thresher, 1830 model, at work on a farm in Normandy. He stopped to examine, admire, ask questions through his chauffeur interpreter, tell how much better a motorized 1830 model would be and offer to buy.

Marlboro, Md.—Albert Adams, 17, seems to be an up and coming jockey. On a seven-race program he won six races, having no mount in the fourth race on the card.

Berlin—They're boosting Berlin bars with burs. Many a tourist has wondered at times why folks stared so. It is the habit of some cafes to fling burs at a passerby when he isn't looking. The prickly seed vessel is fashioned in the shape of a doll with an advertisement of the cafe on it.

MISSING N. Y. JUSTICE WAS WORTH $75,000

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The New York World says an examination of the safe deposit box of Joseph Force Crater, missing Supreme Court justice, resulted in the discovery of securities worth $75,000.

At the time of Justice Crater's disappearance, August 6, he had virtually depleted two bank accounts by withdrawing $5,500, which generally was believed to be the extent of his wealth.

Discovery of the securities was made by friends who pointed out that Justice Crater, had he wanted to do so, could have realized many times the sum he took with him.

Meanwhile, police pressed their search for the missing justice in the Adirondack mountains.

In his investigation of income tax fraud in connection with the alleged purchase by George F. Ewald of his office of mortgage, United States Attorney Tuttle said he has discovered that Martin J. Healy, Tammany leader who received $10,000 from Mrs. Ewald about the time of her husband's appointment, was paid more than $22,000 in nine years by the American Book company to promote the sale of its text books in the public schools.

New York, Sept. 12.—Three youngsters, ranging in age from a bit more than eighteen years to twenty-two, and one lean veteran of nearly thirty-eight will meet this afternoon in the semi-final round of the men's forty-ninth annual national championship singles tournament on the stadium courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills to decide who shall appear in the final battle for the title now being held by William T. Tilden 2d, of Philadelphia.

At 2 o'clock, in the upper half semi-final match, Frank X. Shields, of New York, twenty years old, will face Sidney B. Wood Jr., of New York, not yet nineteen years of age. Approximately at 3:30 o'clock Big Bill Tilden will step out on the court and start play against John H. Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., in the other semi-final match.

Yesterday afternoon a gallery of about 11,000 persons saw four brilliant matches staged on the Stadium turf as the eight men in the quarter-final brackets fought for the places in the semi-final round. Shields defeated Gregory S. Mangin, of Newark, N. J., at 3-6, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1, 6-1; Wood conquered Clifford S. Sutter, of New Orleans, La., at 6-4, 6-3, 2-6, 7-5; Tilden defeated John W. Van Ryn, of Orange, N. J., by the score of 4-6, 6-2, 6-4, 6-4, and Doeg defeated Francis T. Hunter, of New Rochelle, the veteran internationalist, by the score of 11-13, 6-0, 3-6, 6-2, 6-4. Each one of these matches had its dramatic moments and each was distinguished by dazzling play. Shields is ranked at No. 12. Wood has never been ranked nationally. Tilden has been No. 1 for a long stretch of years, and Doeg is rated at No. 3.

WERNER-HALLIDAY SEEK NEW LAURELS

Freddie Werner and Ralph Halliday, claimants of the town miniature golf championship, will seek additional laurels this evening when they meet the team of Hills and Neron at the Manchester Miniature Course at Stone street. The public is welcome. Much interest centers about this Werner-Halliday team which is yet to taste defeat. They can challenge all comers.

AMERICA'S CUP OPENING RACE TOMORROW AT 12

First Brush Will Be Over
Windward - Leeward 15
Mile Course; Best Out of Seven.

Newport, R. I., Sept. 12.—(AP)—Shamrock V, Sir Thomas Lipton's fifth challenger for the America's cup, and Enterprise, Harold S. Vanderbilt's defender, today entered their last day of preparation for the greatest of all sailing contests in American waters. Shortly before noon tomorrow, the two boats are scheduled to cross the starting line nine miles southeast of Brenton Reef Lightship of a thirty mile open ocean course. The first brush will be over a windward-leeward course, that is the sloops will run 15 miles into the wind and run home before it. The first boat to win four races will be declared the winner. Contests are scheduled for every day except Sundays but a one day interruption may be had by the request of either boat. Under no conditions can the race continue beyond the end of the month.

Eagle and 3 Birdies Help Cheney Win 6-5

CUBS MAY SIGN SEVERAL NEW MEN

The Cubs football team will hold practice sessions at 7:30 tonight and 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Tonight's workout will be at the Charter Oak street field and Sunday's at Mt. Nebo. Manager Ben Clune said this morning that he expected to have some important announcements for Monday night. Undoubtedly it will concern the addition of several out of town players to the squad. Many of last year's stars have not reported, some casting their chances elsewhere. Mgr. Clune nevertheless expects to have fully as strong a team as the one which won the title a year ago. Conroy and Mielke have gone with the Majors, it is understood.

Yesterday's Stars

Vance Robins held Cubs to five hits, struck out 13 and won 2 to 1. Hafey, Cards, his homer with two on aided in 5 to 4 defeat of Giants. Lyons, White Sox, went route against Red Sox to win 12 inning decision 4 to 3.

Star Local Golfer Trounces Hartford Player in First Round of District Amateur; Grant Barely Wins.

Judging from the tenor of morning newspaper reports from Hartford, the capital city is more or less unaware that Manchester boasts at least one or two crack golfers. Ben Cheney scored a 6 and 5 trouncing over Louis J. Wampanoag at the Hartford Golf Club yesterday in a first round match for the Hartford District amateur championship. The morning paper referred to Cheney's victory as the "first distinct upset of the tournament."

It would be true, perhaps, to report that the decisiveness of Cheney's victory was not expected, but to class the triumph for the Manchester golfer as an out and out upset is an injustice to Cheney who has been playing mighty fine golf this summer. His driving at times borders on phenomenal as attested by his 325 smack on the eleventh that netted Ben an eagle with the aid of a spectacular putt the full radius of the green.

Cheney's next opponent will be the winner of the "Bud" Geoghegan-Charlie Page match. Two other matches were played yesterday. George Smart of Wampanoag defeated his brother, Sam, 2 and 1. Bobby Grant, medalist and defending champion, was forced to an extra green to eke out one up over Oakes Spaulding of Wampanoag. C. M. Hathaway beat R. P. James 5 to 4 in a third round match.

The match between Cheney and Ives was a corker. Both were playing very creditable golf. Par for the course is 71 but Cheney's approximate score was 68, compared to 74 for Ives. The Manchester golfer bagged an eagle and three birdies which is an excellent piece of work for even the emperor of the links, Bobby Jones himself. All three birdies came on the outgoing nine.

A tremendous tee shot helped Cheney to a birdie four and his first step into the hole on the third hole. Ives squared it at the fourth but Cheney's par five won the sixth and he stuck in another birdie to win the seventh and become two up. The Manchester man made it three up at the ninth by cracking a beautiful iron shot right up by the pin for his third birdie.

Ives took three putts on the tenth and went four down. Then came a most sensational upheaval on the part of Cheney, two shots that killed whatever hope Ives had of staying in the match. He whaled into a terrific drive that rolled clear of the fringe of the green, 325 yards away. Ives was right up by the pin in two for a sure birdie, but Cheney sent a putt spinning into the hole after a journey almost entirely across the green.

A par hole on the next hole against a five by Ives made Cheney dormie six and a half on the short thirteenth did the trick.

FARRELL, SMITH BOTH ELIMINATED

several years golfers have known Joe Kirkwood as a professional whose stock in trade is giving entertainment with trick shots. At the conclusion of the third round today in the P. G. A. championship at Fresh Meadow Country Club the general estimate of the Australian was amended somewhat. Doubtless still without a peer in driving a ball from the face of a watch and landing a lofty niblick shot into a bird's nest, Kirkwood dropped naturally yesterday afternoon into the category of a high-class golfer who is to be regarded as dangerous in match play.

Wednesday it was Harold Sampson, of Eurlingham, Calif., who held the spotlight. Sampson was defeated yesterday by 4 and 3 by Charley Lacey, of Pine Valley, but the round was not without its feature, as Kirkwood provided a bit by eliminating Horton Smith, 1 up, in a magnificent thirty-six hole battle.

Tommy Armour put out Johnny Farrell, 2 and 1, in another fight that was even at the fourteenth in the afternoon and Gene Sarazen, the Fresh Meadow pro, conquered Al Espinoza, of Chicago, 2 and 1. Farrell and Armour were putting on the big show until Farrell suddenly slumped on the fifteenth and sixteenth, and as Sarazen passed the sixteenth dormie the gallery gathered around the fighting Australian who after a glorious battle started the last two holes 1 down.

VANCE WHIFFS 13 TAMES CUBS 2-1; CARDS WIN 5-4

Race in National Almost Three-Cornered Dead- lock; A's Gain While Idle.

The Chicago Cubs and New York Giants, who looked like the only important entries in the National League pennant race not so long ago, now seem to have become as stationary as mile posts. The St. Louis Cards and Brooklyn Robins meantime are doing all the racing. Once more these teams were triumphant yesterday and placed themselves only a half game behind the league leading Cubs. The Robins made a clean sweep of their three-game series with Chicago as Dazzy Vance turned in a third successive five-hit performance to give Brooklyn a 2 to 1 victory. The Cards with Chick Hafey's first inning home run as the deciding factor, defeated the Giants, 5 to 4. Two were on base at the time.

As the Cubs move on today to the seemingly safer regions of Philadelphia and the Giants and Cards remain in New York for a final clash, the race shapes up this way:

	W.	L.	Pct.	TP.
Chicago	80	59	.575	15
St. Louis	79	59	.572	16
Brooklyn	80	60	.571	14
New York	77	62	.554	15

Vance followed his predecessors, Ray Phelps and Adolfo Luque in holding the Cubs to five hits, and fanned 13 men. It took Hack Wilson's 48th homer of the season in the seventh inning to give the Cubs their first run of the series, but Glenn Wright had beaten Wilson at his own game. In the first inning he smashed out a homer after Herman had walked to give the Robins a lead that Chicago never overcame. Pittsburgh's Pirates won a tight game from the Boston Braves, 5 to 2. The Phillies made it a clean sweep against Cincinnati by slugging out a final 15 to 7 victory.

North Carolina will meet three of Dixie's toughest grid machines, Georgia Tech, Georgia and Tennessee, on successive Saturdays.

Jimmy Kayoes Singer in Third; Lomski Knocked Out for First Time in Career; Canzoneri Loses to Petrolle.

New York, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Jimmy McLarnin is piling up some sort of a record for whipping champions in the world of fistfights. During the course of a brief campaign in every division, from the flyweights to the welters, 23-year-old Jimmy has bowled over exactly seven champions, either before or during their reign, but never has he won a championship. All of his victories have been in overweight affairs.

Champion number seven fell before the Vancouver Irishman's cannoning last night in the Yankee stadium when Al Singer, baby king of the lightweights, followed in the ways of Pancho Villa, Fidel LeBarra, Kid Kaplan, Jackie Fields, Young Jack Thompson, and Sammy Mandell.

Singer took the count of ten in the third round of what was to have been a ten round bout, lying face down in a ring surrounded by nearly 25,000 of the "faithful" who paid in the neighborhood of $175,000 to see the fray.

LOMSKI IS KAYOED
Chicago, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Up from Chicago's ghetto has come an ex-fish peddler named King Levinsky who seems to bear definite signs of getting somewhere as a light heavyweight fighter.

Lomski never before had been knocked out, took a terrific beating before going down for the full count in the fifth. Billy Petrolle, the Fargo express, who came out of retirement after a nine months' layoff, scrambled up the lightweight situation by gaining a referee's decision over Tony Canzoneri, of New York, in ten mauling rounds. Canzoneri is scheduled to meet Al Singer, the titleholder in New York next month.

The Hollywood Story

Copyright 1930 by NEA Service Inc. by ERNEST LYNN

BEGIN HERE TODAY
Beginning as an extra, Anne Winter has progressed rapidly and is now under contract to Grand United, one of the largest of the Hollywood studios. Anne has been living with two other extras, Mona Morrison and Eva Harley. The latter, because of a tragic love experience, and failure to get work, returns to her home in New Orleans.

Dan Rorimer, former New York newspaper man, now a scenario writer, is in love with Anne. He is free landing and not meeting with much success.

Paul Collier, who writes a daily movie column for a string of newspapers, shares Dan's apartment with him. He has great faith in Dan's ability, despite the latter's discouragement. A play that he had written for the stage while in New York is returned to Dan, unaccepted, and Anne and Collier read it and are enthusiastic. They urge him to revise it for the movies.

This he does. Eventually it is accepted. Knowing that Anne would like to play a dramatic role, Rorimer suggests to studio executives that she be given a test for the leading feminine part. Garry Sloan is to direct the picture. He gives her a test and she wins the role. Sloan, the biggest director in Hollywood, and Anne is elated over her opportunity.

She and Dan go out that evening to "celebrate." He proposes to her but she is forced to tell him that she doesn't know whether she loves him. Following this, Garry Sloan shows some interest in her and begins to take her out. Production of the picture is begun, and Dan has the opportunity of watching the great Sloan at work. He drives the cast relentlessly. Dan thinks Anne is beginning to look tired.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY
CHAPTER XXXIX
That night he took her home. The day had been a trying one; there had been a series of aggravating delays, a couple of fussy blow-ups at the most inopportune moments, someone's costume had been wrong, Sloan had made them go through one scene nearly a dozen times. Sloan had been difficult. Anne was beginning to feel a bit doubtful of herself; she was beginning to wonder whether she would be able to measure up to his requirements. But she said nothing to Dan about it.

They talked about everyone but themselves. Dan told her about a new picture that Mergenthaler was given to Martin Collins, his most ambitious bit of work thus far.

"Paul Collier told me about it. Maybe Mona could get something in it; they'll need a lot of extras. Is Anne taking any more pictures?"

"Anne told me that she had not worked for two weeks. 'But she never complains.'"

Dan said, "That's tough. I'd like to see somebody do something for Mona; she ought to get a break sometime." He said he would get in touch with Collins. "Maybe he can find a bit for her, even."

"That's nice of you, Dan. You're always doing something for somebody, aren't you?"

And Dan grinned. "You don't have to say anything to Mona about it."

Eva Hartly, she informed him, had written them a letter. Eva was modeling in a New Orleans department store.

"She seemed cheerful enough," Anne said. "But I'm afraid she's not. I know she's not. She wanted to be remembered to you, Dan. Eva said you deserved a lot of luck."

"Poor kid," he said. "Send her my best when you write, will you?"

For Eva's own sake he was glad she was home again. Yesterday he had been talking to Harvey Bell, the casting director, and Bell had spun a few tales about extras he had known and tried to help. Minor tragedies of Hollywood.

"But there's nothing you can do, really," Bell said. "If a few thousand of them would quit and leave, somebody might solve the problem. It's certainly an impossible one now."

Dan left Anne Winter at her door and went home. She looked very tired, he thought, and he would have said more about it if it had not become difficult of late to say certain things to Anne. It was unnatural, this diffidence; it bothered him.

But he was not unhappy. He was glad that he finally had declared himself, even though the answer had not been what he had hoped for. This was better—far better—than the unspoken longing he had known during those dreary weeks when discouragement had prevented him from telling her what was on his mind.

Dan was meeting a new crowd now. Others in the scenario department at Grand United invited him to their homes and he found these new associations pleasant. Most of the men were married, some of them to screen actresses, and for the most part they were congenial lot. Harvey Bell, too, was friendly. He played a good game of golf—he could play about ever with Paul Collier—and Dan and Johnny Riddle and these two composed a frequent foursome.

Maris Farrell and her mother were back again after a trip to Hawaii, and Maris seemed pleased to see him again. With Maris he went horseback riding the Sunday morning following her return and later on in the week he took her to the theater.

She had a hundred questions. She thrived on gossip, she said. How was Anne Winter doing? And Paul Collier? And what did he think of Garry Sloan?

And when he told her of his respect for Sloan's knowledge of his craft he reminded him that he once had laughed at her for calling the man an artist.

"Remember?"

Dan laughed and said he owed her an apology.

She took him to a tea one afternoon, given by a Hollywood publicity woman who was announcing something-or-other; Dan never did learn just what it was. He hated teas—even when there was no tea, as in the case of this one—but Maris wanted him to go. She said he would meet some interesting people.

"And I've some friends I want to show you off to."

"What am I," Dan complained, "Exhibit Z?"

Maris laughed. "You're a lot farther up the alphabet than that."

There were a number of picture people there, and a few newspaper and fan magazine writers. Louise Watkins was present. Louise said, "I understand you're to be congratulated," and referred with her queer twisted smile to his picture and to the contract he recently had signed with Grand United.

He had been summoned by Mr. Johnson, just back from a transcontinental trip, and told that they wanted him to stay. The contract he was offered was satisfactory in every way, especially so, Dan thought, when he found that it did not contain the usual six-month cancellation clause. Grand United was willing to gamble on him for two years, and Rorimer was more than satisfied.

Louise said, "Let me know when you tear this one up, won't you, Dan?"

He laughed. "I promise not to tell another soul, but you!"

Louise, he thought, had looked at him rather curiously. Something told him that she would have liked to ask a question. But she merely chatted for a minute or two and then left him.

The room he gathered after looking around, served as office and living room for the hostess. It was crowded and there was a din of talk and he was impatient to be gone. But presently someone in a group just behind him mentioned Garry Sloan's name, and before he moved away he heard another low remark that angered him.

It was made by some girl he had not met—most of those at the tea were just faces to him, anyway. Sloan, she said, was interested in a girl who was playing a lead in his latest picture—a girl named Anne Winter—and she and Garry... Dan walked deliberately away and sought Maris.

"Why, what's the matter?" she asked, noticing his expression.

And Dan managed a smile. "Nothing at all. Why?"

"I'm afraid you're not enjoying yourself."

He denied this. "You're here, aren't you?"

Maris laughed joyously. "Always the gentleman."

They left soon afterward, though, and Dan drove her home. He had a new car now, a sleek looking sport model of yellow and black, acquired that week. Maris admired it.

"Drive me up and down the Boulevard, Dan, so I can be seen. It's gorgeous looking."

He grinned. "Like it?" and Maris nodded emphatically.

"You'll have to help me break it in, then. How about going for a little ride this evening? Like to?"

But Maris was busy that evening. "I'm sorry, really; it's a date I'd love to break."

"How about calling him up and telling him you've got a studio call?"

Maris shook her head, and she smiled. "I'm afraid he's wiser than that."

"I'm sure he'd believe it if Maris told him."

"Yes, he would!" Maris scoffed. "Well, tomorrow evening, then?" he proposed, and she agreed.

"They went for a long ride along the meandering hill roads about Hollywood. It was a perfect night; as in the case of this one—but Maris wanted him to go. She said he would meet some interesting people."

"A night," Maris said, "for poets—and eight-cylinder roadsters."

"I didn't know poets rode in eight-cylinder roadsters."

"If they write bad enough poetry they do, don't they?"

"Does that apply to scenario writers too?" Dan asked.

"I should say not," Maris laughed. "You might make me walk home."

He smiled and swung the car around a sharp turn. For some moments driving required his careful attention. The road skirted a cliff, and at the right it dropped into abrupt nothingness. Presently, though, they came upon safer roadway, and below them in the valley the moon shone back in the water of a reservoir.

"Grand!" Maris murmured.

Rorimer brought the car to a smooth halt at the road's edge, and they gazed down and across the valley at the beauty of moonlight on the imprisoned lake.

He said, "It's a night for poets, all right."

"I love it," said Maris.

"And for Romeo, Maris."

"Are you getting romantic?"

Dan smiled and put his arm around her. "I could," he said, "without any trouble at all. Have you got any objections?"

Maris laughed and looked away. She said, "May I have a cigarette, please?"

To reach them Dan had to withdraw his arm. "You knew I carried them in my right-hand pocket, didn't you?" he accused.

"I'm not that close an observer, really."

He held a light for her cigarette, then lighted one himself and put his arm back again with a defiant grin. Maris leaned her head back and looked at the sky.

Dan said, "Can't we have a little poem, Maris?"

"I can only remember the short ones," she replied with a faraway look.

"Me too—like 'Roses are red, violets are—'"

Maris kicked his foot and he stopped. "I like that one," he said. "of Edna Millay's about the candle. Remember it?"

Maris nodded. She recited the lines in a muted voice:

"My candle burns at both ends; I will last the night; But ah, my foes, and ho, my friends— It gives a lovely light!"

Men to Replace Dancing Girls
Hindu Princess Make Change in Hindu Ritual After a Visit to Temple.

Trivandrum, Travancore, India. (AP.)—Measure to bring about abolition of the Devadasi system whereby young girls were dedicated to the temples as part of the Hindu ritual have been completed in the state of Travancore. Hereafter men will take the place of the dancing girls in all the places of worship.

The movement "to purify the temples and save the womanhood of India from a sore eating into the vitals of society," as the reformers call it, is also under way in other parts of India.

Her Highness, Setulakshmi Bai, Maharani regent of Travancore, has been given the credit of initiative in doing away with the Devadasi temple system which for centuries has been maintained by the state.

Chance Visit
The change was due to a chance visit of her Highness to the temple of worship in the course of a tour in south Travancore where there were dancing girls. It was soon afterward that the regent abolished the system of service with instructions that all remuneration the Devadasis have been receiving in money or in kind from pilgrims and other worshippers should be continued but

YOUR CHILDREN
By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

Just about now Tom and Dick are getting out football helmets for inspection and table conversation begins to speculate on the new football coach or the tennis courts the "Junior High" is having made. The youngsters are enthusiastic. Some of the adults agree but more of them shake their heads.

Where are the days when we used to go to school to study? How will sunny get prepared for banking by learning fancy dives?

Aside from Father's dubious glances at text-books dumped on the hall table and forgotten, and Mother's little-concealed worry over possible, if not probable, athletic accidents, there are the neighbors who have no children and who loudly question the right of the school board to throw away their taxes on recreation tom-foolishness. New tennis courts—ridiculous!

And yet games and social affairs in the Junior and senior high schools continue to increase.

All work and no play is bad medicine. Children are bound to them to be playing systematically under trained guidance with friends that we know, and in a place that we know, than straying into any of the multitudinous troubles that a free youngster may take it into his head to get into?

Then there are all the well-known benefits of athletics for their own sake. Learning co-operation and team-work, strengthening flabby muscles and building up a healthy resistance to disease, and discovering the deepest meaning of good sportsmanship are some of them. For the boy or girl not strong enough for the more strenuous sports the schools have volleyball, swimming and even in the more progressive ones—golf.

Dramatics teach a poise, confidence and rapidity of memory that is directly helpful to other courses. The practice in costume-making and engineering of lights and rigging, is useful knowledge.

Education can mean much more than arithmetic and history.

NERVOUS TEMPERAMENT IS OFTEN SEVERE HANDICAP TO WORKER.
By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine.

Two hundred years after the beginning of the Christian era, a famous physician named Galen described what is now called the nervous temperament. Indeed, it was customary in those days to classify all men according to their constitutions. With the beginning of modern scientific medicine less attention was paid to this point of view and the study of individual tissues and organs and of the blood.

More recently medicine has again begun to concentrate on the human being as a whole, including the mind and the body as a single working unit. It is recognized that people vary as to their amounts of nervous energy and responses to various situations.

In many instances the glands of internal secretion regulate the action of human beings. We recognize the dynamic types. It is definitely understood that the hyperthyroid type is quick, nervous and emotional, and the hypothyroid type rather stolid and slow.

When Sickness Destroys Happiness
When all of the tissues of the body function well, the attitude toward life is one of cheerfulness and content. With the beginning of imperfection of function of any organ or tissue or with the incidence of infection, the mental attitude toward life may become exceedingly sour. Fear is an emotion which destroys happiness.

In an attempt to define nervous temperament, Dr. May Smith has studied it from every possible point of view, and her results have recently been made available in the British Journal of Medical Psychology. She was concerned particularly with the nervous temperament as it affects the life of the worker in industry.

The worker of nervous temperament cannot work in the midst of noise and confusion. The nervous person tends to be away more because of sickness than those who are less nervous. Nervous people do not inevitably break down, so that there is a distinction between nervous symptoms and nervous disability.

A nervous person working under some conditions may go on for many years, whereas under different conditions he or she soon becomes unable to continue. A typist who has nervous symptoms, working in a room alone, is rarely disturbed and gets along satisfactorily. The same typist who may fear too much supervision, working in a large room with many other typists and a supervisor, develops an acute mental discomfort, makes numerous

NEW RANGES RETAIN HEAT
By William H. Baldwin

There are gas, kerosene and gasoline ranges. In any range, the things of most importance are its ability to retain heat and also its ability to control the heat in the oven.

Most old-fashioned ranges are lacking in these qualities. Here are the specifications of what might be called an ideal gas range, which should guide the shopper in making her purchase:

The metal frame should be of sufficient weight and thickness to make for a sturdy product. All the joints are rounded. All connections are concealed. There are no rough corners. The range is fitted with a heat control so that the temperature of the oven can be regulated depending upon the heat required in any operation. The oven is insulated so that heat doesn't escape into the kitchen, which would be a waste of heat and would make the kitchen uncomfortably hot.

TABLE FOR WEE DINERS
When children are included among the guests, a smaller table, especially set for them, not only simplifies the serving problem but keeps forbidden foods out of their sight.

Wall Street Briefs

New York, Sept. 12.—Gradual recovery in business activity is seen by Eugene A. Canalis, president of the New York Cocoa Exchange, in the heavy trading on the exchange during August. Turnover for August amounted to 2,609 lots, or 34,961 tons, the heaviest trading volume of any month since February, and compared with 1,791 lots in July.

Production of copper by United States mines increased 2,530 short tons in August over July production, the American Bureau of Metal Statistics reports. August production totaled 56,779 short tons, against 54,249 in July and 78,885 in August last year. Copper production of smelters in North America also increased slightly to a total of 84,560 tons in August, compared with 84,426 in July and 85,531 in June.

Newsprint production decreased in both Canadian and United States mills in August. Canadian production in August was 202,043 tons, against 216,576 in July and 225,878 in August last year. Production in United States mills in August totaled 101,601 tons, against 102,840 in July and 120,868 in August last year.

August sales of the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co. established a new high record for the month and showed an increase of 4.22 per cent over August last year. A statement by the company said that reports from its divisions throughout the country indicate a stronger tendency on the part of the public to buy, and that "all indices of the company encourage it to believe an improvement has begun which will continue through the fall and winter."

The immediate result of political upheavals in Argentine, Peru and Bolivia, so far as United States exports are concerned, probably will be negligible, Moody's says, but in the case of Argentine the change may ultimately prove beneficial in promoting a friendlier sentiment toward the United States and its merchandise than has been manifest during the last few years.

Underlying forces of steel demand afford quite definite substantiation to the general belief that an upturn in steel production is now in the making, Standard Statistics Co. says. Equally convincing, however, is the great weight of evidence pointing to the seasonal nature of this impending advance; "In fact, there is not a single major consideration at this time to lend weight to the theory that a fundamental recovery in steel is presently to be started." The survey adds that the most reasonable expectation is that production may be gradually increased from the present low levels to from 70 to 75 per cent of capacity in the next month to six weeks, at the average cannot be gained during the closing months of the year.

AT GEORGIA PRIMARY

Atlanta, Sept. 12.—(AP)—With Richard B. Russell Jr. leading four other gubernatorial candidates with a total of 149 unit votes as compared with 124 for his nearest opponent, chief interest in Wednesday's primary switched today to the race for comptroller general and a Congressional contest. Homer C. Parker, adjutant general of Georgia, apparently had won the nomination as comptroller general by a close margin after a spirited contest with W. B. Harrison, the incumbent.

Returns from 28 out of 19 counties in the Ninth Congressional District indicated Judge John Stephens Wood of Canton had defeated Representative Thomas M. Bell of Gainesville, long known as the dean of the Georgia delegation in Washington. Senator William J. Harris won the unit votes of every county in Georgia except one in his contest with former Governor John M. Slaton. In the gubernatorial contest, Russell and George H. Carswell will engage in a runoff primary October 1, Russell lacking the majority of unit votes required for nomination.

NANINGFU RECAPTURED

Hong Kong, Sept. 12.—(AP)—An official report from Canton says that government forces from Canton and Yunan province have recaptured Nanningfu, capital of Kwangsi province where rebels had been holding out for a long time. Foreigners from Nanning—a treaty port on the West river—have arrived at Wuchow. They include the staffs of the Customs office, the Standard Oil and Asiatic petroleum companies, a few missionaries and the doctor of the Nanning mission hospital.

A bomb dropped by a Cantonese airplane during a raid fell into the hospital, killing and wounding many patients. The hospital since has been closed.

HUSBAND DIES

Easthampton, Sept. 12.—(AP)—Patrick B. Cavanaugh, 68, whose wife is visiting as a Gold Star mother the grave of her son, Patrick J. Cavanaugh in France, died in a Middletown hospital last night. Besides the widow four sons and three daughters survive.

MUSICIANS IN DETROIT DECIDE ON A STRIKE

Detroit, Sept. 12.—(AP)—A strike of union musicians against Detroit theaters was voted early today.

Statements of the officials of the local of the American Federation of Musicians and of theater owners disagreed as to the number of men and theaters affected and as to one of the issues involved.

A contract between the union and the theaters expired Sept. 1, and the men have been playing under a day to day agreement while negotiations were under way for a new contract. Union leaders charged that efforts were being made to reduce wages and to decrease the number of men employed.

A statement by executives of the Fox theater said that the managers were willing to maintain the same wage scale as was in force under the old contract, but requested that they be permitted "to make a nominal decrease in the number of men that they were employing because of the fact that they had changed the policy of their programs."

One thing those endurance fliers can be thankful for is that they didn't come down on the day the French fliers landed in New York.

2 PICTURES, CABARET AT STATE TONIGHT

William Haines in "Way Out West," and Grant Withers and Sue Carol in "Dancing Sweeties" are the feature attractions at the State today and Saturday.

Haines has provided many thrilling pictures, as a football star, polo player and other fields of athletic endeavor, but is extremely doubtful if he ever appeared in a picture that has as much universal audience as "Way Out West." He serves an hilarious apprenticeship learning to be a Westerner, and his adventures with bucking horses, cactus, cows and other things evolve much comedy. But when the love story begins, and he has actually learned to be a Westerner, and his adventures and furious, and some very real drama is mixed with the whimsicalities of the tale. Polly Moran, Lella Hyams and Ukelele like have the leading supporting roles and are no small factors in providing the fun and thrills.

"Dancing Sweeties" unquestionably is one of the finest comedy dramas of modern youth that has been shown on the silver screen for many moons. It contains a new and novel plot which is packed with tense moments of humanly moving drama and affords fun of the finest fare. The handsome young Grant Withers is seen in the role of a smart-cracking youth who thinks more about trophy cups at dance halls than about his family. Sue Carol plays the leading feminine role in a highly satisfactory manner and the rest of the cast includes Tully Marshall, Eddie Phillips and Kate Fries.

The Cabaret Night part of the Friday night program will present Lillian Lascelles in a repertoire of character songs; George Banks a comedian of high rank; Panetta Brothers in an instrumental act that is sure to please, and Harry Burt, one of the most popular vaudevillians ever to appear in Manchester, will once more act as master of ceremonies.

A & P TEA SALES MAKE NEW RECORD

The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company reports sales for August of $78,862,868, establishing a new record for the month. This compares with $75,190,642 for the corresponding period of 1929, and represents an increase of $3,172,226, or 4.22 per cent.

Because of the decline in retail food prices, the gain in tonnage sales or actual amount of goods sold, was greater than the increase in dollar sales. Tonnage sales for August were 389,113 tons, compared with 335,628 tons in August 1929, an increase of 53,485, or 15.94 per cent.

Average weekly dollar sales for the four weeks in August, 1930, were $19,590,717, compared with $18,797,661 in the four weeks last year, an increase of $793,056. Average weekly tonnage sales for the four weeks in August, 1930, were 97,278 tons, compared with 83,907 tons in the corresponding four weeks last year, an increase of 13,371 tons.

A statement issued today by The Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Company said:

"Although July sales of the company showed the smallest gain over sales for the corresponding period in 1929 of any month in 1930, the August business was at an accelerated pace. Reports coming to the company from its divisions scattered throughout the country indicate a stronger inclination to buy on the part of the public. All indices of the company encourage it to believe that an improvement has begun which will continue through the fall and winter."

GRIFFITH-CAMPBELL

Miss Mary Gertrude Campbell, daughter of Mrs. Rose G. Campbell of 203 Summit street, was married this morning at 10 o'clock to Harold Manley Griffith, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Griffith of 207 Center street. The ceremony was performed at St. James's rectory by Rev. P. J. Killen.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lillian Campbell, as bridesmaid. Fred Corbett, friend of the bridegroom was best man. The bride wore a gown of brown georgette, trimmed with plaques of cream georgette, and hat of brown velvet to match. Her corsage bouquet was of Madame Butterfly roses. The bridesmaid wore a dress of black chiffon with green hat and corsage of Eucharist roses.

The wedding breakfast and reception for the immediate families and close friends followed at the home of the bride's mother, which was artistically decorated in a color scheme of pink and yellow, with asters and fall flowers in these colors.

The gift of the bride to her bridesmaid was a cameo pin, and the bridegroom's gift to his best man was a silver cigarette case.

Mr. and Mrs. Griffith left today for a motor trip through the White Mountains. They will be at home to their friends after October 1 in Coventry where the bridegroom has for several years been caretaker of the historic Nathan Hale birthplace.

W. A. MARBLE DEAD
Greenwich, Sept. 12. (AP)—Colonel William E. Marble today received word of the death of his father William A. Marble, former president of the R. and G. Corset company of New York at Pocono, Pa. He was 82 years old.

Mr. Marble who lived in New York, was formerly president of the Merchants Association of New York and one time president of the National Order of the Sons of the American Revolution. He was born in Woonsocket, R. I.

AUTO SMASHES LIGHTS, CHASED, DRIVER DRUNK

Truckman Doesn't Heed Corn Borer Inspectors — Declared Drunk at Station Here.

Lights on the road near Laurel Park showing that corn borer inspectors were on duty had little or no meaning to one George E. McCarthy who was driving past that point in one of three trucks owned by the Michael Darcey Trucking Company of Waterbury shortly after 2 o'clock this morning. The truck knocked over several lights and when one of the inspectors tried to stop it he had to make a sudden jump to prevent being struck. The other truck followed but when the inspector tried to get the name of the first man they gave him no assistance. The inspector got a ride in a passing automobile as far as Woodland where he telephoned the police.

NEW TARIFF BOARD

Washington, Sept. 12.—(AP)—President Hoover is to complete before next Tuesday, the new tariff commission which is to administer what he considers the "outstanding step" of the revised tariff legislation—its flexible provisions.

FIND WOMAN'S BODY IN NORWALK HARBOR

Norwalk, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The body of a scantily clad middle-aged woman with a badly battered face, found on the west beach of Sheffield Island in the Norwalk harbor today presented a dilemma to the local police as they searched in vain for identification marks on the clothing and body. Pending the medical examiner's finding and a more thorough search of the body in the morgue, the authorities are advancing no theories on the manner in which the woman met her death.

GANGSTER TELLS ALL ON HIS DEATHBED

Chicago, Sept. 12.—(AP)—The accusation of a dying gangster brought Nicholas Muscato, "The Little Man", into the law's clutches today on two murder charges.

Peter "The Ape" Nicastro, 25, ignored the law of the gang and talked. He told detectives that his final "ride" was made in Muscato's car.

He said Muscato, five-foot-one in height but a "big shot" of the notorious "42" gang, had taken him along to execute Frank Pettito, who had risked the penalty of hijacking stills the gang was hired to protect.

When he boasted that he, not "The Little Man" had dispatched Pettito, another execution was ordered. Nicastro whispered on his death bed, and four bullets were shot into his body when he rode last Tuesday morning with the chiefstain. Then "The Ape" died.

As the head of a ring, it must be conceded that that New York gangster, Legs Diamond, was appropriately named.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

Ode to the R. F. D. Carrier
When smiles the sun in springtime
And gay birds twit and days dance
By...

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS:

The girl who quarrels with her boy friend may get left—even when she's right.

she wants, and now all the architect's got to do is to build the house around them.

When a woman starts to be disagreeable, she always makes good.

A business man was very keen on having proficient clerks in his amploy. Before a clerk could enter his offices he was required to pass a written examination. At one examination a question was: "Who formed the first company?"

One youth was a little puzzled by this, but not to be floored, the wrote: "Noah, successfully floated a company, while the rest of the world was in liquidation."

He is so simple said a flapper of a certain shiek, that he would need a guide to pilot him thru a revolving door.

Some people cast their bread upon the waters and expect it to come back with a hot dog and mustard.

"John, let's drop in at the pawnshop this evening. It's getting to look more like home than this place."

A man owns one store stays in it. Then he establishes a chain of stores and spends his time on the links.

FORTUNATE

"I never thought I'd pull through.
First I got angina pectoris, followed by arteriosclerosis. Just as I was recovering from these, I got tuberculosis and aphasia."

AND HE DID

The novice had hooked a very small trout and had wound it in until it was rammed against the end of the rod.

AND BROUGHT HIM BACK

He: Have any of your family connections ever been traced?
She: Yes, they traced an uncle of mine to South America once.—
Faun, Vienna.

EXPENSIVE

Teacher: If you do not behave better I shall ask your father to come and see me.
Doctor's Son: You had better not —he charges three dollars for each visit.—Answers.
