Weekend Recess Postpones Further Moves In Delicate Situation Between Presi- dent and Senate.

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A week-end recess served today to postpone further moves in the delicate situation between President Hoover and the Senate. Until next week also, was passed over the final cleanup of the administration unemployment and drought relief program, on which the two branches of Congress must get together.

The possibility still existed that President Hoover might again strike at his Congressional opponents somewhat like last Tuesday when he told the country what he thought of moves which interfere with his program. This prospect did not fail to stir uneasiness among his Senate supporters.

No Real Split

Senator Watson, of Indiana, the Republican leader, hastened to assert that there was no real division between his group and Mr. Hoover and that he had served no ultimatum in the request Thursday that the President shift funds from one project to another. The House has disagreed with all the Senate's amendments.

Senate Changes Bill

Besides increasing the bill's total to $118,000,000 the Senate knocked out the clause granting power to the President to shift funds from one project to another. The House has disagreed with all the Senate's amendments.

The drought bill, amended in committee to appropriate only $30,000,000 for loans, none of it applicable to food purchases, is to come up in the House Monday or Tuesday under the most stringent procedure the leaders can obtain. They are seeking to keep the Senate's $60,000,000 figure from getting tangled in the proceedings.

Reds in Control OF HAINAN ISLAND

Although behind the Senate in action on relief legislation the House is now two up in the supply bill score. To the billion dollar Treasury-Post Office appropriation sent to the Senate last week, the representatives late yesterday added the much smaller Interior Department measure.

EX-CONVICT GETS JOB AS A LAWYER

Released From Prison Where He Studied Law He Is About To Begin Practice.

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Roy H. Sloane, ex-collegian and ex-convict, who won his freedom by studying law in a prison cell and arguing his own case before the courts, has announced he would become an assistant to H. Thornton Banks, the lawyer who carried his plight to the Court of Appeals.

The Federal government, the State of New Jersey and the county of Westchester dropped five indictments for grand larceny against him yesterday, thus insuring his freedom after serving four years of a 17-year sentence, two and a half years of which were spent in solitary confinement and four months in the death house.

His Record

He was sentenced in March, 1927, to a ten-year term for stealing automobiles. The following October, prison authorities accused him of possessing a pair of brass knuckles and he was given an additional seven years.

In May, 1929, two other convicts confessed to stealing the cars and Sloane was acquitted of that charge. But the brass knuckles charge remained. Then he was accused of being a ringleader in a wholesale jewelry plot and was confined in the death house.

On last December 4, the Court of Appeals ruled that the brass knuckle charge was a misdemeanor, not a felony. Since the penalty was only a year, he had already paid the debt.

PREPARE FOR BATTLE

Madrid, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Royal Spanish infantry, cavalry and artillery swept out from Huesca today to meet in battle a strong revolutionary force entrenched at Ayerbe, 20 miles away. The result of the engagement there, it was thought, might foretell the future of the Spanish monarchy.

At Madrid the Cabinet sat most of the night, with the captain general of the First Military region, which comprises the Huesca area, present. When the session ended at 5 a. m., Leopoldo Mates, minister of interior, said:

AARON SLICK' WINS CROWD'S APPROVAL

Walther League Players Give Fine Presentative Here Last Evening.

He may have come from "Punkin Crick" in Oklahoma, but Aaron Slick, played by Emil Seelert, Jr., was one clever individual when it came to out-slicking city slicker.

In love, Aaron was not so fast. Those tender expressions emanating from the region of the heart were Aaron's undoing, and nothing but vague, incoherent stutters came forth when a real honest-to-goodness proposal to the Widow Rosy Berry, Martha's maid, was made.

However anxious the Widow Berry was to have Aaron forget his bashfulness and stammering and come to the point, there was one individual, Wilbur Merridew, city slicker, played by Clarence Freiheit, who was not so backward in his efforts to buy the widow's ranch.

The scene changed after the widow sold her farm, and the Widow Berry and Sis Riggs were located in a Chicago hotel.

All the parts in the delightful comedy were well taken showing the effects of studios rehearsing. After the curtain members of the cast and Miss Emily Kissman, the coach, were presented with bouquets of flowers.

It was the sixth performance of the play and the Rebekahs have improved it with every engagement.

The old-fashioned costumes of the players added much to the interest in last night's production. Miss Mary McLean played for the first time singing of lively tunes, and the references to the eligibility of many of the young men of the church as matrimonial prospects created no end of fun. Every one of the players had practically equal parts and every one was applauded for her work.

Miss Brookings Describes A Christmas In Africa

Roses and hot weather made the first Christmas in Africa of Anne Brookings, daughter of Mrs. Rosa T. Brookings, 141 Middle Turnpike, a strange experience.

At noon, after we had arranged some 300 gifts for eight country Sunday schools in the area around here, we went to a native Christmas tree in the village church." Miss Brookings reported following festivities last year. "In America you feast for a present. It isn't a joke—it represents a substantial gift, for it's a sort of promissory note telling the recipient that a real chicken will be delivered shortly. A leaf from a vegetable signifies the same thing, for often the product is not yet ripe.

The last word from Miss Brookings, writing from Umzumuzi, where she has been studying the Umbundu tongue, is that she feels as if she were living "right in the middle of the general highway, for a native path goes by on either side of the house. We have had visitors morning, noon and night selling everything from bead work to beer strainers.

"We have been in the baby business recently because a Zulu woman living near us was suddenly confronted with the problem of caring for three orphan neeces, one of whom was only ten days old. She already had four children of her own, with two adults beside herself, living in three tiny rooms and a cook house. When we first visited her we found the baby on a mat, covered with a large rug. The foster mother was feeding it corn gruel. First of all we stopped the baby's corn diet and substituted condensed milk. Then from a box with excelsior in it, we built a crude little bed. As winter was coming on, we tried to make a layette for the baby, which was a perfect darling, like a little brown doll, with a mass of dark silky curls which had not yet turned coarse and kinky. The father of these children is living, but said to be a good-for-nothing. He will probably sell these little girls when they are older as wives to some man who can pay the marriage 'lobola' or fee."

Sunday School Lesson

Conversion: Its Nature and Effect

The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for Dec. 14. "Conversion: Its Nature and Effect." Act. 22:3-15.

By WM. E. GILROY, D.D., Editor of the Congregationalist

When we speak of conversion we are apt to think of it too exclusively in terms of the transformation of the sinner into the saint. We think of a man or woman of notoriously evil course of life, whose sinfulness may have brought about degradation, who is suddenly arrested in this course of evil or ruin, and through the power of Christ brought to newness of life.

Text: Acts 22:3-15.

We may be thankful that the records of gospel triumph include many such evidences of the salvation that Jesus gives. But we may be thankful, also, that records such as this in our lesson show that the power of Christ is sufficient to effect other transformations than that from wickedness and moral laxity to goodness and consecration.

All sin is not included in crimes and immoralities. There are sins of the spirit that in their effect upon the individual and upon his fellow men are often almost as serious as the grosser sins of life. A bigot by his narrowness and prejudice may do much to defeat the forces of truth and bring sorrow and suffering to men and women of gentler and finer spirit.

Pride Causes Harm The man whose heart is consumed with spiritual pride may by that pride, even if he be professedly a good man, do much to hinder or overthrow the purposes of love; and the man whose soul is filled with ambition for power and with petty tyranny, though he may be very scrupulous concerning his outward observations of the moral law, may become in reality a scourge to his fellow men.

Here in our lesson we have the example of a man well trained in home and school—a man of moral intensity, anxious to do the right who had fought from the time of his earliest memories to live in all good conscience, and yet this man's intensity in some respects only made his life the more devastating, for it was intensity and earnestness exercised in the wrong direction; and despite his eagerness to obey the law, his narrowness and bigotry had brought him to the place where he had really been an accomplice in murder.

He had stood by and held the garments of those who stoned Stephen to death, and it may well have been that Paul had such experiences vividly in mind when he spoke of himself at a later time as the chief of sinners. What Paul needed was conversion, that is, a turning about and a finding of the right way and the true goal of life, and that is precisely what Paul found. When he met Christ on the way to Damascus and there shone around him a great light with the challenge, "Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me," the probability is that this final experience of conversion came after questioning and misgivings had already arisen in Paul's mind. The spectacle of Stephen with calm and gentle courage calling upon Jesus and saying, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit," was evidently not lost upon the youthful Paul. As he began to question the way, the purity of his motives, and the soundness of his actions, Paul was prepared for the voice that arrested him, that turned him from his course and brought him into the true way as a devout follower of Jesus Christ.

To this new Christian service he brought all the intensity, all the courage, all the consecration that had formerly characterized his life. The zeal that he had shown in persecuting the Christians and in dragging them before the magistrates became now the zeal with which he suffered persecution, and the zeal with which he bore every burden and every privation in the course of his life to his Lord. Conversion brought into his life the sense of the right way and the true goal. Where prejudice and bigotry had ruled before, love became now the ruling power of his life, enlarging his heart, enlightening his mind, making him one of the noblest and greatest figures in all history.

I am verily a man which am a Jew, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel, and taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God, as ye all are this day.

And I persecuted this way unto the death, binding and delivering into prisons both men and women. As also the high priest doth bear me witness, and all the estate of the elders: from whom also I received letters unto the brethren, and went to Damascus, to bring them which were there bound unto Jerusalem, for to be punished.

And it came to pass, that, as I made my journey, and was come nigh unto Damascus about noon, suddenly there shone from heaven a great light round about me.

And I fell unto the ground, and heard a voice saying unto me, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? And I answered, Who art thou, Lord? And he said unto me, I am Jesus of Nazareth, whom thou persecutest.

And they that were with me saw indeed the light, and were afraid; but they heard not the voice of him that spake to me. And I said, What shall I do, Lord? And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed for thee to do.

And when I could not see for the glory of that light, being led by the hand of them that were with me, I came into Damascus. And one Ananias, a devout man according to the law, having a good report of all the Jews which dwell there, Came unto me, and stood, and said unto me, Brother Saul, receive thy sight. And the same hour I looked up upon him. And he said, The God of our fathers hath chosen thee, that thou shouldest know his will, and see that Just One, and shouldest hear the voice of his mouth.

For thou shalt be his witness unto all men of what thou hast seen and heard.

And I stood up, and said unto him, Lord, I have seen thee, and have heard thy voice, which thou spakest to me, when thou stoodest by me, and thou hast sent Ananias to call me, and thou hast said that I should be thy witness unto all men.

And he said, Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord Jesus Christ.

And he laid his hands on me, and I received sight, and I arose, and I was baptized. And I returned to Damascus, and I abode with Ananias three days. And he called for some of the brethren, and with them I kept company seven days.

And he departed, and I remained alone. And I was very wroth, because that I had seen him, and that he had laid his hands on me, and I had not received sight. And I consulted with them, and they said unto me, He hath seen the Lord, and he hath spoken of him, and he hath said that he would be thy witness unto all men.

And I returned to Damascus, and I abode with Ananias three days. And he called for some of the brethren, and with them I kept company seven days. And he departed, and I remained alone. And I was very wroth, because that I had seen him, and that he had laid his hands on me, and I had not received sight.

REAL VALUES

BY GEORGE HENRY DOLE International Sunday-School Lesson Text, Dec. 14. I count all things but loss for the excellency of the knowledge of Christ Jesus my Lord.—Phil. 3:8.

In the Lord are all the things of which the angels and the men and the beasts are made. He is the Father of the Fatherless, the Creator of the created, the Giver of life to the living, the Sustainer of the sustained, the Redeemer of the redeemed, the Judge of the judged, the King of the kings, the Lord of the lords, the God of the gods, the Father of the fathers, the Father of the Fatherless, the Creator of the created, the Giver of life to the living, the Sustainer of the sustained, the Redeemer of the redeemed, the Judge of the judged, the King of the kings, the Lord of the lords, the God of the gods, the Father of the fathers.

with the splendor of God that they were images of Him. Read in Scripture the repeated descriptions of angels, faces shining as the sun, eyes like lightning, garments of radiance, feet like brass heated in a furnace. These Scripture descriptions are not ecstatic imaginings. They are symbolic facts. If the Lord's Divine Human appeared similar upon the mount of transfiguration, how must a man's soul in the image and likeness of God appear when in the spiritual world and filled with the glory of God? You, my reader, were created for that glory and splendor. You can attain it. Win Christ, and you will have it. But that eternal splendor is nothing in itself. It is but an outward appearance of values within.

The disciples recognized that Christ is all. They saw it so clearly that to suffer for Him was a joy, and to die for Him was glorious. We can have the same incentives. The first step is to know, the second is to acknowledge, and the third is to have faith and live in it. Thereupon the Lord will reveal Himself as the all and all of human desire.

from such a weapon. The slowest moving rifle bullet we ever knew anything about made a good hard smack when it hit anything hard and gave us the notion that a rifle of any sort had considerable vigor. Yet there must be such a thing as a slow-motion, not to say an anaemic or feeble rifle, because always the reporters tell you about the rifle in the story being high-powered. Anyway these men had high-powered rifles, so probably everything will be all right.

Also we have been noting for several years that the bandits always have a high-powered car. They go "roaring" through the town, shooting as they go. The city is thrilling. And which permits us to learn that a high-powered car is one that roars. Probably we should never have known that if it had not been for the constant roaring of the high-powered cars in the bandit stories. Of course we may have our suspicions that the reporter sometimes doesn't know exactly what the horsepower of the car's engine was, nor yet what made it roar, but we have to take his word for it that it was both high and roaring.

Meantime, this writer wishes to disclaim all responsibility for the future use of the compound particular adjective "high-powered" in this newspaper. It has come to be one of the most meaningless bits of decorative garb that ever afflicted the news columns of a nation. But if reporters weren't permitted to use it they would probably all leave, scarce as jobs are.

The landlord, the butcher, the baker, figure in his scheme of things as part-owners of every dollar he gets hold of. Likely enough if his family is as big as the farmer's, he has no net income at all. Yet the agriculturalist, without pondering very deeply on the subject, seems him able to pay more taxes than most farmers.

If the farm organizations can think up a fairer or more reasonable method of raising public revenues than through the general property tax let them go to it. There are at least a million things to be said against the present system. But in order to make their position tenable on the grounds of veracity, let them always be prepared to include in their incomes an honest valuation on the part of their living which comes directly from the farm—and not at the prices they get but at the prices they would have to pay if they were not farmers.

BY RODNEY DUTCHER

Washington, Dec. 13.—There is one Senator here who will have almost no time at all to make any large marks on the pages of legislative history. He was never in the Senate before and after the present short session is over he won't be there any more. This Senator is Ben Williamson of Kentucky known as "Uncle Ben" out home, who was elected for this session only.

Uncle Ben isn't perturbed by the fact that he only gets three months in office, whereas nearly all other Senators have at least six years. In fact, it suits him better that way. One thing he never did was yearn for political office. He wasn't attracted by the prospect of serving those three months, either. Now that his friends have persuaded him and elected him and now that he's here, he will not seek to make his brief senatorial career as that of a meteor flashing across the sky. He will just try to "go along" and be a good Democratic Senator and do whatever little he can toward getting legislation that will afford relief made necessary by the depression.

He's Wealthy

Williamson has a certain charm about him which is lacking in the makeups of most of the politicians who break into Congress. For many years his great hobby has been the aid of crippled children and the nearest approach he has ever made before to holding political office has been in serving on the Kentucky Commission for Crippled Children, the State Board of Charity and Correction and the board of directors of the International Society for Crippled Children.

In Ashland he built up a large hardware business which does about $1,500,000 worth of business a year and through his efforts for children and other public activities he became very popular in his state. He had participated in no more than local politics, but Kentucky Democrats figured that his popularity would balance and help the ticket, so they finally persuaded Uncle Ben that he could leave his hardware business long enough to go to Washington for the short term.

He is tall and thin, appearing almost cadaverous, but his most conspicuous feature is a kind and friendly smile which, even with a mild voice and a retiring disposition. He is 66 years old and dresses most conservatively.

For 44 years he has been selling light and heavy hardware. He is a Republican.

The drought strikes Senator Williamson as something in which Congress especially should interest itself. He has a happy belief that Congress will do something "adequate" about that.

"What is involved," he explained. "Even water supplies have been very seriously affected. Suffering is going to be more acute this winter. But I think Congress can be depended upon to supply prompt and adequate relief."

Search For Cripples

"Uncle Ben" is going to be happy if he can help do something for the crippled children this session. A bill designed to stimulate more work on their behalf may be introduced, in which case he will plug for it as hard as he knows how. He enjoys telling about what his commission has done in Kentucky, but the largest problem we have is finding the cripples," he explains. "They're scattered here, there and yonder. But we have tried to get people interested in them and everyone who knows of a crippled child is supposed to produce that child for our clinics. We send out field workers, always graduate nurses, through the territory which the traveling clinic will serve, to beat the bushes in advance. These workers undertake to locate the children through various local and county groups, trying in every way to make the community aware of the clinic and its possibilities. Then when the doctor and nurse come to the clinic we virtually command people with automobiles to bring the afflicted children in. The whole work, involving co-operation of the state agency with communities, is aided greatly by the pleasure anyone gets out of finding a crippled child and seeing him put on his feet. Our orthopedic surgeons put the children in hospitals or on waiting lists or do whatever they can and we have had a very gratifying percentage of cures and corrections. The Kentucky method is now pretty well known over the country."

"People Want Change"

Williamson was one of those Democratic Senators who didn't follow Leader Joe Robinson's course in backing the immediate seating of Jim Davis of Pennsylvania over the protest of the T. Y. campaign funds investigating committee. But that didn't mean that Uncle Ben was rebellious. He just thought it would be a good idea to follow the suggestion of the committee which knew so much more about such things than he did. As a matter of fact, he has always admired the erstwhile secretary of labor.

The Senator was asked how he interpreted the election results which were especially disastrous for Republicans in Kentucky.

"The people," he replied, "were tired of the way things were going and thought a change was due."

Williamson succeeded Senator John H. Robinson, Republican, who was appointed to succeed Senator Sackett, who had been made ambassador to Germany. He was succeeded by Marvel M. Logan, Democrat elected for the next six-year term, who is a judge of the Kentucky court of appeals.

LIFE BY KIND!
 Life, be kind and let me run Another race against the sun— Run rash-hearted once again Through the thunder and the rain— To the backing rainbow's end, Where the trails of longing blend. Life, be kind and let me pass! See the shadows on the grass! Life, release me for the sake Of the promise that I make: I will die three deaths for you— One to render honest due, One for pardon, one for rue. —Charles Oluf Olson.

BLACK SEED (From Opportunity)
 World-wide dusk Of dear dark faces Driven before an alien wind, Scattered like seed From far-off places Growing in soil That's strange and thin, Hybrid plants In another's garden, Flowers In a land That's not your own, Of the white-faced gardeners— Tell them to leave you alone! —Langston Hughes.

SPECTRUM (From Voices)
 What brain will not brim over Its cup of bone and spill On city street and clover The color of its will?

The wash of sun on walls, That leaves no stain behind; How similarly falls This essence of the mind. —Kenneth Slade Ailing.

EPITAPH FOR A POET (From The Bookman)
 He who was devoured By fierce and fragile sound, He, whose brain was driven To fiery and frozen word, Is now become more silent Than the throat of a fallen bird And quieter than the dark Fir-shadowed ground. —Frances M. Frost.

PROPHECY
 I shall not die in bed— Death would be scared to Pajamas that I wear To match my flaming hair.

I shall not die at sea— Too seasick I would be To grasp Death by the hand To reach the Promised Land.

I shall not die at work, Which I too often shirk. And I have not the time To earn a death sublime.

I shall not die of love— I don't get enough of Impassionate devotion To merit such a notion.

I shall not die of hate— I have no wife or mate On whom to vent my spleen And cause a change of scene.

I shall not die at all— For, when Death comes to call, I'll lock the front door tight, Sneak out the rear in flight. —Moses Dean.

WHEN AUTUMN GOES (From The N. Y. Times)
 I do not need an hour-glass To note when sunset seasons pass Accompanied by sneezing, and running When skies grow dull and chill winds blow That Autumn's gone, for then I see The subtle, changing mystery.

When sweetgum's scattered stars of gold Burn out as embers spent and old, And oaks in flagrant, crimson blaze Steal somber hues from brower days; When flames of goldenrod are spent In dimming, hazy firmament, The burnished, scarlet, golden gleam Of Autumn passes as a dream.

But this shall be my recompense, When Autumn long has traveled hence. I shall remember her career Of wind-blown, gold-red loveliness. —Mary B. Ward.

CAT CHASING LEAVES (From The London Spectator)
 The orange cat spins in the wind, Paws pouncing, where the leaves in a whirlpool Pirouette on frosted grass.

And all around, stealthily, Over the luminous laurels of the avenue Descends winter twilight:

Till time, in the clock of mind, Spins pivotless as a wandering crisp leaf

That rustles here and there, and to and fro In the universe of a cat careless of the creeping dark. —Hamish MacLaren.

HOLD-UP NO JOKE

Russell, Ky., Dec. 13.—(AP)—One man is dead here today, another is believed dying and a third is nursing bullet wounds, all because they refused to believe a hold-up man was not a practical joker.

About midnight last night an armed man entered a restaurant and commanded Amos Johnson, 45, and Thurman Blake, 25, owners of the place, to "stick 'em up."

Thinking the man was joking, Johnson and Blake laughed and attempted to wrestle with him. Freeing himself, the intruder shot his way out of the restaurant, killing Johnson and wounding Blake and George Meadows, 42, restaurant customer. Physicians say Blake will die.

PUT THE PLAN OVER

It might be well for Manchester people who believe that the town should proceed at this time with an extra program of public works construction, in order to help ease the unemployment situation, to attend the special town meeting called for next Wednesday evening, prepared to vote for the $50,000 appropriation that will be asked for by the selectmen.

In the larger view there is, of course, little room for objection to such undertaking as this; because in the long run Manchester must share inevitably in the general prosperity or the general depression of the country, whichever we are to have, and it is only by a general engagement in public works, all over the land, that employment is to be found for the jobless and only through such employment and the buying power it creates that general business and industry can be normally resumed. The money put into public works is the priming for the pump without which the waters of business activity cannot be made to flow. Wherefore the proposed modest program planned in this town receives such justification from the circumstances that it ought, it would seem, to appeal to everybody.

Nevertheless it will not appeal to everybody. There are a good many people, some of them worthy and decent folk enough, who can never see quite the length of their own noses in such matters as this. Their vision is restricted to their own tax bills and their own individual concerns. Some of these folks will be almost sure to oppose the public works appropriation. They will attend the town meeting and vote against the relief measure. That is to be expected.

If there should be a small meeting it is entirely possible that there might be enough of such opponents to defeat the plan. That would be deeply unfortunate because it would make it impossible for the selectmen to provide a winter's work for a large number of self respecting citizens and beyond shadow of doubt throw many of them, with their families, upon the support of the town as objects of charity. If this unhappy event were to transpire the objecting taxpayers would be very little if any better off in the long run, for the town would have to spend almost as much money to maintain these jobless men and their families in idleness as it would have paid them for self respecting labor.

It will readily be seen that if the town is to acquire itself with credit and incidentally get full value in return for what money it spends it will be necessary for those who favor the program to attend Wednesday's meeting and vote for the appropriation. The project must not by any possibility be allowed to go by default.

GENEROSITY

With a pious gesture the New York milk distributors, "extremely gratified to help those feeling the pinch of hard times," reduced the price of milk a cent a quart.

Item: The consumption of milk had fallen off a million quarts a week owing to the inability of the people to pay the price.

Item: Last August the distributors put up the price of milk a cent a quart.

Item: At the same time they put up the price paid to the producer three-quarters of a cent, adding a quarter of a cent to their own profit.

Item: When the retail price was reduced the other day the price paid to the producer was reduced the whole cent.

Item: The distributors are now selling milk at the same price as last July and paying a quarter of a cent less.

Item: Blessed be the price makers for they shall inherit the earth—or most of it.

WAGE LEVELS

Dr. Gus W. Dyer, professor of economics at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, is the first person in his position, so far as we know, who has had the temerity to attack the theory that prosperity can be restored by keeping up the wage level to its boom altitude. A few words of the speech in which he made the daring assertion that that theory is "the biggest piece of economic bunk ever proclaimed" were sent out over the Associated Press wires. Relatively very few newspapers printed them.

It is a very unpopular thing among business men to suggest that a determination to maintain price levels in times of depression is a determination to perform the impossible and that the longer it is adhered to the longer will be the period of depression. It is equally unpopular among wage earners to suggest that the effort to maintain the boom wage level is merely a device for keeping up prices. But that is what Prof. Dyer says.

There is a lot of food for thought packed in a short paragraph of the Dyer speech synopsis:

But they say keep wages up in order to maintain buying power. How much is the buying power of five million men with nothing to do? If that theory were true, why not double wages and have a boom? It's not to the interest of labor to hold wages up and keep people out of work. No man is going to invest during a depression at prosperity prices. Millions would go into the building business tomorrow if prices were down where the investor could build at 10 to 20 per cent below prosperity prices and be sure of a profit when prosperity comes back.

Yet when the Senate passed the public improvements appropriation of $115,000,000 it did so with an injurious amendment tacked on which provides that wages on any job must be equal to the highest paid in the locality. This means, of course, that a relatively few lucky workmen will absorb the wage funds of the building trades in many parts of the country, may have the privilege of looking on with empty stomachs.

IN NEW YORK

New York, Dec. 13.—As a confirmed resident of Greenwich Village, I have long been shedding a tear for its fast-slipping glamour.

Time was when the Village was associated with artistic high life, and all that sort of fol de rol. Movies laid their plots in this quarter and fictioneers wrote of love among the models, poets and what-nots.

But the only sign of life I have observed from that section in recent moons was contained in a letter which reached my desk this morning, informing me that some historical society was unwrathing a tablet in Minetta Lane.

And Viola is still queen of the Pepper Pot. This is fast becoming a landmark of Fourth street. So is Barney Gallant.

Funny story—that of the Pepper Pot. The tourists and the collegiate adores it. It has what they choose to call atmosphere. And a pleasant spot it is.

Well, once upon a time there was a movie actress by the name of Viola Sherlock. Her husband was, and is, Dr. Carlyle Sherlock. Years ago, when this place had been transformed from cow barn, Viola and her husband took to inviting their theatrical and writing friends to the place. There was no intention at the time of making it a general restaurant for all comers. It was frequented almost entirely by actors and actresses. But it began to attract attention of outsiders.

Even now, in their perch above the cafe, the Sherlocks hold entertainments that attract scores of the theatrical who's who.

Just alongside is the oldest of the Village rendezvous—the Samovar. Here are tables over which have gathered artists and near artists and artists who never could have been artists and never will be. There have been poets and near poets and poets who couldn't rhyme if they die for it. There are low hanging ceilings and venerable odors, which are pleasant to the nostrils of the sight-seer and the regular as well.

Yes, a bit of the old Village is left. But for the most part, it is made to order for the tourists and the natives who roam about looking for "color."

MacDougal street, for instance, will never be quite the same what with the passing of the old Provostown Theater—pioneer of the Little Theater movement in America.

Skyscrapers rise... artists move to cheaper districts... Jefferson Market jail becomes a modernistic bit of construction—and the Village ceases gradually to be the Village.

MEASLES

Although measles is principally a disease of childhood, adults are sometimes attacked. The exact cause of measles is unknown since, as with the common cold, no germ causing it has yet been discovered. It is, however, quite apparent that measles is associated with a definite form of toxemia. If properly cared for, measles leaves no bad after effects but if improperly, it may lead to some serious sequelae.

The first indications of measles are symptoms of a catarrhal nature, accompanied by sneezing, and running at the nose, redness of the eyes and lids, congestion of the throat and tonsils, and finally a slight fever suddenly rises, reaching about 104 degrees. This extreme fever usually persists until the rash breaks out on the skin, and as soon as the body is entirely covered with the measles eruptions the fever begins to subside and the symptoms to abate.

The rash appears first on the forehead and behind the ears but rapidly spreads over the entire body. It appears that much poisonous substance is discharged through the skin, producing the rash, and after this elimination has taken place, the symptoms subside and the red rash gradually becomes more pink and finally disappears.

In measles as in any other fever or eruptive disease, no so-called nourishing or starchy food should be given the patient. Plenty of drinking water should be used, and the juice of several oranges or grapefruit should be taken daily. The citrus fruit juice seems to have a stimulating effect in producing a quicker elimination through the skin and consequently recovery takes place more rapidly.

Many people make the mistake of feeding the one who is sick with a fever, such heavy foods as eggs, milk, meat, broths, etc., but this is a very serious mistake and usually leads to the gravest complications.

During the acute crisis of an eruptive fever the digestion of food practically ceases and everything placed in the stomach at this time will very likely only ferment and putrefy, producing very serious toxemia.

If parents only realized how many children have been killed from the mistaken idea that feeding them tasty food during a fever is a kindness, there would be very few deaths from any of the children's diseases.

From the very beginning of this disease, the patient should be given tepid sponge baths at least every two hours during the day, and an enema morning and evening. As soon as the rash begins to disappear the skin may be treated with applications of milk of magnesia after the sponge baths. This will counteract the acid irritations which are being thrown out through the skin and is very soothing to the patient. When the irritation has disappeared, these frequent baths may be discontinued. The intake of food should be kept at the minimum for a few weeks, and there will be less chance of developing the catarrhal troubles

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS (Bright's Disease)

Question: E. J. P. asks: "Is Bright's Disease fatal, or do people with it live as long as the average person? What are the symptoms?"

Answer: Many people who discover they have Bright's Disease adopt better habits of living to cure it or, in any case, often live a good many years after this disease is discovered. Incipient Bright's Disease is very difficult to diagnose and almost impossible for the patient to ever diagnose. It requires a very complete physical examination, including an examination of the blood pressure, urinalysis, etc.

(Lime)

Question: H. F. M. asks: "What foods contain lime, and of what use is lime in the human body?"

Answer: Lime is one of the most valuable minerals in the body and goes to make up a large part of the bony structure. All vegetables contain some lime, the nonstarchy vegetables being particularly rich in this element.

(Meat Proteins)

Question: J. H. writes: "Some people claim that in contrast to vegetable proteins, meat and flesh proteins contain uric acid and encourage the growth of the putrefactive bacteria in the colon. Please give your view on the subject."

Answer: The use of a normal amount of meat does not have a harmful effect and does not encourage excessive putrefaction in the colon. Those troubled with constipation are the most injured by the use of too much protein, whether it is meat or vegetable protein. The so-called uric acid theory has been quite well exploded, and many physicians now realize that the greatest uric acid poison comes from the retention of the patient's own uric acid which is formed from the burning up of waste products in the body. Compared to this the small amount of uric acid in the meat is of no consequence.

"HIGH-POWERED"

We are rejoiced to learn from a Hartford contemporary that the three West Hartford men who have started for the Maine Woods to reenact for the benefit of a sheriff the scenes preceding the disappearance of a companion some weeks ago carried high-powered rifles with them. We had been afraid that if they took rifles at all they would be low-powered ones. It would have been terrible if the rifles hadn't had plenty of pep. Imagine three hunters trying to illustrate certain woodland events with nothing but low-powered rifles to work with. It might have gummed the whole investigation.

To be sure we have never seen a rifle so low powered that we cared to try to catch the bullets it fired. And we have always had a sort of impression that the grooves in the barrel that constitute the difference between a rifle and a musket gave quite a kick to any projectile fired

FARM INCOMES

The position being taken by farm organizations in Connecticut in favor of substituting income taxes in place of the general property taxes is one which, in due time, will no doubt receive amplification as well as consideration.

It is entirely possible that some of the enthusiasm for income taxes as a substitute for property taxes which seems to have been growing among the farming population is due to forgetfulness of a certain fact. The farmer is, perhaps, somewhat given to contemplating income in terms of dollars and cents only. If he takes in, in money, a net of $1,500 a year, he thinks of himself as being a fifteen hundred dollar a year man and as an income tax payer—or exempt—on that basis; while the city dweller on a $3,500 year salary he thinks of as a thirty-five hundred dollar a year man and income tax payer. Yet it is entirely possible and frequently is a fact that the farmer's net income is the larger of the two. The city man's quart of milk costs him twenty cents in money. The farmer's costs him nothing whatever out of his cash income. The city man cannot have a potato, a dish of strawberries, a hard-times apple, without using part of his salary.

TABACCO PRICES

Raleigh, N. C., Dec. 13.—(AP)—North Carolina tobacco farmers received an average of $7.53 per hundred pounds less for tobacco sold this year prior to December 1 than they did a year ago and sold almost 15,500,000 pounds more during the period.

The monthly summary of the state-federal crop reporting service issued today, shows a 1930 average of $13.90 per hundred pounds as compared with a 1929 average of $21.43 per hundred. Total season sales to December 1, 1929 were 400,983,845 pounds. Sales to the same date this year aggregated 415,481,866 pounds.

Watford City, N. D., Dec. 13.—(AP)—The recovery of four bodies, three of them from a grave dug in the floor of a farm barn, today led county authorities to assert they were close to a solution of the mysterious disappearance of a family of six near Schafer last February.

After yesterday's proceedings had ended, Bannon called his mother, a minister and his attorney and asked Sheriff C. A. Jacobson to take him to the farm. In a plea of refusal there, he told the sheriff, the body of the baby would be found. It was.

Communists Force Closing Of All Russian Churches

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of five stories on conditions in Soviet Russia today, obtained in interviews from Dr. Thomas S. McWilliams, professor of religious education of Western Reserve University, Cleveland, O., who recently returned from a tour of that country.

BY BRUCE CATTON Staff writer for NEA Service and The Herald

(Copyright 1930, NEA Service, Inc.) The church in Soviet Russia is having quite as tough a time of it as is generally reported.

However, active persecution is not nearly as much responsible for this as public apathy toward religion under Soviet rule. Bound up with it, too, is the old axiom about reaping what one sows.

Dr. Thomas S. McWilliams, professor of religious education in Western Reserve University, Cleveland, O., paid especial attention to the state of religion on his recent tour of Russia. He carefully studied the situation and found that the church in Russia today is almost moribund. He declares, however, that it is not fair to assess this situation except in connection with its proper historical background.

"To begin with," he says, "there is little question that the old Orthodox Russian church is getting just about what was coming to it. Old Orthodox Church was ally of the czar, under the old regime, favored on the czar. It had great wealth and power. It acquired in tyranny, and it gave out a poor sort of religion.

"It was not greatly concerned with philanthropy, or with a better philosophy of life, or with ameliorating the condition of its people. It was a church of ritual. It offered the Russian people gorgeous ceremonies—and little else.

"Now the present rulers of Russia—the Communists—were brought up on Karl Marx, who was a militant atheist. Consequently, because of these Marxist teachings, and because the old church before the revolution was what it was, they are making a bitter war on religion. They fight all religion. They fight the faith of Catholics, Protestants, Jews, Buddhists and Moslems impartially. In the schools and in many churches you will see great posters of anti-religious propaganda.

"I remember one such placard on a wall in Moscow. It showed Red soldiers kicking off of the globe the pope, the capitalists—and God Almighty.

"Lunacharsky, the commissar for education, recently remarked that the presence in some schools of 'believing' teachers was a disgrace. All such teachers, he said, should be replaced by atheists as soon as possible. That is a sample of the government attitude.

Churches Allowed, but All but Worship Barred. "Very few churches function as churches any more. The constitution of Russia, to be sure, guarantees freedom of religion; but that constitutional guarantee is very misleading.

"The government has cut the ground out from under the churches by forbidding any religious organization to take part in any educational, recreational or philanthropic work. Thus no church can have so much as a Sunday school picnic for its children. It can't have missionary societies or aid societies. It can't hold outings for its members. It can't even have Sunday school classes.

"The church work, in fact, is reduced to the bare church service itself. And even then the priest or preacher has to be very careful. If, in his sermon, he says anything that can be interpreted as a reflection on the present government, he is apt to find himself in serious trouble. I know of one Lutheran minister who is in Siberia because, in some sermon, he said something at which some government official took offense.

Cathedrals Now Used For Other Purposes

"I saw far more Russian churches devoted to secular purposes than were in use for church purposes. In an average town where, before the revolution, there were half a dozen churches there will today be one; and it will be attended by a handful of old women. Many of the former churches are now being used as schools, museums and the like.

"From that example you can see what the situation is. There is persecution and there is public apathy. "Undoubtedly the church in Russia is paying for the sins of the old Orthodox church. I am inclined to think that most of the Russian people had lost their religion before the revolutionists suppressed the churches."

There is little religious enthusiasm in the country. Dr. McWilliams found a species of substitute which is attracting many ardent young people—communism. The Communist party in Russia today has 1,500,000 members; and the reason it does not have more is that it is so hard to get into and so hard to stay in after one has been accepted.

Its members are the religionists of Russia today. Their enthusiasm is like a religious enthusiasm. When they join, they must explicitly repudiate all other religions in every form.

Strict Allegiance Is Required by Soviets "To join the Communist party," says Dr. McWilliams, "one must prove that one has an almost fanatical devotion to the cause. One must pledge absolute obedience. If a Communist in Moscow is suddenly ordered to go to Siberia, or Turkistan, or indeed anywhere else on the face of the earth, to carry out some mission for the party, he must go and go at once, without asking any questions.

"Periodically, too, there is a systematic sifting-out of the back-sliders, the Communist whose enthusiasm has weakened. Whenever the party officials find any member with individualistic tendencies—a man, perhaps, who has amassed a bit of private capital—they throw him out of the party. If his luke-warmness seems to be extensive, he is apt to be shot.

"But this is not the whole of it. Below the Communist party there is the Union of Communist Youth, with 2,000,000 members—a sort of preparatory school. Below this there are the Young Pioneers with 1,500,000 members. Below this are the Octobrists, an organization of Communist children aged eight to 10 years. All of these organizations have processions, banners, bands, picnics, encampments and so on, and all are just as enthusiastic as the adult Communists."

Pictures and the Radio Educate Illiterate Masses

The violent anti-religion posters displayed everywhere by the Soviet government—showing priests being trampled down on the masses—are all a part of the program of visual and auditory "education" necessarily undertaken in a nation where millions cannot read or write. Consequently, they must see or hear, and in this program pictures and messages by means of the radio play a most important part.

Some of this education even extends to propaganda, for it is hard to tell where education leaves off and propaganda begins. It all fits in with the great system of organized propaganda which the Soviet government is using to further its cause and about which more will be told tomorrow.

TOMORROW: The government in Soviet Russia and the prospects for the future.

BELIEVE YOUTHS ROBBED 50 NEW ENGLAND STORES

Boston, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Police were searching today for the ninth and supposedly last member of an alleged gang of safe crackers, robbers, and hold-up men, who are believed to have operated throughout New England on a wholesale scale. An eighth arrest was made yesterday in Cambridge by Boston police inspectors.

Three youths were taken in all in Cambridge yesterday, one as he left a pool room, one as he left a moving picture theater, and the third as he left work. They gave their names as Alfred Sartory, 25; Arthur Bennett, 26, and Hazen James, 24. Sartory gave a Boston address and Bennett and James addresses in Cambridge.

The alleged gang, police say, has committed more than 50 breaks in New England during the past two months. Four youths were arrested in the Brighton section of Boston Tuesday. A fifth was arrested in Brighton Wednesday.

The first four youths arrested were held in $10,000 each after charges of breaking and entering and larceny had been lodged against them. Their cases were continued until December 27.

SEND TENT BY PLANE

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 13.—(AP)—Radio, airplane, telephone, and telegraph were enlisted today in efforts to aid two pneumonia sufferers in a hospital at Pasadena, Calif. The hospital authorities telegraphed a firm manufacturing tents here to dispatch a plane to Pasadena by airplane. A plane large enough to transport the apparatus was not immediately available and a request for a ship was sent by telephone to Kansas City. J. W. Brennan, eastern division traffic manager of the Trans-Continental and Western Air, Inc., advised by radio that a suitable plane was available at Harrisburg, Pa.

CANADA AND THE U. S. DISCUSS AIR ROUTES

Ottawa, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Preliminary plans to establish air lines connecting Canada and the United States with Europe and Asia were announced today after a conference of post office officials of the United States and Canada.

The first step was taken with a decision for an aerial link between Winnipeg and St. Paul and Minneapolis. Arrangements also were made for a 42-hour passenger and mail service between Calgary and Miami.

P. T. Collican, assistant deputy postmaster general in Canada, and W. Irving Glover, assistant postmaster general of the United States, said the proposed Calgary-Miami line is subject to approval of their department heads. It would bring the two cities 90 hours closer together.

While the details of the Winnipeg-St. Paul schedule were being worked out, officials also discussed a more ambitious scheme to develop a route from Calgary through Fort McMurray into Alaska and thence into Asia. It was agreed that unless Canada and the United States join in development of an Asiatic route, a few years might bring serious competition from Russia.

TO FREE AMERICAN

Concepcion, Chile, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The Appellate court martial today approved the release of the American aviator, Reed Smith, who was arrested on charges of participating in the recent revolutionary attempt.

Smith and another American flier, Edward O. De Larm, of San Francisco, were arrested together, but De Larm escaped and made his way to Buenos Aires in a 500-mile trip during which he endured considerable hardship.

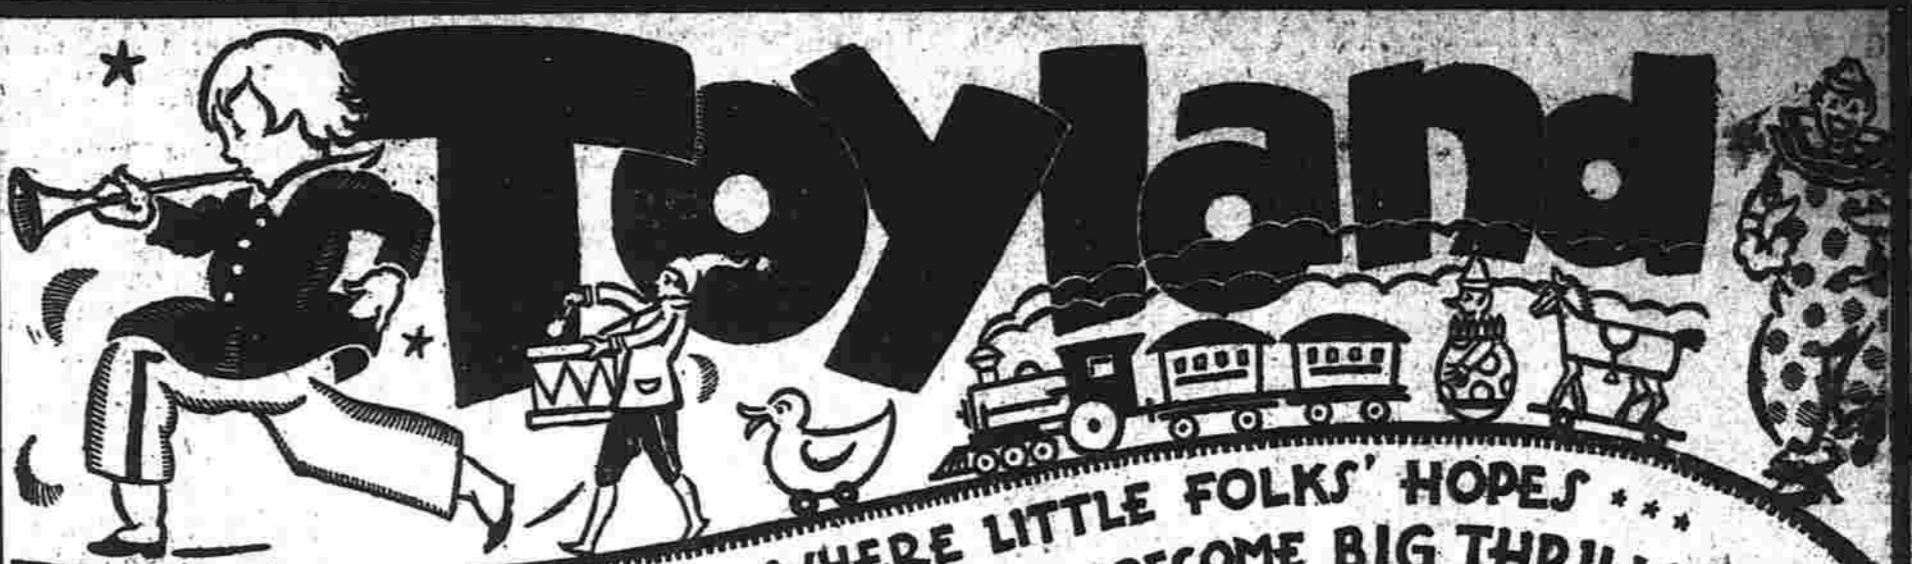

Smith, whose home is Reldsville, N. C., was De Larm's mechanic. He spent a brief time in prison but was released under bail last month with a court recommendation that he be acquitted.

State Trade Schools And What They Mean

The State of Connecticut and the Federal Government have entered into partnership to operate the State Trade Schools, preparing boys and girls for self-supporting and self-respecting citizenship.

Not many years ago, students, on leaving school were allowed to enter factories as apprentices, learning the various trades after years of uninteresting and dull labor at a time when all boys are lacking some of the more colorful things of life.

The presence of several thousand cadets and midshipmen brought on an epidemic of dances for debutantes and their boy friends, a big supper dance for charity, dances at hotels that are headquarters for Army and Navy crowds.

The hilarious finale was a reward for debutantes who sold programs at benefit theater performances during the night of the ball.

Among the debutantes who helped on the committee of the ball was Barbara Hutton, daughter of Franklyn L. Hutton. She is often called the prettiest debutante of the season.

Blonde Doris Havemeyer, debutante daughter of the Henry O. Havemeyers, is taking the leading role in the dance at the Restaunt Princeps on Park avenue following the Army-Navy game.

FAMILY OF THREE ON A HITCH-HIKE

Walk and Ride From South Dakota On Their Way To Springfield, Mass.

Syracuse, N. Y., Dec. 13.-(AP)-Those songs, "Home Sweet Home," and "There's a Long, Long Trail A-Winding," today have a new meaning for Mrs. Lucille Dyer, 26, a widow, who, with her two sons, Edward, 8, and Theodore, 5, hitchhiked here from Lemmon, S. D., penniless and tired, more than 1,000 miles to this city.

Today the young woman with her two husky, blue-eyed children, were speeding eastward by rail, the dreaming of the lights of a home in Springfield, Mass., she has not seen in years--the home of her mother, Mrs. Ray Sherwood, at 17 Bay street.

At first she obstinately refused to accept the railroad ticket money offered by a charity organization and only took it on condition she be allowed to repay it after reaching her destination.

As for the youngsters, they were glad enough to rest on nice, plush cushions, and munch the candy and nuts that the police placed into their pockets.

Mrs. Dyer, who applied last night for lodging for the three at police headquarters, said she had been on the road from Lemmon nearly two weeks.

Her husband, a trainer of wild horses there, was killed five years ago in a fall, she said. Out of employment, penniless and with the children to support, she started on the long, long trail, hoping for lifts. She got them frequently.

Once, after trudging over snow drifted roads for two days without a ride, they were routed from a barn in which they had sought shelter by an angered farmer armed with a pitch fork. Finally, they reached Buffalo Wednesday night and obtained shelter at a mission. They were given three rides and walked only a few miles, she related, to reach this city last night.

School, one of 11 such schools in the State of Connecticut, has an enrollment of 332 students divided among the five divisions as follows: Day Trade, 184; High School drafting, 60; pre-vocational training for 7th and 8th grade students, 178; night school, 160.

Upon the satisfactory completion of any course given in the school, a diploma is awarded when the pupil has reached a total of 4800 satisfactory hours. Satisfactory is meant in the sense of pupils who have, by application to their chosen trade, and wholehearted effort along the line of study, actually earned the time allotted. Those who attend evening school courses for a minimum, specified number of nights, receive a certificate of attendance.

The local Trade School is on the uptown in interest due to an increasingly larger number of boys who, because they are thus less fitted for academic studies over the full High School course, and who, being naturally inclined to the use of their hands as skilled tradesmen, find in the Trade School a harmonious environment; where capable instruction without the lowering of the athletic and physical standards, forms an avenue by which they may equally approach that standard of citizenship which is ideally American in quality--industrial, efficient, self-respecting, self-supporting citizens.

WHITE HOUSE FETE DELIGHTS SOCIETY

Capital's Fashionables Start
Regular Winter Season;
Vice President's Reception

Washington, Dec. 13.—(AP)—The Capital's social whirl was stepped up to its regular winter season tempo this week.

From the White House on down the line to lesser officials, social engagements left little time for respite. The most brilliant affair was the Vice-President's dinner for President and Mrs. Hoover Tuesday night.

Mrs. Edward Everett Gann, sister of Mr. Curtis, was hostess. Long before she stood as the Second Lady of the Land, Mrs. Gann made a name for herself as a hostess and the dinner was one of those thoughtfully planned affairs where not a moment passed unprofitably.

The Vice-President's guests were carefully selected and of social and political significance. Secretary Mellon represented Pittsburgh, as did Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Babcock, and Mr. Charles M. Schwab. From the West came the Secretary of War and Mrs. Patrick Hurley, Mrs. Edwin T. Meredith, whose late husband was one time Secretary of Agriculture, and her son-in-law, Mr. Frederick O. Bohlen, of Des Moines; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, of Kansas City, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph R. Nutt, of Cleveland, Mr. David W. Mulvane, from Topeka, Kansas, and Mr. and Mrs. Harvey S. Firestone, of Akron, Ohio.

New England was represented by Mr. and Mrs. Lutz Anderson, of Brookline, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. John Hays Hammond, who spend their summers at Gloucester, Mass., and former Senator and Mrs. Henry F. Lippitt, of Providence.

From New York came Mr. Adolph

S. Och, and his daughter, Mrs. Arthur Hays Sulzberger. Mr. and Mrs. Lamont Dupont, of Wilmington, and Mrs. Cyrus H. Curtis, from Philadelphia, also were among the guests.

Mrs. Gann observed her day at home Wednesday, and was aided in her duties as hostess by Mrs. James J. Davis, wife of the Pennsylvania Senator.

The White House reception Thursday night in honor of the Supreme Court and the judiciary was far more interesting than these stately events usually are. The Chief Justice and Mrs. Hughes are splendid mixers, and have lived in Washington long enough to feel at home wherever they go. The local Courts and the Bar and Washington Society at large were represented. Mrs. Hoover evidently intends to give more Washingtonians a chance to attend White House receptions and has revised the list so that many who were formerly invited to all of the receptions are now invited to but one each season. Thus the number is kept within limits and one meets many new guests.

Mrs. Hoover never looked better than when she started from the White House for Norfolk, Va., to christen the liner President Hoover. She wore a long seal coat of ample proportions and a closely fitted brown velvet hat. Young Mrs. Herbert Hoover, who accompanied her, wore a snappy looking short gray fur coat and grey hat and little Herbert Hoover, Third, was comfortably done up in a double-breasted chinchilla refter and dark blue leggings.

Mrs. Porter H. Dale, wife of Senator Dale, of Vermont, gave one of the handsomest teas of the season Wednesday at the Congressional Club. Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, wife of the Chief Justice, and women from every state in the Union were guests while many Senators and Representatives came in before the reception closed. The hostess' assistants included the wives of several members of Congress, including two Senate brides, Mrs. Robert M. LaFollette, Jr., and Mrs. Reed Smoot.

The guests included Mrs. Jacob

Beander Loose, of Kansas City; Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, and Mrs. Gilbert Grosevevor, wife of the President of the National Geographic Society.

BATTLE FREDERICKSBURG

On Dec. 13, 1862, the Confederates, under Lee, scored one of their most decisive victories of the Civil War when they defeated Burnside's Union army at Fredericksburg.

Up to this time the South and North each had won an important battle. First Lee had vanquished Pope at Bull Run and then McClellan turned the tables on Lee at Antietam, where, on Sept. 17, there occurred the "bloodiest single day of fighting of the war."

After Antietam, Lee retreated across the Potomac, leaving McClellan in possession of the field. President Lincoln then ordered McClellan not to let Lee get off "without being hurt;" but McClellan moved so slowly in pursuit that he was removed from command and replaced by Burnside.

Burnside proceeded at once against Richmond, and on the way encountered Lee at Fredericksburg, where he was strong entrenched along the hills on the south bank of the Rappahannock. Burnside was defeated with a loss of 12,000 men, after which he was superseded by Joseph Hooker.

CONDITION CRITICAL

New Britain, Dec. 13.—(AP)—Ralph P. Kreff, of Jamaica, N. Y., who was overcome by monoxide fumes from his automobile in the garage of the Homestead Inn, Berlin, last night, was still unconscious at New Britain General hospital today. His condition is listed as critical.

Murder At Bridge

by ANNE AUSTIN author of "THE BLACK PIGEON" "THE AVENGING PARROT" and "MURDER BACKSTAIRS" ©1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

FOANTA SELIM is murdered at bridge. Replaying the "death hand" casts suspicion on nearly all of her guests and her maid.

DUNDEE, special investigator, is left in the house with Lydia, the maid, after his examination of the guests. In Nita's desk he finds from her checkbook that she paid no rent to her landlord, JUDGE MARSHALL; that she deposited $10,000 since she came, indicating blackmail; and that she paid LYDIA $40 a week. After finding her will, in an envelope sealed and then reopened, he asks the maid why she did not tell him that it was Nita who burned her face so horribly. Lydia admits that Nita was trying to commit suicide with carbolic acid, on Feb. 9, over a man, and when Lydia tried to stop her, threw the acid in her face.

Lydia swears she did not hold a grudge. She tries to prove she loved Nita, who made every effort to make up for the accident, by showing Dundee presents she gave Nita. One of these is a huge bronze lamp. The hub is broken, and Dundee thinks that the murderer bumped into it, feeling toward the back hall. They are interrupted by the sound of a car and the ringing of the bell.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXI

"Hello, Dundee," a woman's glad I caught you before you left," a blonde, familiar voice called as the detective opened the front door. "Is poor Lydia still here?"

"Come in, Mr. Miles," Dundee invited, searching with a puzzled frown from the round blond face of Tracey Miles. "Yes, Lydia is still here. . . Why?"

"Then I'm in luck, and I think Lydia is, too—poor old girl! . . . You see, Dundee, Miles began to explain, as he took off his new straw hat to mop his perspiring forehead. "The crowd all ganged up when our various cars reached Sheridan Road, and by unanimous vote we elected to drive over to the Country Club for a meal in one of the small private dining rooms—to escape the questions of the morbidly curious, you know."

"Yes. . . What about it?" Dundee interrupted impatiently.

"Well, I admit we were all pretty hungry, in spite of—well, of course—we were from Nita, but—"

Tracey Miles blundered on, his blithe voice taking on the husk suitable to a house in which death had so recently occurred.

"What about Lydia?" Dundee cut him short.

"I'm getting to it, old boy," Miles protested, with the injured air of an unappreciated small boy. "While we were waiting for our food, somebody said, 'What's going on?' and I went to become of her?"

"And somebody else said that it was harder on her—Nita's death, I mean—than on anybody else, because Nita was the one who had in the world, and then Lois—Lois is the wife of the man you know—ran away to telephone police headquarters to see what had been done with Lydia, and to see if it would be all right for Flora and me to take her home with us."

"Just a minute, Miles! Whom did Mrs. Dunlap talk to at headquarters?"

"Why, Captain Strawn, of course. He told Lois that you were still out here, questioning Lydia again, and that it was all right with him, what ever you decided. So as soon as I had finished eating, I drove over—"

"Is Mrs. Miles with you?" Dundee interrupted again.

"Well, no," Miles admitted uncomfortably. "You see, the girls fell a little squeamish about coming back, even on an errand of mercy—"

Dundee grinned. He had no doubt that Flora Miles had emphatically refused the possibility of another grueling interview.

"Why do you and Mrs. Miles want to take Lydia home with you?" he asked.

"To give her a home and a job," Miles answered promptly. "She knows us, we were used to her poor old scarred face, and the youngsters, Tam and Betty, are not a bit afraid of her. In fact, Betty pats that scarred cheek and says, over and over, 'Poor Lydia! Poor Lydia! Betty loves Lydia! What's wrong with her?'"

"But—"

"But—"

"But—"

"But—"

dee assured her. "But you don't have to take a job now unless you wish, Lydia."

"What do you mean?" the maid demanded harshly, her good eye hardening with suspicion.

"Lydia," the young detective began slowly, and almost praying that he was doing the right thing, "when I woke you up tonight to question you, I said that Nita herself had just told me that it was she who had burned your face. . . And you asked me if she had also given you a message."

"Yes, sir!" the maid interrupted with pitiful eagerness. "And you'll tell me now? You don't still think I killed her, do you?"

"No, I don't think you killed your mistress, Lydia, but I think if you would, you could help me find out who did," Dundee assured her gravely. "No, wait!" and he drew from his pocket the envelope inscribed: "To Be opened in Case of My Death, Juanita Leigh Selim."

"Do you recognize this handwriting, Lydia?"

"It was written by her own hand," the maid answered, her voice husky with tears. "Is that the message, sir?"

"You never saw it before?" Dundee asked sharply.

"No, no, I didn't know my poor girl was thinking about death," Lydia moaned. "I thought she was happy here. She was tickled to please over being taken up by all them society people, and on the go day and night—"

"Lydia, this is Mrs. Selim's last will and testament," Dundee interrupted, withdrawing the sheets slowly and unfolding them. "It was written yesterday, and it begins:—"

"Knowing that any of us may die any time, and that I, Juanita Leigh Selim, have good cause to fear that my own life hangs by a thread that may break any minute—"

"What did your poor girl mean?" Lydia Carr cried out vehemently.

"She wasn't sick, ever."

"I think, Lydia, that she feared exactly what happened today—murder! And I want you to tell me who it was she feared. For I believe you know!"

The woman shrank from him. For a long minute she did not attempt to answer.

"I don't know," she said dully. Then, with vehement emphasis: "I don't know! If I did, I'd kill him with my own hands!"

Dundee had no choice but to take her word. There was no use, either, in torturing this woman now with his earlier conviction: that Nita Selim had lived in terror of Lydia Carr's smoldering hatred for the injury she had done her.

"You said there was a message for me," Lydia reminded him. "This is the message," Dundee said quietly, lifting the sheets again: "I am herewith setting down my last will and testament, in my own handwriting. I do here and now solemnly will and bequeath to my faithful and beloved maid, Lydia Carr, all property, including all moneys, stocks and personal belongings of which I die possessed."

"To me?" Lydia whispered. "To me?"

"To you, Lydia," Dundee assured her gravely, watching her intently. "Then I can have all her pretty clothes to keep always?"

"And her money to do as you like with, if the court accepts this will for probate—as I think it will, regardless of the fact that it is very informal and was not witnessed."

"But—she didn't have any money," Lydia protested. "Nothing but Mrs. Dunlap paid her in advance for the work she was going to do—"

"Lydia, your mistress died possessed of nearly $10,000! Ten thousand dollars! All of which she got right here in Hamilton! And I want you to tell me how she got it!"

"But—I don't know! I don't believe she had it!"

Dundee shrugged. Either this woman would perjure her soul to protect her mistress' name from scandal, or she really knew nothing.

"That is all of the will itself, Lydia," he went on finally, "except her command that her body be cremated without funeral services of any kind, and that nobody be allowed to accompany the remains to the crematory except yourself and Mrs. Peter Dunlap, in case her death takes place in Hamilton."

"She did love Mrs. Dunlap," Lydia sobbed. "Oh, my poor little girl—"

"And there is also a note for you, which I thought of liberty of reading, in which Mrs. Selim minutely describes the clothes in which she wishes to be cremated, as well as the fashion in which her hair is to be dressed—"

"Let me see it!" Lydia lunged forward on her knees and snatched at the papers he held. "For God's sake, let me see!"

Hints on How to Keep Well by World Famed Authority

WHOOPING COUGH IS DANGEROUS AS IT WILL BRINGS OTHER DISEASES

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBELN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygeia, the Health Magazine

Of all the diseases that scientific medicine attempts to control, whooping cough seems to be most difficult. It is generally lightly regarded because most people seem to recover from it readily.

Mothers and fathers permit the children to begin playing outdoors as soon as they are free from fever, yet if they continue to cough, the secretions may contain the responsible infectious agent.

The disease, moreover, infectious at an early stage and children are not put to bed and kept alone until after they have been infected for some time. In this condition and in measles, particularly, it is important to get the child to bed as early as possible and to keep him indoors until a physician has pronounced it safe for him to play with other children.

The methods of relief of whooping cough are numerous. It is possible to keep the child quiet by the use of properly selected drugs. It is possible to make the infected child comfortable and to control intestinal vomiting by proper measures.

Not infrequently such children become anemic due to the long period spent indoors and the difficulty of eating and assimilating food. In such cases, it is important to build up the child through proper diet before it is permitted to return to its usual activities.

So far as is now known, the vaccine and serums used for the prevention and treatment of whooping cough have not been proved scientifically to be efficacious in the vast majority of cases. Medical research continues to spend much time on the problem, and undoubtedly some specific method of treatment that is effective will be secured.

"You get the drift," as the Eskimo said to his snow-bound neighbor.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

When a blemish on the hands, face or neck is visible, you are likely to want to do something about it.

A blemish on the feet may be neglected just because it doesn't show. However, foot blemishes should be given the same severe treatment. They may not be seen, but they certainly are felt. Moreover, they prevent you having pride in your feet.

The most common foot blemishes are corns, blisters, bunions, calluses and ingrown toenails. There are other defects, such as arch trouble. Anybody with even a suggestion of trouble in the arches should immediately consult an expert. It might lead to flat feet, which is one of the most devastating blows beauty can have.

May Need Expert Advice

If you have severe corns, a trip to a chiropodist is advisable. He is an expert in such things and may be able to relieve you immediately. If you want to take care of your own feet, there are many reliable corn treatments. Soak your feet first in hot water; then apply either a commercial corn cure or one your druggist puts up of the proper proportions of salicylic acid, extract of annabis indica, alcohol and flexible colloid. Sometimes they add ether to this medicine.

A single application does no good. You must be patient and paint the corns daily with the mixture, soaking beforehand. It usually takes several applications but if you persist, the hardened skin will become loosened and can be pulled off.

Calluses usually come on the bottom of the foot, often under the big toe. When they are in the middle of the sole, they are more painful. Both may be caused by too narrow a shoe, a rough lining, or even ill-fitting stockings. They should be considered in the same category as corns and treated as such. If they persist, I recommend your spending a few dollars and having a professional chiropodist treat them.

Care of Blisters

Blisters are caused by shoes that are too large or too small, by ill-fitting ones that rub up and down on the heel or right in the front of the vamp. A foot blister should be opened, but only with a sterilized needle, and the water should be sponged up with antiseptic cotton. Paint immediately with a mild

SAYS COP'S BULLET KILLED MRS. SUMNER

New York, Dec. 13.—(AP)—A firearms experiment in county court was promised today by Assistant District Attorney Geoghan in outlining the state's case against George Small, former convict, charged with the murder on Nov. 12, 1929, of Mrs. Irene Sumner.

Mrs. Sumner was killed by a bullet during a running gun battle between Small and police who attempted to capture the gunman for return to Auburn prison, from which he had escaped.

Geoghan forecast the defense would try to prove that the bullet which killed Mrs. Sumner had been fired by one of the policemen pursuing Small. To rescue this contention, he said, he would insert the bullet taken from the dead woman's body into a police service revolver and attempt to fire it. He said he would show that the bullet would not fit the bore.

Small, who was severely wounded before his capture, was brought into the courtroom in a wheel chair.

YOUR CHILDREN

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON
©1930 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

Again comes a mother in distress about her boy's stammering:

"I have had him to three doctors and they say there is no cure," she writes. "He is eleven years old and he has never had any trouble before this year. It began in September when he started to school, when suddenly he had difficulty in talking. It has grown worse rapidly and I don't know what to do."

I think that this anxious lady has a lot of company, for I am of the opinion that about half the children in the land at some time or other in their young lives take a notion to trip over their consonants, repeat words and stumble lamely in their diction. Most of them get over it in a few weeks or months as suddenly as they developed the habit, or whatever it may be called, but others take longer, and a few, a very few, don't ever get over it at all.

I call it a habit for want of a better name. To be exact it is mostly a symptom of nervousness of mental confusion, or of self consciousness. But sometimes it is a real lack of coordination between will and the muscular members. These cases are rare and I believe are the most difficult to cure.

But the average mother with the average case of stammering to correct can, I believe, look mostly at the first named cause. And if her child has suddenly developed an impediment in his speech I should inquire into the reason for his nervousness, his mental confusion, or his self consciousness, as the case may be.

Then I should set about righting conditions. If he is freed from strain, unhappiness, over-work, any of a dozen things, the chances are he will regain his command of speech in a reasonably short time.

Sometimes a boy or girl grows fast. This puts an added physical tension on nerves. They are not quite responsible then, these nerves, for what they do, and stammering is not an unusual result of jangled nerves due to growth. Again, children are excitable and too much stimulation leads to stuttering.

Whatever the cause, there are a few things to be remembered.

First, that it is not the defect itself that may cause a child unhappiness but the complex growing out of it and the sensitiveness due to the unkindness and ridicule of other children.

Inferiority is the cruellest result of any unusual trick of speech and it follows the poor little stutterer as well.

I would try to keep such a child in the company of kindly disposed children who won't mention his failing or mimic him in any way.

If he is worried about school work until his brain is in a fog about his lessons, I should look in that, too. If his mind continues to be confused and troubled it probably will continue to show in his speech. And I should be sure that nothing else is troubling him either. Children worry more than we think.

Have the child speak very very slowly. He should stop dead after each word he says. Many a child suffers through carelessness and failure to think first. Stopping this way helps greatly.

Of course he needs plenty of outdoor exercise, plenty of rest, and proper food. His health must be looked to first.

Patience, too, is necessary, and silence about his trouble. Keep his mind off it except when he is making a conscious effort at slow speech and careful clear thought.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

YULETIDE CANDY
By Sister Mary

It's really amazing—the varieties of candy the perfectly inexperienced and imperfectly equipped candy maker can turn out of her own kitchen. A wooden spoon and a smooth porcelain or aluminum sauce pan are the only absolutely necessary equipment.

The theory back of fudge or fondant—any "cream" candy is of fact—is to change a large part of the cane sugar into another sugar composed of much smaller and finer crystals than those of cane sugar. This new sugar is known as "invert" sugar and is in reality part glucose. Of course, not all the cane sugar is changed by the cooking process, but enough must be changed to produce a creamy, melting texture in the finished candy.

In order to make sure sufficient "inversion" takes place, acid is often added to the sugar mixture. Lemon juice, vinegar or cream of tartar can be used. Cream of tartar is the easiest acid to use since it does not vary in strength as do lemon juice and vinegar.

Ordinary glucose can be added to prevent graining. Ordinary honey and many of the corn syrups on the market are largely glucose. Molasses also contains a goodly amount of glucose.

The addition of too much acid or glucose makes a mixture which will not respond to stirring and becomes more like a caramel or pull candy and with longer cooking a brittle, hard candy.

Keep Crystals Out of Syrup

Do not stir fondant while it is cooking. The crystals which form on the sides of the pan are extremely coarse and every effort must be made to prevent them from dropping back into the syrup. Wipe them off with a swab of cheesecloth dipped in cold water as fast as they form.

Fudge mixtures are less sensitive to physical influences, since the milk of cream helps to prevent crystallization in a chemical way.

Always let a "cream" candy cool undisturbed before beating. As long as there is heat in the syrup stirring will cause evaporation. This in turn makes larger sugar crystals which give a coarse, grainy texture to the finished candy.

The regulation of temperature is important. Fondant should boil fast over a high flame. Caramels require a slow steady heat, nougats use two temperatures. A "brittle" should be cooked over a low fire, the flame being lowered and finally extinguished before the syrup is removed from the pan.

Fudge always is popular. There is a white fudge to which candied pineapple and cherries are added that is decidedly Christmasy and easy to make.

Christmas Fudge

Three cups granulated sugar, 1 1/4 cups milk, 2 tablespoons white corn syrup, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 1/2 cups chopped candied fruits, few drops vanilla.

Put sugar, corn syrup and milk into a smooth, round bottomed sauce pan. Put over a low fire and bring to the boiling point without stirring. Increase heat slightly and stir almost constantly until candy is done.

"I'm getting to it, old boy," Miles protested, with the injured air of an unappreciated small boy. "While we were waiting for our food, somebody said, 'What's going on?' and I went to become of her?"

"And somebody else said that it was harder on her—Nita's death, I mean—than on anybody else, because Nita was the one who had in the world, and then Lois—Lois is the wife of the man you know—ran away to telephone police headquarters to see what had been done with Lydia, and to see if it would be all right for Flora and me to take her home with us."

"Just a minute, Miles! Whom did Mrs. Dunlap talk to at headquarters?"

"Why, Captain Strawn, of course. He told Lois that you were still out here, questioning Lydia again, and that it was all right with him, what ever you decided. So as soon as I had finished eating, I drove over—"

"Is Mrs. Miles with you?" Dundee interrupted again.

"Well, no," Miles admitted uncomfortably. "You see, the girls fell a little squeamish about coming back, even on an errand of mercy—"

Dundee grinned. He had no doubt that Flora Miles had emphatically refused the possibility of another grueling interview.

"Why do you and Mrs. Miles want to take Lydia home with you?" he asked.

"To give her a home and a job," Miles answered promptly. "She knows us, we were used to her poor old scarred face, and the youngsters, Tam and Betty, are not a bit afraid of her. In fact, Betty pats that scarred cheek and says, over and over, 'Poor Lydia! Poor Lydia! Betty loves Lydia! What's wrong with her?'"

"But—"

"But—"

"But—"

"But—"

"I gather that you want to hire Lydia as a nurse for the children?" Dundee interrupted the fond father's verbose explanations.

"Right, old man! You see, our nurse left us yesterday—"

"Wait here, Miles. I'll speak to Lydia. She's in Mrs. Selim's bedroom. . . . By the way, Miles, since you and your wife are kind enough to want to take Lydia in and give her a home and a job, I think it only fair to tell you that it is highly improbable that Lydia Carr will take any job at all."

"You mean—?" Miles gasped, his ruddy face turning pale. "I say, Dundee, it's absurd to think for a minute that good Lydia, who has had a thing to do with Nita's murder—"

"I rather think you're right about Mrs. Miles," Dundee interrupted. "Why do you encourage me?"

"I don't know where he had left her dead mistress' bedroom, but I don't want to go in there for the same reason that Lydia Carr will take any job at all."

"I rather think you're right about Mrs. Miles," Dundee interrupted. "Why do you encourage me?"

"I don't know where he had left her dead mistress' bedroom, but I don't want to go in there for the same reason that Lydia Carr will take any job at all."

WIFE AND NONSENSE

First Mechanic—Which do you prefer, leather or fabric upholstery?

Second Mechanic—I like fabric. Leather is too hard to wipe your hands on.

Wife—Do you think of me all the time? Hubby—Not at street crossings, washing.

Tompkins—I understand this car has a front wheel drive. Simpson—Yes, they had to get it away from these back seat drivers.

Finding a needle in a haystack or a piece of silver lost in a lot of bullrushes is a cinch compared to finding a squeak in an automobile.

Motoring Mike Says: "Not all the wooden-headed drivers are found on the golf courses."

Friend—Have you a garage? Motorist—I don't know. My wife just went down to get the car out of it.

Then there is the Scotch motorist who waits for a hot day before he'll buy any gas because he heard that things expand with the heat.

We'll Bet the Guy Who Invented Rumble Seats Concealed the Idea While Trying to Sleep in an Upper Berth.

When better cars are built, collegians will drive worse ones.

Pauline—Oh, look at the poor old man all bent over with rheumatism. Jacob—Rheumatism, my eye! It's John coming back from a ride in a rumble seat.

Amos—That fellow's driving his car so carefully that I think he must be a new driver. Jake—No, he just paid cash for the car.

There are a lot of birds that double park their cars right alongside of plenty of parking space against the curb. Just want to be naturally ornery and to break a few laws.

He rounded the bend at close on to forty. A sudden skid, and the car overturned. They found themselves sitting together, unhurt, alongside of the completely smashed car. He put his arm lovingly about her waist, but she pulled it away. "It's all very nice," she sighed, "but wouldn't it have been simpler to run out of gas?"

It's all right for a woman to want to hold on to her youth but not while he's driving.

When a man mourns much over his financial loss he has lost his backbone as well as his money.

Katherine—Just known you a month? Well, perhaps he does then.

THE TINYMITES

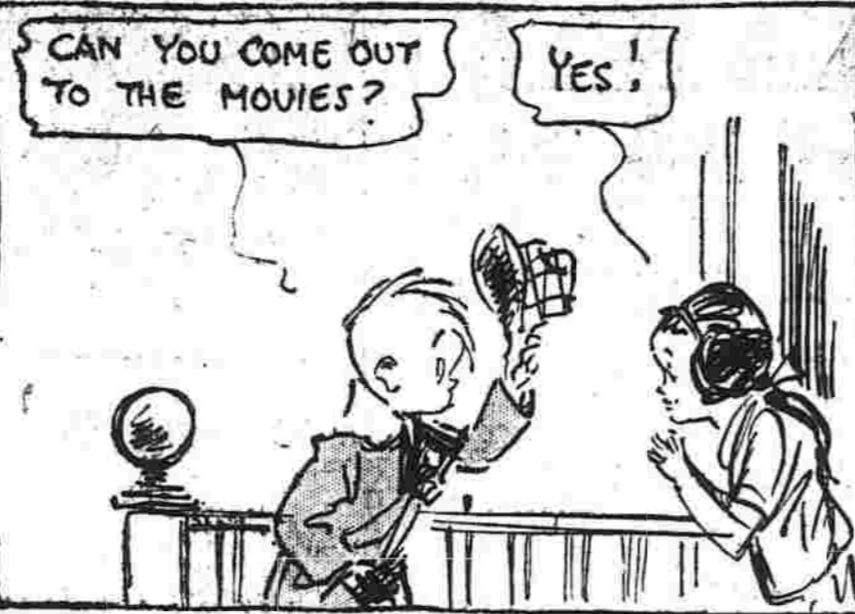

(READ THE STORY, THEN COLOR THE PICTURE)

"Where am I?" Cloway loudly cried. But not a single soul replied. His little voice could not be heard, the wind noise was so loud. The sand still whirled round everywhere and made deep darkness in the air. That's why poor little Cloway couldn't see the Tinymites.

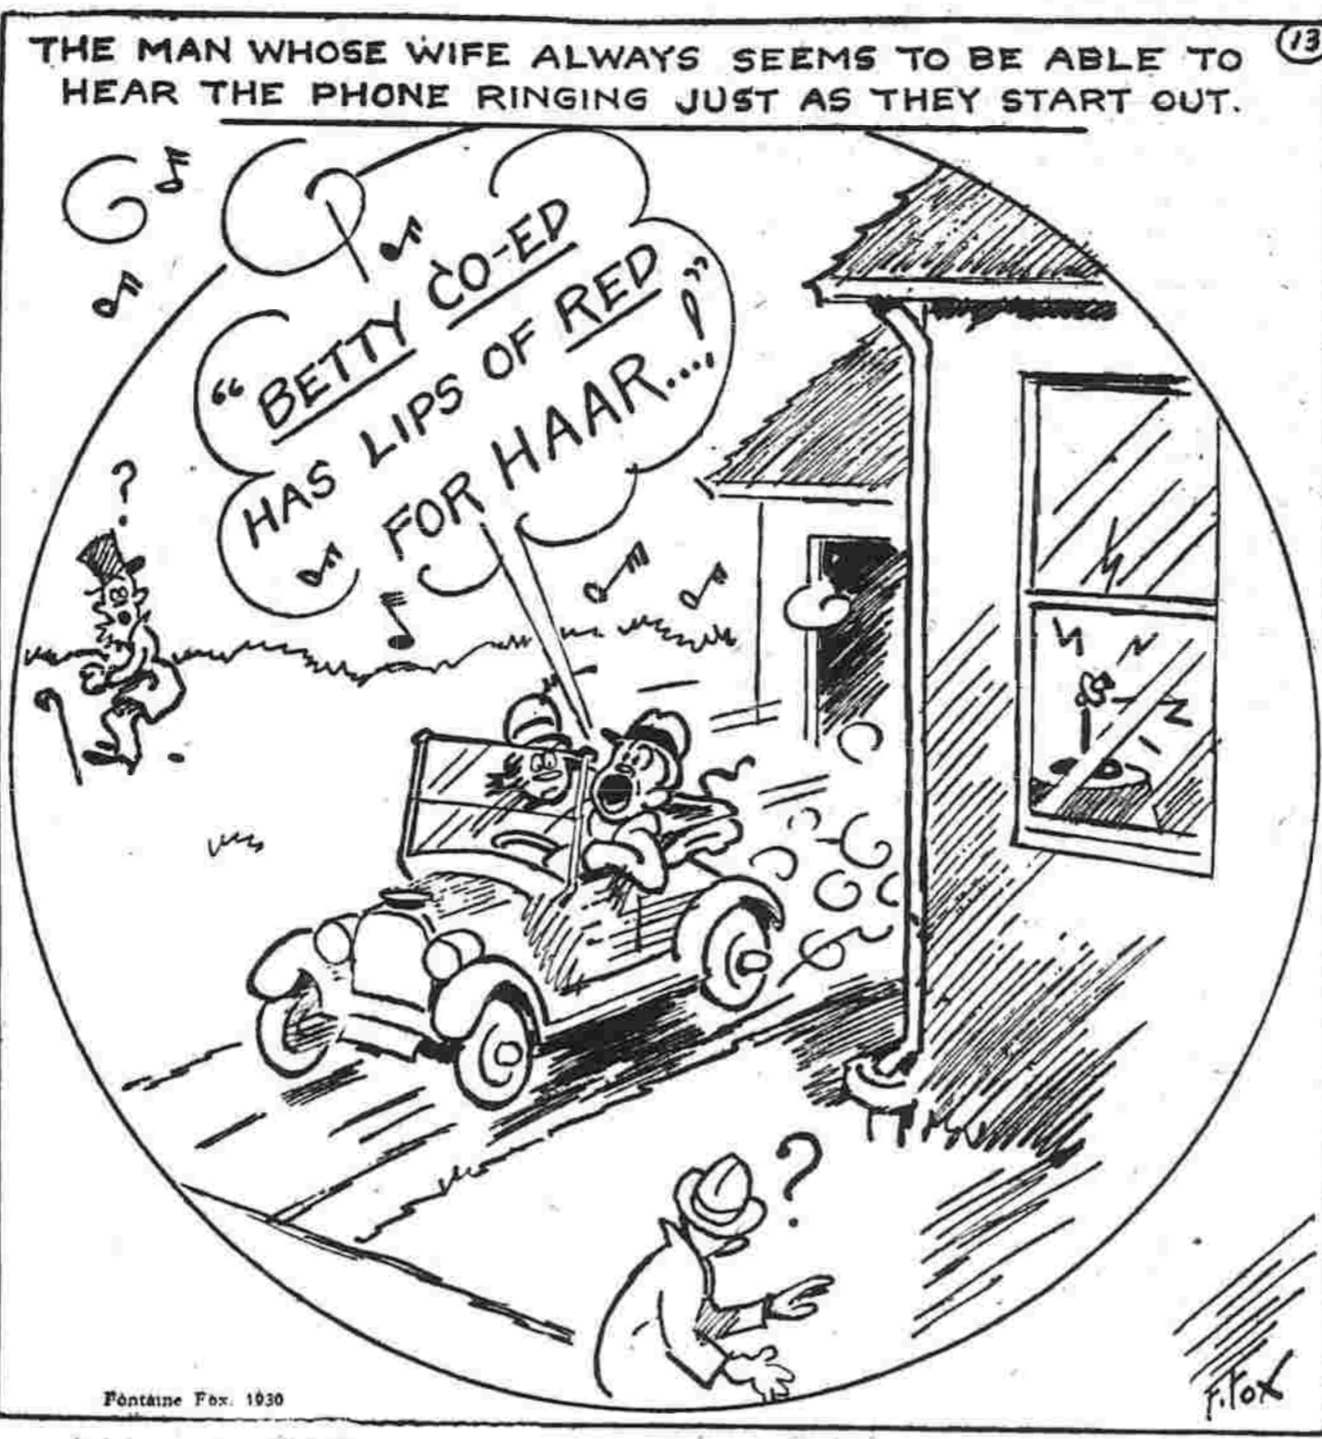

(The Tinymites are worried about Cloway in the next story.)

LIEUT. McMENEMY WINS PRAISE FOR INVENTION

Puts Light Bulb On Sextant So That Readings Can Be Made By One Man At Night.

Mr. and Mrs. John McMenemy of Marble street have received a letter from their son, Lieutenant Edward H. McMenemy, who is commander of the Submarine S-46, and is expected to reach Honolulu today where he is to be stationed for the next year and a half. All R submarines that have been at Honolulu have been recalled East, probably to New London, and S boats are taking their place. Mrs. E. H. McMenemy expects to sail from California for Honolulu at once, taking with her their infant daughter.

The lieutenant enclosed in his letter to his parents a clipping from a San Diego paper of an article copied from a naval bulletin, reading as follows: "A system of illuminating the scale of a sextant on taking star sight has been devised by Lieut. E. H. McMenemy, aboard the San Diego Submarine S-46. The arrangement requires no alteration of the sextant itself and cannot impair its accuracy. A navigator is able to use both hands while reading the altitude and another person with a flashlight is not required. Here is a technical description of the arrangement: A small flashlight of the kind known as "Snap-lite" was secured to the sextant arm by means of a piece of shim brass, making a sleeve for the flashlight to fit it. The shim brass is secured to the post for the darning reading magnifying glass through two holes in the brass, located so that the brass makes a snug fit around the body of the flashlight. The cover end of the flashlight is directed on the darning scale which is illuminated by snapping open the cover of the flashlight.
