 TUESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30.

The first small matter is that under this pleasant arrangement the income of the towns, which must maintain their local courts anyhow, apparently would be reduced to the extent of their present share in the fines and costs collected from minor traffic offenders. Another small matter is that, judging by past performance, the superior courts would probably deal less severely with the drunk drivers and the reckless speedsters than do the local courts. If Mr. Stoeckel will look up the history of such cases he will be surprised to find the number of appealed cases of this sort which receive the tenderest of treatment, even extending to nolleis, in the county courts.

If the commissioner can suggest a way of remedying the loss to the town courts from the payment of fines to the Department of Motor Vehicles and of insuring a greater degree of rigidity and sternness in the Superior Court he will have quite a good scheme. Just now, however, it appears to be a bit lacking.

PLAYING FAIR
 We have in Manchester, as in most towns, a few people of a certain type. The type of exceptional persons. Individuals who are just a little superior to the rules of conduct laid down by custom or by law whereby it is possible for large numbers of persons to get along together in small spaces. The kind of people who will not wait their turn at a theatre box office or a bank window if they can somehow manage to get in ahead. The kind of people who halt their cars outside the line of parking stalls while they or their companions run into an office or a store for five or ten minutes or while they wait for some friend to emerge from theatre or bank.

It might be pointed out to these folks that if everybody did this latter stunt—everybody who is in just as much of a hurry and has just as good reason to regard himself as the exceptional person—there would be no getting about in the streets at all. But for the life of us we can't see why it should be necessary to use any argument whatever.

Our impression is that when a person, however humble or however important, blocks traffic by double parking in Main street, Manchester, he is subject to arrest. And our further impression is that the quicker the police begin to act toward these double parkers, important or otherwise, just as they do toward any other traffic law breaker and snake them into court the quicker they will succeed in breaking up a practice which, if it be permitted to continue, will very soon get out of hand and result in serious consequences.

In other words those people who won't play fair, either because of ignorance, ugliness or merely a sense of the exceptional, must be made to play fair.

MRS. MCCORMICK
 A categorical denial, signed by four of its five members, that the Senate Campaign Funds Investigating Company ever spied on Ruth Hanna McCormick, Republican candidate for the Senate from Illinois, that it ever tapped her telephone wires, ever ransacked her office or read her correspondence or was responsible for any of these acts, would seem to be conclusive. It hardly needed the added threat that further assertions of this kind by Mrs. McCormick or anybody else would be regarded as libelous. There is an intimation here that if newspapers give further publicity to Mrs. Hanna's charges they will be proceeded against. This is ill advised on the part of the committee. The newspapers will, of course, print anything Mrs. McCormick says, not in the least by way of gratuitous defiance of the committee but because what Mrs. McCormick says is news.

We are glad that the members of the committee were so emphatic in this latest denial. We do not agree with them that previous denials were emphatic enough. We never sympathized with Mrs. McCormick's methods; we think the Republicans of Illinois did badly by themselves when they nominated her; we would not be greatly surprised if she were defeated; we expect that if she wins she will never be seated.

The committee has at least taken a lot of wind out of her sails. It would have taken still more if it hadn't been foolish enough to talk about libel proceedings. That was silly.

A MIX-UP
 If the Chamber of Commerce hasn't already taken steps to rectify the fault in the dating of the dinner-meeting of the South Merchants Division on October 6, it would be an excellent idea to attend to that matter at once. It is to be presumed that the fixing upon that date was a sheer inadvertence, since on that evening is to be held the annual town meeting of Manchester voters for the discussion and adoption of the year's budget, an activity in which of course every alert business man will want to take part.

The Chamber of Commerce is supposed to maintain a date book to which all organizations in town are invited to refer in order to avoid conflicts of precisely this sort. We cannot think of any conflict more incongruous than the holding of one of its own gatherings on the night of the annual town meeting.

TWO BISHOPS
 When Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, arrived at New York from Brazil yesterday, reporters asked him for a statement in relation to the charges filed against him by four clergymen of his denomination. His reply was:
 "Where you find the Roman Catholic element you find opposition to the prohibition amendment."
 When Bishop E. Campion Acheson of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Connecticut was asked for his views on prohibition he said: "I have come back (from Europe) feeling that I should like to see the management of the liquor question put in the hands of the state and an appeal made to our wisest and best men to think out a plan that will satisfy good people who see the present law harmful and conducive to hypocrisy."

Here are the views of two Protestant Bishops. Which of the two is the thought of a temperate, warm hearted seker after the welfare of the race and which is the expression of a small mind is a question easily answered.

IN NEW YORK
 New York, Sept. 24.—Manhattan has a Main street, too, although few New Yorkers are aware of the fact.

And it's the shortest Main street in the world. It's only three blocks long and is tucked away in an out-of-the-way part of town.

Also, if you were to ask the average Manhattanite, you'd get the impression that "theater alley" is somewhere around 44th street. There is, to be sure, a Shubert alley thereabouts, where you'll see actors chorines and hangers-on gathering.

But New York's real theater alley is 'way down town in the Bowery belt. It dates from revolutionary days and has a theatrical ring when Edwin Booth was tramping the boards.

And speaking of Booth reminds me that, of all the youngsters and oldsters now engaged in writing pieces about the theater, the gent with the greatest collection of anecdotes in captivity is Kecey Allen, who pens for Women's Wear, the trade periodical.

For one reason or another, considerable importance is attached to the deanship of drama writing. Percy Hammond, I believe, is given such transient laurels as now he long to that field, although Allen has been attached to the theater for a greater period of time than several of the others put together.

In the first-night lobbies and about the lunch table he is among the kings of wisecrackers and gags. The boys and girls who turn out to jestful paragraphs listen humor, and he never fails them. I've seen him stop a dozen times in a dozen places, lean over some shoulder and, with an infallible cherbic grin, spring one of the newest stories. He is credited with but a small percentage of his contributions to the gags that circulate over the nation.

Recalling all the small towns in which I have worked, Kecey has often seemed to me the ideal small town editor. He has almost a genius for being liked and making friends.

At any rates, in the days of the old New York Clipper and the most famous of the old Broadway periodicals, Allen was an office boy and he recalls taking mail to the great Booth.

Not that the postal department wasn't on the job then as now.

But the Clipper maintained a department which attended to all mail of trouper on the road. Allen's first meeting with Booth was a bit stormy. It seems that Booth had engaged to play the leading role in a drama titled "Major Andre," and the revolutionary days figure was to be played by him.

Booth had not read the script. And he did not know that the play brought out all the traitorous characteristics attached to Andre. The letter delivered by young Allen acquainted him with some of the facts. Booth stormed his office in a rage. He all but threw the trembling office boy out of the place.

"A traitor—a traitor—Booth is asked to play a traitor," stormed the great actor.

And Allen fled.

He tells about the late Oscar Hammerstein, who brought opera to

WASHINGTON LETTERS
 By RODNEY DUTCHER
 NEA Service Writer

Washington, Sept. 30.—If they started laying off men at 40 years of age in the United States Senate as they do in industry, there would be no one left there except LaFollette of Wisconsin, who is 35, and Nye of North Dakota, who is 38. Tydings of Maryland is the only senator who is exactly 40 and he got that way last April.

If all senators were retired at 50, the depopulation would be almost as complete. Robinson of Indiana, Stetwer of Oregon, Vandenberg of Michigan and Baird of New Jersey are the only regular Republicans who come under that limit. Shipstead of Minnesota, Cutting of New Mexico, Wheeler of Montana and Dill of Washington are the only progressives under 50—except Nye and LaFollette. The Democrats this side of the half century mark are Black of Alabama, Steck of Iowa, Tydings, Harrison of Mississippi and Bratton of New Mexico.

That is, only 15 senators out of 96 are less than 50 years old.

The facts aforesaid might seem to indicate that Democrats are younger than Republicans and are, therefore, considerably younger than either, insofar as the Senate is concerned. And that's just the way it works out, assuming that your correspondent still knows how to add and divide.

The average age of a senator is approximately 50 years and eight months.

The average age of a Republican senator is about 62 years and two months.

The average age of a Democratic senator is about 59 years and six months.

The average age of 17 senators who can be counted in the progressive group is 53 years and nine months.

Youth Forges Ahead
 All of which leads to another theory, which seems to stand up under scrutiny, to wit: Democrats and progressives are both raising a more impressive crop of bright young men to take over leadership than are the regular Republicans.

Among the progressives, take young LaFollette and young Nye. LaFollette has already established himself, despite his extreme youth, as one of the outstanding senators from the point of ability and effectiveness. Nye is trying hard and may do the same; his prestige here will increase if he manages to worst smart Mrs. Ruth McCormick in their current duel this land before the Metropolitan was organized. Later the Metropolitan bought him out. But it appears that Hammerstein was always complaining of being hard up.

Once he retires Allen Hammerstein took a grand opera troupe to London.

"And what are you opening with?" he was asked.

"With debts, as usual," was the reply.

He said that postponement of the hunting season can be avoided only by extreme care on the part of the citizens in setting brush fires.

LUNCHES FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN
 Lunches follow the rules which I have just outlined, rather than if they consist of bad combinations. It is even better to give a child nothing but fruit, than to burden his little body with indigestible foods and bad combinations. The best plan, of course is to see that a child obtains a well balanced lunch of good quality and good combinations.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
 (Infected Fingernails)
 Question: H. G. writes: "For a year and a half I have been troubled with infected fingernails. Have tried several remedies but got only temporary relief. What do you advise?"
 Answer: You are starving for bone-building salts. The acidosis from which you suffer can be cured if you will use a liberal amount of green vegetables, in proper combination with proteins, whole grains, and other foods containing vitamins. Leave out all denatured foods, such as those made of white flour.

(Brussels Sprouts)
 Question: A. G. H. asks: "Is Brussels sprouts a healthful vegetable?"
 Answer: Brussels sprouts is a variety of cabbage and may be used as a non-starchy vegetable by certain people. Being of the cabbage family, they contain a considerable amount of allyl sulid (a gas-forming element) but if used sparingly, in combination with other vegetables, those with a strong digestion will be able to handle them without producing any flatulence.

(Bronchitis and Asthma)
 Question: T. R. writes: "I have suffered all my life with bronchitis and asthma, which are made worse whenever I get near goldenrod. How can I cure myself?"
 Answer: If you have suffered from bronchitis and asthma for so many years, the mucous membranes in your nose and throat are so inflamed that they are easily irritated by such a foreign substance as the pollen from the goldenrod. If you will remove the real cause, which lies in eating the wrong food, your nose and throat will soon get in such good condition that this foreign substance will no longer irritate.

SHERIDAN'S BIRTH

On September 30, 1751, Richard Brinsley Sheridan, famous British dramatist and statesman, was born in Dublin, Ireland.

He received his education at Harrow and later under private tutors. Just as he prepared for the study of law he fell in love with a professional singer, one Elizabeth Linley. He married her in 1773, after fighting a duel with an army officer to win her.

Devoting himself entirely to literature, Sheridan in 1775 produced his great play, "The Rivals," at Covent Garden. A year later, with the aid of his father-in-law, he became partner in the historic Drury Lane theater, for which he wrote "The School for Scandal" and "The Critic," one of the wittiest farces in the language.

In 1780, through the influence of Fox, Sheridan was elected to Parliament and soon became distinguished as a speaker on the side of the opposition. For his speeches against the American War, the Congress of the United States offered to present him with 200,000 pounds, but he declined to accept. Sheridan's fame is made secure by "The Rivals" and "The School for Scandal," which are among the best comedies in English since the Elizabethan age.

Otto Gray and His Oklahoma Cowboys Feature Tomorrow Night's Program-- Fine List of Gifts for Lucky Theatergoers

Don't fail to see Otto Gray and his Oklahoma Cowboys when they come galloping into town tomorrow on their gas bags. They come to honor Manchester with their first New England stage presentation remaining here for a two-day stay.

Unlike the ordinary vaudeville number, there is nothing commonplace about this splendid attraction. They are unique in every sense of the word so far as this section of the country is concerned. They made their fame out west in land where men are men. The Oklahoma Cowboys first gained fame on a national scale when the demand for their services brought them before the microphone on the radio.

This great group of entertainers will gallop into town tomorrow morning, not on their proverbial horse but in deluxe motor cars which have been fitted up as moving homes on wheels. The men are dressed in the cowboy garb of the wide-open spaces and carry as mascots two Arabian horses, a police dog and, would you believe it—a skunk, and a real live one at that—minus effects.

The programs which this famous band will give at the State Theater tomorrow afternoon and evening with a repetition the following day are described as "rootin' tootin' frolics" in the form of a radio rodeo with songs of the plains, crooning melodies, strummed on banjo, guitar and violin interspersed with most interesting tales of life on the Oklahoma prairies.

It's a treat you can't afford to miss.

The soldiers were ordered by Governor Bibb Graves to disperse the crowd after several hundred persons had congregated and were cutting a wire fence around the jail.

SPEED HAS AFFECTED ALL WALKS OF LIFE

This is an age of speed. Since the advent of motor transportation the whole country has torn along at a tremendous rate of speed, commercially and otherwise. Not so long ago in the days of horse-drawn vehicles, those that spent their week-ends and vacations at the shore resorted to planing, sailing and long trips it was to the shore! Now the average time by car to the nearest beaches is under two hours. Everything else that formerly depended on horses has been touched by the motor and speed—coal and ice deliveries, groceries, milk, bakery products, lumber and a long list added since gasoline superceded oats as the means of propulsion.

SPEAKERS IN MADRID SCORE THE MONARCHY

Madrid, Sept. 30.—(AP)—Republicans of Spain were today in the city, as fiery appeals of their leaders in the old bull ring here Sunday echoed throughout the land. Twenty thousand persons, ten city jammed the arena in a meeting made possible only a few days ago, with the lifting of the censorship and the ban on free speech. It was shipped to Atlanta today. The Walker Cup, emblematic of international amateur golf supremacy, has been retained by the United States Golf Association officers and never has been sent to an individual. Under the extraordinary circumstances attached to Jones winning the open and amateur open championships of the United States and the open and amateur championships of Great Britain it was decided to place the five cups in one group.

Two other occupants of the camp, George Fortier and George Hoy, escaped.

SENSE AND NONSENSE

A Motorist's Primer

A is for Auto, a boon that is real, except when a Ninny has hold of the wheel.

B is for Brake, and without it your car may send you kerofloppo to some distant star.

C is for Caution, not exercised by most folks, but demanded of "that other guy."

D is for Distant—the day when we'll drive to drive our machines as we'd have others drive.

E is for Ego, and O, but its nice to know one's a driver who needs no advice.

F is for Funny—a rollicking whizz; the half of the road in the center is his.

G is for Gone—its a sad word that serves to tell where they are who passed others on curves.

H is for Headstrong, descriptive of Wights having a raw disregard for other folks' rights.

I is for Ink, and on paper it tells what happened to Sapp, that they're tolling the bells.

J is for Jam—not the kind that you spread; the kind into which thoughtless drivers are led.

K is for Kibosh, for drivers who flout the rules of the road and cut in or out.

L is for Lock-up, the place you will end if liquor and gas you attempt to blend.

M is for Missus—not classed as an ill unless from the back seat she causes a spill.

N is for Noise—it deserves our full scorn; Oh, why are some drivers so fond of their horns?

O is for Oxen with brain presumed nil, but smarter than drivers who pass on a hill.

P is for Penches—a cause for alarm when Boy Friend endeavors to drive with one arm.

Q is for Question, which comes to our mind when uncautious drivers with license we find.

R is for Rough-neck and long though he roam it seems he most always leaves manners at home.

S is for Sap-head, hell-bent on his way, regardless of children engrossed in their play.

T is for Trouble, its lying in wait to give careless people the air or the gate.

U is for Us—here's the least we can do: You be careful of me; I'll be careful of you.

V is for Venom, inflaming the mind of drivers endangered by headlamps that blind.

W stands for the Wail of the

FLAPPER FANNY SAYS

If you're using a dial phone, one had turn deserves another.

Gink who wishes too late, he had just stopped to think.

X is for Ten—you can take off your hat and bow to the judge if you pay only that.

Y is for Yump—and the way some folks drive you'll yump and you'll yump, or you won't stay alive.

Z is for Zanny, the blundering cause of codes and restrictions, of rulings and laws.

When in a traffic jam, blow at others as you would have them blow at you.

I'm going to call my garage "The Half Way Inn."

Neighbor—Why? Because that's the way my wife parks the car.

The only advantage of living in a tourists camp is the knowledge that you don't have to stay there.

Jones—Isn't my auto a beauty? It cost sixteen thousand dollars.

Smith—Why, I didn't know autos ever cost that much.

Jones—Ah, it cost only five hundred, but I spent the rest in repairs.

ONCE UPON A TIME

Looking through his opera glass at a concert, Emil Ludwig, noted author, saw a strange girl, immediately fell in love with her, learned her identity and persuaded her to elope with him and become Frau Ludwig.

CHILD BURNED TO DEATH

Foxboro, Mass., Sept. 30 (AP)—Robert Riddle, 2-year-old son of Albert Lawrence Riddle, a Boston missionary, was burned to death today when fire destroyed the family's automobile camp. The fire was caused by explosion of a portable gasoline stove. Riddle succeeded in saving his wife and four other children from the burning automobile. The family was enroute to Albany, N. Y., and had parked here overnight.

WAS NOT DAYTIME

Boston, Sept. 30—(AP)—A difference of 13 minutes between the time sun set on Sept. 5 and the arrival of dry agents with "daytime" search warrant at the cigar store of Edward B. Carberry, School street, Worcester, gave Carberry his freedom today.

AL SIMMONS WINS

Chicago, Sept. 30—(AP)—Semi-official averages today revealed that Al Simmons of the Athletics won the 1930 American League batting championship from Lou Gehrig of the Yankees by two points, one of the closest races in the league's history.

THE TINYMITES

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

At Montreaux all the Tinies played out in the hotel yard and stayed up rather late that evening. It was beautiful outside. The moon smiled down from up above. Said Scouty, "This is what I love. Let's count the stars." And promptly, that is what each Tinnie tried.

"There are so many in the sky, I'm sure I cannot count that high," exclaimed wee Clowny suddenly. "I think I'll have to stop. The rest of you can go ahead, but I'll just take a rest instead. I'm going to watch one great big star and see if it will drop."

"It seems, at night, if it is clear that stars shoot round throughout the year. I've often seen one take a trip and it is heaps of fun." And then he winked up his brow and shouted, "Look! One's shooting now." The Tinymites all watched it and then they began to run.
